USO wants day care center built

By Bill Rumlinski
Staff Writer

Amid an evening of protocol problems and lengthy discussions, the Student Senate Wednesday turned aside a request to support voter registration rallies and asked the University to build an on-campus day care center.

Business and Administration Senator Jim Williams submitted a last-minute bill requesting the senate to allocate $393 to the voter registration commission. The money was requested to finance voter registration rallies scheduled for Sept. 24 and 30.

Senators had expected the bill, written by USO voter registration coordinator David Madlener, to ask for $730. However, a $250 donation from Randy Patchett's political campaign and $100 from Ken Gray's office helped to reduce the amount of the funding request.

West Side Senator Dan DeFosse motioned that the funding request be tabled and referred to the Finance committee. The senate tabled the bill with a majority vote.

"What just happened here?" Madlener asked the senate. "I have worked my tail off and now I will have to seek funding from other sources to be able to hold these two rallies."

Madlener said soliciting donations would take away from the time he needs to coordinate the registration drive.

West Side Senator Thea Rubin said the senate had given $260 toward the registration rallies prior to Wednesday's meeting and that Madlener had already contacted outside sources for donations.

"I did not solicit donations from Randy Patchett's campaign or Kenny Gray's organization," Madlener said. "And the senate hasn't given me anything."

"The money we used to make a down payment on a live, remote by WTOA and to pay for today's band was graciously allocated by Mr. Lyons from his contingency fund."

He pleaded with the senators to reconsider their decision and vote as a committee to "fund their own program."

"I need 51 percent of you to believe in the Constitution of the United States and to believe in this program," Madlener said.

"You can't tell me that other group's funding proposals would effect a larger group of people. This is one of the biggest things USO does."

The senators did not elect to vote as a committee nor did they request a special session to be held to hear the Finance committee's recommendations before Wednesday's rally.

A resolution asking the Board of Trustees to initiate a $3.25 special activities fee underwent a series of changes, but was passed by the senate 32-1.

The proposed fee would be used to construct of an on-campus building to house Rainbow's End daycare service. Rainbow's End will be required to move from their present location on South Giant City Road when their lease expires in early 1987. According to the resolution, children of SIUC students and faculty account for 70 percent of the facility's enrollment.

The proposal, written by DeFosse and Student Welfare commissioner Drayton Roose, is similar to a resolution passed last fall by the Student Senate, however last year's resolution was never delivered to the board.

A resolution passed that proposes to express the senate's disapproval of the Carbondale City Council's actions to prohibit the rugby club's All Ghoul's Tournament, the proposal asks USO President Philip Lyons to meet with city commissioner to resolve the situation.

Dunn backs proficiency bill veto

By Patricia Edwards
Staff Writer

Henry Kissinger would have been denied the right to speak at Illinois universities if a bill recently vetoed by Gov. James Thompson had been allowed to pass, says state Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin.

The bill would have required testing of college teachers to determine their proficiency in oral English skills, preventing those with heavy accents or poor speaking ability from becoming classroom instructors.

Dunn voted against the bill, which passed in the Senate 45-9, because he said university administrative powers — not the state — should decide teacher qualifications. Dunn spoke to the College Republicans Wednesday in the Student Center.

Foreign teaching assistants would have been the primary victims of the bill, Dunn said, because proficiency was not defined. Many foreign TAs are proficient in English but their accents impede students' understanding, Dunn said.

Accents should not be allowed to impede understanding of course material, Dunn said, but SIUC officials he spoke to preferred that such a decision remain within the realm of University politics.

Dunn also spoke in support of two referendums to amend the state constitution that will be on the November ballot. Under current law, judges can deny bail only to those accused of a capital offense. The first referendum would allow judges to deny bail to suspects charged with crimes such as attempted murder, armed robbery, arson, kidnapping, delivery of a controlled substance in or around school grounds and criminal sexual assault.

It would not forbid bail in all cases, but would allow the judge to decide according to a suspect's past record.

Veteran's organizations will be exempt from property taxes if the second referendum is passed. The amendment, which has been voted on at least twice before, would use state funds to reimburse local governments that had lost revenue because of the tax exemption. Dunn said the referendum is a way of saying thanks to those who have served the United States.

A three-fifths majority vote is required to pass a referendum. Unless a majority of those who cast ballots also vote on the referendum, the referendum will be considered invalid.

Therefore, Dunn said, those who do not vote are really voting against those issues.

Soviets still propose second summit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Thursday "solutions are possible" to recent flareups with Washington over the Kremlin's detention of an American newsmen and alleged spying at the United Nations.

Shevardnadze said "we are ready" for a second summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, but again put the responsibility on Washington.

Shevardnadze appeared upbeat as he arrived from New York for talks Friday and Saturday with Secretary of State George Shultz. The talks were originally scheduled to lay the groundwork for a still unscheduled summit but are being overshadowed by Moscow's detention of U.S. News & World Report correspondent Nicholas Daniloff and an American expulsion order to 25 Soviet U.N. diplomats.

"Such incidents have happened before and may happen in the future in relations between states," Shevardnadze told reporters when asked about the two flaps. "On such occasions it is important that political leaders, government leaders, that they act wisely and with foresight and that they do not impede normal relations between nations."

"We believe solutions are possible," he said.

Shevardnadze, speaking through an interpreter after his Aeroflot jet landed at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., said the Daniloff case "can be resolved" but called the American expulsion order "illegal."

Aides finish tax reform bill; measure is filed in House

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congressional aides completed the last part of the tax reform bill Thursday, a tougher tax system for defense contractors, and the measure was officially filed with the House — setting up a vote in that chamber next week. The sweeping legislation, which would curtail tax breaks in return for lower rates, is expected to be approved by the House, probably next Wednesday.

Budget leaders close to accord on 'Band-Aid'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate budget leaders came close to accord Thursday on a nearly $15 billion "Band-Aid" deficit-reduction package that would avoid harsh budget cuts under the Gramm-Rudman law. But aides said details remained to be settled, and the administration has not agreed to a deal.

Defector given 12 years in Soviet labor camp

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Soviet soldier who defected in Afghanistan, came to the United States and then returned to his homeland, has been sentenced to 12 years in a Soviet labor camp, a human rights organization said Thursday. Freedom House said the former soldier, Nikolay Ryzhkov, 22, was tried Dec. 11, 1985, branded a deserter and sent to a strict regime camp in Mordovia about 180 miles south of Moscow.

Bell using funds for new ventures, study says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some regional Bell telephone companies are improperly using money made from local phone service to subsidize new business ventures, the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners charged Thursday. In a report capping a two-year investigation into accounting practices at the seven Bell holding companies, NARUC staff members found some of the firms use two accounting systems to "sidestep regulation," that they are "purposely muddying the waters" surrounding division of cost, and that they allocate more expenses to the regulated companies than is warranted.

NATO ready to concede on aerial inspections

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — The U.S.-led NATO alliance is prepared to make an 11th-hour concession regarding aerial inspection of East bloc military maneuvers, possibly saving a 32-month European security conference from failure, a Western delegate said Thursday. The two stumbling blocks to reaching an accord on ways to reduce the risk of accidental war in Europe have been how to conduct aerial on-site inspections of Warsaw Pact war games and other military exercises and establishing how many troops must be involved in an exercise for it to be reported to other nations.

Officials unable to identify Pan Am hijackers

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Investigators have been unable to identify five Arabs arrested in the bloody hijacking of a Pan Am jumbo jetliner earlier this month, a Foreign Office spokesman said Thursday. He said it was taking "inordinate time" to determine the identities of the men in the hijacking in which 21 passengers were killed.

Health panel may expand AIDS drug testing

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (UPI) — A North Carolina company awaited word Thursday from federal officials on an anti-AIDS drug with hopes it would be acknowledged as the first effective treatment for symptoms of the deadly disease. Burroughs Wellcome and federal health officials were debating whether to expand treatment with the drug, AZT, even though it is still in the experimental stages and has some adverse side effects.

Unidentified body found in remote section of Cairo

CAIRO (UPI) — A man walking his dog Thursday found the body of a man who had been shot to death in a remote area of town near the Mississippi River levee, police said. Police Chief James Wright said the victim was discovered about 7:50 a.m. near 28th Street and the Mississippi levee road. An autopsy was planned. Authorities believe the man was shot sometime after 5 p.m. Wednesday, Wright said.

Testimonies given to inspire people to Christ

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

Wayne Helmer found God while attending a prayer meeting at Purdue University in 1969.

Jeff Yourison found him while mired in a world of drugs, science fiction and Eastern Mysticism.

They joined Wednesday night to relate their experiences and to preach the Word to a small crowd of listeners gathered in a blue tent on the corner of East Grand and South Illinois avenues.

"Throughout my life, I always asked myself three questions," Helmer, an associate professor of engineering, told the audience. "Who am I? Where am I going? How can I find meaning in life?"

THOSE ANSWERS did not come easily, Helmer said, and the uncertainty in his life was causing him great pain. He sought happiness in a series of romantic relationships, most of which were soon broken off.

"Life didn't have any meaning," Helmer said, clutching a Bible close to his chest. The questions kept recurring. "What I was really seeking was a relationship with God."

Only when a friend convinced him to attend a prayer meeting did he begin to feel that life was indeed worth living. "I found God at that meeting."

Yourison, who is the director of Inter Varsity Christian Fellowship, a parachurch group focusing on student evangelism and discipleship, confessed that before he discovered Jesus Christ. "Technology was my God. I read a lot of science fiction and I believed that a lot of man's problems could be solved inside man."

LATER, WHILE still in high school, he delved into Eastern mysticism and philosophy. "But once again I was left with this deep emptiness."

In desperation, he turned to drugs.

"I thought maybe I could find God on a higher plane," Yourison said. But instead expanding his mind, drug just "doped it up."

Yourison became frustrated with attempts to find solutions to his problems in this world. He turned to the Bible for help.

"As I examined Jesus Christ I began to see the unique claims he was making," Yourison told his captivated audience.

WHAT FINALLY "saved" him was the revelation experience of a friend. Like Yourison, this young man was heavily involved in drugs. But his personal experience with God, Yourison said, saved both their lives.

Yourison said he got down on his knees and prayed to be

"born over again."

The crowd clapped and nodded. A few hands went up in praise.

The crowd came to see — and to participate in — what was billed as an old fashioned revival. But as the night wore on, it soon became apparent that a few new twists had been added to that distinctly American religious tradition.

None of the trappings of a traditional house of worship were apparent — no crosses, no candles, no statues, no stained glass windows. Just a few rows of metal folding chairs, a wooden stage with a stool and several microphones, a public address system and a sound board.

NO ORGAN music boomed. Just the gentle strains of an acoustic guitar, played by a well groomed, casually dressed young man.

But with the push of a button on a small black box, the tent came alive with sounds of drums, electric bass guitars and back-up vocals. High tech had come to the house of the Lord.

The crowd livened. The clapping became less restrained. Feet tapped and heads bobbed.

But soon the music slowed again. The young guitar player stepped forward to the microphone and began giving his own testimonial.

"For a long time materialism was the god of my life and for so long I let so many nice things — nice cars, nice clothes — come between me and the Lord."

THE YOUNG man sang: "Everything you always wanted, Everything you hoped for, Was right there in your hand. Put in your heart you needed more... But you'll never know true joy... until you give your heart to Jesus Christ."

The message implicit in the song is clear: Don't follow the ways of this world. "Before you met God, you were dead," the young man told the audience. "The ways of this world have been against the Lord from the beginning."

Phil Nelson, of the Southern Baptist Student Ministry, said students have the wrong idea about salvation. Most students, he said, "think heaven is gonna be a drag. All my friends are goin' to hell."

But, Nelson said later, the message he and the other speakers were trying to get across was not hostile to students. "We're trying to communicate the unified message that students need to welcome God into their life."

NELSON CRITICIZED the methods of another evangelist all too familiar to SIUC students — the Rev. Jed Smock. On his frequent visits to the campus, Smock has been known to verbally abuse students on their way to classes, accusing them of being everything from heathens to servants of Satan. "Jed's methods are a little extreme for us," Nelson said.

What did those attending the revival get out of it?

When Nelson asked all those who had "given their life to Jesus tonight for the first time" to step to the front of the tent, only one man came forward. He was welcomed and shortly after, he began a quiet discussion over the Bible with Yourison.

Affirmative action should be utilized

NANCY BANDY, ASSISTANT DIRECTOR of athletics for Student Services, says the University is biased in hiring. As an example, she cites the search for a new athletics director last year, in which Charlotte West, associate athletics director, was not a finalist.

In testimony to a House Appropriations Committee hearing March 5, Bandy said: "I believe if you evaluated the resumes of the five finalists with Dr. West's resume, there would be no doubt in your mind there was discrimination in this case."

DISCRIMINATION ON THE BASIS OF sex, color or nationality should not be tolerated. There are many well-qualified female instructors, but a look at this University's faculty would lead one to believe there are precious few minority or female instructors to be had.

The Art Department has six female faculty members and 23 males. There are 15 male chemistry faculty members and one female.

The English Department has the highest number of female faculty: 18. But there are 36 male faculty members.

The only female chair is Elizabeth Eames in the Department of Philosophy.

THE MINORITY SITUATION IS NO better than it is for females at the University. In fact, the situation is worse.

If this is not discrimination, it seems to be on the verge of it. We are pleased to note that the Affirmative Action Advisory Committee was set up in April to review the hiring procedures for faculty, administrative professionals and civil service employees.

Bandy, who is chair of the committee, says its intent is to make University officials accountable for whom they hire.

THE UNIVERSITY SHOULD USE the findings of this committee to prevent any future discrimination.

Very nice, but has it actually done anything? If this affirmative action committee is the University's way to correct discrepancies in the male-to-female faculty member ratio, turn it loose and let it do its work.

People can be weird

Somebody put the following two signs up on my bulletin board, on Schneider Hall's 16th floor. One says: "New Group Forming... Let's put guys back where they belong!! In the Closet!! Further details on new organization avail. soon." The other sign said: "Important Notice: Homosexuals often justify their way of life as merely an 'alternative lifestyle.' The Oxford American Dictionary defines alternative as: 'A choice between two things, so that if one is true the other must be false.'"

Some alternative lifestyles noted were lesbianism, child molestation, gays, queers, bestiality, necrophilia, incest, bisexuality, transvestism, sadism, and masochism.

I assume that the person who put up these signs has an extremely weird sense of humor.

Let me suggest a few people with "alternative lifestyles": Henry David Thoreau, Socrates, Francis of Assisi, Thomas Merton, Jesus of Nazareth, John the Baptist, the Hare Krishnas, the Quakers, the Snakers, the Hutterites, Martin Luther King, Jr., and Pete Seeger, just to name a few.

I do not support or condone your new "organization" in any form or manner whatsoever. And in fact, in response to your group — even though I am very happy as a heterosexual — I am going to join the "Gay and Lesbian Peoples Union" today.

I suggest to all current and prospective group members that you do something that involves the betterment and enlightenment of mankind. — Stephen Franz, Student Resident Assistant, Schneider Hall.

Patchett needs to apologize

On Sept. 8, George Bush came to Mt. Vernon for a campaign appearance on behalf of Randy Patchett. Not everyone in Southern Illinois agrees with all the positions of Bush or Patchett. This is our right and responsibility as U.S. citizens.

It is our right as U.S. citizens to peacefully picket, expressing our political viewpoints on occasions such as the one in Mt. Vernon. Perhaps George Bush and Randy Patchett feel otherwise.

A group from the Southern Illinois Peace Coalition went to Mt. Vernon to exercise our Constitutional right to dissent. We arrived carrying only signs and intended to conduct an orderly picket in front of the hotel. A uniformed police officer, accompanied by an entourage of Mt. Vernon Police, State Police and Secret Service agents, instructed us to stop picketing. We attempted to compromise by moving further from the hotel. The men directed us to what they referred to as the "designated picketing area" which was far from the hotel, on the grass, behind some parked cars.

We were under the impression that in the United States one could picket peacefully at political events as long as no one is interfered with. This, according to the officers, was not the case. We regrouped to consider our options. We decided to stand up for our rights and formed a moving picket line, some distance from the hotel front door.

The Washington officials aggressively approached us and flashed their badges for an instant. They told us that we must cease our picketing or "face the consequences." We asked them what they meant. They told us that we would be arrested if we continued. They would not inform us as to what law we were breaking, nor would they tell us who decided on the designated picketing area.

Standing up for the right to picket, we continued. The officers must have finally realized that they had no right to arrest us and stopped their harassment.

I hope Randy Patchett does not consider harassment of political or union picketers to be right. Such harassment occurs more frequently in countries such as South Africa or China. Patchett, a strong anti-communist, points to this sort of repression in the Soviet Union, yet here it is in Southern Illinois.

This happened at Randy Patchett's political fundraiser, so he is at least partially responsible for what happened. If Patchett stands for freedom, he should abhor what happened. Randy Patchett should apologize to Southern Illinois Peace Coalition and see to it that nothing like this happens again in Southern Illinois. — Cass Van Der Meer, graduate student, Political Science. This letter was also signed by two other people.

Mazurek should reassess anger

In his letter published Sept. 16, Ed Mazurek expressed "snock" and "anger" at the publication of certain views contained in an article in an earlier issue of the D.E. entitled "Image of Blacks in Media Condescending."

I have problems with this letter on several levels. First, it is my belief that the media and press of a free country exist as a voice for all people in that country. I would think the journalism curriculum of which you are a part, Mr. Mazurek, would already have impressed that upon you.

Opinions in America are diverse because, yes, we are a "melting pot." For that reason, all opinions expressed and all perspectives that a problem can be approached from, are not going to be compatible with your own. Surely, you are not suggesting censoring a right we hold so dear.

Second, you seem to be confused about just what history Shirlene Holmes keeps talking about. You seem to define all of black history as beginning and ending with their enslavement and liberation in America. That tells me that you need to become informed on how much richer that history is. Perhaps that means all of us suffer, as Ms. Holmes claims, from under-exposure to that history.

Third, your statement that America is a "melting pot" is no reason to expect that all of the diverse cultures that we embrace in this country, should forsake their past, be unaware of their roots, or become so uniform that we are carbon copies of each other. Our strength is in diversity.

Finally, it is obvious that you are not acquainted with Ms. Holmes. I am. She emits all of the best qualities I think of when I think of the word "caring." She cares about people — not just "black" people, and she wants us to understand each other. Knowledge about who we are and where we come from is a necessary part of that understanding.

I should probably add, since it might be important to you, that my skin is white. — Sharon Bragg, senior, Speech Communications.

Area doesn't need things Bush thinks it should have Recently, Vice President George Bush came to Mount Vernon to campaign for the Republican candidate for Congress. In his presentation to the voters of the 22nd Congressional District, Bush tried to make it clear that we would be much better off if we were to elect a Republican to represent us rather than our current Democratic member of Congress.

Bush was out pushing for a war on drugs, war with Nicaragua, war in the stars, war with Libya and constraint in our dealings with the racist regime of South Africa.

He was trying to tell us we'd be better off with a Republican representative who would vote for aid to the Contras, vote for a $300 billion plus defense budget, vote for the MX and vote against the imposition of sanctions on the most undemocratic, tyrannical government in the world — Pretoria, South Africa.

What Bush apparently fails to understand is that it doesn't matter to heartlanders in the 22nd District how fat the defense budget is; we don't have any defense industries which might help to alleviate the unemployment, which ranges from 1) percent to 25 percent in Southern Illinois. We don't want to support a handful of bullies in Central America when three million Nicaraguans are going hungry as unsold food rots in our silos. At the same time, farm after family farm goes under while rich corporate farms reap millions in benefits from programs meant for rural families.

Mr. Bush, what Southern Illinois needs is funding for coal research, strip mine reclamation, road construction and repair, funds for schools and small business loans, public housing and sewage treatment facilities, hazardous waste clean-up and re-cycling projects. We also need federal dollars to make sure our poor and helpless can be housed, fed, clothed and re-trained if and when the time that they can be productive and help themselves to the American way comes.

Mr. Bush, you propose we support a system that only encourages the waste of valuable human and material resources in an insane arms race that can only lead to war as we ignore or simply devote too little time to solving the human problems which confront us.

No Mr. Bush! Our current Congressman has managed to get $4.5 billion worth of "people programs" through the Democratic-controlled House for our district. Only your Republican-controlled Senate stands in the way of relief for the good people of Southern Illinois. We thank God that Ken Gray is our Congressman.

Bless Ken Gray for having the courage to ponder these questions.

Where would we be today if we spent $2 trillion, or "people programs" since 1960 instead of on Triton, MX and B-1? Where would we be tomorrow if we spent our space dollars studying the "final frontier" rather than building up for the final showdown? — Andrew Leighton, graduate student, Public Administration.

Acid rain SIU's link to future

To a visitor, the smokestack next to McAndrew Stadium acts as both a campus guidepost and a symbol of the University's affinity with Illinois coal.

On a typical day, the wind — a giant exhaust fan — blows the stack's billowing plumes northeastward. Sulfur dioxide in the smoke finally falls hundreds of miles away as acid rain.

According to a text used at SIU-C, acidity in northeastern surface and rainwater increased 10 to 100 times recently. Coal-burning power plants are the suspected cause. Coal burning produces 70 percent of the sulfur dioxide in the air, says Robert Leo Smith, author of Ecology and Field Biology. The book, the title of which is the same as the course, calculates 117.6 million tons of sulfur dioxide spews into the atmosphere annually.

Another text, Living in the Environment, by G. Tyler Miller says, "More than 300 lakes in the Adirondack Mountains...are so acidified...no longer contain fish. The problem has spread from the northeastern United States to Canada... Scientists project...48,000 Ontario lakes will be devoid of life within 18 to 20 years if acid rain continues."

The effects of acid rain, its correlation with coal burning and the University's link provide opportunity to investigate not only the consequences of current actions but future global implications.

Earlier this year SIU hosted 17 Pakistani geologists studying coal technology, according to Chatauga, a Division of Continuing Education newsletter. Their visit, sponsored by a $77,000 U.S. Agency for International Development grant, was organized by faculty members who emphasized exploiting potential Himalayan coal reserves, the newsletter says.

Journalist John Maxwell Hamilton recently told an SIU audience that reporters should clarify international events through local stories. The Coal Research Center and faculty member involved in the Pakistani geological research offer ideal sources for the Daily Egyptian to follow Hamilton's advice. — C.D. Steizer, St. Louis.

Phillips offered a logical apology

This is in response to the ignorance of the biblical principles of Christianity shown by people who write letters and editorials for this paper. The letter, written by Robert T. Phillips ("Progress: society will alter perception of pornography," Sept. 11) is not an emotional outburst, but a logical apology.

First, the Bible does not discriminate against women, people do. The Bible applies different principles to men and women because men and women are physically, mentally and emotionally different.

Often it is said that the theory of creation is just a "religious belief," while the theory of evolution is a proven fact. Nothing could be further from the truth. The truth is that anyone who is honest with himself will realize that neither creation nor evolution are "theories." Neither can be tested or validated by any scientific means whatsoever.

Creation would have been a one-time event, not witnessed by anyone and therefore not provable. Evolution has similar problems. Most of it would have occurred in the distant past, unable to be observed, and it would be occurring too slowly to be observed today. And seeing as how both are equally not provable, both are equally "religious beliefs." They must be accepted by faith.

We are a university. We are supposed to be an intellectual community. Let's start acting like it. — Phil Hopper, senior, Forestry.

Drugs aren't legal in Thailand

Ann Hunter's letter, "Drug Proposal Requires Rethinking" (Sept. 11), carelessly stated drugs are legal in Thailand.

As many Thais are, I am disappointed in her short-sighted comment to mislead readers regarding the drug regulation in Thailand. Our country has been working in conjunction with the United Nations and the U.S. government to eliminate narcotics from our society.

In fact, we have been wrestling with this problem for almost 30 years. In Thailand, death is the maximum penalty for those who possess or distribute illegal drugs.

You may be surprised to know that Thai people are very aware of the drug problem. We spend a great amount of money on drug-related law enforcement and are concerned about the future of young people.

This, indeed, is a global problem and requires a sincere cooperative effort to destroy the narcotic ring. However, every community has to help and protect its residents, particularly children and teenagers, from this silent killer. — Manoonvatana Srisujin, graduate student, Curriculum, Instruction and Media.

'Topless Seven' trial winds down

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) - Seven feminists, dubbed "The Topfree Seven" for baring their breasts in defiance of New York's exposure law, wound up their trial Thursday by asking the judge to declare the "dinosaur" statute unconstitutional.

"I think we've made a major, major statement," said Mary Lou Schloss, 38, of Rochester, one of the women arrested during a "topfree picnic" in Rochester's Cobbs Hill Park June 21.

The 50-year-old state law requiring women to wear tops in public was attacked as sexist and discriminatory during the four-day non-jury trial in Rochester City Court.

A victory for "The Topfree Seven" would set a precedent in Rochester, but would not be binding in the rest of the state. If the women lose, they have vowed to appeal to the state's highest court.

The prosecution made testimony by police and admissions by the women are that they exposed their chests are enough to convict them of breaking the law.

"Their testimony (about justification) should bear no weight," Assistant Monroe County District Attorney Thomas Eribbeck said in closing arguments.

Judge Herman Walz, who has said he would not jail the women if they are convicted, indicated he would not rule at least until late October. The seven each face fines of up to $250.

During summations Thursday, defendant Nikki Craft of Oshkosh, Wis., argued her crusade for women's rights is comparable to the black civil rights struggle of the 1950s and 1960s.

"On the surface it seems trivial - incredibly trivial. It's as trivial as sitting in the back of the bus," said Craft, referring to Rosa Parks, the celebrated Montgomery, Ala., black woman who refused to give up her seat to a white man.

"I would suggest that any man who thinks what we are doing is trivial should just put on a top when he goes swimming and when he gets out, just lay out in the sun with that sloppy soaking wet top on," Craft said.

Craft, who has been arrested 43 other times in women's rights and anti-nuclear battles, wore a scarf, earmuffs and held a yellow bikini top to her chest at different points during an emotional summation to demonstrate that various cultures demand women cover different parts of their bodies.

Schloss, in her statement, said keeping the exposure law on the books does not represent the interest of the government.

Defense lawyer David Moss, representing five protesters, called the exposure statute "a dinosaur of the penal law" and said the protest was a much needed attempt by women to "reclaim their bodies from pornographers, beauty pageants and advertising agencies on Madison Avenue."

Through the testimony of two psychologists - one using a Barbie doll on the witness stand - several nudists and an anthropologist, the group tried to persuade the judge that the law violates a woman's constitutional right to equal protection and freedom of expression.

Increased building leads to cheap rent, Monty says

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

Don Monty, director of community development, said Thursday that he wants to reduce development costs in Carbondale, which may in turn reduce the cost of student housing.

Although the number of building permits issued in Carbondale has increased dramatically, Monty said, "I'm not happy with it."

He said he would like to see even more building permits issued adding that other people agree with him.

"Most of the buildings being constructed on the west side of Carbondale aren't the kinds of places you're likely to find students renting," Monty said.

Most student housing is being built on large lots that already meet construction requirements, he said. But if student housing is developed in an area that meets lowered requirements, lowered development costs would result in lower costs for students, he said.

He said one way to decrease development costs is to ease some of the restrictions for residential areas. By allowing streets to be narrower and not requiring sidewalks on both sides of some roads, costs could be reduced, Monty said.

There can be problems reducing regulations for development, he said.

Developers want to know how much the development will cost to construct while the city is more concerned with long-term costs for maintenance, Monty said.

Carbondale requires streets with concrete as a base. Allowing less expensive streets, of lower quality, would reduce development costs, he said, but repair costs would be much higher.

"Where would the money for those repairs come from? Would we raise property taxes? That's not very popular," Monty said.

Installing cheaper water lines would have a similar effect, he said. "We obviously have an intent to lower development costs in Carbondale."

According to a report comparing Carbondale to other cities, the pace for residential construction has increased in Carterville, Herrin, Murphysboro and Carbondale over last year while Marion and West Frankfort have dropped.

Carbondale, the largest city considered in the report, showed a sharp increase from 15 residential permits issued in 1984 to 131 in 1985.

Carterville in the same period increased from seven in 1984 to 21. Herrin increased from 20 in 1984 to 36 in 1985. Murphysboro rose to 20 in 1985 from six in 1984.

West Frankfort dropped from 12 in 1984 to nine in 1985. Marion, the second largest city considered, dropped from 40 in 1984 to 23 in 1985.

Herrin showed a decrease in the number of single family permits, which dropped from 18 to 16.

Women's roles in farming being ignored, officials say

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

The contributions women have made to making the U.S. agriculture system successful are seldom acknowledged, some farm women say.

Despite the fact that they've worked hand in hand, if not side by side, with their husbands, fathers and brothers, the contributions women have made to farming are often ignored, they say. Instead, it's images of men driving tractors and tending livestock that dominate the pictures of farming that appear in movies and advertising.

But farming has never been solely a male domain and it is becoming even less so, according to a local agriculture spokeswoman.

JEAN IBENDAHL, president elect of Illinois Women for Agriculture and former vice president of American Agri-Women, says that changes in the agriculture system, especially the farm crisis, have prodded women to the forefront of the agriculture system.

Women farmers and farm wives have taken it upon themselves to voice the concerns of farmers to governmental leaders, she said. They have also mounted an education campaign in schools and urban areas to combat ignorance about the part farmers play in the economy.

Lack of understanding of the farm system on the part of most consumers has made the general public apathetic about farmer's problems, Ibendahl said.

"NOW THEY'RE all hearing about the farm crisis. Farmers are in trouble but they don't know why they're in trouble," she said.

Pam Fritsche said the Jackson County Farm Bureau Women's Committee, which she chairs, is doing its part to fill county residents in on the role agriculture plays in the region's economy.

The committee sponsors programs at schools to teach students about the relationship between farmers and consumers.

Ibendahl said that in general women's contributions to making the U.S. farm system the world's best has been overlooked. She said this is in part because "nobody knows unless they live through it."

IBENDAHL AND her husband, Calvin, donated all but four acres of their 680-acre farm, located a few miles south of Tamaroa, to SIU-C in April 1985, just after they retired.

Illinois Women for Agriculture is part of American Agri-Women. Both groups were formed in 1974. The national group has 3,600 members and the state group has 200 members. The Jackson County Farm Bureau Women's Committee has 13 members.

Ibendahl said when the Illinois group began its education campaign in spring 1981, schools "were just begging for information" about the links between farming and the nation's economy.

SHE SAID this craving for information was partially sparked by a state law that requires high schools to include information about agri-economics in their consumer education courses.

The state group put together information kits and sent them to education teachers across the state.

Ibendahl said requests for the kits eventually came from 36 states, Canada and West Africa. When the group stopped putting together the kits in 1984 they had mailed 1,800 kits, but she said she received requests for them until late in 1985.

FOLLOWING THE success of the Illinois education campaign, Ibendahl was one of 14 people appointed to a committee by former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Brock to develop a plan to teach agriculture economics in schools across the nation.

She said the committee put together a resource guide listing sources of information on agriculture and encouraged textbook publishers to include information about the farm sector in their publications.

Ibendahl said that like many other farm women she first became an active farm advocate in the mid-1970's, when farmers were staging meat sale boycotts because they were losing money on livestock production.

"WE HEARD those women on television saying they didn't care what the farmer got, they just wanted their meat to be cheaper," she said. "Most farm women saw red when they heard that."

Ibendahl joined a group of farm women picketing the Chicago Board of Trade as a counter protest to consumers protesting high meat prices.

Since that time, she has served as president of Illinois Women for Agriculture for three years and will again claim that position next year. She has also served as vice president of American Agri-Women and is now chairwoman of its "Ag in the Classroom" project, which is geared toward getting schools to discuss the role farming plays in supporting the nation.

Ibendahl has also appeared on the Phil Donahue Show during a segment about farm wives.

SHE SAID that women have taken the initiative in education and lobbying for farmers in recent years because the men were in the fields or otherwise too busy working to voice their concerns.

"Women found they were going to have to organize in order to be heard and in order to accomplish anything," she said.

These days, she said, politicians tell farm spokeswoman that they are easier to deal with than their male counterparts because they're more organized.

Fritsche, who has been with the county group for four years, said she agrees that women are taking the lead in some areas of the agriculture sector, especially education. Just why women are forging ahead may be because it's more accepted now than it used to be, she said.

Meese to press Mexico on murdered drug agent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Edwin Meese said Thursday he will visit Mexico next month and press for information on Mexican effort to prosecute those involved in the murder of a U.S. drug agent there and the torture of another.

At a news conference Meese said he would travel to Mexico Oct. 8 to 10 at the invitation of Mexican Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez to discuss drug trafficking in Latin America. Representatives of Peru and Columbia also will take part in the meeting, he said.

Meese said he intends to take up the case of Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar, who was brutally tortured and murdered more than 19 months ago, as well as the recent abduction and torture of DEA agent Victor Cortez Jr.

"It is my understanding that in both cases, the investigative and prosecutive activities go forward," Meese said. "This is a topic that I intend to take up and get a progress report on when I go to Mexico next month. And we have asked that at that time we be brought up to date."

The Camarena case has long frustrated U.S. officials and there have been reports that the Mexican investigation into Cortez's abduction has stalled. American authorities arrested a Mexican law enforcement official in California earlier this week as a material witness in Camarena's slaying.

Cortez also could be asked for his personal testimony in the case, he said.

flexibility and cardiovascular endurance.

White said these measurements serve as a basis for designing an exercise program that fits the person's interests and capabilities.

After people have been on their exercise program for six to eight weeks, White conducts a follow-up fitness assessment to see if their fitness levels have improved.

White recommends a three-month training period in which the person gradually increases the intensity, frequency, duration and type of exercise. For example, in the first month a participant will exercise three times each week and by the third month he or she will be exercising four or five times each week.

The gradual progression is important to prevent overtraining which can lead to injuries, said White.

According to White, people can maintain their fitness level by exercising three times a week, to improve however, a person should exercise at least four times a week, she said.

The sports program offers computerized nutritional analysis for one-day's food intake. The analysis will find the nutrient and calorie content of the diet and make recommendations for improvement.

In addition to fitness and nutritional assessments, White, who has a master's degree in physical education, and is a athletic trainer certified by the National Athletic Trainers Association, said the center also offers information about care and prevention of sports-related injuries.

The program is available at no cost to all full-time and part-time students, and Rec Center pass holders.

People who are interested in a fitness assessment may schedule a one-hour appointment by calling 453-3020.

Illich to trace word origins

Austrian-born author Ivan Illich will speak Sunday about the history of social concepts in the modern world.

Illich will speak Sunday at 7:30 p.m. at the Newman Center, 715 S. Washington Ave.

Illich will attempt to "unmask concepts that are dressed up in fraudulent costumes" by tracing the origins of words and social concepts, says Lee Hoinacki, a friend and colleague of Illich.

Sex is a concept that Illich may address. He had addressed the concept of sex in his book, "Gender."

Illich, an expert in international relations, became interested in social concepts while working as a Catholic priest in an Irish-Puerto Rican neighborhood in New York City. He later served as vice-rector of the Catholic University of Puerto Rico.

GPSC changes guidelines for funding seminar travel

By Brett Yates
Staff Writer

Graduate students who attend seminars can now receive reimbursements of $50 from the Graduate and Professional Student Council — regardless of whether they give a presentation.

Former guidelines defined ranges of funding for those who gave presentations at events and those who did not.

The GPSC enacted the new professional development funding guidelines Wednesday night.

NEW GUIDELINES require that no distinction be made between students who give presentations and those who do not, that students attending a seminar be reimbursed for lodging and meals, and that students must have paid activity fees for the semester in which they attend a seminar.

Students may continue to apply more than once for professional development funds, but can receive only $50 from the council each fiscal year. The fiscal year begins July 1 and ends June 30 of the next year.

A student who receives $35 from the council to attend an event can receive only $15 for his or her next funding request. Students who receive a $50 reimbursement on their first fund request would not be eligible for more funds in that fiscal year.

UNDER THE old guidelines, a student attending a seminar without presenting a paper would have received a maximum of $15 for registration and $10 for travel expenses for distances up to 1,000 miles.

A student attending the same seminar who presented a paper would have received a maximum of $25 for registration and $10 for travel expenses for distances up to 1,000 miles.

Former guidelines also defined separate funding levels for students who traveled between 2,000 and 3,000 miles to attend a seminar.

A STUDENT who gave a presentation would have received a maximum of $15 for registration and $37.50 for travel expenses for distances between 2,000 and 3,000 miles.

A student attending the same seminar who did not present a paper would have received a maximum of $5 for registration and $12.50 for travel expenses for distances between 2,000 and 3,000 miles.

The new guidelines stipulate that students are not to be reimbursed for expenses assumed by University sources.

TO BE reimbursed, students must show to the GPSC office manager, within 10 days following the event they attended, all registration, lodging, meal and travel receipts, and a letter from their department chair or faculty adviser.

Students applying for funding must present receipts, or photocopies of the receipts, showing specific amounts of expenditures.

The council's Professional Development Fund, which is $8,000, is used to fund graduate students to attend seminars, exhibits, shows, recitals or other events. No decision was made Wednesday to increase the fund.

Martial arts club to offer classes for youth

The University Martial Arts Club, in cooperation with Recreational Sports' Family Programs, is supervising a youth martial arts class.

The group meets Saturdays and Sundays through Nov. 16. Three skill levels are available.

Beginners meet noon to 2 p.m. in SRC Martial Arts Room; intermediates meet noon to 2 p.m. in Rec Center multi-purpose room; and advanced participants meet 2 to 4 p.m. in Rec Center multi-purpose room.

Formalized instruction is provided in Tae Kwon Do. The fees are $10 for children of eligible Rec Center users and $15 for children of non-eligible Rec Center users.

Film director admonishes U.S. policy on Nicaragua

By Mary Wisniewski
Entertainment Editor

Speaking about her video tapes on Nicaraguan homelife, film critic and director Julia Lesage told an audience in the Student Center Thursday that in order to really see a revolution, one must see inside a nation's homes.

"The domestic situation has always been most interesting to me," said Lesage, who led a discussion on post-revolutionary Nicaragua between showings of her video tapes "Home Life" and "Las Nicas." The tapes were shot in Nicaragua—"Las Nicas" in 1981 and "Home Life" in 1984.

Lesage, co-founder and editor of Jump Cut magazine, said she lived in Nicaragua for six months during 1981 and returned in 1984 with a Washington based language program.

The video tapes support the Sandinista revolution. "When you see two to three funerals a day," Lesage said, "you start resenting the money our government is sending to counter-revolutionary killers."

"The Contras know they can't win," said Lesage, speaking of the forces fighting the current Sandinista government in Nicaragua. "In a sense, we are paying Contras to die."

Lesage says she believes that the United States supports the Contras, citing the $100 million aid package approved by Congress.

"The U.S. must deal with its loss of empire," Lesage said. "It wants Central America in its backpocket," she said.

The video tapes contain extensive conversations with Nicaraguan women and reports of the abuse women have received at the hands of both the Contras and the pre-revolution La Guardia. When an audience member asked why the Contras have not been successful in turning the Nicaraguans against the Sandinistas, Lesage said that people are not convinced by torture.

"Hearts and minds are controlled by notions of freedom, by the dream of self-government," Lesage said.

Lesage said that her video tapes about Nicaragua are different from other media portrayals because her work represents the poor.

"These are films about ordinary people," Lesage said. She said she spent the summer of 1984 with a typical Nicaraguan family in a tin-covered hut. "I don't think our government or the news media looks at people like this as representative of the nation."

But the people are paying in blood to support the Sandinista government and they think the government is helping them, said Lesage.

"The idea of poor people in command of their country is a big leap for Americans intellectually and emotionally," said Lesage.

Tennessee uranium plant 'toxic nightmare,' rep. says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House subcommittee chairman charged Thursday that a uranium fuel plant in Tennessee is a "toxic nightmare, oozing radioactive contamination" and federal regulators have not properly addressed the problem.

The accusations by Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., were strongly disrupted by the president of Nuclear Fuel Services, which runs the Erwin, Tenn., plant, and by the chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

"Internal (NRC) documents and the public record show that NFS Erwin is the most dangerous uranium fuel production plant that the NRC licenses," Markey said in an opening hearing on the Erwin plant by his House energy conservation and power panel.

"The NFS plant is a toxic nightmare, oozing radioactive contamination into work areas, into lunchrooms and other non-working areas and onto the soil outside work buildings," he said.

The Massachusetts

Democrat also charged that "NRC's attention to NFS has been sadly lacking."

NFS President Charles Taylor called Markey's accusations "extravagant" and "frightening" and said they were based on "unfounded" claims by the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union, which represents workers at the plant.

"The fact is NFS's plant in Erwin is one of the safest and least hazardous nuclear plants in the nation," Taylor said in a statement.

NRC Chairman Lando Zech Jr. said there is "plenty of room for improvement" at the plant but "It meets our regulations and the plant is operating in a responsible manner."

Zech termed Markey's criticism of the NRC "absolutely wrong," explaining, "We give that site more oversight than any other fuel-cycle facility we monitor."

The eastern Tennessee plant, which has operated since 1957, is the sole supplier of finished uranium fuel for the Navy's nuclear fleet of more than 100 ships and submarines.

Union officials at the plant allege problems concerning health and safety first appeared in 1979, then improved but reappeared in 1983 and lasted until workers went on strike in May 1985.

Lonnie Tolley, president of union Local 3-677, told the panel that since workers returned to the job in April, "We found that the health and safety problems were worse than before the strike."

Markey criticized company claims that information about its fund to decommission the plant is private. He also asked why the NRC has yet to implement additional emergency planning — recommended four years ago — at the facility, and what the NRC is doing to probe union charges that workers at Erwin suffered kidney damage, a symptom of uranium's chemical toxicity.

"I recognize the strategic significance of the NFS plant," Markey said. "But national security cannot be used to evade obligations to protect workers."

Soviet missiles fail, Pentagon says

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Follow-up versions of the Soviet SS-18, the world's biggest continent-spanning nuclear weapon, exploded in midair during test flights in April and August, a Pentagon official said Thursday.

U.S. intelligence officials believe the explosion last month occurred during the separation of the missile's first and second stages, said the official, who is familiar with U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons programs.

In the April test, the rocket exploded shortly after it was launched from its silo, the official said, speaking on condition he not be identified.

But the official contradicted a report in the New York Times, which first disclosed the incident, saying the explosions do not represent a major setback in the Soviet development of a new version for the SS-18.

"The fact that it failed doesn't mean anything," he said. "If the next six tests also fail, then they have a problem. It's too early to tell."

The United States normally tests a new missile 20 times before it is certified as ready and the official said the Soviets have a comparable program.

The official also said, "The new version of the SS-18 is probably a new missile that probably is in violation of SALT 2," not merely a modernized older missile.

The unratified 1979 SALT 2 accord, which the Reagan administration abandoned in May, permits the development of only one intercontinental ballistic missile and the Soviets already have developed two more ICBMs.

But, the official said, "They'll say it's just an SS-18. The Russians do what they do best — bend the treaty and make it appear as if they are not violating it."

The one new ICBM coming into the U.S. arsenal is the 10-warhead MX. The United States would not violate the ICBM provisions of the treaty until it brings out the single-warhead Midgetman missile, now in development.

The SS-18 can be armed with up to 14 independent nuclear warheads and at nearly half a million pounds, it is the biggest, deadliest weapon in the world. There are 310 of them deployed in land-based silos, U.S. military experts say.

It also is one of the most accurate Soviet missiles, with the probability its separately aimed warheads would miss their targets by a mere 600 yards. The missile has a range of 7,500 miles.

A resolution asking the City of Carbondale to repair public sidewalks along University and South Illinois avenues passed with one senator dissenting. The resolution requests that, in addition to repairs, more wheelchair access curbs be built.

The senate also elected a chairperson pro-tempore and selected members to serve on committees.

Newly-seated East Side Senator Jim Williams defeated West Side Senator Thea Rubin in an election to chose a chairperson pro-tempore.

"It was a rough night," said John Attard, vice president of the USO.

The next meeting of the USO Student Senate will be Oct. 1 in the Student Center Ballroom B. Senate sessions begin at 7 p.m.

University to assume costs incurred from plane wreck

By Gael Carnes
Student Writer

The University will pay for repairs to a plane, piloted by student Charles McMannis, that was forced to land on a farm just east of Du Quoin Sunday.

State Police said McMannis developed engine trouble while flying over a farm owned by Leona Schaefer and made an emergency landing in a plowed field. After rolling about 100 feet down the field the plane flipped upside down. McMannis was not injured but the plane was damaged.

Ron Kelly, director of the Air Institute and Service, said the University was insured for liability only. SIU-C owns 16 Cessna 150 and 152s, three Cessna 172s and Cessna RGs. All but three or four of the planes are insured for property damage. Kelly said that because of their age, some planes are insured for liability only.

The plane damaged Sunday was a 1980 Cessna 52. The plane's market value is approximately $15,000. Kelly said the premium for replacement insurance, with a $2,000 deductible, is $9,000 to $10,000 a year.

According to Kelly, in the case of the plane that went down Sunday, the premium wasn't worth it. The damage was minimal: a piece of tail, the bracing and wing-tips. Kelly said the plane can be put together for less than the deductible.

"The University carries renter-pilot insurance on all of its planes," said Kelly. "It isn't that common. A lot of aviation insurance says in small print that the pilot is responsible for any insurance even covers the two or three people that might ride in the plane."

He added that it's not uncommon for a university with an aviation program to own its planes and to rent them out. The only exception to the liability insurance carried by the University on its renter-pilots would be if the pilot was found to be guilty of recklessness. Kelly cited as an example the practice of "buzzing" or flying upside down.

"Once the damages to property and passengers had been paid in a case where the pilot was responsible, the insurance company would probably sue the pilot for those costs," he said.

Sunday's accident happened at a time when the University has a shortage of planes for training. Terry Wendling, chief flight instructor, said of the 338 students enrolled in the Flight School, 240 are in classes that require a plane.

Wendling said that computer dispatching insures an even distribution of old and new aircraft. In addition, instructors are told to maintain strict schedules six days a week. Sundays are the only free days for licensed and non-licensed pilots.

He said the University is in the process of purchasing more second-hand planes to meet the increased enrollment, since there are no new training planes being built in the U.S.

Logan offers home maintenance course

The Division of Adult and Continuing Education at John A. Logan College will offer a new fall semester course, "Do-It-Yourself Home Maintenance."

Individuals who want to learn how to recognize and isolate home problems and to make safe and simple repairs may be interested in enrolling in the 10-session course. The class meets 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays, beginning Sept. 23, in Room 43 at John A. Logan.

Designed to address the most common home maintenance problems, the course will cover carpentry, electricity, plumbing, heating, insulation, and preventative maintenance, as well as the use of basic tools.

For information contact the Continuing Education Division at John A. Logan College, Carterville, or call 549-7335, 542-8612, 985-3741, 937-3438 or 1-800-851-4720.

Civil war hinders relief in starving south Sudan

BOMA, Sudan (UPI) — The chatter of machine guns from the siege of nearby Kapoeta echoes around the tented rebel bush camp. Disciplined uniformed recruits train with well-oiled Soviet assault rifles, chanting slogans of a war that is plunging some 2 million of their countrymen into famine.

But rebel leader Col. John Garang is unapologetic. Garang speaks with the cool assurance of a man who knows he holds the whip hand in a 3-year-old civil war that is crippling the already sick Sudanese economy and straining the military capabilities of bankrupt Khartoum.

The war has wrecked food growing and distribution. But Garang, head of the Christian-led Sudanese People's Liberation Army, says blame for the growing famine lies with Western relief agencies who, while aspiring to alleviate it, are tied into Khartoum-approved programs.

"We have not cut off relief supplies. It is that relief supplies have never come," Garang argues from his canvas chair in the camp between Boma and Kapoeta in the rebel-held southern Sudan, 600 miles southeast of Khartoum.

His rebel troops, demanding more autonomy for the south, have isolated and surrounded the nine government garrisons that hold on in the major towns of southern Sudan.

Garang lacks the heavy weapons to crush them. But starving out the soldiers of the Arab-speaking, mostly Moslem north is a weapon he will not willingly surrender.

French vow to answer attacks

PARIS (UPI) — Prime Minister Jacques Chirac vowed Thursday to launch a "crushing" response against the matermind of a 10-day bombing wave that has killed eight people, wounded more than 160 and terrorized Paris.

Police investigating the deadliest of five bombings at the discount Tati clothing store on the Left Bank Wednesday, said two Lebanese guerrillas were suspected of throwing an explosive device from a black BMW automobile.

The bomb, the most powerful in the chain of explosions that began Sept. 8 at city hall, killed five people and wounded 52, four of whom were in critical condition Thursday.

In another attack Thursday against a French target, the military attache at the French Embassy in the mostly Christian eastern sector of Beirut was assassinated as he entered the building.

In London, a caller saying he was from the "Anti-Imperialist International Brigade" claimed responsibility for the assassination in Beirut and warned of more attacks against French targets until France frees Arabs jailed on terrorism charges.

The anti-terrorist branch of Scotland Yard said it has heard of the group but refused further comment.

"All French diplomats will be the targets of our revolutionaries until Georges Ibrahim Abdallah and other comrades will be released from French jails," said the male, speaking with an indistinct foreign accent, in a call to a Western news agency's London bureau.

"The fate of (French President Francois) Mitterrand and Chirac will be the same as the fate of the French Military attache that was shot down by our revolutionaries today in east Beirut," he said.

A spokesman for Chirac said the government believes there is a link between the Paris bombings and attacks on French military personnel in Lebanon, but did not elaborate.

An Arab group calling itself the Committee of Solidarity with Arab and Middle Eastern Political Prisoners has claimed responsibility for 11 bomb blasts in Paris since December killing 10 people and wounding 248.

The group warned in a statement Wednesday in Beirut it would extend its terror campaign to the United States, saying in a typewritten statement:

"We will meet soon your venerable state. We will get acquainted with your cities, skyscrapers and Statue of Liberty. American streets will show us soon."

At a city hall news conference Thursday, Chirac called on Parisians to remain calm and vigilant against the threat of terrorism that has already prompted security measures such as mandatory entry visas for non-European foreigners and the stationing of hundreds of extra police at public places.

Report claims famine funds misdirected

NEW YORK (UPI) — The money Americans contributed to assist Ethiopian famine victims was diverted by local politicians who used it to lure thousands of starving people into slave labor camps with promises of free food, a published report said Thursday.

Dr. Rony Brauman, a 36-year-old physician who directs the French group, "Doctors without Borders," said in the October issue of Reader's Digest that the food and medicine purchased with American aid did save some lives.

But, he said, the death toll is so high in the slave labor camps that there is good reason to question whether further contributions to the Ethiopian famine victims is moral.

"I am convinced that it is morally wrong for us to assist (the country's leaders) ... in carrying out this murderous policy," the physician said.

Brauman's group had provided medical aid to starving Ethiopians until his comments angered Ethiopian leaders. The group was eventually ordered to leave the country.

The doctor said the nation is fighting a war with guerrillas in its northeast section. Part of its strategy in winning the battle, he said, is to resettle hundreds of thousands of rebel sympathizers in the southwest, where they can no longer assist the rebels.

To do this, he said, the government has established emergency food centers.

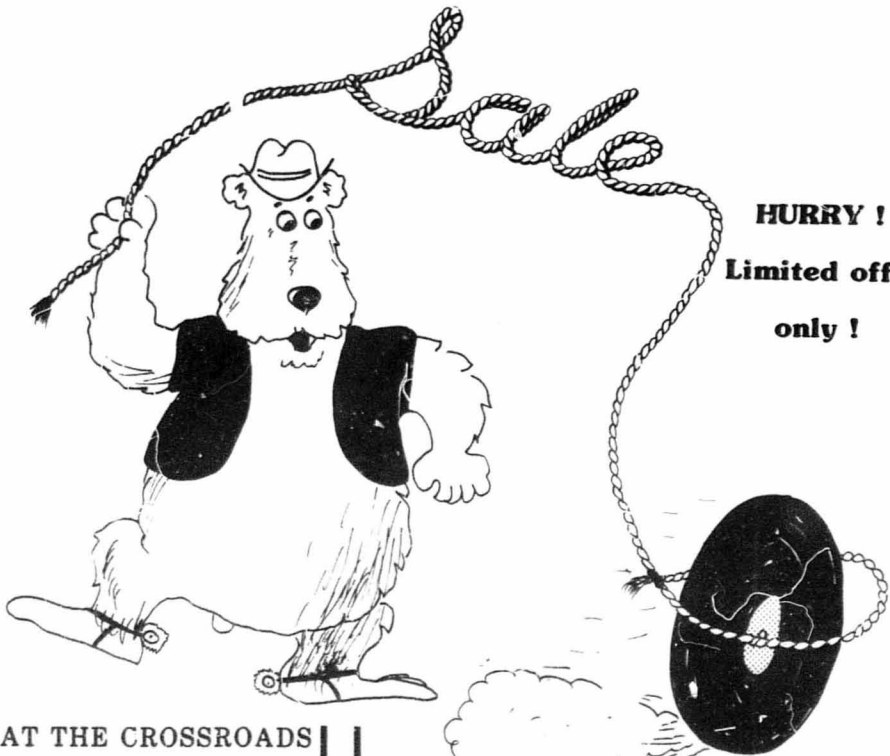

As the starving masses go to the center, he said, they are fed, receive medical aid, and are then sent to slave labor camps.

In many cases the people are sent to work on coffee plantations, he said. Coffee provides the nation with two-thirds of its hard currency.

So far, Brauman said, 100,000 people have died in the camps.

The doctor said government leader Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam hid the famine from the world for two years and only made it public when he realized it could be used to his advantage.

Chinese festival scheduled

By Brett Yates
Staff Writer

Each September Chinese people throughout the world celebrate the Moon Cake Festival. The event celebrates the Chinese triumph over the Mongols in the 14th century.

The Chinese Student Association will celebrate the Moon Cake Festival at the campus boat docks from 7 to 11 p.m. Saturday. Sauté coupons will cost $4 for members of the CSA, and $5 for non-members. There are five coupons worth four sautes. There will also be moon cakes, rice cakes and orange drink served.

In the first half of the 14th century China was a part of the vast Mongolian Empire, a dominion which included Russia and most of Asia. Chu Yuan-chang, a commoner and former monk, led the rebellion against the Mongols.

According to Lee Wee Keng, vice president of the campus Chinese Student Association, one of the ways Chinese rebels communicated with one another was through secret messages hidden in moon cakes. Moon cakes are small pastries filled with a mixture of bean and other ingredients. They are traditionally associated with the Chinese harvest festival.

Movie Guide

Aliens - (Saluki, R) Suspensful though often reduntantly violent sequel to "Alien." Sigourney Weaver, who battled the title monsters in the first film, returns with a crew of marines to face the aliens again. "Aliens" is one of the first science-fiction movies to give leadership status to female characters.

Crocodile Dundee (Saturday at 7:15 only; Fox Eastgate, PG-13) Comedy about a female New York reporter who interviews a crocodile fighter in the Australian outback. To promote the story, the reporter takes the Australian to New York where he gets his first taste of civilization.

Desert Hearts - (University 4, R) Intelligent brilliantly acted movie about lonesome cowgirls, smoky casinos and finding someone who matters, the movie concerns a lesbian relationship between a professor who falls in love with a Nevada sculptor 10 years her junior. Though the subject matter may seem revolutionary, "Desert Hearts" is just an old-fashioned love story.

Ferris Bueller's Day Off - (Fox Eastgate, PG-13) An extraordinary young man cuts school and heads for downtown Chicago in his father's Ferrari.

The Fly - (University 4, R) Called the "gross-out movie of the year" by Newsweek magazine, "The Fly" is based on a 1958 movie of the same title in which a scientist experimenting with matter transmission accidentally mingles his genes with those of a housefly. Jeff Goldblum and Geena Davis star.

Karate Kid II - (Liberty, PG) Noriyuki Morita, the karate master of the first "Karate Kid," must return to Japan for his father's funeral. Accompanied by the kid, Ralph Macchio, they soon run into troublesome family history.

Making Contact - (Fox Eastgate, PG) A young boy becomes the only contact with an outer space visitor.

Nothing in Common - (Saluki, PG) Tom Hanks stars as an advertising man who tries to get to know his lonely-bitter father, played by Jackie Gleason. The film attempts both comedy and melodrama.

Ran - (Varsity, R) Highly-acclaimed Japanese film sets Shakespeare's "King Lear" in the culture of the Samurai warrior.

Room With a View - (Varsity) This masterful film, based on an E. M. Forster novel, tells the story of a genteel young English woman who learns how to admit to her own passions. The movie is really about the relationship between those who have the view to beauty and those who need it.

Ruthless People - (Varsity, R) A vicious comedy that does a retake on the O'Henry story, "Ransom of Red Chief." A couple of crooks kidnap a nagging wife, only to discover that her husband doesn't want her back. Bette Midler and Danny DeVito star.

Stand By Me - (University 4, R) In a movie based on a Stephen King story, four Oregon 12-year-olds during the summer of 1959 go hunting for the body of a dead boy. One of director Rob Reiner's best films.

Top Gun - (Fox Eastgate, PG) Navy Cadet Tom Cruise zooms around in an F-14 Tomcat jet between passes at female flight instructor Kelly McGillis. This movie knows more about planes than it does about love, but on planes rests its enormous popularity.

Vendetta - (University 4, R) When her sister dies in prison, a young woman has herself jailed in order to investigate the death from the inside.

Memorial set for McCalla

Memorial services will be Saturday for Thomas M. McCalla Jr., associate professor of electrical engineering, who died Tuesday in Carbondale.

The services will be at 2:30 p.m. at Evangelical Presbyterian Church, Christian Missions, 624 N. Oakland Ave.

Memorials can be made to the Evangelical Presbyterian Church or to the American Cancer Society.

McCalla, 52, joined SIU-C's faculty in 1969 as an assistant professor and was promoted to associate professor in 1973.

McCalla received a bachelor's degree from the University of Nebraska at Lincoln in 1956, a master's degree from New Mexico State University at Las Cruces in 1965 and a doctorate in systems engineering from Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, in 1969.

Before joining SIU-C, McCalla was an electronic engineer at White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico.

He was a member of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers, the American Society for Engineering Education and the Mathematical Association of America. He was active in several Christian fellowships.

Born May 1, 1934, in Corinth, Miss., he was the son of Thomas M. and Virginia Key McCalla Sr.

He married Dora Stamm on May 26, 1963, at Las Cruces, N.M. She survives.

Other survivors include his parents; three brothers, Robert K. McCalla of New Orleans, La., David L. McCalla of Waverly, Neb. and William M. McCalla of Los Alamos, N.M.; and one sister, Ann Robison of Lincoln, Neb.

if the Salukis put as many points on the board this week as they did in a 31-0 win over Murray State last week.

DEFENSIVELY. Dorr has to deal with a banged up Saluki defensive backfield, which could spell trouble when facing someone with Payton's passing abilities.

"We've been unable to practice this week with any real physical effort and it's really taken the high tempo away," Dorr said.

Regulars Tim Spencer and Jay Hurdle are both out for at least this week, which has necessitated moving Ron Page to strong safety, a position he hasn't played since the season opener. Bobby McNabb has been moved to free safety from his usual strong safety position. Mc-Nabb missed Monday's practice and was only able to go half a day Tuesday.

LINEBACKER Johnny Edwards, the team's leading tackler, also missed some practice this week with injuries, as did defensive end Anthony "Popeye" Woods, and defensive backups J.P. Watters and Rob Mason. Desmond Woods, a senior outside linebacker, dislocated a finger and had surgery Monday morning. He is expected to miss four to six weeks.

On the offense, Bruce Phibbs missed the week's first practices, as did Bobby Sloan. Return man Ed Fashaw will not see action this week, and Sloan will be replaced by Nate McGhee.

"It's kind of like studying the wrong chapter for a test or showing up in the wrong classroom," Dorr said. "So many injuries are really difficult to work your way around."

DORR SAID a major factor of the Salukis' success would be the defensive play calling of Edwards and McNabb.

"Payton is so good at reading defenses and calling audibles," Dorr said. "They've (Edwards and McNabb) watched a lot of film and it'll be a critical part of the game."

Dorr said the pass rush would probably emerge as the single most important factor in the game.

"If our down four can get a good rush and keep Payton confused, we'll have a good day," Dorr said.

win over Northern Michigan last week. Pitts is the Gateway's leading rusher with a 91.5 yards per game average.

James Marable filled in well for Pitts against Northern Michigan, collecting 107 yards rushing and 80 more in pass receptions. Marable also leads the conference in kickoff returns (35.6 yards per return average) and one return for a touchdown and scoring with four touchdowns.

Slotback Calvin Pierce leads the Gateway in receptions with 16, while All-America wide receiver Roy Banks, one of the conference's top prospects, leads in reception yardage with 269 and touchdowns with three.

Most of Gateway collide Saturday

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Two Gateway Conference matchups highlight the league schedule this weekend, while two other members square off in nonconference contests.

Indiana State (1-0, 2-0) will travel to Iowa State (0-1) to take on the I-A Cyclones of the Big Eight Conference.

Last week, the Sycamores downed Southwest Missouri 14-10 to take an early lead in the Gateway title race while the Cyclones were blown away by cross-state rival Iowa, 43-7. The Sycamores will try to snap a six-game road losing streak before traveling to their next three games (Kansas, Ball State and SIU).

Illinois State (1-1, 1-1), will play host to Wayne State (1-1). The Redbirds split a pair of Gateway games this season, winning 23-20 over Eastern Illinois and losing 17-16 to Southwest Missouri. Wayne State came back strong after a season-opening loss to shutout Slipperry Rock, 28-0.

Western Illinois (0-0, 1-1) will open its Gateway schedule at Southwest Missouri (1-1, 1-1). Last week, the Leathernecks blanked Mankato State 17-0 to rebound from a 35-7 trouncing applied by Kansas State.

The Bears played two close conference games this season, losing 14-10 to Indiana State last week and beating Illinois State 17-16 in a comeback thriller in their season opener.

Northern Iowa, favored in the preseason to win the Gateway title, will rest this weekend after tying Mankato State and downing Kansas State.

Panthers' 3-4 alignment ranks last in the conference in total defense (335.3 yards per game), last in scoring defense (25 points per game) and last in pass defense (223 yards per game). Opponents have ground out an average gain of 4.9 yards per play.

But Molde said that although depth is the biggest problem on defense (with just six returning seniors in the two-deep lineup), he thinks his defense has played pretty well and will play better as the season progresses.

"We've been flat-out too inconsistent," Molde said. "We've given up too many big plays, and you can't afford to do that with a Southern Illinois or Gateway team."

THE FRONT THREE on that 3-4 defensive scheme weigh in at a light 240, 240 and 225 pounds. Stacked up against the size of the Saluki offensive line (averaging 268 pounds), the Panthers' front-line defense could be in for a long, hard day.

One thing Eastern does have going for it is a lack of any major injuries, something that has continually set back the Salukis this season.

MOLDE SAID Charleston had received one inch of rain Wednesday night and added that if the sun didn't come out on Friday or Saturday afternoon, the playing field would be "pretty slick."

"A slick field would have to favor SIU," Molde said.

Harriers to run for roses at 14-team Kentucky event

By M. J. Starshak
Staff Writer

Lexington, Ky., usually stands for horse racing, but Saturday morning, men's cross country will be the featured event.

The Saluki harriers will compete with 14 teams in the Kentucky Invitational. The course, actually laid out on a horse farm, will be demanding. Saluki's coach Bill Corneli said, "The hills are not steep but long and gradual, he said, so the climb can really take it out of the runners."

"We'll find out what we're made of in this meet," Corneli said.

West Virginia, Edinboro State, Ohio State, and East Tennessee State finished in the top five in last year's race. West Virginia won the race with 46 points, while the Salukis finished in 11th place.

Of the top 10 teams in the 1985 race, seven will return to compete in Lexington this year.

No. 1 Saluki Andrew Pettigrew was ineligible to run at last year's invitational, but will participate in the race Saturday at 10 a.m.

Pettigrew set a course record last week against the Kansas Jayhawks. The junior from Maidenhead, England, finished just ahead of teammate David Lamont.

Lamont, the senior team captain, notched a first place finish for the Salukis in the 1985 Kentucky Invitational.

Corneli described Lamont and Pettigrew as strong runners, but each has a different style of racing.

"Pettigrew is more speed-oriented. David Lamont has more endurance," said Corneli. "In any of these races, you'll find that David Lamont is going to be setting the pace trying to get away from Pettigrew."

Lamont did get away from his teammate at the Kansas race, but Pettigrew managed to outkick him at the end, said Corneli.

Brian Gottwalt, a native of Rock Island, will compete for the first time for the Salukis this weekend.

Men ruggers to play St. Louis

SIUC men's rugby club members think the team has overcome first-game jitters and should play well in the home opener this weekend.

The ruggers will play the St. Louis Black Sheep at 1 p.m. Saturday behind Abe Martin Field.

"This (SIU) team has a lot of potential," club president David Graham said. "We have a tough schedule, but I think this team can have a .500 record."

The team has to improve its ball handling, which may be a problem because of the recent rain, Graham said.

"When the ball gets wet it makes it harder to control because it becomes heavier and slick," Graham said.

The club got off to an 0-1 start this season by losing last weekend to Indiana in Bloomington. Graham said SIUC could have won the match despite the 15-4 outcome.

"We played together well, but we still have to play as more of a team," Graham said.

Indiana started the scoring midway through the first half with a successful try, which is worth four points. They also added the conversion for two points to lead 6-0 until the end of the opening period.

The Salukis came back in the second half as Randy Stroth passed to Derrick Spalt, who scored the try to make it 6-4. Austin Larabe tried to tie the score, but he missed the conversion.

Gridders look to defeat EIU again

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

The Saluki gridders will try to make it three in a row Saturday night when they travel to Charleston to take on the Panthers of Eastern Illinois. The 6:30 p.m. match will be the conference opener for the Salukis.

If they win, the Salukis could join Indiana State and possibly Western Illinois at the top of the conference standings. Western Illinois plays Southwest Missouri State in its conference opener.

EASTERN HAS "been backed into a corner" by its 0-1 conference record, Dorr said, but added that the Panthers have "enough fiber, enough character" to come back and win.

"Their pride is hurt," Dorr said. "They have the incentive of knowing their worst two beatings in each of the last two seasons came at the hands of SIU."

Last season, the Salukis downed EIU 42-13 in a game that Dorr insisted was not a dominating performance by SIU.

"Looking back, I'm not so sure we dominated the game," Dorr said. "We got a quick start and it may have been more a subpar performance on their part than it was a domination on our part."

In '84, the Salukis held off a late Panther charge to win, 49-40.

DORR SAYS things won't be changing much on either side of the ball this week.

"We won't be changing," Dorr said. "It'll be the same on offense, a lot of motion and shifting and different formations."

Dorr said one change could use the talents of two key players — Pat King's passing and Mel Kirksy's soft hands out of the backfield.

After catching seven passes for 78 yards yards against Arkansas State, Kirksy has not caught a single pass. The entire Saluki backfield has been credited with only one catch since that season-opening loss.

DORR ALSO said King's passing could constitute a deep threat.

"King gives us that threat and we'd be silly not to think about it," Dorr said. Last week, King struck three times with TD passes in his first start this season.

Dorr said he'd be surprised

Miscues take toll on Panthers; offense needs to get act together

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Eastern Illinois University may have one of the most explosive offenses in the Gateway Conference, but first-year coach Al Molde still has a few problems to work out of the system.

"At the outset of the season, we felt we had the ingredients for a title-contending team," Molde said. "We've played better in each game that goes by but we still haven't managed to play well as a unit — we just haven't put it together yet."

ONE OF THOSE championship ingredients is senior quarterback Sean Payton, who led the Panthers to the top of the Gateway heap in total offense scoring offense and passing offense last year. But this season has been another story.

Payton has thrown for 812 yards and five touchdowns so far, but has been touched for eight interceptions and a less than 40-percent completion ratio. His passing efficiency rating puts him at sixth in the conference.

"We would like to see fewer interceptions thrown, but eight interceptions is not indicative of Sean's capabilities," Molde said. "A lot of those interceptions are balls that should've been caught, balls that bounced off receivers' hands."

THE PANTHERS' leading ground gainer, DuWayne Pitts, didn't play in EIU's 24-21

Netters among favorites in tourney

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

The Saluki men's tennis team smashes into tournament action as one of four favorites in the Murray State invitational this weekend.

The netters will size up against eight teams, particularly favorites Indiana, Louisville and host Murray State. No Missouri Valley teams entered the event.

Because of the NCAA limitation of 35 matches, all teams must play the fall season as exhibition. But sponsored tournaments, such as one Saturday and Sunday at Murray, Ky., help the International Collegiate Tennis Coaches rate the players and teams in order to hold a tournament separate from the

"The fall also gives coaches an opportunity to experiment with singles and doubles combinations," Saluki Coach Dick LeFevre said.

Had score counted Tuesday, the Salukis would have won 5-4 over Evansville in a practice match.

LeFevre says their performance against the talented Aces gives him optimism for the rest of the season.

In particular, the play of freshman Micky Maulie stood out. The highest-ranked Saluki recruit ever, Maulie swept the No. 3 position Tuesday, pounding Ace Barry Ruback 6-1, 6-2. Maulie teamed with Saluki sophomore Fabiano Ramos to hand defeat to Aces Brian Poynter and David Petrie in No. 1 doubles competition.

LeFevre praised the effort of Maulie and plans to use him at the No. 3 singles position, paired with Ramos for doubles again at Murray State.

The Ramos-Maulie win helped Ramos get sweet revenge on Evansville's Poynter, who clobbered him at the No. 1 singles match, 6-0, 6-1. Ramos will try to improve his record at the No. 2 position this weekend.

Saluki sophomore Jairo Aidana fell in a close match to Petrie, 7-6, 6-4. Aidana paired with Rollie Oliquino as the No. 2 doubles team, but they lost 3-6, 6-4, 7-6 to Ruback and Dick Waterfall.

Aidana will play the No. 1 singles spot and team with Lars Nilsson as the No. 3 doubles in the MSU Invitational.

In No. 4 singles, Saluki sophomore Juan Martinez rallied to beat Matt Fehn, 5-7, 6-4, 6-2. Martinez went on with Nilsson to beat Aces Fehn and Ben Battock 7-6, 6-4 in the third doubles match.

Martinez will stay in the No. 4 slot this weekend and double with Oliquino.

Oliquino, a senior, lost to Waterfall, 6-1, 7-5, and will move from No. 5 to No. 6 in singles at MSU.

In the No. 6 match, Saluki senior Niisson beat Battock 6-4, 7-6 and moves up to No. 5 singles player this weekend.

Women's tennis team expects wins

By Wally Foreman
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's tennis team will compete against Eastern Illinois, Murray State and St. Louis in dual matches Friday and Saturday at the Arena courts.

"I feel we can come away with three victories," Coach Judy Auld said.

But if the rain continues, Auld said the netters will spend a long weekend at the Egyptian Sports Center.

Because the racquet club only has two courts, the Salukis would play until one team wins, rather than playing all nine matches per dual.

The netters lead off against Murray State at 11 a.m. Friday, following with Eastern Illinois at 4 p.m. The Racers and the Panthers edged the Salukis with 5-4 decisions last year.

Although Auld predicts Murray State as the toughest opponent, she said the Salukis probably have more depth than the Racers despite a 1986-87 roster that has no seniors and seven underclassmen.

Gateway Conference foe Eastern Illinois lost the No. 1

Panther, but still is a scrappy team upon which the Salukis will look for revenge.

Saturday at 2 p.m. the Salukis will play St. Louis, which "is in the process of rebuilding," Auld said.

Junior Ellen Moellering, No. 1 Saluki, plays only her second year at that position.

"That's a hard spot because there are no easy matches when you're playing No. 1 — but she's playing well," Auld said.

Dana Cherebetiu, No. 2 singles, needs to work on concentration through the whole match, Auld said.

Freshman Beth Boardman, No. 3 singles, has compiled a 3-2 record in individual tournament action thus far.

Sue Steuby, a junior, plays No. 4 singles and started this season with a 5-2 record.

Julie Burgess, No. 5 singles, and Sherr Knight, No. 6, with 1-4 records have gotten off to a slow start.

Moellering and Boardman at No. 1, Cherebetiu and Burgess at No. 2 and Steuby and Patsy Hoskins at No. 3 will take on doubles chores for the Salukis.

Brda loses seat on road squad

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Saluki kicker John Brda has lost his seat on the traveling squad and will not make this week's trip to Eastern Illinois. Brda has missed all three of his field goal attempts this season (from 27, 45 and 50 yards), including two misses in the Salukis' season-opener at Arkansas State.

Senior placekicker Ron Miller has hit ooth field goal attempts this season, and has nailed down all eight point after attempts.

Saluki coach Ray Dorr added another foot to his kicking arsenal this week with walk-on freshman Steve Wedemeyer of Chesterfield, Mo.

The 6-2, 185-pounder worked out for three days without pads, as NCAA rules require, then suited up Wednesday to boot four kickoffs into the end zone with a hang-time of four seconds per kick.

Wedemeyer was listed on the traveling team as of Thursday afternoon and may possibly see action against Eastern Saturday.

In Saluki injury news, preseason All-America safety Johnny Field may miss the rest of the season.

A bone scan on Wednesday afternoon revealed a chip and ligament damage.
