WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States was prepared to defend the Panama Canal if international military had tried to take the waterway by force, President Carter's chief spokesman said Wednesday.

"It is safe for you to assume we would be prepared to defend the canal," a Carter administration official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The White House statement was made Wednesday after the Panama Canal Commission was created. A Carter administration official said that the Senate had not ratified the canal treaty. See story on Page 3.

Panama President Gen. Omar Torrijos said he would be prepared to "defend the canal," but the Senate did not ratify the canal treaty. See story on Page 3.

The chief Senate strategist for anti-treaty forces, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., said the Torrijos statement indicates U.S. Panamanian relations may be difficult during the 22 years before the canal is placed under Panamanian control.

I'm not surprised," Laxalt said of the Torrijos statement. "But it was a hell of a way to start a shotgun marriage." Carter called Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., one of the last to declare himself in favor of the treaty switch. A Cannon aide said the senator told Carier: "He was dumbfounded that Torrijos would make such a statement. He told the president he was very distressed.

But the White House and State Department shrugged off Torrijos' statement Tuesday night, as did the president.

Church building endangered

Citizens protest convention center site

By Steve Lambert

A proposed downtown convention center is receiving overwhelming support from city officials, but at least one group of residents is protesting the idea.

"I ask you, please don't tear down our church," George Kames, a member of the Church of the United States, told the council Monday.

The proposal calls for relocation of occupants of buildings to be demolished, some of those occupants — such as the Maple Street Baptist Church, say that finding new residences may not be as simple as city officials contend.

The question is whether or not to continue the convention center project.

"We have a right to worship there," Kames said. "This church is the only one that would be left at the site.

"Our block would be reserved for a new city hall, public library and parking garage, while the other buildings would be set aside for a hotel-convention center, to be built by a private developer, Stan Hove, general manager of the Carbondale Hotel Inn, has told city officials he will commit $5 million for the hotel-convention center.

The plan is to get $3 million in federal funds from the U.S. Department of Urban Development (HUD).

Kames said he did not oppose the project, but he did not like the idea of a hotel-convention center.
Police blast mountain ice in search of Moro's body

CORVARO, Italy (AP)—Police blasted ice from a mountain lake looking for the body of Aldo Moro and widened the hunt to include cliffs east of Rome. But two jailed leaders of Moro’s Red Brigades kidnapers reportedly questioned the authenticity of the message that claimed the former premier.

"Don’t you realize that message has been written by someone else?" Renato Curcio and Alberto Franceschini were quoted as saying of the communiqué found Friday in Rome and bearing the insignia of the feared terrorist gang.

A lawyer for Curcio and Franceschini said he believed Moro, president of the ruling Christian Democratic Party, was still alive.

The Red Brigades seized the 61-year-old Moro last Friday in a street ambush and dumped into Lake Donna, 72 miles northeast of the capital. Two days of searching there have turned up nothing.

"We found the message entertaining. We would like to know who wrote it," Curcio and Franceschini were reported to have told attorney Giannino Guiso in Turin, where they are being tried on sedition charges. Guiso’s account of the conversation appeared in the Milan newspaper Corriere della Sera.

In a later statement issued through the lawyer, the pair denied Guiso’s account.

Guiso said he believed Moro was alive and that the government, which has refused to negotiate with the kidnappers, still could do so. "We can do it quickly and pay a high political price," he said.

The price for Moro’s release from Rome has been the release of jailed terrorists—apparently Curcio, Franceschini and two other leaders being tried with them.

Meanwhile, hundreds of police and soldiers set off dynamite charges to loosen the ice.

Rena Gasparri, vice president of the Christian Democrats and acting liaison with the searchers, said in a television interview that there was no guarantee Moro was still alive. "I do not think there is 100 percent certainty that there is nothing to be found."

Rainy weather postpones U of I ‘Hash Wednesday’

URBANA (AP)—Rain, blown by brisk winds, dampened the spirits of marijuana smokers and 'Hash Wednesday' was called off at the University of Illinois.

Signs posted around campus and written on the pavement with chalk greeted those who opposed the event. The first one was a year ago. When the weather eased, other signs disappeared and invited participants to try again next Wednesday.

Last year, thousands of students gathered in the park lake area behind the student union building for Hash Wednesday. No one knew exactly how many were smoking marijuana, however.

Campus police kept an eye on the situation, but there were no disturbances or arrests.

The scheduled event would have come one day after the first report of her bicycle-tainted marijuana in the Champaign-Urbana area was reported.

Officials at a local drug counseling center, Gemini House, reported that two samples out of about 20 sent to a laboratory for testing showed traces of samples out of about 200 sent to a laboratory for testing showed traces of paraquat.

Government to give to 1 billion to needy cities

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Treasury Department submitted legislation Wednesday giving depressed cities access to $1 billion as part of President Carter’s urban aid program. The new proposal would replace the anti-recession aid program which channeled about $300 million to states as well as local governments. The Treasury proposal would add about $900 million to local governments to the $700 million already set aside. The new aid package would provide $1 billion to cities and towns with an unemployment rate above 4.5 percent, a declining growth rate or declining income per resident.

Holy has-been...

In the last, hey, boy wonder would be a good description of Burt Ward. He starred in a hit television show right out of college at age 23; he is president of a talent management company.

Ward is best known for the two years he played Robin in the television series "Batman" that ran on Carbondale Tuesday making personal appearances in Carbondale.

After attending the University of California at Santa Barbara, Ward went to UCLA where he met the theater director who was a junior when he decided to audition for the part of the upcoming Batman series. This was his first audition, and he was also the first actor to audition for the part. Several weeks and several hours later, he was the Batman.

The Batman show went on in January 1966, and Ward amused with Adam West in the twice-a-week show until October 1968. The show has been in syndication since at Macatau.

In an interview Tuesday, Ward said he enjoyed doing the television series, but he added, however, that the role did have a drawback.

"It was my career, yes, in terms of other work, it stereotyped me," Ward said. "The whole concept of television is cheap and populism, it's been a big help." Ward said the three-year absence from television has caused him to lose any sort of a generation gap in his fans. That's why he got up early Saturday morning, Batman costume is done by Ward, taking care of that problem, he said.

 Asked what he thought the show accomplished, Ward said entertainment. The kids enjoyed it because it gave them a hero they could worship. The college students and older people enjoyed the camp in it.

In addition to appearing at the supermarket, Ward visited Carbodale schools to give autographs and talk on bicycle safety.

"I would like to devote full-time to the business. The transition to the business world wouldn't be easy. It's not only time-consuming, but very complicated," Ward said.

However, he doesn't want to do away with all personal appearances, he said.

Don't grovel for civic center—take Faner Hall

By Isaac Lowery
Graduate, Journalism

Dear Mayor Eckert,

The students at SU are solely behind your proposal to give "the strip" in downtown Carbondale "a new look," and we would like to convey to you the power of their support.

Your plan to construct a sprawling municipal complex on South Illinois Avenue to replace some of the run-down and vacant buildings is a great idea but, we feel, one which is far too expensive for a city with the tax base of Carbondale.

We think we can help. There is no reason for you to have to grovel for federal funds or plead with the taxpayers to raise money for a new civic center which the democrats see as badly needed.

There is a relatively inexpensive solution—so obvious that it's surprising no one has thought of it before. We have always known Carbondale really needs is Faner Hall.

Clearly, it would be a sacrifice on our part to lose Faner, but students here sincerely feel that they owe something to the city of Carbondale. Faner would be a token of our appreciation.

Certainly, there will be a few logistical problems involved in moving Faner, particularly if it moves from its present location to downtown, but nothing we are not prepared to handle. Additionally, relocating the building should be relatively simple. We'll move it just like it was built—one slab at a time. And when you consider how difficult it would be to scratch or dent unfinished concrete in a museum, you begin to get a better appreciation of the practicality of the proposal.

The most difficult task (one with which you need not concern yourself) will be vacating Faner for the museum to move into the building. Once the architect supplies us with drawings so we can find the stairs that lead from the third floor to the main lobby.

We may not even need the drawings if the window washer doesn't wash the ice which fronts the exit signs during the last big snow. (You'll find the building, with its sealed windows and concrete walls, retains heat and cold remarkably well.)

But, we'll take care of all the details. All the real heavy has to do in order to get this project off the ground is to decide exactly where Faner would be best on South Illinois Avenue. Most students would agree that 28th Street would best fit with this architectural background.

But, we'd suggest that it be moved to a location where it would compliment some of the newer structures on the strip which apparently can form to the city's recently announced strict architectural appearance standards—like, for instance, Hangar 9 for that cute little service gas station across from Dairy Queen.

But, regardless of where it is located on the strip, we're sure you'll agree that there is simply no end to the number of uses the city could find for the building.

There is plenty of room for the city's administrative offices, ample storage space for the city's snow shovel—and where could you find a more efficiently designed and safer confinement for inmates? The administration building, no matter which of them are ex-cops, love Faner's third floor. It has that cool, crisp institutional gray look so becoming to city halls.

We ask that at least you look at Faner to see if you want to personally inspect the building and see all floors, you will need to find a ground floor presence with the properly colored circle painted on the slab. We suggest you enter the garage and cross both the north and south sides. Please follow the corridor until just before it dead-ends near the soft drink machines.

The large upper surfaces are generally on the walls near the machines, but just in case they are obscured (they sometimes are wider; "Slay the Shark" signs), you might look for the Braille instructions which are stamped into the slabs near the elevators.

Sincerely,

The Grateful students at SU

Yalie's bash succumbs to spirit of Puritanism

By James J. Kilpatrick

One night, the word from New Haven is that the party planned by Alex Kwen, a son of a Korean steelworker, has been called off. The spirit of Great Gatsby sacrifice to stuffiness triumphant. Puritanism rides again.

Perhaps you recall the story last weekend. It seems that young Kwen, a sophomore at Yale, decided to throw a first-class party. He arranged for the use of Yale Commons, the university's largest dining room, and planned to turn it into a gambling casino for the night. He had forewarned 500 franc notes printed up; he ordered blackjack and baccarat tables from New York. His VIP guests included 25,000 francs as they came in; others were to be handed 1,000 francs only. Kwen let it be known that any guest who wanted to make $100,000 francs play money, Kwen would, "give him a Mercedes or a Cadillac."

The young gentleman also arranged for a protracted spread. His menu called for roast pig and broiled lobster, prepared by ten Japanese chefs. A dozen bartenders were to prance at four bars, where two truckloads of liquor, imported beer and Château Le Fins Rothschild château would be provided. The cost was to cost $40,000.

Alas, once the invitations had gone out to a thousand guests, Kwen's enthusiasm could not be contained. Yale's president designate, A. Bartlett Giamatti, had the good sense to warn the hands of the matter completely: "I have nothing to do with the party and I don't want to have anything to do with it."

Other authorities felt compelled to pontificate. Yale's Secretary Henry Chauncey told Kwen's party attendees: "If it is from the past, and there is no longer any place for it. It is silly and gaudy. If I knew about this in advance, I would have asked him, 'is this really the way you want to make your mark at Yale? All that money could have been used to help people here fortune than you.

"There are some of the sort could be conditioned to Yale. He scrubbed the party and cancelled his truckloads of home.

What about all this? The story provokes some melancholy reflections. Brother Chauncey's homely expression at least as old as Matthew 26:9. Whether one is dealing with precious utensils in an ashtray, a bottle, a bottle of good German beer, some pestilential facet to certain object that it could have been more for and given to the poor.

It was the over two o'clock in the morning.

Stamps can't be paid for by beer and wine. Mr. Carter would kill off the two-carton lunch.

We are by no means to go back to the Calvinistic notion that pleasure and sin are closely related. The notion is deep-rooted in "the American psyche. It dominates much of our public welfare system. Public housing projects are designed to be unappealingly drab, lest the beauty of the interior thrust its way through the walls. And stamps cannot be paid for by beer and wine. Mr. Carter would kill off the two-carton lunch.

Good, patriotic words: Pounds, inches, miles

By Bob Greene

ATLANTA—They gathered, almost 1,000 strong, to praise the metric system. They left with their heads dropping in defeat, all victims of WAM’s wonderful and growing crusade.

WAM—"which stands for We Ain’t Metric"—is the organization led by Richard B. Mons, south Georgia’s congressman. Mons is a heads-down, all-ally and sinister forces that are cramming the demonstrator has been overcome by the American public. WAM’s guidelines are everywhere, and one’s only salvation against the metric system because we don’t like it. We don’t like it because we don’t want to change to it.

The other morning in Atlanta, hundreds of delegates to the annual convention of the American Metric Council arrived at the Hyatt Regency Hotel to tell one another that somehow it will be slipped over on the American people, how rapidly and without warning.

Speaker after speaker outlined in glowing terms about the pluses of metrication in America. But, the American Civil Liberties Union made one mistake:

The AAA had agreed to allow WAM! to be represented at the convention.

Any nation’s president, I listened patiently as all of the speakers spewed forth their pro-metric garbage. And then it was my turn to address the convention.

Some excerpts from Mr. Greene’s speech:

Thank you all for coming here, but I’m afraid you’re all wasting your time. This may come as a shock to you, but there’s not going to be any metric system in America.

There’s not going to be any metric system because there have been four simple, but I soon found out that I was not alone. From every corner of the United States, thousands of people wrote and called to tell me that they wanted to be a part of it.

WAM! has no dues. WAM! has no membership fees. It is a spiritual thing. Anyone who hates the metric system system must do, and I soon found out that I was not alone. From every corner of the United States, thousands of people wrote and called to tell me that they wanted to be a part of it.

WAM! has no dues. WAM! has no membership fees. It is a spiritual thing. Anyone who hates the metric system system must do, and I soon found out that I was not alone. From every corner of the United States, thousands of people wrote and called to tell me that they wanted to be a part of it.

"You proponents of the metric system are now going to have a better way to do business. This is true, and we aren’t volunteering. We’re not going to use the metric system and we’re not going to learn it. And I’d like you to think of this: if we have a choice to make a system work when the majority of people in the country relate to it in the way they see fit.

"You pro-meta... types tell us that the children of America are ready to learn the metric system in schools, and that because of this the metric system should be seen as the way of the future.

"That’s ridiculous. Children are mindless automatons. They’ll do anything they’re told. Let’s not talk about children. Let’s talk about cowboys. The Cowboy National Hall of Fame has just passed a resolution condemning the metric system in the United States, and demanding that it not be implemented. And do you know who the first name on that position was? John Wayne.

"Now you tell me... who do you think is going to carry more weight with the American people? A bunch of people in blue shirts wringing their orses, or John Wayne on our side? You’d better give up.

"You Kissinger people who want the metric system in America are for foreigners. Of the foreigners to learn that for once they can do the changing of the world with their systems. And here, here for our countries, like giving them financial aid, not demanding giving them war for two or twice for every fewer decades. This time the rest of the world can change to meet our needs. Pounds, inches, miles, yards—those good, patriotic American units that have served us well for 200 years, and we’re not about to get rid of them.

"So have a good time at your convention. But know this. All you’re getting out of this convention is a free trip to Atlanta. Talk all you want about how you’re going to convert the American people to metric. But understand that it’s never going to happen. Things are only going to get worse for you, and you’re finally going to convert the American people to metric, but with it in the German way.

"And take this message home with you: WAM! We Ain’t Metric! And we’re never going to be.

Letters

Being gay is not an "error," it’s a choice

I'd like to respond to the two letters in the Tuesday D.E. that were themselves a response to Blue Jean Day. These people ate up the children of the bible homophobia (fear of gayness) that Blue Jean Day was meant to confront.

Mr. Clam, you’re right; we’re not the norm; but neither are O.J. Simpson’s legs, or Albert Einstein’s IQ. The two sides of the mythological Venn diagram of the middle of the mythical bell-shaped curve isn’t recognized by the two sets of people better thither; all it means is that you resemble a larger percentage of the population than I do on that variable. Being gay isn’t an error; it’s a choice, sexual preference, much akin to the preference that you might have for chocolate over strawberries try ice cream.

Insecure people fear alternate lifestyles

I am writing in response to the letter by James Clam— the April 19 issue of the Daily Egyptian would like to thank Mr. Clam for his enlightening proclamation of what is, what is not, normal. Did the decree come to him in a vision, or was it his natural birthright? Clam chose to label himself as a "sissy," and his birthright is beyond his control. He-righteously states that gay men and women are not the norm, and do not have the right to be proud of themselves.

I am totally ashamed at the level of mentality one has to be at to make a statement like this. They can pass judgment on others. Did any one ever tell Clam that he doesn’t have the right to add to the already overloaded world by having a child? I doubt it seriously. That is infringing on others, and isn’t something like "werds", as he so eloquently puts it, REALLY are? What are these insecure people? What about the parents totally abuse their children? What about battered wives? What about the fact that the over-whelming majority of child molestations are heterosexual in nature? Let Clam incorporate these things into his definition of normal.

Clam calls for an alternate norm, Reform to WHAT? His way of life is he not aware of alternative lifestyles? People’s fears are a result of their own ignorance and insecurities. I do not fear people like Clam, or their slanderous statements. I defy those who pass judgment on others.

I still haven’t figured out why being gay is even an issue anymore. Does it matter that my mother is a man, or that my group of friends is a group of men? I can’t see why it is. It is nobody’s business but my own.

Remember, it is my choice, and I totally respect my having to defend my right to exist with respect to people like James Clam. I, personally, couldn’t care less about being called a "sissy," as Clam so eloquently puts it.

His letter was very punctual with the television of "Holocaust." Hider thought he knew what normal was. And Ms. Reddy, no one forced you to wear your jeans on Friday. But why did you make it so uncomfortable for yourself? You were basically saying that if someone had thought that you might be gay? We’re not asking for your acceptance; we want to bring an awareness of gay oppression. We’ve given you an opportunity that it might be all right to discriminate against someone solely on the basis of who we are.

Twenty years ago, it wasn’t okay in this town to be black; but these days no one would be brave enough to write a letter to the D.E. stating that being black was not the norm and therefore nothing to be proud of. People are people and that’s the way it should be. Clam, all you can ask is to examine your fears; as for me, that old closet has just got too small to stay in anymore.

Pedestrians should ‘walk defensively’

Being from Chicago, I am perhaps overly concerned with everything on the road. Because the students aren’t concerned at all with their own safety and the safety of others. Many SIU students seem to walk into space while crossing the streets. As long as they are within the cross walks, they seem oblivious to any type of vehicle coming their way. This has caused many students to be injured and our age of divine liberation—where SIU students are liberated from old, common sense, but any second grade knows the obvious. These students are confident that their rights as pedestrians are not threatened by the cars, and they are approaching them with surety right the way. So accidents can happen and the students’ obvious lack of safety can be very frightening. It is not a misstep in the event of a mishap.

However, to each day is not an enjoyable task, especially when I’m constantly stopped for students who THINK that they should not have to stop. They just think it’s wrong since it is much easier for the pedestrian to stop than the driver; drivers do not waste precious energy in stopping and starting. This is analogous to attempting to avoid a collision between an automobile and another car. Those who live on campus and walk to class; it’s easy for them, it’s normal for them. Ideally the relationship between cars and students should avoid of any collision-type interactions. Both students and drivers can cooperate in eliminating accidents. This involves the same concept of "secondary responsibility." Students should set aside their own defense by watching the cars. After all, can any pedestrian rely 100 percent on the actions of any driver? So it seems that our power lies in walking defensively.

Remembering Holocaust could prevent another

I understand the embarrassment of the German people at the reopening of the subject of the Holocaust. Remember, Germany was occupied by the Allies from 1944 to 1946 who were not engaged in the armed struggle, including six million Jews. There are still many Germans who blame the Jews for those events and do not want to see it mentioned at all. In no case do we find a nation devoting its energy to the eradication of another group of people as a central policy. (For example, it was the British forces that were retraining on both fronts, previous raids had been down by the Germans and the state to the death camps carrying tens of thousands of people.) The Holocaust thus sets a precedent. It makes what was formerly, unthinkable now possible. The word "genocide"—the destruction of a whole group of people—has entered our vocabulary. And we must all wonder, could it happen again?

Keeping alive the memory of the Holocaust is one way of ensuring that this will never happen again. It is also of great importance that we do not forget its lessons. I therefore recommend it for retelling their story in its mini-series "Holocaust."

Ex-Black Panther sentenced

CHICAGO (AP) — A Cook County judge sentenced a former member of the Black Panthers to 30 years in prison Tuesday for the attempted murder of a woman in her apartment on Chicago's South Side.

Judge Frank W. Barbero imposed the sentence after hearing from the victim, saying he played with the woman and her husband "like cat and mouse."

Testimony indicated the victim "cooperated and betrayed them about their 'worthless' from the throne."

"He humiliated them and ate their food," Barbero said in the trial court. "He took what they had on Christmas." Barbero added, "If you are not safe in your own homes, then where can you retreat to?"

Public Defender Dennis Tobin said in an interview after the sentencing that the penalty was unduly harsh. He said the case was marked with racial overtones and that Barbero refused his motions to allow defense from a said FBI informant, who is now in seclusion on a $1,000 monthly stipend.

Before he was sentenced, Dunigan told Barbero he did not receive a fair trial. He warned that the judge had been drinking with the victim and the police, and that the restaurant where the victim was hosed down by a turp on March 17. Barbero never disputed Dunigan's allegations.

"The position is that this is a very hard case to resolve," said Tobin, who will appeal. "But we feel all the information should be put before the people and the police have been hurtful to the family.

Tobin and the rejected evidence included statements by an asserted state's attorney Greg Gines to Dunigan that the India was "making a tape" and "a wagter jacket." It also showed manifestoes stemming to Dunigan William O'Neal, a paid FBI informant now living under a protection program.

A story of envy, hatred, friendship, triumph, and love.

TEXAS COPS’ PROBATION UPHLED

HOUSTON (AP)--A federal judge has denied a Justice Department motion that the probated sentences given to three former Houston policemen in the death of a young Mexican-American teenager.

U.S. District Judge Ross Sterling, who issued the original sentences, said the government’s motion was “entirely unnecessary.”

He had sentenced each of the three—Terrry Demos, Stephen Orlando, and Joseph Jaramil—who was in prison on misdemeanor civil rights violation convictions, and 10-year probated sentences on felony convictions.

'Spiritual disco' offered Friday

By Dave Erickson
Entertainment Editor

The disco experience is often dismissed by many students as being Jive, wrapped up in Narcotic thinking about dancing and dancing "in step."

But Miles, who coordinates lifestyle at the Health Service, has a complete and different concept of disco dancing, one which utilizes it as a means for spiritual and social growth and as an easy to avoid stress.

In conjunction with Health Service's Free School and Health Education Activities Council, Miles is coordinating a series of "Lifestyle Dancing" events on Friday nights in the Big Healthy Room at the Student Center.

"All cultures have had rhythmic social dance," Miles said. "Somewhere Americans have lost that ability to move in unison. We do a lot of 'dancing in our heads,' things like watching TV."

The response to the dance so far has been very good, according to Miles, who said "90 people participating during the coupling of the Friday nights last from 'eight until late.' When we want to move the disco to the south patio of the Center.

Jean-funk, rock and disco music have been used to inspire what Miles calls the "natural dancer within us that has an incredible supply of creative movement and expression which is our individual uniqueness."

"Lifestyle Dancing" has been "very much a cut above" which was real nice," Miles said.

"Stone" to play Eagles; losers pay $5,600

It's the rock stars against the rock journalists May 18 when the staff of Rolling Stone magazine take on the Eagles in a softball game at the University of Southern California's baseball field.

The losers will have to donate $5,600 to UNICEF's World Nutrition Program, designed to improve self-sufficiency in food production for the possibilities of famine when he was "young in the Sac Francisco area in Jr."

"It kind of planed across. Academia didn't seem to make much sense anymore," Miles, a former student of the psychology and medical school faculties, said.

After studying various forms of consciousness growth which flourish in the Bay area, Miles saw dancing as "a way to lose yourself, like meditation."

"One of the beautiful things about the disco environment is that you can turn on your brain as you can get in touch with your body," he said. "Once you get it through, you remember you own the right and wrong way to dance. Just let your feelings drive for a while."
Centerstage hits peak with Brecht's plays

By Claire Clarke

Centerstage rounds out the year on the highest possible peak of good performance - especially well played - and might even be considered as revolutionary. Just as they have prepared themselves to answer any critics that might be brought, Klaus reports the end result of their study of fear will have to have the force in print, and it did emerge. The performance was a happy one, and they were played with the ease that comes from being confident, aware and profes- sional, "The Informer," takes socialism one step further.

Set in Nazi Germany at the beginning of the rise of Hitler, it is a story of a deeply determined man, leading up to the crime, theoretical point by theoretical point, until the final analysis, murder is the only alternative left.

The play is a marvelous opportunity to observe a practical application of Lenin's theory. As far as the performance, the agitators were deftly played by Brandt, Moscow and Save.

The rest of the play is spent trying to remember possible combinations of bits of conversation and trying to rationalize them into something that might be considered innocent. Just as they have prepared themselves to answer any critics that might be brought, Klaus returns. The end result of their study of fear will have the force in print, and it did emerge. Two years after, Joe Willis will be left out, and it is easy to pick up on the fear that is in this play. And, unfortunately, it is embarrassing to realize that as human beings we are capable of bringing on such times as these.

The point here, however, is not to make a special commentary, but to express a deep appreciation for two of the most powerful pieces of theater. The people involved could have been a better job. And Centerstage goes out with a bang!

Friday to play Thursday

By Nick Dumas

Student Writer

A student combining mood photography with music may sound like something on the level of Pink Floyd, but a folk singer, Bob Friday, will be among those techniques this Thursday. At his eight o'clock performance at the Desert Playhouse, he will perform a circle of songs.

Bob Friday, a singer and guitarist, calls his show "The Carousel of Time." The name is a phrase taken from J.R.R. Tolkien's "Circle Game," which inspired the philosophy of Friday's show.

"It's a progression of time showing that time always changes the seasons. It's an 'ever circular nature' of life. That's what the show ends up being—a circle of life," he explained.

"The Carousel of Time" is literally a one-man show. Friday takes his own photographs, produces, directs and performs the show. He also serves as his own manager and, for now, his single agent. In fact, the only part of the production that isn't Friday's is the music. Although he has written his own songs, he uses only the material that other songwriters have written.

Friday feels that by combining music and photography, he can give even an old-fashioned song a "new life" for the audience.

Friday's performing for a small audience in the auditorium of the student center. He first met his twin promoter and a soap opera producer a few times in and out of the auditorium with whom he discussed the possibility of promoting and photographing Thursday's show.

"My last show was last Thursday," he said. "Now I'm thinking of doing a show every Thursday and Friday and maybe even Wednesday."

Friday's show is at 8 p.m.

The show is called "The Carousel of Time." It's a one-man show, and Friday will perform all the songs himself. He will also show his own photographs and work on the set.

Friday is a student at the University of Illinois and will be performing on campus for the first time. He has performed at various venues in the area, including the University of Wisconsin and the East Coast.

Friday's show is at 8 p.m.

Program chief leaves Health Service

By Vi-vi Leibach Staff Writer

Jim Perkins, coordinator of the Prevention Program, left his position at the Student Health Service last month but will remain on staff until July.

Perkins, who has been at SIU since 1965, began working on a graduate degree in public health at the University of California at Berkeley this fall.

"I have always been interested in positive health and preventative programs," Perkins said. "This graduate program gave me an opportunity to get a degree in the field," said Perkins, who received his undergraduate degree in history at the University of Kansas.

Perkins, 33, left the University of California after attending four schools in public health. Only about 10 schools are accredited in that field in the country, he said.

The coordinator was hired in 1975 as an administrator and program developer of the Prevention Programs. The Prevention Programs are divided into Human Sexuality, Self-Care, Synergy and Lifestyling.

In 1975, the Human Sexuality and Synergy programs were going strong. My job was to develop a new program thrust in prevention and positive health," said Perkins, who has been a "mammoth and conqueror."

Perkins said the Lifestyling and Self-Care programs were developed by John McCamy, a psychologist specializing in preventative medicine in Florida. McCamy was hired by SIU as a consultant to develop the Lifestyling program.

Perkins worked with McCamy to incorporate the physician's positive health program into the Prevention Programs. The Self-Care program, which emphasizes self-treatment, also arose out of McCamy's model program.

Perkins said SIU is moving very quickly in the direction of positive health and is more advanced than other state schools. The Lifestyling program is getting a good turnout in workshops which help students make positive changes in their lives, he said.

"I came to SIU with more experience in human sexuality and counseling than in a living area. I found that I want to get professionally and personally involved in this area," he added.

Perkins said that after he receives his degree he will have the options of teaching or developing positive health programs at universities.

Winter, strike blamed in economic lag

WASHINGTON — The nation's economy stagnated in the second quarter of the year, economic output fell 4.4 percent at an annual rate, the Commerce Department said yesterday.

Officials said the 4.7 percent contraction was the deepest since the recession ended in the last quarter of 1991. The Commerce Department said it had overstated the fall in economic output by 4.4 percent.

Although administration economists had anticipated a contraction in the first quarter of the year, they had not expected it to be as bad as it was. The 4.4 percent decline in GDP was the steepest since a 9.9 percent drop in the first quarter of 1993 when the economy was in the depths of recession.

Mountaineering is a skill, a science, and an art. Yet anyone with a thirst for excellence and normally developed motor skills can master it. Simply study these fundamentals and follow them faithfully.

1. Step one, appropriately enough, starts by selecting the correct site. To do so, pick up a bottle of Busch. This is commonly called heading for the mountains.

2. Okay, here's where the fun begins. Hold the mountain firmly in your left hand, grasp the mountain top with your right hand and twist the little fella off. Then you go.

3. Now for the tricky part. Neophytes, listen up. The proper pour is straight down the center of the glass. Only in this way will the cold, invigorating taste of the mountain come to a head.

4. Once poured, pacing becomes paramount. As any seasoned mountaineer will tell you, the only way to down a mountain is slowly, smoothly, and steadily—savoring every swallow of the brew that is Busch. If you're a bit awkward at first, don't be discouraged. Perfection takes practice. Soon enough, having emptied your glass and filled your soul, you too will be a mountaineer.

Parents prescribe soup for 2-year-old's cancer

SCITUATE, Mass. (AP)—Two-year-old Chad Green drank his bowl of milk for breakfast Wednesday as if his life depended on it. His parents think it does, despite a judge's order that their son must continue chemotherapy treatments for leukemia.

Gerald Green, 37, and his wife, Diana, 34, are betting on the milk, his grandmother's homemade chicken soup, limburger cheese, rolls baked from dark flour and other items on a special menu to give their son the strength he needs to fight the disease.

"He might be the first one cured by limburger cheese," his mother said in the partly joking, affectionate manner she used when discussing her son, who contracted the often-fatal disease about 14 months ago. "We can't get near him when he eats it."

A chopper too barely aware of the controversy swirling about him, Chad drank five bowls of the chicken soup, with barley, rice and curry, for supper Tuesday at his home in this town 20 miles south of Boston, his mother said.
The meal was the first after Superior Court Judge James A. O'Grady ordered in Plymouth that despite his parents' objections, Chad must continue going to Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston for chemotherapy.

Man's fate to be decided 14 years after murder

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP)—Fourteen years after the brutal slaying of an 18-year-old student, a murder trial jury began deliberating Wednesday the fate of a data processor who surrendered last fall after telling friends he was tortured by guilt.

Joseph Otsa Egengberg, 35, and his attorney admit he killed student Judy Williamson while she struggled with him in his car in an underground garage at the University of California's Berkeley campus.

But he has pleaded innocent to first-degree murder, claiming no premeditation was involved.

The seven-woman, one-man jury began its deliberations after receiving 40 minutes of instructions on points of law by Alameda County Superior Court Judge Hugh Kawamura.

Defense attorney Lincoln Macht told jurors Thursday that Williamson, who was 18 at the time she was killed, died in a "shameful, terrible, 'sad, monstrous' act."

He asked jurors not to convict Egengberg of second-degree murder or voluntary manslaughter.

Egengberg never testified and his attorney called no defense witnesses, merely terming the prosecution case "weak" on the issue of premeditation. During six weeks of testimony, Egengberg sat impassively in the defense table, Williamson, whom Egengberg had dated occasionally in high school, was killed on Oct. 28, 1965, from a bus stop in her hometown of Lodi, where she was killed for a ride to the campus. The disappearance was covered by a search of one of the nation's most-watched news coverage.

The prosecution, led by Egengberg, also a UC student and son of a former Lodi mayor, packed his bags and left his car in a friend's garage, the car being found in a nearby apartment building.

If convicted of first-degree murder, Egengberg could be sent to life in prison but could be paroled after serving 16 years. A second-degree murder conviction could result in a maximum six-year prison term.

The Greens contended the side effects of the treatments turned Chad into a "wild animal," with raging temper tantrums and other hyperactive behavior. They insist the diet plus other treatment they will not specify will ward off the disease.

The Greens plan to appeal the judgment. "We're not willing to wait," said Mrs. Green, whose husband is a housepainter and welder.

She said they are seeking nutritional advice from a Delaware, Ohio, bacteriologist John Vinnery, who is seeking expert witnesses to testify for them if they won the right to another hearing.

Under 9th Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco, the Groves must take Chad back to the hospital to begin his " maintenance phase" during which he will receive a daily pill at home and visit the hospital once a month.

He was roughly at the same phase last November when the disease was in remission and his parents halted his treatment at home. Under the order, a nurse paid by the state will give him the medication at home.

Tax court rules
home, work can be in different states

WASHINGTON (AP)—Home may be where the heart is, but when tax problems loom, that may not be where the heart is either.

The U.S. Tax Court has upheld an Internal Revenue Service ruling that a person can live in one state and work in another, even when he has his home in a third state, for tax purposes, in a case decided last week.

The court ruled in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Andrews of Houston, Ohio.

Andrews is a navy officer and obtained his leave through his base in Houston, Texas. He generally worked on ships in Houston during 1974, the tax year in dispute, traveling from Oklahoma to Houston to work and to attend union meetings.

But a tax return Andrews submitted for 1974 deducted expenses for travel between Noble and Houston as business expenses, but the Internal Revenue Service rejected this, stating that the travel was really commuting, and thus not deductible.

The IRS held that Andrews’ home, for tax purposes, was in Houston. Andrews argued that the travel was for rental purposes, and he owned property in Oklahoma, including rental property there, and was “away from home” while in Houston.

The court held, however, that the travel expenses were not deductible.

The court also decided that the inconvenience he traveled to work at a rate lower than he was accustomed to is not a deductible personal expense, the court said.

Sierra Club sets national goals talk

The national legislative and administrative goals of the Sierra Club are to be addressed by the Shawnee Group of the Sierra Club on a telephone at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Student Center Auditorium.

The main speaker will be Jonathon Ela, executive professional staff representative of the Sierra Club.

The present top national legislative concern is passage of a bill which would give permanent protection to 10 million acres of land in Alaska. The measure is currently being opposed by the U.S. House Committee.

A top administrative goal is to have roadsides widened areas within the U.S. National Forest system identified and protected. In the Shawnee National Forest, 15,000 acres are being considered. The Sierra Club is attempting to have the Lick Creek area added as well.

Director: Effort aids disabled

By Bill Callen

SU's effort to "mainstream" the handicapped student into the student population instead of segregating him in a valuable and in helping the disabled person adjust to society, says James Jefferson, a SU graduate and current director of the Illinois Division of Vocational Rehabilitation.

Jefferson, who received his bachelor's and master's degree in political science, is the second handicapped individual to be elected to chair the state agency that he currently heads at the state rehabilitation agency.

There are very few colleges as accessible to the handicapped student as SU. Jefferson sees it as a general attempt to treat disabled students just the same as the others. I feel this is an accurate reflection of the way we are dealing with the less fabricated cause the transition is in its final stages.," he said.

Jefferson will receive the President's Trophy-Handicapped American of the Year Award on May 4 in Washington, D.C. President Carter will present the award to Jefferson during the opening session of the annual conference of the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped.

The award is given to the person judged to have the most positive influence on disabled individuals and the general public’s perception of handicapped people.

"Receiving this award is personally very rewarding and it also speaks well for the activities concerning rehabilitation services taking place in Illinois. It has to be shared with a whole lot of people," he said. "The state legislature deserves a tremendous amount of credit for their continued support of programs that benefit disabled individuals."

During his first year as director, Jefferson established the Office of Consumer Affairs which is headed by the Senate. It is designed to ensure that the clients are given an equal voice in the services that can affect their families.

"The program I now direct, I was a client of in West Virginia and having been a client you gain some understanding of the strengths and weaknesses of the program," he said. "Technically, persons who have received professional training in rehabilitation fields as opposed to having a real perspective of the problem."

POLICY ON SATISFACTORY PROGRESS

(FOR STUDENTS RECEIVING FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE)

To Members of the University Community:

The policy on Satisfactory Progress (For Students Receiving Financial Assistance) will become effective with the Fall Semester, 1978. This policy was developed in response to a congressional mandate for institutions of higher education to establish minimal standards of satisfactory progress for students receiving federally funded financial aid. This policy has gone through extensive review processes by each of the constituencies. Any questions concerning the provisions of this policy or its implementation should be addressed to the Director of Student Work and Financial Assistance in Woody Hall, Room C322.

We wish to express appreciation to the students, faculty and staff members of the University who have given generously of their time in developing this policy.

Bruce A. Swiderski

Warren W. Brandt
President

For the purpose of this policy, academic progress for determination of financial aid status shall contain two components. All students who qualify for and receive financial assistance shall:

1. Meet academic standards as prescribed in the current Southern Illinois University Catalog to enroll in good standing or an academic probation. (Students who are academically suspended may be readmitted with academic probation status by their deans.)

2. Satisfactorily complete a minimum of twelve (12) semester hours for full-time students and six (6) semester hours for half-time students during each semester the student qualifies for and receives financial aid.

Financial Aid Warning:

A student who fails to attain the minimal standards set forth in this policy for the first time will be sent a letter indicating that he/she is being placed on financial aid warning for the next semester or summer session.

Financial Aid Terminations:

A student shall be placed on financial aid termination when he/she is not eligible to enroll for academic reasons or when he/she is deficient by more than eighteen (18) hours for a full-time student or nine (9) semester hours for a half-time student in the expected number of hours passed. Those students who are on financial aid termination status cannot have their aid reinstated until such times as they are readmitted and their total number of hours passed is within six (6) hours for full-time or three (3) hours for half-time of the expected hours to be completed.

The financial aid status of these students receiving financial aid shall be evaluated at the conclusion of each semester or summer session. The decision to impose a financial aid warning or termination on a particular student who has failed to meet the minimal standards shall be the responsibility of the Director of Student Work and Financial Assistance in consultation with the student's academic dean.

The Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance shall notify by letter any student receiving financial assistance who is in jeopardy of losing such assistance because of a deficiency in the minimal standards. Said notice shall be addressed to the student's most current local address on file with the University. It shall be the responsibility of the student to inform the University of a correct mailing address at all times. Any change of address shall be noted with the Registration Center. The student's academic dean shall receive copies of all notice letters.

Appendix:

Any student who has been placed on financial aid termination shall have an opportunity to appeal such action to the Dean of Student Life. Any further appeal shall be referred to the Vice President for Student Affairs.

Common Cause begins drive to organize Southern Illinois

By Perrett Claypool
Student Writer

Common Cause, the national citizens' lobbying organization, has come to Southern Illinois.

According to David Sadler, steering committee chairman for the group in Illinois, Common Cause is currently organizing the 54th Congressional District. The 54th District encompasses most of Southern Illinois, including SIU.

Sadler and Kim Spalding, media publicity coordinator, spoke recently to about a dozen persons gathered at the Student Center for the first of Common Cause's organizational meetings.

Sadler said Common Cause chose Carbondale to begin the membership- and organizational drive because of the approximately 200 Common Cause members in the 54th District live here.

"Common Cause is a non-partisan organization, its constitution calls for the creation of better government through informed pressure on legislators and the bureaucracy," Sadler said.

Common Cause has already established a telephone network in the district. According to Sadler, the network is designed to generate grass-roots support for pending legislation. It consists of Common Cause members and workers somewhat like a chain letter.

When a favorable bill is up for review by a congressional committee, the Common Cause state or national headquarters issues a "telephone alert." The district's telephone coordinator phones three "activators," who in turn phone four chain leaders. The chain continues, each member calling four other persons with a request to write their congressmen or representatives about the bill.

"People's lobbies such as Common Cause have learned that grass-roots lobbying is the most effective, first line of defense against political change," Sadler said. "Letters from back home—that's the best form of political pressure."

Common Cause has used grass-roots political support to win laws limiting corporate political contributions and establishing public financing of presidential elections through the direct return check-off.

Common Cause lobbied heavily for public financing of congressional elections as well, but Sadler said that "public financing is dead for this year. We'll revive it next year; but there's no chance for new legislation before the election."

Sadler said Common Cause is extremely effective because it concentrates on only one or two issues at a time. The current push is for a lobbying disclosure bill which would require lobbyists to file financial records and reports on their activities.

The bill, HR 899, has been reported out of committee, according to Sadler. A telephone alert in mid-April will kick off the organization's push for the legislation, he said.

"Overall, Simon's record is good. He has given us support on most of the main issues," Sadler said.

Sadler added that he hopes SIU students and faculty—especially those in the political science and sociology departments—will play a major role in Common Cause activities in the area.

Early detection key

People can cut cancer deaths

By Bill Collier
Staff Writer

If any headline is to be made in the fight against cancer, people must learn to detect it early and avoid cancer-causing situations, according to Bruce Peterson, public education committee chairman for the American Cancer Society for Jackson, Union and Franklin Counties.

Peterson said, although one out of every three cancer patients is curable, only one out of every two will survive one year if the cancer is detected early. He said regular examinations by a physician and patients are crucial.

Most people don't practice good preventive measures because they don't know about or discover and they are not concerned about the long run, he said.

DALLAS (AP)—Droodgit Billy Graham, in Dallas to address interior decorators' convention, couldn't find a Bible after almost a meeting.

A Dallas investigation by security personnel of the Fairmont Hotel revealed the theft of five interviewers' card cases, two Bibles and a camera whose value was not known.

"It was not a particularly important Bible, but any Bible is important, and it was not my ambition to sit around after the theft as if I were merely a fairily new translation I was demonstrating," said Graham.

Ex-convict attributes reform to rehabilitation organization

CHICAGO (AP) - Ronnie Cunningham, 33, hasn't been out of the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg long enough to forget how it feels to have money, a job, no care and no self-confidence.

He had gotten on a plane from Kansas to O'Hare Airport more than 10 years ago and jumping into a cab without a penny in his pocket.

He prowled the streets of Chicago, at 19, his younger sister for the fare. He spent the next few days in the slammer, visiting friends and trying to rope with overdue debts and a pending divorce.

His life was on the skids. His memories down the drain and impossible to treat.

But Cunningham has found a way to get his life back.

Cunningham has many successful stories like Cunningham.

It is the among the most important and successful projects that the various organizations nationally that pick up the rehabilitation half from the public sector by trying to prevent an ex-convict from returning to crime.

The money to spend doesn't always come easy, especially given the present anti-crime mood of the public that seems to encourage prison construction rather than rehabilitation of the people who lived in jail.

In Illinois and nationwide, the public is urging judges and law enforcement authorities to get tough on crimes and imprison them longer and more often. Even farmers expert say rehabilitation is out of style.

Oil industry reports decline in U.S. reliance on foreign oil

NEW YORK (AP)—The United States appears to have made a "staggering" cut in its growth of energy consumption and has pared its reliance on foreign oil, the oil industry said Wednesday.

The trend developed despite the failure by Congress to pass President Carter's energy plan and is likely to bolster the dollar, which jumped 17 percent in 1979 and 20 percent in 1978, as shown in a quarterly 14 percent for the last three months of 1978, according to statistics released by the American Petroleum Institute. In addition, preliminary data indicates that the United States last year significantly reduced its growth of energy usage, according to the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation. An independent study group.

The developments are likely to help strengthen the U.S. dollar overseas, might help reduce the balance of payments deficit and should blunt some political criticism of the United States. For last year, and analysts have attributed much of the problem to the United States' $28.7 billion trade deficit last year. For foreign oil alone last year, the U.S. spent $4.5 billion.

In addition, foreign and business political leaders criticized the United States for not slashing its thirst for energy.

Although the level of oil imports is expected to rise slightly during the second half of the year, most analysts expect total imports at year-end to be below the 1978 level, perhaps as much as 5 percent lower. They expect imports to rise again in 1979 or 1980, but at a much slower rate than in recent years.

They cite several factors for this turnaround:

- Each barrel of oil produced in Alaska replaces a barrel that would have been imported. About 1.1 million barrels of Alaskan oil are being produced each year, compared with 1.6 million barrels a day expected by 1985. Alaskan oil production began in January.

- In 1977, to combat natural gas shortages and severe water quality, huge quantities of crude oil and heating fuel were imported. "We had a couple of weeks when distillate (heating oil) imports went over a million barrels a day, which was outrageous," Goldstein said.

When that crisis ended, U.S. refiners—who also were facing a glut of crude oil—kept refineries going full blast. That resulted in large inventories going into last winter, which also reduced imports.

Vice president's brother will address Unitarians

The Rev. Lester Mondale, brother of Vice President Walter Mondale, will be in Carbondale Sunday for the annual Carbondale Festival. The Rev. Mondale, nationally-known Unitarian minister and author, will speak on "Religious Freedom: The Image of Man" at 10:30 a.m. Sunday at the Fellowship, 701 W. Elm.

Mondale received his doctorate from Marquette University in 1945 and has served as a Unitarian minister in Newport News, Va., and in Des Moines, Iowa. He retired, he lives in a log cabin he built himself and also owns and manages the Frank Farm. Mondale will precede a vice presidential visit to the area which is scheduled to arrive in Carbondale May 15th. Pres. Mondale will be speaking a fund raiser for 33rd District Rep. Paul Simon.

The prestigious Carbondale Festival is David Jones, a professor in geography at SIU, Paul A. Schipp, visiting professor in philosophy at SIU, and Neil Pradaule at Mondale's 52nd Sunday.

Neutron bomb tested

PARIS (AP)—A Paris newspaper reported that France has exploded a experimental neutron bomb at its South Pacific test base, but French researchers are believed far behind the United States in any deployment of such a weapon.

The Foreign and Defense Ministries refused to comment Wednesday on the front-page story in France-Soir, a mainstream newspaper. The paper has been, according to a longstanding policy of refusal to disclose information on nuclear tests at Mururoa, the test range in the South Pacific.

Well-informed observers believe the France-Soir story, which followed similar reports in the weekly magazine Le Point and the Le Monde newspapers, stemmed from an "underground" nuclear test last month.

The story was reportedly but never officially confirmed, was part of a series of French efforts to improve its nuclear arsenal. Other nuclear powers, such as France, have been conducting tests on neutron bombs, research and testing covered all kinds of weaponry but declined specifics.

The respected newspaper Le Monde quoted "informed circles" Wednesday as saying neutron weapons were being tested within the grasp of a superpower like France but that research was not far enough along for experiments.
House endorses property tax

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — An Illinois House committee Wednesday passed to the full House the problem of how to replace an estimated $600 million in property taxes levied on corporations.

The tax, which includes levies against inventories and other items except real estate used in manufacturing, are collected by local governments and used to fund other services.

By a vote of 14 to 6, the House Revenue Committee approved a bill replacing the current tax with an income taxes surcharge levied on corporations, utilities and partnerships operating in Illinois.

But, covering all bases, it also approved two resolutions calling for constitutional amendments that would retain the current tax. One would extend it for 10 years, the other indefinitely.

"It's not easy, sometimes, to come to grips with a problem of this kind," said Rep. Richard A. Nagel, D-Palatine, chairman of a subcommittee pro-posing the income tax measure. "I'm tired of being charged with ducking the issues and not doing the job."

Under the measure, partnerships, trusts and estates now paying a property tax would pay instead a 1.4 percent surcharge on their Illinois income tax. Corporations with stockholders would pay a 1 percent surcharge over current income tax rates. Raising salaries would be excluded from the surcharge.

Utilities would pay a 1.4 percent surcharge on income taxes under the measure, and would be required to get approval from the Illinois Commerce Commission before passing the tax rate on to customers.

Illinois Call Telephone Co., U.S. Steel Corp., Jewel Food Stores, Montgomery Ward & Co. and the Illinois Retail Merchants Association supported the measure.

"This is a replacement tax and not a new tax," argued Philip Likioch, vice-president for taxes of Montgomery Ward.

The Illinois Gas, Light & Coke Co., Central Illinois Light Co., the Association of Electric Cooperatives and Caterpillar Tractor Co. opposed the income tax proposal.

Profitable businesses which now pay the property tax would be harder hit by an income tax, witnesses said.

Women trackers set for Redbirds
By Steve Courson
Staff Writer
After facing slate-title rival Illinois twice last season, the women’s track team will get a good look at another favorite in the Illinois state Redbirds is a quadrangular.
While teams from Chicago State, Illinois State and SIU will all be competing out on the field, Saluki Coach Markie Thompson saw it as more of a two-team meet.
"Either one of those teams could have won, it was a very close meet. Also, because it is a quadrangular, I believe that each team will work for us or against us." On the basis of both teams' best performances thus far, Blackman figures that the Salukis should be able to take the first-place finishes in the 300-meter hurdles and 400-meter hurdles. Forwes a Redbird winning the discus, shot put, and 1,500 meter run, and believes that the 100, 200 and 400 will be close.

"The keys to the meets are winning the events we should and to take second, third, and maybe," she said. "The biggest difference between the two teams is that we have more depth than they have.
"They have one good person in the shot put and we have two. They have one good discus thrower and we have two.
"They have just one good javelin thrower while we have three." Blackman is slightly concerned over the possibility that the two other teams in the meet will take away some points from the Salukis. The Redbirds should still capture plenty of points in these events, but the extra teams could take away some second, third, or fourth-place finishes from SIU, according to Blackman.
"The larger the meet, the more likely that other teams are going to take second and away from you," she said after noticing that Illinois State has finished ahead of SIU in two other invitationals this season.
"The Salukis will be in a good position to win it Saturday and the rest of the season for that matter without the services of 1,500-meter and 1,000-meter runner, Bruce Merskey. He has been running on a stress fracture in the lower leg and will not get back but has finally decided to call it quits for the year.
"He was what was best for her," Blackman said. "If she lays off it six or seven weeks, she’s ready for regionals later on. This isn’t the first time she has had them. We are planning to find out about it so it doesn’t become an annual event.
"The only other meet the Salukis before the state meet will be the Rocky Boone Relays April 30-May 1. -meet Blackman considers a minor nationals because of the 28-land field.
"It would have helped to have some more meets earlier," Blackman said about the team’s relatively short schedule. "They are right where you would expect them to be with the number of meets that they have to do and the type of competition they’re faced with.

The Mets’ third, with one out, Littell walked Zachry and Randle. After Flynn struck out, Littell yielded a single to Sid Richardson.
Zachry walked five and struck out five. He was supported by a double play in the third inning and a third base by Randle starting the Cards’ fifth.

The saluki golfers went to Carbondale with a chance in their first tournament of the spring, but game home disappointed as they placed ninth in a 14-team field last weekend.
Senior sophomore Sandy Lembey scored (85-88) 173, her worst career score, to win the best SIU score. Sophomores Lori Lachenbruch and Sandy Blaha tied for second with a 187. Lachenbruch was 1.8 in her first incursion since last spring, but ended up short of an SIU berth.
Sandy Blaha also finished ninth in the event, with a 193. She leads in the area arts and crafts section.
SIU scored a four-player total of 740 at the Savoy Orange course, which placed ninth in the team’s 25th. Illinois State won the Illinois invitational with a total of 633, an average of 182. Buckeye Karen Mandinger toured the 3,000-yard course in 80-136 to finish four shots ahead of Bernie Faurholt of Stephens College.
Arkansas placed second with 303 and Missouri finished third with a 316 total. Only 11 out of 14 schools had a team total on the second day of the meet as the weather was too high winds and poor degree temperatures.
Other SIU scores were Jo, Sandy and Martha Holzer with 78, Judy Dzbor less with 399 and Penny Porter with 244.

Rugby club loses game at Western

"A bad attitude and late nights" were SIU rugger Tom Anderson's reason for SU's 14-0 defeat suffered against Western Illinois last Saturday as the Salukis lost 14-0. Western out the game out of reach in the third half, outscoring SIU 14-0. SIU's two tries in the second half were made by Bob Morgan and John Kuntz, who both powered over the goal from inside the 25-yard line.

Women netters to play four on road

By Bob Vanderbilt
Sports Editor

The spring season for the women's tennis team has been long on character building and short on success. The netters are now anxious to reverse that trend and emerge as the team they are capable of becoming.

Coach Judy Auld's team will have a chance to prove this in the tough win this weekend when it will travel west of the Ozarks. The first stop will be in Springfield, Mo., for a match against Southwest Missouri Thursday. The netters will then travel to Fayetteville, Ark., Friday and Saturday for matches with Arkansas, Tulsa, and Oklahoma State.

Auld is anxious to grace the women's tired, as are her players, but she expects another difficult weekend.

Barrett sees improvement in golfers’ performance

By Jim Musmann

Staff Writer

Although coach Jim Barrett sees the golfers still growing up to their capabilities, he feels that last week’s play at the Bradley Invitational proves that the golfers have started to show improvement. The golfers scored a 348-330 total of 678, an average of 34.2, to place fifth in the tournament held at Cuba’s Wee-Ma-Moo golf course.

SIU-Edwardsville won the two-day tourney with a score of 328-317 for a total of 645. Western Illinois placed second. South Bend, in third with 324-335, and MVC member Drake placed fourth. Another Valley school, Illinois State, placed fifth with 330-345.

Criticism of scorer was unjust in Forsch no-hitter

By George Costak

Staff Writer

Well I hope the sportswriters and ballplayers who have been up in arms about Bob Forsch’s recent no-hitter have had a fun. Not one has commended the St. Louis Cardinals for the effort won over the Phillies Sunday, instead, Neal Russo, a sportswriter for the St. Louis Post Dispatch, is getting all the credit and the criticism.

Russo, who ran his season’s record to 9-0 with the gem against the first-place Quakers, earned Player of the Week honors in the National League. And Ken Reitz’ error in the eighth inning of the contest is what started the controversy.

Philly Garry Maddox had a hot shot at Reitz at third. The ball was a hit to the left of the third-baseman Reitz and got past him. But not before it touched his glove.

Russo passed the ball to a moment and ruled it an error as the no-hitter was still on.

What many writers, fans and Phillie fans fail to realize is how long Russo has been around or how many games he’s seen. He’s been the hot play-making Reitz’s back for a long time.

Tough in the sense that they get a good look at a play, pause and make a decision. Too many times scorers have been quick to judge a play and have been burned for their over action.

A good umpire in one who sees this technique. He is right on top of it all but then he hesitates before making the call. The hesitation is to check and see if he misunderstood, or if a player trapped a ball, and so on.

But for his judgement, Russo has been tried over and over the past three days. It just isn’t fair.

It was difficult for either the Cougars of SIU-E or the Saluki softball team to claim superiority over the other after the two teams split a doubleheader Wednesday at the women’s athletics field. The Salukas won the opener 7-1 and the Cougars took the nightcap 6-5.

Deb Stamm, the Salukas’ freshman shortstop, made three key plays in a one-inning, Carbondale lineup known to the Cougars as “The Maids.” She drove in two runs with a single to center in Salukas’ seven first-game runs with a double and a triple.

The Maids’ squad opened the first-game scoring with three runs in the bottom of the second. Second baseman拧 Schaefer and pitcher Helen Meyer began the frame with a back-to-back base hits that then promptly followed with a double to left field that scored Schaefer from second and Meyer from first.

Cougar left fielder Jo Brooks tried to cut the ball off to left-center field, but the ball went off her glove and rolled behind her for an error as Stamm raced home with the third Saluki run of the inning.

The Salukas scored again in the third inning. Once more it was Stamm who led the attack. With one out, first baseman Nancy Choate touched pitcher Dana Rains for a base hit. After Robin Deterting was retired for the second out of the inning, Schaefer singled and shortstop Robin Haydoo booted Meyer’s hit to load the bases. Stamm came to the plate. This time the Red Bud native ripped a triple to left field clearing the bases. Dee Stull followed with a single to center to cap the four-run third inning.

Meyer was credited with the win. She allowed the Cougars four hits and one walk in seven innings and struck out six. She also allowed four hits en route to her third win of the season against two defeats. Although Meyer had to pitch in 48-degrees weather, she said it did not bother her.

“I really don’t mind pitching in cold weather as long as the ball is in the strike zone,” she said after pitching both ends of the doubleheader for the Edwardsville team.

Barrett sees improvement in the second game as she held the Salukas to just one run in the rain-marred game.

A first inning walk to Tommy Rainwater and a double by Amy Frey gave the Cougars their first run of the game. They scored again in the second when Hayden drew a walk from Karleen Karsten. Rainwater followed with a single and was chased home on Rainwater’s two-run double as the Rainwater contingents scored their final run when King forced a Cougar out at the plate to Rainwater with the bases loaded.

The Salukas’ home run was driven in by Melissa Russo and chạmed by Helen Pinckert in the seventh inning. Instead of crossing the plate, Russo scored Choate, who reached third base on a throwing error by the Cougar shortstop.

Doubleheader postponed

The Salukas’ scheduled doubleheader with Missouri-St. Louis Wednesday at Abe Martin Field was postponed because of the weather and will take their 17-8 record and eight-game winning streak to Peoria this weekend for an eight-game series with Missouri Valley rival Bradley. The teams will split the season series after missing 10 doubleheaders at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The Salukas will return home for a doubleheader Tuesday with St. Louis.

The two Jorg’s have quite a battle at the Latin Cup swimming meet at Puerto Rico recently. Jorge Jaramillo of the Saluki squad and Jorge Delgado, a former Saluki, who trained with the team even though this past season finished 1-2 in the 200 butterfly.

Jaramillo posted a 2:04.8 and Delgado pulled up in a season’s best of 2:08.1. Jaramillo also took second in the 100 backstroke at 1:00.3. Delgado took third at 1:03.8.

Jaramillo is a meet which in itself was a victory for the Latin Cup teams and the South American countries.

Jaramillo is a member in the South American Championships at Ecuador May 25. Delgado is from Ecuador and it may be his first international competition as he makes the World Championships.

Jaramillo and Delgado split the fastest two minutes in the 200 butterfly at the 1972 Olympics at Munich. He also took fifth in the Belgrade World Championships in the summer of 1974.

Jaramillo will attend school and rest at the Latin Cup meet, "I Saluki coach Bob Forsch," has to be ready to go and think he has a good showing before his home country.
