Members of SIUC's Student Environmental Center protested logging of a section of the Shawnee National Forest using drama, while passers-by were drawn in for entertainment and

Although some people muttered such things as, "I ain't got time to save trees," when walking by the event, most people stopped along the Student Center path-ways to watch the protest.

Two members of the center were disguised as a pine tree and an oak tree walk-

The narrator, Bob Czernik, a junior in anthropology from Carbondale, said through a megaphone that the U.S. Forest Service has plans to clear cut pine trees in the Bell Smith Springs area, southeast of Marion, because the service claims pine trees are preventing the oaks from growing.

That is a myth! These trees can live and grow together in harmony, he said.
Pine trees are not overpowering the

The skit continued when one member dressed in a t-shirt labeled with a Forest Service logo and another disguised as a logger with an axe and a hard helmet walked toward the tree characters with intentions of cutting them down.

A member wearing a Smokey the Bear costume stood by the trees as the tree characters cried for Smokey's help to pro-

the audience by SEC members, were then thrown at the disguised logger and Forest Service officer, causing them to give up and walk away but swearing they would

But to the audience's surprise, when the logger and Forest Service characters did come back, they began hugging the trees and admitted they had made a mistake.

They said they decided not to cut down the trees because they loved the forest and wanted to protect it. They also lit a dollar bill on fire to prove that money from timber sales was not important to them any-

Stalking incidents cause student code revision

By Dylan Fenley Daily Egyptian Reporter

Recent stalking incidents on campus have prompted SIUC officials to revise the Student Code of Conduct to clarify the definitions of harassment and streamline the appeal process, officials say.

in front of the Student Center.

A demonstrator protesting the logging of Bell Smith Springs, Collin Mizeur, a undecided

sophomore from Springfield, raises his hand in promise to protect the land Wednesday afternoon

Possible revisions to the code include a clearer definition of harassment, more definite guidelines of the code's jurisdiction pertaining to off-campus incidents and the length of time involved in the appeals process, Jean Paratore, associate vice chancellor of Student Affairs, said.

The last time the code was revised was 1986. Paratore said it is time for a periodic review of the code.

Donald Beggs, SIUC chancellor, said many of the concerns about the code have come about because of several cases of stalking on campus in recent years.

one example of the need to streamline the code is the case of Gregg Mrotzek, a graduate student in engi neering from Decatur. Mrotzek was found guilty of harassing his former girlfriend in 1995 but still is in school because of the code's lengthyappeals process.

Mrotzek could not be reached for comment as of press time.
"We have had individuals that have been found to be guilty of very

the due process and grievance pro-cedure, they may very well stay within the University setting for another year," Beggs said. "I'm talking about extreme behavior here; I'm not talking about disagreements with a roommate. I'm talking about felonies."

Still an immigrant after 30 years

Romanian author shares experiences of America's paradoxes

By William Hatfield Daily Egyptian Reporter

America is a place of paradoxes where immigrants do not always find what they seek but always find freedom, a poet, author and radio commentator says.

Andrei Codrescu, who was born in the former province of Transylvania in Romania, spoke to a full auditorium of about 300 people Tuesday evening in the Student Center about the topic, "Life of an Immigrant."

He based the lecture through his and his mother's eyes.

"After having been in America for 30 years, I am only in immigrant because people want me to speak about it," Codrescu said. "But I think I have more to say about immigrants preely because I have been talking about it and thinking about it and because it is a matter of some urgency in our current political dis-

Codrescu said it was not until his return to Romania to report on the country's revolution that he began to re-evaluate his American expe-

"I didn't go back merely to report," Codrescu said. "I went back because I wanted to smell things. I wanted to go back and recover my childhood, and I wanted to take big, deep breaths in my hometown."

Codrescu said in Romania, he found his old friends had been transformed into survivors of a miscrable and broken system where material things are the supreme value,

"For them, America was the heavenly WalMart," Codrescu said.

That's what God was during Communism because God was everything, and everything can be found at Wal-Mart."

"When this realization began to dawn on my its outright meanness and indifference to chase after the almighty buck, as well as her inability to partake in warm genuine fellow-

Codrescu said even for all of America's weak points, it still is far better than Romania in that immigrants do not have to live in fear of governmental persecution.

Codrescu said there is nothing new about current anti-immigration sentiments.
"Most immigration after the mid-18th centu-

GPSC deserves vote in deciding which programs cancelled

THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES was built around the idea that government should be by the people and for the people. Simply put, people should have some sort of say when it comes to the government that represents them. Perhaps the Graduate and Professional Student Council members brushed up on their history of politics.

At the group's Sept. 11 meeting, GPSC voted to ask for a part in the decision-making process concerning SIUC's graduate programs that are scheduled for modification or elimination. The vote was for a resolution that would give GPSC a vote in what happens to these programs.

To want a say in what happens to graduate programs only makes sense. GPSC is made up of graduate students, and it only seems natural that they would want some kind of influence in the decision-making process. To have a vote in something that directly influences them is a very good idea. By the people, for the people.

GPSC IS ENTITLED TO HAVE THEIR OPINION matter. The council is directly affected by what happens to these programs and should have a say in something this important. The entire process would benefit from hearing the group's input about something that they deal directly with.

Not giving the group a say would be like telling the graduate students that they have no choice in the matter but have to deal with it in a helpless way. Life is not fair, but at least by letting GPSC have a vote, the campus administration would make sure that everyone knows where the council stands.

All 87 graduate programs will be up for review in the near future by the Illinois Board of Higher Education. Some of the criteria the board will be looking at are demand, cost, job placement and the time it takes to receive a degree.

IBHE HAS VOICED CONCERN THAT SOME programs have low enrollment and graduation rates, as well as others producing more graduates than the job market can accommodate. As a result, some of the programs are tar-geted for cancellation. GPSC wants, and rightfully so, some kind of voice when it comes to the future of these programs.

One of the problems, however, that could arise is if GPSC uses its vote as a way to keep programs that have no chance of surviving. If given a say in the process, GPSC members should make sure that they use the power given for the best possible reasons.

GPSC should speak for all the students that it directly represents. This means that sometimes members may need to ask what is best for the majority and not just focus on some programs that they don't want to see go.

The best way the GPSC could benefit the students would be to act as a liaison between graduate students and the reviewal process. That way, with both sides being constantly informed about the other, the transition will be smoother. It-also may provide certain alternatives to cutting the pro-

h.D.s important in science

Yes, Mr. Howard, you are absolutely right about the Ph.D. business. If we would believe as you do that we Ph.D. students represent a kind of livestock herded into the academy, left alone to chew our scholarly cud and then herded out into a marketplace consisting entirely of vegetarians.

Yes, Mr. Howard, you are correct that the University is a business of the control o ness, but it is not the cattle business. So allow me to escort you out of the farming industry and into the academic industry.

Where I have taught in the past, administrators hired the number of teachers they needed based on projected enrollment.

We part-time instructors got to teach classes when enrollment was high, but not when we were not needed. And coincidentally, just enough teaching assistantships were granted to meet the labor demand. This is like stocking the shelves of your store to meet what you predict will be the demand. Students buy education. That is the prod-uct we Ph.D. teaching assistants

Taxpayers, Mr. Howard, fund universities for the same reason they pay tuition — because they value education.

Now, let me try to persuade you, Mr. Howard, why educa-tion is valuable. When someone boils the collected value of an entire body of scientific work huge by any measure the caricature, "The standard deviation of variable x is unaccounted for in relation to the mean of all uncorrelated results," and then has the audacity to presume that nothing should be written unless he an understander of English understands what it means. I think, how little intelligent information we should have left. I'd rather not leave the standards of Western knowledge solely in your hands. Sorry, Jeff. Why, indeed, Mr. Howard, could we not leave the nuclear research industry in the hands of some ambitious students with two years of advanced physics?

When children have cancer, why, indeed could we not leave them in the care of some motivated cancer research scientists with M.S. degrees? I mean, it's all just garble anyway, right

In short, I am glad to be a writer and teacher of English, in hopes that I might lead a few people through the confusion of such poor thinking.

Steve Long doctoral student, English

Student upset over Ph.D. bashing

I was aghast to read Mr. Jeff Howard's article, which appeared in the Sept. 13 Daily Egyptian. The article only goes to epitomize the author's state of utter confusion, how can anyone with a modicum of rationality make such misinformed assertions that a Ph.D. degree is not necessary — in the public school— and that those seeking the degree should do so at pri-vate institutions where they would pay for the expenses.

I have serious problems with your callous and arbitrary characterization of Ph.D. programs. Your assertions are tantamount to sheer naiveté.

If we adopt your frivolous argument, then I must ask why you are obtaining a bachelor's degree in philosophy. Oh, wait a minute, an associate degree should suffice, right Mr. Howard? Additional learning beyond the associate could be self directed, and there would be no need for a bachelor's degree. Your getting a bachelor's degree is a waste of taxpayer's money. Your unsavory attack on the humanities is laughable. While some Ph.D.'s have been complacent, you conveniently failed to acknowledge the glaringly enor-mous time undertaking original research, which they share at conferences, etc

Some indulge in research areas that have never been explored that augment in no small measures our interlectualism. Would you discount this crucial contribution to intellectual advancement, Mr. Howard?

Similarly, there is nothing iniquitous about scholars contradicting one another or embellishing on the work of others. That has been the hallmark of academia. But I am sure you are quite oblivious of that, Mr. Howard, as you are of the fact that such contradictions at worst give us a rationale to probe further and at best enhance our scholarship.

Mr. Howard, you article belies our palpable ignorance. Such a line of reasoning takes us all back 2,000 years.

I challenge you to educate yourself on the important contributions Ph.D.'s have made to society. While you are doing so, I ask that you remember one fact — that Ph.D.'s are also taxpay-

Holy day of atonement near

In the name of Allah, the benefi-cient, the merciful: To all who read these few words, I extend to you the greetings of peace, As-Salaam-Alaikum.

Under a cloudless sky and crowning sun on Oct. 16, 1995, the honorable Louis Farrakhan, leader of the Nation of Islam, called a sea of black men, numbering more than one million — not to retribution or war as many had feared — but to atonement, reconciliation and the responsibility of building God's New World Order. The God of Justice had declared that it was time for us as black men and as Christians, Muslims, Hebrews and Nationalists, young and old, members of every fraternal, civic and political organization to stand together as one to declare our right to justice and our right to determine the future of ourselves and our peo-

The Holy Day of Atonement started with pre-dawn Islamic and Christian prayers, traditional African libation and drums. It was followed by a program that featured spiritual, political, social and economi ic messages by blacks from diverse schools of thought from America, the Caribbean and Africa. The program was closed by the Honorable Louis Farrakhan.

Prior to Oct. 16, 1995, some of the persons participating in the Holy Day of Atonement activities had never worked together, but they decided to be examples of atone-ment and reconciliation. We have never seen black men demonstra love for each other as was witnessed at the Million Man March. If you believe that God is love, love was certainly present. That love had a transforming affect on the hearts and minds of many of those men that were present at the march or were at home watching on television. Government and transit officials, as well as tourists, admitted that the Day of Atonement was the most peaceful and orderly day of events that they had ever seen. With this peace, work could begin. Some 200,000 men registered to vote on Oct. 16 while 700 black medical and emergency profession-als manned first-aid stations. Another 500 black lawyers and par-alegals monitored the crowd and police, along with thousands of MMM marshals. The work of selfdetermination and unity continued, and as of now, a little more than 14,000 applications have been filed to adopt those children. The Adopt an Inmate program was announced and since the MMM, several thousand inmates have been adopted in prisons across this nation. The mur-der rate has gone down in many of the cities since the MMM, and black men went home to their wives and families that they abandoned to ask for forgiveness. The transformative effects of the MMM are still being

The MMM has spawned two major events set to occur during the next two months that will further impact the nation and the world. A National Political Convention will convene Sept. 27 through Sept. 29 in St. Louis to address the issues impacting urban areas and the poor that so far have been ignored by either party. The observance of the World Day of Atonement Oct. 16, the first anniversary of the MMM. will have a message sent to all the nations of the world from the United Nations plaza in New York City, and it will feature a keynote address by the Honorable Minister Farrakhan

Here at SIUC, the Holy Day of Atonement, Responsibility and Absence must be observed in the spirit of the MMM. We desire to work with leaders of various religious faiths, for there is a real spiritual work needed to break these false barriers that keep people locked into these religious cocoons that don't allow us to work on common issues together.

lesus Christ confused with God

In response to the article of 9/12/96 concerning Jack Crumbly's search for God through his rejection of Christianity, I believe he did not recognize the true Living God.

He said that when he and his wife went to church that the minister would talk so much about Jesus instead of God, period. But that is the whole point Jack — that Jesus Christ is not God.

I find it sad that your church did not make this crystal clear, nevertheless, it is stated in the Holy Bible. It is the holy Scriptures that make you wise to accept God's salvation by trusting in Jesus Christ. The entire Bible was given to us by inspiration from God and is useful to teach us what is true (II Tim 3:15-16 TLB)

Before anything else existed, there was Christ with God. He has always been alive and is himself God (John 1:1 TLB).

- Whoever transgresses and does not abide in the doctrine of Christ does not have God. He who abides in the doctrine of Christ has both the Father and the Son (11 John 9

You see, for me, not any god will do; only the Living God. Jesus says through his word "I am the way, the truth and the life; no man comes unto the Father but by me," (John 14.6 KIV)

The only path to the Father is through his Son who was resurrect-ed (raised from the dead) and is alive today providing Eternal Life for those who believe. Relationship/loving fellowship with Christ is essential and preferable for me over a religion based on the rules and writing of a deceased prophet. Christ is alive, and He is Love Eternal.

Eradicate racial sickness in America

Ivan Payloy once experimented with some animals, conditioning them to respond in certain ways according to whatever stimuli they were exposed to. In many cases pain was used. This sometimes resulted in the animals developing a healthy sort of paranoia.

Compare and contrast the paranoia of these lab animals with that of the Jews of the 1940's, the Hutus and Tootsi's of Rwanda, the African-Americans, etc... I have prayed to God that one day the oppressor will at least understand how the oppressed feels; also known as empathy.

ere are many shortcuts in life that truly save time; much like a microwave. There is no microwav for understanding each other. This is the individual trust of all who live. Unfortunately, we have stereotyped and shortened just about every facet of life. Racial sickness has overtaken America, and it may be incurable. Just as the Jews once desired to return to their homeland, there are some Africans in America who desire their homeland (repatriation). Martin Luther King once prophesied to African-Americans saying, "We as a people will get to the Promised Land!"

America, and other nations, owe us much for all the great things we have done under extraordinary duress. People like Dr. Richard Charles Drew, without him there would be no Red Cross, Granville T. Woods (traffic light), Benjamin Banneker, George Washington Carver, etc. Reparations and repatri-ation America! (Jesus saves/Acts 2:38)

Taming a 6-ton beast of sound

Organist creates thousands of sounds from 25-foot instrument

BY CHAD ANDERSON.

With more controls than a space shuttle, Shryock Auditorium's Reuter Pipe Organ sits majestically in the north balcony of the house. A'n d just a simple glance at the organ demands respect for any individual who is able to tame the beast of keys, peddles. knobs pipes.

arianne Webb, an SIUC organist and professor of music, describes the pipe organ in simple terms, as if playing the complex monster was as easy as blowing into a kazoo. It may seem simple to her because she designed it more than 25 years ago, but to the average person, the organ might seem impossible to even turn on.

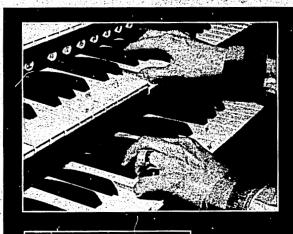

Webb began designing the six-ton organ in 1970, and construction by the Reuter Organ Company of Lawrence, Kan., began in 1971.

But Webb said she spent two years pondering exactly how to draw the blueprints for it.

She added a personal touch to the instrument, designing the general pistons of the organ, which control the vari-ety of sound produced by the pipes, so it could be controlled easily by both the right and left hand of the organist.

Anyone who designs an instrument is

"I practice four hours a day and enjoy playing the instrument very much.J don't have a favorite song to play. My favorite is whatever ! happen to be playing at the time."

Marianne Webb, SIUC organist going to make their own personal touches," Webb said.

es," Webb said.
"What I did is probably so detailed that you wouldn't want to write about it."
The organ cost $91,000 to build in 1971, but Webb said the organ is now valued at about $750,000.

"It's Insured, but I'd hate to see anything happen to it," she said.
"You just can't replace it, and it would probably take forever to get another

All of this planning and building from 25 years ago is now ready to be cele-brated Friday by combining the sound of the organ with the accompaniment of other distinguished instruments such as the oboe, bassoon and clarinet.

The instruments will be played by fac-ulty members of the school of music at 8 p.m. in Shryock

The 25th anniversary performance, which is free to the public, should provide music for everyone, Webb said

The program has a lot of variety in it, and it should appeal to a wide segment of the population," she sald.

Webb said no two-pipe organs are the same, and the biggest challenge of being an organist is being able to adapt to playing according to the different styles of the organs.

What makes Shryock's organ different from others is its capability to play many different styles of music.

"The organ is of an eclectic design and was custom designed for this building, Webb sald.

Some organs are only abia to play baroque literature, but I wanted to make sure that we could play all of the classical literature.

There are more than 3,100 different sounds that the organ can create because of its three keyboards of 66 notes and Its 58 ranks, which give the notes different

While this pipe organ may have 58 ranks and stands about 25 feet high, Webb said the organ is only of medium size.

"Pipe organs range in size from three to 210 ranks, so this one is only moderately large in size," she said.

However impressive the organ may be in size, sound and appearance, it still will range its volume from a quiet hum to an eerie, sharp sound reminiscent to the music of "Phantom of the Opera."

"It has an enormous range of dynamics and timbres," Webb said. "I practice four hours a day and enjoy playing the instru-ment very much. I don't have a favorite song to play. My favorite is whatever I happen to be playing at that time."

BETTER-LIVING-THROUGH CHEMICALS

I was skeptical whether Carbondale would get it or not, but recently "Trainspotting" pulled into AMC University Place 8 theaters. It is rare occasion when this area gets such films, so I advise all of you to go and see Director Danny Boyle ("Shallow Grave") paints a vivid picture of four Scottish heroin addicts. Renton (Ewan McGregor), the main character, is on a roller-coaster of addiction and attempted reform — reform that finally comes from his acceptance of a socially dead life (a 9to-5 existence).

Renton's crew consists of Sickboy (Jonnylee Miller), Spud (Ewen Bremner), Tommy (Kevin McKidd) and Begbie (Robert Carlyle), the only one without a heroin addiction, but with an attitude to take its place. To feed their habit, they steal anything that is not nalled down. They even make a trip to an old folks' home to take the patients' drugs and television. All the performances are good, with exceptional performances from McGregor and Carlyle.

The subject matter cannot be overlooked, no matter how funny the movie is. Director Danny Boyle never lets you forget the pain that is inherent in the use of drugs on this level, by showing the main characters in a light that is iess than flattering most of the time. I do believe that Boyle goes over the edge a couple of times by using visuals that are just plain disturbing for no other reason than to evoke a response that should be present without them. These moments do not destroy the film, but do make the filmmaker seem irresponsible

Other than a few lapses of judgment, I was pleased with the direction of Boyle. He consistently takes the audience places it did not expect to go with his camera work and visuals

The film's most successful aspect is the way it makes people realize how little they can relate or feel emotions for other people. Many times in the film, people's suf-fering is displayed to the audience. At these times, to my shock, most people were laughing. Boyle's use of comedy in such a serious story finally makes one start to question at which points in the film people should find humor and which they should be disgusted.

Keep in mind that all the actors are Scottish, and the accents are very thick. So, go into the movie wanting to hear everything, or you will miss a lot of the dialogue. But do not let this deter you from going to see this

IAN MILLER'S VIDEO DELUXE, PICK OF THE WEEK

The quick-fix video for this week is a movie that is similar in many ways to "Trainspotting." I had never seen Drugstore Cowboy before, and to tell you the truth, I had really wanted to review another of Danny Boyle's films, "Shallow. Grave." However, I took a chance and was "Drugstore Cowboy," staring Matt Dillon and Keily Lynch, is an interesting story about young, junkle lovers. It is simllar to Boyle's film because it takes interesting chances with the visuals, But it does not include the hard-hitting nature of "Trainspotting," Viewers are never shown the physical toil that the drugs take on the characters, and that takes away from the total impact of the film. ***

John Mellencamp Mr. Happy Go Lucky Mercury Records, 1996

Those performers who have maintained a long-lasting career in the music business have done so by adjusting to the times. John Mellencamp realized this in 1992 and came out with "Anything We Want," which was different than anything the business of the state of the st thing he had done before.

He continues this adjustment on his new album, "Mr. Happy Go Lucky." Mellencamp mixes this album with songs such as "Jerry," which has driving, upbeat drumbeats with a dramatic composition of guitar chords. Then on the song, "Full Catastrophe," Mellencamp mixes Irish music with the hard edge of country singer Steve Earle.

Mellencamp Is no Neil Young, but he has survived through the ever changing 1990s, which ended the career of so many 1980s performers who could not adjust.

Every once in awhile you will come across an album that you like, but for some reason you cannot pin point why. Sublime's self-titled album is one of those.

The album is a mix of reggae, folk and rock 'n' roll. The album is much in the vein of the Red Hot Chill Peppers and Beck. But Sublime is a little less mainstream and more of a grassrocts ska band. The first song, "Garden ska band. The first song, "Garden Grove," will give listeners a taste of what is to come on the rest of the album. The song has rhythmic drumbeats with soft acoustic chord selections that will remind listeners of Beck's "Loser." Then on "Under My Voodoo," the band mixes Hendrix-like rifts with reggae rhythms.

All the songs on the album are good, but none stand out as a hit. It is an album full of tracks that are easy to listen to and original at the same time.

Dig Defenders of the Universe Radioactive Records, 1996

Being in a power-pop band these days is tough business. "Defenders of the Universe," the new release from the band Dig, is proof. Listeners may remember the band from its 1994 hit song "Belleve." But if you did not like them then, you will hate them now. The big problem with this album is the same problem with a lot of music today, in that it sounds the same. But in Dig's case, the band over exemplifies this problem in a whole-hearted fashion,

It does not matter if one listens to the hard guitars and pop lyrics of the song, "Whose Side You On?" or the last song, "Opus," the listener will swear that he or she just heard the same song on the radio by another band. it is the responsibility of bands to try to expand and diversify. In this sense, Dig is Irresponsible.

Down By Law All Scratched Up! Epitaph, 1996

In the age of Green Day and Offspring, many people are asking what has happened to punk music. This question can be easily answered in Down By Law's new album. "All Scratched Up."

The band pulls no gimmicks on this hum. I is 17 songs of basic purels.

album — Just 17 songs of basic purik-rock music. Unlike many punk albums today, this one does not dwell in mis-ery to the point of being pretentious. The band members do not put their personal matters out on a platform. The album's songs range from offbeat slash and burn punk songs to the three-chord, verse-chorus rock songs. In the song, "Bullets, Guns, Rifles," the band speaks of anarchy. Then the band reveals what they think is a perfect female on "A Different Kind of Cirl."

Whether listeners consider this album punk, punk rock or hard core, in reality, it is a great rock-n-roll album that does not have a bad song on it.

Retreat and regroup

Weekend in the woods to focus on meditation, relaxation and vegetarian cooking

ILLUSTRATION BY AGNIESZKA PIECZONKA

There are few things finer than a relaxing weekend getaway in the woods, which is exactly what SIUC's Ananda Marga Yoga Club is offering Friday through Sunday at Little Grassy Lake.

The event is titled the Renaissance Weekend Gathering, but people should not jump to conclusions and imagine knights in shinning armor swinging battle axes and swords.

"It's more like a universal enlightening experience," Ron Marusarz, faculty adviser of the Ananda Marga Yoga Society, said. "With the title, I realize people may think it's knights jousting, but renalssance means more than that just the medieval time period that people learn about in history

The weekend retreat actually involves learning more about meditation, relaxation and vegetarian cooking. Yoga will be one of the main focuses of the weekend, and one of the goals is to inform people that yoga is more than posing and meditation.

"Some people think yoga is just postures, but it's actually a lifestyle," Marusarz sald. "Some of the other practices include things like what foods to eat, which can help improve your postures.

This year marks the third annual Renaissance Weekend Gathering, and Marusarz said the event has been successful in the past two years because of a group of people who have been steadily involved with the organization.

There have been 25 to 40 people both years, he sald. "We rent a lodge from the United Methodist Camp, and they let us use their lakefront facilities such as the beach and canoes. So it's more than just yoga. There are also things to enjoy such as nature, canoeing and volleyball. It's a real nice setting.

"(How successful it is) depends on the time of year and the people involved. Some people are curious, and some just want to try yoga. But there has been a corps of about 15 people that have been involved since the beginning.

One of the more interesting parts of the event may be the vegetarian cooking session. Campers will be able to receive first-hand experience on how to prepare a variety of meals that are cooked without meat.

"The meals will include about everything doesn't consist of meat and eggs," Marusarz There will be things like pasta, rice and tofu dishes, and we'll give people ideas for vege-tarian cooking. They will also be able to help prepare the meals, and there will be people to help them with questions.

The getaway is designed so that people of all traditions, nationalities and races can attend and get along together, he said.

"One of the presentations will be the Dances of Universal Peace," Marusarz said. "It's a collected move-ment with songs from different traditions like Native American, Buddhist and Jewish traditions.

For Information, contact Ron Manusarz at 457-6024. Cost for SIUC students is $15 and $40 for the general public. The price includes lodging and meals for the entire weekend.

Throughout the trail, there are numerous sights to see and conquer. Legendary towns and unbelievable natural formations are only part of what makes The River to River Trail is an ecological, as well as a spiritual experience.

Lisa Eversgerd, a senior in recreation from Germantown, has backpacked the trail and sald she soon will be doing it again.

The trall is a tough one," she said.
"It can really put a hiker to the test, but I think that there has never been a day when I felt more proud of myself when I reached my destination point."

Eversgerd said she chose The River to River Trail because it is in Southern Illinois and because it is a long hike.

go to school down here, so the trail was something I could research before taking it," she said. "It is always so important to research the hike you are planning to take, but this area is so gorgeous that I couldn't wait to get on the trail.

It can take anywhere from a week and a half to two weeks and sometimes longer. It just depends how long you spend at the different sights and if you get off the trall." John O'Dell, chairman of The River to River Trall Society, said the trall is nearly 50 years old and is 146 miles

"The trail has been a concept since the settlers came through," he sald. "But It has really only been an attraction for about 50 years. Before that, it used to have small parts sporadically marked. Now, It's a 146-mile marked trail."

O'Dell sald The River to River Trail Society Is a nonprofit organization that does many things for the trail. "We do all kinds of things for it," he said. "We have made our own signs to keep hikers on the trail, we have printed more than 46,000 brochures for people, and we have an annual clean-up day in April where we try and get most of the trash picked up and make sure all the signs are still intact."

The trail beginning at Battery Rock on the Ohio River continues to Camp Cadlz, where one of the original Civilian Conservation Corps worker sites existed.

Jean Glore, of the U.S. Forest Service, said Camp Cadiz Is a good place for a rest along the trail.

There are 11 camp sites, she said: "Camp Cadiz is a relatively primitive camping site, but it has running water, which is always a good thing for hikers. The sites there only cost $4 for a night's stay."

Following the trail west, Eversgerd said Garden of the Gods is a favorite along the journey...

"It was such a wonderful experience to come into Garden of the Gods," she sald. "Before, I had just driven there and hiked, but it's such a different feèling when you've been hiking through the forest and come onto these huge rock formations. I'think that was one of my favorite stops along the way."

Garden of the Gods offers 12 campsites and is maintained year round by the Forest Service.

Williams Hill In Herod Is the next trall head along the trek. Standing at 1,064 feet, it is the second highest point in Illinois and is the highest point in Southern Illinois.

Sarah Davis, an employee of the Route 34 Ranch located near Herod. said many people come through the area needing a place to stay the night or rest for a spell.

We have people come through just needing a little breather," she said. "We offer a place to stay and the beautiful scenery that is offered In this area.

Hikers or people that ride horses come through and may need directions or just some company for awhlie.

Giore sald the River to River Trail is mostly used by hikers, but along the way, the trall is used by horseback riders sporadically.

"Sometimes the hikers will stay at a ranch or stop in for directions along their way," she said. "After Herod, sometimes hikers may visit the One Horse Gap Ranch you can come upon

"I really enjoy riding in Southern Illinois." she said. "The cliffs and the flowers are so beautiful down here."

Sally Harris, Gold

been a trall boss of the One Horse

Gap for nearly eight years.
"I really enjoy riding in Southern Illinois;" she said. "The cliffs and the flowers are so beautiful down here. the edge of town.

Maggle Simpkins, a Tunnel Hill res-ident who has traveled the trail said she enjoyed coming upon towi while hiking.

"You will be hiking for hours on end, and it's nice to kind of creep into an old town — especlally here in Southern Illinois where a lot of the towns are so historical," she said.

Eversgerd sald after Tunnel Hill, she hiked for two days to come upon Ferne Clyffe State Park, where she followed the equestrian trall through the park

"The rock formations in this park were really beautiful as well," she

There were some great caves and hollows that I couldn't ignore, so I spent a lot of time there just explorstores to look at. Eversgerd said the General Store offers the most help to "The people there were so helpful," she said. "By that time, I was running low on supplies, and I was able to get something to eat and drink there. The store has a pretty good assortment of fluids, and you can buy sand-wiches there. I also spent some looking around in the other shops,

"People are always so nice to backpackers, and It helps when your muscles are ore and tired for people to tell onvious that you can backpack a they are trail like the River to River.

Simpkins said Cedar Lake is the next point where many people stop to

There is a great cave there, so when you set up your camp, you feel pretty safe," she sald. "There is a really small waterfall and a lake, so you can take your water purifier and fill up. It's a pretty commercial area, and people need to remember to pack out what they pack in. Sometimes there are beer cans left over or glass bottles lying around. That just makes the area look bad."

Another site many hikers make sure to visit is the Pomona Natural Bridge near Pomona.

The bridge is a natural rock formation that covers a valley. Most hikers will visit the Pomona General Store before continuing on the last part of their hike.

The owner of the general store, Mark Hutchings, said his store is a common stopping point for many hikers and bikers who are on the trail.

"People will come through and need directions," he said. The trail is sometimes a tough one to follow. It winds around, and sometimes people get lost. But we always to get them back on their way.

Hutchings smiled and said hikers sometimes can use more than just directions.

We've had people come In and need a pep talk, you know, something to keep them going," he said. "It's not an easy trail by any means, and sometimes people just need a little talk to keep them golng."

Adrian Block a mountain biker from Chicago, stood in line at Hutchings store denched in perspiation. He said his first time on the

This is clearly the hardest trail I've ever ridden," hie said. I love the challenge because it's really a good time. And at the same time, it's good exercise."

Accompanying-Block was Steve lipe, another biker from Chicago. He emed weary, but at the same time full of energy.
"This trail can wear you out, but it's such a great feeling to know you are accomplishing this, he said. Lipe said the River to River Trail is always a good one to ride because of the low traffic.

"No one is ever on this trail," he sald. "It's nice to be able to go at your own speed and not worry about hurting someone. It's a beautiful

The last stretch of the trail includes Horseshoe Bend. It is a high bluff that over looks the Mississippl River, Glore said. That is a beautiful place to stop and just rest awhile because you can rest and see your destination." she said. When Simpkins finally reached her destination of Grand Tower, she said she felt relieved but at the same time sad.

"I spent a long time out on the trail, and when I arrived at Grand Tower, I was done," she said. "It was a wonderful experience, and I was so proud of myself when I reached it. But a lit-

Drovers crash Carbondale with Celtic sound

Irish folk and alternative rock styles collide at Hangar 9

BY LISA M. PANGBURN

"It's a good feeling to know things can come out of dreams."

Sean Cleland, violinist for the Drovers

Many bands have come and gone in Carbondale, and many bands have visited the Strip to make an impression on bar-goers.

owever, few bands have had the chance to get a record deal from ajor label, have appeared in movies and have mixed the music of Irish folk and alternative rock

The Drovers, a Chicago-based band, will be cruising into Hanger 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave., Saturday as part of its nationwide tour to perform its own style of Celtic music.

The plethora of instruments split between four band members include fiddles, a mandolin, a pump organ and an hourglass-shaped drum called a dumbek. The band also plays "normal" instruments such as bass guitar, guitar

When the instruments come togeth-er, a unique fusion of Irish folk and alternative rock emerge to connect with the soul.

The band has appeared in such movies as "Blink" and "Backdraft" and has had a chance to sign a few major record labels. However, the stardom that it has acquired through the years is something that fiddle player Sean Cleland wants to keep a firm grasp of,

"We definitely want this to last as long as possible," he said from a telephone in Arnes, lowa. "We have done a lot of different things, but I think we prefer to build a following on a more personable level. We don't want to just do arenas because when you play in a club, people can see what you're feeling when you're up on stage."

Cleland said the style of music The Drovers are known for came from an interest in Irish music.

"I became really interested in it when I was a little kid," he said. "I looked around and persuaded some people to play with me, and here we are. It's a good feeling to know things can come out of dreams."

Cleland said when the members play at a club, the band gets almost the same reaction everywhere.

"The people who see us play seem to turn the place into a nice little festi-val setting," he said. "It always seems to turn into a gathering of some sort."

The Drovers are nationally known for playing an interesting mixture of Celtic and alternative rock, but Cleland sald the band just likes to keep the music positive.

"I'd say the music we do is interac-tive," he said. "We want to reach people and give a positive sort of tribal flavor to the audience."

Cleland said Saturday will be The Drovers fifth time in Carbondale. The concert begins at 10 p.m.

"We always have a good time when we play at the Hanger 9," he said. "The people in that town are all pretty nice."

"We want to reach people and give a positive sort of tribal flavor to the audience."

Web sites have everything for the spy

BY BRIAN T. SUTTON

For those who believe the United States is in danger of terrorist attacks, wish to start a revolution or just want to be lames Bond, the Internet is one-stop shopping.

PREPARATION:

First, amass knowledge of the spy world with the most comprehensive site on the Net.

http://www.tscm.com/

The Counter Intelligence and Technical Security WWW Page is a large site with pitiful design and loads of information. The page shows what a wiretapping device looks like, who bugs who and how to debug a home or aranola sets in, click on the links to begin your training.

OUTFITTING THE COUNTER TERRORIST:

Every spy, terrorist, counter-intelli-gence agent or revolutionary needs an array of gadgets that set him or her apart from ordinary folks.

http://www.w2.com/docs2/z/spysh op.ntml
This shopping mall contains all the necessary and superfluous items for the terrorist, revolutionary or spy in the family.

FINDING THE BAD GUYS:

If bugging a neighbor is not saucy enough, there are databases of intelligence groups, terrorists, anti-terrorists, revolutionaries and plain old criminals online. Or you can get help from a "pro-fessional."

http://www.site.gmu.edu/~cdi-bona/tpw.html

Terrorist Profile Weekly Archives. Great fun for party talk or serious research work for the would-be counterintelligence http://ourworld.compuserve.com/homepages/NightHawke/

Sherry Miller, the private investigator of NightHawk, claims to be able to find anyone or Information on anyone.

LEAVE IT TO THE PROS:

The adventure of a lifetime could take several years of military training or expensive professional training coupled with thousands of dollars If the whole idea has become too much, surf over and check out a professional.

The name is Bond. James Bond.

- 1. Eat high-fat, high cholesterol foods.
- Smoke.
- Ignore your high blood pressure.
- Heavily salt everything you cat. Put on extra weight.
- 6. Stop exercising regularly.

Follow these steps and you could retire from work, and from life, so than you planned.

Priestly profile changing

On the Sunday after the much-publicized suicide of a Navy admi-ral whose right to wear a Vietnam combat medal had been questioned, the Rev. Mark Chimiak of Little Flower Parish in Bethesda, Md., delivered what he called a "from-the-heart homily" about medals and self-image. Experience, Chimiak said, gave him credibility: He is a graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and spent five years in the Marine Corps before taking up his religious stud-

Like an increasing number of Roman Catholic priests, he delayed his vocation, entering a seminary at 27. He was ordained last summer at Delayed vocations have changed the profile of the priesthood. In 1966, 95 percent of seminarians 1966, 95 percent of seminarians were 18 to 25, according to the Rev. Gene Hemrick, research director for the National Conference of Catholic Today 33 percent are in that age group, 33 percent are ages 26 to 31 and 33 percent are older. The men in the two latter groups are all sec-ond-career people," Hemrick said.

Second-career priests have been a mixed blessing for the church, Hemrick and other specialists said. On the minus side, late starters generally have fewer years to give the church, and some of them — at least in the early going — are a lit-tle less flexible than a younger per-son would be," Hemrick said.

For some men over 40, he added, there is a certain energy that's not there" — not physical energy so much as creative energy.

The Rev. Mark Brennan, director of men's vocations for the Archdiocese of Washington, said, "We have to do some real work sometimes in helping them to get past their secular-career mode of thinking."

Men who have been commanding bosses, for example, have to learn a leadership style that won't grate on parish volunteers. Men who are used to having their weekends free must adapt to working Saturdays and Sundays.
On the plus side, second-career priests provide sorely needed man-power. Between 1966 and 1994, the U.S. Catholic population increased from 40 million to 60 million. In that period, the number of parish priests dropped from about 36,000 to about 33,000, according to the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate at Georgetown University here, Besides sheer numbers, a lot of these men bring very positive attributes, from their secular careers," Brennan said. "You know, a guy who has an MBA or went through med school or practiced law can relate to a lot of things that people in the pews deal with.

As a Marine, Chimiak spent part of his time in Okinawa, Japan, where he commanded a 350-man company and ran weapon ranges.

on the street that described the "rapture" — the end of the world — as more than 4 million people departing this world in lers than one-fifth of a second.

The evaporation of 4 million who believe this crap would leave the world an instantly better place," he said on the radio.

Some familiar with Codrescu attended the lecture with high expectations, like Kirsten Lillegard, a graduate student in English from Omaha, Neb.

"I thought he was funny and insightful," Lillegard said. "It was everything I expected of Codrescu. He had a kind of warmth you don't get over the Anthony Bereczky, a senior in industrial design from Blue Island, said he went to the lecture because he was interested in the subject matter.

"My parents are from Romania, and I'm first generation here." Bereczky said.

"I though it would be interesting to see someone from the same country my parents are from.

Cross country runner Ben Basalay, a sophomore in architecture from Hoffman Estates, stretches out before practice at McAndrew Stadium Wednesday.

Basalay said he kept working hard and tried to keep up with the veteran runners as a means to improve.

"The older guys were setting a good example for me," he said, "l would just try to hang with them a

The improvement earned Basalay the No. 8 spot on last year's team, which finished first in the Missouri Valley Conference and 22nd in the Nov. 20 NCAA National Meet in Ames, Iowa - a finish he calls the Basalay said he did not quit after being red-shirted because he knew he wanted to be part of a winning

"I saw how close a group the guys from the team were," he said. "They were all working for a common goal; and I wanted to be a part of that."

The common goal Basalay saw in the 1994 team is the same goal he said he sees in the 1996 squad.

"All the goals of the 1994 team are what we are trying to do this year, too," he said. "We are all working for a common goal. I want to do my best to help the other guys out. I want to help them out in the MVC meet and in the NCAA meet."

Sophomore team member Joseph arks, an undecided major from Eldorado, said he also sees good qualities in Basalay.

"Ben is one of the hardest workers on the team," he said. "He is deter-mined to get better and has so much motivation that has helped him improve. I think the younger guys see him as an example that hard work can help you improve."

Basalay said his motivation to run comes from the sport itself.

"Before a race, when you are standing on the line you feel close with your teammates," he said. "You are there to help them and they are there to help you. Running is the

As far as Cornell is concerned,

Basalay is just a great athlete.
"Ben doesn't brag. Instead, he is quiet and humble." Cornell said. "He goes out there and does his job. The sky's the limit to him. He has a bigger heart than anyone I have ever known."

The SIUC men's cross country team will host rival University of Illinois at 10:45 a.m. Saturday.

Playoff hopes dim for Red Sox

The Hartford Courant

DETROIT-The Boston Red Sox are not mathematically eliminated from the playoffs, but that is a formality. With 12 games left, their hopes have faded into the dis-

The Tigers never had playoff hopes. The worst team in baseball was out of the race before the season began.

But on a cold, cloudy night, with few fans at Tiger Stadium, the managers treated the game with the urgency of the playoffs. Tigers Manager Buddy Bell used six pitchers, including four in one inning. Red Sox Manager Kevin Kennedy used five pitchers, sending his closer, Heathcliff Slocumb, to the mound in the

All of the strategy resulted in a 3-hour, 26-minute game and a 4-2 Red Sox victory.

It also led to a milestone — the Tigers' 100th loss. There was an announced crowd of 8,180, but there appeared to be half that. The Red Sox (77-73) got 5 1/3 innings from starter Aaron Sele, before Mark Brandenburg (5-5, 3.73 ERA), Vaughn Eshelman and Mike Maddux got them into the eighth inning. With two on and one out in the eighth, Slocumb worked out of the jam. He finished for his 28th save and 13th in a row.

The Red Sox took the lead in the seventh, when the Tigers used four pitchers, Jose Canseco, pinch hitting for Reggie Jefferson, walked with the bases loaded to give the Red Sox a 3-2 lead. Canseco, on the disabled list since Aug. I, was activated before the highlight of his career at SIUC.

second in RBIs (163); and fourth in homers (24), hits (235) and total bases (367), all while ranking only ninth in games played

Kratochvil also added to his accolades the Abe Martin Award. the highest award from the SIUC baseball program. The award symbolizes honesty, loyalty, dedication and leadership. Kratochvil also received first-team, all-Missouri Valley Conference honors in 1994 and 1995 - the only Saluki catcher given the honor

"Tim meant a lot to this program the past four years," Callahan said. "He walked away from this program as one of the most successful players ever."

But success on the collegiste level is just like success on the high school level: it does not always translate to the next level. Even hitting well and playing flawless defense in Class A ball does not necessarily translate into playing time or a shot at Double A or Triple A ball because teams tend to give draft picks a chance. Kratochvil was acquired through free agency by the

"I expected to get drafted after my junior season at SIUC," he said. "But I didn't have the numbers that stood out to scouts."

But Kratochvil said he was happy to get the chance to put his foot in the minor league door.
His numbers with the Spinners for the most part shine next to draft picks on the team.

"I played relaxed and started off hot in the beginning and rode it out," he said.

Kratochvil put in limited work with the Spinners, only playing in 45 games. He was a designated hitter and played first base, fre-quently catching as the season progressed. His batting average put him among the best on the team. Kratochvil started as the Salukis' catcher but was signed by the Spinners as a first base-

He said he prefers working behind the plate.

"I've always been a better catcher." he said.

He may prefer crouching behind the plate, but standing next to it with a bat in his hands is definitely one of his strengths. Kratochvil hit .304 in 158 at bats with the Spinners, the second highest average behind draftee and fellow first baseman Shea Hillenbrand.

Even though he showed the coaches at SIUC he can hit the ball, Callahan was surprised that Kratochvil hit so well in his first ason in the minor leagues.

"It is a little surprising to hear he hit in the .300 range," Callahan said. "He definitely has some ability from an offensive standpoint. I'm not shocked but maybe a little surprised that he hit as well as he did."

Kratochvil presently student-aches social studies at Benton High School and is relaxing in the off season. But he has hopes to be invited to spring training, where he can show Boston's coaches his skills on the diamond.

"I have some sense of accom-plishment," Kratochvil said about his first season.

"I had nothing to lose because no one expected me to be there. But my major trial will be at spring training."

No Justice for rest of Braves' season

The questions surrounding Atlanta Braves outfielder Dave Justice's return to the lineup have been answered — Justice is done for the rest of the regular season, as well as the post season, should the Braves make the playoffs. Justice has been out of action since shoulder surgery in May. The Braves were hoping to have the outfielder back before the playoffs, but the team's orthopedic surgeon recommended he remain on the inactive list.

Big bucks to make a baseball Psychic

Hey baseball fans, if you think America's favorite pastime and the Psychic Friends Network have nothing in common, you are mistaken. Dan Jones, who snagged Eddie Murray's No. 500 home-run ball, has agreed to sell it to the network for a cool $500,000, making it the most valuable piece of sports memorabilia of all time.

Hitting the big league

Former Saluki tests his bat, glove playing for Class A Lowell Spinners

By Kevin DeFries Daily Egyptian Reporter

The process of getting to the Major Leagues often involves trudging through the trials and tribulations of the baseball ranks in high school; college and the minor leagues beforehand.

Former SIUC baseball standout Tim Kratochvil, however, began his baseball trials in little league at the age of 9.

Most recently, baseball saw him finish his first season of minor league baseball with the Lowell Spinners, the Boston Red Sox Class A team that finished third place in the New York-Penn League with a 33 41 record.

Kratochvil, a 1996 graduate of SIUC, experienced some success in the minor leagues, but he did not just step onto the minor league fields in a day. His hard work and natural ability took years to cultivate.

"Tim was always a good baseball player," Roger Kratochvil, Tim's father and scout for the St. Louis Cardinals, said. "He was always the type of kid who would always practice."

The practice and dedication Tim Kratochvil showed in his early days of baseball paid off in terms of numbers in high school.

Kratochvil's career at Mt. Olive High School, which only graduated 175 people in his class, saw him overcome the low exposure of a small school athlete by working hard and playing well:

As a high school senior in 1992,

Kraiochvil hit .538 with eight homers and 29 RBIs. He also was named one of the top 23 high school catchers in the nation by USA Today, paving his way to play baseball for a top-ranked University.

But that was high school, and success in prep baseball does not always mean success in college baseball.

"The nature of being a big-time college athlete is that you continue to progress over time, but you don't always see that," SIUC Baseball Coach Dan Callahan said. "I've seen guys who peaked in their senior year of high school and never made the transition of being solid Division I, athletes."

athletes."

But Callahan said Kralochvil did make that transition to the college level; He said Kratochvil progressed into a leader on the field and put up some of the best numbers of any

Saluki baseball player in history.

Kratochvil's SIUC achievements include ranking first in doubles (51);

GROSS COUNTRY

Hard work earns walk-on spot on team

By Donna Colter Daily Egyptian Reporter

Ben Basalay stood on SIUC Men's Cross Country Coach Bill Cornell's doorstep two years ago and asked the coach to let him walk on the team.

After a red-shirt season and some tremendous determination, Cornell said Basalay is now one of the Saluki's top runners.

Basalay, a sophomore in architecture from Hoffman Estates, finished in the No. 4 spot for SIUC in the Sept. 7 Memphis Invitational and the Sept. 14 Kansas nvitational.

Basalay was a virtual unknown as a high school runner, Cornell said.

However, Basalay said his love of running made him take the chance and walk-on a team where only one in 12 walk-ons make the squad.

"I wasn't ready to give it up," Basalay said: "I knew no school would give me a scholarship, but I love to run. "The coach (Cornell) didn't have to let "The coach (Cornell) didn't have to let me on the team, but he did, and I owe him for that."

Basalay, began his career at Hoffman Estates High School in the same manner he did at SIUC. Basalay said he was the vorst runner on the high school team.

"I was the worst freshman on the team in high school," he said: "By my junior year, I was captain, which went through into my senior year. I made all conference in cross country my senior season." " Basalay was red-shirted in 1994 because Basalay was red-shirted in 1994 because he was not good enough to make the top eight runners, Cornell said. Basalay went home for the summer, regrouped and returned to SIUC a different runner.

"Ben's freshman year, he showed a little promise and a lot of hear," Cornell said. "He had a lot of desire and killer
