CRAIG SPENCE

SURVIVAL SUPPLIES—SIU's first civil defense fallout shelter was inspected by a campus group for the first time Wednesday. It contains enough emergency rations to feed 6,400 students for 14 days. The rations are stored in tunnels leading to the basement of the University Center but students will be housed in the basement and several other areas of the center in case of an emergency. Supplies Stored

New Fallout Shelter at Center Will Shield 6,400 for 14 Days

By Bob Smith

The first civil defense fallout shelter on the SIU campus is nearing completion at the University Center.

It is designed to house 6,400 students for 14 days, and shelters planned for other campus buildings will hopefully make room for all SIU students.

In a nuclear attack, students will probably be admitted to the shelter on a first-come basis, although no final decision has been made on this, said Frank A. Bridges, chairman of civil defense for SIU.

The supplies have been stored in tunnels leading to the basement of the University Center, but students will be allowed to stay in the basement and several other areas of the center.

Final decision on who may use the shelter will be up to the shelter manager, who has not been officially named at this time, Bridges said. The manager will also decide what he will allow students to bring with them.

Probably about all that will be allowed will be a pillow and a blanket, he said. Supplies include enough water for each student to drink one quart each day and enough food for 1,000 calories per day.

There are also ample sanitary and medical supplies.

The food consists of 603 cartons of biscuits and 153 cartons of candy. There are 1,297 cans, each holding about 15 gallons of water. Also included are 130 sanitary kits and 20 cartons of medical supplies.

Fire Department Drowns Serenade

Phi Sigma Kappa, social fraternity, held a serenade earlier this week. It is their custom to light a sawdust fire spelling out the Greek letters.

Halfway through the third number, the songs were drowned out by the scream of sirens.

The Carbondale fire department's pump truck pulled up and hosed down the sawdust fire and several members of the chorus.

'State of Campus' Proposals Listed

By John Epperheimer

Student body president George Paluch proposed a broad program of action for the year in his "State of the Campus" address at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in Shryock Auditorium.

Paluch suggested seven specific measures he hopes to implement, defined a general goal for student government at Southern and reviewed accomplishments of student government.

High on Paluch's program is the amending of University statutes to include a section on student rights and responsibilities. He said, "The statutes do a very good job of explaining everyone's position in the University—except that of the student...If the student is the primary reason for a university's existence, there must be some permanent explanation of his position."

About 170 persons heard the address, including President Delyte W. Morris and Ralph W. Ruffner, vice president for student and area services.

Paluch said that the University Council "has a significant deficiency which must be remedied—student representation." He explained that such representation is justified "on the premise of equality of students and faculty in the true concept of a university."

Paluch characterized a university as a "pivot point for a particular kind of learning experience."

When the views of administrators clash with those held by students, informed students must "express their thoughts in ways that gain the most results," he said.

Paluch listed evaluation and modification of the system of representation on the Campus Senate as another goal. He called student government at Southern a "dynamic, vital force," and promised fairer and more democratic representation on the body.

You're Off Your Range, Cowboys

Students may ask to have motorbikes banned at SIU. This request will not be direct—it will not be wanted—but the continued juvenile operation of the vehicles by a small minority of their owners, such as was reported around Thompson Point's Lentz Hall one afternoon, could have the same effect. This writer was with a resident fellow from the living area that afternoon when the RF stopped two cyclists as they drove their vehicles on the sidewalk, violating University regulations. When he started to take their license numbers, as he is required to do, both cyclists fled on their machines, attempting to hide their license numbers. The Resident Fellow said that motorbikes had been operating on the walks around Lentz Hall all afternoon, and he and other Resident Fellows have stopped them on numerous other occasions for breaking this rule. It is true that only a small percentage of motorbike riders violate the sidewalk rule. But their breaking it and many other seemingly insignificant rules builds up in the records. Harold M. Banks, Thompson Point area head, said that the problem of motorbikes on the walks has improved greatly from last year, but there are still some who will not obey. If the motorbike problem ever comes to a head—and it could—the Thompson Point complaints, along with those from other places, could be the "straw that broke the camel's back." Riders must face the fact that officials are highly concerned over motorcycle problems. While most officials are not in favor of banning the bikes, the possibility has been discussed. The officials cannot make the problem worse—or better. The decision as to whether or not motorbikes will be allowed at SIU will be made by the students who ride them. Bob Smith

Letters to Editor:

Viet Nam: 'Loss of Face' Talk Is Childish

In the Nov. 4 issue of the Egyptian, Mr. Frank H. Sehnert cries out for "more commentary from Asians." Here it is. I will confine my comments to the letter by 1st Lt. William M. Wood, which appears on the same page and which reflects an all too common opinion.

First, Lt. Wood tells us that in the spirit of an American patriot that if the U.S. pulled out of South Viet Nam, that "we would lose face." One way someone could reply to this would be to note that "by pulling out of S. Viet Nam the U.S. has no face to lose because by now she ain't got any face anymore!" What is there to lose? But that wouldn't be fair to Lt. Wood and others who share his view. So let us consider seriously a more decent alternative.

It seems that there is something childish and naive for an individual (or a nation) to use a "saving face" argument to justify a course of action of such moral magnitude as the undeclared war in Viet Nam. The horror of the daily murderous enterprise which is going on is surely a more important factor.

But Lt. Wood prefers for U.S. soldiers to stay in South Viet Nam to kill and be killed in order to "save face." This is what I call "kiddy talk." As a child of ten or so, when I quarrelled with one of my peers I would stubbornly refuse to talk to him first after that. If persuaded by others to do so, I would appeal to the universal rule that governed our childish behavior, namely, "I won't talk to him first because I would lose face." It flatters me to know that, since then I have grown up a little bit, some of my American friends who are physically fit to fight for "freedom" (1) and to defend a blundering commitment are still wrapped up in the womb of childish innocence. It makes me wonder how an American like Lt. Wood can ever know what the hopes, dreams, and the aspirations of the Asians are.

In all seriousness I suggest that we sacrifice Yankee face in order to concentrate on how to save human lives. Let me explain. As a child I was vitally concerned with saving my little face because I had nothing else to save. But I believe that America has in the past been preoccupied, not with the trivial business of saving face, but with such basic rights of man as to be able to speak one's mind and to be represented. It is only in recent years that we witness the emergence of a face-saving generation. (On the national level they call this "American image" or "American prestige.") The psychology underlying this sort of talk is basically childish. It appeals to the American sense of pride. So the settlement of international problems is regarded as unworkable if it does not enrich the American ego.

"What happened to our trust in American leadership?" is Lt. Wood's rhetorical question. It too is contrived to please the ego and to assert the infallibility of American leadership abroad. Yes, nothing so pleases the heart and consoles the soul as the assurance that American leadership never falters. The old maxim should be revised to read: "In the infallibility of American leadership We Trust!"

In my opinion, the U.S. ought to stop playing god and chasing devils overseas. This is because her "face-saving" talk shows that she does not yet have enough discriminating sense to know what the devils are.

Buy Education — Not Athletics

Students, "welcome to the institution of higher spending!" I believe this shall become a new slogan for SIU students. "Everyone loves a cheerful giver" might become another slogan. The new slogans would result from such small items as an activity fee which may be waived by graduate students only, a $15 per quarter increase for the SWRF fund and, as may come to pass, a $4 per quarter increase in the athletic fee. A close check should be made on the "benefits" of such fees for you, the student, such as: (1) the absence of an admission charge for athletic events. (We had the same thing two years ago and still paid a lower total fee); (2) athletic scholarships. (Out of an 18,000-member student body, how many will need these scholarships? We need academic scholarships instead.); and (3) a lower bank balance, with chances for it to become still lower. Vote for higher education—not higher spending. Kenneth Eugene Donnel

FOR THE 100th TIME — WE'RE NOT BIRDS OF A FEATHER'

Killers Killing Killers Aren't 'People Killers?'

By Robert M. Hutchins In the phrase "we are not people-killers," used by Barry Goldwater, lies the explanation of much of the distrust of America felt throughout the world.

It is pure, unadulterated cant. It is hypocritical nonsense. And when it is used as he used it, along with a demand to bomb industrial installations in Hanoi, it is so stupid as to be incredible. Either Goldwater does not think at all, or he supposes that nobody who reads what he says can do so.

Whatever the American virtues, and they are many, they do not include an aversion to killing people. We kill people whenever we think it is in our interest, and we do not care much how we do it or how many of them we kill.

If we have killed fewer people than some other nations, it is because our isolation, power and preoccupation with the domestic market have made it unnecessary. Even so, we might remember the Indians. We did not have to be an imperialistic power because we got most of what we wanted by killing them.

Goldwater cannot suppose that the industrial installations in Hanoi are operated without human hands. North Vietnam is not yet fully automated. The proposal that we bomb the installations without bombing the people in them suggests that Goldwater has withdrawn from reality.

There are two reasons for devoting all this valuable space to Goldwater. In the first place, his remarks reflect a prevalent illusion, and a most extraordinary one. That is that when we destroy two countries—North and South Vietnam—all the houses, building, farms and villages that are committed to the flames are empty. All we are doing is clearing vacant land. Even the pictures of the slaughter of civilians, including women and children, do not rid us of the impression that nobody is getting killed except a few bandits and an unfortunate number of Americans.

The second reason for spending some time on Goldwater is that the Johnson administration, after winning an election by denouncing his militaristic excesses, adopted his recommendations after the election was over. I am afraid it may do so again.

Scholarships for High School Gym Teachers?

In regard to the proposed referendum for a $6 athletic fee to be used to provide budding athletes with $15 a month spending money, let me voice my extreme disapproval.

I am not against improving the Saiuki football team. I am not against athletic scholarships. I guess, I'm not even against free tuition, fees, and room and board for prospective players.

But what I am against is the idea that athletes should not be required to work the one hour per day while their sport is in season and the two hours per day while their sport is not in season while a vast number of fairly intelligent students are cleaning offices and clearing tables for three, four, or five hours a day in order to pull together enough money to stay in school. The SIU girls working in the various offices and cafeterias who are not fortunate enough to be gymnasts and who count their nickels and pennies each month to pay their own bills are now to pay toward the $15 per month free and clear spending money for boys, the majority of whom are the nation's future high school gym teachers.

Now, I had better say that I also am not against high school gym teachers. But, when the University can match the 130 National Collegiate Athletic Association scholarships for gym teachers with 130 scholarships providing free tuition, fees, room and board, AND the $15 a month spending money for future high school music teachers, chemistry teachers, English teachers, and journalism teachers, THEN I will vote for the Student Council's referendum. In closing, I would like to extend political congratulations to the athletic department for their $10,000 kick-back to the Student Council.

'Couldn't Be Worse'

Students Condemn City Services, 'Small-Time' Business, Landlords

By Ric Cox
First of A Series

Student attitudes toward the city of Carbondale were summed up at a recent campus press conference with city commissioners when one student brought cheers with his statement:

"But, commissioner, I don't want to become a resident of Carbondale."

Just what is it SIU students have against Carbondale?

To answer this question, a Daily Egyptian reporter interviewed several students, including three student government leaders.

The first in this series of three articles will be based on these interviews. The two other articles will deal with the city's opinion of students and suggestions for improving campus-community relations.

Without a doubt, the most frequent complaint in recent months has been the area's police department and court system. Although much of the uproar has resulted from the Crawshaw-Antrim case, a general dissatisfaction is evident.

"Carbondale has, without a doubt, the worst system of justice I've ever seen," complained Michael G. Peck, president of Thompson Point.

Others termed it "farical" and "screwed up," saying it is partial to Carbondale residents, especially politicians.

Student body vice president John Paul Davis, a pre-law student, said, "Carbondale's police system is inadequate, not only in terms of facilities, but also in terms of personalities. I wouldn't hire some of them as truck drivers."

John C. Henry, a senior majoring in government, said, "The Crawshaw case is merely an amplification of the well-known fact that the Carbondale police force is inadequate, undertrained and underpaid."

Both Davis and Henry pointed out what they termed Carbondale's lack of an investigative force.

"Because the police failed to make a thorough investigation (of the Crawshaw-Antrim case)," Henry said, "justice will not, in all probability, be served."

Second foremost targets of student complaints are Carbondale merchants—or "exploiters," as students refer to them.

"The merchants here see students only as a means of an economic end," Henry said. "Beyond that, they seem to want to get rid of us."

"They're small-time businessmen," commented Davis, a native of nearby West

'the Worst System of Justice'

Frankfort. "They'd be satisfied with a general store and a pot-bellied stove."

Students seemed in general agreement, however, that it's not so much the prices they're concerned about as the merchants' attitude and poor services offered by the city.

"Students can expect to be exploited in any college town," Davis said. "What I object to most is the way merchants treat students, especially in regard to check cashing. They're so rude. What they need are some good lessons in public relations."

"It's an insult to honest people when a clerk follows you around and watches you in a mirror," complained another student. "I just don't like their distrustful attitude."

"I wouldn't mind paying the (somewhat higher) prices, if the services rendered were better," said Peck, a native of New York. "The services—public and private—couldn't be worse."

As examples of poor service he offered street lights, telephones, sidewalks, streets, the Illinois Central, a limited number of quality restaurants, only one theater, taxi service, police protection and efforts of the city government.

Other student complaints concerning services included lack of entertainment and recreation facilities and not enough package liquor stores.

Davis, who characterized Carbondale as "a small town of backward people with no foresight," also complained of the tendency of merchants to hoard profits, rather than expanding and improving their businesses.

"Carbondale has changed a great deal in the past decade, but not enough to keep up," Davis said. They were seven to eight years behind in setting up a planning commission, they're just getting around to applying for federal aid, the city government is outmoded, and the tax structure is obsolete."

"If they had a competent and aggressive city government, they could have overcome their financial problems by now," Davis added.

"The city does a good job of satisfying the voting public," commented one student, "because they don't know to expect anything better."

Homeowners and landlords are among townspeople frequently attacked by student complaints.

"All they're interested in is getting their money, paying off their investments, and enjoying the profits," was Davis' summary of the landlords' attitude.

"They exploit students by making promises which they fail to carry out, especially in regard to advertised living conditions," Davis added.

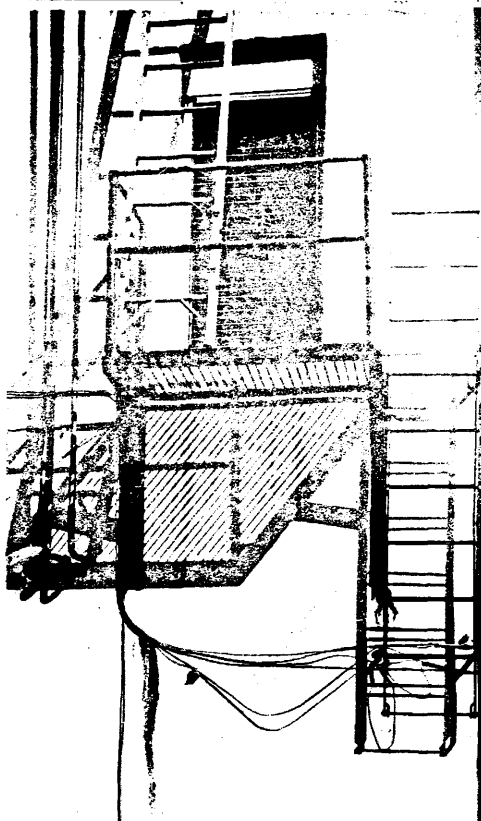

Peck and Henry agreed on this point, saying that students are often duped by contractual agreements which they aren't aware of, and of promises which aren't met.

Standard complaints against landlords are excessive prices and poor living conditions.

Just what is it SIU students have against Carbondale?

What don't they have against it?

Tomorrow: How the townspeople feel about students.

CARBONDALE . . . A Backward View

University Leaders Should Be Scholars and Administrators

Presidents and trustees of American universities should have experience in getting their hands dirty in the stacks of the library, according to a national education magazine editor.

William W. Brickman, editor of School and Society, told Michigan educators at the third annual Conference on Higher Education in Lansing, Mich., that too many people who make the decisions about a university have been appointed for other than academic reasons.

"Scholars should be appointed to the boards of trustees or those on the boards should master some of the arts on which they pass their judgment," Brickman said.

"We must have academic deans and presidents who are active themselves in learning," Brickman said, "if we are going to have academic emphasis."

"The scholar must have life-long learning inside and outside school because if knowledge is not added to, it will diminish at a rate far faster than acquisition," Brickman said.

In University Decisions

Greater Student Role Advocated

Unless students are allowed to participate in making major rules and decisions, hundreds of 'Berkeley's will erupt on college campuses across the nation.

William Williamson, dean of students at the University of Michigan, said that the present situation is a "highly dangerous" one. He said that the "Berkeley" situation is a "highly dangerous" one. He said that the "Berkeley" situation is a "highly dangerous" one.

Morris to Attend College Meeting

President Delyra W. Morris will attend a conference of the Association of American Colleges Dec. 1 in Washington, D.C.

Morris will lead a discussion on "Devices for Pointing Students Toward College Teaching."

AFTER CLASS CONFERENCE - Vice President Charles D. Tenney pauses after class to answer queries from two of the students in his English composition class. The girls are Eunice Kantor, Skokie, and Phyllis Wiedeman, Metropolis.

'No Greater Satisfaction'

Two Administrators Return to Classrooms, Help to Instruct Masses of New Students

It's hard to stay away from the classroom, especially if you are a part of the administrative staff at SIU. Two SIU vice presidents, Charles D. Tenney and John S. Rendleman, are teaching undergraduate courses on the Carbondale campus in addition to schedules already hectic with administrative tasks.

Tenney teaches a freshman English class which meets at night, Rendleman a junior level course in Illinois government. While the added responsibilities of their return to the lecture halls may be somewhat taxing the 75 students enrolled in their courses have the advantage of studying under two highly qualified educators.

Rendleman, a native of nearby Anna and a former SIU student, is acquainted with state government through actual experience. He has served as special counsel to the Illinois Budgetary Commission, and in 1957 was commissioned by the American Bar Association to draft a uniform system of traffic court administration which was adopted by the American Conference of Governors.

With a law degree from the University of Illinois, he served as Southern's general counsel before being named last year to a vice presidential post in which he is responsible for business operations and physical growth of the University.

Tenney, now vice president for planning and review, joined the SIU faculty in 1961 and still holds his academic rank as professor of English and philosophy. A specialist in aesthetics and post-modernist George Meredith and his works, he has had numerous publications in magazine, reference works and educational and professional journals.

"I know of no greater satisfaction," Tenney once told an interviewer, "than working directly with students."

Mrs. Barnes Taught At Indian University

By Bonita Trout

The hazards of motorbike traffic do not exist for students at the University of Baroda, India.

According to Mrs. Eleanor Barnes, visiting professor in the Department of Food and Nutrition, no automobiles or motorbikes are seen on the campus at Baroda.

Mrs. Barnes, who came to SIU in September, recently spent three years at M. S. University of Baroda.

She went there as a representative of Iowa State University to participate in a plan to make the home science college of the university a graduate center for preparation in teaching other fields of home science at the college level.

The project was supported by the Ford Foundation.

At the University of Baroda, which has an enrollment of approximately 10,000, Mrs. Barnes taught postgraduate classes and directed the writing of theses by graduate students.

While a large majority of the people of India speak Hindi, all courses at Baroda are taught in "British English," Mrs. Barnes said.

McCoy Included In Study Group

Ralph E. McCoy, director of libraries at SIU, attended a meeting in Washington D. C., Monday a special task force meeting to explore the need for a national plan of handling scientific and technical information.

The force was set up at the request of Donald Hornig, head of the Federal Council for Science and Technology.

Representatives of the National Library Association, various scientific societies and industrial research agencies were invited to the meeting to hear preliminary proposals.

"Home science is highly regarded in India and has the wholehearted support of the government," Mrs. Barnes said. "The basic principles of nutrition are universally applicable, but the nutrients are found in such different foods in India that an entirely different approach is necessary."

The social life at Baroda is very different from that at SIU. Girls are permitted to have dates only with their parents' permission.

"The students like to dance, but boys and girls do not dance together," Mrs. Barnes said. Occasionally, a boy and girl will dance together in programs, but there is no ballroom dancing. Their recreation consists mainly of movies, campus programs and walks."

The students at Baroda live in hostels which resemble the dormitories at SIU. Some students live in the town of Baroda, but the rest of students live on campus.

There is no commuting. Bicycles are used for travel around the campus and in Baroda.

Since her return from India, Mrs. Barnes has been compiling information for a textbook for use in the department of food and nutrition at Baroda.

She has a home in the Ozark Mountains in Fayetteville, Ark. She was retired from the University of Arkansas in 1960. From there she went to the University of Texas and then to Iowa State University.

She earned her bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees in chemistry at the University of Minnesota. She has taught at the Texas Women's University, Denton, Syracuse University, and the University of Arkansas.

At SIU Mrs. Barnes teaches food classes and works on curriculum.

HARRY T. MOORE

Series to Include Moore's Anthology

"The Elizabethan Age," an anthology by Harry T. Moore of the Department of English faculty, will be published this month by Dell Publishing, New York.

Moore said the book is a 544-page collection of Elizabethan prose and poetry. Dell is publishing it as a volume in their series, "Laurel Masterpieces of World Literature."

Previous books in the series have included the works of Dostoyevsky, Theodore Dreiser, Kipling, Henry James, Thomas Wolfe and Oscar Wilde, among others.

Moore, a former Guggenheim Fellow, is best known for his books on the controversial novelist, D. H. Lawrence. Included is a popular Lawrence biography, "The Intelligent Heart."

Among more recent works, Moore is author of "E. M. Forster," published by the Columbia University Press as one of its series on modern writers. He also is editor of the "Crosscurrents" series published by SIU Press.

'Eternity' to Be Shown

"From Here to Eternity" will be the movie shown at 7 and 9:30 p.m. Saturday at Lentz Hall. The movie stars Burt Lancaster, Montgomery Clift, Deborah Kerr, Frank Sinatra and Donna Reed.

Yanks Repel Another Ia Drang Attack

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP)—With B52 jet bombers ripping at Red entrenchments above the old battlefield, regrouped U.S. cavalrymen fought off a fresh attack Wednesday by North Vietnamese regulars on a new site in the Ia Drang Valley.

Blood flowed again in a battle that already had cost the greatest American losses of any single engagement in the war and, by the latest official count, 890 Communist dead.

A dispatch from the scene said the cavalrymen slew 13 of the attackers and captured one while their own losses were light, with none killed in the new engagement.

A Viet Cong battalion of about 500 men overran the government district headquarters at Kiep Duc, 130 miles north of the valley. Vietnamese sources said casualties among the 150-man garrison were heavy. Some of the victims were reported left impaled on stakes. U.S. military sources said they were told every building was razed. An aerial survey showed no sign of life.

It proved a costly day in the air war against North Viet Nam.

A U.S. spokesman announced four planes—one Navy and three Marine—and two pilots were lost in a raid on a railway bridge 33 miles southeast of Hanoi, a link in a line running to the port of Haiphong. The two other pilots were rescued. The raid followed up an initial strike at the bridge 10 days ago.

A Peking broadcast of the New China News Agency said the north Vietnamese shot down five planes.

U.S. officials disclosed American losses Nov. 7-13 were the highest for any week so far in the war—86 killed in action and 230 wounded. Most of these came from two fights in Zone D north of Saigon, one involving the 173rd Airborne Brigade and the other elements of the 1st Division.

The Americans contributed heavily, however, to the roll of Viet Cong casualties—981 killed and 192 captured. South Vietnamese losses were 175 killed, 286 wounded and 56 missing or captured.

Under security practices, American losses in the Ia Drang Valley campaign will be totaled with others of this week in an official announcement next week.

The new fight developed across the river and three miles north of the helicopter site that two battalions of the U.S. 1st Cavalry, Airmobile, Division had defended for three days against a North Vietnamese regiment.

The Americans pulled out early Wednesday. The B52 jets sped in at an altitude of more than 30,000 feet and laced the Communist-held hills with the smoke and flame of dozens of bombs.

Helicopters bore one battalion of the cavalrymen to the base camp of supporting American artillerymen about three miles southeast of the helicopter site. The other battalion hiked north. It was three miles on its way when the North Vietnamese struck with mortars and small arms fire.

The battalion returned the fire and radioed for reinforcements. The battalion from the artillery base responded. Making a forced march north, these cavalrymen rejoined their mates at nightfall.

A U.S. spokesman in Saigon said the cavalrymen had "adjusted their positions" to avoid being hit by the B52s. The winged fleet from Guam had struck Monday at supplies and transport behind the Communist lines.

Peter Arnett, an Associated Press correspondent covering the battle, said the Americans moved out in a hurry, maneuvering in an attempt to wrest the initiative from the North Vietnamese.

Another aim, he said, was to get away from mortar range of the Communist-held Chu Phong mountain, which overlooked their original foothold.

After the clash at noon, Arnett said, "there was continual contact with the enemy forces, who appeared determined not to let the Americans get out of their reach."

"There seemed little doubt that, wherever the U.S. forces would move in the next few days, the Communists would be right with them."

The battle zone is only about seven miles from the frontier of neutralist Cambodia, to which the North Vietnamese might finally retire. Prisoners have reported that their units came through Cambodia to reach South Viet Nam.

The engagement is the latest and biggest of a series set off last month by a Red siege of the special forces camp at Plei Me, a dozen miles to the east. The siege, launched Oct. 19, was broken by Vietnamese and American relief forces a week later. Action has flared sporadically since in U.S. efforts to clear the areas.

U.S. to Increase Vietnam Buildup

WASHINGTON (AP)—An increase in U.S. forces in South Viet Nam beyond the 200,000-man level is anticipated over the next six months, it was learned Wednesday.

The expected buildup to perhaps 225,000 or 250,000 men is an outgrowth of a new concept in the employment of American forces in situations where the 500,000-man South Vietnamese army does not have the strength or ability to carry out aggressive action against the Viet Cong.

In such cases U.S. combat forces are being used to push into Viet Cong base areas. In these jungle bases the Communist guerrillas have had the ability in the past to recoup their losses and strike again.

The present thinking here is that the Viet Cong can afford to retreat for a period of time, but eventually they will have to stand and fight or retire from the scene. Such actions have led to the fierce fighting at Plei Me and in the Ia Drang Valley, near the Cambodian border.

Mansfield Group in Moscow To Sound Out Reds on War

MOSCOW (AP)—Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield arrived Wednesday on what he called a fact-finding trip. But it had all the trappings of an effort to sound out Soviet leaders on possibilities for a Viet Nam peace settlement.

Mansfield and four other senators arrived from Warsaw, Poland, where they had discussed Viet Nam with Polish officials.

The Poles play a key role in Viet Nam as members of the three-nation control commission set up by 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina which ended the Indochinese-French war and established the nations of Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia.

The Poles also are considered a good pipeline to Red China. So are the Romanians. The Mansfield group is going to Bucharest Saturday, en route to Viet Nam.

Presidential press secretary Bill D. Moyers has said Mansfield was not carrying a written message from President Johnson for Soviet leaders. But he did not rule out the possibility that the Montana Democrat was carrying an oral message from the President on Viet Nam.

Mansfield told reporters at the airport here, "We have just come to work, look, listen, ask questions and report."

It was believed the U.S. Embassy had requested appointments for the senators with Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

The same thing happened last July when U.S. Undersecretary of State W. Averell Harriman arrived here "on vacation."

He arrived without appointments but saw Kosygin twice. Later it was announced that the visit helped clarify U.S. and Soviet positions on Viet Nam.

The Russians put the Mansfield group in a tourist hotel, rather than in the government hotel normally reserved for important visitors. No Soviet officials met the senators at the airport.

15th Attempt

U.N. Votes 47-47 To Keep Peking Out

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—In a dramatic climax to eight days of debate the General Assembly Wednesday again denied Communist China a seat in the United Nations. But the victory margin for foes of Peking was the closest on record.

The vote in the 117-nation assembly was 47 to 47 with 20 abstentions on a proposal to admit the Chinese Communists and expel the Chinese Nationalists. Two nations did not take part in the roll call ballot, and one was absent.

One more vote would have given supporters of Peking a simple majority, but shortly before the assembly upheld the United States in its contention that the issue was an important one requiring a two-thirds majority.

In comparison with the last assembly vote in 1963 the opponents of Peking dropped 11 percentage points, while its supporters picked up three. It was the 15th time the assembly had taken a vote relating to Peking's presence in the United Nations.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg, who left a sick bed to participate in the vote, said the outcome showed that it was not the United States alone which barred the door to Peking, but "a substantial vote of the membership."

In a statement to the press, Goldberg noted that the vote fell far short of a two-thirds majority and even "failed of a simple majority."

But for the first time the United States found itself the only major power voting against Peking. It lost support of France, which recognized Peking last year. Britain went along with the two-thirds rule, but voted for seating Peking, which it has recognized since 1950. While Soviet backing of Peking appeared lukewarm, it continued to vote in favor. After the vote, Britain's Lord Caradon told the assembly Peking's representation was essential in dealing with the problems of disarmament and peace in Asia. He said the United Nations would be damaged in the long run if the issue remained unsolved much longer.

In 1963 the vote in the assembly was 57 against, 41 in favor and 12 abstaining. The vote Wednesday reflected large-scale switching in many geographical areas, indicating the issue was being kept under constant review.

Illinois Youths Build a Rocket But Can't Get It Off Ground

WASHINGTON (AP)—Looks like the powerful rocket built by teenagers of Jacksonville, Ill., will have to stay grounded.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Wednesday it wants to encourage budding scientists, but all its facilities at Cape Kennedy and elsewhere are booked up.

The rocket club at Jacksonville says its missile will travel 1,200 miles an hour and soar to 60,000 feet. Trouble is the club can't prove this because it needs a launching range with at least a 15-mile radius, and can't get one.

Club president Dave Witte, 18, said letters to commanders at Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo., White Sands, N.M., and elsewhere have brought no results.

NASA officials said that kind of rocket would necessitate careful security precautions, like blockhouses to protect personnel. And it simply hasn't got those facilities to spare, NASA said.

A couple of times a year, usually May and October, the U.S. 2nd Army permits amateur rocketeers to have a field day by setting off their rockets at Camp Pickett, Va.

But—and here's the catch—there's an altitude limit of 18,000 feet on these shoots. If a rocket went higher than that and got off course, it might menace airplane traffic in the Washington area, the Federal Aviation Agency has ruled.

"Now if the boys at Jacksonville could scale their altitude down to 18,000 feet....," a 2nd Army official mused.

If they don't, it appears they may be in the classic predicament of the fellow who built a boat in his basement and couldn't get it out.

Ike Able to Sit Up In Hospital Chair

FT. GORDON, Ga. (AP)—For the first time since his heart attack eight days ago, former President Dwight D. Eisenhower got out of bed Wednesday and sat up in a chair in his hospital room.

Doctors said tests of his heart are stable now and there is no evidence of further damage to the heart muscle since a blood clot a week ago Wednesday injured an area of the heart.

The physicians attending the 75-year-old general said their patient "will not be allowed to get up and walk about" in advance of moving him to Walter Reed Army Hospital in Washington.

There was speculation here that the shift might be made sometime late this week or early next.

U.S. Will Release Copper Stockpile

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara Wednesday night announced plans to release at least 200,000 tons of copper from national stockpiles and to take other steps to curb rising prices.

McNamara announced the actions, aimed at heading off what he called "strong inflationary developments," at an evening news conference after conferring with other Cabinet members.

Johnsons Entertain Royalty

WASHINGTON (AP)—For visiting British royalty, there were music and flowers filling the White House, with 140 dinner guests invited and 30 more for dancing in the ballroom later.

Princess Margaret of Great Britain and her husband, the Earl of Snowdon, on a tour of the United States, were the honored guests.

President and Mrs. Johnson planned to receive them on the second floor and pose for pictures with them before going down to the state dining room where tables for groups of 10 were arranged.

One stop on the royal couple's day was at the Sharpe Health School where they spent nearly an hour chatting with children with physical handicaps. Most of the children are Negroes, and about half have cerebral palsy.

The White House guest list included Vice President and Mrs. Hubert H. Humphrey and three governors—Mr. and Mrs. Carl E. Sanders of Georgia, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. John R. Connally of Texas.

Also included were the Johnsons' two daughters, Luci, 18, and Lynda, 21, who is a student at the University of Texas in Austin.

The dinner menu was: Atlantic pompae amadine, roast squab, artichokes with vegetable puree, hearts of palm salad, brie cheese and praline glace.

Three groups were called in to furnish the music—the red-coated U.S. Marine Band in the foyer where the guests assembled; the U.S. Army Strings in the dining room during dessert; and Peter Duchin and his orchestra for dancing in the ballroom.

Brazilians to Appear at SIU on Cultural Tour

Three young Brazilian artists will present concerts and lectures here Dec. 6-7.

The artists, Heitor Alimonda, pianist, Maria Lucia Godoy, singer, and Rubens Gerchman, engraver, are touring 16 American universities with a "1965 Operation Campus" program.

The tour is sponsored by the Brazilian Foreign Office with the cooperation of the Brazilian American Cultural Institute of Washington, D. C.

While on the campus, Miss Godoy and Alimonda will give a concert of Brazilian music and a lecture on Brazilian piano composition and art songs. Miss Godoy, who was termed the greatest new vocalist of 1962 in Brazil, is a soloist with the "Chorus of Brazil." Alimonda is a teacher of piano.

Gerchman, whose engravings have received favorable reaction from art critics and collectors, will lecture on modern Brazilian painting and architecture, with the help of color slides and a set of 25 drawings made by young Brazilian artists Wesley Duke Lee, Antonio Dias and himself.

Albert W. Bork, director of Latin American Institute, said the programs will be open to the public.

Paluch Proposes Program For Student Government

between the student body and the Carbondale City Council must make the student "active in the development of Carbondale's attitudes and reactions to students," Paluch asserted.

Paluch also hopes to establish these programs:

1. A communications system combining some of the functions of the Daily Egyptian, WSIU Radio, the University Center Programming Board, Student Activities Office, Student Affairs Office and others. The body will collect information from students about activities, programs and academic affairs and distribute it throughout the University.

2. A late-hours check-cashing station to be operated on the same basis as the present check-cashing service in the Bursar's Office. The station would preferably be open until 9 p.m. seven days a week.

3. A "Great Lectures" series featuring video-tapes of authorities broadcast over closed-circuit facilities, preferably on a non-compulsory basis.

Paluch also said he would like to change the attitude of the people of Carbondale toward students. To do this, he said students would have to correct some of their behavior. "If you expect to be treated like adults, you must be adults. You must act so that you are deserving of adult considerations."

Among programs listed by Paluch as being undertaken by his administration are:

1. Proposed change in amount of athletic fees; this will be voted on Dec. 2.
2. Investigation of rent rates off-campus now being undertaken by John Strawn, student rights commissioner.

"Unfortunately, luxurious accommodations are not easily found in Carbondale—but high rents are," Paluch said.

3. Circulation of a questionnaire which provided opinions leading to a change of the final exam system.

4. Comment directed toward the General Studies program to cause a re-evaluation of the program and tentative plans to reduce requirements from 96 hours to 69 hours.

5. A proposal to establish a policy-making board to "supervise the planning, management, programming and operations" of buildings which are primarily student-oriented. These would include the University Center and the proposed Corecreation Building and the Student Health Facility. The board would set policies for professional administrators of these buildings to follow.

6. Establishment of a closed-circuit radio station which would be student-oriented and student operated. Paluch said he hoped the station could be in operation this year and broadcast off-campus in the future.

Paluch summarized his hopes for the future in this way:

"For students to feel that—through their student government—they have effected significant changes in their University;

"For the faculty to believe that these changes were for the betterment of the University;

"For the administrators to help implement these changes for the benefit of the University;

"And for the townspeople to say that students do contribute to, and benefit life in their community."

Bulletin boards! Bah! They're pretty unpopular around here, you know. Kind of give us an Avis complex. (We don't want to be number two.) But we can't understand it, either. Why do people advertise on bulletin boards? Newspapers are for advertising. And we think the Daily Egyptian is a better than average newspaper. And think about those 10,000 papers rolling off the presses every night (except for Sundays and Mondays), and those nice people reading it every day (upwards of 10,000; maybe 20,000.) And then think that it costs only a buck to place a classified ad (up to 20 words), and that you can reach many many more possible buyers or renters or helpers, and we doubt if you could understand it either. We want to make bulletin boards number two. So, please give us a hand. Place your classified ads with us. They're quick, efficient, and inexpensive.

Help us stamp out bulletin board advertisers!

Ancestors' Reaction?

What's Her Major? You Can Guess By Style of Clothing, Type of Dress

By Evelyn Augustin

How would our feminine ancestors feel if they could see the fashions available to contemporary women?

Greek women had no choice of clothing besides the dress designated to their classes, a regulation to prevent "lower classes" from dressing like their "superiors."

Queen Elizabeth I was the sole dictator of her subjects' styles. Among other things, she restricted the use of the great ruffs to herself. She must have had an influence on modern women, however, for she had more than 3,000 dresses, which seems to be the goal of most contemporary women.

Even the New England colonial woman had no choice of styles. She wore plain, drab dresses every day because there was a restriction against "extravagance" on the grounds that excess of apparel was unbecoming to a wilderness community.

For the modern woman, not only are there all kinds of colors, materials and styles, but there are also numerous "looks" available. Hence, one cannot distinguish a woman's "class," but it is sometimes possible to determine a college woman's curriculum simply by the clothes she wears and the equipment she carries.

The postgraduate assistant wears either a sheath dress or a tailored suit, stacked heels and flashy jewelry and can be most easily recognized by the haggard look on her face and her lopsided posture. This condition is caused by lugging around her 15-pound briefcase, which is always equipped with her master's thesis from which she teaches all her courses.

The art major and the philosophy major are sometimes difficult to distinguish from one another. Both have water-lily hair and pierced ears and can often be seen with big round campus smoking cigarettes.

Another confusing likeness is that both carry knit knapsacks for purses. And furthermore, both are fond of leopards, dark turtle-neck blouses and sandals.

However, there is a sure mark of distinction between the two. The art major is seldom seen without her 2 by 3-foot drawing board, whereas the philosophy major is usually carrying a book by Freud, with the author's name in large, conspicuously-colored letters.

The typical (if there is such a person) physical education major is sometimes seen in a bermuda shorts or a slack outfit since that clothing makes for a quick change in the locker room rush.

Perhaps her greatest distinguishing characteristic is her tripping walk, caused by a slow adaptation to a narrow skirt after romping the fields

ELIZABETH I . . .

the Queen's ruffles in her activity bloomers. Loafers, button-down collar shirts and crew neck sweaters dominate the physical education major's wardrobe.

Elementary education majors are most conspicuous when they are enrolled in the kiddie literature course. When one sets down her books on a desk and the title of the book on top is "The Wide Awake Owl," an observer may become disturbed with the seemingly decreasing challenge of college work.

Upon her clothing reminds one of his first-grade teacher, for she is most comfortable in jewel-neck sweaters and dyed-to-match skirts. She occasionally adds a bangle bracelet for flair and is usually seen in stacked heels or dress flats.

Not to be lost in an anonymous maze of students is the journalism major. The one who aspires to be a foreign correspondent is easily recognized by her tan trench coat, which she wears with no regard to weather, and her huge shoulder bag which conveniently conceals a portable typewriter, copy pencils and a notebook.

Since her interests are varied, so are her "looks." One day she may feel like "going casual," so she wears the outfit associated with a physical education major. The next day she may choose the "career girl look," achieved with a sheath dress which can easily be converted for evening wear, high heels and a high-piled hairdo.

One of the most conspicuous members of the University community is the freshman on her first college date. The older inhabitants of the dormitory are called in as top advisers on what to wear.

The council is called together approximately four hours before the time of the date and continues uninterrupted until a half hour after the time of the date. During this time the Young Thing models every outfit she owns for close scrutiny by her elders.

When her date calls, a last-minute decision to wear something of her roommate's allows her to be fashionable by keeping Fang, her suitor, waiting.

As she leaves, hanging on to her date's arm for support the residents of the dorm hang out the windows to watch her trip down the street in her new, too-high heels, her clinging black sheath dress and her already wilting hairdo.

Young Thing informs her advisers when she returns that she had a marvelous time, for Fang had taken her to the exciting grand opening of the new malt shop.

Perhaps if our ancestors knew the problems caused by the numerous styles available to contemporary women, they would sigh with relief that they were limited to their "class" dress. And perhaps some of our contemporaries wish for a return to such restrictions.

After all, it must be a traumatic experience to be mistaken for a government major when one is really a professional instigator of protest demonstrations.

The number of married SU coeds falls short of the national average.

According to a Population Reference Bureau report, 44 per cent of part-time coeds are married, but only 7 per cent of SU are.

Statistics show that 5 per cent of the full-time women students are married but at SU the figure is 7 per cent.

College women also marry at a later age than other girls. According to the report, college women most often marry at 22, high school graduates marry at 18, and girls who did not attend high school marry at 14 to 16.

Many married coeds drop out to help earn money so that their husbands can graduate.

Students Encouraged to Develop Health Goals

Life-Long Fitness Sought in Physical Program

By Robert Forbes

In an age when most Americans ride wherever they go and use an endless variety of machines to accomplish chores in and around the home, it is difficult to stress physical fitness.

But SIU is trying.

Every male freshman at SIU is required to take a physical fitness course which stresses physical exercises instead of the traditional games of basketball, football and other skill sports.

"The importance of a program like this is that it gives all students the opportunity to take away the fundamental concepts in fitness so that they can improve and maintain optimal health," said Herbert Weber, assistant professor of physical education for men.

Weber, along with Ronald G. Knowlton, assistant professor of physical education, is currently engaged in a laboratory experiment to test the effects of this physical fitness course.

"We have about 60 students taking part in the experiment," said Weber.

One of the objectives of the experiment and course is to motivate the students to carry on a physical fitness program throughout their lives.

"We give the students factual information they can understand," said Weber. "We try to project to them what they will be like at the age of 30 or 40 if they become sedentary," said the 32-year-old Weber.

Another objective of the program is to help the students acquire knowledge and understanding of their physical-fitness needs.

"Through the physical tests, the students can find their individual needs," said Weber. "We then give them exercises to strengthen these weaknesses," said Weber.

The program's lectures and explanations emphasize the importance of proper nutrition and exercise, Weber noted.

The boys taking part in the laboratory experiment will be brought back in a few years to find out what kind of physical condition they are in.

"We'll run them through the same tests they're going through now and see how they compare," said Weber, a University of Illinois graduate who is in his first year of teaching at Southern.

"If we can get the students to carry on a physical fitness program throughout their lives, we have accomplished our goal," he said.

HEARTBEAT IS MEASURED BEFORE AND AFTER THE STEP TEST.

Exclusive Interview

Bedraggled Burydown Bemoans 'Saluki Tradition Gone to Dogs!'

(Editor's Note: Joe Cook, the Egyptian's man about the playing fields, insists he conducted the following interview at the Datis abode this week. We asked Burydown to comment but he elected to remain silent so we are going to take Cook at his word.)

By Joe Cook

"Why don't we jump up and down, run around the football field and howl encouragement to the football team like we use to?" Burydown Datis said with a sigh of resignation.

"Well, I'll tell you, son, if you had to watch 35 centuries of family tradition (earliest Salukis date back to 1400 B.C.) go down the drain every Saturday for eight and maybe nine weeks in a row, you wouldn't feel much like whooping and hollering up yourself, now would you?"

He paused as if to meditate and gnawed enthusiastically at an elusive itch on his right front leg.

"I guess we're just bad losers," he said after a short pause, "but who ever heard of a Saluki finishing second to anybody, except maybe a greyhound, but we haven't played any greyhounds all season, have we?"

Wise old Burydown had made another good point, since after considerable research I found that a greyhound is slightly faster but doesn't have the necessary endurance to beat a Saluki in a long race.

Mrs. Datis, better known as Ornah, joined in the conversation, her sad eyes revealing the hurt and disappointment of the long football season.

Nuclear Physics To Be Discussed

William R. Wright, head of the Department of Physics at the University of Cincinnati, will discuss "Nuclear Orientation" at a physics colloquium at 4 p.m., Monday in Room 301 of Parkinson Laboratory.

Wright has been a visiting lecturer at Harvard and a member of the faculty of the Summer Institute for Theoretical Physics held annually at the University of Colorado.

Original 3-Act Play Opens Here Tonight

Interpreters Theater will perform a three-act original play tonight through Saturday at 7:30 p.m. in the Eaves Room of Anthony Hall.

The play, "Incitement," is written and directed by Richard B. Johnson, graduate student in theater.

Admission is 75 cents and convocation credit will be given. The story concerns the question of whether educated and "cultivated" persons can be incited to the violence of a rioting mob.

Jewish Center Dance Planned for Sunday

A band will play at a dance Sunday at the Governor Henry Horner Jewish Student Center.

Dancing will be from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. at the new center at 803 S. Washington Ave. Refreshments will be served.

BURYDOWN . . . Salukis aren't suppose to lose

"When are we going to win again?" Ornah whined.

"When coach gets some backs that can run as fast as any of us," Burydown snapped.

And then, as though he wished he could have retracted that last statement, Burydown added, "I'm afraid I'm going to sound conceited, but if the coach had me or anyone of my family in the backfield we'd score a few touchdowns."

But what would happen if the line didn't block for you?

"My sharp eyesight would pick out the smallest of holes in the line and I would be through there before the opponents knew what hit them. If there wasn't a hole, I'd just leap over everybody. They'd never catch me," Burydown added confidently.

Ornah, who has a lot of confidence in her husband's football ability, howled her agreement.

"You know Burydown has quite a sports background. He was a three-year letterman in soccer at Dogwash University in England. He knows football and could be a big addition to our running attack."

She no sooner got her statement out, than Burydown with football in mouth, gave us an example of his broken field running.

Down and out, down and in, weaving first to the left and then to the right, Burydown gave such a performance that Coach Don Shroyer would have probably signed him to the work scholarship program right there.

The exhibition brought a smattering of applause from the Saluki pups who delighted in watching their father's football ability.

"Do you think I'd make the team?" asked Burydown. "I can run the 100 in just over five seconds."

"You're faster than any player we have," I said. "Shroyer's fastest runner can only go a little less than 10 seconds. We'll have to arrange a tryout for you."

The promise that some day the dogs might be able to help Coach Shroyer win a few games instilled new life in the bedraggled dogs, who promised they'd take a much different attitude into Saturday's final game of the season.

Salukis Sniff Next Foe: Bears From Missouri

Season's Final Game Holds Prospect of Equalling 1964 Record

The Pilgrims had to shoot Indians before they could celebrate Thanksgiving. Southern's football team, however, will have to go gunning for Bears Saturday if they expect to celebrate over the Thanksgiving break.

The occasion is the final football game of the season for the Salukis, and if they win, the celebration would be for just that—winning. A victory Saturday would end Southern's eight-game losing streak and give the Salukis a record equalling last year, 2-8, if that's anything to celebrate.

The Bears of Southwest

Missouri undoubtedly have other ideas for the home team. Southwest has rolled up a 7-2 record this year and finished second in the Missouri Inter-collegiate Athletic Association.

The Bears' main strength lies in their ability to spring their speedy backs loose from the wing-T offense. The Bears have rushed for 1,900 yards in the first eight games, and that's almost twice as much as Southern.

Southwest's leading ball-carrier is Pat Hogan, a stockily-built 205-pound full-back. Hogan has picked up 611 yards rushing and also leads the team in scoring with nine touchdowns and 15 extra points. Hogan also does the punting for the Bears and is among the tops in the nation with an average of 45.6 yards per boot.

The other top rusher in Southwest's attack is Cornelius Perry, a speedy 175-pound tailback. Perry may not see action Saturday, however, because he injured an ankle two weeks ago. He is the team's scatback and has picked up 534 yards rushing and scored eight touchdowns.

Dan Young is the field general for the Bears. The senior quarterback has passed for

DON SHROYER . . .

Wants one more win

840 yards and is also a threat on the option. He has picked up 234 yards on keepers and is the team's third-highest in rushing. When his team couldn't move the ball on the ground last week, Young took to the air and hit 12 of 22 passes for 197 yards and two touchdowns. He also ran for one touchdown in that 41-15 rout of Northwest Missouri.

Completing the backfield is wingback Dennis Scott, a fleet 170-pounder. Scott has averaged 5.7 yards a carry so far this year.

Another man to watch in Southwest's lineup is defensive tackle Sam McDowell, who tips the scales at 335 pounds. He may see only limited action Saturday, but even so he spots Southern's heaviest man by about 85 pounds.

Those fans who like plenty of scoring should be delighted with the Bears. They have tallied four or more touchdowns in five games.

The two teams have played only one common foe, Drake. Southern lost to the Bulldogs, 28-12, and Drake beat Southwest 24-8.

Southern Frosh Outrushed But Didn't Outscore Foes

The final statistics show that the SIU freshman football team outrushed and outplayed its four opponents, but didn't always outscore them.

The Saluki yearlings out-gained their opponents 1,010 to 796 yards, but were out-scored 59-52.

In the individual department quarterback Tim Kelley was the team's scoring leader with 18 points. He was also the team's leading passer, completing eight of 19 passes for 82 yards. Halfback Mel Smith was the top pass catcher, with four good for 76 yards.

Halfback Dave Inglis was the top rusher, gaining 259 yards on 42 carries for an average of 6.2 yards a carry.

In punt returns Ed Wallner was the team's leader. He ran back eight for 74 yards.

Mel Smith was the kickoff return leader with nine for 139 yards.

Senate Commission Seeks Student Help

The Communications Commission of the Carbondale Campus Senate is searching for student help to set up its program.

The commission, intended to be a formal channel of information among administration, faculty, students and the community, needs students interested in communications, management, marketing, design or secretarial work. Anyone interested should contact the student government office in Activities Room G in the University Center.

Bus to St. Louis Slated Saturday

The University Center Programming Board will sponsor a bus to St. Louis Saturday.

Cost of the trip is $1.50. The bus will leave the University Center at 8 a.m. and return at 5 p.m. Students going must sign up in the Student Activities Office before noon Friday.

9 Seniors Who Opened Careers With Loss Hope to Check In Uniforms With Victory

Nine seniors will be hoping not to end their varsity season Saturday the same way they started—by losing. Quarterback Jim Hart, full-back Monty Riffer, ends Ron Leonard and Mike McGinnis, centers Dan Gallagher and Gene Miller, guard Mitch Krawczyk, tackle Vic Pantaleo and defensive back Warren Stahlhut will be winding up their collegiate careers at Southern.

Most of the eight played their first varsity game back in 1963 against Evansville College and lost 13-14.

The penalty department is one that Coach Don Shroyer is

All of the offensive back who have seen any action at all this year have scored at least one touchdown.

In rushing Riffer continues to lead with 325 yards gained on 97 attempts for a 3.3 yards per carry average.

Can't Hear Calls

Deaf Players Beat Handicap With Quick Visual Reaction

SALEM, Ore. (AP)—When you are a deaf football player, you don't know when the ball is snapped, your opponent has the jump on you and, even if you do something right, you can't hear the cheering.

Let Coach Rance Henderson of the Oregon School for the Deaf tell about it:

"We can't line up to execute plays and see the ball too. So we line up to execute plays."

"The quarterback nudges the center when he wants the ball. The defense hears it slap against the quarterback's hands, and they jump off."

"When our players see the defense move, they know the ball has been snapped and they block. We lose a split second, but we try to teach our players to react quickly."

Their reactions have become so good they now have the highest scoring high school football team in Oregon. The team plays eight-man football.

What if the defense failed to move when the ball was snapped? Would that rob the deaf team of blocking?

"No, because we would have a ripple effect in which the men beside the center would become aware that the center had moved, and then the men beside them, and so on."

"We hate to give away the split-second advantage the defense has, but there is one compensation. With our boys waiting until the defense moves we almost never get offside."

"Teams sometimes try to lure us offside by making a little move, but our players get shrewd about it. I don't think we've had five offside penalties in three years," says Coach Henderson.

Top Baseball Executive Named

CHICAGO (AP) - William D. Eckert, a retired lieutenant general of the U.S. Air Force, was named commissioner of baseball Wednesday, succeeding the retired Ford Frick.

The owners also announced the appointment of Lee MacPhail, president and general manager of the Baltimore Orioles, as administrator in the commissioner's office.

It is a new post created as a result of a reorganization voted by the leagues in Chicago several weeks ago.

Gen. Eckert and MacPhail were named at a meeting of the 20 clubowners and was the unanimous recommendation of the major league screening committee. The committee was composed of John E. Fetzer of the Detroit Tigers, John Galbraith of Pittsburgh, Walter O'Malley of the Los Angeles Dodgers, Robert Reynolds of the California Angels, Phil Wrigley of the Chicago Cubs and Tom Yawkey of Boston.

Eckert, whose selection ended a six months search by the screening group, praised the selection of MacPhail as his right-hand man.

"I have had an opportunity to meet him and know his record as one of the best informed men in baseball," the new commissioner said. "I am delighted he has agreed to join the commissioner's office in this key position."

Eckert said that the next order of business was for him to visit Frick, Charles Segar and others in the commissioner's headquarters in New York.

"I would like to schedule a fast tour to meet with the presidents of the American and National leagues and as many owners as possible throughout the nation before the December league meetings in Miami," said Eckert.

Eckert signed a seven-year contract at $65,000 annually and MacPhail signed one for three years at $40,000.
