Sunshine blesses service at cross

By Bill Ruminski
Staff Writer

Easter, supposedly a day of rest, is anything but a slow, meditative morning on Bald Knob Mountain.

People sleeping in motor homes at the foot of Bald Knob Cross are rotated before 5 a.m. as cars drive up the gravel road leading to the cross.

Pope, Reagan celebrate Easter

As cars drive past, people marvel at many of the license plates: Virginia, North Carolina, Oklahoma and Canada.

The beginning of the Easter Sunrise Service is more than one hour off, but already hundreds of people wander about the mountain top.

Children, barely awake, stand at the base of the cross, which glows in the light of a dozen or so spotlights. While rubbing the sleep from their eyes, the children peer up, in amazement, at the 111-foot-tall monument.

Parents, grandparents, reporters and photographers, on the other hand, are finding their ways to the small restaurant. A 50-cent cup of coffee, a glazed doughnut and shelves of souvenirs help to pass the time.

The Sunrise Bell rings about 5:30 a.m. The restaurant is deserted; the children are collected. And so begins the search for seats among the

$10,402 state grant, alley to top City Council meeting

By JoDe Rimar
Staff Writer

The Carbondale City Council will make its first stand tonight before newly elected Mayor Neil Dillard and council members Richard Morris and John Mills take their oaths of office.

The council is expected to give the OK for City Manager Bill Dixon to apply for a $10,402 state grant from the Illinois Farmers Union-Training, Inc. for Carbondale’s Division of Human Resources.

The council also is expected to conduct an open hearing on the proposed vacating of a portion of an alley that runs from Washington Street to Marion Street.

The request for vacating was made by Patay Lorena, a property owner, who owns land north and south of the alley. She says that once the alley is vacated, the land will be more feasible to develop.

If the request is approved, the city would relinquish rights to the portion of the alley and the owner would assume responsibility for the property.

The council also is expected to act on:

- Awarding contracts for water treatment chemicals.
- Awarding contracts for fiscal year 1988 weed mowing.

The new council members will take their oaths at 7 tonight in the City Council Chambers, 607 W. College St.

Pohard lambasts Reagan for education budget cuts

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

State Sen. Glenn Pohard, D-Carbondale, said he thinks public pressure is needed to stamp out President Reagan’s plan to either cut or reduce federally funded education programs for the economically disadvantaged.

“Our money is better invested in educational opportunities which keep low-income students in the state educational system,” he said.

Pohard made his plea Thursday prior to an Illinois Association of Educational Opportunity Program Personnel banquet at the Holiday Inn in Carbondale. The banquet was part of the association’s spring conference held Thursday and Friday at the Student Center.

“We have to have people recognize the value of these programs and bring pressure to bear on their legislators,” he said, who in turn would keep Reagan apprised of the need for the programs.

Gus Bode

Gus says it’ll take a lot of pressure to get Reagan to give more than a drop in the bucket for education.
Rebel Argentine officers surrender, president says

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — President Raúl Alfonsín said Sunday that rebel officers who had been holding out for three days at a military base have agreed to surrender and “will be arrested and taken before justice.” Alfonsín flew Sunday to the Campo de Mayo military base near Buenos Aires to negotiate personally with the 50 to 150 rebels, returned to the capital and told a delicate rally estimated at 450,000 people that the rebels “have surrendered their position.”

First woman named to top U.N. agency post

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — A Pakistani expert on family planning is to be named the first woman to head a United Nations agency, U.N. officials said Sunday. The appointment of Dr. Naife Sadik, 56, to head the U.N. Fund for Population Activities will be announced by Secretary General Javier Pérez de Cuéllar on Monday, the officials said. Sadik is the highest-ranked official at the agency, whose U.S. funding was cut off last year for its policy toward abortion.

Vietnam elections seen as key to economy

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Voters went to the polls Sunday across Vietnam in elections seen as part of a campaign to revitalize the economy and to replace the aged hardliners who provided over five decades of war and revolution. The elections for the 496-seat National Assembly and local people’s councils were expected to be the most democratic in 12 years of communist rule, following a shakeup in electoral rules and a purge of the Communist Party.

Reagan, Nakasone exchange trade envoys

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Yasushi Nakasone and President Reagan exchanged envoys Sunday for a week or level talks on both sides of the Pacific amid heighted trade tensions between the economic superpowers. Former Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, carrying a personal letter from Nakasone to Reagan, left for Washington hours before U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter arrived at a U.S. military base outside Tokyo.

Report: Air Force vulnerable to espionage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top-secret Air Force communications have proven increasingly vulnerable to espionage over the last decade because of lax controls over classified telephone, radio and computer messages, newly released data. The most recent data shows that the number of sensitive Air Force communications were improperly exposed more than doubled between 1977 and 1986, a spokesman said. Hundreds of classified messages stored at Air Force facilities across the country have been lost, stolen, tampered with or reviewed by unauthorized people, auditors found in a July 1986 report.

Meese didn’t question Casey, Post reports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorney General Edwin Meese did not ask CIA Director William Casey in a Nov. 22 meeting about the Iran-arms-Contra cash connection even though he had read a memo describing the scheme, it was reported Sunday. The Washington Post reported that Meese said in an interview last week that he would have been “inappropriate” to question Casey about the diversion of arms sales profits from Iran to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Infant stabbing victim’s condition improves

CLEVELAND (UPI) — “Baby Doe,” an hours-old boy stabbed nine times and left to die in a trash dumpster behind a tavern, is reported to be in satisfactory condition and recovering Sunday. The infant, said to be full-term but less than 12 hours old, underwent surgery at St. Luke’s Hospital before being transferred to Rainbow Babies’ and Children’s Hospital.

Last wild California condor is captured

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (UPI) — The last California condor known to be living in the wild was captured Sunday in rugged condition at a wildlife refuge and shipped to the San Diego Wild Animal Park, where it will be bred with a female also under care. Known as AC-9, the condor was trapped in a net while feeding on a calf’s carcass set out as bait at the Bitter Creek National Wildlife Refuge some 14 miles southeast of Ridgecrest in Kern County, said Joseph Downham, head of the condor recovery team of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.
Experts: Keep U.S. missiles out of Alaska

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Soviet and American arms control experts said Sunday the placement of U.S. missiles in Alaska could be a bone of contention in what is believed to be the best chance yet of a superpower arms agreement.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, also said he was worried by the proposals. Aspin was part of a congressional delegation that met with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev last week.

President Reagan said Saturday that when you order or eat in Alaska and we didn’t agree in Moscow that they wouldn’t be in Alaska and we didn’t agree in Moscow that they wouldn’t be in Alaska.

Aspin said the agreement being worked out “worries me a very, very great deal. I think that this business of gradually eliminating sections of nuclear weapons is not a very smart idea given this day that as long as there’s a conventional imbalance in Europe we’re going to need nuclear weapons.”

Karpov said, “I think there is a possibility now to reach an agreement if there is a will and willingness to do so without raising any artificial obstacles.”

Also appearing on “Meet the Press” were House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas and Assistant Defense Secretary Richard Perle.

One proposal would allow the Soviets to maintain 100 medium-range missiles in Asia and the Americans to keep 100 in the United States.

Asked if the Soviets would object to the United States placing its 100 missiles in Alaska, Karpov said: “Yes, sure. The situation now is that no medium-range missiles of the Soviet Union are deployed in a way to reach the United States territory, even Alaska.”

Nitez said: “It’s important for us not to give up the right to have them in Alaska and we have not and we have insisted upon that and we never did agree in Reykjavik that they wouldn’t be in Alaska and we didn’t agree in Moscow that they wouldn’t be in Alaska.”

New hours set for Rec Center

Fitness enthusiasts will have fewer hours during the week in which to be energetic at the Recreation Center. For the remainder of the semester the Rec Center will be closing earlier, and sometimes, opening later.

The change is in response to user patterns determined by the turnstile system, Brian Lukes, Recreation Center coordinator, said. Fewer people are using the facility late at night on weekdays and early in the morning on the weekends, he said, and the changes coincide with trying to make the best use of the student funds.

Although signs have been posted around the center for a month, many students still aren’t aware of the time changes, he said, because sometimes all people think about is getting in, working out, and leaving.

The changes begin April 6 and will continue until May 17. New hours will be:

- Monday through Thursday, 6 a.m. to 9 p.m.
- Friday, 6 a.m. to 8 p.m.
- Saturday, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.
- Sunday, 1-8 p.m.

Pickings for USO election were slim

THERE WAS THE USUAL diurnal tumult for last week's undergraduate Student Organization election. Don't worry—this is not a righteous editorial castigating the student body for apathy. With such scant information about the candidates and what the USO can do for the school, most students showed what they really thought of the election by not voting. Only 908 students voted for a USO president Wednesday, compared to 1,581 votes last year during the election season. Since there has been no radical change in the undergraduate population in the past year, the low turn-out must be tied to both a lack of publicity and a lack of exciting campaigns.

The first ignoble prize goes to the Daily Egyptian, which failed to give any exposure to the senatorial candidates. If the DE had supplied some idea of who was running or even commented on the problem that too few candidates were on the ballot, potential student leaders could have responded with write-in campaigns to fill in the gap.

As it was, students who went to the polls on Wednesday faced a list of unknown candidates and blank spaces for write-ins. A few too many votes for Donald Duck or the Bayer Aspirin man could have caused an interesting dilemma for the USO.

FAULT ALSO LIES with the senatorial candidates, who failed to raise visible campaigns. Candidates for Access Party, one of the only alternatives to the dominant Phoenix Party, began campaigning for write-in votes on election day at the north end of the Student Center. It is hard to take such an elevenday campaign seriously.

As for the presidential candidates, John Attard certainly won on both his experience and his more practical vision of the USO. Yet his race against Access Party candidate Vince Kelly was a battle between Tweedledee and Tweedledum. Kelly had innumerable ideas, both practical and impractical, on how to implement them and only flippant remarks when he ran out of answers. Attard ran a mild, status quo campaign that agreed with past USO programs on SPC funding and day care. Neither candidate had a strong platform on student fee and tuition increases and both gave vague answers to the parking problem.

THE USO CAN BE a powerful group. It has the power to distribute funds among student groups. It can be a gadfly for both the University administration and the city in campaigning for student rights. It can invent new programs for students like the book co-op or voter registration.

Leaders in the USO must remember that the organization is not merely a business entity for distributing Registered Student Organization allowances or a rubber stamp for new RSOs or administration policy. This year's USO forgot these ideas with its easy approval of the proposal to sell the University Book Store and its fee increase for Rainbow's End without a plan on how to improve the center.

No one has reason to be apathetic about the USO, unless the USO gives them a reason to be apathetic. This year's election should encourage students who care about SIU-C to support their own campaigns next year. If you can get your best friend and your dorm floor to vote for you, you may have a pretty good chance.

Letters

BAS helps defuse racial tensions

I used to respect the Daily Egyptian, but now I am disappointed. After submitting two letters and not having them printed it makes me wonder if the policies are being enforced. Are some letters not printed because they make a bold statement?

I have learned that several of my fellow students have submitted letter concerning the Black American Studies program. However, only a few of the letters appeared in the DE.

One good way students can let other students and University administrators know how we feel about the BAS program is through the DE, but for some reason the staff refused to print our letters. So once again I am pecking away at my typewriter in hopes of getting my letter printed.

The Afro-American courses are some of the best courses at SIU-C. The BAS program has helped me and others deal with and understand some of the critical issues we face as minority students. For example, why do some white students go into a state of panic when they get an Afro-American roommate? Or why is the drop-out rate so high for Afro-American students? As a matter of fact, the University should be thankful for the BAS classes, for if they were not offered racial tension would be out of hand.

The pressure is put on Afro-American students to learn all there is to know about white America, while white America can and does go through life without learning a thing about us, except what they learned from TV and misinformed history teachers. Learning has to take place on behalf of both parties. Personally, I am bored with learning about "America the Beautiful."

Recently, the BAS classes did a survey to find out how Afro-American students feel about race relations here at SIU-C. Bravo! It's about time the administration has come directly to us instead of interpreting what we feel. I hope the University's findings on this survey will be shared with the students.

Foreign groups are open to Americans

This letter is written in response to Ernest Brown's letter of April 6 and in support of Sherry Hiegh's response letter that stated that Mr. Brown should learn more about the international culture by attending events sponsored by the various nationalities groups at SIU-C.

At this point, I would like to take the opportunity of informing you, Mr. Brown, that there are international student associations that accept Americans as members. The Feminist Student Association, for one, opens its door to Americans in the hope of introducing Oriental culture and cultivating understanding and friendship across cultures.

The CSA consists of members from Malaysia, Taiwan, Singapore, Hong Kong, People's Republic of China, Laos, Indonesia, Trinidad and the United States. So, Mr. Brown, please do not make such overgeneralizations about international students in the future. Please accept this invitation for membership to enable you to be more knowledgeable about Oriental cultures and eventually broaden your perspective and understanding of international students.

Law students, faculty raise $1,000 to help St. Jude's

By Catherine Simpson
Staff Writer

The Law School faculty members and students raised $1,000 for St. Jude's Children's Hospital in Memphis, Tenn., Vicki Seidl, second-year law student and vice president of the Student Bar Association said.

Female law students played a game of basketball against male faculty members Friday afternoon wearing shirts saying “But We Look Good,” the students were defeated 47-32.

The benefit was set up to let professors have the chance to do charitable things, Seidl said. Pledges of the game exceeded $500, she said.

The benefit included winning kites, raffle tickets of several Law School organizations, including a raffle of two trees, sets of 50 resumes by the Black Law Student Association. The BLA raised more than $500.

In addition, the Law School raised $400 in donations and $100 in donations, Seidl said.

Law students playing in the game were Vicki Seidl, Julie Smith, Debbie Schleicher, Dawn Engle Amanda Allen, Michelle Richerson, Erin Reese, Lori Crenshaw and Jeannie Arterburn. The faculty team included Mark Lee, Frank Houdek, Pat Kelley, Scott Nichols, Gene Turk, Peter Gopher, Leonard Gross, Bill Schroeder, Peter McMahon, Don Gamr, Werner Whitfield and Tom McAfee.

The highlight of the game was Scholarship needs $1 donations

By Carolyn Schmidt
Staff Writer

Civil service workers are being asked to donate $1 a month to establish scholarships for qualified dependents of civil service employees.

Roger Hines, chairman of the Civil Service Employees Council's educational assistance committee, said the donation would build up a reserve of money for a scholarship fund and an endowment to earn interest on the fund.

Half of the money in CSEC's Educational Assistance Program is now used for grants and half is used for the endowment fund, he said.

A $45-per-semester fee is required of civil service employees whose dependents qualify for the scholarship. Hines said the fee would be lowered if enough reserve and endowment money was built up from the $1 monthly donations.

The Educational Assistance Program was established in 1987. It has financed employee contributions, the endowment fund and fundraising activities sponsored by the council, Hines said.

To qualify for the scholarship, a person must be a dependent of a civil service worker, be enrolled at SIU-C and be an undergraduate.

In the past three years, the program has given awards to 21 students.

metal bleachers, or for a patch of lawn on which to spread a blanket.

Rays of orange, violet and blue shine bright above the horizon. Photographers work for “the shot of the crowd and the stage.” But the sun is disguised because of the dazzling headlight beams of cars being driven in the parking lot.

The St. Louis-style sun rises above the horizon about 6 a.m., taking the edge off the early morning chill.

Workers scampers about the altar setting up microphones and adjusting chairs for the Union County Community Choir — things are a bit behind schedule. While the choir members, dressed in Kelly green robes, walk down to the stage, people continue to join the audience for the 31st Easter Sunrise Service atop Bald Knob Mountain.

The crowd grows to about 1,000 before trumpeters Laura Sweazy and Sarah George from the Cobden Unit School sound the call to worship.

The Rev. William H. Lirey of Makanda, who with Wayman Presley began delivering Easter sunrise services on the mountain in 1937, greets the large congregation with praise for its attendance and the weather. It has rained before or during the past two annual services.

The energetic sermon, which discussed the life, death and resurrection of Jesus, was delivered by the Rev. Dean Stevenson of Marion.

Before the sermon, a young girl looked to her mother and asked, “Are we going to be in church?”

“Yes honey, we’re in church, but it is an outside church,” the women answered.

The service ends, and coffee and doughnuts are given to those in attendance.

Otis Williams, associate director of the Office of Illinois in Urbana, said that people who think the programs catering to minorities are misinformed.

“Between 25 and 40 percent of the people in Upward Bound are white,” he said.

"That’s why we like to avoid the phrase ‘minority assistance.’ The focus is on the economically disadvantaged, not just minorities.

People participating in these programs attain a four-times-greater success rate in completing their degree requirements than people not able to participate in the programs,” Poshard said.

If the cuts and reductions go through, “what responsibility can the state assume to pick up the slack?” he asked. “The state will have a difficult time picking up that lost money.

Anthology celebrates women's lives

By Mary Caudie
Daily Egyptian

Nancy Brooks left the audience Friday night with a gift—a gift of shared memories and common experiences, of validation and support.

The anthology included the works of poets Marge Piercy, Susan Griffin and Adrienne Rich, as well as the writing of Brooks, Virginia Woolf and Gertrude Stein.

A Review

Brooks performed with a minimum of costumes and props and transformed into a new character in seconds by putting on an apron or picking up a book. Her characterization, which ran the gamut from Stein to Sigmund Freud to a frog, added strength and humor to her performance, as well as growing Brooks to be a versatile actress in her own right.

In the performance of Griffin's "I Like to Think of Harriet Tubman," and Piercy's "For Strong Women," both highlights of the anthology, Brooks emphasized the growing strength of women and the obstacles that "strong women" face in society. Other pieces dealt with the loves, dreams and insecurities of women, as well as the "matrilineage" that women don't often find in their history books.

Presented in a personal, rather than a professional, manner, Brooks often spoke to the audience as "herself" during the performance, adding and expanding on the material. More an empowering experience than a performance, what Brooks sometimes lacked in stylistic ability she made up in enthusiasm.

Speaking after the performance, Brooks stressed that she hoped "Woman's Word" would not be an end in itself, but an inspirational point from which each individual would start discovering her own creative energy—both alone and with others.

"Women's Word," first performed in 1977, has gone through "many, many incarnations" in the last ten years, Brooks said, as she often finds new material and is constantly changing the anthology. She also performs in two other one-woman performances, "Scars" and "Eleanor, Woman of Peace."

Womanshine Theater was founded in 1977 to nurture the talents of women in theater-related arts and to present professional theatrical works and educational opportunities to celebrate and strengthen the lives of women, Brooks said.

Storybooks rule couple's roost

STORRS, Conn. (UPI) — A drama professor and his playwright wife have collected more than 800 copies of "Black Beauty" and "Goldilocks and the Three Bears," including versions in Gaelic, Italian phonetics and Braille.

With 350 copies of "Goldilocks" and 45 versions of "Black Beauty," Eva Wolas and David Heilweil boast an unusual collection tucked among perhaps 10,000 books of every imaginable title jampacked into their home and garage.

"It's chaos," said Heilweil, a professor of dramatic arts at the University of Connecticut. "Collecting goes on forever," said Wolas, a director, playwright and producer. "We can't pass up a used-book store."

Heilweil is primarily responsible for the "Black Beauty" collection, begun 31 years ago when the family lived in Los Angeles.

Our daughter loved horseback riding and one day while cleaning her room we found five editions of "Black Beauty," the old woman said. "We planned to keep one and get rid of the rest."

The same day, however, Heilweil and Wolas visited an antique shop in Beverly Hills and purchased a 1901 version of "Black Beauty." They have been scouring book stores and shops, adding copies ever since.

Because Anna Sewall was the sole author of "Black Beauty," the text of each version is identical. No two books in either collection are the same, however, and the variety of illustrations and other aspects is striking.

"I have two versions of 'Black Beauty,'" he said. "One is a Russian version with an English translation," Heilweil said.

The foreword of the English-booking Russian version notes the author's dislike of the "capitalist exploitation" of horses and nature.

Wolas began the "Goldilocks" collection more than 20 years ago while teaching in New York City because her students lacked the educational background she had expected.

She began her classes with the basics: "I had the class dramatically adapt 'Goldilocks and the Three Bears,'" Wolas said.

Human rights appeal tops Pope's Easter ceremony

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Pope John Paul II, celebrating Christianity’s holiest day at an outdoor Easter mass for some 300,000 people in St. Peter’s Square, appealed for human rights Sunday and told the world “love is more powerful than death.”

The pontiff also proclaimed Easter greetings in 50 languages, including his native Polish, English, Russian, Chinese, Hebrew and Arabic to the nearly 200,000 pilgrims and tourists who overflowed the square.

“Grant, O Lord, that people may always respect the inviolable dignity of all their fellow human beings,” John Paul prayed during his traditional Easter message called “Urbi et Orbi.” Lalin for “To the city and the world.”

“Whether they be poor or hungry, imprisoned, sick, wounded in body or mind, bereaved by doubt or tempted to despair,” John Paul said, “they always remain children of God, who calls them to trust in him and seek his help.”

“Everyone is offered forgiveness and redemp­tion,” John Paul said. “Each one deserves respect and support. Deserves love.”

The pope’s appeal also included an im­passioned condemnation of abortion, which is banned by the Roman Catholic Church. John Paul prayed “the man of the technological age may not reduce himself to a mere object, but may respect, from its very beginning, the un­renounceable dignity that is proper to it.”

The traditional papal Easter message also echoed one of the major themes of his recent trip to Chile, where for the first time since he became pope in 1978 violence broke out during a papal mass.

Hours after the demonstrations, which both the government of military leader Gen. Augusto Pinochet and his leftist opposition blamed on each other, John Paul told Chileans in an im­promptu address that “love is stronger” than violence or hate.

Sunday he reminded Christians that “love is more powerful than death,” and noted that Jesus’ death led to the “reconciliation of sinners with God, the reconciliation of man.”

Easter, the most sacred feast of the Christian calendar, celebrates Christianity’s basic tenet of faith—that Jesus rose from the dead three days after he died on the cross.

Dressed in white and gold vestments and wearing a glittering gold miter, John Paul celebrated mass in warm sunshine at an altar covered with hundreds of bright yellow chrysanthemums.

Reagan celebrates Easter in Santa Barbara church

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (UPI) — A newly visible President Reagan went to Easter services Sunday morning on the last full day of a California vacation dominated by optimism about a nuclear arms accord with the Soviets.

The church attendance marked the second year Reagan had attended Easter services. Reagan, who last year went to a small rustic church near his mountain ranch, flew by helicopter Sunday to Santa Barbara, but the location of the church was kept secret until he arrived.

Reagan rarely attends church in Washington or California, ostensibly because of security considerations and a desire not to disrupt other churchgoers.

While the president was in church, some Laity veterans opposed to his policy in Central America were marching for the third year up the steep, winding road to his ranch 30 miles northwest of Santa Barbara.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan had received the veterans’ request for a meeting but was “unable” to accommodate them.

“We feel that your policy of aid and direction for the Nicaraguan Contras cannot be morally, legally, militarily or politically justified,” they said in their letter.

“We feel that some of the people you had been meeting with such as Bud McFarlane, Oliver North, John Poindexter and others now involved in the Contra-Iranian in­vestigations have not been giving you the kind of thoughtful, moral and intel­ligent advice that you would need to both understand what is happening in Nicaragua and the rest of Central America, and to formulate an intelligent and compassionate policy,” their letter said.

"Obviously, there’s more money in drugs than bootlegging. You could make millions of dollars from drugs and that would take quite a few years in bootlegging."

— James Arehart, assistant U.S. attorney

The tolerance of the community also changes. While residents accepted bootlegging as a way of life, they grew frustrated with drug trafficking and violence.

"The people in this county were helpless for a long time," said Keeton, who called federal officials for help because local law enforcement officials were in collusion with the bootleggers.

The FBI arrested one of Litteral’s partners on drug charges and persuaded him to set up Litteral in a reverse drug buy. Litteral was arrested for buying two kilos of cocaine from undercover agents, and is serving a 10-year prison sentence for a guilty plea. A son, Danny, is serving a five-year term.

"Probably the thing that brought them down was greed," said Keeton. But cases such as Morgan County are rare. In the case of the prosecution and conviction of Allen and former Morgan County Sheriff Roger Benton, Arehart said the investigation stumbled onto the corruption.

FORMER KENTUCKY State Police Commissioner Marion Campbell was indicted in January but a mistrial was declared in February. Federal prosecutors hope to try him again.

Beem and Campbell say they aren’t innocent.

States vying to be picked as home of super collider

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The superconducting super collider — billed as the largest scientific tool ever — could cause the nastiest fight among the states of the 20th century.

Although the Energy Department is not scheduled to pick a home for the mammoth atom smasher until 1989, several states have already poured millions of dollars into efforts to win the super particle barrel project.

"I think it is one of the most important, if not the most important scientific effort ever undertaken," said Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif. "It’s important to our society and the world.

The superconducting super collider is envisioned as a 53-mile, oval-shaped tunnel, 10 feet wide and at least 50 feet underground. It would be a $4.4 billion high-tech racetrack where beams of protons powered by giant magnets would race around in opposite directions at nearly the speed of light.

Scientists observing the collisions hope to learn answers to questions surrinding the nature of matter, energy and the origin of the universe. Despite its great size, the collider is considered safe and clean.

Most of those vying for the project agree the winning state would be catapulted into the forefront of international physics research.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — World population will reach 11 billion by the year 2050 and 2060, according to a study released on Monday.

"You're not reading this animal," the study, released by the Population Institute, said.

President Werner Fornos released a report, "A Blueprint for World Population Stabilization and Development," that said world population, currently 5 billion, is growing at the unprecedented rate of 1 billion people per year.

The population could be stabilizing at about the middle of the century if the United States adopts recommended policies and spending recommendations, the report said.

And a key and potentially controversial suggestion in the report is that the United States spend about $32 billion over the next 10 years, from 1989 to 1998, to extend family planning services to about 10 million people worldwide. That's almost seven robberies per year — a rate of one per year and more than one per day.

The new data comes in about eight billion by the middle of the next decade. Governments, many of which already have a world in which virtually the entire Third World will be wracked by vast poverty, are already absorbing the impact of the new data.

By 2050, the report estimates that the combined populations of Asia and Africa will be between 7 billion and 8 billion.

The report projects that contraceptives needed to expand voluntary family planning in the Third World from 1989 to 1998 will include nearly 8 billion sets of contraceptive devices, 112 million sterilized IUD kits and more than 51 billion condoms.

Fornos said the costs of supplying the countries would average 50 cents for one month's supply of contraception against unwanted pregnancies.

Robbery victims: Half get injured

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An average of 1.2 million Americans face a robber each year and more than half of those incidents result in physical injury, said a Justice Department survey released Sunday.

Based on estimates from a 12-year period ended in 1984, the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics said about one in 10 of the robbery victims are seriously injured, either raped, knifed, shot or knocked unconscious by their attackers.

The bureau's National Crime Survey estimated that almost 1.47 million people were robbed, or were victims of attempted robberies, in the decade years from 1973 through 1984.

The 15-year average was about 825,000 robberies a year — a rate of about 7.4 robberies per 100,000 people. The study said an average of 77,300 thefts were completed each year.

While the study showed a 15 percent decline in robbery rates during the period, largely due to a 29 percent drop in attempted robberies, the rate for completed robberies remained the same.

Two-thirds of the victims said the loss of money or property, and one-third were injured and their attackers were male 90 percent of the time, the report found.

More than one-half of the victims were attacked, the study said, either shot, knifed, hit or grabbed.

Victims were injured in 35 percent of all cases, and in 15 percent required medical care.

Attackers used weapons in about one-half of the robberies, and clances were one in five the weapon was gun, the study said.

"Robbery victims were much more likely than rape or assault victims to face two or more offenders," the study said, and "generally did not know their assailants."

About one-half of the robberies happened at night, when it was more likely that the victim was injured.

About one-half of all completed robberies involved losses of $80 or less, with the losses set at $97.

Group seeks to wipe out woodchuck nose bounty

HOPKINTON, R.I. (UPI) — An animal rights group planned to ask the town council Monday to repeal a 200-year-old bounty on woodchuck noses. The town pays 15 cents for every woodchuck collected — a bounty some say relieves gardeners of the burrowing pests. Hopkinton budgeted $2,000 a year for the nose.

Residents point out that collecting the bounty is a rite of passage to adulthood for town children. A ritual akin to getting a first pocketknife or fishing rode.

But an animal rights activist said the council should abandon the bounty because it teaches children the wrong lesson.

"The woodchuck nose bounty can only have a corruptive effect upon Hopkinton youth," said Steve Ruggeri, spokesman of the Rhode Island Animal Rights Coalition.

"It has the potential to desensitize impressionable youths to the pain and suffering of animals by promoting the... notion that non-human animals are not worthy of any moral consideration."

Rather than the bounty, Ruggeri suggested the town offer children money to collect litter or recyclable aluminum cans. His group also will help any property owner whose garden is harmed by the furry creature.

Hopkinton, a rural town is 20 miles southwest of Providence, is the only town in Rhode Island that still offers the bounty.

Quarterbacks stand out at spring grid scrimmage

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

PINCKNEYVILLE — When the aggressive, hard-hitting scrimmage at Pinckneyville High School was over Saturday, Saluki coach Ray Dorr assembled his players in a group at midfield and told them he was proud.

"We're going to be a good team," Dorr told the gridders.

"There's no question about that. We're all getting better, a little better every time we practice."

It was the second scrimmage of the year for Dorr and squad, and the head man thinks it was a big success in more ways than one.

"Obviously, we made some mistakes today," Dorr told the team. "That's why we're out here practicing — there are no shortcuts."

Among the scrimmage highlights was the performance by quarterback and Pasi King, who was nursing a tender ankle. King completed 9 of 10 passes with one interception. Reserve quarterback Kevin Brown threw for one touchdown and one interception to finish with 5 of 10 passing for the day.

"Both moved well around the pocket, both kept their composure," Dorr said. "And we haven't had one lumbled snap, one dropped scrimmage, and that's something we knew we had to improve on. I think we'll be able to produce more from the quarterback position this year."

Dorr praised several players for outstanding scrimmage performances. Running backs Paul Patterson and Chuck Harnke stood out at their spots, while linemen Pete Janssen and Bob Grammer continued to impress Saluki coaches with their blocking.

Receiver Weslye Yates snagged four passes, including one for a touchdown, while Nate McCall and Bob Derricotte had three receptions apiece. Derricotte now has had two impressive scrimmages in a row, Dorr said.

Illinois State, Eastern Illinois and Sotom Hall.

"I think SIU-C got somebody that no one else was aware of. He's a hard worker, a good student and a good skater — SIU-C can't go wrong with this one,"

SALUKI'S Assistant football coach Jim Bentivoggles signed running back Mike Doup, a 6-4, 240-pounder from Pinckneyville, a suburb of Montreal, Canada.

Doup rushed for over 3,000 yards in the last two years and averaged 7.5 yards per carry playing in the junior college football league (1% to 2-year-olds), where he was named the offensive player of the year.

Doup became interested in SIU-C when he heard about the school's athletics training program, and sent a video tape to the SIU-C coaching staff.

The SIU-C coaching staff did not have a scholarship to offer Doup, but did offer him a scholarship when one became available after the exit of Pole Powell. Powell had earlier signed a scholarship, but opted to play in the fall after a spring football at the Division II level.

The hitting at Saturday's scrimmage was once again intense, a trademark of spring practices so far this season. No serious injuries occurred, but safety Dennis Bean docked tight end Yogi Henderson after a head-on collision.

SIU-C's 27-11 baseball team, which is tied for second in Missouri Valley Conference play with Wichita State pending Sunday's results, will entertain the "bill gang" today with a single game against the 9-23 Louisville Cardinals.

The Division I Cardinals recently lost a pair to MVC leader Indiana State, 9-1 and 7-1. The Salukis will meet Indiana State May 2-3 at Terre Haute, Ind., in their last MVC series of the regular season.

Louisville coach John Mason announced the inking of two recruits.

Greg Zeiders, of Bartlesville, Okla., and Dean Maglioce of Staten Island, N.Y., signed with SIU-C Friday.

Zeiders, a 5-10, 160-pounder who intends to major in premedicine, is a two-year member of the U.S. Gymnastic Federation junior team and excels on the pommel horse and still rings.

Maglioce, also a member of the USGF junior team, should help the Salukis as an all-rounder.

With the inking of Maglioce and Zeiders, Meade likes the crop of recruits signed this year.

"This is looking like the best recruiting class I've had in ten years," Meade said. "I'm still looking to sign more, but so far this is the best talent I've signed in some time."

Saluki basketball coach Rich Herrin inked his second recruit of the spring signing period.

Geoff Hawkins, a 6-5, 175-pound guard from Hillcrest High School in suburban Chicago, will bring a 15 point and 7.2 rebound per game average to campus next fall.

Hawkins suffered a broken leg shortly before the season, which kept him out of action at Hillcrest for most of the past year. He averaged 20 points per game in his last five outings, and was recruited by Hawkins.
