GSC supports wording change in storage plan

By Ginny Lee
Staff Writer

A plan to give the University the choice of using the $1.6 million appropriated for the purchase of a library storage facility or to build one on campus is being considered by the Library Storage Alternatives Committee of the Graduate Student Council.

Carl Kosierowski, committee chairman, said that the committee plans to contact state legislators, and in particular Rep. Bob Winchester, R-Rosiclare, to see if they would support a change in the wording of the appropriation amendment for SIU-C's storage facility.

The $1.6 million amendment was approved by Gov. James R. Thompson in August, but because of campus-wide concern over the University administration's plan to purchase the Bracy Building, a grocery warehouse in Marion, President Albert Somit is reconsidering the plan.

John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs, is putting together a report for Somit on alternatives and campus constituency group preferences and is expected to make a recommendation in a couple of weeks.

Questions as to the possibility of using a portion of the $1.6 million for on-campus construction were raised after Thompson commented that he would be open to any suggestions for library storage at the gubernatorial debate at SIU-C Oct. 5.

Thompson then clarified his remarks in a letter to Chancellor Kenneth Shaw, saying that the appropriated funds could not be used for construction.

Kosierowski said that members of the SIU Board of Trustees had implied to him that they do not want to reject the $1.6 million that has already been appropriated and to ask the Legislature for construction money next year.

"The Board of Trustees doesn't want to give up the $1.6 million and the constituency groups are opposed to the purchase of Bracy," Kosierowski said. The committee's new plan "seems like the solution that would make everyone happy," he said.

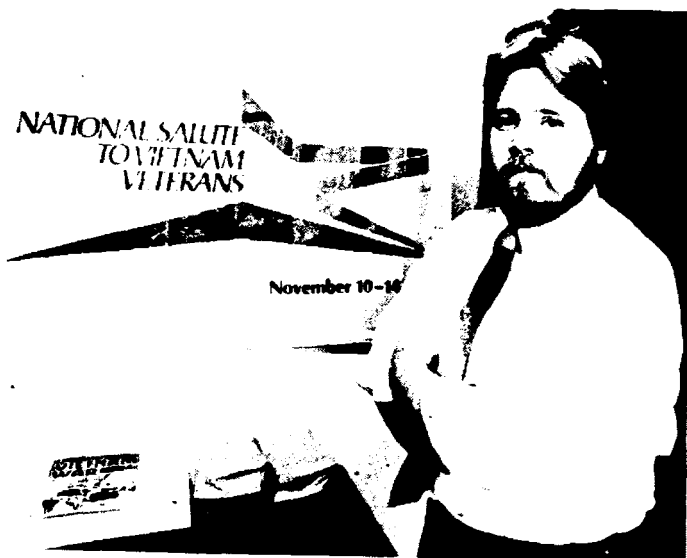

The GSC committee's plan is to change amendment's wording so that it would allow the University to "purchase or

Perry Murry... "I think the memorial needs something else to bring attention to it."

Vietnam veterans' memorial not fitting tribute, Murry says

By Jack Wallace
Staff Writer

No piece of marble, granite or man-made object is a fitting tribute to anybody who died in Vietnam, said Perry Murry, coordinator of Veterans Affairs at SIU-C.

"But in our attempts to pacify ourselves as a species we build such things," he said.

Murry, a Vietnam veteran himself, was in Washington last weekend for the dedication of the Vietnam War Memorial, a V-shaped wall of granite bearing the names of more than 57,000 Americans who died in Southeast Asia.

Murry said many veterans did not know that the event was going to take place because not much publicity was given in advance.

"I found out about it through some veterans publications we receive here in the Office of Veterans Affairs," he said.

Because of the lack of publicity, Murry said, many veterans who wanted to go were not able to make arrangements soon enough. "I didn't see anyone else there from SIU," he said. Murry made the trip with two Vietnam vets from Mount Vernon and a World War II veteran from Springfield.

The dedication of the memorial and a parade of more than 10,000 veterans did not bring out the usual flood of politicians, even Veterans Administration official Robert Nimmo made no public appearance at the event. Everett Alvarez Jr., deputy VA director and a prisoner in North Vietnam for over eight years, was the only VA official at Saturday's memorial dedication.

Murry said the artist's renditions and descriptions people had given of the memorial had not impressed him. "To see the thing in person gave me an entirely different feeling," he said. "I liked it once I saw it."

The non-traditional monument generated some controversy because of the artist's departure from conventional designs. Some veterans objected because the monument was not above ground. It was in a trench, not ascending, but seeming to descend when viewed from above.

Plans are now being made to add a traditional statue, three Vietnam Veterans in battle gear and also a flagpole somewhere on the ground above the granite. Result: more controversy.

USO election set for Dec. 8; 27 senate seats to be filled

By William Jason Yong
Staff Writer

A total of 27 seats will be filled Dec. 8 in the Undergraduate Student Organization's fall senatorial elections.

The senate had previously approved Nov. 17 as the election date, but because of late senate action the date was pushed to Dec. 8, said John Strem, election commissioner.

"The election guidelines and the election commission were not approved until Nov. 3," Strem, a senior in political science, said. "Things went on rather late, and consequently, the date had to be pushed back."

A reduction of senate seats from 31 to 28 was approved by the senate on Nov. 10. The senate had earlier rejected a bill to reduce the number of senate seats to 30 because of the objection that such a reduction would render representation inadequate.

As a result of the reduction, Thompson Point loses one seat and East Campus loses two. There are seven vacant seats from West Side, five from East Side and two from East Campus.

There are two seats available each from Agriculture, Business and Administration.

Factory use rate worst since 1948

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly one-third of the production lines at U.S. factories stood idle last month as the recession deepened, in what one economist called a "near depression." The 68.4 percent factory-use rate reported Wednesday was the worst on record.

Shortly after the Federal Reserve Board report was released, President Reagan told reporters he was thinking about asking Congress to give Americans access to next July's tax-rate cut in January in order to stimulate the economy by encouraging consumer spending.

In a third economic development, the Commerce

Department said housing starts by U.S. builders rose 1 percent in October. That was only a modest increase -- to an annual rate of 1.12 million units -- but the same report provided better news in the form of a second straight jump in building permits for future construction.

Permits rose to an annual rate of 1.18 million, up 17.7 percent from September and up a full 60 percent from October of last year -- good news since permits indicate how well builders should be doing in coming months. Economists say better times for home builders could also help bring recovery for the overall economy.

For the present, however, the Tax cut may come before July

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite estimates that the federal deficit is headed for $200 billion, President Reagan is thinking about a six-month speedup in next year's 10 percent income tax cut, as an "appealing" way of boosting consumer spending. The Treasury Department proposal would make the cut effective in paychecks beginning Jan. 1 rather than July 1. Officials say that would put an additional $14.6 billion into workers' hands, enabling them to help spend the weak economy out of recession.

"We're thinking about it."

We're talking about that," Reagan told reporters Wednesday in Florida, just before returning to the White House. "It would stimulate the economy. That's what so appealing about it."

The idea of speeding up the

Federal Reserve's factory-use report was nothing but bad news. For example:

—The decline was the 13th in 15 months. And rather than getting smaller, the monthly drops have been getting larger: 0.2 percentage point in August, 0.6 point in September and now 0.8 point in October.

—There were new declines in two major industries: Factory use fell to 49.7 percent for automakers and to 42 percent for iron and steel producers. The latter figure was that industry's lowest since a big 1959 strike stifled output.

Engineering and Liberal Arts and one each from Communications, Education, Human Resources, Science and STC. All terms expire in spring 1983.

A pre-election meeting will be held at 5 p.m. Nov. 29 in Student Center Ballroom A. Guidelines and lists of candidates will be given to candidates, Strem said. All candidates are required to attend the meeting, and failure to attend without advance notification will result in disqualification, Strem said. Campaigning will begin Nov. 30.

Political parties must submit an application to the Office of Student Development to be recognized. Temporary recognition is acceptable, he said.

"It is unusual that parties participate in the fall elections because not many seats are available during this time," Strem said. "As of Tuesday, no parties had applied."

Seven polling places will be set up on election day.

The election commission consists of four members appointed by the CIA and approved by the senate. The other members are Richard Peel, a sophomore in political science, Laurie Walton, a senior in economics and Roger Baures, a senior in political science.

"It is important to realize that the commission is an independent unit and is not related to any political parties," Strem said. "Problems arose in previous elections because the US's president appointed the commissioner."

Earlier this semester, the senate approved a constitutional amendment whereby an election commissioner will no longer be a presidential appointee. The move was aimed at avoiding any possible bias between the executive and the commission.

Strem said that the goals of the commission are to conduct fair and effective elections and to develop a system that will limit vote fraud.

Last year, it was possible for students to vote more than once because erasable ink was used to stamp students' hands after they had voted, he said. The ink could easily be washed away.

He said that this fall, registration sheets and identification numbers of students who vote will be matched with a computer printout of names, addresses and IDs of students construct a library storage facility," he said.

John Baker, special assistant to the president, said that this alternative has been considered by the administration, but that it would make no sense to take any action on it until after Guyon makes his recommendation to the president.

"A lot of it depends upon what recommendation Vice President Guyon makes," he said. "Obviously, whatever action we take is going to be couched in terms of Vice President Guyon's recommendations."

Guyon said that although the administration has always favored on-campus construction of a storage facility, the governor's letter to Shaw made it clear that this was not a likely possibility.

"I would interpret the governor's letter as being very definitive in that we can only use the money for purchase," Guyon said.

Baker said that if the Legislature were to change the wording in any way, the Illinois

Board of Higher Education would have to make a recommendation also.

"It would have to go through the IBHE, pass the Legislature and ultimately the governor would have to sign it," he said.

John Jackson, faculty member in political science, said that in strictly legal terms, it would be possible to change the wording of the amendment, but the politics of changing the amendment would be a different story.

"Certainly the Legislature can do what it wants to if it chooses to make that new construction as well as old construction," Jackson said.

"And the governor could obviously sign it if he chose to do so."

But, it would require a lot of political sway to make a change, he said.

"The problem politically is that Thompson has announced this freeze on construction and therefore you would have to overcome resistance," Jackson said. "But the Legislature can do whatever it wants."

cut is being pushed by Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan, who proposed it to the president within the past two weeks, according to administration sources.

However, budget director David A. Stockman and chief White House economist Martin S. Feldstein are strongly opposed to the move as a weak economic tonic that would increase an already bloated budget deficit, according to the sources, who did not want their names used.

Officials opposed to the plan said they doubted a speeded-up cut could get through the special post-election session of Congress.

News Roundup

Spy's claim dismissed in court

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A federal court jury dismissed former CIA agent Edwin P. Wilson's claims that he was working for the CIA in Libya and convicted him Wednesday of smuggling five weapons to officials of that radical Arab nation in 1979.

The seven female and five male jurors, mostly housewives and office workers from the Washington suburbs, took a little more than four hours to decide that the husky, four-faced Wilson, 54, was guilty of seven of the eight charges against him.

Reagan vows to 'break mob power'

BONESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — In an airport hangar heavy with the smell of marijuana, President Reagan inspected seized caches of drugs, guns and cash on Wednesday and pronounced them proof that his administration will "break the power of the Mob in America."

Reagan flew to south Florida to pay tribute to the efforts of a special task force credited with the seizure of more than $3 billion in illegal drugs in the area since last January.

Hamilton Co. vote probe begins

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — The U.S. attorney for Southern Illinois on Wednesday ordered the state to turn over 602 not-yet-tallied absentee ballots from the Nov. 2 election to allow the start of an inquiry into alleged vote and mail fraud.

Hamilton is the only one of Illinois' 102 counties that hasn't yet officially canvassed results of the election in which Gov. James R. Thompson holds a 4,941-vote lead.

Kremlin hints at new arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new Kremlin leadership could send the United States "a very quick and simple" signal that it seeks better relations by moving toward President Reagan's nuclear arms reduction proposals, a senior defense official said Wednesday.

"Movement on the president's proposals would be a clear and as unmistakable a signal as we could get," said the official.

Article helped spark Reagan claim

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's claim that Soviet agents are partly behind the American campaign for a nuclear weapons freeze was apparently based on similar allegations in Western Europe and on an article in Reader's Digest, one of his favorite magazines.

When Reagan's assertion at a news conference last week was questioned, the White House produced a list of published materials in an attempt to document the president's statement. Those materials, however, contain few references to the domestic freeze campaign. And what little evidence they do cite relates to the charge that the Soviet Union has sought to stir up opposition to deployment of the neutron warhead and modern nuclear weapons in Europe.

According to the White House press office, Reagan also had in mind a recent Reader's Digest article when he told reporters that "there is plenty of evidence" that foreign agents have helped organize major pro freeze demonstrations.

That article, written by John Barron and published in the October issue, named five Soviet officials, three of them United Nations diplomats, one embassy official and an official of the Soviet Institute for the U.S.A. and Canada who were said to have participated in disarmament conferences in the United States. The article identified them as agents of the KGB, the Soviet secret police.

ternationally acclaimed judges, said the monument was "a place of healing and tribute to those who served the nation in difficult times."

One of the first opponents of the design, Vietnam vet Tom Carnhart, called the memorial "a black gash of shame." Carnhart, now a Pentagon lawyer, led a lobby against the design and 44 congressmen urged the president to stop the project.

Lin had envisioned two black granite walls, "open like a pair of hands." They stretch over 20 feet and descend to ground level from within the grassy knolls. A compromise has been made to place the statue of the three soldiers where it will not block the view of the granite memorial or detract from its artistic effect.

Murry said he agrees "in principle" with the idea of adding the statue.

"Even though the two do not go hand in hand, I think the memorial needs something else to bring attention to it," he said.

As with other Vietnam veterans — those who like the memorial and those who don't — Murry's views about it are bound up in his views of the war.

Murry said he thinks the United States has a commitment to "our allies and friends around the world."

"But the commitment we made in Vietnam," he said, "was a political one that the leaders let get out of hand."

"Militarily, there were several times when we were there that we had the battle won if the troops had been allowed to finalize the action. But the commitment to win was not made at the highest positions of leadership in the country," he said.

Student government seems in real trouble

FOR SOME REASON — apathy, distracted leadership, a general feeling of powerlessness — student government at SIU-C seems not to be in good shape.

In fact, it's in trouble.

In terms of people, the casualty list reads like this:

One GSC president resigned. Fifteen USO senators resigned. A finance commissioner fired. Two USO senators impeached. Others can be said to be "missing in action," judging from attendance at meetings.

The most serious casualty, however, is student interests.

GSC president Paul Matalonis, a second-year law student, said he resigned to "concentrate on law school." But Matalonis, who served as USO president two years ago, should have known the demands that running the GSC would make upon him and his study time.

MATALONIS' RESIGNATION has hamstrung the effectiveness and credibility of a significant student constituency. It is to be hoped that the GSC will not founder while a replacement is elected. Graduate students need the GSC, which has been a model of effective student representation.

The same cannot be said of the USO, where there seems to more back-biting and bickering than attention to students' interests.

Why this rash of resignations and impeachments in the USO? President Jimmy Cook says the senators were unwilling to work. Resigned and impeached senators, or at least some of them, say there is too much politics in USO. Both are probably true but while sacking lazy senators may be right, too much politics is no reason to resign. Too much politics is all the reason for senators to stay and fight.

STUDENTS AND THEIR leaders cannot afford to live in apathy for long. The way tuition fees are going up, ignorance may become a permanent state among students — or people who would like to be students.

It is up to student leaders to represent their constituents, to battle apathy.

And it is up to students to hold its representatives accountable for their actions or inaction.

It is the student body that must elect dedicated representatives in the USO and GSC. And the student body can do this at the USO elections on Dec. 8 and the GSC elections Dec. 1.

Correction

In a letter by Kathy Hotelling, a Counseling Center Psychologist, in the Nov. 17 issue, the word "not" was inadvertently inserted in a sentence which changed the meaning. The sentence, in a letter about an eating disorder which affects an estimated 5 percent of the students at SIU-C, should have read as follows:

While much medical and psychological research is needed in the area of eating disorders, we do know it has far-reaching effects on its victims.

Signing up for selective service is small sacrifice

As a citizen of these United States, enjoying the rights and privileges of this great country, I realize that the freedoms and liberties that we have today came from the blood and courage of our brave fighting men.

I'm not against the Graduate Student Council's right to free speech, but I am against its support of a young man who feels that he can use the freedoms of America without making any sacrifice to protect these rights. (The GSC on Oct. 28 passed a resolution expressing support for Rusty Martin, student body president of the University of Northern Iowa, who was indicted for failing to register for the draft). It is a sad state of affairs when the people who enjoy the freedoms of this great country are unwilling to protect them.

To even pretend that the need for a strong defense is not necessary in today's global community is to bury your head in the sand. It is very different to negotiate peaceful solutions to potentially explosive situations when the only thing backing you up is political rhetoric.

The global community is spending more than $1 trillion a year on military hardware. It must be noted that half of these expenditures are in Eastern bloc countries. The registration system is a way of signalling to the rest of the world that we mean business. I and our leaders hope that this will induce other nations to get out of the business.

We must be constantly prepared to make personal sacrifices to safeguard our freedoms. I for one demand that the people who desire and use our freedoms make whatever sacrifices necessary to protect these freedoms. Signing up for selective service is a very small sacrifice (if any, since there is no draft) to make. — Christopher W. Parish, Senior, Economics.

Viewpoint

In P.E., focus is on learning; in intramurals, it's participation

By Charlotte West

administration would welcome such financial savings based on the purposes one attempts to fulfill through the evaluation process.

AS A MEASUREMENT SPECIALIST, I am impelled to respond to the "Viewpoint" by Mike Faust (DE, Oct. 26) concerning grading in GSE courses. Not only the misconceptions but the lack of basic knowledge regarding measurement that Mr. Faust has regarding the evaluation of physical performance is, in itself, support for the requirement of "Physical Education 400: Measurement and Evaluation in Physical Education."

Only recently has this course been deleted as a required course. Neither time nor space permits a discussion of the principles of grading in physical education, but I would like to react to some of the specific errors and misconceptions contained in the Faust article:

First, having a good time and developing motor proficiency are not diametrically-opposed goals. When teaching is effective and proficiency is attained, the process is more enjoyable than is "mere" participation.

Second, in intramurals, students voluntarily participate in activities of their choice; therefore, if participation and enjoyment are indeed the criteria for GSE courses, perhaps the University would be better served if physical education was dropped and students were given academic credit for participation in intramurals. Surely the ad-

AS A PHYSICAL EDUCATOR and former director of SIU-C intramurals, I am aware of the differing purposes served by these two areas. In physical education, the focus is on learning. Certainly, learning occurs in intramural participation, but the focus is on participation.

Since learning is enhanced when one is actively involved, I certainly promote full participation. But I cannot support assigning grades to students for merely participating, because that is what they are expected to do.

Third, academia has not "traditionally forced its methods on to physical education." A historical analysis of measurement practices in physical education indicates that physical educators often apply academic principles. But they have also modified those methods and developed some of their own.

It is unfortunate that an individual placed in the responsible position of teacher and evaluator has not had the benefits of a course in the methods of evaluation in physical education.

Fourth, I am not certain, nor do I believe that Mr. Faust is certain, of what "traditional evaluation" is, however, he states that it serves no purpose other than as an excuse to differentiate between students. The type of evaluation one uses should be

FIFTH, FAUST INDICATES that no novice will achieve anything approximating "mastery." It appears that Faust defines mastery as perfection. No novice or even an expert will achieve perfection in physical activities. Qualified teachers can formulate reasonable mastery goals for students with varying levels of skills which if met will show learning.

Sixth, Faust reported that GSE instructors do not discuss their grading components with the GSE coordinator until the fourth week of the semester. This procedure is indeed unfortunate, since instructors should be able to tell their students those grading components on the first day of class.

Seventh, Faust states that emphasis on skill unfairly penalizes those who are not "experienced athletes." An informed physical educator knows that many skills are independent of others and may be unique. Being an "experienced athlete" in one sport (or even several sports) does not make one a master of all physical skills.

Although grading policies are highly individualistic and are reflective of the philosophy of the teacher, it is my belief that these remarks are far more representative of the physical education faculty than those presented by Faust.

Student-written plays display humor, realism

By Jeanna Hunter
Staff Writer

An evening of thought-provoking entertainment was provided to the audience at "Three More Plays," which opened Tuesday night in the Lab Theater of the Communication Building. The final performance will be Thursday at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

The plays were produced by their student authors, Mike Phoenix, Brenda Major and Jeff Elwell. They were sponsored by the Student Theater Guild in cooperation with the Graduate Student Council, the Undergraduate Student Organization and the SUC Department of Theater.

In the first of the three one-act plays, "Crossing Jordan," by Phoenix, homosexuality is a disease for which there is no cure. Jordan Armstrong, played by Bill Kleindl, is a married, successful man who is diagnosed as having the disease and being gay. His frustration with the diagnosis as he goes through the traditional stages of acceptance, denial, anger and fear, provides the basis for some very funny dialogue.

But the humor is only on the surface of this play, as Phoenix never lets the audience forget that real people struggle to deal with their own gayness everyday. In all, he created a wonderfully sensitive, though sarcastic, account of society's view of homosexuals.

Armstrong's bubbleheaded blonde wife, played by Rebecca O'Blensky, and her wimpy lover, Dr. Maximilian Center, played by Lars Timpa, do an excellent job at demonstrating some of society's prejudices against gays.

However, the most intriguing character in "Crossing Jordan" is by far Dr. Gardenpath, played by Mary Schulz, as she makes character moves from a doctor to a priest and finally to Armstrong's long-lost brother. Schulz's mere presence on stage as the intimidating Gardenpath keeps the mood tense and the audience on the edge of their seats.

In contrast to "Crossing Jordan," there was no edge-of-the-seat action to "Three Second Violation," by Brenda Major. And although some characters had some humorous comments, this one-act play about a star basketball player who thinks he might be gay started and ended pretty much in the same place.

John Gray as Steve, the star basketball player, was missing that little spark that could have moved his performance from mediocre to above average. His performance failed to give the audience the identification with his character that they needed to fully participate and understand the play.

The other characters in "Three Second Violation," played by Ava LeNoir, Bill Dwyer, Paul Wolf and Caroline James were funny at times but their reactions as friends of a gay who is trying to come out seemed to be realistic.

Realistic is one of the best ways to describe "Dead Fish," by Jeff Elwell. As the final of the three one-act plays, "Dead Fish," deals with a man's thoughts of suicide as he sits on a dock near some dead fish and the resulting conversation with a passer-by attempts to kill him out of killing himself.

Emily Brown Jansen plays the woman who is drawn to converse with the man she observes contemplating suicide, played by Mark Rothschild. Through the conversation, she is drawn by the stranger's reasoning and her own doubts to engage in a round or two of Russian roulette.

By this time, Elwell's play has the audience so in hand that each breath it takes and each sigh of relief or burst of nervous laughter it releases centers on pulling the trigger of the gun. If the audience's reaction was any indication, Elwell succeeded in making his audience identify on a personal level with the thoughts and actions of the woman and the man sitting next to the dead fish and contemplating suicide.

"Three More Plays" gave Phoenix, Major and Elwell a chance to speak their minds on a couple of sensitive topics. The audience doesn't have to think to enjoy their production, but those who attended the plays and brought their minds along certainly got something more than an evening's entertainment.

The Sixth MADRIGAL DINNER CONCERT

With a flourish of fanfares, the Student Center Sixth Annual Madrigal Dinner begins, as the performers of the Madrigal, costumed in styles reminiscent of the Renaissance, enter the hall. Pages follow, bearing the platter with the bear's head, the sparkling tinseltail bowl and the flaming plum pudding to the banquet table. The Lord of the Manor proposes a toast to Christmas to launch the night of merriment. The Madrigal Singers fill the hall with traditional madrigal songs and galelike carols, performed with the same spirit of festivity that was abundant in "Merrie Olde England" in the castles and country manors of noblement during the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries. Minstrels, jugglers, a string quartet, a brass ensemble and joyous tunes of merriment and good cheer will make the evening complete for all who attend.

Each program will begin promptly at 6:30 p.m. in Ballroom B of the Student Center. Reservations will be accepted beginning October 1, 1982 for the scheduled performances of December 8, 9, 10, 11.

The price of dinner is $11.90 plus 60 cents tax. Reservations can be made by mailing the enclosed Reservation Card to the Student Center Central Ticket Office, Southern Illinois University, Carbondale, Illinois 62901, or in person Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The mail order deadline is December 1, 1982. In order to receive your tickets and table assignments, please include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. If you wish to sit with other parties, please make your reservations under one name only, specifying the number of persons in your party and the evening you wish to attend.

Solidarity misunderstood, prof says

By Robert Green
Staff Writer

Western nations never really understood the meaning of the Solidarity movement in Poland, visiting professor of sociology Bronislaw Misztal said Tuesday in a lecture at the Lasar Law Building Auditorium.

Solidarity was wrongly perceived as a counterbalance to Marxism, Misztal said in his talk on the international implications of the Polish crisis. Misztal said Solidarity was basically a socialist movement which threatened the existing order by advocating that workers have a democratic voice in planning and production.

And the political implications of this threat to the status quo worried many Western leaders. "No one really knew what to do with a free Poland in the middle of Europe," he said.

"They did not reject communism or socialism but inhuman government, and the whole process of government planning," said Misztal, who left Poland two years ago after receiving a Fulbright senior graduate scholarship for research at the University of Chicago.

Misztal also said that many "Western interests" had loaned large amounts of money to Poland, and were concerned about the instability of the Polish economy during Solidarity's heyday.

"They lent money for very specific reasons," he said. "It wasn't charity. They expected a return in interest or in products. I would say these interests may have supported the attempt to restore order."

Misztal, who was raised in Warsaw, was one of five people who signed the founder's charter for the formal registration of Solidarity in Warsaw. He said he has continued to work in behalf of the banned union since he left Poland.

He was fired last summer from the Academy of Sciences in Warsaw, where he worked as a researcher before coming to the United States.

He said the Polish people have never accepted the government forced upon them by the Soviet Union at the end of World War II. "The government existed with military support from the East, but without political legitimacy."

But because the Polish people were tired, and because of a "sense of suffering" inherent in their national character, Poles chose to sacrifice and "strive for dignity" rather than rebel, although many scattered uprisings have occurred through the years, Misztal said.

He said the election of John Paul II, a Polish Pope, was a major influence in the emergence of Solidarity. "They felt pride and dignity in being Poles. When Pope John Paul II came to Poland in 1979, for the first time the people made an attempt to organize the government their own way."

The Quality You Expect!

Fashion designer welcomes new horizons

By Jack Wallace
Staff Writer

Although the story of her life might read like a farfetched work of fiction, Teresa Zitter is not a figment of someone's imagination.

Born in Turkeve, Hungary in 1933, she was sent to an Austrian concentration camp during World War II because of her part-Jewish ancestry.

Imprisoned along with her mother, it was during this time that Teresa designed her first dress. She draped a tablecloth around herself and formed the basis of what was to become known as the "Instant Dress."

Teresa and her mother escaped from the concentration camp by "just walking away," she said. If captured, they had planned to say that it had been a mistake and they were lost.

They made it all the way home, but their joy was to be short-lived. Teresa's father had been mistakenly informed that his daughter and wife had been killed. He committed suicide three days before their return.

Teresa studied clothing design after the war and also taught. Then came the Hungarian Revolution, and Teresa and her mother went first to Vienna, and then to New York in 1957.

"I had to learn a new language and the American method," she said. "My mother was a very good saleswoman and fantastic with numbers. She didn't speak any English except numbers."

That turned out to be enough to start a fashion business known as Lona creations. Using a covered bathtub in their small living space for a cutting table, their determination to succeed took them into the world of high fashion design.

They created designs for Bobbi Brooks, Simplicity, Saks Fifth Avenue, Macy's and many more.

In 1964 something happened to Teresa that was to change the course of her life. This time it was what she called, "the best bargain I ever made. There are many men out there, but men like my husband are one in a million," she said.

The man, Robert N. Zitter, is now a professor of physics at SIU-C. Shortly after their marriage and a move to Carbondale, Teresa began appearing on some TV shows.

Besides being an internationally known fashion designer, Teresa is also known for her Hungarian cooking, and has worked on the translation of Gypsy songs from the Gypsy and Hungarian languages into English.

When Teresa talks about her appearance on the Mike Douglas show, there's no question about what Teresa thinks of Douglas: "He's a very warm, human, natural, absolute sweetheart who's always ready to help and listen, she said. Not what you would call the typical star behavior."

What interests Teresa now is to "develop more fashion lines, newer fabrics and to bring back the Matte Jersey, which is the most beautiful and pliable fabric," she said.

"I am here, I am available and I love to teach and demonstrate." Whether it's cooking, design, poetry or life in general, Teresa's enthusiasm and whirlwind personality always come through.

Teresa is scheduled to appear on the "Sonja" show on WDIV in Detroit, Monday. "This time I'm going to do a collection of dresses which are made mainly from scarves," she said.

She also wants to show that in this very inflationary world, if you have any mind and a little bit of time a woman can still dress well and cheap.

Teresa said that it's clear designers this year are trying to go back to the hipline accent and promote the nate like woman and big sleeves.

"My religion is this. Keep the woman and body in mind. Enhance it, but do not distort it." She said she wants to create designs that women of any social strata can use.

"Many American things are built on becoming obsolete. I build classics and no throwing out. Something which is good should be flattering for the figure, attractive, without killing your budget," she said.

Regarding color, Teresa said a fashionable color is "the one that suits you. If you have a certain coloring and you look like a dead fly in a bottle of sour cream in a certain color, I wouldn't advise you to wear it no matter how fashionable it is." She said it is a certain shape or color people remember in women's clothes and not the exact lines. "With the 'Instant Dress' you can have different effects on the same design by using different colors."

This ready to wear dress, which developed from her tablecloth designs in the concentration camp, can be made from one piece of fabric and without sewing.

Never at a loss for new ideas, Teresa said she would like to do a "spray can type thing with a speckled effect. I want to spray a rainbow, a speckle of colors over the fabric."

Teresa has also completed booklets on Hungarian cooking, including 12 dishes that can be completed in 45 minutes. "I'm a frustrated teacher and nurse," she joked. "I'm ready to take care of anybody and ready to cook."

She would also like to work in the area. "I don't feel used here. I've given lectures and classes but it's really not enough to keep me busy," she said.

Her "Instant Dress" is still going strong, and was pictured in a recent issue of Vogue. For the upcoming television appearance, she is writing her own lines and doing her own designs.

"It's absolutely marvelous to go on a national TV show, they're much more honest than the small stations," she said.

Preparation for a television appearance is very important to Teresa. "Before a show I try to think about what is happening in the world today and about my ideas in fashion. I think about what I can tell a woman about without pretention and show them how to achieve a dress with the best effect for the least amount of money."

Whatever the subject, and regardless of the outcome, one thing is certain. With Teresa Zitter in the room, dull moments will be few and far between.

SIU-C cyclist's performance aids U.S. team in Chile

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Associate Sports Editor

The tour of Chile that Dan Casebeer just returned from is not one that is found in a travel brochure.

Sure, there was great scenery and Casebeer was able to buy some souvenirs, but there were no gourmet meals, no luxurious accommodations and the water had to be boiled before it could be consumed.

The SIU-C cyclist recently completed the nine-stage Tour of Chile, covering 750 miles in eight days. The stages ranged in distance from the 14-mile individual time trial to the 120 miles on the last day of competition.

Fifteen four-member teams from around the world competed, and were scored on a team and individual basis. The United States team of Alexis Grewald, Casebeer, Tony Chastain and Greg Sanders finished seventh. Grewald was the second cyclist to finish and Casebeer 30th. Colombian riders took the first and third spots, along with the team title.

Though he finished in the middle of the field, his performance was a good one, he said, as the American team sacrificed positions for Grewald.

"I could have finished a lot better, but the three of us worked our butts off for him," Casebeer said. "We made it easier for him. We'd get into a break and slow it down. It was an extremely team-oriented race, which is not too common for the United States."

The work does have its rewards, however. When he was selected to compete, he was told a good performance would lead to a spot on the U.S. National team.

"Supposedly I'm on it," he said. He hasn't received official word yet, but he does not expect the coach to call for some time yet.

In the meantime, Casebeer will finish his internship and graduate in December. In late January, he plans to go to the Olympic Training Center, in Colorado Springs.

Except for taking precautions with the water, conditions in Chile were pretty good, he said. Even so, the cyclists did get sick by the end of the tour.

Stress developed from the long distance and various changes in weather and course conditions. "I was in good shape to ride, but not enough to do well on hills," Casebeer said. Much of the course was mountainous and once, the altitude ranged from 2,000 to 9,000 feet over 30 miles, he said.

"During one stage, we averaged 32 miles per hour for 75 miles," Casebeer said. "It was a flat road and we were just cruising. Another time it was slow because we had a terrible headwind."

Though Casebeer said he wished they could have had more time just to be tourists, he was impressed with Chile.

"It's really a pretty country," he said. "Going south at one time, riding the plains, I'd look to the left and these huge, gorgeous mountains would just spring out."

"Everyone was really nice to us," he continued. "Incredible amounts of people turned out to watch. We'd be going through a town or by a house and people would come out to cheer us and throw flower petals."

MVP Murphy credits team

ATLANTA (AP)—Outfielder Dale Murphy, named Wednesday as the National League's Most Valuable Player for 1982, attributes the honor to the performance of the West Division-winning Atlanta Braves.

"I didn't do that much in September, and I didn't feel like an MVP," the 26-year-old said. "I think it was more a tribute to how our team did — our team doing that well is really the reason I was being considered."

Murphy is the first Braves' player to be named MVP since Hank Aaron, then of the Milwaukee Braves, in 1957. The only other Braves' player to win in the 51-year history of the team was Bob Elliott in 1947.

Murphy was one of two players named on all 24 ballots and easily outdistanced St. Louis Cardinals outfielder Lonnie Smith for the annual award given by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

He drew 14 first-place votes from the panel made up of two writers from each league city, eight second and one each for third and fourth for a total of 283 points in the balloting. Smith received eight first-place votes and was a distant second with 218 points.

After hitting .247 in 1981, Murphy raised his average .34 points to a solid .281. He tied for the league lead in runs batted in at 109 and knocked 36 home runs.

The 6-foot-5 Murphy also showed a marked improvement as a center fielder in his fifth major league season. But it was the team's overall play that sparked his own excellent performance, Murphy insisted.

Injury risk greater for NFL players

CHICAGO (AP) — A sports conditioning specialist says National Football League players will be so out of shape after eight weeks of virtual inactivity that "you're going to see a bunch of garbage" on the field this weekend.

Dr. Mike Andrews, a physician who treats sports-related injuries at the Sports Performance Rehabilitation Institute in suburban Carol Stream, said Tuesday night after a tentative agreement ended the players' strike that their return to competitive action so soon is "stupidity."

"I can't see how the players can get out on the field. A football player is a million-dollar entity over the course of his career. Is he going to risk that in one game?" said Andrews, who also is conditioning instructor for the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League.

"They are a little bit smarter than that. If they are forced to play, you're going to see a bunch of garbage," he said. "I just can't see how the players can be serious out there. They can't go full blast because they won't be in shape and they won't have the desire. Why should they hurt themselves? Why should they injure each other?"

Andrews said at least three or four weeks are needed for the players to get back into shape. "I think the season should have been scrapped in the best interest of the players and of the fans," he said.

Elie Wolfe, an athletic trainer and corrective therapist at the rehabilitation institute, said the return to action will be "extremely risky — unnecessarily risky for the players." Wolfe designed a rehabilitative program for Chicago Bears' safety Gary Fencik after he had knee surgery.

Another employee of the institute, Dawn Norman, a certified trainer formerly with the University of Chicago, predicted that the Bears will be "very prone to injury" in their home game Sunday with the Detroit Lions, as will other players.

North

"The players struck when the weather was still warm," Norman said. "Now they'll be playing in the cold, and they'll be much more susceptible to muscle pulls and muscle strains. Their cardiovascular endurance is going to be very, very weak."

it will attract a crowd of Saluki rooters.

"The crowd means a lot, it's real important," said the Saluki skipper. "We've been trying to get faculty members and local businesses to come out to the meet. This meet is for anyone who wants to see the best swimmers in the country and in the world."

SU-C will head to Chicago on Saturday to take on Northern Illinois and Illinois-Chicago in another double dual-meet. The two teams represent the weakest link in the Salukis' otherwise staunch schedule.

Its metal collar helps keep the point from going squishy. So people love it. For only 89¢ they should buy their own pen and show some respect for my property.

Two top teams provide challenge for lady swimmers

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

There's no place like home. Try telling that to Tim Hill and his women's swim team. The swimming Salukis, coming off an impressive opening road trip in which they drowned the upset hopes of Indiana and Cincinnati, return to the not-so-friendly confines of the Recreation Center pool at 6 p.m. Friday.

Two of the nation's premier squads will invade the Carbondale facility with notions of knocking SIUC from the unbeaten ranks. Alabama will be piloted by U.S. 1984 Olympic head coach, Don Gambrell, who has also netted honors as the Southeastern Conference's Coach of the Year on two occasions. The Crimson Tide, which finished ninth at the NCAA Nationals last season, will be a slight favorite over the AIAW third-place Salukis.

"On paper I'd say we were the underdog to Alabama, though I think the meet will be close in every event," Hill emphasized. "It could go down to the last relay, it could be that close."

Besides the omnipotent Tide, the Salukis will be hosting the Kansas Jayhawks, a team which finished 14th in the NCAA finals. Although not as highly touted as 'Bama or SIUC, Kansas could easily play the role of the spoiler.

Hill's squad, however, will have little problem mustering incentive to outswim the Jayhawks — they served as the sole blotch on the Salukis' dual-meet record last season.

The three-team spectacular will feature some of the nation's top swimmers, and will be a virtual get-together for All-Americans and world-class swimmers.

"I think there will be a lot of fast performances from everyone," said Hill. "Most of the pool records will go in this meet. Almost all of their (Alabama's) girls were high school All-Americans."

Several of the Southerners have also achieved that rank on the collegiate circuit. Angelika Knipping, a freshman, is ranked as one of the top 12 breaststrokers in the world. Carol Lundberg is also a world-class swimmer, serving as the Tide's top freestyle sprinter. Lisa McLain is yet another world-class competitor for Gambrell, ranked as an individual medleyist.

Kim Nicholson, who has only achieved the rank of All-American, will be one of the meet's top backstrokers, while Ann Marie Milling gained All-American status in the 50-meter freestyle and relay events. Ellen McGrath, a diver, rounds out 'Bama's impressive All-American contingent.

Coach Gary Kempf's Jayhawks be led by Tammy Thomas, an All-American 50- and 100-meter freestyle sprinter, who should receive support from Tammy Pease, an "outstanding sprinter," according to Hill.

With all the freestyle talent circulating at the meet, the Salukis will be looking toward the leadership of three of their four individualist All-Americans. Barb Larsen and Pam Ratcliffe will help hedge the opponent's edge in that event, but Janie Coontz may be the deciding factor for the Salukis. Hill has tagged the 1000-meter freestyle race, which will pit Coontz against Jill Rogers of Alabama, as one of the meet's top attractions.

Larsen, along with lending freestyle support, will be pulling a substantial part of the backstroke load for SIUC, while Ratcliffe will be shooting for individual medley honors. The Salukis' fourth All-American, Amanda Martin, will lead Hill's breaststroke pack.

Although the meet will be held just after the official start of the Thanksgiving break, Hill hopes Brian Babcock will be vying for the Gary Morava Award at the Windy City Invitational.

Meet holds memories for men gymnasts

By JoAnn Marchlewski
Associate Sports Editor

A special significance is attached to the Windy City Invitational by the men's gymnastics team.

It's not that the meet, Friday and Saturday at Illinois-Chicago, will comprise many of the toughest teams in the country and serve as a good preview of much of the NCAA field, but because of an award given to the top all-arounder.

The Gary Morava Award has been presented each year in memory of the Saluki gymnast who died in February, 1974, following an accident during practice in which his neck was broken.

"At that time, he was the top gymnast in the United States," said Coach Bill Meade of the Prospect Heights native and Hersey High School graduate.

"We wanted a meet in memory of Gary," Meade said. "He did real well his two times in the Windy City, and a lot of people remember him from those meets."

Each fall since 1974, Meade has given the award to the top all-arounder in the meet, but would like to see one change in the presentation this year — he would like to see an SIUC gymnast bring it home.

"Every year I hope one of our own kids win it, but we never have," he said.

This year, hopes are pinned on senior Brian Babcock. Babcock finished third with an all-around score of 112.80 in his first meet of the season, the Big Eight Invitational, and has set a goal of 113 for this meet. It will take at least that to win as the all-around field will be composed of several very strong gymnasts.

Nebraska lost last year's winner, Jim Hartung, to graduation, and Cornhusker senior Phil Cahoy is competing in Europe, but those absences make hardly a dent in the four-time defending NCAA champion's power and depth.

Scott Johnson, whose 113.95 all-around score placed him second behind Cahoy's 114.50 at the Big Eight Invitational, will put in a bid for the Morava award, as will his teammates Jim Mikus and Chris Reigel.

Others include Brett Finch of Iowa State, Milan Stanovich of Michigan, and Kari Samsten of Illinois.

Nebraska is favored to take the team title, but that is the only safe bet as the 12-team field features powers such as Penn State, Oklahoma, Northern Illinois and Iowa State. The Salukis figure to be right up there.

"We'll surely do 270 this weekend," Meade said. "But it will be another fair test against the other teams. If you could tell me how our pommel horse and parallel bars team will do, I could tell how the whole team will do."

Those events have provided trouble for the Salukis recently, but should be strengthened later in the year when sophomore Gregg Upperman and freshman David Lutterman are recovered from injuries.

At the Windy City, however, the other four events will provide some high scores.

"Tom Slomski will have a good battle for the ring championship, and Herb Voss and Brian are in good shape to fight it out on pommel horse," Meade said. "Certainly John (Levy) is a candidate on high bar."
