Southern Illinois University

Mike Gibbons

Should the University supply two police officers to MEG? That's the question Jim Hietala, a junior in marketing, pondered during his visit to the student senate election polls Wednesday. Election officials reported a larger than normal turnout, attributed primarily to the MEG referendum.

Early election ballots indicate MEG issue attracted voters

Although ballots from student election were still being counted early Wednesday night, Election Commissioner Mike Malone said the voter turnout was "substantially larger" than past elections.

Malone attributed much of the increased voter interest to the referendum asking if the University should discontinue its involvement with the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group (MEG).

"It is most definitely 'yes' for MEG," Malone said after more than half the ballots had been counted. A "yes" vote on the MEG referendum meant that the University should stop its involvement with the drug enforcement agency.

A second referendum, dealing with alternatives for solving the student Health Service deficit, was ruled invalid, Malone said.

Shortly after 9 p.m. Wednesday, Malone released preliminary election returns, with more than half the ballots counted. All ballots were expected to be counted by late Wednesday night and official returns will be made known Thursday, Malone said.

The preliminary returns were: (Write in votes are not included.)

West Side (seven seats open)—Mike Waynen, (Action party) 141 votes; Jodi Ann Ganden, 138; Mark Alan Rouleau (Action party), 129; Kellie Watts, 112; Gary Figgins, 112; Nadja M. Papillon, 109; Renee Miyauchi, 103; Eugene Frankowski, 81; Larry Luebbers, 67; Michael Thon, as Richerson, 61.

East Campus (five seats open)—Joanne Loeser, 125; Melody A. Svec, 121; Stewart Umholtz, 110; Victor E. Lau, 87.

Thompson Point (one seat open)—Mary Haynes, 128; Steven Stricklan, 141.

All seven East Side candidates were elected to fill the seven seats open from that district, Malone said.

Those candidates were: Keith Fakon, Reginald King, Russell Kupkowski, Blair McDougall, Brian R. Reed, and Bob Saal and Keith Kibler (both Action party).

'Non-essential' wording kills health referendum

By Chris Moenich
Staff Writer

One hyphenated word can make a big difference.

In the case of the student government Health Service referendum, one word has invalidated the entire referendum.

The referendum, included with Wednesday's Student Senate election ballot, listed several alternatives toward solving a projected $377,000 Health Service deficit. One such alternative read "a cut back in non-essential programs offered."

When the wording of the alternative was approved by Dennis Adamczyk, student president, and Sam Dunning, vice president, on Nov. 10, however, the term "non-essential" was not included.

"Deleting the word invalidates the entire referendum," said Michael Malone, student government election commissioner.

The referendum, submitted by Michael Hampton, east side senator, was to provide student input into the ad hoc committee now compiling recommendations to solve the projected $377,000 Health Service deficit.

Hampton said, "Since the referendum is invalid it is essentially useless." He said it would cost $400 to $500 to set-up another referendum. Money to rerun the referendum could be taken from the special projects funds of student government, he said.

Even if enough money is found, the ad hoc committee is scheduled to complete its recommendations Thursday. Malone said the information will not be tabulated for use by the committee.

Hampton submitted the referendum at the Student Senate's Nov. 9 meeting. The initial referendum included three alternatives for solving the deficit. Hampton said the alternatives were: a cut back in non-essential programs offered, increased fees for services offered, e.g., x-rays, lab tests, etc., and an increase in student health fees in the range of $5 to $10.

Hampton said the senate approved the referendum after a fourth alternative—increase in state funding—was added and the word "non-essential" dropped from the alternative dealing with cutting programs.

Malone said he had no idea how "non-essential" slipped back into the referendum after the senate agreed not to include it. He said the senate had decided to strike the word because it connoted a value judgement and might bias the students who voted.

Catholic bishops nix report calling for softer sex rules

WASHINGTON (AP)—Roman Catholic bishops condemned a report that urges an easing of religious rules on sex and concludes church taboos such as adultery, pre-marital sex, homosexuality and masturbation, can be condoned in some circumstances.

Speaking through their important doctrinal committee, the bishops said the study by Catholic theologians "departs from the teaching of the church," abandons "objective criteria" of evaluating sex acts and weakens "the demands of sound morality."

Auxiliary Bishop Daniel E. Pilarczuk of Cincinnati said the doctrinal committee had assurances that its position represented the view of the entire National Conference of Catholic Bishops, which is meeting here. However, the conference took no vote on the matter.

"By abandoning norms that make specific demands, the report reaches the conclusion that sexual activity outside of marriage can be permissible or even virtuous," the bishops said in repudiating such conclusions.

The book-length study, "Human Sexuality: New Directions in American Catholic Thought," was issued last spring by a five-member committee of the Catholic Theological Society of America and has stirred widespread interest and varying reaction.

It departs from the church's traditional absolute "do's" and "don'ts" about sex and takes a more flexible approach by assessing the morality of sexual acts on a case-by-case basis.

The study says the morality of all sexual behavior—including church-condemned acts as masturbation, homosexuality and pre-marital sex—hinges on whether they contribute to personal wholeness and creative growth and whether they are "self-liberating and other enriching."

Such criteria "are too vague to apply with any kind of precision or assurance," the bishops' committee said. "In effect, they remove the essential connection between sexual activity and procreation, sexual activity and marital love."

The statement emphasized that the church has always "condemned such behavior as fornication, adultery and masturbation as sinful." These were cited by bishops at a news conference as among acts the study would condone in certain situations.

Prosecution rests its case in millionaire murder trial

AMARILLO, Texas (AP)—The lengthy murder trial of millionaire Cullen Davis moved toward a close with prosecutors claiming in their final arguments that Davis invaded his mansion to kill "the source of all his problems—Priscilla Davis."

Mrs. Davis is the millionaire's estranged wife. She survived the midnight shooting at Davis' $6 million Fort Worth mansion on Aug. 2, 1976.

But Davis' 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, was killed, as was Mrs. Davis' lover, Stan Farr, 30.

Davis has been charged with capital murder in both deaths. Only the killing of the stepdaughter is at issue in this trial.

After 13 weeks of testimony—the longest murder trial in Texas history—the Davis trial was in its final stages Wednesday, with the prosecution's summation expected to be followed in quick order by the defense summation, the judge's charge to the jury and jury deliberation.

Prosecutor Tolly Wilson opened the state's summation by saying that Davis "was going to kill anybody and everybody who stood in his way" in an effort to get at his estranged wife.

Mrs. Davis was wounded, as was a visitor to the mansion, Gus Gavrel, 22. Those two and Gavrel's girlfriend, Beverly Bass, 19, testified at the trial that Davis, head of an 83-corporation conglomerate, was the "man in black" who killed Farr shortly after Andrea was killed.

Andrea's body was found in the mansion's basement, and there were no eyewitnesses to her shooting. The prosecution sought to tie the murder to Davis by linking bullets recovered from Farr's body to those used to kill the girl, and by attempting to establish that Davis was the man who invaded the house that night and shot Farr.

Davis' defense team claims that a gunman other than Davis did the shooting and that the killings were related to narcotics. The defense presented witnesses who testified they attended parties at the mansion where sex and drugs were available.

Prosecutor Wilson said repeatedly that Davis' "very purpose" that August night was to eliminate the blonde socialite who was suing him for millions of dollars in a bitterly contested divorce action.

Guilty verdict rescinded; student given new trial

By Steve Pounds
Staff Writer

Jackson County Circuit Court Judge Richard Richman rescinded a ruling Wednesday he had made on Sept. 27 in which he originally found an SIU student, Ernest Ratcliff, guilty of aggravated battery.

"I don't believe I'm infallible. I believe I made a mistake," Richman said.

Richman originally found Ratcliff guilty of stabbing Thomas Welbourn in the Dugout, 101 W. Monroe St. Carbondale, on May 1.

The judge charged that someone had committed perjury during the first trial.

During the first trial conflicting testimony was presented by Marion Gorski, Warren Mohar, and Steve Conran.

Mohar and Conran, both SIU students, testified that Gorski had told them he stabbed someone. Gorski denied he had told anyone that.

During Ratcliff's first trial, Welbourn could not positively identify who stabbed him. However, a person in the Dugout at the time of the stabbing, Tim Sturiniere, a sophomore in pre-law, identified Ratcliff.

At the hearing Wednesday, additional testimony was provided by Bill Vosburgh, 19, who lived on the same floor as Ratcliff at Brown Hall on Thompson Point.

Vosburgh said Gorski had told him he stabbed someone, and saw Gorski wipe blood off a switch blade knife.

He said he had not come forward because he was not aware of the trial date until after Ratcliff was found guilty.

Vosburgh said some of the witnesses had not given all the information because of "peer pressure."

Vosburgh explained that he and others on Ratcliff's floor believed that if "they did not tell everything" neither Ratcliff nor Gorski would be found guilty of the stabbing.

Richman said a trial will be rescheduled. Jackson County Circuit Court Judge Peyton Kunce will preside.

The retrial has not yet been scheduled. Richman said Ratcliff's defense, conducted by Brockton Lockwood, was "handled miserably."

The judge explained that Lockwood had not called the available witnesses.

Jackson County State's Attorney Howard Hood called the ruling "unbelievable."

Richman admitted he never had a case like this before, and he made the ruling based on evidence presented by Vosburgh.

The judge criticized the state's attorney for "apparently" basing the case on a lie-detector test which Gorski had taken and passed.

Richman explained that a lie-detector test is inadmissible in court because it is not scientifically accurate.

He also criticized the state's attorney because "there hasn't been sufficient investigation into who was lying."

Hood said Richman "is confusing his role of judge with that of state's attorney."

He explained that the judge "obviously doesn't know all that goes on in an investigation by the state's attorney's office."

Swinburne says Palestinian group may join protest of dance troupe

By Chris Moenich
Staff Writer

The Committee for Justice in Palestine may join Hillel Foundation and Israel Student Union in a demonstration 7 p.m. Thursday in front of Shryock Auditorium, said Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs.

The Yatran Ukrainian Dance Company, visiting from the Soviet Union, will perform in the auditorium that evening.

Swinburne, who received notice of the Committee for Justice in Palestine's part in the demonstration from University police, said that despite the protest there will be no more than the usual number of security police at the auditorium for the performance. "Nobody will be restrained from voicing their beliefs," he said.

Gilad Freund, member of Hillel Foundation and Israeli Student Union, said the reasons the three groups are demonstrating are different.

He said Hillel Foundation and Israeli Student Union are demonstrating against the oppression of the Jewish people in the Soviet Union. He said it is hoped that the message will be carried back to the government by the dancers.

Man charged with reckless homicide

A Murphysboro man, Otis Reeder, was charged Wednesday in Jackson County Circuit Court with reckless homicide after the death of a 6-year-old boy killed when a car driven by the boy's mother was hit by a car driven by Reeder, a Jackson county state's attorney's report said.

Peter Borgia, 6, was pronounced dead on arrival at Memorial Hospital in Carbondale Tuesday.

Reeder's car collided with Eileen Borgia's about a half mile west of the Carbondale Clinic on Illinois 13, the report said.

Eileen Borgia, 32, RR 2 Murphysboro, was treated for minor injuries at Carbondale Memorial Hospital and released.

Reeder, 27, 1719 Walnut St. Murphysboro, is being held in Jackson County Jail pending examination by the Jackson County Mental Health Department.

Jackson County Sheriff Don White said that Reeder refused to talk with mental health officials.

Reeder had told police that he was 14 years old, the sheriff said.

Bond for Reeder was set at $100,000.

News Roundup

Anti-shah demonstrators continue protest

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter and the Shah of Iran concluded two days of talks as police tightened security around the White House and demonstrators massed for protests in other areas of the city. A heavy contingent of police stood by at the executive mansion to prevent any recurrence there of large-scale violence between pro-and anti-shah demonstrators such as occurred Tuesday. Those clashes left 124 persons injured and 12 persons under arrest. More than 1,000 anti-shah demonstrators, many wearing masks to conceal their identities, marched two-by-two several blocks away from a luncheon for the shah. Police prevented protesters from getting any closer than two blocks.

Califano says money blocks U.S. health care

LONDON (AP)—U.S. Secretary of Health Education and Welfare Joseph Califano said the biggest obstacle to a national health system in the U.S. is money and he called U.S. hospitals "incredibly obese and profligate." Califano had returned from a three-day visit to study Britain's state-run National Health Service. He said U.S. hospital costs are doubling every five years—increasing 2½ times faster than living costs. The secretary said he was "very impressed" with the British health service, especially the way some doctors worked in group practices.

Marion senator to push for coal tax revenue bill

By Tom Casey
Staff Writer

State Sen. Gene Johns, D-Marion, said that he will introduce a tax bill in next year's legislative session which would provide revenue for coal-producing counties, despite the veto of a similar bill this year by Gov. James Thompson.

The Senate last week failed to override Thompson's veto of a bill which would have placed a 30-cent per-ton tax on Illinois coal.

The bill received 32 and 34 votes respectively on two separate override attempts. 36 votes are needed to override a veto in the state Senate.

John said that the Senate's failure to override the veto will hurt the economy of Southern Illinois.

"This revenue was badly needed to provide tax funds for counties that have lost their tax base to support schools and local government," Johns said.

"Counties with strip mining are being raped of their lifeblood. This is a terrible blow to the economy of Southern Illinois."

Under terms of the bill, revenue obtained from the severance tax would be distributed to counties where coal is mined. Another 25 percent of the revenue would go to the state government, while the remaining 25 percent would be used for mine-related programs, including land reclamation, black lung clinics and mine insurance programs.

Johns said that the bill failed to gather the support needed to override Thompson's veto of partisan politics practiced by Senate Republicans.

"I am deeply disappointed that Republicans turned their backs on Southern Illinois for narrow political reasons," Johns said. "They know I am a candidate for re-election next year, and apparently they decided that passage of the severance tax would enhance my chances for re-election."

"This is a cross political position to take, considering that the future of Southern Illinois is at stake."

Sadat seeks Assad's support of Israel trip

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—Egyptian President Anwar Sadat huddled with Syrian President Hafez Assad, seeking the backing of his skeptical ally for his proposed visit to Israel. Sources said they believed the Egyptian president was trying to allay Assad's fears that Sadat would make private deals on the first-ever visit of an Arab leader to Israel. Sadat was likely to tell Assad that his trip to Israel is "meant to change the Israeli mentality about Arab intentions, and to show the world who is serious about peace and who is not," one Arab diplomat said. In Washington President Carter said Sadat's trip "will be a constructive step" toward a new Mideast peace conference.

Panel OKs overnight family visits for inmates

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—A resolution endorsing the idea of overnight visits by wives and family with state prison inmates received approval of an Illinois Senate committee. Under the program, wives, children and parents of inmates at Vienna Correctional Center would be allowed to visit with inmates in private quarters for periods of about 19 hours, up to four times a year. Corrections Director Charles J. Howe has testified that the experimental program would cost $140,900 the first year and $60,000 each year thereafter. The spokesman testified that the program would be intended to help inmates maintain relationships with their families, not solely to allow conjugal relations.

Faculty leaders say board 'cold' to teachers' needs

By Jean Ness
Staff Writer

The SIU Board of Trustees' recent refusal to discuss collective bargaining in a special meeting with the Faculty Senate was criticized by faculty union leaders as irresponsible to faculty concerns.

Marvin Kleinau, president of the Carbondale chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) said, "The most disappointing aspect of the board's response was the response of the chairman (Harris Rowe), based upon what he considered to be his time involvement, that the Faculty Senate was not worth any special time on their agenda."

At the last board meeting, Larry Taylor, the Faculty Senate president, asked board members to meet with senate members for a discussion of collective bargaining.

However, the board turned down the senate's request, saying a special meeting with one constituency might set an unwanted precedent.

Taylor said senate members wanted to express their representative viewpoints to the board, something they had not done before.

"The board may not have gotten a full understanding" of faculty's views at a discussion of collective bargaining held by the board last summer, Taylor said.

The board voted in July to deny SIU faculty a collective bargaining referendum. A referendum would poll faculty members to determine how many of them want collective bargaining.

Rowe said the board had already "given a good many hours" to the collective bargaining issue.

Aristotel Pappelis, a member of the United Faculty Association of Carbondale (UFAC) leadership committee, charged that the board is "insensitive to collective bargaining advantages for faculty" and said he expected them to "refuse to meet with the senate."

"I don't believe they will move (to permit collective bargaining) until the legislature passes a law that states collective bargaining will be allowed," Pappelis said.

Herbert Donow, president of the Carbondale Federation of University Teachers (CFUT), said he also anticipated the board's refusal to meet with the senate.

"I didn't expect them to do anything," Donow said. "In a matter as important as this I was sure they (the Faculty Senate) wouldn't be treated as they deserved to be."

Donow, who was Faculty Senate president two years ago, said he thinks the board sees itself as a steward of a public trust, but not as being responsive to faculty.

"The board doesn't see a need for listening to faculty on matters of policy," Donow said. "They don't recognize faculty as significant in determining policy."

Kleinau, a senate member and initiator of the special meeting motion, said the board's decision constitutes a firm stand.

Thompson lobbies to stop veto override of SIU budget cuts

By Melissa Malkovich
Staff Writer

SPRINGFIELD—An organized lobby effort by Gov. James Thompson may prevent SIU from getting $364,400 restored to its budget, Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, said Wednesday.

Thompson used his line item veto to cut the money for SIU employee salary increases, but the state Senate voted last week to override Thompson's actions.

Richmond said Thompson has been offering Chicago Democrats "something" in return for voting against the bill.

He said he wasn't sure what kind of incentive Thompson was using to enlist the Democrats' support.

Although the motion to override in the House was scheduled to be voted on Wednesday, Richmond said he wanted more time to gather the 89 votes necessary to undo the governor's veto.

He said the bill passed the Senate "by surprise" but opposition to the override has developed since that time.

Opponents of the bill will vote against returning the money, Richmond says, because Thompson's budget calls for the smaller amount. He said legislators are fearful other universities will also want overrides of cuts that Thompson made in their budgets.

SIU was originally appropriated 5.5 percent in salary increases, Thompson cut that figure to 5 percent.

Richmond said he has been told Thompson might chastise SIU in its budget if the money is restored.

However, Richmond said he will continue to work for the restoration.

"I'm not sure we've got all the bases covered at the moment. I've got a lot more footwork to do," Richmond said.

He added that Clyde Choate, SIU's external affairs director, has been "working hard on the override, and quite effectively."

"He's still a very effective force up here," Richmond said.

Crackdown on student loan defaults may affect about 152 students here

By Dennis Sullivan
Staff Writer

James Gabler, director of guaranteed services for the Illinois Guaranteed Loan Program, said Wednesday that an announced crackdown on 7,000 loan defaulters will affect "about 152 SIU participants."

Gabler said the local defaulters accounted for "about 10 percent" of SIU's 1,523 participants in the program.

Gabler explained that the crackdown will involve 490 lawsuits and hiring local collection agencies to collect the $13 million owed by the 7,000 students who have ignored warnings from the loan program.

Calling it a "war on defaulted student loans," Gabler said he is working with Illinois Attorney General William Scott's office to collect the loans.

Gabler declined to speculate on the amount of money owed by 152 SIU participants.

Although the total amount in default is $29 million, Gabler said only half that amount is not being paid back.

Gabler said the Guaranteed Loan Program will contact loan collection agencies in the defaulter's city rather than in Carbondale. "I'd dare say" that less than 50 percent of the SIU students stay in Carbondale," he explains.

"We have a model program in Illinois, with one of the lowest default rates in the country," Gabler said.

Gabler explained that the crackdown has been initiated in order to retain the low default rate.

Under the program a student receives a loan from a lending institution and pays it back to the institution. If the student fails to pay back the lender the state will pay back the lender.

Carter neglecting unemployed youth

Unemployment is one problem which President Carter seems to be neglecting.

During his campaign, Carter promised to make unemployment his number one concern. But between trying to gain support for the Panama Canal treaty, his energy programs and the Bert Lance affair, Carter has had little time for anything else.

The unemployment rate stood at 6.9 percent as of July, significantly higher than the 4.9 percent considered to be full employment by the President's Council of Economic Advisers.

The Unemployment rate is highest among youth: 19 percent overall and 34 percent among young minorities. Lester C. Thurow, Professor of Economics at M.I.T., believes the problem of unemployed youth will get worse before it gets better. He said the major cause is "a mismatch between the type of workers that employers want to hire and the workers that are entering the work force."

Even college graduates will find trouble getting the kind of jobs they want. According to Carlos Phears of the Maryland State Employment Service, "College graduates without a specialized area by and large can be classified as unskilled labor."

A study released in August by the Bureau of Labor Statistics indicates that during the period of 1974-85 there will be 950,000 more college graduates than jobs that traditionally have required college degrees.

This figure contrasts with the study made for the period 1986-75 which predicted a shortage of college graduates: 5.4 million graduates for 6.2 million available jobs. The discrepancy is due to the large number of births during the '50s and early '60s along with the amount of young men pushed into college to avoid the draft and the depressed war economy.

Economists disagree on solutions for unemployment.

Paul W. McCracken of the University of Michigan says a personal income tax reduction would stimulate the economy and create more jobs. He says, "The basic need is to push demands for goods and services a little higher."

W. Willard Wirtz, chairman of the National Manpower Institute, believes job programs are the answer, especially for young people.

President Carter has already created thousands of jobs for young people in such areas as state and national park maintenance, but many more are needed and permanent jobs are scarce.

A tax break would undoubtedly increase the spending power of many Americans but a better idea is the retraining of young people with the current needs of industry in mind. More work-study programs should be instituted in schools to employ young people and to prepare them in areas where they can find jobs. Subsidizing wages for the young workers would encourage businesses to hire them.

The American people are more interested in finding jobs than in any of Carter's current noble enterprises. Maybe after they have a secure income they can decide how they feel about the Panama Canal and energy proposals.

People becoming 'disposable goods'

By Paul Crain
Student Writer

Relating non-returnable bottles to the disintegration of human relationships seems to be an absurd mixing of apples and oranges at first glance. However, both are direct results of the country's economic development. Living in a throw-away society, people are beginning to treat each other like disposable goods.

Alvin Toffler first identified this developing orientation of society in his book, "Future Shock." He claimed the throw-away mentality began forming during the industrial stage of economic development. The traditional family unit—parents, children, grandparents, aunts and uncles—shed its "excess weight" to form the nuclear family unit. Consisting of the parents and a few children, this unit became the standard for all industrialized countries. The "excess weight" was jettisoned in response to the need for a large number of workers ready and able to move in pursuit of jobs. Fueled by a mobile work force and expanding technological expertise, the value of permanence was replaced by the value of transience.

Although permanence of a good was the ideal in the past, the easily replaceable item has become the better buy for the consumer. Technological advances tend to lower the costs of manufacture more rapidly than the costs involved in repair work. They also improve the product as time goes by and create a demand for the "new and improved product." As the rate of product change accelerates, the principle of disposability increasingly alters man's relationship with material objects.

Toffler states that this disrupting influence affects our sense of continuity and contributes to our throw-away mentality. A person heavily dependent on disposable goods experiences a more accelerated life style than one content in "keeping that old pair of tennis shoes" one more year.

The throw-away syndrome is further strengthened by man's surrounding environment. Although the number of man-made objects in existence is far fewer than the number of natural objects, people are more actively involved with their technological environment. Automobiles, TVs and streetlights are man's most intimate realities. Temporariness has become the hallmark of the material goods that figure in our lives. As our economy becomes increasingly industrialized, into what Toffler calls the super-industrial stage of development, not only objects but also people will be "disposed of" at a faster rate.

Continuing urbanization, increasing geographic mobility and implementing technological developments in all occupations contribute to the growing trend of temporary relationships. Although Toffler suggests that it might be possible to accelerate the formation of relationships in order to speed up the process of "involvement," the words of a nineteen-year-old coed at a Fort Lauderdale frolic creates a chilling vision: "You're not worried about what you say or do here because, frankly, you'll never see these people again."

Many federal agencies winners of inefficiency prize

By James J. Kilpatrick

A couple of months ago, the White House sponsored a tough competition. Richard A. Pettigrew, a presidential assistant, polled members of the House and Senate with a truly demanding series of questions. This was the first question:

"Which federal programs do your constituents think are administered least efficiently?"

That is the kind of question that Davey Crockett, a former member of the House, once described as a sockdolager. You want to think before responding. The least efficient federal program? Such a title cannot be lightly conferred. It is an honor not easily won.

In the course of time, responses trickled back to the White House. A week or so ago, Pettigrew called off the competition. He refused to tabulate the votes, but he made this clear: "Dozens of federal agencies could qualify for the titles of 'least efficient' or 'most confusing.' And what troubles the taxpayers, more than anything else, is plain, old-fashioned delay."

Wisconsin's Senator William Proxmire emphasized this complaint in a long and detailed reply to the Pettigrew questionnaire. The Farmers Home Administration, he said, is "notoriously slow" in processing loan applications, and the delays result in serious hardships; the farmer who has to wait six or eight months for a disaster loan may miss the next planting season.

Proxmire had other nominations. The Civil Service Commission is so slow that a retiring federal employee may have to wait six months for his first retirement check. The Immigration and Naturalization Service is "probably the slowest of all agencies." It often takes more than a year for the INS to take final action in a particular case. The Internal Revenue Service, in Proxmire's view, is "probably the least responsive to the needs of the taxpayer." Moreover, if there were a "most maddening" classification, the IRS would win in a walkaway. One of his constituents spent 23 days trying to get IRS to answer its toll-free telephone line.

"The IRS," said Proxmire, "also refuses to make amends for its own errors. If a businessman's bank account is attached in error by the IRS, the agency will not advise his creditors that the agency was responsible for any bad checks which may have been written on that account. If the creditor will agree to write the IRS, the IRS will then acknowledge its error. Since most creditors do not have the time or interest to contact the IRS, the businessman's credit may well be destroyed through no fault of his own."

Proxmire hit the Veterans Administration, the Social Security folks and the Environmental Protection Agency for slowpoke service. AMTRAK, he remarked, "rarely bothers to answer at all."

Virginia's Congressman G. William Whitehurst, in his response to the Pettigrew survey, singled out the Office of Workers' Compensation Programs within the Department of Labor. He seconded the nominations of Social Security and the Environmental Protection Agency, but he regarded the OWCP in a class by itself. No other program "equals the unresponsiveness, the incompetence, and the general disarray of the OWCP." The federal worker who seeks compensation for an industrial accident encounters "months and even years of delay in settling the claim." It is not at all uncommon, Whitehurst charged, for the agency to "misplace case files for months at a time, and even lose the files entirely."

In the catalog of complaints, delay appeared to rank first, rudeness second, and incompetence third, with sheer confusion running fourth. Federal requirements, notably in purchasing and procurement, were widely denounced as excessively complex. Federal forms and statistical reports are seen everywhere as needlessly burdensome.

Pettigrew's survey was not designed, of course, to award prizes, plaques or trophies. It was designed to assist the president in the reorganization program that Mr. Carter has been promising for months. To judge from the voluminous and disturbing complaints, the situation may be even worse than the president had believed.

Adamczyk neglects duty for political gain

On Nov. 7 of this year I resigned from the Student Senate. I resigned during a week when I came to the sudden realization that the Senate was at a stage of being totally ineffectual. At the time of my resignation I sent a letter to Student President Dennis Adamczyk. I told him that I felt he was doing a good job.

Since that time I have had to bite my tongue. Adamczyk's actions in the last few weeks have been totally against the best interests of the students. Dennis is currently engaged in a power struggle, and it is a losing struggle at best. Dennis has even attacked his own vice president.

Why? His vice president, Sam Dunning, has carried the burden of making the executive branch work. Dunning has set up a rape prevention program. He has established a close relationship with ECRAC and TEPEC. Sam was the only person to attack President Brandt, when Brandt ignored the wishes of students during the recent strike.

Where was Dennis Adamczyk? Why was he silent? Why hasn't he shown support for myself and other EAP members? Does Dennis have illusions of grandeur which keep him from supporting the students? It is time for the students of SIU to act. It is time for apathy to end. I ask that all students write to Dennis Adamczyk and show their concern over his attempt to gain politically, while we are left to suffer.

Bookstore's method of guarding against theft 'stinks'

This time they've really done it! The Student Center Bookstore has developed what they believe is a viable plan to combat the theft of textbooks. It is no longer possible to browse among the textbooks and select one's own books because the entire area has been sealed off to prevent any access by students. Now it is necessary to try to find an attendant of the store who will "fetch" your book. This process is intended to prevent any of our decadent youth from slipping off with a copy of "Analytical Geometry" or "Conflict and Consensus." The problem is that the logic stinks.

Students who enter the bookstore are required to check any backpacks, briefcases, etc., before passing through the one-way entrance gate. Thus, the only means of transporting a textbook across cashier lines is on one's person. I have tried and tried but am unable to determine how one would go about swiping a copy of The Third Reich without the aid of a carrying mechanism; it simply would not fit on or in a body—anywhere! I have, however, developed an alternate solution to this grave problem of textbook thievery.

First, I propose that the bookstore reopen its textbook area to provide more swift and efficient service for the students. Second, I suggest that the management of the bookstore more carefully supervise its employees, since the question of who might more easily steal a textbook, an employee or "Joe Student," is easily answered. If these two steps were followed, the shoplifting of textbooks would significantly diminish. This proposal seems much more modest, efficient, and nondiscriminatory than the one presently in use. The logic of isolating textbooks from students to prevent theft is similar to lopping off one's head to relieve a headache. Or maybe it's closer to cutting off a foot to relieve the headache?

Storekeepers have right to refuse gays' handbills

Have things changed so much that a store owner has to post any handbill that a person brings in? In regards to Mark Dietrich's letter, we believe the answer is no! Unless a storeowner is a gay sympathizer or a gay person him- or herself, we would not expect him or her to exhibit an advertisement for a gay dance.

What it comes down to is a person's rights. You have your right to be gay, Mr. Dietrich, as long as you do not infringe on another person's rights. It is also a storeowner's right to refuse to put up your handbill.

Yes, the storeowners did discriminate against you (there is no law which says that a storekeeper must put up your poster), but what do you expect? It is a straight world! Even if there were 5,000 gay people in this community, that only amounts to about 12 percent of the population. Homosexuality today is not a widely accepted and condoned lifestyle, so are you really surprised that storeowners would refuse to put up your poster? Grow up and quit being so naive.

Write now and help Shawnee gain wilderness

The U.S. Forest Service is currently conducting an inventory of roadless areas on national forest land which may be suitable for inclusion in the national wilderness system. The program, RARE II (Roadless Area Review and Evaluation), has taken a strange turn in the Shawnee National Forest. David Jolly, the Shawnee supervisor, recommended that eight areas be considered, including Lusk Creek in Pope County and Hutchins Creek in Johnson County. Both areas have considerable beauty and a history of public support for wise-ness status.

The regional forester, Steve Yunich in Milwaukee, deleted Lusk Creek and Hutchins Creek from the inventory, arguing that both areas contained too many evidences of civilization. The decision is now before John McGuire, Chief of the Forest Service in Washington. His decision is due around the middle of December.

Those who would like to see Lusk Creek and Hutchins Creek become wilderness areas should write at least one letter immediately. That letter should go to:

John McGuire, Chief
U.S. Forest Service
12th and Independence SW
Washington, D.C. 20250

You might argue: 1) the two areas have had strong public support over many years. Even if there are some problems with the areas, they should be given further study; 2) the Shawnee National Forest recommended overly large boundaries for both areas. Had smaller boundaries been chosen, there would be fewer problems. After all, any wilderness area could be excluded if the boundaries were large enough; 3) the Shawnee National Forest staff, those closest to the forest, recommended considering both areas. If you are familiar with the areas, tell the chief about your experiences.

Please write. It may be our last chance to get wilderness areas in Southern Illinois.

U.S. denies belief in human rights by honoring Shah

The Shah and the Empress of Iran visited the United States Nov. 15 and 16, and were welcomed by President Carter as honored guests. The Shah's visit to the White House took place at the time that Iran has come under heavy criticism for human rights abuses. With growing concern for human rights in the United States and throughout the world, this trip was designed to improve the Shah's tarnished image and present him to the public as a benign and benevolent monarch.

On the occasion of the Shah's visit to the United States, the Committee for Artistic and Intellectual Freedom in Iran would like to call public attention to the status of human and civil rights in Iran. The Human Rights Division of the United Nations, Amnesty International, and the International Commission of Jurists have all reported gross violations of human and civil rights in Iran.

The International League for Human Rights (ILHR), affiliated to the United Nations, charged the Iranian government on June 24, 1977, with violations of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, the U.N. Declaration against torture, and the Iranian Constitution of 1906. The ILHR statement documented an "intensification of human rights abuses" in Iran over the past ten years, citing in particular: the detention of thousands of Iranians without due process; the "systematic use of torture" resulting in "permanent injury" and death; executions of political prisoners; restrictions on all political opposition; suppression of free speech, press, assembly and association; and harassment of Iranian dissidents at home and abroad by the Iranian secret police SAVAK.

According to a report by Amnesty International released in November 1976: "The suppression of political opposition is carried out by SAVAK with extreme ruthlessness using a system of informers which permeates all level of Iranian society. . . ."

The International Commission of Jurists reported in May 1976 that, for SAVAK victims, there is no judicial appeal. SAVAK officers have "the power to act as 'military magistrates' with the right to detain prisoners as long as they want. The SAVAK secret police, 200,000 strong, have been 'expertly trained by the Israeli Secret Service, the CIA, and AID agents.'" The SAVAK does not restrict its activities to Iran but "operates throughout the world where Iranian students congregate and where Iran may have a national interest," including the United States.

In Iran, artists, intellectuals, authors, poets, social critics, publishers, translators and scholars suffer from a harsh system of censorship and thought control. The Iranian government even refuses to accede to the recent request of more than 100 of the nation's prominent literary figures to establish the Iranian Writers Association, whose objective is to establish centers where writers may gather to exchange ideas. The majority of Iranian artists and intellectuals have been imprisoned and tortured solely for expressing their ideas.

Intellectuals have been imprisoned and tortured solely for expressing their ideas.

President Carter's guest, the Shah of Iran, is directly responsible for gross violations of the civil and human rights of the people of Iran. We call upon all who respect human rights to join us in demanding that the Shah immediately release all prisoners of conscience held in his jails. Such demands should be sent to: The Shah of Iran, Embassy of Iran, 3005 Massachusetts Ave., Washington, D.C. 20008.

Women, stand up!

It is shattering to hear women cry out "abortion, abortion," when it only leads to a greater bondage, or to hear cries for laws of "equal rights" when they have not exercised their God-given right of personal worth and dignity.

If we as women desire to be truly heard in this male-dominated society, we will have to stand against the cupie doll image we portray. We will stand against women selling out their bodies in X-rated films, lewd magazines and advertising. We will stand against the television shows and stars who trade off as "entertainment" sick sex programs and over-exposure. We will realize that "Wonder Woman," "Charlie's Angels" and the snap of Fonzy's finger are purely for the male chauvinist.

As we women take authority over our own bodies and refuse to be pandered as cupie dolls, we will become women of authority. Men will have to deal with us as persons of worth, not as things. They will then hear us. Women, let us stand and be heard!

Study indicates decline of U.S. cities may be ending

By Joseph R. Tybur
Associated Press Writer

(CHICAGO (AP) — Many major U.S. cities have stopped a 30-year decline and now hold the promise of beauty and vitality, a new study shows.

Urban decline "has not only slowed but in many cases has been arrested," said Nathaniel H. Rogg, former executive vice president of the National Association of Home Builders. He made the study for the United States League of Savings Associations.

Property values have made a "dramatic reversal" in some areas, Rogg said.

Beginning in March, Rogg visited Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Houston, Boston, Baltimore, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Dallas, Washington and Oakland.

"I saw it," he said Wednesday in a telephone interview. "We are yet at a beginning point, but the basic thing that came through is that the tide has turned. Not every city, not every neighborhood, but there definitely is a turning of the tide that has run in one direction since World War II."

Rogg was in San Francisco for the league's annual convention but a copy of his report was released from the league's headquarters in Chicago.

"I don't want to sound so optimistic as to indicate there are no problems," he said. "There are enormous problems but I think things look good for the going ahead."

"There is a back-to-the-city movement, plus a stay-in-the-city and fix-up movement on the part of people already there," he said. The new interest is fueled by a combination of affluent, adventurous couples, blue-collar and middle income families, ethnic communities and low-income people who want to help turn the neighborhood around.

"The numbers are not yet significant and we don't even know yet what they are but, for instance, I live in downtown Washington, next to the ghetto, and I'd say at least every other house in the last two years has been undergoing rehabilitation. Most of it has been done by private citizens coming in because they want to live in the city."

He said Baltimore "is the best example of local government in operation I've seen in at least 20 years."

"What used to be the dirtiest old harbor in the country is now a lovely harbor with, sailboats in it. They have a new trade center and a new science center and they've refurbished their parks so that they're just lovely."

In Dallas, he said, a program in one area administered through the Neighborhood Housing Service, has brought 1,100 of 3,000 homes up to code.

"In another area, a batch of young people are coming in and remodeling and call themselves urban pioneers. There are now 60 or 70 young families there. There's a builder, Dave Fox, who is trying to accumulate 80 acres in downtown Dallas and remake them entirely—a new town in town—take away some of the worst housing and leave the best."

Rogg, who has worked as an economist with several federal agencies, said he was hired by U.S. League of Savings Associations "to see what the hell is going on in the cities and to see what they can do."

"They're getting sick and tired of wearing black hats and have been rubbed raw by criticism. Secondly, they think there's a market out there they might be missing."

Tower Road to be closed until 1978

If you thought the widening and resurfacing of Tower Road would be completed soon, you're in for a surprise. The road will remain closed to commuter traffic until at least July 4, 1978.

Bill Boyd, director of the Carbondale Public Works program, said earlier this week that the J.J. Mullins Construction Co. which began work on the road in June, may not complete the road before the 1978 date.

Boyd's remarks were made at Monday's City Council meeting in response to queries by councilmember Helen Westberg.

IGA fire causes $1,000 in damages; business resumes

Despite a fire which caused about $1,000 in damages, the Boren's IGA grocery store in the Lewis Park Mall has reopened for business.

Carbondale firefighters were called to the fire Tuesday night. It had apparently begun in the store's incinerator.

A firefighter explained Wednesday that the incinerator, located in the back of the building in the storage area where returned soda bottles are kept, was the cause of the fire.

Boxes which had been stacked on top of the incinerator ignited. The fire spread to the store's building and roof.

The result was $700 in damages to the building and $300 to merchandise.

No injuries were reported.

Songwriter Carroll Barber (Keith Carradine) welcomes a forlorn Karen Hood (Geraldine Chaplin) to a ride.

'Welcome to L.A.' a mood piece

By Dave Erickson
Staff Writer

"Welcome to L.A." is a film formed around music and an aborted attempt to record it, but after seeing it, one remembers the silences as well.

With its bevy of stars, a title song by previous title-song Academy Award winner Keith Carradine, and association with the name Robert Altman, a name which still packs a box office wallop despite his non-mainstream quirks, "Welcome To L.A." is an intriguing enough package.

Once it's been viewed and reflected upon, this unrelenting mood piece, which was written and directed by Alan Rudolph, one of producer Altman's assistant directors, doesn't strike one as the kind of film that you get all excited about, but the feeling it brings out isn't easily forgotten.

One real big problem Rudolph has is letting us know what's going on. The film is so character-oriented and the acting so excellent, that without proper guidance from Rudolph, you don't even realize that the plot is moving, nor do you care. Besides like Sally Kellerman walking into a kitchen of intense late-afternoon light to put water in a vase, though they might have their place as symbols, are not differentiated from more important scenes that contain plot revelations, so the viewer is left confused. If Rudolph's disregard of plot emphasis was done on purpose, so he could sustain the mood, he blew it. There are ways to do both, and his failure to do so damages the film's accessibility.

When Rudolph does use film techniques to "punctuate" something, it is primarily to emphasize his themes, such as his frequent referral to "corners" in the film. Lauren Hutton plays an avant-garde photographer who takes pictures of the corners of buildings. She is said to "make sense out of them, too" by her rich "sugar daddy" Carl Barber (Denver Pyle), who plays Carradine's father in the film.

A Review

The "pungence" of Pyle's fine is reminiscent of Altman's famous use of dialogue to reveal information, but it lacks the Altman casualness, which would make it seem more like a "find" to the viewer.

Geraldine Chaplin's neurotic monologues from the back seats of taxis are also too obvious. Her fragile surmises cross over the line into being "too precious." While seemingly justified by references to "Camille," her monologues ultimately subject the viewer to "emotional diarrhea." Lines like "Everyone gets deceived, don't they?" seem to be stuck into the film to injection-mold it with "meaning." This turns off a lot of viewers.

Rudolph's visual punctuation of the film's themes is more successful. In his flashiest use of visual technique, we see photographer Hutton's rapid-fire still-photo sequence of Chaplin forlornly standing in the corner of a wall outside her husband's (Harvey Keitel) office.

Like fashion, Hutton

photographs each of the characters in the film's microcosm, (as in Altman's "Nashville," a large cast is uncannily, often unknowingly, inter-related, requiring the viewer to "suspend disbelief" at their "coincidental" interminglings) many of them seemingly "cornered" as they search for love. This emphasizes the feeling of technological isolation that is prevalent in the film's visual landscape, almost without exception set in cars, apartments, and office buildings.

Not surprisingly, Hutton seems to be the most self-assured character in the film, though she reeks of cold calculation. This ties into the film's visual construct. When "cornered," she's ready to shoot her way out with her Nikon camera.

In one sense, "Welcome To L.A." is about sensitivity and how the tender element of our human make-up that we expose when we search for love is mutated by environment and experience. Rudolph chooses to suppress most other areas of the characters' lives to keep the mood consistent. This is no "slice-of-life." If these were real people, you'd have to search hard to find a more consistently neurotic, self-indulgent lot. The addition of scenes showing them as occasionally happy, well-rounded, and well-adjusted would dilute the power of the film, though.

The "integrated" soundtrack, where the musicians heard also play a role in the film, is reminiscent of Lindsay Anderson's "O Lucky Man." While Carradine's voice is superior to soundtrack composer Richard Baskin's whine, they are both ultimately bland, not exactly a negative quality when you're backing a picture.

40 percent entering service since 1973 have dropped out

WASHINGTON (AP)—More than 40 percent of those who volunteered for military service since the draft ended in 1973 have failed to finish their first enlistment, the Pentagon's manpower chief has reported.

John White told reporters that officials are working on plans to reduce the high percentage of service dropouts, but he gave no details.

He said the discharges, many less than honorable, resulted from discipline problems, unsuitability and failure to adjust to military life and medical problems not discovered at the time of enlistment. The largest share of the dropouts, more than half, came from among men who had not completed high school before they volunteered for military service. High school graduates accounted for 31 percent of those who left service before their first enlistments were completed.

In the draft years, first-term dropouts amounted to less than 20 percent of those inducted or enlisted. The educational level of the draft-based armed forces was higher than now.

The armed services have been struggling since the draft expired to recruit enough quality volunteers, with a high school diploma considered the desirable standard. According to manpower officials, graduates are more reliable and less likely to get into trouble.

New figures released by the Pentagon show that the Army still lags behind the other services in attracting high school graduates.

During the year ended Sept. 30, percent of the Army's recruits were high school graduates, a 4 percent increase over the previous year.

The Air Force had the best performance with 88 percent of its enlistees holding high school diplomas, down 1 percent.

The Navy ranked behind the Air Force with a 72 percent record, a drop of 2 percent. The Marine Corps, which had serious problems in this area just a few years ago, was up to 70 percent in high school volunteers last year, an increase of 6 percent.

Meanwhile, in another development, the Army announced it will reconvene boards to screen out reserve officers.

Early Greek king's tomb believed found

ATHENS, Greece (AP)—An ancient tomb discovered beneath a village street in northern Greece may be the burial site of King Philip II of Macedonia, father of Alexander the Great, the Greek Archaeological Society has announced.

The tomb was discovered 19 feet under a narrow street in the village of Vergina, 7.5 miles from the town of Veria.

Archaeologists led by Salonica University professor Manolis Andronikos have been excavating in the area for years uncovering some finds, but they were not considered of great importance.

But when archaeologists began digging deeper, they struck a marble door which later proved to be an entrance to a tomb. Removing the door, archaeologists found a huge vault and a standing sarcophagus surrounded by finely engraved silver vases. A painting in almost perfect condition depicting a hunt was found in one of the vault's walls. This indicated, said archaeologists, that the vault had apparently remained sealed for 2,300 years.

Inside the sarcophagus, archaeologists reported finding a skeleton with a gold laurel wreath near the position of the head and with gold-plated bronze body armor and shield. In addition, a solid gold chest weighing about 11 pounds was found. The presence of the treasures indicated the tomb could be King Philip's. The king was believed to have been buried in the Vergina area.

American, British and German archaeologists from their respective schools in Athens were summoned to the Vergina site to assist their Greek colleagues in examining the treasures.

The archaeologist later said that "only a member of royalty could have been buried in this manner," heightening speculation that it is Philip's tomb.

mercials which emphasize sex and violence or which perpetuate sex-role stereotyping," a resolution approved by the council's policy committee said.

Members of the council are state school superintendents and commissioners from around the nation. Illinois schools Supt. Joseph Cronin, chairman of the policy committee, said the sex-and-violence resolution recognizes that "excessive violence on TV increases aggressive behavior" among youngsters and too much television can hinder their physical development and hamper their ability to "distinguish reality from fantasy."

In other action, the council urged more emphasis on the arts in education plus action to prepare youngsters for jobs by creating closer links between schools and "the world of work." The latter move follows congressional approval in August of $1 billion.

Percy plans legislation to limit alien welfare benefit rights

By Marc Wilson

Associated Press Writer
Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., plans to introduce legislation to reduce alien welfare benefit rights that he says are an unfair burden to American taxpayers and the Social Security system.

Percy began drafting the legislation in the wake of a government report released earlier this week saying that aliens in Illinois are collecting more than $4.5 million a year in welfare.

"We don't believe persons who haven't contributed to the American society should be entitled to such rights," said a spokesman for Percy's office in Washington.

The Percy spokesman added that the alien welfare demands are straining an already overburdened Social Security system.

Nation's oldest citizen undergoes leg amputation

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP)—Charlie Smith, a former slave who is believed to be the nation's senior citizen at 135, asked for a shot of bourbon then was wheeled into surgery where doctors amputated his right leg below the knee.

Smith, the oldest person on Social Security rolls, was reported in satisfactory condition at Lakeland General Hospital.

Doctors said they had to amputate because gangrene had started spreading from Smith's big toe and other treatment was not effective.

Smith doesn't know exactly when he was born but says he was 12 when kidnapped from his native Liberia. He says he was sold at a slave market in New Orleans to a Texas rancher on July 4, 1854, and so he used July 4 as his birthday.

He was freed by Abraham Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. Smith has been living at a Bartow nursing home for the past few years.

"There is a flaw in the law," added Ron Teuber, a spokesman for the Social Security office in Chicago. "There are a lot of people who think there should be tighter restrictions."

Teuber said about 148,000 aliens are receiving Supplemental Security Income nationally. Benefits range up to $177 a month for a single person and $265 for a married couple.

The total cost nationally hasn't been calculated, but a General Accounting Office study released earlier this week said the cost in five states—including Illinois—averaged $72 million annually during the past four years.

Teuber said Illinois' state government pays about 20 percent of the SSI benefits.

"The people on SSI seem to come from just a few countries," he added. He said 28.8 percent of the aliens receiving SSI benefits are from Mexico, 10.3 percent from the Soviet Union, 8 percent from the Caribbean, 6.2 percent from Portugal, and 5.4 percent from both Italy and the Philippines.

Teuber stressed that the aliens on SSI are doing nothing illegal. "But some people might see this as reflecting badly on all immigrants."

The U.S. Immigration Service says 281,770 aliens are registered in Illinois—which means that just over 1 percent are receiving SSI benefits. Nationally, there are just over 4 million legal aliens living in the United States.

Under current law, aliens and their sponsors must pledge that the aliens won't become a public charge once they're in the country. To receive SSI benefits, a person must be blind, disabled or aged.

The GAO study said, however, that most of the aliens receiving benefits suffered their disability before they arrived in the United States.

The study added that 8 percent of the aliens who receive SSI apply within 30 days of their arrival, 41 percent enroll within six months and 96 percent within the first three years.

Book gives goose hunting tips

By Marty Nelson
Student Writer

As the Nov. 21 opening date draws near, goose hunters may find it helpful to read a book written by Ernie Lewis, chairman of the Guidance and Educational Psychology, and David Kennedy, a former waterfowl biologist.

In "In Search of the Canada Goose," which was published in April of 1977 by the Great Lakes Living Press of Matteson, Kennedy and Lewis have explained to the hunters what they need to know about calling geese, using decoys, where to hunt in Southern Illinois, building blinds and the guns that can be used for hunting.

In 1971 Kennedy, from Anna, was the waterfowl biologist for the Illinois Department of Conservation (IDC) in charge of the management and research of the goose flock at Horseshoe Lake, Union County and Crab Orchard refuges, the three most-frequented goose hunting areas of Southern Illinois, according to Lewis.

Kennedy is the regional director of Ducks Unlimited, Inc., a non-profit organization responsible for the development of nesting grounds for geese and ducks in Canada. Kennedy has hunted geese in Southern Illinois all of his life, Lewis said.

Lewis, who has hunted geese in this area since 1965, said that he and Kennedy have researched geese for five years in order to submit twelve periodical reports to the IDC.

In their research, Kennedy and Lewis have determined where the geese come from, how many and where the geese are killed in southern Illinois, and where the hunters come from and how many hunters there are each year.

In the chapter on goose calling, the authors give rules of calling, the kinds of calls available and the calls they recommend. Included in this chapter are interviews with, according to Lewis, four of the best goose callers of Southern Illinois. These goose callers reveal their calling methods.

The interviews are with: Charles Bishop, the maker of the handmade "Perfectioner" goose call and operator of the B and C Club, a hunting club in Union County; Larry Bonfield, owner and operator of the Honker's Corner Club at Crab Orchard; Paul Morgan, operator of the Run-N-Lake Club in Union County; and Charles Sullivan, who has been in Illinois State Goose Calling Champion seven times and who calls the geese by mouth, without using a goose call.

Lewis described the use of decoys as being the most important factor in attracting the Canada geese into a shotgun range. In this chapter, the advantages and disadvantages of the silhouette decoy, a one-dimensional outline of a goose, and the full-bodied decoy are examined. Photographs of these decoys in actual hunting situations and photographs of real geese feeding, floating and carrying out other flock activities are shown.

In the chapter on guns and ammunition, Kennedy and Lewis discuss the different actions the shotguns have. The action is the design of the gun and how it fires, the gauge of the gun and the gun's choke, which determines the pattern of the pellets shot. They also discuss the most effective shells for making the kill.

The authors have provided a complete listing of the goose hunting clubs and the public hunting areas in Southern Illinois. The operators' names and addresses of these clubs are included. Maps of the Horseshoe Lake, Union County and Crab Orchard hunting areas are also shown.

Once the hunter gets to his hunting area, he will have to conceal himself from the geese. Kennedy and Lewis have explained the camouflaging techniques used. They tell how to make blinds, camouflaged, rectangular boxes used above the ground where the hunter hides, and pits, holes dug into the ground, used to conceal the hunter.

PHANTOM GENERATOR

NEW YORK (AP)—A $125-million generating plant may never be built because customers of General Public Utilities Corp. in New Jersey and Pennsylvania have changed their schedules for using electricity.

The company's 1.5 million customers have shifted 300,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity away from the peak daytime hours of use, says company chairman William B. Kuhns. This amount is the capacity of a medium-sized, coal-fired generating station, Kuhns notes.

Graduate wins FAA award

A 1972 SIU graduate has been named 1977 national flight instructor of the year by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

E. Allan Englehardt of Lake Bluff, Ill., a second officer for United Airlines, was selected to receive the FAA award by FAA and aviation industry representatives. More than 4,000 flight instructors across the country were eligible for the honor.

The 30-year-old Englehardt was graduated from SIU in 1972 with a bachelor's degree in occupational education. He also received an associate degree in aviation technology and completed the flight training program.

He formed his own aviation ground school instruction company (Flight Standards Co.) during a layoff from United and conducted more than 130 complete aviation ground school courses in various cities. He specializes in instrument flight training and has written instruction books for students and instructors.

Gary Carr, from the Illinois Department of Transportation, follows behind a truck dumping crushed stone on Illinois 13 three miles west of Harrisburg. The road sunk about 3 1/2 feet early this week because of strip mine settling.

Depressed highway getting facelift

The Illinois Highway Department has begun repair work on the stretch of Illinois 13 that collapsed Sunday, according to a representative of the department.

The road will be closed from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. each day until repair work is completed in about one or two weeks.

A 300 to 500-foot section of the road, about three miles west of Harrisburg, sagged because an old underground mine settled. "At the worst location, it is about three to 3 1/2 feet deep. Not all of it is thus deep; it tapers," he said.

A field on the north side of the road is also depressed because of the settling. Mine settling is not abrupt; it usually takes from three days to a week.

The highway department is filling the road with crushed stone.

During the time the road is closed, people are asked to use the marked detour. Motorists traveling to Harrisburg from Carbondale should turn south on Illinois 166 and follow it to U.S. 45 then turn north to Harrisburg. This route is about 10 miles farther, he said.

The road will be open at night for persons to get to and from work. Motorists are asked to go slowly and use caution, he said.

The sinking was caused by the settling of a coal mine abandoned in the 1940's.

"Anyplace there is underground mining, reasonably close to the surface is subject to some settling," he said.

The mine workings were probably about 100 to 200 feet beneath the surface, according to William Hood, SIU professor of geology. The "tunnels" are six feet deep or less.

Phone booths, vending machine damaged

Carbondale police are investigating a report by a General Telephone repairman that two telephone booths were damaged by someone who broke the glass and damaged the phone cradle.

James Hendrix, a General Telephone Company repairman, informed police Tuesday morning that $200 worth of damage had been done to the booths. Between $3 and $4 had also been taken from the one at 901 S. Illinois Ave.

Hendrix said the damage and theft occurred either Sunday or Monday.

Police said no arrests were made. SIU police are investigating a theft from a cigarette machine located in the University Post Office near the Agriculture Building.

Police said the machine was pried open sometime between 5 p.m. Monday and 7:40 a.m. Tuesday when it was discovered by a postal employee

Center gives birth control info

Chris Moenich
Staff Writer

Editor's Note: This is the second installment of a two-part series on birth control.

When Carbondale citizens said they wanted more comprehensive birth control counseling they got it. In 1970, the first grant for a Jackson County Health Department Family Planning Center was given after concern for the center was expressed by Carbondale citizens. The $60,000 grant, from local taxes and the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, provided for a center's opening at the United Methodist Church of Carbondale. During the last seven years, the center has moved twice. It is now located at 611 E. College St. The center offers counseling and medical referral to all residents of Jackson County excluding SIU students. The cost of the service to clients is covered by the $40,000 Family Planning Center grant.

Margaret Wilton, Family Planning Center coordinator since 1972, said there is a definite need for the center. It provides a medical and personal service for women who may otherwise be unable to find the information the center provides, she said.

The center operates as a medical referral program. There are no clinical facilities available at the office. The only test conducted inside the office is a two-minute urine specimen analysis for pregnancy. The center has foam and condoms available for clients and other birth control methods are prescribed by physicians through a referral service.

Wilton said clients may go to a physician of the client's choosing. All Jackson County physicians who work with female related problems accept Family Planning Service referrals. When the referral is made, the center provides payment for pelvic and breast examinations, PAP smear and venereal disease screening tests, urinalysis and the birth control method unless the method involves surgery.

Before the referral is made, however, the Family Planning Center will counsel the client on birth control. For this, assessment of needs is conducted and a medical history is requested. The medical history is taken to the physician for the appointment.

Wilton said there is one full-time and one part-time nurse working with Family Planning Service. The nurses counsel on the birth control methods available in relation to the client's desires and needs.

A majority of the clients are between the ages of 20 and 29, but a few are under 14 or over 40. The majority of women who seek a birth control method choose oral contraceptives. Sterilization is the most popular method for couples over 30 who have completed their families, Wilton said.

For teenagers, the center offers speakers and rap sessions. If a woman is pregnant and seeks help, the center discusses the alternatives and contraceptives when the pregnancy is over.

If an abortion is requested, the center refers the client to clinics in St. Louis and other areas and offers pre- and post-abortion counseling. The referral service includes a post-abortion exam.

The center has 1,000 clients. To become a client, a call to the Family Planning Center will open a confidential file.

Three years after the Family Planning Center opened, the Carbondale Women's Center began its operations. The Women's Center, 408 W. Freeman, is a non-profit organization. In the area of birth control, it offers pregnancy testing, counseling for women and men and a referral service. Three counselors are available by appointment or walk-in.

Bobbe Majka, coordinator of pregnancy counseling and testing services at the center, said counselors will discuss alternatives for pregnancy, various types of birth control methods available, what effects the various methods could cause and how the woman should use the method she chooses.

The service is open for women and men, but Majka said the majority of visitors are women. The age range for pregnancy testing, a two-minute test at the center, is 13 to 17-years-old. Visitors come from a radius of 150 miles of Carbondale for the counseling and test.

Most of the women Majka counsels for problem pregnancy are not using contraceptives. When asked why, the women say they thought pregnancy would not happen to them, she said.

"An unplanned pregnancy is usually the first time the woman accepts responsibility for herself," Majka said.

After the pregnancy, birth control method counseling is offered along with physician referrals. If an abortion is chosen, the center provides referrals, pre- and post-abortion counseling, and birth control counseling. Majka said most women request contraceptives after a problem pregnancy.

The Women's Center can be reached by calling 549-4215. Volunteer help is accepted. To qualify as a counselor, the center offers extensive training in pregnancy counseling skills through SIU's Human Sexuality Services. Cost for medical referrals is not covered by the center. Counseling is free. Pregnancy testing is $2 and covers laboratory expenses.

Well built gingerbread women, men featured by erotic bakery

NEW YORK (AP)—Sex and the sweet tooth? A case of more spice than sugar?

Cal, it whatever. It was something tastefully titillating, passionately palatable that inspired The Erotic Baker Inc., a shop on Manhattan's West Side that features gingerbread men—and women—considerably more explicit than the ones grandma used to bake.

"We're not censors, just bakers," say owners Patricia Brown and Karen Dwyer from behind the counter of their new shop, which opens for business next week.

"Anything goes," the ladies say, including custom-baked fantasies. Designed to satiate even the most amorous appetites, concoctions include rump cakes, crimson lips, bun loaves, his and her breads, candy cremes, hearts and an assortment of kisses.

And the cheesecake is hardly sexist when it comes to the gingerbread cookies: large, luscious ladies and gentlemen, their particulars trimmed in fudge. Lacorice white shell for $1.50 each.

"It started out as a joke," recalls Ms. Dwyer, 30, a singer and actress from Newport, R.I. "We were sitting around with friends and got to talking about erotic art. I said, 'Wouldn't it be funny if you could buy erotically shaped cakes and breads.'"

She and Ms. Brown talked it over, took their love of erotic art and sweets, and stirred in $20,000 to launch their tiny shop.

"We knew nothing about business. It's been a real cram course," says Ms. Brown, 40, a theatrical lighting designer from San Francisco. "We experimented with different molds night after night for weeks."

Blake Fleetwood, vice president of the block association on West 83rd Street where the shop is located, said some neighbors feel the bakery "shouldn't be in a residential neighborhood."

But Ms. Dwyer said children will not be allowed inside and a curtain will be kept drawn across the bottom of the window. That's to prevent children—and short adults—from seeing the goods on display.

And Blake Fleetwood's brother, Francis, said the bakery is "better than what was there before"—a reputed numbers bank.

The women say their venture into risqué recipes is no mere fleeting passion. "The success of The Erotic Baker depends on quality products," Ms. Dwyer says. "Our goods are made fresh daily. We want our fantasies to be more than food for thought."

If the venture fails, the ladies say, "Well, show business people are used to taking incredible risks. The worst is we'll end up with a pile of bills."

"That's the way the cookie crumbles."

To you, "daily" exercise means every day

You enjoy keeping fit. It's good fun and good sense. You don't let your period stop you, either. Because you use Tampax tampons.

Since they're worn internally, you don't worry about chafing or bulges. They're easy to use, too. (All the instructions you need are right in the package.) But, most important, Tampax tampons are uniquely designed to expand so they conform to individual body contours. Which means there's far less chance of an accident.

No wonder you'd never consider any other form of feminine protection. And no wonder you're in such wonderful shape.

The internal protection more women trust

'Stuck on the Cubs:' a story of the Bruins over the years

By Rick Gabbe Staff Writer

It might seem a bit odd for a fan to be reading a book about baseball with winter approaching. But for Cub fans, whose dreams of summer glory go unfulfilled in the August heat of the left-field bleachers, winter is the best time—a time where "next year," with its visions of a pennant for the undermanned "Little Blue Machine" seems as real and tasty as Irving the Vendor's Frosty Malts between innings.

"Stuck On The Cubs" is a funny book, but only to a true Cub fan. No one else could know of all the joy that always somehow turned into pain and suffering.

The book was written by Rick Schwab, a journalism student at SIU during the Walt Frazier years. Schwab, 30, completed the book early last summer. He devotes some attention to this year's Cub's early-season pennant fury.

But you have to be a longtime Cub fan to tell if the author is telling it straight or sometimes bending it way out of proportion. True, many tales down through the years have been a little hard to believe.

But a Cub fan seldom forgets, sometimes only needing to be reminded, of all the unbelievable things he or she has seen. The book can bring fond and nightmare memories.

But would you believe a conversation like this between Harry Caray and Irv Kupcinet ever took place at Sox park?
"Kup, it's great to have you out here. You can't beat fun at..."
"Yeah, I know Jack. I've heard you say that before."
"Kup, you really look swell. Here, have a beer."

thought the Cubs would win the pennant after the death of P. K. Wrigley, but then again, all Cub fans did. He has still retained his optimism, as we all have to.

His biggest pet peeve is "Fans who show up at the ballpark only after a five-game winning streak or as long as the Cubs are in first place. They're also very good at I-told-you-so's."

The book helped bring back images of "Billy Williams' sweet swing" or "Pat Pieper's predictable line-up presentation." Non-Cub fans can't relate to Ernie and his marvellous hands.

The chapters in the book are only two or three pages apiece. They are loosely organized within and around each other.

A Review

Kupcinet and Jack Brickhouse announced Bear games together. Brickhouse, Leo Durocher and the White Sox are Schwab's favorite targets for the cutdown.

This is what Schwab thinks of Leo: "The shame that Leo Durocher brought to the club during his rampages still sticks in Cub fans' crawls."

The author uses some good tongue-in-cheek writing when he sticks it to Brickhouse. Durocher once called Jack a "mental midget," which is good material to work with. On top of that, fans are reminded of all the blunders and great interviewing Brickhouse has done through the years.

Schwab praises the Wrigley family, loyal followers, Wrigley Field and many of the men that appeared there over the years. He

Sports psychologist believes booze reason for fan violence

By Nick Danna
Student Writer

Joel Thirer, assistant professor of physical education who specializes in sports psychology, wants to put beer vendors out of business. He has nothing against the people who peddle the gusto, but he thinks that spectator violence at sporting events could be reduced by barring the sale of alcohol.

Thirer has a B.A. in psychology and a masters degree in physical education from Ithaca College in New York. He earned a Ph.D. in sport psychology at Florida State University where he worked under Robert Singer, who is, according to Thirer, "one of the more internationally renowned sports psychologists."

"I think spectator violence has always been present in international games and sports," Thirer said. "There's a famous incident of a soccer game in South America 10 years ago where 84 spectators were killed."

"However, I think in recent years, spectator violence has increased emphatically in American society. I grew up in New York City and I remember when I was a kid going to Yankee games in the late 1940s and I don't recall seeing the type of things go on in the stands that I have seen in the last 10 years."

Citing a recently published article by sport sociologist Harry Edwards that deals with the sociological basis for violence in sports, Thirer said: "Edwards reiterated about 10 spectator-induced violent incidents in sport that had taken place in the last couple of years. It was really interesting to me that better than 50 percent of the incidents he cited involved alcohol."

"Not just the fact that the people were drinking but, directly, the object thrown was a whiskey bottle, a beer can, something like that. For instance, a full beer can was thrown that hit Hank Aaron in the small of his back, and at a Viking game a couple of years ago, a referee was hit in the back of the head with a whiskey bottle."

"He (Edwards) didn't pick up on this in this particular article where I would have. This has been a theory of mine for a long time—that a lot of this aggression is induced by alcohol."

Thirer added that the game itself only serves as an excuse for spectators to become violent. He said he attended a Jets-Giants pre-season game a few years ago where mass fights involving "20 or 30" beer drinking fans broke out all around him.

"The anti-social behavior will be there regardless of the circumstances. The game provides an excuse rather than a cause. Because people go there to have a good time, rowdy it up and drink a lot, the behavior comes about. Many psychologists will tell you that when a person gets drunk the behaviors that the person exhibits are indicative of the person's true feelings," Thirer said.

Despite the problems attributable to alcohol consumption at sporting events, Thirer said no moves to prohibit it are being made by the sports hierarchy.

"It means too much money. They are motivated by the buck," Thirer said. "They're making millions and millions of dollars at the professional franchises that sell booze and they're not gonna stop selling it. They sell a drink of liquor for one dollar or two dollars a shot and it costs them approximately 11 cents

At the professional sports stadiums that don't sell liquor and even at all the colleges where it is not supposed to be brought in, Thirer said that spectators are allowed to bring in their liquor because the people in charge don't want to discourage attendance by enforcing anti-liquor rules.

"Another rationale for violence in the stands that Edwards introduces," Thirer said, "is that spectator sports cost a lot more money today than they did years ago."

"The price of a ticket today to go to a football or a basketball game, if you want a good seat, might cost you 12 bucks a ticket. So the chances of me going with three or four of my friends are much greater than me going with my wife and my three kids because of the prohibitive cost of a ticket."

"When you're going with your wife and your three kids to a ball game you're going to behave in a completely different way than when you're going out with the boys."

Thirer also believes that spectator violence has increased because the media has too often emphasized the violent aspects of sports, thus attracting more violence-oriented spectators.

"TV has contributed by showing it on instant replay and showing it on the news and just repeating it over and over again. They take the camera off the play-action and on to the fight-action," Thirer said.

"I think for the most part, the press does an adequate job of not glorifying the fight. If a journalist is introspective when he writes, he won't write, 'Well, what a fight! Biggest, best baseball fight I ever saw.'"

"That's not what should be reported. What should be reported is, 'Okay, there was a fight. Two players were thrown out. Two players unfortunately got hurt as a result of this ridiculous element of the game. This should not take place in sports.'"

"That (fighting) is the kind of behavior we don't want to encourage. Kids are very impressionable.

Homecoming means start for Cowboys' Dorsett

DALLAS (AP)—Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, playing a part hand only as long as he's winning, announced Wednesday that million-dollar rookie running back Tony Dorsett will make his first professional start Sunday in the city where he gained his collegiate fame, Pittsburgh.

"That's great...it's what I've been dreaming about," exulted Dorsett, who was collegiate football's all-time leading ground gainer at the University of Pittsburgh.

Landry said the fact the Heisman Trophy winner was from Pittsburgh had nothing to do with his decision to elevate the explosive Dorsett over 13-year veteran Preston Pearson.

"That had no bearing," said Landry. "Preston lives in Pittsburgh. It's an injustice to him if you want to look at it that way. I just felt it was time to do it."

Landry, who had brought Dorsett slowly into the complex Cowboy offense, said all along he would start the All-American "when I had a feel for it."

Sunday's 24-17 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals, snapping an eight-game Dallas victory streak obviously had a lot to do with the way Landry felt about matters.

"Tony's been running well and we feel we need him in there...it's nothing against Preston," said Landry.

Saluki fans honor Glenn at luncheon

By Bud Vandersaick
Staff Writer

Some Saluki fans went to lunch Wednesday at the Student Center Ballroom with more on their minds than salad and dessert. They went to honor a man who had satisfied their appetite for high-caliber basketball the past four seasons.

Wednesday was "Mike Glenn Day" in Carbondale and the day's activities started with a luncheon in the Student Center. After a number of speakers took turns at showering

Glenn with accolades, the second-leading scorer in SIU basketball history approached the podium and received a standing ovation, just as he had many times in the Arena after popping in a jump shot with machine-like accuracy.

Glenn acknowledged his teammates and thanked them for their support. He said it is impossible for an individual player to achieve success without the aid of the other players.

"My teammates deserve credit also and sometimes they get overlooked," Glenn said. "Fans might see me make a jump shot and say 'that's great,' but they might not see the pick somebody set to get me open."

While Wednesday was an opportunity for the fans to honor Glenn, the Georgia Gem also took time to return the favor. He said the fans showed him a few things after the NCAA tournament last March that he will always remember. (Continued on Page 19)

Hockey team anxious for nationals

By Steve Coonan
Staff Writer

The women's field hockey team takes its 10-3-3 record to the University of Denver Monday to make its first appearance in the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (IAIW) national field hockey tournament.

"My goal would be to finish in the top 10," said Coach Jules Ilner. "If we win the first game, we will have to play the No. 2 ranked team in the nation. It will be a great experience if we get to play them."

In order to finish in the top 10, the team must win its first tournament game to advance to the top eight of the 14 teams, or win two games in the consolation bracket.

With all the games being played in the mile-high city, Ilner has been preparing her team for the different climate.

"We have been working on altitude training," Ilner said. "The players have been running and holding their breath for short periods of time."

"I don't know how the kids will react to it. The fact that they are in shape now doesn't mean it won't affect them later. It is bothering some of the kids now," she said.

Ilner mentioned that the difference in climate causes such problems as headaches, dizziness and becoming nauseous.

"Some of the players will be affected by it and some won't," Ilner said. "By getting there Monday night, we will have one full day to get used to it before we play Wednesday."

Ilner can't afford to lose any players to the weather as two players are hurting and questionable for the tournament. Chris Evon, who injured her shoulder in the regional tourney at Central Michigan, will hopefully be ready to play by Wednesday, according to Ilner. Nancy Choate's sore leg is expected to be well enough to play on by tournament time.

"We don't anticipate doing anything differently," Ilner said. "We are going to stay with our style of play. We hope to tighten up on some of the weaknesses that I noticed in the Central Michigan game."

"We need to work on receiving and getting rid of the ball quicker on offense and defense," she said. "We also need to improve our circle coverage and work on switching in addition to keeping our stickwork up and staying in shape."

SIU opens its tournament play against Bemidji State College from Minnesota. Laurie Bottom, Bemidji's high scorer during the season with 72 goals, will draw extra special attention, according to Ilner.

Win or lose, Ilner believes that just the trip to the national tournament should be good for her players.

Glenn thanks fans for good support

ber. "The Arizona game was great, but what really impressed me was the reaction after the Wake Forest game," Glenn said. "The team was down from losing, but when we got to the airport there was a group of people there cheering as if we had won."

"The fans here really got us going at times. There were times when we wanted to stop in the middle of the game and applaud the fans. But I wouldn't have done that because the fans would have said, 'Look at Glenn, that hot dog. He's rooting for himself.'"

Glenn also took time to express appreciation of his coaches—Paul Lambert, Herman Williams and George Iubelt. He said he has had the opportunity to play for some people who are known as great coaches, and he claimed that none of them had more basketball know-how than the Saluki trio.

"I played for Al McGuire (ex-Marquette coach) at the Pizza Hut Classic and I was really excited about that," Glenn said. "I was anxious to hear what he could tell me about basketball. But he could not even remember Bo Ellis' (ex-Marquette star) name, so you have to wonder how great a coach he was."

"I also talked with other coaches, including Dean Smith (North Carolina), and I came away convinced that none of them know more about basketball than Coach Lambert. All the coaches deserve continued support."

Fans had a chance at the close of the luncheon to express their feelings about Glenn

Balanced offense keys win as Salukis bounce Czechs

By Jim Mirman
Sports Editor

The Salukis utilized a balanced scoring attack as four players netted double figures en route to an 80-71 exhibition game victory over the Czechoslovakian national team Wednesday night at the Arena.

The exhibition win opened the Saluki home slate and capped "Mike Glenn Day" in Carbondale. Glenn, a Saluki for the last four years, was honored during the day and received a standing ovation at halftime.

Saluki Coach Paul Lambert said he saw several good things in the performance and several things the Salukis need work on. He said overall he was pleased.

"We were cohesive at times, but there were also times when we were not cohesive," Lambert said. "But I think that comes from a lack of playing time."

The Salukis will not open their home game slate until Dec. 3 when they host Roosevelt, so Lambert will have two weeks to iron out the team's "cohesiveness."

Saluki juniors Gary Wilson and Milt Huggins each netted 15 points to lead SIU's attack. Junior forward Dan Kieszkowski added 11 points and sophomore guard Wayne Abrams had 10.

Czech guard Kimil Brabener led all scorers with 24 points on 12 of 26 field goals—most from long range. Teammate Vlastibor Klimes, a forward, added 12 points.

Lambert said, "The Czechs were a pretty good team. They weren't a great team, but they did some things pretty well. I was especially pleased with the way we played the first 10 minutes of the second half."

After leading at halftime, 41-33, the Salukis opened up their running game somewhat as SIU managed to get the ball up the court for a few easy layups early in the second half.

Huggins hit four consecutive baskets in the second half's first five minutes to help extend the Salukis' lead.

A jump shot by freshman Jac Cluett with 12:20 left gave SIU its largest lead of the night—17 points.

"If we had been a little sharper we would have gotten a couple of more baskets off the transition (from defense to offense)," Lambert said.

The Salukis hit 51 percent on their field goal shooting. They hit 36 of 70 field goal tries.

Lambert said the Salukis took some poor shots early in the game, but managed to get themselves under control later in the half.

Lambert started five returning lettermen—Wilson, Abrams, Kieszkowski, Barry Smith and Huggins.

In the second half he played most for the incoming freshman recruits.

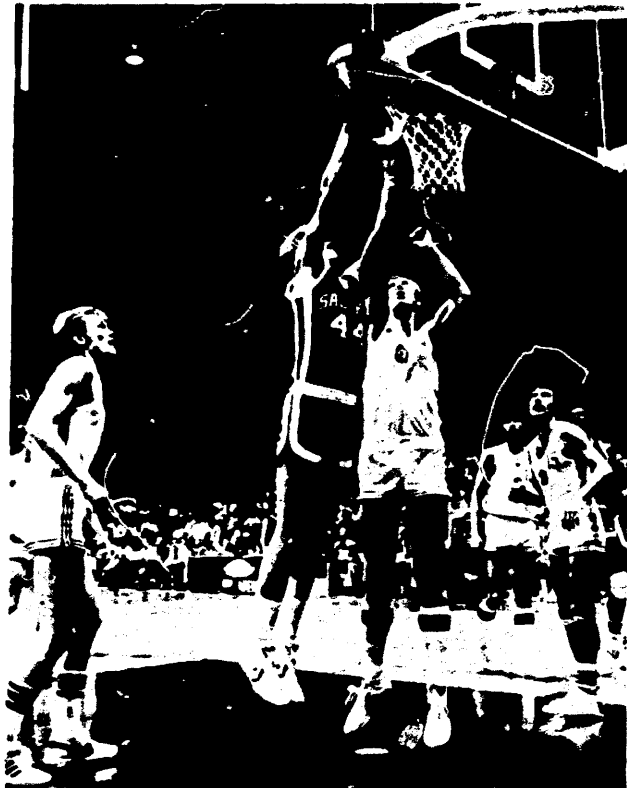

Wilson's nine rebounds led the Salukis to a 40-36 board edge over the taller Czechs. Vojtech led the Czechs with eight rebounds.

Abrams played only 26 minutes, but passed for six assists and garnered five rebounds for an all-around performance.

The Salukis and the Czechs opened the game in man-to-man defenses. The Czechs' man-to-man was a sagging defense which gave SIU the outside shots.

Despite the Czechs sagging zone, the Salukis patiently tried to work the ball inside for easier shots. The strategy worked as Wilson and Kieszkowski worked loose for several layups.

The Salukis' man-to-man defense prevented the Czechs from getting inside.

Junior forward Dan Kieszkowski (44) got open to score two points against Vojtech Petr (5) of the Czechoslovakia team Wednesday night in the Arena. The Michigan City, Ind., native scored 11 points in the Salukis' 81-70 win over the Czechs.

Coach: Saluki-Bulldog football game to be dogfight

By Jim Mirman
Sports Editor

Usually when football teams with losing records play games in November, the coaches are looking forward to next year's games.

Although Drake, 1-9, and SIU, 3-6, each have losing football records entering Saturday's 1:30 p.m. game at McAndrew Stadium, Bulldog mentor Chuck Shelton is convinced the game will be an interesting one because the teams are evenly matched.

"We're both building football programs and it's been a struggle for us," Shelton said. "I expect both teams to play hard. It should be an exciting game."

The Saluki game will end Drake's 1977 season and Shelton predicted that will be a motivating factor.

"It should help us," Shelton said. "The seniors will want to go with a flame of glory. There's nothing to save yourself for."

Shelton said the fact that the game is SIU's final home game of the year will help the Salukis.

Drake lists 11 graduating seniors while SIU has 13 players who will make their final McAndrew Stadium appearance.

Drake's lone victory was a 43-21 decision over Lamar. SIU defeated Lamar 9-5. Drake has managed to score 182 points (an 18-point average), but has yielded 308 points.

Shelton cited split end Paul Proffitt as his best offensive weapon. Proffitt ranks second in the nation with 59 catches for 775 yards. No. 1 NCAA receiver Wayne Tolleson of Western Carolina has caught 62 passes.

Drake sophomore quarterback Jerry Smith had been playing well, Shelton said, but injured an ankle in last week's 18-13 loss to Louisville.

"Smith passes the ball well and adds a running dimension to our offense," Shelton said. "Dan Dodd will start if Smith can't."

Smith has completed 42 of 68 passes for 547 yards while Dodd has completed 83 of 170 passes for 925 yards.

Shelton claimed the lack of a running game has hurt Drake. He said the Bulldogs haven't been able to establish a balanced attack offensively.

Three linemen—Matt Henry, Dana Nelson and David Glove—are Drake's best defensive players.

SIU is a well-coached team that capitalizes on opponents' mistakes, Shelton said.

"SIU has two outstanding linebackers (Dan Brown and Joe Barwinski) and their secondary is tough. They like to play tight and that's the kind of defense that's given us problems," Shelton said.

Saluki fullback Fernell Quinn has also impressed Shelton. "Their fullback is very, very good. He could play ball anywhere."

Shelton said the game will be a battle to see which team will occupy the Missouri Valley Conference cellar. Drake and SIU are both 0-4 in Valley games.

"I hate to put things in a negative manner, but it'll be a chance to be last in the Valley or not be last," Shelton said.

No. 2 ranked Bama to provide thrills in swim meet

The Crimson Tide will be rolling into Carbondale at 2 p.m. Thursday. No, it's not going to play football against the Salukis. It is coming to the Recreation Building pool for a dual meet against the SIU swim team.

The meet will kick off the season for the Salukis, and the Tide will probably be their toughest opponent of the season. Alabama is ranked No. 2 in the nation, behind Southern California (USC), and they are stocked with talent.

The team is paced by one world record holder, one American record holder and three NCAA tournament finalists. The Tide have two finalists in the 100-yard backstroke, in Mark Tonelli and Carlos Berrocal. Tonelli won the backstroke and Berrocal, from Puerto Rico, took third.

Jonty Skinner is the world record holder in the 100-yard free style with a time of 46.44. Skinner set the record following the 1976 Olympic games.

Mike Currington is an NCAA finalist in the 200-yard butterfly and individual medley events, and K.C. Converse is

The Mad Serbian

By George Csolak
Staff Writer

the American record holder in the 1650 freestyle. Converse, who may not make the trip due to illness, is the only man ever to break 15 minutes in that event.

Despite all the depth and talent, Coach Bob Steele of the Salukis feels that his team can compete with the Tide. He said that Rick Theobald, who won the one and three-meter diving events last weekend at the intrasquad meet, should give Wayne Chester, a freshman from Texas, a run for his money.

Despite Alabama being favored, the meet should provide fans a look at some of the best swimmers in the country.

"The spectators ought to really enjoy the meet," Steele said. "There will be some really good competition and hopefully it will be close. The people are going to be able to see a world and an American record holder."

The Salukis have a couple of world ranked swimmers (themselves).

Newcomer David Parker, from Coventry, England, is ranked 16th in the world in the 1650m freestyle. Parker is the Salukis man to fill the void left by last year's distance man Dave Swenson. In the intrasquad meet, Parker swam the 1000m freestyle in 9:30.7—just two seconds off of Swenson's record time.

"His time was very good," Steele said, "but he can swim a lot faster than that."

Greg Porter, a junior, is ranked 15th in the world in the 100 butterfly. He can also swim the individual medley and Steele has said that he may use the versatile Porter in the breaststroke as well.

The meet will be the first regular season contest in the new Recreation Building pool.

"We've been working a lot harder now than we've ever worked before," Steele said. "Thanks to the new pool. The pool is one of 13 best in the country. And ours has the most important factor—a lot of water."

Admission to the meet is free and there is seating capacity for 300 for those who want to see the No. 2 and No. 16 ranked teams (SIU finished 16th at the NCAA tourney last year) do battle.

The meet against the Crimson Tide will be the first of three home meets against top ranked schools for the Salukis. SIU will also play host to No. 25 ranked Wisconsin Dec. 2, and No. 4 ranked Indiana Dec. 9.
