Allies apply pressure to see Iraqi weapons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The administration acknowledged Wednesday it has plans to resume its air war against Iraq unless Saddam Hussein permits unrestricted U.N. inspections of his weapons of mass destruction.

In a very deliberate and clear message to Iraq issued both by the traveling White House and the Pentagon, the administration said it would send jet fighters back to Saudi Arabia to escort inspection helicopters — and be prepared to attack if any move was made against the inspection flights — if Saddam did not drop obstacles to the U.N. flights.

As part of the cease-fire to the Persian Gulf War, Iraq agreed to identify its nuclear, chemical and biological warfare facilities and stockpiles, and a subsequent U.N. resolution demanded unimpeded access to such plants and the destruction of stockpiles of weaponry.

President Bush — speaking at the Grand Canyon after aides aboard his plane and officials at the Pentagon had drummed out the theme of potential U.S. action — told reporters:

"I'm confident the international community will be with us in whatever is done, but we're not in a threatening mode here — that is not what this is all about."

National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft added that the aircraft would escort inspection helicopters if Iraq balked at their flights and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein consistently has yielded to military pressure in the past and will probably do so again, political science professors said.

The Bush administration announced Wednesday that it plans to wage another air war against Iraq if Saddam does not meet conditions to allow the U.N. to inspect Iraq's nuclear weaponry.

William Turley said the United States' plans to attack military installations that do not allow unrestricted U.N. inspections may cause the Iraqi president to back down where economic pressures alone have not.

President George Bush will probably succeed in getting Saddam to allow unrestricted inspections by threatening to have the U.S. military escort U.N. inspectors who are harassed, Turley said, adding that it is doubtful ground troops would be necessary.

"The threat can be made credible through (helicopters, fighters and bombers) alone," he said.

The economic sanctions imposed against Iraq since its invasion of Kuwait have remained in place except for added, "If he will comply with the U.N. resolutions there won't need to be an execute order."

Bush said he expects Saddam will ultimately permit the U.N. inspections and that there will be no need to resume hostilities.

"I don't think it will come to that," he said. "I think the man will see that we are very serious about this and that he will do what he should have done in the first place."

At the Pentagon, officials said no aircraft were yet on the move to Saudi Arabia, echoing comments that it is up to Iraq whether the United States and its coalition

Most Illinois inmates lacking education—study

By Rob Neff
Police Writer

More than 72 percent of the inmates in Illinois prisons do not have a high school education, according to a study by the Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority.

The study surveyed 693 adults entering state prisons on their educational background, educational experiences and their attitudes toward education.

The average Illinois inmate stayed in school until the end of tenth grade but the average inmate operates on the same level as a beginning eighth grader, according to their performance on the Test of Adult Basic Education, a standardized test on reading and math skill given to every inmate entering the state's prisons.

Almost 30 percent of the 13,800 inmates who took the TABE during 1990 scored below the sixth grade level, and many who dropped out did so before reaching high school.

More than 60 percent of the Hispanic and white dropouts in state prisons and more than 40 percent of the blacks reported they dropped out of school in junior high school or earlier.

Kevin Morison, spokesman for the Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority, said most of the dropout inmates dropped out of school because of violence and delinquency.

"The main reason they dropped out was their own violence and delinquency, and many were expelled," he said. "Some of those and others said the felt they weren't dropouts, but 'pushouts' because the schools didn't want them there."

Kim Kanuer, spokeswoman for the Illinois Board of Education, said the education system tries to make students welcome, not

Iran news agency expects release of British hostage

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — One of the nine remaining Westerners held hostage in Lebanon, probably Briton Jack Mann, will be released by his captors within hours, Iran's official news agency said Wednesday.

The Islamic Republic News Agency quoted a well-informed source in Beirut as saying "a Western hostage will be freed within hours," and added, "British retired Pilot Jack Mann has more chances than the others to regain freedom."

Mann, 77, who had lived in Lebanon for more than 40 years, was kidnapped May 12, 1989. He is among nine Western

New law lets professionals teach high school math, science

By Christiann Baxter
Administration Writer

Professionals in the math and science fields will be able to teach high school classes without going through the entire education curriculum, but officials say the policy may affect the quality of education.

Gov. Jim Edgar approved legislation last week to allow professionals with math and science backgrounds to become certified high school teachers without having to complete the entire education curriculum.

A spokeswoman for the governor said people who decide to teach obviously have a desire to help children, so the problem of having people with no concern for the welfare of the students will not hinder education.

Baltic states readmitted to Olympics

BERLIN (UPI) — The three newly independent Baltic states of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia were readmitted to the Olympic movement Wednesday by unanimous decision of the International Olympic Committee Executive Board.

The decision to admit the three Baltic states remains subject to the approval of the full body of the International Olympic Committee — a move observers said was merely a formality.

"We have waited 50 years for this day," Arturas Povliunas of the Lithuanian Sports Committee said in response to the decision.

Povliunas said he was especially happy the decision had been made in recently unified Berlin.

"This is symbolic for the Olympic movement," he said.

Judge Keba Mbaye, the Senegalese Executive Board member who announced the executive board's unanimous decision, stressed that admission of the Baltics not a question of recognizing new members.

"The three Baltic Olympic Committees were recognized by the IOC prior to their absorption by the Soviet Union in 1940," he said.

Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania participated in the Olympic Games between 1920 and 1936.

Representatives from the Olympic committees of the Baltic states told a news conference they intended to send athletes to the 1992 Winter Games in Albertville, France and to the Summer Games in Barcelona, Spain.

"The four Lithuanian basketball champions from the Seoul Games will now play for the Lithuanian national team," a smiling Povliunas said.

With the admission of the Baltic states, the Olympic Movement now has 170 members, Mbaye said.

Mbaye said the IOC had a further 21 applications from national sports committees for membership in the Olympic movement which would be considered after the Barcelona Games.

Meanwhile, protesters against Berlin's application to host the 2000 games attempted to disrupt the IOC meeting Wednesday evening with a bicycle demonstration in heart of Berlin.

Some 500 protestors from Berlin's left-wing community tried to bicycle to the hotel where the IOC members are staying on Berlin's Friedrich Strasse.

SIUC soccer club strives for goals, hopes for NCAA

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

The SIUC Soccer Club players are not just playing for kicks. They have a goal in mind. Junior John Spytke, club president, said the 22-member group's wish is to have an NCAA team at SIUC.

"We're shooting for the NCAA," Spytke said. "If we want to compete in the NCAA, our team has to gain unity. With a coach and an organized schedule and team, we could be NCAA caliber."

Spytke said Carbondale has the talent for a great team, but the three organizations — the intramural teams, the International soccer club and the soccer club — have to get together.

The Soccer Club was reincarnated three years ago by Alan Harasimowicz, faculty adviser to the Soccer Club.

Harasimowicz said he set up a table in the student center to see what kind of interest the students showed. A lot of students showed interest, so he organized a club.

Harasimowicz said SIUC has enormous potential for a competitive soccer team.

who started playing soccer young when it began to become popular in America," Harasimowicz said. "Now that generation is in college.

"With the combination of good American soccer players and a large percentage of international students, with whom the game is second nature, SIUC has a tremendous resource of players."

Spytke said the SIUC soccer club has a great mixture of cultural talent with players from Yemen, Costa Rica, Russia, Malaysia and Greece.

Federation demands two ousted

NEW YORK (UPI) — U.S. Olympic Committee President Robert Helmick, already stung by controversy over his private business dealings, and another official have been accused by the U.S. Skiing federation for trying to get free ski passes.

According to a report in Wednesday's New York Times, the ski federation called for the resignations of Helmick and Harvey Schiller, the USOC executive director.

The call comes following a charge that Schiller offered to provide additional grant money to the federation in exchange for $3,000 worth of lift tickets and ski equipment for personal use.

A three-page letter from the federation, distributed to members of the USOC's executive board, charged that on several occasions "USOC personnel" had attempted to secure lift

Despite injuries, lady netters anxious to begin

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

Saluki women's tennis players have had a few nagging injuries lately, but the netters are ready to put the injuries behind them and begin competition.

Their season opens Friday against Western Kentucky.

Coach Judy Auld said she has not made a definite lineup because she is not sure of whether top player senior Lori Edwards, who hurt her wrist, will play.

Auld said she anticipates

Edwards, junior Wendy Varnum and junior Lori Gallagher. In 1990, Gallagher set an overall record of 29-7 and was named all-conference in flight four singles.

Auld said she expects these three players to fill the first three positions.

Sophomore Leesa Joseph, freshman Irena Feofanova and junior Karen Wasser will fill the remaining three slots, she said.

Auld said she selected Varnum and Gallagher, who were named flight two doubles all-conference last season, to play the

No. 1 doubles position.

Edwards and Joseph will compete in the No. 2 doubles position and Wasser and Feofanova will play in flight three doubles.

Auld said all of the players are very aggressive and determined players.

"They are ready to start in a competition," she said. "They've been hitting the ball well and have pretty good confidence in their game."

"They need some competition so they can decide what they need to work on in practice," she said.

The lady netters open their season 2 p.m. Friday when they compete against Western Kentucky, which they beat 5-1 in the spring, at the University Courts.

Western Kentucky coach Laura Hudspeth said the Salukis were stronger than her team last season and she again expects them to compete aggressively in Friday's matches.

The Salukis will open conference play against Gateway Conference foes Eastern Illinois at 9 a.m. and Bradley University at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Experienced runners pave the way to victory

By Scott Wuerz
Sports Writer

This may be the year of the Saluki in Gateway Conference cross country.

After several seasons of taking a back seat to other teams, the women's cross country team may finally have the tools it needs to go all the way to the conference title, said head coach Don DeNoon.

"We have maturity and depth we've never had before," DeNoon said. "In the past we've always had one or two good runners, but this year we have five and that's made all the difference."

The SIUC top five — senior Amie Padgett, juniors Leann Conway and Dawn Barefoot, and sophomores Kathy Kershaw and Karen Gardener have all excelled this season," said DeNoon.

Conway, the team's top runner for each of her three seasons at SIUC, has finished among the top four in both of the Saluki's first two meets.

"There's a sense of friendly competition between teammates that wasn't here before. Our runners are all very close to each other and that pushes us to try to keep up with keep up with each other," Conway said.

"In the past I felt as if I was depended on to be right near the top," she said. "But this season I know I just have to run my race because everyone on this team is capable of running right up near the front."

Padgett said she is excited to see the Salukis in a position to do well in her senior season.

"Our goal every season is to shoot for the conference title," Padgett said. "It's important to me personally to do well this season, though, because it's my last chance. I know if we stay healthy we have the potential. The younger runners have jumped right into the swing of things and have made all the difference in the world."

Kershaw is turning heads in her first season on the team, DeNoon said.

"To be successful we knew we'd have to rely on the freshman and sophomores," he said. "But Kathy has really been a surprise. In Edwardsville last weekend she finished 10th out of about 100 runners on a really tough course."

"It's really helped me to be around people like Dawn Barefoot and Leann," Kershaw said. "My strategy is to try to stay up with the experienced runners and see what I can do."

'FACELESS' SPY RETURNS TO GERMANY — Former East German spy chief Markus Wolf, once known as the "man without a face," will return soon to Germany from the Soviet Union to answer charges of espionage, Justice Minister Klaus Kinkel said in an interview published Wednesday. Wolf, 68, likely would be held in protective custody immediately upon his arrival in Germany, Kinkel said in an interview with the newspaper Nordsee Zeitung.

BAKER VISITS SYRIA — Secretary of State James Baker took his Middle East peace mission Wednesday to Syria, a day after he said Washington is offering not to delay beyond January at least part of the $10 billion in loan guarantees that Israel wants. Baker flew to Syria to continue his latest and perhaps most crucial Middle East tour since the end of the Persian Gulf War six months ago. Baker planned to talk with President Hafez Assad, a key figure in the Mideast peace process.

SOUTH AFRICAN POLICE SUSPENDED — At least 24 police officers have been suspended as a result of investigations by a special unit set up nine months ago to probe alleged incidents of political violence, South Africa's Business Day newspaper reported Wednesday. The suspended officers face possible charges ranging from assault to murder, the head of the unit, Maj. Gen. Ronnie van der Westhuizen, told the newspaper in an interview.

WAR SUBSIDES IN CROATIA — The ethnic war in independence-seeking Croatia subsided to scattered clashes Wednesday afternoon as Croatian forces, Serbian rebels and the Serb-dominated Yugoslav military largely observed a "last chance" European Community-brokered cease-fire. More than 60 people reportedly died and at least 160 others were wounded in fierce battles and bombardments that raged during the 24-hour period preceding the noon truce deadline.

ASTRONAUTS FINISH 'SUPER' FLIGHT — The Discovery astronauts, diverted from a Florida landing by cloudy weather, glided instead to a ghostly pre-dawn touchdown in California Wednesday to close out a "super" five-day flight. Foiled in an attempt to make the shuttle program's first nighttime Florida landing, Discovery streaked across the coast of Oregon and down the length of California's San Joaquin Valley before swooping to a high-speed landing on concrete runway 22 at 10:39 p.m.

POVERTY INCREASES IN WESTERN WORLD — Despite a decade of economic growth, poverty and inequality increased in most Western, or First World, democracies during the 1980s, a new report by the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies said. But, the report said, the other nations in the study — Great Britain, Canada, France, Italy, the Netherlands, West Germany and Sweden — did a better job of responding to poverty in their nations with programs aimed at reducing the number of poor.

TEENAGE PREGNANCIES INCREASE — Nearly 25,000 teenagers in Illinois gave birth to children in 1989, a 7.6 percent increase over 1988 that officials blamed on increased sexual activity among youths. The state Public Health Department said 24,923 babies were born to teen mothers in 1989, or 13 percent of all births. Eight percent of the teen births were to unmarried women. State Public Health Director Dr. John Lumpkin called the numbers "disappointing, but not totally unexpected."

NO FREE LUNCH AT RENNELAER — Nearly $29,000 is missing from the Rensselaer Central Middle School funds collected for school lunches, the State Board of Accounts reported Tuesday. The discrepancy occurred in the 1986-87 and 1987-88 school terms, examiners said. The actual revenue collected for lunches was lower each year than the estimated amount, the report said. The report was certified for a criminal investigation and civil collection of missing funds, totaling $28,991.

DE awarded 'equivalent of Pulitzer' in competition

By Natalie Boehme
Special Assignment Writer

The Daily Egyptian is setting the pace for the quality of campus newspapers according to the Associated Collegiate Press, which has awarded the SIUC paper a regional Pacemaker, the college level equivalent of a Pulitzer.

The award was given to 12 campus daily newspapers across the nation last week in a competition that included more than 50 college publications.

The two winning papers for the Midwest region were the DE and The Daily Illini at the University of Illinois in Champaign. The Midwest region included campus papers from Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Montana, Missouri, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

The Pacemaker competition, which began in 1924, is divided into categories of two- and four-year colleges, said Annie Witta, manager of critical services at ACP in Minneapolis, Minn. The competition is judged on campus papers' overall excellence with emphases placed on writing and editing, editorial leadership, quality of design and quality of photographs, she said.

Michael Pelrine, city editor for the Delaware State News in Dover, was one of the judges for the four-year daily regional Pacemakers.

"What I was looking at was whether the paper was appealing with consistent content," Pelrine said. "Of course, the editing and writing had to be of the highest caliber."

The 12 regional winners will compete for national Pacemaker titles in Denver, Colo. on Nov. 2. The Denver Post will provide a panel of judges for the national competition and four to five papers will emerge with a national title, Witta said.

Walter Jaehnic, director of the School of Journalism, said a chance at winning the national award is not what excites him the most about receiving a regional Pacemaker.

"I'm delighted because some of the others (campus papers) listed are first rate journalism schools and this list ranks us with them. It would be nice to win a national Pacemaker, but that's not the point right now — it is the company we're with. Winning would just be icing on the cake."

Programs try to help freshmen stay enrolled

By Katie Fitzgerald
General Assignment Writer

University officials say most freshmen withdraw during the first weeks of the fall semester, but two programs are available to help students get through this "crucial period."

Since the start of fall semester, 104 freshmen have withdrawn from SIUC.

Of the students who have withdrawn, 23 percent indicate personal reasons for leaving the University.

When completing a withdrawal application, students choose from one of 13 reasons for leaving.

The top two reasons students listed this fall are financial and personal reasons.

The first three weeks of the semester are crucial for student retention, said Phil Lyons, acting coordinator of Transitional Programs and First Year Experience.

Withdrawal numbers last year for all students were highest in the first three to four weeks of each semester, according to program statistics.

In spring 1991, 140 freshmen withdrew with 20 percent returning to the University. During the fall 1990 semester, 237 freshmen withdrew, and the return rate was 14 percent.

Ed Walters, First Year Experience graduate assistant, said for a first-year student, size of the University, distance from home and the number of people they know, reflects their transition to the university, Walters said.

"By the third week, students begin to settle into their schedules, and they receive less attention than in the first weeks of orientation. It is at this point when students begin to feel really small. The first three weeks really hit home," Walters said.

The First Year Experience Program acts as host to the

at the School of Journalism and the quality of students at the school and the paper.

"The School of Journalism plays a large part in how well the DE runs because workers are putting into practice what they learn in their classes," she said.

Other Pacemaker winners include campus newspapers from the University of Texas at Austin and at Arlington; the University of North Texas at Denton; the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa; the University of Southern California at Los Angeles; Stanford University at Stanford; the Indiana University at Bloomington; the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; and the University of Virginia at Charlottesville.

AIDS AND HIV INFECTION

AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) is a fatal disease caused by the Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV). Since sexual contact or exposure to contaminated blood is the way an adult catches HIV, you can protect yourself against infection. Everyone needs to learn about HIV infection, but if you or your lover uses intravenous drugs, is a gay or bisexual man, or has been sexually active with others, you need to be especially concerned.

HOW HIV INFECTION SPREADS

You are at serious risk of HIV infection if semen or blood carrying the virus enters your body. Breas, milk and vaginal secretions seem to be infectious too, but there has been little evidence that the virus is spread by means of saliva, tears, sweat, feces, or urine.

- Any sexual act in which contaminated semen or blood enters the partner's body can spread HIV infection. The infection can be passed from men to women and from women to men through vaginal intercourse. Genital sores make infection easier, but even people who look healthy may transmit the virus.
- Anal intercourse appears to be the main way of transmitting HIV infection among homosexual men. The rectal wall is so fragile that it lets semen mix with blood very easily. The receiving partner is most at risk, but the inserting partner can also become infected. Heterosexual couples who have anal intercourse are at risk of infection as well. Oral-genital intercourse may also be a means of transmission.
- Sharing drug-works—needles, syringes, and the like used for injecting drugs—puts the user in serious danger of HIV infection. The danger is not limited to users of drugs such as cocaine, amphetamines and heroin. Athletes who share needles while injecting steroids are putting themselves at serious risk.
- An infected mother can pass the virus to her unborn child during pregnancy, or can infect her baby during childbirth or breast feeding. Other risks for children include sexual abuse and blood treatments or transfusions.
- People receiving blood or blood products are at great risk of infection if the blood contains HIV, although no more than a tiny fraction of blood supply has ever been contaminated. Donated blood is now screened for HIV antibodies, and people at risk are discouraged from donating. Since some recently infected persons may give blood before they show HIV antibodies, some danger remains for those receiving blood.
- Improperly sterilized needles used in acupuncture or tattooing may also be sources of infection.
- Health care workers may be infected through needle-stick accidents or the contamination of open cuts or sores, but only a very few medical workers have actually caught the virus in this way. Improved safety practices can reduce even this risk.

HIV is a difficult virus to catch, and it is quickly destroyed by exposure to the air or to soap and water.

You will NOT catch HIV infection from casual contact, like hugging, NOT catch HIV infection from casual contact, like hugging, talking, shaking hands, using doorknobs or toilet seats, swimming, drinking from water fountains, kissing, or sharing eating utensils. In the thousands of families of people with AIDS, no one has caught HIV in these ways.

"How Do You Know If It's Right?"

A question often asked when we begin dating someone and aren't sure. Being in the wrong relationship often brings many negative consequences, including unplanned pregnancy, STD's and date rape. Shamir should save rhetoric for summit

PRESIDENT BUSH IS wise to promise support for loan guarantees for Israel only after the proposed peace conference next month.

The deferral, however, has been wrongly interpreted by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir. Consequently, it has resulted in a source of conflict between the United States and Israel, not to mention strong rhetoric by some members of his Cabinet.

Bush has been branded a liar and an anti-Semite who is responsible for putting the United States on a "collision course" with Israel.

The maximum 120-day wait and limits on where the money could be spent are necessary conditions to maintaining open channels of communication leading up to the peace talks precariously set for October.

None of the money may be used for settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel took control of in 1967.

THE $10 BILLION in loan guarantees would allow Israel to borrow at low interest rates on world markets to help it provide housing and employment for up to 1 million Soviet immigrants expected during the next five years.

A U.S. guarantee of the loans before the end of the year, however, would threaten Arabs who fear the loans would be used to settle Soviet Jews in the occupied territories.

Israel pledged not to exploit the guarantees for more building in the occupied territories, but aid from any source could free other money to build there.

Israel already has allowed many of the Jewish immigrants to move to the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

THE PRESIDENT'S INSTINCT in abating the likely conflict surrounding the peace talks shows thoughtful concern for the parties involved, not blatant discrimination. Similarly, his intentions to enhance the peace process should be seen only as that.

To resolve the issue with Shamir in return for Israel's cooperation, Bush proposed that the delay would not go beyond January and that the United States would reimburse Israel for the extra costs of any borrowing at higher interest rates because of the delay.

If guaranteeing the loan now would undermine the peace conference by inflaming Arab nations, then it must be delayed until after the proposed talks.

IT IS INACCURATE and unfair to label President Bush a liar and anti-Semite because he has the foresight to anticipate the repercussions of an immediate U.S. endorsement of the loans and the courage to exercise it.

Unfortunately, U.S.-Israeli relations are strained because of the disagreement. Traditional U.S. support for Israel and a promise by Bush that the delay would not go beyond January should refute charges that he is anti-Israel.

Shamir and the Israelis should consider the action by the White House a pro-peace effort instead of a personal attack.

Unless Shamir is lying about the use of the money, he should have no qualms about meeting the appropriate conditions to get it.

Let us hope Shamir and the Israeli Cabinet will do more talking at the peace conference in October and less name-calling now.

Commentary

By staying off scaffolds, people can be safe rather than sorry

LISTENING TO Judge Clarence Thomas talk so movingly about the old-fashioned values he learned from his hard-working grandfather, I thought back to my childhood and my grandfather and some of the things he taught me.

I couldn't have been more than 5 or 6 years old when he swiveled on his bar stool and said: "Listen to me, Never trust a Russian."

Because of my youth, I didn't know what a Russian was. So I asked him.

He said: "A Russian is no good."

I asked him why a Russian was no good.

He said: "Never mind. Drink your ginger ale."

But I never forgot his admonition. Especially since he told me the same thing every Saturday, when he would come over and take me for a walk.

WE NEVER walked far. Only one block up Wolcott Avenue to the nearest tavern on Division Street, which in those days was known as Polish Broadway.

In two or three years, I knew what a Russian was. And that confused me because World War II had begun and the Russians were our heroic allies. When I asked him about that, he shook his head and said: "Never trust a Russian."

When I asked my mother why my grandfather said that, she explained: "He doesn't like Russians."

I asked her why, and she said: "He doesn't trust them."

Then the war ended, and the Russians became the Evil Empire, and it turned out my grandfather had been right. At least for almost 50 years. And who can be sure about tomorrow?

IT WAS ONLY one of many valuable things he taught me. As he sat in the tavern drinking his Saturday steins of beer, he would always say: "Tell your mother we went to Wicker Park."

The first time he said that I asked

Mike Royko

Tribune Media Services

him why.

He said: "Because she told me to take you to Wicker Park."

I asked him why we didn't go to Wicker Park.

"Because I don't like Wicker Park. Too many flies and bugs. This is better."

So I would tell my mother that we had gone to Wicker Park, and that seemed to please her. And not going to Wicker Park pleased my grandfather. It also pleased me since I preferred drinking ginger ale in the cool bar. That meant that all three of us were pleased.

BUT IF WE had gone to Wicker Park, my grandfather and I wouldn't have been as pleased.

So I learned that freedom of choice and movement is what makes people happy. And I didn't like bugs, either.

He would also say: "Always take care of your brushes."

Few children get that advice from their grandfathers today. Modern grandfathers are more likely to say: "Why don't you see what's on the other channel?" or "Can't you turn that music down?" or "Did I tell you I shot an 89 with a double bogey on the last hole?" There probably isn't a child in America whose grandfather says: "Always take care of your brushes."

HE SAID THAT because he was a professional painter. Not pictures, houses. Fine brushes, in all sizes, with wood handles and animal-hair fibers, were costly. And the paint of those days couldn't be washed off with water. The brushes had to be soaked and washed in some chemical that today's youths would sniff.

"If you don't take care of your brushes, you won't get work and you'll be a bum. You don't want to be like the Swede."

As he later explained, when I was old enough to understand, the Swede had been his regular partner. But the Swede drank while working.

HE SAID IT immunized him against the fumes from the paint. So he often became so immunized that he failed to take care of his brushes.

Then he had to buy new brushes and had less profit, and his wife rebuked him. And this caused him to brood, as Swedes are inclined to do, and he drank even more while working. And it became a vicious circle, ruined brushes, paint dripping in his eyes and finally disaster. He staggered off a scaffold and broke both legs.

Being a true friend, my grandfather went to the bed-ridden Swede's house and said: "You're out of work and you need money. Here, take this."

AND HE PUT $250 cash in the Swede's hand, a hefty sum in those days, and bought the Swede's car, for which the Swede had paid $400 three months earlier.

"I wouldn't have done that for a Russian," my grandfather said. And that taught me about private enterprise and the free-market system.

Anyway, these memories came back as I listened to Judge Thomas remember his grandfather.

And when Sen. Ted Kennedy began grilling Judge Thomas on his social views, I thought about what my grandfather might have said to the senator.

Probably something like: "Stay off scaffolds."

partners acted. However, the United States did agree to a Saudi request for Patriot missile batteries to protect against any Iraqi launch of a missile. Inspectors have been trying to find and destroy any remaining Iraqi Scud missiles, a weapon of terror Saddam used during the Persian Gulf War.

Patriot batteries are still in Saudi Arabia awaiting shipment out after the war. It was understood some crews might have to be sent back to Saudi Arabia.

Bush described the plans to send planes, if necessary, as precautionary and declared that he was "plenty fed up" with Saddam's behavior. Iraq has resisted inspections at almost every turn.

"I think the man will see we are very serious about this. ... He's not going to question our resolve on this. He knows better than to take on the United States of America," said Bush. Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said he has asked Bush for a full report on the situation.

The United States already has in Saudi Arabia a squadron of F-117 fighters, at least a dozen F-15s from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro, N.C., and some F-16s are believed to be there.

The Saudis have F-15s and British Tornados, along with at least five AWACS radar planes. There are U.S. FB-111 bombers in nearby Turkey. The aircraft carrier Abraham Lincoln is making a port call in Dubai in the Persian Gulf, previously scheduled to end Friday, and the carrier Forrestal is in the Mediterranean.

Any additional aircraft sent to Saudi Arabia would likely be additional fighters and bombers, tanker planes to help keep them fueled, AWACS and additional helicopters if the United Nations wants them.

There are about 40,000 U.S. personnel left in the region, including about 16,000 on the ships. Very few are ground combat troops.

For months, Bush has made veiled threats to renew bombing if Saddam refuses to comply with U.N. resolutions. The president has stressed that any military action would be done in conjunction with allies, and he told Congress in a letter Monday, "The United States will not tolerate the continuation of this situation (Iraqi defiance), and, if necessary will take action to ensure Iraqi compliance."

hostages, including five Americans, believed held by pro-Iranian fundamentalist groups in Lebanon.

Last Wednesday, Mann's captors — The Revolutionary Justice Organization — released a statement expressing readiness to free a captive along with a photograph showing the British hostage very thin but generally in good shape.

His wife Sunnie commented on the IRNA report by saying that she had no firm news but did not expect anything to happen Wednesday.

"I am cautiously optimistic that something may happen in the coming two days," Sunnie said as she emerged from her apartment in Beirut escorted by a number of British Embassy security officials.

She was taken in a three-car convoy to the embassy's compound in the area of Zaika, north of Beirut, where she was expected to stay until the release of her husband. A journalist apparently barged into her apartment shortly after the IRNA announcement, witnesses said.

In addition to Mann, the RJO claims to hold American hostage Joseph Ciccipio, 60, deputy comptroller of the American University of Beirut, kidnapped Sept. 12, 1986.

The IRNA report came a week after Israel freed 51 prisoners from Al Khiam prison in Israel's self-declared security zone in southern Lebanon as well as nine bodies of Hezbollah militants. The captors of the Western hostages welcomed the move but considered it incomplete, asking for the release of the remaining 350 Arabs held in Israeli jails.

Among the Arab detainees was Sheikh Abdel Karim Obeid, a prominent leader of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, who was snatched by an Israeli commando force from his residence in the southern village of Jibsheet July 28, 1989.

His successor, Sheikh Ahmed Taleb, warned Tuesday that no hostage would regain freedom before the United Nations gave the captors assurances that Sheikh Obeid would be among prisoners to be freed by Israel soon.

Mary Wright, SIUC mathematics adviser, said professionals in the math and science fields could be successful teachers.

"If an individual has a gift for teaching," she said, "that individual could be very effective in the classroom, whether they have the official certification or not."

No one can be a good teacher if they do not have knowledge of their field, no matter how skilled he or she is at teaching, Wright added.

But, Donald Beggs, dean of the College of Education, said the quality of education could be at stake with the alternative certification program.

"The issue is academic and quality teaching," he said. "Each case should be reviewed on an individual basis." Randy Dunn, superintendent of the Chester Community School District, said professionals may have a great amount of content knowledge, but lack the psychology of learning.

"It will ignore the wealth of information we have that tells us there are certain things about how children learn," he said, "and there are certain things teachers can do to help learning."

The alternative certification program, House Bill 780, requires candidates to have a master's degree in math or science and at least 10 years of work experience in related fields.

A semester of practice teaching under a certified teacher and a test of basic skills and subject matter are required for certification.

The bill is expected to help relieve the shortage of math and science teachers.

Beggs said the shortage is caused by a limited number of students who major in math and science. Those who do major in those areas usually go into higher paying jobs, he said.

SIUC has approximately 175 math majors and 1,297 science majors.

The program will be developed by the State Board of Education and the State Teacher Certification Board.

It will take effect in the 1992-93 school year.

William Hardenbergh, emeritus professor, said Saddam has returned the gold it took from Kuwait but has dragged his feet about allowing the inspections.

"He has pretty much agreed to the terms of the cease-fire, but he's been pretty reluctant about it publicly," Hardenbergh said.

Saddam obviously feels the inspections of his military sites are obnoxious, Hardenbergh said, but he

Psychological studies focus of brainy lecture

By Teri Lynn Carlock
General Assignment Writer

Neuropsychology expert Phillip Morse will bring knowledge accumulated from his studies on brain injury today to SIUC.

Morse will give his lecture titled "Brain Injury: Neuropsychology and Consciousness" at 4 p.m. in Faneer Museum Auditorium.

Morse currently is the chair of the Department of Psychology at New England Rehabilitation Hospital and the professor of psychology at Boston University.

He has published many articles on childhood language and traumatic head injury.

Morse received his doctorate in the area of infant language in 1971 from the University of Connecticut.

In 1980 Morse was an experimental psychologist at the University of Wisconsin before he was promoted to professor of experimental psychology. He specialized in family therapy.

Today he is best known for his studies on head injuries. Dennis Molfese, SIUC professor of psychology, is doing collaborative work on head injuries with Morse.

Victoria Molfese, director of research development and administration, also is working with Morse.

"There are a lot of people with new head injuries each year. It is not just injuries from car accidents and motorcycle wrecks now," Molfese said.

"We are trying to bring back the skills lost to head injury victims and help them cope with their injuries. When you have a head injury it affects your entire life," she said.

The Scientific Research Society Sigma Xi and the Department of Psychology at SIUC are sponsoring the lecture.

Marion family learning center looking for financial support

By Teri Lynn Carlock
General Assignment Writer

Volunteers of the Family Learning Center in Marion are seeking financial support from the community because of a lack in state funds.

The center is totally supported by private sector donations with no allowance from state grants for rent and utilities.

The average cost to run the center is $6,000 to $6,500 a year. The center currently operates on a month-to-month basis.

The center provides adult learners with a place to acquire necessary reading, writing and mathematical skills while their children participate in other learning activities.

Cheryl Maynard, director of the center, said the center has been trying to get as much media attention as possible to improve their funding. People are beginning to familiarize the center with the community, Maynard said.

"Volunteers have been talking to professional and business people, and just the general Marion community," she said. "They are explaining to people the types of resources the center has so they have a better understanding of our purpose in the community."

Maynard said the center invites the community to visit its facilities. People can see the way the center operates and ask any questions they might have.

The center is located at 611 N. Market Street. Appointments are not necessary and people can take a tour of the center from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"For the center to benefit the community, the community has to support the center," Maynard said, "without volunteers and funding we can't exist."

Anyone interested in helping can volunteer by calling Cheryl Maynard at the center at 997-1991.

Town Square improvements Phillip but surely being done

By Annette Holzer
City Writer

Renovations to the Town Square in downtown Carbondale are chugging along, but plans for the old freight building still are off-track.

The Carbondale City Council voted Tuesday night to delay a decision on the rail freight building of Town Square.

Town Square is bordered by Illinois Avenue and Monroe, Washington and Jackson streets.

Councilman Richard Morris said the council should not wait any longer but should continue ahead with plans to make it an open air pavilion.

"This is what we've always wanted," Morris said.

Other councilmembers decided to wait, however, for further negotiations with a Michigan architect and for bids from other firms that are qualified to do the renovations.

Michigan architect Bruce Smith advised converting the building into an open air pavilion at a cost of $68,000.

The cost could be further reduced by using volunteers to remove debris and roof repair. The contract for the work does not include latticework, electrical service, crawl space screening and landscaping that could raise the cost to $85,000.

City Manager Steve Hoffner said he would prefer that all the work be done by licensed architects or engineers.

"We should use the experts," Hoffner said. "Something could be ripped out that shouldn't be ripped out."

Smith's plans include keeping the wooden flooring that already exists in the building, but councilmembers expressed concern for the stability of the flooring.

Mike McNerny, spokesman for an old freight building ad hoc committee, agreed with Smith's assessment of its stability.

"Tons of freight have gone by and the building has sat there for years," McNerny said.

McNerny said the ad hoc group could raise the difference between the amount needed to make the renovations and the money currently available to the city. The city has $35,000 left in its budget for the renovations.

"The city has ultimate faith in us in our ability to raise funds," McNerny said. "We'll be launching our fund-raising effort soon."

The old freight building was built in 1854 by Daniel Brush, Carbondale's founder. In 1900 the building was moved 200 feet northwest to its present location.

Smith's report stated it was not unusual for buildings to be built in one location and then later moved into place.

City Hall reports stated status with the National Register of Historic Places was jeopardized when the building was moved. Smith's report, however, states chances to be registered with the agency were probably not jeopardized.

Other improvements to Town Square include brick inlays into the concrete parking lot and restoration of a parking fountain.

Renovations on the Town Square will be complete by the end of October, said community developer Don Monty.

Use of forests topic of public forum as concern builds for Shawnee trees

By Doug Toole
Politics Writer

Most people may know what a forest is, but logging companies, environmental groups and governments have different attitudes about what a forest should do.

"Proper Functions of State and National Forests" is a public issue forum sponsored by the political science department that will address this topic at 7:30 tonight in the courtroom of the Lesar Law Building.

David Kenney, a visiting political science professor, said the topic is very timely in light of ongoing protests against timber sales in the Shawnee National Forest.

The forum is open to the public and will include discussions from local forestry and botany experts.

William Ashby, a professor in plant biology who will speak at the forum, said he thinks this issue will be around for a long time.

Ashby said this concern goes back nearly 100 years, but has become increasingly important as population pressures and the need for natural resources has started to threaten America's forests.

Hippies with Guns' Chris Kozalka, left, James Benbow, and Brad Braun strike strange sparks during a show at Hangar 9's Battle of the Bands Tuesday night. Hippies placed third in the Battle behind Liquefaction and the winner, Cornucopia of Death.

Indiana band thrashes to first in third round Battle of Bands

By Jefferson Robbins
Entertainment Editor

Indiana thrash band Cornucopia of Death wailed its way to the top of the heap Tuesday night in the Battle of the Bands' third round, edging out the closest competition by only four points.

Cornucopia, or COD, was the second band in the lineup at the Hangar 9 show, preceded by Hippies With Guns and followed by Liquefaction.

The 115-point win was unusual in that a group from Evansville, Ind., stole the thunder from two local bands, said Tom Brennan, one of the four-man panel of judges.

"It is kind of unusual that they won, not being a local band," Brennan said. "I was surprised that they were even entries."

But Cornucopia vocalist Steve Fowler said the band's participation in the Battle is part of a plan.

"We wanted to try to get into Hangar as a kind of showcase," Fowler said. "We like Carbondale, we like the people who come out and see us play."

COD's approach was a wall of sound, with the nimble guitar playing of Joe Smith and Scott

McElhiney backing up Fowler's humorous, half-shouted lyrics on "Nazi Washrag" and "Mommy Wore a Nose Ring."

"Every review I've ever seen of us has said, 'tongue-in-cheek,'" Fowler said. "I tend to refer to it as the lighter side of the heavy side."

The 111-point runner up, Liquefaction, played a stripped-bare set with two guitars, bass and drum. Guitarist and vocalist Lincoln Lounsbury came on strong, throttling the microphone maniacally through songs such as "Devil's Daughter" and "Better Now," and guitarist Deryck Dietz's solos were slashing frenzies.

Liquefaction formed as Curious George in fall of 1990 through a series of random connections, Lounsbury said.

"My best friend knew Erick (Tejkowski, the drummer)," Lounsbury said.

"I knew Deryck (Dietz) from home," Tejkowski said. "He was transferring here and wanted to be in the band. We had both worked at Sears."

The Hippies, second runners-up with 89 points, opened the show with a display of bass-heavy grind-rock and hypnotic sound effects that recalled police sirens and starship landings. Most Hippies works are free-form, on-the-spot compositions without titles or set structures, said James Benbow, guitarist and sometime vocalist.

The Hippies' choice of instruments is as unusual as their choice of compositions. Brad Braun invented and plays the "antitank guitar," a large cross between a guitar and a piano, and self-described "bass abuser" Chris Kozalka has pounded wire coils on the stage to provide rhythm.

Benbow, a graduate student from Normal, called the Hippies' material dance music.

"It's dance music for people who don't know how to dance," he said. "People don't seem to understand that anything with a marginally regular beat, you can dance to."

Braun, also from Chicago, referred to his group as an "arcade-dance band," after the combat tactic of rendering territory useless to the enemy.

"We think of it as the more people trying to get away from us when we play, the more successful we are," Braun said.

The Battle continues at Hangar 9 Tuesday, Sept. 24 with Spore Print, Side Effect and Risk squaring off in the fourth round.

Marion gives film series second run

By Casey Hampton
Entertainment Writer

The Marion Cultural and Civic Center is preparing to quench people's thirst for classics as it sets forth in presenting the 1991 Fall Festival of Classic Films.

Because of the overwhelming response to the 1991 Summer Classic Film Series, which included "Meet Me in St. Louis," "Little Women" and "Showboat," center officials have decided to try the festival again this fall.

The crowd during the summer surprised Lynne Guido, arts coordinator for the center.

"We had between 300 to 500 people at each of the showings. It was a bigger crowd than we had expected, but it's a really neat place to see a movie," she said.

The classic theater has the biggest indoor screen in Southern Illinois along with a balcony, hi-fidelity sound and a concession stand with all the works.

This time out, the center will run four different feature films on the first four Thursdays in October.

The center will begin the festival on Oct. 3 by showing a restored print of "The Sound of Music" in Dolby stereo sound.

The musical is a time-honored family classic from 1965 that won five Academy Awards, including Best Picture, and features the talents of Julie Andrews and Christopher Plumber.

"Dr. Zhivago," a story detailing the loves and life of doctor and poet Yuri Zhivago, set against the tide of the Russian revolution, will play on Oct. 10. This 1965 film is based on the novel by Nobel Prize-winning author Boris Pasternak.

On Oct. 17, the center is showing a collection of musical, comic and dramatic clips from the archives of MGM/United Artists in 1976's "That's Entertainment, Part 2."

Film legends such as Bing Crosby, Frank Sinatra, as well as a reunion duet by Gene Kelly and Fred Astaire, are featured in this trip through motion picture history.

The account of greed and frustration on a prominent southern family as told by Tennessee Williams in the 1958 classic "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof" is the last in this festival of classic films.

The film features Burl Ives, Paul Newman and Elizabeth Taylor and will run on Oct. 24.

All films have screenings at 2 and 7 p.m. Series tickets are available at the Marion Cultural and Civic Center through Oct. 3 at $10 for adults and $8 for senior citizens and children. Tickets for individual shows will be available at the box office.

UNIVERSITY POLICY STATEMENT ON AIDS

GENERAL POLICY

After careful study, the University AIDS Task Force has accepted the conclusions of the American College Health Association, that:

Current knowledge . . . indicates that college and university students or employees with AIDS, ARC [AIDS Related Complex] or a positive HTLVIII antibody test do not pose a health risk to other students or employees in the usual academic or residential setting.

AIDS on the College Campus (1986)

The following policies are based on the current state of medical knowledge, and are subject to change as new information becomes available.

POLICY FOUNDATIONS

1. University decisions involving persons who suffer from AIDS shall be based on current and well-informed medical information.
2. Current prevailing medical authorities agree that AIDS is not communicated through casual contact but requires intimate sexual contact or an exchange of body fluids.
3. For the purpose of this policy statement, the term "AIDS" shall include AIDS, AIDS-Related Complex and a positive test for Human Immunodeficiency Virus.
4. This policy should be reviewed periodically to ensure that it reflects the most current information available from both governmental and medical authorities.

NON-DISCRIMINATION

- (A) The University shall not discriminate in enrollment or employment against an individual with AIDS.
- (B) No one shall be denied access to campus activities or facilities solely on the ground that they suffer from AIDS.

CONFIDENTIALITY

- (A) The University shall comply with all pertinent statutes and regulations which protect the privacy and welfare of persons in the University community who suffer from AIDS as well as the welfare of others within the University community.
- (B) The University will maintain procedural safeguards throughout the University with the objective of protecting the privacy of AIDS victims.
- (C) All confidential medical information about an individual will be handled in compliance with legal requirements and professional ethical standards.
- (D) The university will not disclose the identity of any student or employee who has AIDS, except as authorized by law or pursuant to guidelines following the general standards included in the American College Health Associations' Recommended Standards and Practices for a College Health Program, fourth edition:

In general, it is recommended that no specific or detailed information concerning complaints or diagnosis be provided to faculty, administrators, or even parents, without the expressed written consent of the patient in each case.

UNIVERSITY RESPONSIBILITIES

- (A) The University shall develop and maintain a comprehensive educational program about AIDS.
- (B) The University shall identify sources of competent and confidential testing for AIDS as well as counseling services upon request.
- (C) The University shall identify sources of qualified medical care and encourage those with AIDS to utilize such sources.
- (D) The University shall adopt and implement safety guidelines as proposed by the U.S. Public Health Service for handling and disposing of blood and other body fluids.
- (E) Decisions in all situations involving students or employees with health problems are to be made on a case by case basis, based on the medical facts in each case and with concern for the confidentiality and best interests of all parties involved.

U.N. finds cease-fire violation: Iraq rebuilding its launchers

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — A U.N. commission said Wednesday that Iraq was able to rebuild missile launchers and U.N. inspectors found a three-missile transport unit not declared by the Baghdad government in violation of the cease-fire agreement in the Persian Gulf War.

The allegation by the Special Commission coincided with reports that the United States, France and Britain were considering measures to escort U.N. personnel who were prevented by Iraq from using U.N. helicopters to carry out their work.

The Special Commission is charged with monitoring and destroying Iraq's weapons of mass destruction.

Members of the Security Council were to meet Wednesday afternoon to discuss the question of oil exports by Iraq and to use oil profits for humanitarian assistance to Iraqi civilians.

The council on Aug. 15 allowed a one-time, six-month oil exports by Iraq, worth $1.6 billion, to alleviate shortages of food and medicine.

The Baghdad government barred U.N. helicopters from its territory and insisted that U.N. inspectors use Iraqi military helicopters instead. Under Western threats of retaliation, Iraq said last week it was ready to accept non-Iraqi aircraft but the United Nations must negotiate the terms for such use.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said the Security Council may be considering providing escort for U.N. inspectors if Iraq still denies permission for U.N. helicopters to fly over the territory.

U.S. tells Iraq consequences grave if inspections blocked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Wednesday Saddam Hussein is blocking U.N. inspectors' full access to Iraqi nuclear, chemical and biological weapons sites in an effort to produce illegal armaments clandestinely.

Spokesman Richard Boucher warned Iraq of "grave consequences" unless it permits the inspection teams to survey the facilities by using their helicopters.

Under U.N. Security Council Resolution 687, Iraq is obliged to eliminate its weapons of mass destruction and missile capabilities.

"To date, it has failed to comply with this and other relevant U.N. resolutions," Boucher said.

"Moreover, Iraq continues to employ concealment and deception to evade U.N. Special Commission inspection teams in order to preserve the capability to produce and deploy these weapons illegally," Boucher declined to spell out what military action, if any, the United States would take to resolve the issue.

President Bush told Congress the United States "will not tolerate the continuation of this situation, and, if necessary, will take action to ensure Iraqi compliance." The U.S. is in close consultation with the other members of the U.N. Security Council.

"We are all agreed on the need for Iraq to comply with these resolutions, and that point has been made very clear to the Iraqis," Boucher said.

"The resolutions are very clear in requiring mandatory Iraqi compliance, and the will of the Security Council members are very clear in ensuring that that happens," he said.

Asked whether the resolutions could be a precedent for the use of force against Iraq, Boucher said, "I have not heard any discussion of a requirement for further resolutions at this point."

A State Department official said the administration is particularly concerned about Saddam Hussein's "hide-and-seek" efforts to conceal his nuclear program.

Scholars can garner $5,000

University News Service

Southern Illinois University at Carbondale's Graduate School will take nominations for its 1992 Outstanding Scholar Award Through Friday, Oct. 11.

The $5,000 award recognizes research and creative activities by University faculty and staff.

Nominations consist of a detailed statement of the nature and importance of the nominee's accomplishments.

Supporting documents — resume, list of scholarly or creative activities, special awards and names, addresses and phone numbers of six references from outside the University — must be given to the committee by Friday, Nov. 8.

The committee, made up of past winners and the Deans' Council, Faculty Senate and Graduate Council, will name the winner during commencement activities next May.

Sickly Yeltsin rests up for trip to Azerbaijan

MOSCOW (UPI) — Russian republic President Boris Yeltsin canceled meetings and went home to rest because of an unspecified illness Wednesday, a spokesman said.

The spokesman denied a report by the independent Interfax news agency that Yeltsin had been hospitalized with a heart problem, saying only that the burly Russian leader felt ill Wednesday morning and was taken home to rest.

"This was a slight slight deterioration of his health," the spokesman said. "Doctors say he should have some rest before his trip Friday, which is not cancelled."

Yeltsin canceled meetings with members of the Russian Parliament Wednesday and was expected to miss the opening of the republic's legislature Thursday, but the spokesman said he still planned to travel to the disputed Nagorno Karabakh region of Azerbaijan Friday to try to mediate the conflict there.

Russian Parliament deputy Sergein Yushenkov told Interfax parliamentarians were told by Yeltsin's staff that he was unable to meet them Wednesday because "his state of health has become worse."

The report said Yeltsin was also not expected to attend the opening session of the Russian Supreme Soviet Thursday because of illness.

Bahamian leader denies drug charges

MIAMI (UPI) — A Bahamian tourism chief who allegedly passed drug bribes to Prime Minister Lynden Pindling demanded Wednesday that he be allowed to testify at Manuel Noriega's cocaine trial in order to clear his name.

Cordell Thompson, senior general manager of public relations for the Bahamian Ministry of Tourism, denounced the bribery allegation as "an outright lie."

The allegation was made Tuesday in Miami during the cocaine-racketeering trial of the deposed Panamanian dictator.

Max Mermelstein, who admitted he smuggled 56 tons of cocaine into Florida, was a transportation chief for Colombia's Medellin drug cartel before his 1985 arrest and is now being paid for co-operating with the government.

He testified that he bribed Bahamian officials to allow his smuggling crews to fly cocaine through the islands.

"I personally paid Cordell Thompson," Mermelstein said. "From what Cordell Thompson told me, part of it was passed to Pindling."

Thompson angrily denied the assertion in a statement released in Nassau, saying he had never accepted any money from anyone associated with drug trafficking and should be permitted to say so under oath at Noriega's trial.

"The story is an outright lie," Thompson said. "I don't believe I ever met this man, and I can't imagine what I could possibly have done to assist him in my capacity as a public relations specialist in the Ministry of Tourism."

"The U.S. Justice system is also on trial if a confessed drug smuggler can be paid by U.S. prosecutors to smear the names and reputations of innocent people without challenge."

"This is not right. It is not fair," Thompson said.

As for Pindling, "The whole thing is ridiculous because if Cordell didn't receive it, then it couldn't have been passed," said Randy Daniels, a spokesman in the Bahamian Cabinet office.

U.S. attorneys were unavailable for comment on Thompson's request to testify at the Noriega trial.

Pindling, 61, a lawyer who led the Bahamas to independence from Britain, has been plagued by persistent charges that he grew rich by turning his country into a drugsmuggling haven.

The allegations surfaced after 1983, when U.S. officials discovered that fugitive financier Robert Vesco and Colombian drug lord Carlos Lehder had turned a small island called Norman's Cay into a way station for drugs.

Vesco remains a fugitive and is believed to be hiding in Cuba. Lehder was convicted of drug-smuggling charges in Jacksonville, Fla., and is serving a sentence of life in federal prison. He has agreed to testify against Noriega as part of an agreement with the government for more lenient prison conditions.

A 1984 Commission of Inquiry, appointed by Pindling, ended a yearlong investigation in December 1984 by concluding that corruption had spread to Pindling's Cabinet and the country's police force.

Cambodia still in panic state, needing fast U.N. assistance

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (UPI) — Relief agencies in Cambodia have issued another appeal for immediate assistance for victims of the flood which has affected 14 of the country's 19 provinces and claimed at least 30 lives.

"Four provinces are still seriously inundated and others have serious problems of food supplies and access," a representative of the U.N. Development Program told reporters Tuesday night.

Some provinces which flooded after heavy rain in the western mountains in late August are still under water and six others along the Mekong River are inundated, including four provincial cities.

"The water is going down in some areas but figures are rising and we should not reduce the level of alarm," said Rajceev Pillay, UNDP's acting head of mission in Cambodia. "While this current peak has been reached, there may be more further down the line."

"We should not forget we are still in the middle of the rainy season and normally the highest levels are at the end of September, early-October."

The UNDP official said he could confirm 30 people died in the floods but estimated the final death toll would rise to 100.

"Access to a number of provinces is still difficult," he said.

U.N. officials said three of Cambodia's six major highways remained cut by flood waters.

History only sped up, not changed by coup

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (UPI) — Indiana University political scientist Darrell Hammer says all the institutions in the Soviet Union have disappeared as a result of the coup — except the presidency and "that is only a mere shadow of its former self."

Hammer was in the Soviet Union during the coup researching a book on the choices available to the Soviets and the Russian National Movement in responding to issues of the Russian ethnic minority in 30 non-Russian republics.

He returned to the United States on Aug. 30.

"The coup did not change the course of history," he said, "it just speeded it up."

He added that there are several key questions that need to be answered now that the coup is over: questions such as who controls the vast Soviet nuclear arsenal, what form will the national banking system take and, on the question of foreign policy, will there be one or many as the Soviet Republics declare independence.

Hammer said that the biggest problem is "that no one is sure where the real authority lies."

That is presenting a problem for the Soviet people as winter approaches. Along with the breakup of the Soviet Union has been a collapse of the Soviet economy.

Hammer said that there are now two economies in the Soviet Union. One is the state-run economy where state ownership is the rule and government subsidies allow prices to remain low.

The other is a more capitalistic system that provides a lot more goods and services — at prices that are comparable to U.S. standards.

This has always existed — "peasants trading at near supply and demand prices" outside the state-run system. "Now a whole network exists," he said.

The problem comes from the inability of the state system to provide enough goods on a regular basis and the low income of the average Soviet citizen. According to Hammer, the average monthly income of a Soviet citizen is about 200 rubles.

The cost of a regular pair of shoes is 500 rubles; for a pair of Adidas tennis shoes, the cost is 1,300 rubles.

The solution, Hammer said, is not to lower prices but to raise wages — from 200 rubles a month to 2,000.

Hammer said some Soviets think the outrageous prices of the commercial system are being controlled by a plot in the Soviet government or the American C.I.A. or that it is a Mafia ring.

He said there is no proof for or against this; it appears to be a legitimate free market. The entrepreneurs "appear to be energetic individuals who found their way around the system."

He added that the people are going to have to become accustomed to prices that are set by the market standards.

The social problem, he said, is that only 1 or 2 percent of the people can afford the free market goods, which are better in quality and variety.

"The Soviet Union may be heading toward a real class struggle" between those who have and those who do not, he predicted.

Hammer will be returning to the Soviet Union on Sept. 24 to continue his research.

Illinois gears up to play Houston

CHAMPAIGN, (UPI) — Illinois Coach John Mackovic offers some simple advice to his secondary to keep up with David Klingler and the explosive Houston receiving corps — get a head start.

"And that's exactly what we're going to try to do," Mackovic said, half-laughing. "Someone once said, 'I could outrun Carl Lewis if he gave me enough of a head start.'"

The young and inexperienced defenders of the Fighting Illini, 1-1, better start running now. They will be in for the race of their collegiate careers Saturday when No. 19 Houston, 1-1, comes to town.

Klingler, who entered the season as the leading candidate for the Heisman Trophy, threw nine touchdown passes in the Cougars' season-opening 73-3 romp over of Louisiana Tech after throwing an NCAA record 54 a year ago.

Though Houston took its lumps last Thursday night, bashed by Miami 40-10 in a performance that lowered Klingler's stock in some observers eyes, Mackovic remains a believer.

"It's no mistake that David Klingler is the leading candidate for the Heisman Trophy," the former NFL coach said. "I think he would be the leading candidate in anybody's offense."

"I don't believe that this is just something that's particular to the run-and-shoot. He's an outstanding player."

Klingler has completed 68 of 116 passes for 726 yards in the first two games with 10 TDs and no interceptions. Freddie Gilbert leads the receiving corps with 27 catches for 289 yards and two TDs. John Brown III and Tracy Good have three TD catches apiece, and Marcus Grant two, including the only touchdown scored by the Cougars in their loss to Miami.

"They have without any question the most explosive offense in the history of college football," Mackovic said.

Bradley-Bourbonnais star prepares to sign with Illinois

CHAMPAIGN (UPI) — Chris Gandy, a senior forward who led Bradley-Bourbonnais High School to the playoffs last year, has verbally committed to play for the University of Illinois in 1992.

The 6-foot-8 Gandy averaged 24 points, nine rebounds and four blocked shots last year. He also shot 61 percent from the floor as he led his team to the Class AA sectionals and a 20-8 record.

Gandy can sign an official letter of intent with the Illini

Nov. 13-20.

The spot for Gandy opened up when Chris Collins of Glenbrook North turned down a scholarship offer from Illinois. Collins, a 6-foot-3 guard, is the son of former Chicago Bulls Coach Doug Collins and newspaper reports have said he is leaning towards playing at Duke.

Because Illinois was placed on probation for NCAA rule violations, the school only has two scholarships to give out for the 1992-93 academic year.

Millen to try luck as QB for Patriots

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The New England Patriots, who have not scored a touchdown in their last two games, Wednesday declared that Hugh Millen will replace Tommy Hodson as starting quarterback for this weekend's game against Houston.

Millen, who is a free-agent since during the off-season, said, "I'm here to play. I'm excited. That's why anyone's in this business — to play."

A fifth-year pro who has been a reserve for the LA Rams and Atlanta, Millen would not offer any predictions about his play on Sunday against the 3-0 Oilers. "People don't want to read on Thursday what you're going to do on Sunday; they want to read on Monday what you did on Sunday," he said.

Hodson, a second-year pro who started all three games for the 1-2 Patriots, said of the move by coach Dick MacPherson, "He was justified in making a change ... we haven't scored points."

New England, struggling to rebound from a 1-15 record last year, has scored just 22 points this season, 15 of them coming on field goals by Jason Staurovsky.

Hodson has completed 36 of 68 passes for 345 yards, with one touchdown and four interceptions.

He has also been sacked nine times. Hodson won the starting job after a very even competition with Millen during the pre-season.

"They both had solid training camps," said tight end Marv Cook. "I don't think the move is a demeaning thing for Tommy."

"We'll just see if another chemistry works for us. Hugh is a little stronger and throws the ball a little harder."

"The team is looking for a spark and maybe this will ignite us offensively," Cook said.

Ex-Giant to face old friends while playing for Cleveland

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (UPI) — Joe Morris, wearing a road jersey this time, is looking forward to carrying the football Sunday in a regular-season game at Giants Stadium for the first time since 1988.

Morris, the New York Giants' all-time rushing leader, will face the Giants as the Cleveland Browns' leading rusher.

Morris gained 5,296 yards for the Giants from 1982-88 and helped them win Super Bowl XXI.

But he has not played for the Giants since suffering a broken foot in the final 1989 exhibition game.

Morris' career was revived this year by Bill Belichick, the former Giants defensive coordinator who is the new coach of the Browns.

Morris, 31, considers every game special after being out of football for two years, but the Giants game is especially significant.

"That would be a lie if I said anything different," Morris said of his return to the New Jersey Meadowlands.

"I'm looking forward to returning to Giants Stadium. I love that place. New Jersey is home. That's where I live.

"I play for the Cleveland Browns and I enjoy playing here (in Cleveland), but New Jersey is home."

Although he realizes his ties to the past, Morris emphasizes the importance of the game for his current team.

"I'm on a team that needs to win a game at Giants Stadium," he said. "We need to win a game on the road."

Morris enters the game with 97 yards on 29 carries for the Browns, who are surprisingly 2-1. He left last week's victory over Cincinnati in the second quarter with a sprained knee, but says he will be fine for Sunday.

He still is looking for his first touchdown for Cleveland and what better team to get it against than the Giants, for whom he scored 48 TDs.

While Morris sat out 1989, Otis Anderson took over as the featured runner and Morris was cut last year.

The Giants went on to win another Super Bowl while Morris sat out the season.

Naples court convicts, sentences Maradona for Italian drug offenses

NAPLES, Italy (UPI) — A Naples court Wednesday convicted Argentine soccer star Diego Maradona of possessing and supplying cocaine while he was in Italy and sentenced him to a 14-month suspended jail term.

The court also fined the 30-year-old former captain of Italy's Napoli club $3,200.

Maradona did not return to Italy from Argentina to attend the trial and the suspended sentence means he will not have to go to jail in Italy unless he repeats the offense.

Maradona returned to Buenos Aires April 2, shortly before the Italian soccer federation suspended him for 15 months after his urine sample tested positive for cocaine in a routine test following a March 17 league match in which Napoli beat Bari 1-0 in Naples.

The suspension was later confirmed as a worldwide playing ban until June 30, 1992 by FIFA, the game's ruling body.

Shortly after he returned to Argentina in April, Maradona was arrested by police in a drugs raid on a suburban Buenos Aires apartment and charged with possessing and using cocaine.

On July 23 a Buenos Aires magistrate found Maradona guilty of possessing cocaine and ordered him to be held in preventive detention.

But Maradona was allowed to remain free on condition he underwent treatment.

Maradona's Naples trial originally opened June 26, but was postponed when his Italian lawyer Vincenzo Siniscalchi presented a medical certificate from a Buenos Aires doctor saying the player could not come to Italy because he was in "a state of stress."

At Wednesday's hearing Siniscalchi again asked for a postponement on grounds that Maradona was not permitted to leave Argentina because penal proceedings for drug abuse in Buenos Aires are still pending.

The court refused the postponement and handed down its 14-month suspended jail sentence and fine on the basis of plea bargaining between Siniscalchi and court prosecutor Luigi Bobbio.

Maradona had sent a power of attorney to Siniscalchi authorizing him to plead guilty and settle the case by plea bargaining, court officials said.

The court also sentenced two other defendants in the case, Giuseppe Suarato and Felice Pizza, to sentences of 17 months jail each and fines of $2,500.

Both men were accused of abetting prostitution in the Maradona case.

Pizza was not able to attend the hearing because he was arrested with two of his friends Tuesday on charges of raping an Italian girl, court officials said.

After disappointing Open, Agassi ready for Davis Cup

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Andre Agassi, one of sport's great enigmas, was a country counting on him this weekend in Kansas City, Mo.

Agassi, bounced quickly out of U.S. Open, will compete in Davis Cup semi-final singles against Germany, as will French Open champion Jim Courier. Wimbledon titleist Michael Stich will be on the German team, but Boris Becker has an injured leg and will not play.

"I suspect Andre Agassi will do well," said ESPN analyst Cliff Drysdale, who helped Australia win four Davis Cup titles during the 1960s.

"He hasn't played much tennis since losing (in the first round) at the U.S. Open, but he has a lot to prove. I feel he will play extremely well."

Drysdale favors the U.S. team because of Becker's absence.

"If Boris Becker had played, it could've been the finest, most interesting match in the 12 years that ESPN has covered the event," Drysdale said. "But it's basically Stich playing against two French Open finalists."

The big question now is: Can Stich win both of his singles matches? He certainly has the potential. Then it would revolve around the doubles."

ESPN televises singles matches Friday at 4:00 p.m. EDT and 2:00 a.m. Saturday.

The doubles match will be shown Saturday at 4:00 p.m., with the deciding singles aired on taped delay Sunday at midnight.

The winner of the match plays the France-Yugoslavia victor in the finals.

Sox manager considering three-man rotation

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago White Sox manager Jeff Torborg says he's considering switching to a three-man rotation depending on whether or not they need to give Jack McDowell more starts. And it's not just to try and give the right-hander 20 wins.

"We're trying to figure out how to make the most of his starts," Torborg said of McDowell, who was 16-9 prior to Wednesday's game against Oakland.

The White Sox are utilizing a four-man rotation of McDowell, Alex Fernandez, Charlie Hough and Greg Hibbard. If the White Sox stay that way, McDowell would still have a chance to win 20 games if he won each of his remaining four starts.

A win Wednesday also would pull Chicago within six games of Minnesota in the American League West.

"This is the time of year when you like to give them (pitchers) more rest," Torborg said. "But, with everything on the line, it might be different."

The last thing I want to do is hurt somebody."

Oakland starter Dave Stewart has fared much better against Chicago on his home turf.

Stewart is 4-1 in five starts at the Coliseum against Chicago with a 1.61 ERA. In old Comiskey Park, he was 2-4 in 10 games and eight starts with a 4.09 ERA.

Just to clear up any false accusations, Bo Jackson says he did not cause Sunday night's engine trouble on the White Sox charter flight.

"Everybody says it's my fault because I was in there (cockpit) talking to the captain," Jackson aid.

The plane, flying from Orange County, Calif., to Chicago's O'Hare Airport, was forced to make an emergency landing in Des Moines because one of the engines aught on fire.

"He (pilot) said we were 45 minutes from Chicago and all of a sudden it was like flashbulbs went off and then boom," Jackson said. "It felt like we ran over something."

The incident scared Jackson. "At that point, I knew I didn't want to leave my kids," he said.

tickets, known as Gold Passes, and equipment from the ski federation. The pass allows the holder free access to ski lifts at most major ski areas in the United States.

The Times reported that after the requests were denied, the ski federation said "we were told that our USOC grants would be increased if we provided the passes."

Howard Peterson, the federation president, said his group was denied an application for a $40,000 grant to help defray the costs of hiring a full-time physical therapist last month. He said this surprised him because other federations had received money for a similar purpose.

Schiller, according to the Times, denied the accusations, calling them "ridiculous."

The ski federation requested the resignation of Helmick for his role in a series of business arrangements with groups wishing to expand their ties to the Olympics. Although he denied any wrongdoing, Helmick announced last weekend that he would not seek another term as USOC president.

Because of lack of funds in the Athletic Department, SIUC does not have an NCAA team.

Harasimowicz said in the future if funds improve or if some of the current NCAA teams show lack of success and the soccer club team shows outstanding achievements, there may be hope for an intercollegiate team.

The soccer club won 3-0 in its opener Sept. 14 against Wabash. In the first half, SIUC played 80 percent of the game in the Warriors half of the field.

Nineteen minutes into the second half, sophomore Junior Acosta scored the first goal for the Salukis.

One minute later senior Bill Gilmore scored a shot from 18 yards, and with 4 1/2 minutes left senior Alix Kogan scored from 25 yards.

The Soccer Club has games scheduled for every Saturday until November. The team is set to play Wabash Junior College at 1 p.m. Sept. 21 at Stehr Field across from the Baptist Student Center.

The SIUC women will get a good idea of what to expect in the conference from Gateway members Illinois State, Western Illinois and Northern Iowa Saturday at the Illinois State Invitational at Normal.

Also in competition will be Big Ten powers Illinois and Iowa.

"We can run with anybody," Padgett said. "So we need to be sure we're not distracted by the fact that we're running with a couple of big schools."

Even though the Salukis face some stiff competition, DeNoon said he expects the Salukis to finish in the top three.

"We're healthy," he said, "and the temperature is expected to be ideal for cross country so we should see what we can do when there is nothing to hinder our performance."
