At one point Mansfield attempted to question a witness about a letter from Kilquist allegedly containing a sexual loke. Mansfield argued that the line of questioning was necessary because the sheriff established the policy for behavior in the department.

Merit Commission Chairn an Jim Pribble disallowed the question. He said the hearing was concerned only with the alleged misconduct of Johnston, and not with Sheriff's Depart-

University retail law needs better wording

AMONG LEGISLATORS there is safety in ambiguity. Elected officials, fearful of offending potential voters, are often content to pass pebulous legislation and let the judicial system determine its meaning.

That's good politics, but it's bad government.

An example is a bill pending in the Illinois Senate which is intended to prevent university retail stores, such as University Bookstore, from unfairly competing with local merchants. The intent of the legislation is commendable; the wording of the bill.

As presently worded, the bill could put university retail stores in a financial straitjacket. The bill would prohibit universities from selling any line of merchandise that could "reasonably be expected". seling any line or merchanisse that could reasonably to expected to be in general competition with private retail merchants in the community." It would not prohibit "items commonly sold by such institutions, including but not limited to books, food, beverages and items related to research or courses offered by the university

THE BILL'S LANGUAGE, particularly the 'including but not limited to' exemption clause, is subject to wide interpretation. It could mean that video games and vending machines would have to be removed from the Student Center. It could mean that the new grocery store and bakery in the center would have to be shut down. It could mean that the bookstore would not be allowed sell clothing, posters, albums, magazines or health aids.

In addition to providing students with a convenient location to shop, the Student Center retail operations make money for the

John Corker, director of the Student Center, estimates that the senate bill could cost SIU-C $500,000. It seems odd that the state would want to handcuff one of the few elements of state universities that are generating some money

SUPPORTERS OF THE BILL correctly contend that merchants

SUPPORTERS OF THE BILL correctly contend that merchants are at a disadvantage when forced to compete with tax-exempt universities, whose facilities are funded by the public. They are also right in their assertion that "universities are in the business of educating and not retailing."

While many merchants — particularly in university communities such as Carbondale — make a healthy profit from student customers, universities must be sensitive to their concerns. If universities begin putting local merchants out of business, community support will be damaged.

The proposed law is designed to prevent that, but it is so vague that it could exceed the bounds of protection and put unnecessary and detrimental restraints on universities. What is needed is a bill that clearly states what is and is not permissible for universities to sell.

Such clarity would benefit merchants and universities alike.

Salvadoran vote undemocratic

A recent letter to the editor from Eugene Doherty suggested that the Daily Egyptian': ** 'e with regard to elections in i.l Salvador lent assistance to the case of leftist rebels and obscured the democratic issues at hand.

In this, Mr. Doherty is not alone. Congressmen and a host alone. Congressmen and a host of observers came back from the elections in El Salvador with glowing tales of voters waiting in line for hours for the priviledge to vote. This is naive. First of all, it is against the law in El Salvador not to vote. To boycott the elections would include the first semination.

indicate leftist sympathies, and to indictate such sympathies is like writing your own death arrant.
During

the Reagan During the Reagan administration, between 30,000 and 40,000 men, women, and children have died in El Salvador — most of them at the hands of the National Guard, Treasury Police and security forces. The same forces who "guarded" the so-called democratic elections. "guarded" the so-called democratic elections.

It should be noted that voting booths in El Salvador are only waist height, affording an easy view of ballots as they are filled out. Secrecy could hardly be taken for granted, and surely this was not lost on the voting population as they filled out their ballots in plain view of the National Guard — that bend of national Grand That rend or murdering rapists our president has so graciously lavished with increased military aid.

Mr. Doherty points to the strength of Duarte's showing in the recent election and suggests this indicates support for a centrist path. A more fun-damental issue is the historical damental issue is the historical irrelevance of elected authorities and civillan governments, and their consistent inability to utilize their office to improve the terrible violations of human rights that have occurred in El Salvador. It is true that elections can, in

It is true that elections can, in an appropriate setting, assist the cause of democracy. But it is important to insist that democracy is much more than an occasional election. Democracy is also defined as the acceptance and practice of the principle of the equality of rights. rights, opportunity

The Reagan administration has lost sight of these goals. In its struggle against leftist forces it has shown itself willing to support fascism. In the end this will culy further polarize not only El Salvador, but all of Central America.

Central America.

In the meantime, the left will continue to fight, the right will continue to torture, and the staggering statistics of death and torture compiled by Americas Watch, Amnesty International and other human rights groups will continue to

With elections ever nearer in our own country, it is important that we look closely at the overly simplistic east-west orientation of the present ad-ministration and work toward a more profound understanding of foreign policy issues of foreign policy issues.

For many, Joan Didion's book, "Salvador," would be a good start. For a broader discussion of these issues as discussion of these issues as they pertain to all of Central America, Penny Lernoux's, "Cry of the People" is an ex-cellent introduction.—Keith Luebke, Staff, Law Library

Readers will line up every fortnight expectations." 'Great' Ex-pectations." two weeks or more for valuable research materials every time the need arose would hold up each student at least an extra year. As the system works now students often can get high-demand materials within a few days, and have to wait no more than a few hours in line to check

But with forced delay, SIU-C will have to build a new dorm tower to hold all the carryover students more revenue. As enrollment swells, so swells the University bankroll.

Besides, revenue from copiers in the Undergraduate Library would skyrocket (pun intended) as well. Having access to a book only once every two weeks would make it prime copy material.

Before long, the University could afford that 23-story tower addition to the library that folks used to dream about.

Or, at least, the library might make enough money to build shelves in the bathrooms for the growing surplus. Somebody ought to do something to cover up the graffiti.

Americans who depend on heef and dairy products for nutrition may choose to avoid Haiti. But if they like fish, goat, commeal and rice they may be able to survive there — if they know how to cultivate the land. That's why SIU-C graduates Peter and Helen Welle will return to the 400-square mile island of LaGorave, the poorest part of Haiti part of Haiti issand of Lagonive, the poorest part of Haiti.

The only American missionaries of the West Indies Self Help group will leave Carbondale on Monday to teach Haiti's younger population how to turn the island's hilly, desertlike land into tillable soil.

Peter Welle, who received his master's degree in plant and soil science and community development, said that the once-tropical land of Haiti has become an eroded desert, unable to grow necessary foods. He has spent two years in Haiti with WISH, a non-profit Haitian organization, to study the agricultural possibilities of the soil and to raise fish as a cheap protein source.

Program helps teen parents with problem of raising families

By Carys Edwards Student Writer

Having a child is a big responsibility for any parent, but when the parents are un-married, teen agers and their child is unplanned, the ex-perience can be overwhelming.

"Teen-agers are often alone, frightened and resentful about having a young child they may not have planned," said Marjorie Sawicki, director of "Parents Too Soon," a program rarents Too Soon, "a program recently established to help young mothers and fathers in Southern Illinois. Speaking Was Speaking Wednesday at the Human Resources '84 Con-ference in the Student Center, Sawicki said that the services of PTS are available to males and females from 11 to 20 years old living in the following counties. Johnson, Massac, Union Johnson, Massac, Union, Pulaski, Hardin, Alexander and

"The program also aims to support the teen agers in their continued education and — or a vocation," she said, "thereby vocation, she said, thereby increasing their self-esteem and reducing the dependency of the teen family upon government assistance."

The problem is not small, Sawicki said. In 1981, of 1,023 live births in the seven Southern Illinois counties, 19.6 percent were to teen-agers 19 or younger, 19.8 percent were illegitimate and 7.9 percent were of low birth weight, she

Nuclear power may be bigger in future

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With al' die bad news about nuclear power, a wealdn't be surprising if the people who make their living preaching the industry's virtues were a perpessed bunch. But that's not the case.

bunch. But that's not the case. To hear nuclear power's public relations experts tell it, atomic energy is on its way back, and someday so m will be bigger and better than ever. Still, says Paul Turner, vice president of the Atomic Industrial Forum, the industry trade group, selling nuclear power is no picnic. "It's a very frustrating job. I feel like we have a first-class product which is absolutely essential to this country. It's safe, it has the least impact on our environment of all fuels and it's at least as economical as it's at least as economical as it's at least as economical as other options.

"Yet it seems that everything about nuclear power is beset by public perceptions that are quite opposite of what I believe to be true," Turner said in an interview. "You know, the ironic thing is that nuclear power has kept its main promise — to provide safe, reliable, environmentally benign power."
Turner was keynote speaker last week when more than 100 public relations workers from nuclear utilities gathered at the McCue still faces federal charges for bank robbery and the taking of a hostage related to the robbery.

In addition to the federal charges, McCue faces a variety of state charges in two other Southern Illinois counties, ranging from armed robbery to home invasion.

And there were laughs about a former colleague, s public relations man for a Midwestern utility until the company abandoned its nuclear project.

These days, the story goes, he works for an X-rated cable television company, trying to convince ministers in con-servative Southern towns that they should not object to his

It was almost universally agreed during the four-day meeting that credibility agreed during the four-day meeting that credibility remains the industry's biggest problem, a disease lingering from 1979 when the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident occurred at Three Mile Island.

Douglas H. Bedell, a former newspaper editorial writer who serves as manager of communications services at the Middletown, Pa., plant, said his job is not to sell the technology but to help rebuild the public's trust.

"The only way you can be believed is to be honest," he said. "Puffery and apple-polishing is very inappropriate for the industry."

But that bad news mustrated a point raised several times by the industry representatives. Consumers Power is only the third utility to reduce or eliminate its dividend because of the property of the propert of financial difficulties from nuclear projects, yet these developments have been the focus of many news stories.

The complaint is that news about the 70 or so nuclear projects that operate with little trouble has often been neglected.

Carl Goldstein, public relations director for the U.S. Committee for Energy Awa eness, another pro-Awa. eness, another pro-nuclear group, suggested that part of the industry's image problem comes from a general anti-expert mood in America.

"The expert is suspect in almost every sense. There's almost an undermining of expert opinion," said Goldstein.

"In the case of nuclear, the point is that surveys show the majority of scientists believe nuclear is safe and necessary.

"Nuclear power doesn't have a champion. It's not a warm, furry thing that you tove," Turner said. "We've got an enormous amount of folklore and mythology to get around before we can ge' very far."

"It takes you prefty deep," he says of the tape, "deeper each time. It doesn't work as well the first few times, but if you believe it will work for you, it will."

Koch hasn't been successful on confidence alone. He's coupled some physical skills along with it.

"He's been getting his breaking ball ever the plate," says pitching coach Jerry Green, "and he has a pretty good changeup. He also does the little things well. He has good pickoff technique."

In the second inning Tuesday, Koch retired the side without retiring a single hitter. He picked off two base runners, then threw out a runner who was making his way to the dugout from third base, thinking Koch's second victim was the third out of the inning.

Wichita State is the only team entering the conference tour-nament with all six of its golfers averaging less than 80 strokes per round, whereas Creighton's six players are all averaging more than 80. McGirr said that second place is goin; to be a "dogfight."

The Salutis have been led by John Schaefer, who is averaging a 77.7. His best round is a 69. Scott Briggs is playing No. 2 with a 78.4 average, Tom Jones No. 3 with an 80.2, J.D. Tomlinson No. 4 with an 81.7, Jay Sala No. 5 with an 81.9 and Tim Sass No. 6 with an 82.3.

If the Salukis shoot their average, then they could come up with a score in the 400-range for each round, or about a 1,600 for their four-round total A 1,600 score will probably be worth a third-place finish, when compared to the average scores of Wichita State and West Texas

Wichita State would do the best if its average holds up. The Shockers could shoot about a 1,526. West Texas State would be second with a 1,568. The cellar looks like a good place for Creighton or Bradley, both of which have a good chance to score somewhere close to 2,000. But this is based only on averages and anything could happen. happen.

The favorite for the singles championship could be any one of four players in the Valley, but the best bet would be Doug Tickel of Wichita State or Peter Schaefer, who finished fifth in the Valley last year, could give them a run for their money.

Maloney finds groove as softballers sweep

By Dan Devine Staff Writer

One pitch, a third-inning delivery to Arkansas State's delivery to Arkansas State's Laurie Baker, typified the performance Wednesday of SIT-4's Eileen Maloney, who capped a Saluki sweep of Arkansas State with a scintillating three-hit victory.
Maloney threw a tantalizing, ever-so-slow changeup to a baffled Baker, who swung and missed before the pitch even crossed the plate. She then got Baker to pop our to the shortstop.

For Clark, it was just another day at the office. For Maloney, day at the office. For mainley, it might be a valuable confidence builder.

"She really threw them off with the changeup," said SIU-C

"She really threw them off with the changeup," said SIU-C Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer. "She did a nice job of moving the ball around" "That's what we were trying to do," said Maloney. "We mixed it up a lot. I worked well with the catchers. They knew where to throw the ball."

And for the most part Maloney was on target
throughout. She walked no batters, was seldom behind in the count, and was never in trouble. She allowed one run — unearned — in the third inning, unearned — in the third inning, when catcher Kelly Lehto tried to pick Ann Williams off first base and instead threw the ball into the right field corner. Williams scored easily. That tied the score at 1-1. SIU-C had jumped out in the first with an unearned run of its own. Tonya Linckey reached on an error went to second on a wild.

Netters to compete in Valley tournament

By George Pappas Staft Writer

The last time SIU-C won the Missouri Vailey Conference men's tennis championship was in 1977. It looks grim for the Salukis to win it this year. It's not because the 4-17 Salukis don't have talent. It's just that the talent they're up against has proven to be stronger this year than in the

For instance, Wichita State, which will host the Valley tournament beginning Thusday, has won the MVC crown the last six years. The Shockers have a good chance of doing it again. Another powerhouse team is Tulsa, which finished second the last two years. Both teat is are loaded with seniors who are on the last leg of their collegiate

The Salukis are entering the conference tourpament with a conference tourrament with a starting lineup that has two freshmen, three sophomores and a junior. Plus, they will have to compete without No. 2 player, Rollie Oliquiro, who's been out for the season with a knee injury, and No. 5 Scott Krueger. Krueger has had back roblems.

Krueger. Krueger has had back problems.
Without these players, the Salukis had a rough beginning this year, losing their first 17 matches. But they bounced back by winning their last four. If they car carry this momentum into the Valley tournament, they might even have a good chance at winning it.

Salut Coach Dick LeFevre, who is finishing up his 29th year at the helm, said the Salukis could even surprise themselves and win the championship ii

and win the championship if they get a good draw.

"We never go into the championships without the possibility of knowing we could win this thing," LeFevre said.
"But if we get an average draw, we could get third place."

LeFevre means if the Saluk's draw really good players, from maybe wichita State or Tuisa in the first round, then their chances of garnering points will be hard Whereas, if they draw players from Illinois State, Creighton or B: idley (teams at the bottom of the Valley, they will have a good shot at second or third.

Of the eight teams in the Valley tournament, only two

Valley tournament, only two have winning records — Wichita State at 12-7 and West Texas State at 14-12. Tuisa is 14-Indiana State 3-10, Bradley Illinois State 2-12 and Creighton 8-8.

Tulsa and West Texas State

Tulsa and West Texas State look as if they might have the strongest doubles teams. For Tulsa, Neil Smith and Barry Mills are 16-11 at No. 1. Chris Mease and Anthony Sandler are 15-11 at No. 1 for West Texas. Singles-wise, Tulas is a strong technology to the strong text have team but it made at Singles-wise, Tulas is a String top-three team, but is weak at No. 4, 5 and 6. West Texas is strong throughout its singles lineup, especially at No. 6 where Dean DiGeorge is 23-3. If SIU-C freebman Steve Quaror (3-12) has to face DiGeorge in the first round, it could be a long day for the top wood Salvit day for the 16-year-old Saluki.

Comparing the Salukis' singles record to the other players in the conference, the best shot for a Saluki individual best shot for a Sankt histividual title appears to be from No. 4 Chris Visconti. Visconti's 8-13 record is deceiving because his losses have come against top teams such as Georgia, Illinos, Wisconstin and Indiana. Visconti's toughest opponent could be Alan Trivett (15-11) of West Texas. SIU-C's No. 1 Per Wadmark will have his hands full if he has to face Roberto Saad of Wichita State. Saad, who has been ranked all season is 19-6, but he injured his back last week and no one knows how he's going to play.

Gabriel Coch (10-11) was the only Saluki to make it to the finais last year. He was playing No. 6 But Coch is now plrying No. 2 and his competition is tough, especially David Sanders (18-12) of Tulsa and Luis Zavala (16-10) of West Texas. Other Salukis going for conference titles are No. 3 Lars Nisson and No. 5 Paul Rasch. Wadmark and Nils.or. will play No. 1 doubles.
