USS Iowa explosion kills 47 sailors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Forty-seven sailors were killed in an explosion and fire that ripped through the World War II battleship USS Iowa 330 miles northeast of Puerto Rico Wednesday in one of the worst U.S. naval accidents in recent history.

The Iowa, modernized and recommissioned in 1984, was participating in the Atlantic Fleet exercise "Fleetex 3-89" and firing its huge 16-inch guns during routine gunnery practice at about 10 a.m. EDT when an explosion tore through gun turret No. 2 on the front of the ship, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Steve Burnett said.

Forty-seven sailors were killed in the explosion and resulting fire, a Navy spokeswoman said. The number of injuries to the 1,575 sailors aboard the ship and the extent of damage were not immediately available.

Navy Lt. Cmdr. John Woodhouse of the 2nd Fleet said, "We don't have an exact number on the injuries (but) we don't anticipate that number will be high because of the nature of the accident and the explosion.

"It's unfortunate, but this particular type of incident tends to produce deaths rather than injuries," he said.

The 58,000-ton ship was able to maintain power and was never in danger of sinking. The cause of the accident was unknown.

The injured were evacuated by helicopter to the nearby aircraft carrier USS Coral Sea for possible transport to the Roosevelt Roads Naval Station, Puerto Rico, a Navy spokeswoman said.

President Bush, a World War II Navy pilot, called the disaster a "great tragedy" and a "matter of terrible sadness." During a meeting at the White House with congressional leaders, Bush said he wanted "to express my regrets, especially to the families of the kids killed in that accident."

Officials at the Norfolk Naval Base in Virginia — the Iowa's home port — set up a counseling center and an information clearinghouse to provide news and comfort to relatives.

The death toll made it one of the worst U.S. naval accidents in recent history.

In 1967, 134 people were killed aboard the aircraft carrier USS Forrestal off the coast of Vietnam when a rocket fired from an aircraft on deck started a huge blaze. The next worst accident was in 1963 when the submarine USS Thresher sank with 129 people aboard, followed by 99 dead in

Clearcutting option to cut fewer trees

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Cutting smaller trees in a scattered pattern, single tree selection, could serve as an alternative to full-range clearcutting, Ron Rayburn, timber staff officer of the U.S. Forest Service, said.

Single tree selection would cut trees in random places instead of one large plot, Rayburn said.

"Tourists and others looking at the forest won't be able to see the cut trees," Rayburn said. "The larger trees will hide the smaller ones. The larger ones won't be cut."

On Tuesday, Rod Sallee, forest supervisor, announced the Forest Service will reanalyze the environmental effects of clearcutting in eight areas of the Shawnee National Forest.

The areas in question include: Quarrel Creek, Town Hall, Big Ranch, Cripps Bend, Fairview, Hard Times, Otter Salvage and Wildcat from Pope, Alexander, Jackson and Hardin counties in Southern Illinois.

An initial review of each of the areas showed the clear cutting would have been environmentally safe, Sallee said.

However, the Regional Forest Service was not satisfied with the initial review, Sallee said. The standards set by the National Environmental Policy Act require the Forest Service to come up with alternative methods to full-range clear-cutting.

U of I no replacement for Halloween change

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

The University of Illinois won't put out the welcome mat for Carbondale Halloween parties if the annual celebration is canceled.

News Analysis

"We are not interested in having anyone from out of town coming in to the campus," U of I Dean of Students William L. Riley said.

The Carbondale City Council discussed ending the notorious Halloween party at its meeting Tuesday night.

Conservative estimates for Carbondale's street party put crowd totals at 20,000 during the second night of the celebration.

The Champaign party attracts about 15,000 annually with U of I students making up 40 percent of the attendees.

Compared with about 200 arrests made during Carbondale's celebration, only 14 people were arrested last year at the Champaign party.

Even without organizers or sponsors of the Champaign event, the street party has remained in control with little violence. Something has worked for Champaign that hasn't worked for Carbondale.

In 1986, the Champaign and Urbana city councils passed an ordinance banning cans and bottles from the celebration.

"That has worked," Riley said. "The intent was to eliminate having missiles that University employees and their dependents automatically will be switched from the CarleCare Health Maintenance Organization to the Quality Health Care plan on July 1.

The CarleCare HMO, which has been the primary health organization for the University, recently asked the Illinois legislature for a $10 office visit charge and an increased premium rate.

After being denied, CarleCare officials decided that it is not cost efficient to stay in Southern Illinois, William Capie, executive director of personnel services, said at Wednesday's Administrative Staff Professional Constituency meeting.

Student election tabulations underway

By Miguel Albe
Staff Writer

With the final vote cast in Wednesday's Undergraduate Student Government elections, the election commission began the painstaking job of counting each individual ballot.

Debbie Hughes, election commissioner, said she estimates 3,500 students voted in the election. If the estimate is accurate, this will nearly double last year's official total of 1,833 votes in the presidential race.

"We had a good voter turnout," she said. "We have a big job ahead of us."

Commission members began alphabetizing and verifying each individual vote Wednesday night. A full tabulation of the results is expected by the weekend, Hughes said.

Hughes spent the day collecting votes from the polling places in a University van she called "home base" where the votes were kept.

Although the voting process went smoothly, Hughes said a shortage of student trustee ballots caused some delays at some polling places, but the problem was resolved by having emergency ballots printed with the help of the Office of Student Development.

Hughes said statistics concerning the number of votes cast, where they were cast and who the votes were for will be provided for future reference.

All the ballots are enclosed in two envelopes as part of a check system to assure against voting fraud. The votes will be kept at the SIU-C police station overnight, a commission member said.

Lawyer charges Reagan authorized North's work

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oliver North's lawyer, ending a passionate defense of the former White House aide, charged Wednesday that President Reagan authorized North's secret Iran-Contra work then "threw him overboard to get some political peace." "The man who held lives in his hand now has his life in your hands. In a sense, he's a hostage," said defense lawyer Brendan Sullivan.

Suspected mass slayer arrested in Mexico

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (UPI) — A winery worker sought for the slayings of seven people, including two of his young daughters, was captured Wednesday at a railroad station north of the hometown of his mother in western Mexico, authorities reported. Deputies and FBI agents in San Francisco said Ramon Salcido, 28, was taken into custody by Mexican police and FBI agents without incident.

Salvadoran attorney general assassinated

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Salvadoran Attorney General Roberto Garcia Alvarado was assassinated Wednesday by assailants who hurled a bomb at the armored van carrying him to work, judicial sources said. The sources said the explosion, which El Salvador's president-elect blamed on Marxist rebels, severely wounded one bodyguard and deafened another.

Half-mile-wide cosmic 'close call' for Earth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A half-mile-wide asteroid, blazing through space at nearly 50,000 mph, skirted past Earth last month in a cosmic "close call" unrivaled in a half century, NASA said Wednesday. The asteroid, called as 1989FC, passed within 500,000 miles of Earth — about twice the distance to the moon — on March 23, the space agency said.

Afghan government attacks non-military aid

KABUL, Afghanistan (UPI) — The pro-Soviet government Wednesday criticized a U.S. congressional subcommittee for approving a White House request for $105 million in new non-military aid to Afghan rebels, saying it violated the 1988 U.N.-brokered Geneva peace accords. Meanwhile, the government said 400 more supply trucks had reached Kabul on the key Salang Highway from the Soviet border.

Son alleges coverup in crash of dad's plane

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — The son of the late Pakistani President Zia Ul-Haq said Wednesday the United States knows who downed his father's plane but is concealing evidence in what he claims is a case of sabotage. Ijaz Ul-Haq said his American lawyers were preparing a $1 billion lawsuit against U.S. aircraft manufacturer Lockheed to reveal its findings on why the Hercules C-130 transport plane crashed Aug. 17 shortly after takeoff, killing 30 people including Zia and U.S. Ambassador to Pakistan Arnold Raphel.

Jordan price-increase protests contained

AMMAN, Jordan (UPI) — Police fired tear gas at knife-wielding demonstrators in southern Jordan Wednesday on the second day of a violent backlash against price increases, witnesses said. Government officials deemed the protests "contained" Wednesday. The army deployed tanks around Ma'an and Tafleeh and clamped a curfew on the towns, where violence continued — though somewhat abated compared to Tuesday's fiery uprisings — over government-imposed increases in the price of fuel, cigarettes, beverages and utilities, witnesses said.

Panel OKs death penalty for drug-related crimes

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Individuals who kill others while committing drug crimes could be sentenced to death under legislation approved Wednesday by the House Judiciary II Committee. Rep. Coal miners' lives revealed in show

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

"Walking on Our Knees," presents a moving look at life in the coal mines and the effects it has on the miners and their families.

Sharon Bebout Bragg, who collected, compiled and directed the Calipre show, said the play is about miners in Southern Illinois and Western Kentucky.

"I've spent the last year interviewing coal miners and their families in Southern Illinois and western Kentucky," she said. Bragg is a coal miner's daughter and experienced the death of her brother in a mining accident 10 years ago.

She said she wants to break the stereotype that miners are forced to mine and are locked into poverty. Of miners in this area she said, "They are miners because they choose to be."

The show also emphasizes that different types of mines exist. Mines have entrances as large as a living room, mines with water and bad rock, and mines with roofs so low that miners have to walk on their knees.

Bragg said it isn't a show about unionization, but "about individual people, how they make it through and why they stay."

"I worked very hard to portray them as I saw them," she said.

The show is a series of short scenes linked together with coal mining music such as "16 Tons," "Only a Miner," "Mining Camp Blues," and "30 Inch Coal." Music is performed by The Panache Ramblers.

The scenes progress from the first that explained the different types of mining to scenes portraying accidents, the grief of family and friends and practical jokes played in the mines. Also, the life or women in the mines, the thoughts of an emergency worker and a discussion about antics of rats in the mines are high points in the show.

Varying opinions are given on the quality of life of the miner. A young miner, played by Kevin Paul, is afraid of the dark and dislikes the bureaucracy of the mining company. He makes the statement that you have "to kiss the people above you and hurt those below you."

quitting his job to go back school. On the other hand, another miner, played by Ronald D. Rich, says he loves mining. Ava C. Lenoir Simons, playing one of the women miners, says she would be a miner no matter what.

One of the most touching scenes portrayed the death of a miner and the feelings of a friend, sister and his parents.

Simons plays the friend who is writing a letter to the family and remembering the boy. Kris Hildy and Rich play the parents who sit and cry about the death, while Lori Sefton portrays the boy's sister.

Sefton flips through a photo album remembering funny incidents about her brother. Her portrayal is touching because she isn't overemotional, yet the grief in her voice is strong.

Hildy and Simons are strong in their scene about women working in the mines. The scene begins with the men eating lunch together and the two women sitting by themselves at each side of the men.

Simons shows the rough side of working in the mine when the men give the women a hard time. She says that she gets the tough jobs and constantly has to prove herself to the men.

Simons plays the part with spunk, making the audience believe that she can handle anything that the men dish out.

The music helped the show flow smoothly from scene to scene.

Lecturer points to prison overcrowding, offers solutions

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

You only have so much room in the jar until the jar explodes, Charlie W. Flynt, faculty candidate for the crime studies center, said.

The same holds true for prisons. Prison populations have increased 120 percent during the 1980s, Flynt said Tuesday during a lecture sponsored by the crime studies center.

Flynt is employed at the West Virginia Department of Corrections, and he is applying for a position as instructor in the crime studies center.

As the population escalates, so does the number of criminals that need to be imprisoned, he said.

Flynt said the population is increasing at the rate of 1.7 percent a year. In just 42 years, the population will double in size if the rate stays the same, he said.

Flynt suggested that the government deal with the growing prison population in two ways.

First, prisons can be expanded and cells could be enlarged to hold four prisoners instead of two. However, this method can be costly to the taxpayers, he said.

The second method is to incarcerate the serious offenders.

"What crimes are considered to be the most serious?" Flynt asked. "One person's idea of a terrible crime may be considered pardonable by the other. The government will have a hard time deciding which crimes are the imprisonable ones."

Prison population forecasts predict that the number of prisoners will double by 1995, Flynt said.

Flynt said the government needs to find ways to give better counseling to the prisoners so they won't be "recycled" through the system over and over.

"In most rural states, people who have been imprisoned once and released are likely to be imprisoned again and again," Flynt said.

Fight AIDS: Don't scare, make aware

COLLEGE STUDENTS like sex; there's no doubt about it.

So sexually transmitted diseases are a scourge on the college population.

The only thing worse than a sexually transmitted disease is a sexually transmitted disease that kills.

AIDS.

How many times in the past few years have you heard the horror stories about what AIDS can do? Obviously not enough to scare everyone into practicing safe sex or abstaining altogether.

So maybe scare tactics aren't the answer. Maybe students just need to be aware that AIDS can affect them and others their age.

AIDS IS NOT a predictable disease that can be contracted one day and diagnosed the next. It can take years to show up, and even someone who looks healthy can carry the AIDS virus, though they may not show signs of the disease.

You may think "I wouldn't go out with someone who could have AIDS." But how do you know? AIDS doesn't discriminate. It will attack anyone, regardless of age, creed or dress code.

The University is doing its part to help students battle AIDS by installing condom vending machines next fall. Students need to take advantage of the convenience of these machines and not be embarrassed to purchase or use condoms.

NO MATTER WHAT anyone else says or does to make you aware of the dangers of AIDS, only you can help prevent it. It must be taken seriously because it can happen to you. It can kill you.

This is AIDS awareness week, but you should be aware of AIDS every day (and night) of your life.

So before you go home with that perfect person you meet at the next party, ask yourself if it's worth it. And use condoms. But think about it — before, not the morning after.

Kansas City Times

It's coup season again in Haiti. Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril, who declared himself Haiti's president after the ouster of the illegitimately elected Leslie Manigat, is targeted for a hasty exit.

Avril survived an unsuccessful, bloody coup nearly two weeks ago led by at least three military commanders, including the leader of the army's Leopard Battalion. The challenge came four days after he dismissed four senior officers for alleged involvement in drug trafficking.

Within days Avril was challenged by the infamous Dessalines Battalion, adjacent to the Port-au-Prince palace. The 1,000-man Presidential Guard, whence came Avril, has defended Avril.

The crisis has posed a sticky situation for the Bush administration. Avril was a close friend of "Baby Doc"

Duvalier, the corrupt dictator who contributed to Haiti's moral and economic decline. Since his "presidency," however, Avril has been moving toward democracy.

The administration bet on the new and improved Avril. It gave verbal support to the beleaguered leader, in office for just six months.

The commanders' dismissal and the anti-drug crackdown were, in great part, intended to appease U.S. interests so that Haiti can get $70 million in U.S. aid. Avril created an office to crack down on the military's role in the drug trade.

The administration should continue to give Avril conditional support. However, it must be careful not to have the U.S. in bed with another wolf in general's clothing. Does the name Manuel Antonio Noriega ring a bell?

Abortion allows the strong to exploit the weak, helpless

In recent articles in the press, supporters of legal abortion have tried to pass off their opponents as a monolith of fanatics and crackpots whose ideas are proven ridiculous by their behavior.

Those people will find me, and many others like me, inconvenient for their argument. I don't bomb abortion clinics, I don't harangue pregnant women through a bullhorn, and I am adamantly opposed to abortion.

If it has done nothing else, the debate over abortion has exposed the great lie underpinning the pro-abortion position.

Its supporters claim to be in favor of people's "rights," and portray themselves as protecting the helpless and downtrodden from relentless government oppression.

This "let us be kind" distortion conceals the truth of their position. The ultimate test of a civil society is in its attitude toward the exploitation of its weak and helpless members by the strong.

Nothing embodies a starker contrast of weak and strong than abortion, which is nothing less than the taking of life by rational, educated human beings from others who are in the weakest possible position and most in need of our protection.

Legalized abortion has removed the only defense the unborn would have.

Let's not delude ourselves. To support legal abortion is not to support some set of rights. It is to condone the use of raw power to commit the ultimate exploitation. — James Payne, graduate student, economics.

Solution offered for sexist language

I am writing in reference to a perplexing problem that has plagued instructors for some time now. This problem presents itself in the failure of the English language to develop a pronoun that represents both sexes in a singular third person pronoun.

The problem that most females are quick to point out, with which I agree, is that the English language is male oriented.

I have asked many English majors if such a pronoun exists, but all have failed to provide me with one. Many of my students in fairness to both sexes use the him-her or he-she representation on their papers in order to represent a student or individual.

I personally accept this, but it is still accentuating our sexist oriented language.

Due to the unavailability of such a pronoun or lack of any knowledge that such exists, I propose a new word for Webster's Dictionary. Welcome to the new non-sexist third person pronoun "zin."

I have been testing this pronoun on my students and they feel good about it. Both male and female agree that it is better than him-her and that it does not promote the continuation of sexism in our language.

I would like to hear from English majors, feminists and all other interested parties if the word "zin" would be agreeable to them. — R. Wood Young, graduate student, educational psychology.

Protest against clearcutting needed

In 1986 the Forest Service submitted its 50-year Final Management Plan for Shawnee Forest. This plan called for clearcutting 196,000 acres of the 262,000 acres of Shawnee National Forest.

Simple math shows this to be 74.8 percent. That's outrageous!

The damage to the ecosystem could result in some plant and animal species becoming extinct. The natural hardwood ecosystem would be interrupted if not fully destroyed by the replanting of softwoods in clearcut areas.

This is the plan and it has been deemed unacceptable by every environmental group that has knowledge of it, including: Audubon Council of Illinois; Illinois Department of Conservation; Sierra Club; Association of Concerned Environmentalists; Friends of the Earth; International Wildlife Coalition; Illinois South Project; McHenry County Defenders; The Wilderness Society; and Illinois Audubon Society.

Demonstrate your concern by attending a rally at the U.S. Forest Service Headquarters in Murphysboro at noon April 21. The potential damage is too great to just let the other guy fight to save the Shawnee, for you! — Vern Cornell, Morris Library technical Assistant.

Keeping open mind is issue, not metal music

I am writing this in response to Brad Seifert's letter. How nice it must be to be the sole determinant among a whole community of unique individuals, and to be able to decide on what's intellectual music or not.

The issue here isn't heavy metal vs. "intellectual music," as you put it. It's being able to keep an open mind to all music, rather than putting it down just because it doesn't appeal to your particular liking.

Being able to appreciate a variety of music is only saying more about yourself and your strength of character.

I am also wondering how you came to the conclusion that heavy metal "doesn't require thought nor provoke any thought after it's sung." Apparently your exposure to music has been minimal, and that puts you in no position to judge music or the people who listen to it.

I think that the only "pinhead with a lack of purpose" is someone like yourself who is obviously completely closed-minded, yet chose to major in psychology. — L. Ryan, sophomore, communication disorders.

the loss of the submarine USS Scorpion in 1968.

Many of the Iowa's dead were inside the turret when it exploded and burst into flames, Burnett said. The turrets are so large — vertical steel barrels that run from the bottom of ship to the deck — that 15 to 70 men are normally working inside them, he said.

The turret is made of 16-inch armor plate and contained the blast without causing external damage to the ship, a spokesman said. Each turret contains three gun barrels.

The 16-inch shells are about 4.5 foot long and weigh 2,300 pounds — "the size of Volkswagens."

Navy Cmdr. Robert Franzmann of the Atlantic Fleet described the gun turrets as giant steel pedestals that "run virtually from the bottom of the ship to the deck. The gun crews operate inside."

He said the 16-inch shell is shoved into the breech or rear end of the gun by machinery. Gunpowder bags go in after the shell, and the size of these vary depending on the range they want to achieve. The breech is closed with a big metal door before the shooting takes place.

"As I understand it, there are safeguards. If the breech

Retired Navy chief gunner's mate Robert Linsley of Virginia Beach, Va., who served aboard the Iowa in the 1950s, said he believed the explosion occurred in the ammunition "handling room" in the bottom of the gun turret because of the number of deaths.

"An explosion at the top of the gun would not kill that many people in my estimation."

Each gun requires four bags to fire, Linsley said. "Black powder requires only a small spark to ignite. Once you ignite the first one — then they're all gone," he said.

A Navy lieutenant on the USS Missouri who declined to give his name said he also had heard that the explosion occurred in the handling room.

The last U.S. warship to experience a gun turret explosion was the battleship USS Mississippi when it was shelling Japanese-held Makin Island in the Pacific in November 1943. That explosion killed 43 sailors.

The Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, SIU-C and the city have tried to make the Halloween celebration safer and more enjoyable.

The Carbondale council has passed a glass ban, forbidding alcoholic beverages to be served or purchased in glass containers. However, the council did not pass a can ban.

According to a report by Deputy City Manager Jeff Doherty, "the difficulty in supplying the large crowd with beer without cans or bottles prevented the adoption of a can ban."

"We do not recommend the low option package," Capie said. "I know of some horror stories at this University that have resulted from low option coverage," he said.

The high option package will be provided to employees at no cost. The only cost will be for additional dependents.

The Quality Health Care plan will offer a 5 premium reduction this year, and another 5 reduction next year, Capie said.

The payments will be split. Quality Health Care will pay 80 of accepted bills and the employee will pay 20 of accepted bills.

"Some submitted bills will be returned because they exceed reasonable and customary charges," Capie said. He warned employees to be prepared for this.

"Southern Illinois has some of the highest health care costs in the state," he said.

"The difference between HMO's and the Quality Health Care plan is now you will be billed, you will see bills,"

"Many alternatives were considered by the team that did the original analysis and decisions, but only a few were documented," Sallee said.

The second analysis will look at the possibility of clear-cutting single trees as well as checking for endangered plant and animal species.

"We're confident we'll come up with some environmentally sound alternatives to clear-cutting such as single tree selection," Rayburn said. "If clear-cutting is deemed necessary, we want to make sure the areas we cut are environmentally sound enough to withstand the clear-cutting."

The Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists said if the clear-cutting had not been stopped for an additional review, legal measures would have been taken.

"Although single tree selection is still clear-cutting, it is definitely not as harmful as full-range clear-cutting," Randall Thomas, member of RACE, said.

Randall said the Forest Service should consider clear-cutting on private land instead of public property.

"If they want to clearcut, they should do it on their own land, instead of the land that belongs to everybody,"

Thomas said.

The decision to do an environmental review on the regional level stemmed from a letter written by RACE to the U.S. Chief of Forestry in Washington.

Rayburn said the second analysis should be done by mid-August.

Psychology group seeks members for organization

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

The Psychology Students Association will hold an organizational meeting at 5 p.m. today in Life Science II, Room 430.

Chuck Goff, administrator of the PSA, said it is a social-educational organization that allows students of any major to learn more about psychology outside of the classroom.

Goff, a senior in psychology, said the PSA plans to apply for Registered Student Organization status to become more active on campus and to receive funding to help pay for guest speakers, trips to psychology conferences and social functions.

Although the PSA is open to anyone, Goff said most of the 15 regular members are psychology majors.

"The PSA is geared toward making psychology majors into a tighter-knit group. It's a way of getting to know other psychology majors and getting to know the faculty better," Goff said.

Goff said he hopes to sponsor students to attend the 61st Annual Midwestern Psychological Association in Chicago, from May 4 to 6. He said the meeting will give students opportunities to learn what new research is being done and to meet and to ask researchers questions.

Dorothy Kubasik, a sophomore in psychology, said she joined the PSA to become more involved in the psychology department and to learn more about the separate branches of psychology, such as counseling, research, rehabilitation and social work.

Goff said the organization is just getting started and would be receptive to input on possible speakers, trips or social activities.

Fishbone's music to fill air on WIDB before Springfest

WIDB's alternative airwaves will be filled with Fishbone music Friday in anticipation of the group's arrival in Carbondale for Springfest.

Fishbone music, ranging from early psycho ska, an upbeat style of reggae, to cuts from their recent funk-addictive "Truth and Soul" LP, will be heard on "Alternative Fodder," which highlights progressive artists from 11:30 a.m. to noon daily on 600 AM or 104.9 FM cable.

Harold Clemens, a radio-TV senior, will host the funk fest.

"My show will be the hors d'oeuvres to build up your appetite for the feast of Fishbone," Clemens said.

Fishbone performs from 5 to 7 p.m. Saturday at the Springfest Mainstage at the Old Main Mall. Ipo Facto will open the rock-reggae show.

Bob Walk, Pittsburgh hang on to knock off Cardinals, 7-5

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Veteran right-hander Bob Walk discovered a sure way to help his hitting.

"I got some at-bats today," Walk said after pitching 7 2-3 strong innings Wednesday and delivering a pair of hits to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals. "It's kind of tough to get any hits when you only last three innings."

Walk, 1-1, scattered six hits and delivered an RBI triple in the second inning. He also singled in the fourth inning, advancing Rafael Belliard to third, from where he scored on a fielder's choice.

Walk, who was making his fourth start of the season, struck out six and walked four. In his last start, a 7-6 loss to Montreal last Friday, he earned no decision but lasted only 3 2-3 innings and gave up six runs on 10 hits.

Jeff Robinson went 1-13 innings for the save after giving up a bases-loaded triple in the eighth to pinch hitter John Morris that made it 7-5.

"Walk pitched a good game. He flipped some curve balls over for strikes," Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland said.

With the Cardinals leading 1-0, Walk smashed an RBI triple off Don Heinkel, 1-1, in the second.

Baseball commissioner not commenting on Rose

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — The investigation of alleged gambling charges against Cincinnati Reds' Manager Pete Rose remains a "no comment" topic for new baseball Commissioner Bart Giamatti.

Giamatti, in Columbus to address a crowd of 1,700 at an annual fund-raising luncheon of the Central Ohio Council of the Boy Scouts of America, told members of the media, many of them who made the 110-mile trip from Cincinnati, "There is nothing I can say, absolutely nothing."

"I cannot comment on any part of the whole process," said Giamatti, who had declined to hold a formal news conference but was cornered by members of the media on

"I cannot comment on any part of the whole process."

—Bart Giamatti

John Dowd, chief investigator in the Rose case, Giamatti again repeated his stock answer.

"The fairness and scrupulousness of it is essential and I am not going to damage it," he said. "I am not going to make any comment."

Giamatti, who replaced Peter Ueberroth as commissioner April 1, was just as non-committal about the future expansion of baseball and the possibility that Columbus, which presently has one of the more successful minor league franchises, might be considered.

Recently, Columbus Mayor Dana Rinehart said his No. 1 priority would be to obtain a major league franchise for Ohio's capital city.

Finehart presented his case for a Columbus franchise when he met with Giamatti at a private reception prior to the commissioner's address.

"Some time this summer," said Giamatti, "I hope to be able to announce a timetable for expansion."

"There will be a period of time when any city that wishes to present its case, according to stated published criteria Major League Baseball has out, will be invited to do it before the National League, because I believe the National League will expand first," he said. "The National League will then choose the two cities."

"Until then, it seems completely wrong for me to promote or advise one city or the other because the rules of this game should be like any other decent game. They ought to be fair."

Dayton names pro as new head coach

DAYTON, Ohio (UPI) — Jim O'Brien, an assistant coach with the New York Knicks, was named Wednesday as head basketball coach at the University of Dayton, which fired Don Donoher last month after 25 years in the post.

O'Brien, who assumed the post immediately, said at a news conference he would bring a "running, pressing style" to the Flyers.

The approach may appear "helter-skelter" to fans at first, but "the more people become accustomed to the style, they'll realize it's controlled chaos," he said.

O'Brien, 37, has been an assistant with the Knicks for the past two seasons. Before that he was head coach at Wheeling (W.Va.)

SAAB elects officers, adviser for upcoming year

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The Student Athlete Advisory Board elected officers and a faculty adviser for the 1989-90 school year at its regular meeting Tuesday night at the Davies Gymnasium lounge.

Men's cross country representative David Beauchum, was elected chair to succeed current president Marcus Mulholland of the gymnastics team. Beauchum defeated Mulholland and the swim team's David Whitting.

Women's cross country representative Lisa Ravetto was elected secretary, defeating Matt Giegling of the baseball team. Ravetto replaces Sue Sinclair of the volleyball team.

For adviser, Assistant Athletics Director Nancy Bandy was elected unanimously over baseball trainer Ryan "Shoes" Kling.

In other SAAB business: The board nominated athletes for year-end awards. The recommendations will go to the awards committee, which receives nominations from several sources.

The track team's Kathy Raske was nominated for Female Athlete of the Year while the basketball team's Kai Nurnberger edged the swim team's Scott Roberts in a run-off to earn the Male Athlete of the Year nomination.

For Outstanding Leader-Athlete, which is open to athletes in their last year of eligibility and who have maintained a 2.75 gpa — Mulholland was the male nominee, and after a run-off the volleyball team's Beth Winsett was chosen over Sinclair.

Mulholland reported that the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Board heard the recommendation from coaches that a strength coach be employed by the University to assist in weight-training programs for all student-athletes.

After a lengthy discussion, SAAB took the position that lack of funding would be a major obstacle to having a strength coach. The board also feared that if money was taken from each team's budget to fund the salary for a strength coach, that each team would not receive equal attention. The plan was considered unworkable.

In its final examination of the Strategic Planning Committee report, the board agreed with the report that the "party-school" image hurts in the recruiting of athletes. However, SAAB reported that the image is being exploited

Salukis capture 20th victory Baseball team splits doubleheader at Eastern

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Baseball coach Itchy Jones went 20-for-20 Wednesday.

In capturing the first game of a doubleheader with Eastern Illinois, 13-7, Jones picked up his 20th straight 20-win season, one for each of his year's at SIU-C.

The Salukis settled for a split with the Panthers, dropping the second game 5-4. SIU-C is now 20-19 overall.

In the first game, the Panthers pulled out to an early 4-0 lead in the first inning, but the Salukis sent 12 men to the plate in the third to chase starting pitcher and loser Mike Deese (3-5).

SIU-C scored two more in the fourth, one in the sixth and added three in the seventh to preserve the win.

Junior Doug Shields continued his torrid pace of late. The center fielder slammed a solo home run in the sixth and went 4-for-5 at the plate including 3 RBIs and 3 runs scored.

Senior Shane Gooden (1-1) picked up the win in relief. Gooden worked 2 2-3 innings, allowing 3 hits and striking out one. Gooden came in for Ryan McWilliams who pitched 4 1-3 innings, giving up all seven Panther runs on five hits. McWilliams walked three and struck out one.

Saluki coach Itchy Jones has won at least 20 games in all 20 of his seasons at SIU-C.

In the second game, Eastern Illinois took a 3-1 lead into the top of the sixth when the Salukis put three runs on the board to take a one run lead, 4-3.

After Shields walked, Ed Janke laced a double, and both runners scored when Brad Hollencamp reached first on an error. Brian Gibson, who came in to run for Hollencamp, also scored on an error.

Eastern then scored three runs in the bottom of the sixth to take the second game.

Shields again paced the Salukis, nailing his second home run in the day and fifth of the season in the first inning.

Junior Doug Shields continued his torrid pace, hitting two home runs bringing his total to five this year.

Chris Bernd (4-3) picked up the loss for SIU-C in 2 2-3 innings of relief. The junior gave up four runs on four hits, walked three and struck out three.

Sean Bergman opened the game, going 3 innings, allowing one run on three hits while walking two and striking out three.

Gooden also saw some action in game two, going the final third and allowing one hit.

Darin Kopac (3-3) picked up the win for Eastern, allowing 3 runs and one hit in 3 innings of relief work.

Softball team signs third spring recruit

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

Colleen Halloway of Illinois Valley Central High School in Chillicothe has signed a scholarship to play with the women's softball team.

Halloway batted .470 as a junior and .404 her sophomore year. Halloway has been a standout in the Amateur Softball Association during her high school career, batting .500 for the Johnson Gators last summer.

"The Gators were led by Halloway to a 70-22 record and a second-place finish in the state tournament in 1987.

"Colleen has a quick, compact swing that should allow her to continue her hitting success at the collegiate level," said Saluki Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer. "She also brings us speed and quickness."

"In addition to her physical skills she is a very positive and enthusiastic young lady who loves to play the game."

IVC softball coach Greg Easter said Halloway chose SIU-C because "she likes the facilities and the brand of ball. She likes aggressive play."

Halloway chose SIU-C over Western Illinois, Bradley, Iowa State and Central Michigan.

Halloway has been a four-year starter at IVC. Halloway currently holds seven school records and is closing in on five more. As a sophomore, Halloway set school marks with 40 hits, 32 RBIs and 18 extra base hits.

"Colleen can catch, play several infield positions or the outfield," said Brechtelsbauer, who has guided the Salukis to 20-win seasons the last four years. "We're very pleased she has decided to play softball at Southern."

Shelly Gibbs hits SIU-C record book

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

The old saying goes, there's a first time for everything. Tuesday afternoon, softball player Shelly Gibbs found her's.

Gibbs, a junior in social work, hit the record books Tuesday as she became the first SIU-C softball player to officially hit a home run over the 230 foot fence at IAW Fields near the Recreation Center.

Gibbs, who was the Saluki's MVP last year, broke the SIU-C career home run record Tuesday with two home runs in a doubleheader against Austin Peay.

There have been only three other players to manage the feat. Saluki Rhonda Snow hit a ball over the fence in 1985, but her home run declared invalid after she failed to touch home plate.

Gibbs said she could understand a batter missing home plate after a home run.

"There is something about hitting one over the fence that just gets you really excited,"

Gibbs said.

Stacey Pritchard of SIU-Edwardsville hit a ball over the fence in 1983 and Beth Mair of Western Illinois accomplished the same feat in 1982.

All four balls have been hit over the fence on the upper diamond (nearest the Rec Center).

Hitting home runs over fences isn't new for Gibbs. The junior second baseman said she hit an out-of-the-park homer at the conference tournament her freshman year, at SIU-E her freshman year and two home runs in one game against Western last year.

Gibbs, who currently has 10 career home runs with more than a season of eligibility left, hit her over-the-fence homer in the first inning of the first game Tuesday.

Gibbs followed with an in-the-park home run in the sixth inning of the nightcap.

Gibbs said hitting a home run is a big deal when the game is at home.

Boat race to continue in 16th year

By Alicia Hill
Staff Writer

Racers, start your cardboard. "The Challenge" is on.

For the past 15 years, SIU-C's Campus Lake has been the site for what has become a nationally-renowned event, the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta. This year, with a few adaptations, the tradition will continue.

What is a regatta?

Literally, a regatta is a striving for mastery. The term was first joined with boat racing in Venice, Italy where gondola races were held. A gondola is a long, narrow canalboat propelled by a pole or one oar at the stern.

For Southern Illinoisans, the term "regatta" is associated with cardboard.

A product of Richard Archer's imagination, "The Challenge" is to design and build a human-powered cardboard boat capable of racing a 200-yard course four times.

Archer, professor of art and design, originally began the race as the final for his Design 102 class.

Since then, the race has seen an increase in its entrants, spectators and, resulting, funding.

According to Archer, the race was funded originally from his classroom budget and cost about $400. There were 54 entrants and about 4,000 spectators.

In 1988, the race drew 206 entrants and 20,000 spectators.

This year it will cost approximately $8,000. The funding will come from SIU-C's administration.

According to Archer, radio stations started funding the race around its fifth year. This continued until 1982, when the Student Programming Council decided to fund it.

"The SPC stopped funding last year when the race was separated from Springfest. The Alumni Association, which copyrighted the event in 1986, helped with funding last year," Archer said.

Despite the funding changes, the structure of the event has remained basically unchanged.

The boats are divided into three classes. Class I boats are propelled by canoe paddles, oars, or kayak paddles. Class II are propelled by any other muscle-powered device or by sails.

Class III include "Instant Boats," designed and built by participants using "Secret Kits" only available at the regatta.

In addition to the trophies given to the winners, trophies are given to reward creative efforts.

The Pride of the Regatta award is given for the most creative design. The Team award is given to the most spirited and best organized team. The Titanic award is given for the most spectacular sinking.

The Vogue award, which is chosen before the race, is given to the most spectacular-looking boat.

Also, the High School Match Race awards a $1,000 scholarship and a trophy to the high school-sponsored boat's winner. The scholarship comes from area businesses.

From the Vogue category, winners over the last few years include last year's paddle-powered Volkswagen Bug; in 1987 "Jonah's Taxi," a whale with a functioning blowhole, won the race; and in 1986 a late 1800s style steamboat with dry ice forming the steam took the award.

"The boat that stands out the most in my mind was designed by Laura Davis (1986). She and her boyfriend ran in a big wheel like caged gerbils," Archer said. "The running propelled paddles pushed it through the water. Eventually, when the thing wouldn't turn, it ran right over another entrant."

The boat received the Titanic award for the most spectacular sinking.

Cardboard boat regattas held nationwide

Boat regatta circuit brings many inquiries into University event

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

The Great Cardboard Boat Regatta started as a final exam for art and design students. Now it is an event held across the country and its growth is limitless.

The regatta is celebrating its 16th birthday and has expanded in all directions, Terry Mathias, director of University relations and Regatta coordinator, said.

In the United States, the event has spread as far north as Sheboygan, Wis., and as far south as Orlando, Fla., Mathias said.

The event has crept its way west to Leon, Iowa, and to Hartford, Conn., in the east, he said.

THESE ARE ONLY the events that are on the current regatta circuit schedule, Mathias said. Inquiries from other parts of the country have come in asking for information on holding future events, he said.

The Carbondale regatta is the start of the cardboard boat racing season. This year the season ends Oct. 8 in Orlando, Fla.

The regatta circuit is the series of regattas held around the country.

Inquiries have come from Arizona, California, Texas, Virginia and many other states, he said.

Mathias said the University does not solicit inquiries from outside the University. Most of the inquiries come from alumni who have experienced the regatta while at SIU-C.

The Carbondale regatta is the official start of the cardboard boat racing circuit and this year the season ends in Orlando on Oct. 5, Mathias said.

MATHIAS SAID in the first two weeks following the Carbondale regatta the alumni office receives three to five inquiries. People interested in holding a regatta first contact the alumni office. A short cover letter, with regatta details, is then sent to them, Mathias said.

If interest still exists, a packet containing the current regatta schedule; a video containing short news pieces on the regatta; information provided by the founder of the regatta, Richard Archer; and the first part of the manual is sent, Mathias said.

A contract is then offered and $250, the first payment of the $500 licensing fee, is required, he said.

The entire manual is then sent along with registration cards and other material needed to start the event, Mathias said.

MATHIAS SAID event producers are recommended to allow three to four months of preparation time before the regatta actually is held, but said preparation has been completed in as little as six weeks.

The regatta circuit was licensed and copyrighted with the University in 1986 and this year a total of 15 races will operate under the copyrighted rules, Mathias said.

Mathias said the regatta was copyrighted for three reasons:

■ To raise the visibility of the University and the Alumni Association;

■ For use as a tool in the recruitment of students, and;

■ For use as a potential source of scholarship money.

All materials, rules, the trademark, and the service mark associated with the regatta are copyrighted as well, Mathias said.

Mathias said money raised by the other regattas and not given to charity goes to the University to be put in the Alumni Association's general scholarship fund.

THE REGATTA MANUAL contains information intended to standardize all events participating in the circuit, Mathias said.

The regatta circuit was licensed and copyrighted by the University in 1986. This year, 15 races will operate under the copyright rules.

The manual started out as only a "handful of instructions," Mathias said. Now the manual contains almost 100 pages of rules, examples and information learned over the years, he said.

The manual is designed to give as much detail and assistance as possible so that each race will be consistent with all the other races, Mathias said.

Consistency among all circuit races is needed so people interested in participating in several events will know what to expect and will be able to use the same boat in each competition, Mathias said.

On the future of the regatta circuit, Mathias said it could grow "as much as we want it to," but because of the limited resources the University has to put into the circuit, it can only handle about 25 races.

IN THE FUTURE, a race could possibly be held at a pace of one each week, Mathias said.

Although most of the races are sponsored through local sources at each event, national sponsors are being sought, he said. Most sponsors have included soft drink companies, food corporations, cardboard manufacturers and, at many places, hardware companies.

Regatta boat race may sell copyrights

Professor Wallenberg believes boat regatta could sink

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

The growth and expense of the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta, now in its 16th year, could lead to the sale of its copyrights, Ed Buerger, executive director of the SIUC Alumni Association, said.

The Regatta trademark, service mark, rules, regulations and materials were copyrighted in 1986.

Buerger said the Alumni Association used to be in control of the Regatta but had to relinquish its affiliation because the cost became too great.

Currently the University runs the event through the School of Art and Design, Buerger said.

The circuit regatta business had grown to the point where it was costing the association a great deal of money and creating large deficits, Buerger said.

The circuit regattas are those licensed by the University held all over the country.

Buerger said that because the regatta circuit has grown so much, there was a need to seek an organization outside the University that would be able to run the circuit effectively.

Should an outside organization show an interest in purchasing the rights to the circuit, that situation would certainly have to be explored, Buerger said.

Richard Archer, founder of the event and professor of art and design, said he was afraid that if the regatta circuit was sold it would become too commercialized.

Archer said that during the '60s he played a part in the go-cart craze and watched the idea become overly commercialized and eventually die. He is afraid this will happen to the regatta as well as 'take the fun out of the event.'

Under the current guidelines the

The Regatta is great for tourism in the area and provides opportunity for Southern Illinois, Archer said.

Regatta is strictly operated and limits the amount of prizes and their value to keep it fun, yet competitive, Archer said.

"Where else can you, for somewhere in the neighborhood of $20 to $30, put something together and have a ball?" Archer said.

Archer tells a story of a mother bringing up two sons on her own. Before one of the past Regattas the mother and her sons sat at their kitchen table and built a cardboard boat together. Archer remembers the mother coming up to him after the race and telling him how impressed she was with the simplicity of the whole event and the fun she and her boys had together.

Archer said this is one of the reasons why he wants to keep the event fun and simple.

Another reason Archer fears selling the regatta is that he wants to keep the Regatta championship in Southern Illinois.

Traditionally, the championship has been held near the end of the circuit schedule at the Du Quoin State Fair, Archer said.

The Regatta is great for tourism in the area and provides opportunity for Southern Illinois, Archer said.

If the event were lost it would be a loss for Archer and his family as well.

After the first Regatta, which had started as a final exam for his students in 1973, Archer remembers walking with his wife and wondering what it was he had created.

Archer said the first Regatta almost instantly received national attention and there seemed to be a lot of public interest.

Now the event is held all over the United States, with Archer assisting and calling the races at the various sites.

Archer and his family travel in their van and pop-up camper to the various races and this has given them a chance to see the country.

The circuit has allowed Archer and his family to visit museums, go fishing and meet interesting people across the country.

Archer said once while in Washington D.C. he and his family were walking and one of his sons was wearing a Regatta T-shirt. Archer said he was stopped at least five times by people who had been to a regatta or had attended SIUC.

These types of occurrences make him wonder about his ability as a teacher.

"How many other teachers have created a final exam that has gone worldwide?" Archer said. He also wondered how many finals had an audience of 20,000 people.

Archer said he has been asked many times how he stays so excited about the Regatta.

"I stay excited just by watching the people involved," Archer said.

Rape education efforts reduce assault cases

By Fernando Feliu-Moggi
Staff Writer

Rape education seems to have had good results last Springfest in preventing sexual assault in the Carbondale area.

Last year, no rape reports were filled over Springfest weekend, a record low compared to the four cases reported in 1987.

Sally Albrecht, legal advocate for the Rape Action Committee, a Carbondale counseling group that offers assistance to rape victims, their family and friends, said local efforts to educate men and women on the issue might have contributed to the low number of rape reports presented last year.

The lack of reports last Springfest did not reflect the reality of the situation, according to reports from the Rape Action Committee.

She said that although not having any rapes reports was encouraging, many rapes go unreported every year and that might have been the case last year.

The lack of reports last Springfest did not reflect the reality of the situation, last year reports from the Rape Action Committee show.

In March of 1988, 10 rapes were reported to the committee.

Statistics presented by the R.a.p.e.

Awareness groups inform men and women about the facts of rape and ways to reduce risks of becoming a rape victim.

Treatment Center of the Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center, show that as many as 90 percent of the rapes committed in U.S. college communities go unreported.

Although the same report showed that most campus rapes are acquaintance rapes, that is, rapes committed by people known to the victim, at events that involve big crowds, stranger rape is more common.

Awareness groups inform men and women about the facts of rape and ways to reduce risks of becoming a rape victim.

Albrecht said the Rape Action Committee is in contact with other groups throughout the year to inform and lecture on the issue.

A few days before Springfest weekend last year, anti-rape groups demonstrated for 48 hours in the Free Forum Area to inform people about the issues of rape.

"There was a lot of education prior to last year's Springfest," Albrecht said. "We (the Rape Action Committee) held dorm meetings and other awareness programs."

Fest changes neglect students' views, input

University organizations considered for positions

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

Viewpoint

Mention the word "Springfest" to any SIU student and you'll probably hear something along these lines — beer, bands and the Cardboard Boat Regatta.

Springfest and the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta are a combination that go together like salt and pepper, Bert and Ernie and peanut butter and jelly.

Although not formally connected, the two events have occurred on the same weekend for the past five years, combining to create a fun-filled, frivolous atmosphere in which students can blow off some steam before the crunch of finals week.

This year, however, look for drastic changes.

The two on-campus events are occurring on consecutive weekends this year. Springfest will be held Saturday, while the regatta will occur April 29. The University claims it does not have the facilities to deal with the crowds that gather at the combined events.

But that's not all that's been changed. The police force has been beefed up, the perimeters of the fest have been shortened and, because of a new on-campus alcohol policy, consumption of alcoholic beverages has been severely limited.

Consumption of alcoholic beverages at the new Springfest will be limited to Old Main Mall, the Free Forum grass area and in front of Browne Auditorium. Alcohol will not be allowed at the regatta.

All this results from a joint decision of the Student Programming Council and the University Programming Office. This is where the crux of the matter lies.

Although SPC claims this action was done in the best interest of the students, did the RSO accurately represent the needs of the student body? Were students consulted before the decision was made to separate the two events?

What it boils down to is what does this mean to the average undergraduate?

Were they quivering in their boots at the thought of old campus being flooded by rabid hoards of people? Were they shocked at the notion of (gasp!) alcohol consumption? Did they really need the University to play the role of the protector?

I really don't think so. Most of us are big boys and girls who have been away from Mommy and Daddy long enough to take care of ourselves. By the time we reach the University system, most of us know how to conduct ourselves in a civilized manner in public.

Most of us have been to the Strip and have seen alcohol consumption firsthand. Most of us have the right to vote, get married or be drafted, which is society's way of indicating we are, in fact, adult. Therefore, we are able to make our own decisions.

So then, why punish us for the actions of a reckless minority? Arrest them and let us get on with the fun.

The University is concerned with matters of safety and rightly so. More power to them in changing the world. But there are better places to start than Springfest and the student body.

Which brings us to the point of drinking and driving. The fact that college students drink alcoholic beverages is neither new nor surprising. Banning alcohol at the regatta will simply aggravate the problem.

Now, instead of naving a beer while sitting on a nice, relatively safe patch of grass where they can only hurt themselves, people will be drinking before the event. Full of Waluki spirit, they will get behind the wheel, where they can hurt other people, to drive to Campus Lake for the regatta.

Consumption of alcohol at the new Springfest will be limited to Old Main Mall, the Free Forum grass area and in front of Browne Auditorium. Alcohol won't be allowed at the regatta.

Not everyone causes trouble. Twenty-five arrests for underage drinking occurred and several students were arrested for fighting at last year's Springfest. Not quite the numbers that the University seems to have in mind and not a very high number, if you take into account SPC estimated the crowd at 24,000.

Not only that, but SIU-Security Police, Student Life Advisors and members of the Rape Action Committee all commented on the well-behaved crowd.

"It was a very good crowd," SIU-C Security Police officer Jerry Brown said.

"It was a lot better than in the past. If there was rowdiness, we would talk to the people, and most would back off and cooperate with us," he said.

Does this kind of crowd need added security measures?

It is certainly admirable that the University is trying to do away with the party school image the University has had since it's hippy heyday in the '60s and make the campus a safer place.

However, the students who live and learn in Carbondale should have a greater say-so in the events of their campus community, especially major events such as Springfest.

Booths planned for Springfest

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

A jungle of carnival games are being designed by University organizations for "Safari Safari" Springfest 1989.

The Student Programming Council's Springfest committee planned to review the last seven applications for approval April 13, Jenna Herhold, SPC special events chairwoman, said.

"Most of the applications will be approved with a few minor changes," she added.

Applications by the Spanish Club, General Union of Palestinian Students, Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, Student Environmental Center, African Student Organization, Black Graduate Student Association and Phi Beta Sigma had not been approved as of April 11, pending minor changes.

The deadline for submitting applications also was extended from April 7 until April 10.

Herhold said most of the booths are sponsoring carnival-type games such as beanbag tosses, balloon darts and water balloon throws.

Some booths are sponsoring awareness activities about their organization, but according to SPC guidelines, no "information only" booths are allowed.

The African Student Organization indicated to SPC that it will conduct a history and culture trivia game, model African dress and sing gospel music.

CLIP AND SAVE

1947 carnival nucleus of present Springfest

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Many changes have occurred with SIU-C's Springfest celebration throughout the years.

It began in 1947 as a spring carnival that included parades, a formal tea, a Vaudeville show and a masquerade ball.

The highlight of the the carnival was the crowning of Miss Southern during a beauty contest featuring 23 of the University's co-eds.

In 1950, an Inaugural Ball was included in the ceremonies and Delyte W. Morris was inducted as president of SIU-C.

In 1960, the carnival theme was a "Southern County Fair." This year fraternities and sororities played a big part in the carnival as they competed against each other in the annual Vaudeville show. The Theta Xi fraternity won the first place trophy with their humorous version of "Cinderella."

Other events complementing the 1960 Spring Carnival were the Miss Southern contest, which for the first time introduced talent as well as beauty as a requirement for the title.

In 1962, the Most Popular Faculty Member award was presented at the Spring Festival. Thomas E. Cassidy, English lecturer since 1958, received the award. It was also this year that the name was changed to the Spring Festival instead of the Spring Carnival.

In 1970, the Spring Festival changed its name again to the Bacchanalia, in honor of Bacchus, the Greek god of wine. The Bacchanalia added a writers platform to the program. Distinguished authors such as Donald Finkel, author of "A Joyful Noise"; and John Gardner, author of "The Resurrection"; were some to participate.

The 1970 Bacchanalia ended with the University closing down on May 12 due to student riots.

The 1971 celebration, called Alternative 71, included SIU Parachute Club demonstrations, bands and an Arena concert featuring the rock group Chicago.

1973 to 1979 were the "lost years" in Springfest history. The Obelisk yearbook ceased publication from 1973 to 1982. When the yearbook resumed publication, it made no mention of the event.

Various spring activities were held during this time, but they did not include Greek or student organizational participation. During these years, musical productions by the students and the Miss Southern contest disappeared.

The 1980s brought Springfest back with a vengeance. Activities included plays, concerts, arts and craft sales, student organization demonstrations and competitions, carnival rides and firework displays.

In 1984, Springfest was combined with the Cardboard Boat Regatta, spring football scrimmage and the Lion's Club Pancake Day.

Springfest remained the same throughout the 1980s. In 1987, a petting zoo was added to the activities.

The 1987 Springfest brought numerous arrests for underage drinking, fighting and indecent exposure. The Rape Action Committee reported four rapes during the weekend.

In 1988, the Student Programming Council reported that more than 24,000 attended the festival.

After the 1988 Springfest, the Cardboard Boat Regatta was changed to a weekend different from Springfest.

Halloween first for fame, but Springfest still No. 1

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

When people who do not attend SIU-C think of one of Carbondale's outstanding events, many think of the Halloween celebration. But there is another celebration every year that draws much higher praise from faculty and students.

Springfest trounced Halloween as the favorite event at SIU, according to administrators, faculty and students interviewed.

"Of course I like Springfest better because it is a University sponsored event (unlike Halloween)," SIU-C president John C. Guyon said, "There are a lot more smiles at Springfest."

Bill Hall, Undergraduate Student Government president, said, "I like Springfest a lot better. For the past few years I haven't even gone to Halloween. It's too dangerous to have more than one or two beers. I never can relax enough."

Hall said witnessing frequent fights and drunkenness made him realize just how important it was to have sober people at Halloween.

"The atmosphere is totally different at Springfest," Hall said, "There are a lot more smiles at Springfest."

"The atmosphere is totally different at Springfest. There are a lot more smiles."

—Bill Hall

Hall also said he was pleased to see that the University administration realizes the distinction between Halloween and Springfest and does not find it necessary to ban alcohol at Springfest.

"We can have a few beers and still have a good time," Hall said.

Jnan Bhattacharyya, associate professor of community development, said, "Springfest is less mad than Halloween. I like them both, but they are two very different things. Springfest is more of a time to be mellow and eat hot dogs."

"The weather is nicer and it's nice to go to the lake and watch the regatta. There's more activities going on to watch."

Some students agreed that Springfest was more fun than Halloween.

"I like the weather. I always have a better time there," Tim Goff, junior in architecture, said.

"The weather is nicer and it's nice to go to the lake and watch the regatta. There's more activities going on to watch. Plus the atmosphere is more casual and relaxed," Jeff Williams, junior in biological sciences, said.

"It's fun to go and hang out by the ponds," Stephanie Alley, junior in interior design, said. "It's a great place to go and be with friends and enjoy the weather."

"I like it because it's more laid back - more things to do," Brian Casey, sophomore in business administration, said.

Lori Torbeck, undecided sophomore, was also undecided on this question. "I like Halloween and Springfest both the same. I wouldn't care if we didn't have either of them," she said.

Hunting Sleeve to return to Carbondale

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

Springfest fever will spread to Rompers Saturday night when the Slamming Watusis and Hunting Sleeve take the stage for an evening of raw energy, wacky humor and first-rate musicianship at 10 p.m.

Sponsored by Concept Concerts of Carbondale, the show will be opened by IRS recording artists Hunting Sleeve, a Boston-based band composed entirely of former SIU-C students.

Saxophonist Brian Overall, drummer Jeff Townsend, bassist Terry Flechs and lead guitarist Martin Vaughan left Carbondale two years ago to pursue a career in the Boston music scene.

During its years as a bar band on the strip, Hunting Sleeve became notorious for performing its own material, a mix of blues, punk, country and western, new wave and soul.

The group is currently finishing up an album produced by Lou Giordano, who also produced the "Christmas" LP for IRS and Bob "Husker Du" Mould's solo album.

"Horsewoman," Hunting Sleeve's first single, received considerable airplay on radio stations throughout the Boston area.

The Slamming Watusis, Epic recording artists, are currently supporting "Kings of Noise," a just-released album that closely follows the band's self-titled 1988 debut.

The Watusis have shared the stage with such greats as Iggy Pop, the Godfathers, the Red Hot Chili Peppers and Jane's Addiction.

Cover for the two bands is $2.

Ipsos Facto to hit Fest on Saturday

By Wayne Wallace
Entertainment Editor

An eight-piece reggae band that sold out a concert here in December 1987 will rock Saluki partygoers at 1 p.m. Saturday on the Springfest Mainstage.

Ipsos Facto, which has opened shows for Ziggy Marley and UB40, will perform a two-hour set as the opening act for Fishbone.

Ipsos Facto is currently working on a new album due out in July, with four tracks to be produced by ex-Police member Stewart Copeland.

Glen Phillips, SPC Consorts director, said the Minneapolis band is replacing Dion Payton and the 43rd Street Blues Band, who were originally booked to open for Fishbone but canceled.

Spring fever sweeps through nation; scientists describe the phenomenon

Scrrips Howard News Service

I can't even have a good case of spring fever in peace.

I'll have to admit to, instead of spring fever, "a physiological response to the increased intensity and duration of vernal sunlight as measured by the brain."

That's how Dr. Norman Rosenthal, director of seasonal studies at the National Institute of Mental Health, describes the phenomenon commonly known as "spring fever." This is after years of study and research.

"Poets have written for centuries about the effects of spring," said Rosenthal in a New York Times story. "They have known, for example, that sex drives... and energy levels surge for many people in the spring. But we are only now beginning to understand why that is."

I suppose it's useful to understand these things, and as a scholarly pursuit I suppose the study of spring fever is as legitimate as a lot of things we could think of.

In layman's terms, what Rosenthal is telling us is what we already knew from common sense: We're real happy to see the sunshine, the days lengthen and the world seem brighter generally, particularly with budding trees and flowers.

We're so happy to be shedding our winter doldrums, the cobwebs of grayness, the dust of winter hibernation, that we are fairly exuberant. Like butterflies from the cocoon, we spread our wings in anticipation of the new season.

In short, we're ready for a change of pace — and for each of us spring fever will manifest itself in different ways.

We may be energetic or lackadaisical, active or pensive, ambitious or reflective — or all those things at once.

We may be inclined to long walks in the greening woods or long, quiet periods in the porch swing.

We may attack spring cleaning — or put it off 'til fall.

We may work furiously in the yard planting new flowers or just sit back and watch the old ones come to bloom.

In spring, our fancies turn... well, to whatever strikes our fancy.

When we say to our co-workers, as we are wont, "I have a good case of spring fever today," they always know what we mean because chances are they have one, too. We don't have to explain in physiological terms. We just accept it as a common affliction.

Fishbone uses 'controlled anarchy' in music

From press releases

Keeping things a little dangerous. That's just the Fishbone way.

While other artists resurrect bubble gum tunes like "Venus" or "I Think We're Alone Now," Fishbone fashions a version of Curtis Mayfield's "Freddie's Dead."

The outspoken sextet, known for their onstage chaos and effusive blend of rhythm and blues, hot horns and speed metal, will appear at the Springfest Mainstage at 5 p.m. Saturday in front of Shryock Auditorium.

The band, which will appear courtesy of the Student Programming Council, is currently on a college tour supporting "Truth and Soul," their latest album, according to Glen Phillips, SPC Concerts Director.

Fishbone has grown up a lot since its explosive 1985 EP debut "Party at Ground Zero" and premiere 1986 album "In Your Face."

The band's members may have been labeled child prodigies not too long ago, but the band has been together for nearly a decade.

FIRST FORMED as a junior high school garage band, the members of Fishbone met on the bus that took them from their neighborhood into the suburbs as part of Los Angeles' school integration program.

At home, they were raised on jazz, rhythm and blues and funk. In the valley they were exposed to surf music, punk and reggae, helping to fuse the band's current musical style.

By 1982, Fishbone was performing professionally, perfecting its onstage frenzy and gaining hordes of fans, both black and white.

The band's debut vinyl release "Party at Ground Zero" brought instant acclaim.

Fishbone's premiere video, "Modern Industry," was part of a video exhibit at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, while the video of the 10½ track won first prize in a nationwide video contest sponsored by the American Film Institute.

THE BAND'S first "Bone in the U.S.A." tour also drew accolades from fans and critics alike, all greatly anticipating Fishbone's LP debut.

"In Your Face" came in 1986 and sparked another successful U.S. tour with the Beastie Boys.

The band's abilities crossed into film when it performed "Jamaica Sky" with Anne'te Funicello in the 1987 summer movie "Back to the Beach."

Fishbone also showed up in a few other films, including the upcoming "Tape Heads," Tommy Chong's "Far Out Man," and United Artists' "I'mo Git U Sucka."

The band also appears in music videos of such diverse artists as Boz Skaggs, the Ramones and Hank Williams, Jr.

A 1987 Christmas EP titled "It's a Wonderful Life" was a foreshadowing of the intense music Fishbone recorded for the new album and was accompanied by a video commissioned by M-TV.

FISHBONE'S MANY U.S. TV appearances brought the group even wider exposure, and tours to Europe and Japan expanded its international appeal.

As for the group's longevity, drummer Norwood Fisher attributes it to "separate dressing rooms."

Says Fisher, "We know we can fight with each other, but we're at the point where we're over each other's humps."

"We really and truly are a family," Angelo Moore, lead singer, said.

They call themselves the coalition against tradition. "We try to break barriers in music," guitarist Kendall Jones said, "and try to get people to accept more than being spooned Whitney Houston."

All members have reached the age 21 and can be tried as adults should they ever be charged with inciting people to think.

Fishbone will perform at 5 p.m. Saturday on the Springfest Mainstage in front of Shryock Auditorium.

Just below the good times anarchy is a group of intelligent young men who have something important to say.

FISHBONE'S ANGER, sharp as a surgical knife, is wielded with a surgeon's skill, according to record reviews.

"Truth and Soul" is its latest operating theater, and society is the patient.

Fishbone isn't promising the patient will survive, but one thing's for certain, the band will throw a heck of a party at the funeral.

"Truth and Soul" makes a series of pointed musical and social statements.

"We wanted to capture the feeling of Fishbone live," guitarist Kendall Jones said. "Our energy is so intense now, and this LP brought everything together."

"This is the most focused record we've made," Fisher added. "The humor is more focused and so are the serious points."

Springfest, Regatta split causes optimism

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

Although the Great Cardboard Boat Regatta no longer will be part of Springfest activities, most area merchants are optimistic that the change won't hurt business.

In past years, the Regatta and Springfest were scheduled on the same day. This year, Springfest activities are scheduled for April 22. The Boat Regatta will be conducted the following weekend.

Jim Prowell, executive director of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, said the change could make for two days of exceptional business rather than one.

"The number of those attending the events throughout the day will probably change, although we're not sure how," he said.

Last year, the SIU Police Department estimated attendance at about 5,000, Prowell said. However, the chairperson of the Student Programming Council estimated attendance closer to 25,000, he said.

Prowell estimated last year's crowd at 15,000 to 20,000.

Prowell said the average daytime visitor typically spends about $25 during Springfest. Overnight visitors average $111, he said.

Springfest nets in profit

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

Revenue generated by on-campus Springfest activities indicate the yearly celebration to be a profitable one.

Don Castle, assistant coordinator of the University Programming Office, said money collected from carnival rides and concession sales help pay for the cost of Springfest.

Fees granted to the Springfest Committee by the Undergraduate Student Government, the Graduate Professional Student Council and various campus departments totaled $9,727 for Springfest '89, he said.

A nominal fee of 25 cents per carnival ride pays only one-third of the cost of the rides, or $1,000,

Prowell said the idea behind the split is to make crowd control more feasible. "I'm all for it," he said. "I think it'll make for a safer Springfest if nothing else."

Castle said.

Juice bar sales at 25 cents per drink also contribute to income generated by the festivities, Castle said.

Money collected from T-shirt sales pays for the cost of producing the shirts, he said.

Free entertainment provided by professional artists on the main and side stages is paid for Springfest funds. Entertainment on the student stage in the free-forum area across from Old Main Mall is provided by student groups free-of-charge.

Income also is generated by the annual Doc Spackman Memorial Triathlon. Scheduled for 8 a.m. on Saturday, the event is in its fifth year.

Entry fees totaled about $2,500 last year.

Ken Holding, manager of Times Square Liquors in Carbondale, said he anticipates an increase in business for both weekends, but said that the weekend of the Regatta will be less promising than Springfest weekend.

"Business increases by about 10 percent on the Saturday of Springfest," Holding said. "I'd say business for both weekends (combined) will be better than what one weekend used to be."

The manager of La Roma's Pizza in Carbondale, Jim Tomlianovich, said although the change probably will draw more people than in past years, the weekend of Springfest won't be as busy.

"It could make for two fairly decent weekends," Tomlianovich said. "It might backfire, too, because the people who come just to see the Boat Regatta are only going to come for one weekend."

Tomlianovich said business increases at La Roma's Pizza by about 25 percent during a typical Springfest weekend.

Not all of the merchants are optimistic about the change.

"They've taken Halloween and now this one," Jeff Odaniell, manager of Westroad Liquors in Carbondale, said. "It's making a negative impact on us—that's for sure."

Area merchants are looking at the change as a possible blessing in disguise. Most agree that business could increase for two weekends instead of the usual one.

Regatta still alive after policy changes

By Marc Blumer
Staff Writer

The Great Cardboard Boat Regatta has emerged healthy, but very different after a seven month roller coaster ride of changes that threatened the race's future.

The changes started last summer, when the University Programming Office decided to split up Springfest and the regatta into two separate weekends. This decision was made because the office felt the large number of people attending the two events were creating a safety hazard.

In early February, the SIU Alumni Association, which had sponsored the event, pulled out due to a lack of available funds.

Richard Archer, founder of the event, spent two weeks furiously searching for a sponsor, until University President John C. Guyon agreed to fund the race through his office and the Office of Academic Affairs on Feb. 22.

However, Guyon agreed to fund the race as an "extension of an academic department and not as a promotion." Archer uses the designing of the boats as a project for his classes in the School of Art and Design.

Therefore, many changes were instituted in the race.

Robert Harris, security director for SIU-C, said: "We are going to have people around the area checking for alcohol. At each entrance, we are going to check coolers and those people with alcohol will not be permitted to come in."

Also, changes were made in the interest of safety regarding race regulations and boat design.

Among the new rules was a limit on the number of participants per boat, which can now only hold 10 people.

All participants must now be visible to the judges, and there will be no more than 24 participants in the water at any given time.

Salukis to feature new attack

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Football coach Bob Smith took one look at the Salukis' wishbone offense of 1988, and decided this turkey just wouldn't fly.

This in mind, SIU-C football fans can expect a dose of Air Salukis next fall, as the new pro-set offense will definitely tune up the arms of quarterbacks Fred Gibson and Scott Gabbert.

"The major change will be in the number of passes per game," Smith said. "But it will be a control-type passing game. We look forward to a lot of offensive improvement through the personnel being older."

Smith said he scrapped the wishbone not because he didn't like the setup, but because he felt the pro-set better fit the Salukis' personnel.

"When you design a program, you have got to design the offense to fit the skills of the players you have available," Smith said. "We have found we are able to throw the ball well. I am pleased with the top two or three quarterbacks, and they have picked up the system well."

The second major reason Smith said he decided against the wishbone is he was not very familiar with it himself.

"You have got to develop and coach what you are familiar with," Smith said. "I am more used to formation wide receivers and the I-back formation."

"I don't think the wishbone is bad. I have a personal opinion that to make great plays, you have to get down the field quicker. If you ever get behind and need to catch up, a multiple offense is more conducive to that."

Smith said the team has picked up the new offense quickly, which is a major goal of the spring drills.

"That is the most positive thing that came out of the first scrimmage," Smith said. "We have digested the system very well. That is not to say we

Coming into practice for the fall season, Smith said it will be important that everyone on the team has had a good dose of the pro-set.

"We want to have the entire system taught or at least introduced by then," Smith said. "That is so we have an encyclopedia of football to work with. If we can accomplish the introduction part, we have accomplished a lot in the spring."

Smith said a second goal is building strong relationships between the coaches and players, something that is well on the way to becoming a reality.

"The last two weeks, I plan to meet individually with the players," Smith said. "I have put it off on purpose so we have been out on the field together and will have more things to talk about."

Harmke, will return next season to play for SIU-C.

The third goal Smith has set for the spring is having fun on the field during practice.

"I think we are right now," Smith said. "There have been positive comments from the players about what we are doing right now."

The Salukis will have the bulk of its offensive attack returning from the 1988 season. Fullbacks Chuck Harmke, Marvin Billups and Ken Parks will all return, along with quarterbacks Fred Gibson and Scott Gabbert, who shared playing time throughout the year.

Returning at the receiving spots will be Wesley Yates, Rob Derricotte, Ransom Funchess and Chontal Brown.

Humorists lacking on pro teams

Forget the big salaries, the sex scandals, the drug problems and the changing interpretations of the balk rule.

The sport of baseball has a bigger problem, one that could change the sport as we know it — the demise of the flake.

The prevailing feeling among players past and present is that the flake — the off-the-wall personality with a refreshing knack for going against the grain and a blatant disregard for public opinion — is going the way of the three-fingered glove and the 25-man roster.

It has not necessarily become unfashionable to be flaky. Instead, players have chosen to be more serious and more business-like.

Today's player is much like a one-man corporation with his image, reputation and endorsement future weighing most heavily on his mind.

Players no longer feel safe allowing their personalities to show through. Instead, they seem most concerned with conforming — and making sure they don't muddy the waters.

This trend disturbs some of the game's more notable characters, including Jay Johnstone.

"The number of free spirits is declining," Johnstone says. "There's fewer and fewer of them out there."

Doc Spackman Triathlon start date nearing

Contest for anyone; not just the serious athletes

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

If you're looking for an alternative to watching cartoons on Saturday morning, the 6th annual Doc Spackman Memorial Triathlon is for you.

This year's triathlon will take place at 8 a.m. Saturday from Campus Beach. Events will include a quarter-mile swim, a 6.2 mile bike race and a two mile run.

The event, which is sponsored by the Office of Intramural Sports and Touch of Nature, is held in honor of Robert "Doc" Spackman, who worked as an athletic trainer at SIU-C for 27 years.

"The race is good for people who want to make a competition out of it, but it's also good for people just trying to find their personal best."

director of the triathlon, said the event commemorates Spackman's spirit of doing your best while having a good time.

Hollister said the event isn't as strenuous as most triathlons, and many view it as a "triathlon sprint." She said the event is open to anyone, not just serious athletes.

"The race is good for people who want to make a competition out of it, but it's also good for people just trying to find their personal best," she said.

Awards will be given to the top two male and female athletes overall, and to the top three athletes in each of the five age divisions for men and five age divisions for women.

Hollister said the current records for best times have been set by Pam Quarengi for women, who ran it in 42 minutes and 23 seconds, and by David Peterson for men, in 32 minutes and 40 seconds. Peterson has already signed

Baseball: Discovering new, remembering old

By Mark Patinkin
Providence Journal

The young man briefly considered going to opening day, but decided he wasn't interested. It would be a hassle to get tickets, drive into Boston, fight the crowds. He hadn't been to a major league game in years. There are things in life you have to move on from, he'd decided, and baseball was one.

The day after the game, he did not think he'd even bother reading about it.

But he did end up glancing at the sports page. He did begin to read — about the crowds, the ritual, the beginning of spring; about the greenness of the diamond, the vendors of peanuts, the smell of cigars. He read about fathers, and about sons, and that is what began to bring it back.

His own father had introduced the young man to this world. They would take the Outer Drive from their house in Chicago, along the lake, turning west toward the great cathedral, Comiskey

Park, home of the White Sox; home of Nellie Fox of second base fame, whose cheek always bulged with an enormous wad of tobacco, so the young man, too, would fill his own jaw with six pieces of Bazooka bubblegum so his cheek would bulge, as well.

That, he was convinced, would make him a better snagger of ground balls, a key skill for his own future; he had every intention of growing up to be Nellie Fox.

The parking lots were littered with junk and glass, and the neighborhoods around the great cathedral were not good neighborhoods, but the young man was never afraid there; this was baseball, a unifier of all races and classes.

Then they were inside, swept by crowds along the concrete ramps, stopping to buy cone-like cartons of popcorn which, when finished, could be turned around and used as bullhorns.

Safaris not typical of what's seen on TV

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

Imagine a steamy densely foliated jungle. The humidity is so high that the perspiration hangs on your skin like jello on a spoon.

The sun's rays filter through the tree-top canopy, casting a sickly greenish-yellow light on everything and causing dark shadows to dance on the leaf covered floor. The shadows make the ground appear teeming with squirming life. Overhead, exotic birds scream out and wild animals thrash through the thick underbrush.

Several men dressed in khaki, carrying canteens and other assorted survival gear, fight their way through the nearly twisted vines and ground cover. Machetes are used to clear the way inch by greuling inch. The men pause only to check their backsides for head-hunting cannibals. Tensions run high as unidentifiable animals scamper into deeper cover.

THEN ALL of a sudden...
Is this a typical safari? Well not really.

Although safaris are somewhat stereotypical in theory of what you see on TV, they can vary in many ways.

"You can be part of a group, or they can be individualized. You can also change the nature of the accommodations," Lee Drickamer, chairperson of the Zoology department, said.

Lee has been on several safaris, including ones to Kenya and Tanzania on the eastern coast of Africa, and the Outback of Australia.

"You can stay in lodges or tented camps. Tented camps are in between a real lodge and a kind of backwoods camping (an individual) might do," he said.

THESE ARE several dozen lodges located in Kenya and Tanzania.

"That's where most of the people stay," he said.

When asked if there are any real dangers when camping, Lee said that in certain parts of Africa, there are many large predatory animals that can be a problem and elephants may be likely to trample over your campsite.

"In that case you use a pop-top or tent-top camper," he said.

"There are, however, a number of big cats for which a young child can be fair game, and if threatened, (the cat) will attack an adult. But most of the cats, unless they are very hungry, will avoid a large human," he said.

"But that's so rare in relative terms, often it is blown way out of proportion," he said.

UNLESS THE animal is provoked or intimidated there should be no danger, he said.

Although problems with African animals are rare, it is much easier to camp in Australia, he said.

"Probably the only real threatening thing would be snakes," he said.

Sometimes on safaris, unexpected

In certain parts of Africa there are many large predatory animals that can be a problem and elephants could trample your campsite.

problems arise.

"Unpaved roads can be a problem, primarily in Africa. When I was over there in the early 1980s there wasn't much pavement other than along the coast," he said.

"And things are always going wrong," Lee said.

"For instance, in Africa, the most common occurrences are flat tires on vehicles," Lee said.

He recalled one situation when he was helping lead a lecture group in Africa.

"Once or twice a day one of the five tour vehicles would get a flat. Even if we weren't going that far. Out of 38 of us in a 20-day span, I was the only individual who was never in a vehicle with a flat tire, and we changed cars every day," he said.

He said CBAs were vitally important in situations like the flat tires and to keep in touch with the other people if they fell behind the group.

"Also, you could describe where certain game were located in the bush," Lee said.

BETWEEN UNPAVED roads and flat tires, dust is also a big annoyance, he said.

Because of the dirt roads, the dust is extraordinary, he said.

"I probably have some dust on the suitcases and things, even though that trip was three to four years ago," he said.

"It's also a big drawback with cameras. Several students bought new cameras and didn't really pay attention to some of the rules. Four different students' cameras went on them," he said.

To prevent problems like that every thing is stored in ziplock and garbage bags, Lee said.

WHEN ASKED about the kinds of food one was likely to get while out on the trails, Lee said, "When you are on safari the food isn't designed to be gourmet food. Most of what you eat on the road are box lunches made up at the lodges with things like bannanas, oranges, and hard sandwiches," he said.

In some African restaurants, since Africa was a British colony, the food has a British flavor to it, he said. "You get things like stewed tomatoes," Lee said.

Many places have limited problems with poaching, he said. "I didn't see any of that, you know that it's (poaching) go on," he said.

In Australia, birds bring high prices on the market.

Baseball slang lives

New dictionary defines 5,000 words, terms

Scripts Howard News Service

No other sport and few other occupations have introduced so many phrases, so many words, so many twists into our language as baseball.

— Tristram Potter Coffin, author of The Old Ball Game.

To anyone who has played baseball, the slang and phraseology is as much a part of the game as the bats, balls and bases.

HUMM BABY. Fire that rock. Batter's looking. Break his biffstick. Blow a zeroogie. Can of corn!

A new book by Paul Dickson, "The Dickson Baseball Dictionary," brings these and 5,000 other words and phrases to life, giving definition, origin and etymology. Everything from A — scorecard abbreviation for assist — to Zurdo — Spanish nickname for lefty — is defined, some with the help of vintage photos.

A seven-and-a-half-year labor of love, Dickson's book was prompted by his inquisitive sons' queries.

"DAD, WHY do they call it bleachers?"

"Because fans used to get bleached in the midday sun."

"Dad, why do they call it out in left field?"

"Because there once was a ballpark in Chicago which had a mental institution outside the left field wall."

"This got me thinking about the game in a new way," said Dickson, 49, author of 18 other books, many on words and word origins. "I got hooked on the stories behind the words," or as one critic said, "the incorrect use of correct words."

WITH THE help of the Baseball Hall of Fame, Merriam-Webster, private collections and many other resources, Dickson assembled the dictionary on his computer by setting up discs, one for each letter of the alphabet, and plugging in words as he came by them.

Although baseball was said to be invented in 1839, it wasn't until the advent of the modern sports page, around 1900, that slang started coming into everyday use. Thanks to writers such as Ring Lardner, Damon Runyon and Finley Peter Dunne, who then covered sports, baseball started getting its own terminology. Writers were more inventive then and had much more artistic license with their copy than today's sportswriters.

OTHER SPORTS have their terms but none as rich and varied as baseball.

"Golf has a nice vocabulary," said Dickson, "but it's an old vocabulary. A lot of it came out of Scotland. Basketball has a very lively one but it doesn't have the history of baseball. Tennis was played mostly by the well-to-do, so it didn't have the mass appeal."

Baseball is played by all classes, ethnic groups, and people from all walks of life, all contributing to its jargon.

"The metaphors are so strong in baseball," said Dickson. "Everybody knows the concept of striking out, hitting a homer, stealing a base.

"THERE'S AN old joke, 'What's a metaphor?' It's to play baseball."

Many of the early games were played in meadows and pastures and from that setting came much of the early terminology. Baseball was a game with fields and fences, where ducks sit on the pond and pitchers sit in the catbird seat. New players come out of a farm system and a termhaad who pitches may get to work in the bullpen.

Comedian George Carlin has a routine in which he compares the pastoral game of baseball to war-like football, which is played on a gridiron where there is blitzing, red-dogging, drives into enemy territory and where bombs are thrown. Meanwhile, baseball, with its kinder, gentler slang, is played in a park, and the offensive plays include the free pass, homer and sacrifice fly. In football you spear, march and score; in baseball you walk, stretch and run home.

DICKSON SAYS another reason baseball has so much slang is because the players spend so much time gabbing while waiting — for trains, planes and buses, and even for the next pitch. Their only means of breaking the monotony is to chatter, or shoot the bull.

A lot of that time is spent waiting for the next meal. Food is a big inspiration for slang: can of corn (easy play), cup of coffee (brief trial with major league club), fish cakes (low pay), banana stalk (a bat of inferior wood), mustard (velocity), pretzel (curveball), rhubarb (a fight), green pea (rookie), juice (to hit ball with great power), meat hand (a fielder's throwing hand), grapefruit league (name for spring training in Florida) and tater (home run) are some of the food-inspired terms. Among the many words for the ball itself: apple, cantaloupe, egg, pea, potato and tomato. Implements? There is the plate (also known as the platter, pan and dish) and the fork ball. Desserts? Strawberries (skin abrasion) and raspberries (flatulent sound expressing contempt).

MODERN-DAY terms are already coming into use.

"I once heard a pitcher sav a guy threw a Linda Ronstadt fastball," recalled Dickson. "That's one that blew by you."

Blue Bayou was a hit song recorded by Ronstadt.

"What would our vocabulary be without baseball?" said Dickson. Hit and run (first used in 1902) described a baseball play before it meant a traffic felony. Most people assume the nickname Ace evolved from the first in a deck of cards. But it began to mean "the best" when the Cincinnati Red Stockings' pitcher named Asa Brainerd won 56 of 57 games. People then began saying their pitcher was a real "Asa." It gradually evolved into Ace.

Dickson hopes to revise his book in five years.

'Get naked' among terms spicing up baseball season

Scripts Howard News Service

A list of hip slang to help spice up the upcoming season. All terms defined by The Dickson Baseball Dictionary by Paul Dickson.

Api, I Cobb: A rookie who looks like the next Ty Cobb for a short period of time.

Baseball Annie: Generic name for unattached woman who favors the company of baseball players.

Chinese home run: A derogatory term for home run hit over the portion of the outfield fence closest to home plate.

dial 8: To hit the long ball, from the practice of dialing the number 8 on a hotel phone to get long distance.

egg feast: Low scoring game; one with a lot of goose eggs on the scoreboard.

frozen rope: A hard-hit line drive, so-called because of the rigid path it takes.

get naked: To bear down. A pun in the same class as bases drunk for bases loaded.

hoover: A highly adept infielder who sucks up batted balls in the manner of a vacuum cleaner.

ice wagon: A slow player, one with the labored movement of an ice wagon. Jesse James single: Hit that is allowed when a batted ball hits the umpire.

kittenball: One of the early names for softball.

letter mailer: Casey Stengel's own term for a player who stayed out late at night. It presumably stems from the time-honored excuse of curfew-breakers who have been caught returning at a later hour: "Gee, I only went out to mail a letter."

maggot: A club owner. Apparently a play on the word magnate.

"Open the window, Aunt Minnie, here she comes!": Pittsburgh radio sportscaster Rosey Roswell's trademark salutation for a home run.

Picasso: A control pitcher. One who paints the black.

quail shot: A pop fly that quickly drops in between fielders for a hit.

room service cheeseburger: A fastball right down the middle; a juicy offering.

stair-stuffing: Process in which a pitcher throws a series of higher and higher pitches. The idea is to keep throwing pitches higher in the strike zone until the umpire calls a ball.

Touch of Blue added to Springfest activities

Weekend provides music, recreation for Fest celebrators

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

The 19th annual Touch of Blue Weekend, hosted by the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity, will bring added entertainment to the Springfest weekend.

Touch of Blue starts April 20th with a all greek social and a party at Dumarocs at 10 p.m. featuring a biker pants contest, Tim Hughes, coordinator of Touch of Blue said. Everyone is welcome to the party at Dumarocs.

Rob Base and D. J. E-Z Rock will continue the festivities with a concert Friday at 10 p.m. at Two Hearts Inc.

The single crossed over to the pop and Rhythm & Blues crowds and resulted in a place on Billboard's Hot 100 and a number 17 spot on Billboard's black singles chart.

Base and D. J. E-Z Rock is a rap group that gained recognition with its song "It Takes Two."

The single crossed over to the pop and Rhythm & Blues crowds and resulted in a place on Billboard's Hot 100 and a number 17 spot on Billboard's black singles chart.

"I think it's a privilege that we can get someone of this caliber to come down here. This is professional entertainment, it gives Carbondale some recognition," Hughes said.

Tickets are $10 at the door and $8 in advance. Tickets can be purchased at Plaza Records, Record Bar and Disc Jokey.

Other open events include a skating party on Friday at the Great Skate Train from 1 to 4 a.m., a picnic from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday at Campus Lake featuring a step show by members of Phi Beta Sigma and a skating party from 11 p.m. to 4 a.m. The events conclude on Sunday, with the Touch of Blue Ball at Dumarocs.

Hughes said everyone is invited to these events.

"It's not necessarily an all-black event. It's just four days full of action."

This is the first year that the event has fallen on Springfest weekend and Hughes said that he would like to see it continue that way because it will help attract more people and increase the fraternity's profit.

The group makes money by selling ads for an ad book that they sell at the ball. The book contains personal and business ads. Girls that are in the ball's court sell the ads, Hughes said.

Whoever sells the most ads and does well in other events held during the week, such as playing softball at the picnic, will be crowned Miss Touch of Blue at the ball. The winner will also receive a $300 scholarship, he said.

Girls are chosen for the leadership qualities they show. Twelve will participate this year, Hughes said.

A percentage of the money from the week's events goes to the Red Cross, he said. Touch of Blue usually attracts around 1,000 to 2,000 people, many of these coming from other Phi Beta Sigma chapters in the state.

Long-range spring forecast part guesswork

Scraps Howard News Service

THE NATIONAL Weather Service has predicted temperatures in the Midwest to be on the normal to cool side between April 15 and May 15.

Of all the forecasts National Weather Service meteorologists make during the year, the toughest is the 30-day outlook for April 15 to May 15.

Spring is the most volatile season of the year as warm air from the tropics and cold air from the Arctic collide over the nation's heartland to produce wild temperature swings and frequent storms.

Spring's rapid weather changes usually begin about March 15 and continue until mid-June when the summer weather pattern takes hold and remains in place until early October. Because the mid-April to mid-May period is right in the middle of spring's changeability, its weather tends to be especially hyperactive.

THIS IS A gentle way of saying the just-issued mid-spring outlook of the NWS's long-range forecast group is a lot of guesswork.

With their fingers crossed, the NWS forecasters say a large chunk of the West will be warmer than normal between April 15 and May 15, and much of the Midwest and East will be on the cool side or have normal, seasonal temperatures.

The West's warmth should be centered on all or parts of 10 Western and Plains states: Arizona, New Mexico, Utah, Nevada, Colorado, Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas. The rest of the West probably will have seasonal thermometer readings

A LATE ARRIVING spring is forecast for all or parts of seven states in the Great Lakes basin and Northern Plains: the northwestern corner of Ohio, Michigan, and parts of Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North Dakota. Temperatures in this area have mostly been below normal since late January.

Temperatures also should be below normal in Tennessee, Kentucky and the mountains of North Carolina and Virginia. The rest of the East should have seasonal temperatures.

The forecast also has some good news for the West Coast and rain-plagued Mid-South. With a trough of low pressure moving in from the Pacific, the entire West Coast from Seattle to San Diego should get above normal precipitation that will partially refill California's shrunken reservoirs and lower the forest fire threat in Oregon, Washington and parts of Idaho, Montana, Utah and Nevada.

IN THE EAST, a dome of very dry air should dry out all or parts of Tennessee, Kentucky, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas and Missouri. Heavy rains caused serious flooding in some of these states in February and March.

The NWS meteorologists call for normal rainfalls for the rest of the country: New England, the Atlantic Coast states, Great Lakes basin, Plains states and in the Rockies.

"Mid-spring has a very tricky weather changeover that's very difficult to forecast," meteorologist James Wagner apologizes in advance. "We do the best we can."
