Polls open for city elections

Carbondale residents can vote from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. today for city and county elections. Campus polling places include Grinnell Hall, 23rd precinct; Evergreen Terrace, Activity Room, Building 150, 24th precinct; and Lertz Hall, 25th precinct.

City Council candidates profiles:

Margaret (Maggie) Rose Fianagan

Education: master's degree in community development from SIUC

Experience: served as precinct commissioner in Brooklyn, N.Y., organized the Carbondale Uptown committee, served on several local boards. Important issues: supports mass transit system, and wants to raise bar entry age to 19 on a conditional basis.

Quote: "It is general knowledge that underage drinking occurs all the time. They need to monitor themselves as well. 'Race relations, civil rights, these are important issues for Carbondale to consider.'"

John Adam Yow

Education: high school equivalency, learned the rest "from the school of hard knocks."

Experience: worked for 20 years as Carbondale code enforcement director, served on City Council since 1985. Important issues: supports mass transit and licensing of rental property, wants more discussion on bar entry age, would like improved accessibility for people with disabilities.

Quote: "I feel that in my 28 years with the city government, people have got to know me as experienced, with a honest desire to commit to a better Carbondale."

John 'Mike' Henry

Education: bachelor's in engineering from SIUC.

Experience: opened a business, Henry's Printing, some 20 years ago, in the downtown area, served as president of the Chamber of Commerce, on the United Way Board, and the Citizens Advisory committee. Important issues: wants to improve the quality of rental housing and train bar employees.

Quote: "I would like to see more students becoming active with politics in Carbondale. I have been urging various groups to vote in this election and I hope to see a large student voter turnout."

Keith Tuxhorn

Education: bachelor's in media writing from SIUC, completing master's in community development.

Experience: served on the City Council for the last 10 years, owned small business. Important issues: supports rental property licensing program, supports raising bar entry age to 19, and wants downtown revitalization.

Quote: "I have a good theoretical background from my work in community development. I offer 'wholistic' thinking, meaning I can take a lot of ideas and put them together in one broad picture."

Try vote again, Guyon advises Phoenix group

By Tracy Moss
Administration Writer

A week after the Faculty Senate voted against the proposal for a college of communication, President John C. Guyon told members of the committee to seek another senate vote on the issue before he makes a decision regarding the proposal.

Guyon said he will make a decision on the proposal in four to six weeks.

"I will eventually write a response to PQP, and my decision will be included in that response," he said.

Guyon said during his meeting with members of the Phoenix Committee, he did not give them his approval or disapproval of the college but did advise them to seek a new senate hearing.

"They asked to talk to me, and I listened to their presentation," he said.

80 suspected dead in Waco

The Washington Post

WACO, Texas—The 51-day standoff with David Koresh and his cult followers culminated Monday in a fiery spectacle that began with another assault on their besieged compound and ended with the apparent deaths of more than 80 men, women and children in what authorities said may have been a mass suicide.

Authorities said Koresh, 33, a self-styled messiah, and his Branch Davidians set their compound afire Monday afternoon after FBI agents had knocked holes in their flimsy wooden buildings with combat engineer vehicles and pumped tear gas into their living quarters for six hours in an attempt to end the conflict peacefully.

Ranch Apocalypse, thought to have been filled with explosives and other ammunition, burned within minutes.

The scene was as nightmarish as any that Koresh had preached about in his doomsday vision of the world's end—cult members in gas masks burning to death and perhaps as many as 25 children dying, maybe after being injected with poison to ease their deaths, authorities said.

Reporters and law enforcement officers watched in horror as wind-aided flames raced through the compound, sending huge plumes of black smoke into the air and dissolving the buildings, in which 95 people reportedly were barricaded, into smoking rubble.

At least eight survived, authorities said.

Many details of the final minutes of the cult members, who had held the world at bay since a Feb. 28 assault and shootout left four federal agents dead, were sketchy because the ruins remained too hot and dangerous to search, authorities said.

Agents were unable to confirm that Koresh was dead, but talked about him as if he had died in the fire and had ordered, in fact desired, the mass suicide of his followers.

The survivors included two women and a man admitted for burn treatment and another woman who had a fractured ankle and minor burns.

'Ghostly' past of trustee has leaders upset

By Katie Morrison
Administration Writer

He is not an activist. He does not meddle in campus activities. He is not the most accessible person on campus. He is Tony Svach, and his term as SIUC student trustee, which has been described by student officials as passive at best, is coming to an end.

Voters will select a new trustee Wednesday. The student trustee acts as a representative on the SIU Board of Trustees but has only an advisory vote.

Although previous trustees have been more in the forefront, Svach's low-key role has been appreciated by Brad Cole, Undergraduate Student Government president.

"Past student trustees thought they were student body presidents," Cole said.

Candidates for USG face off at debate

By Jeremy Finley
Special Assignment Writer

The opinions of candidates for Undergraduate Student Government were greeted with a mixture of hisses, boos and applause from the audience at a pre-election debate Monday.

The second annual debates gave the Student Party's Brad Cole, incumbent USG president, and the Alliance Party's Mike Spiwak, the challenger, a chance to present their platforms and answer questions from more than 60 students. Three representatives from major student groups also asked questions. The election is Wednesday.

Cole also defended his transfer of $450 of students funds from the College Republicans without the club's authorization. The money was used by Cole to reimburse himself for a trip to the Republican National Convention in September.

Eric Scott, president of the College Republicans, said Cole unjustly accused the Republicans of attacking one of their own and continued to question Cole about the funds.

Cole said the funds were not misappropriated and that the letter Scott wrote in the Daily Egyptian, addressed to him by his first name, was a personal attack.

"That's called an open letter, Mr. Cole," Scott said in response.

"An open letter to all Brad's on campus?" Cole said.

Spiwak said truth should be a main concern in the election.

"This election is all about truth, and I don't think that Brad Cole should be the one for student government president," he said.

Cole also faced criticism for his unity coalition, a group set up to improve better communication between minority groups and USG.

Kyle Westbrook, a member of the Alliance Party, said the coalition has only met once and has done little to improve minority input on campus.

Student trustee candidates agree on issues facing SIUC

By Angela Hyland
Special Assignment Writer

It was hard to tell the difference between student trustee candidates in a debate where everyone agreed for the most part on the issues being discussed.

Three candidates are running for the position of student trustee: Student Party candidate Al Cano, Alliance Party candidate Mark Kochan and independent candidate Andrew Ensor.

The student trustee serves as representative between students and the SIU Board of Trustees.

To better represent student concerns, candidates stressed the need for increased accessibility and communication with representatives.

Ensor said, if elected, he would continue his policy of going out to find out how students feel about issues.

"If you don't like the food on campus, I don't like the food on campus," he said. "If you don't like having your car towed by a man in a uniform, neither do I."

Cano said once he found out where students stood on issues, he would take it to the board.

Candidates also agreed on the importance of keeping the local bar age at 18.

Kochan said students he has talked to agree the entry age should not be raised.

"I'm wondering how it even became an issue," Kochan said.

Salukis to take on Murray St., SEMO

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

The SIUC baseball team will be on the road this week for a pair of non-conference games.

The Salukis (19-16, 5-4) will play Murray State today at 3 p.m., and Southeast Missouri Thursday at 3 p.m.

The Salukis are coming off of a disappointing weekend when they lost two of three to conference rival Illinois State.

SIUC head coach Sam Riggelman said the quality of play on Saturday was a concern.

"Our players were embarrassed with the way they played Saturday," Riggelman said. "And the coaching staff was embarrassed as well."

Riggelman said this weekend was definitely a setback, but it is not the end of the season.

"You never know how much a weekend like this is going to hurt you until the end," Riggelman said. "But at the end of the year, if you could look back at one series in particular that was costly, this may be the one."

The Salukis are still in decent shape in the Missouri Valley Conference, as seven teams have records ranging from 5-3 to 4-5. Wichita State is running away from the pack with an 8-1 conference mark.

The Dawgs are still fighting injury problems. Mike Blang has at least another week of rest before he is listed day-to-day, and Nate Sheppard will not be available until conference tournament time.

One bright spot for the Salukis was the return of senior Mike Van Gilder. Van Gilder was out with a strained tendon in his hand, and was not expected to see action until this weekend's series with Bradley. Instead, Van Gilder came back with a strong outing on Sunday to beat Illinois State, helping the Dawgs avoid a three-game sweep. Riggelman said he was glad to have Van Gilder back in the rotation.

Marion pitcher signs with SIUC

The SIUC baseball team added a local pitcher to its fold with the signing of Marion hurler Brad Blumenstock to a letter-of-intent.

Blumenstock is a four-year letterman at Marion High School, where the 6-foot-6, 220-pound righthander also was a standout in basketball.

"He is a projectable athlete with good arm strength and great physical tools," SIUC head coach Sam Riggelman said. "He still needs to work on his mechanics, but we certainly feel he will be a quality collegiate hurler."

Blumenstock was 8-5 last season for the Wildcats, but has been hampered by the weather so far this season.

"Once he gets to a place where he can live and breath pitching all the time, he will make great strides," Marion coach Jack Fletcher said. "He has all the tools to be a fine college pitcher, and is working hard to continue his improvement on the mound."

Fletcher said that Blumenstock was clocked at 86 mph last summer at a tryout camp for the Cincinnati Reds.

"He only missed one start, and he was not 100 percent Sunday, but he was close," Riggelman said. "He really came through for us."

Riggelman said he is not too familiar with Murray State, but SEMO always plays tough.

Zac Adams will most likely get the call to handle the pitching duties today, with the rest of the rotation still undecided.

Men tracksters strong at Kansas Relays

Jeff McIntire
Sports Writer

The No. 22-ranked Saluki men's track and field team had to overcome adverse weather conditions to turn in strong performances at the Kansas Relays last weekend.

SIUC coach Bill Cornell said the Kansas Relays is one of the major national relay meets, featuring a field of over 50 of the Midwest region's best teams each year.

"It was a high caliber meet. We had some good performances, and we are progressing towards the conference championships,"

Cornell said. Brian Miller led the way with a third-place in the shot put, throwing 54-10 1/4, and a fourth-place in the hammer throw, throwing a personal-record 167-11.

Another personal record was set by pole vaulter Kyle Barton, who vaulted 15-9 in the event.

"That's the best I've ever seen him vault. That was a very pretty vault," said Cornell.

Kenton Rolle continued his comeback from a stress fracture incurred during the indoor season with a sixth-place finish in the long jump, jumping 23-10 1/4.

SIUC featured three fifth-place relay teams in the meet, a strong showing in the large field of competition.

The sprint medley team of Andrew Hinkson, Jarrin Williams, Kenton Rolle and Bernard Henry placed fifth with a time of 3:27.6.

The four-mile relay team of Garth Akol, Martin Fyche, Mike Danner, also returning from a stress fracture from the indoor season, and Neville Brooks also placed fifth, running the event in 17:58.7.

The distance medley team of Brooks, Hinkson, Rolle and Fyche was the third relay team to place fifth, with a time of 10:23.3.

No hospitality for SIUC at Southern Intercollegiates

The SIUC women's golf team took it on the chin last weekend, finishing 19th out of 19 teams at the Southern Intercollegiates in Athens, Ga.

The Salukis shot a three-round score of 354-348-335-1037, well off the pace of champion San Jose State (317-312-297-926).

Individually for SIUC, Tracey Pace was the team's highest finisher as she ended in a three-way tie for 50th place with a 87-86-78-251. Lieschen Eller and Dana Rasmus finished in a five-way tie for 83rd place. Eller shot a 91-84-88-263, while Rasmus notched a 90-85-88-263.

Carrie Hall finished in a three-way tie for 92nd with a score of 89-93-86-268.

San Jose's championship was spearheaded by Lisa Walton, who also captured the individual title with a 78-73-71-222.

The Salukis will compete Saturday at the Illini Classic in Savoy.

Softball squad to tangle with Mizzou in St. Louis

The SIUC softball team will have the chance to put its 23-7 record up against nationally ranked competition today when it meets Missouri in St. Louis.

The Tigers are the 16th ranked team in the country and are 3rd in the Midwest Region. The Salukis are close behind in the Midwest, boasting a No. 6 ranking.

One trend will come to an end when the Tigers and Salukis meet. SIUC is only 1-7 against Missouri, with its only win coming in 1990. However, the Salukis are rolling of late, taking 16 of their last 19 contests. SIUC also is a perfect 9-0 this season at neutral sites.

Missouri (24-13) has taken care of business this season against nationally ranked foes.

The Tigers own wins over Oklahoma State (4) and Kansas (13).

Today's meeting pits two teams coming off different weeks. SIUC won three of four during the weekend, including a sweep of Tulsa, while Missouri dropped three of four to conference foe Iowa State.

The Salukis will stay on the road for two weekend doubleheaders. SIUC will face Illinois State Friday and Bradley Saturday in twinbills.

Protestors fight bid for Olympics

Zapnews

Some 300 anti-Olympic demonstrators tried to enter a Berlin hotel where International Olympic Committee (IOC) officials were staying after protests against the city's bid to host the 2000 Summer Olympics.

Police stopped the attempt late Sunday and briefly detained five people, a police spokesman said Monday.

Men golfers net 3rd at Bradley

The SIUC men's golf team took third place at the Bradley Invitational last weekend in Pekin.

The Salukis shot a 316-307-623 to capture third, finishing behind champion Southeast Missouri State (306-303-610) and Xavier (310-309-619).

The Salukis shot a 316 in a weather-shortened first round, which was good for fourth place overall.

Sam Scheibal helped SIUC make the jump into third with a 79-73-152, good for fourth place overall.

Other scores for SIUC: Clyde Berning (80-73-153); Chris Pytell (77-81-158); Quinn McClure (82-80-162); and Jason Stillely (80-86-166).

The Salukis will compete in the Drake Relays Wednesday through Friday in Des Moines, Iowa.

THOUSANDS MOURN SLAIN SOUTH AFRICAN — Tens of thousands of black South Africans attended funeral ceremonies near Johannesburg Monday for assassinated South African Communist Party head Chris Hani. Millions more countrywide stayed away from work on a day of mourning called by political organizations. The killing by black gunmen of at least 19 people in Sebokeng township, 50 miles south of Johannesburg, overshadowed the largely peaceful ceremonies.

CEREMONY HONORS VICTIMS OF HOLOCAUST — Jews from all over the world, as well as Polish and foreign political leaders, Monday honored victims of the Nazi holocaust against Jews during World War Two. LIBERIAN REBEL ATTACK KILLS 15, WOUNDS 13 — Liberian rebel guerrillas killed 15 civilians and seriously wounded 13 in an attack in the Firestone Plantation area, northeast of Monrovia, survivors said Monday. Several of the injured, who were wounded with deep cuts on their heads and stomachs, were admitted to a hospital in the capital. They said some 30 rebels of the National Patriotic Front of Liberia (NPNL) "invaded with swords and knives" their rubber plantation camp late Thursday.

KOREAN POLICE INVESTIGATE DEADLY FIRE — South Korean Police are investigating why 45 patients were crowded into three small rooms of a mental hospital which caught fire early Monday resulting in 34 deaths. The hospital 150 miles southwest of Seoul housed patients under treatment for alcoholism or mental problems. The high death toll is being attributed to poor conditions. Police said they were investigating why the front door of the two-story building was locked and some patients were found dead with their feet shackled or their hands chained to hospital beds.

ITALIANS VOTE TO DUMP ELECTORAL SYSTEM — In a striking repudiation of Italy's political system, voters gave overwhelming support Monday to plans to dismantle the electoral system that many blame for chronic corruption and the nation's 51 revolving-door governments since World War II. After two days of voting in a historic referendum, Italians demonstrated their desire for profound reform by approving the direct election of most senators and a ban on state funding of political parties.

SOUTH DAKOTA GOVERNOR PRESUMED DEAD — Authorities in Iowa say South Dakota Governor George Mickelson has apparently been killed in a plane crash. Officials say Mickelson was aboard a small plane that went down near Dubuque City, Iowa, today. Authorities there say eight people died in the crash. Mickelson was 52. He was a Republican, and he had been the governor of South Dakota since 1986.

RETIRED GENERAL DOUBTS POW DOCUMENT — Retired U.S. Gen. John W. Vietnamese and U.S. participants in the talks agreed that the document contains numerous false statements.

D.C. SHOTGUN SLAYING SUSPECT ARRESTED — An unidentified suspect was arrested for a series of shotgun slayings and shootings that has terrorized the Mount Pleasant neighborhood in Washington D.C. since late March. The arrest was made by an off-duty policeman, just minutes after a third pedestrian, a 61-year-old resident of the area, was killed by a shotgun blast fired from a car. Two other pedestrians were fired upon earlier in the day but the shots missed.

Student Election Profiles

Candidate used to disagreeing

By Angela Hyland
Special Assignment Writer

Kochan

As the early afternoon sun drifts in through the living room window, Mark Kochan leans back in his chair, his attention drifting from the meal being prepared a few feet away to the conversation before him.

Kochan, who is the Alliance Party candidate for student trustee, said his family has always discussed items in the news, but has never been very interested in politics.

When Kochan began developing an interest in politics all this changed, he said.

"Now, when I go home, my mother will come to me (with political issues) and say, 'One day when you're elected to office, you're going to have to change this,'" he said.

As the only Democrat in a family of Republicans, Kochan said he has a lot of experience debating political issues with people who don't agree with him.

"I have to be a little more careful when I'm debating family," he said. "I don't want to tread on their beliefs."

However, Kochan said he does intend to sway the thinking of the SIU Board of Trustees. He said he intends to resist efforts to increase the local bar entry age, support a local mass transit system and propose a dormitory food plan that would work on a point system.

He previously has served as student trustee at John A. Logan College and served as a representative for student trustees on the Illinois Community College Board.

Kochan also worked as a paid staff member of Sen. Jim Rea, D-Christopher, who served as a summer intern for Carbondale city manager Jeff Doherty and currently works as an intern for Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Bellefonte.

Board must hear student concern

By Christian Kennerly
Special Assignment Writer

Cano

A lack of student representation in the areas of social, economic, and educational issues affecting SIUC students is the reason student trustee candidate Al Cano is running for the position.

Cano, who is running on the Student Party ticket, said he fully believes in the issues the party stands for.

Cano said his concerns lie primarily in the lack of communication between the student body and board on key issues such as program cuts and changes.

"I really don't see any representation at the student level in those areas right now," he said.

"One of the problems I see is that the representation doesn't get to the board where it should be."

Cano cited the elimination of certain programs in The College of Technical Careers and the Phoenix Committee's efforts as important issues in need of student input and opinion.

Cano served as last year's Inter-Greek Council President and previously was on the board of directors for the Theta Xi fraternity, and he said these experiences helped develop his skills as a representative.

"For the IGC I would go directly to my chapters and find out how they felt on issues," he said.

Cano said representing his peers is a responsibility he does not take lightly.

Thus, he sees keeping his constituents informed as a crucial part of the process.

"I would be attending GPSC and USG meetings getting the information from the horse's mouth, and bringing the issues before the Board of Trustees," he said.

Volunteer efforts shaped values

By Angela Hyland
Special Assignment Writer

Ensor

Heavy rains had washed out many roads in Trenton, N.J., and caused thousands of dollars in damage.

Behind closed doors, city officials spoke in hushed tones about fears of riots and looting.

Volunteers from all over the area, including a young Andrew Ensor, began pouring in, working long hours to restore order to the city.

Ensor, who is running for student trustee as an independent candidate, said it was an experience he will never forget. The few days he spent working on the flood relief efforts in the 1970s changed his thinking for a lifetime, giving him an appreciation of the value of working together, he said.

"I think teamwork is the center of my entire philosophy," Ensor said.

Ensor said he saw the difference teachers who shared this attitude could make on people's lives and he intends to be just as dedicated to the students he would serve.

"Students come first," he said. "Before anything else — including the jobs of professors."

Ensor said he decided to get involved in politics because he was bothered by things he saw going on around him.

"I was frustrated at the way the student senate was ignoring the students," he said.

He said he plans to resist efforts to raise the local bar entry age, proposes having the food service work on a point system, wants to install a night vision camera system to improve campus security and supports the creation of a mass transit system. But he opposes guaranteed contracts for the system until it has proven to be efficient.

Experience, dedication key to Cole's platform

By Shawna Donovan
Special Assignment Writer

Cole

"We have one big issue in front of us called academics. This university is undergoing a very extensive process of program planning," Cole said. "I want to be a part of the group of people that forge a path for this university into the next century by fine-tuning academics and stream-lining our non-academic programs."

Cole served as USG chief of staff for two years before being elected president last year.

Cole said his administration is student-oriented even though questions have been raised about his tactics.

"I am here as a representative of the student body. I am here for the students. If they have problems, they can come to me. People have said we need change and I have been up there too long," Cole said.

"You cannot do a good job without making a few people upset. I will be the first to admit I have made a few people mad," Cole said. "But I bet those people who are upset with me respect me and think I have done a good job."

In two words, Undergraduate Student Government President Brad Cole described his re-election bid: experience and dedication.

Brad Cole, USG president and a junior in zoology and political science from Macon, said he wants to be re-elected because he has contributed to a better USG.

"I think we have done a good job," Cole said. "I have been involved for three years, and I can say we have brought USG up to speed and better than anyone could have done. I did not do it alone because there has been hundreds of students involved over the three years."

Platform positions include supporting recycling, not raising tuition or the bar entry age, and working to improve campus safety by expanding the Saluki patrol program as well as other night safety and educational programs. Making off-campus housing safety and quality more attainable, the party has supported tougher licensing of Carbondale rentals.

Cole said academics is the biggest dilemma on campus.

Spiwak: Student views should be single voice

By Jeremy Finley
Special Assignment Writer

Spiwak

"I'm going to bring back some integrity to USG, I like to see things done right," he said. "We don't want a student government to just be there—we want one that's proactive, not reactive."

Spiwak said the main assumption of his Alliance Party is that the majority of the students on campus are under-represented.

"We are going to be an advocate for students rights," he said. "The concern of students should be the single most important thing."

Spiwak said improving the food offered in campus housing, correcting poor lighting in Thompson Point, supporting the mass transit proposal and reinstating teacher evaluations are other important issues on his agenda.

The Alliance platform opposes increases the bar entry age, and increases in tuition and fees without student support. It supports improving recycling and off-campus housing licensing.

Spiwak came to SIUC in 1990 after serving four years in the Army and has served for two years as an USG senator.

Although the Undergraduate Student Government is composed of many different students, it should be a single voice portraying the views of the campus community, presidential candidate Mike Spiwak said.

Spiwak said he does not feel USG has been that single voice for student concerns.

"I think the student government needs to move in a different direction," he said. "It has not been enough of a voice for the students. That has to change."

Spiwak, a senior in political science/economics from Chicago, said he thinks as himself as a watchdog for students.

"I don't like that there are some matters slid by students," he said. "The bar entry age is only a side thing for underage drinking, and that's being passed off as the true issue. I'm a watchdog for stuff like that."

Spiwak's Alliance Party's slogan states, "Don't get fooled again," to remind students of past USG problems. Spiwak said he hopes to bring virtue back to the USG.

Spiwak offers voice for undergraduates

UNDERGRADUATES WANTING a president who will be an active voice for the students should vote for Alliance Party candidate Mike Spiwak.

Spiwak, vice presidential candidate Lorenzo Henderson and the rest of the Alliance party senatorial candidates have offered to set up regular town meetings all over campus.

The idea is to hear from factions of the SIUC community before making decisions — a kind of representation that has been lacking in Undergraduate Student Government for years. Spiwak pledges to reach out to as many as possible.

His opponent, incumbent Student Party candidate Brad Cole, has done much to improve the student body's relationship with the city and administration. But in doing so the Student Party, which dominates the senate, has lost touch with grassroots students.

It is idealistic to think that one can reach 24,000 people, and Cole has utilized leaders of student organizations to form opinions. He has formed a Unity Coalition to reach out to the minority population; that group should continue advising the president regardless of the election's outcome.

But waiting in an office to hear from students will not work — leadership must actively seek out students. That is what Spiwak promises.

BOTH CANDIDATES HAVE much to learn about leadership. Their platforms contain several superficial items, such as complaints about food, and they have said little about representation in SIUC's program cutting processes.

It would be political suicide not to "resist" an increase in the entry age at local bars. Both candidates took the popular position. But neither seems willing to lead the way in helping solve an underage drinking problem and other drinking related problems that are pervasive on campus.

Spiwak's idea to have beer companies sponsor athletic events conflicts with SIUC's attempts to solve the problem. He could, however, emphasize relief of the state's funding burden for sports by increasing other outside sponsorship.

Another important issue is trust: Cole already has shown a lack of leadership by funding himself $450 for a trip.

Students should vote for Spiwak, who can grow as a leader. It should be his goal to show leadership on the tough issues.

Kochan would provide accessible trusteeship

ANY OF THE THREE CANDIDATES for student trustee is a better option than the practically nonexistent representation SIUC had this past year.

But Alliance candidate Mark Kochan, who already has served as trustee at John A. Logan College seems most willing to seek out students for their opinions and then act on them. He wants to set up town meetings to get student input before facing decisions on the Board of Trustees.

Student Party candidate Al Cano says he will spend time getting the student body organized before getting fully involved with the politics of the board. But he shows little knowledge about budget and program cutting processes already under way at the University.

Andrew Ensor shows energy and commitment in his bid as an independent. But he seems more influenced by the economics of the position and his own views than by making sure he gets the views of all students.

The candidates seemed to take the easy way out on most issues facing students and to offer few solutions for campus problems, but Kochan exhibits the most promise as a leader.

He is most willing to learn about an issue, and then to talk it over with as many students as possible. Students should elect Kochan if they want active representation.

Letters to the Editor

Freedom of speech designed for all, notwithstanding political orientation

I agree that we should have freedom of speech for all sectors of society.

What bothers me is the double-standard of the left in this country. They want to defend the right to freedom of speech for all people. But the first time a person on the right speaks his or her mind, they are called more names that I have the room to print in this letter.

If you criticize the establishment, look out. What's wrong with suggesting that Congress and the President do something useful, like keep a few promises?

The same people who talked about questioning authority are going to come after you, "trying to save the plant" from "religious right-wing radicals."

Marc Perry expressed an opinion on homosexuality. Regardless of its validity, it's the way he feels.

B. Moss wrote that it was irresponsible of the Daily Egyptian to publish Perry's article. "Justifying the publication of such material under the guise of equal representation is not an adequate defense," she wrote.

This is the opinion page of a newspaper, not some liberal fanzine. Anyone can speak their mind.

Get used to the democratic process. Ask Rush Limbaugh about freedom of speech. If he said, wrote or implied even half of what the liberals accuse him of, nobody would listen to him.

The question is whether everyone has a right to free speech, or just the left.

The pendulum hasn't swung back to the center from the right. It has departed from the center and swung to the left. Big brother is back, and he's a member of the Democratic party. — David Gibbs, undergraduate, history

SIUC should give Cole another 2 cents worth

OK, quick math quiz: What is $450 divided by 25,000?

The correct answer is 0.018.

Why is this significant? It is the amount of money we paid to send Brad Cole to the Republican National Convention.

Warms your heart, doesn't it? Just knowing that for a mere 1.8 cents you were able to aid a disadvantaged young Republican toward a career of distinguished public service.

All in all it was a pretty good deal. We know where the money went; it was not spent on court costs or fought over by warlords. It went straight to the source.

The best part was the whole school participated in this wonderful act of humanitarianism without lifting a finger.

It was like Brad knew we would want to do the right thing and went ahead and did it for us — a sterling example of leadership at its finest.

What disturbs me, though, is the feeling that we could have been more generous. Let's face it, $450 doesn't stretch too far.

Poor Brad probably had to deal with some Spartan living conditions in Houston.

Between staying in an economy motel and having to eat fast food, Brad was undoubtedly deprived of the opulence one associates with a convention.

I feel bad about this, and I'm sure you do too. I mean, we have spit in the face of the man we chose to lead us. We chose him, didn't we? I am kind of hazy on the details.

Whatever, I say we make it up to him. If we divvy up another two cents, we could raise $500 — ample funds for a trip to see the Dan Quayle Vice Presidential Library.

If you think this is a good idea, send two cents to the "We're Sorry, Brad" Fund, care of USG. Or give Brad your two cents worth in person. — Keith Dumenil, senior, radio and television

'Attack' on president biased, senator says

This letter is in response to the recent attacks on our student body president, Brad Cole.

I have never been so disappointed in the Daily Egyptian in all my years at SIUC.

Jeff King said in his letter to the editor on April 15, "I don't know every last detail, and most of the student body probably does not either."

Well said! It seems to me that the objective of the Daily Egyptian is (or should be) to inform the undergraduate student body of election issues, presenting both sides of the story so that each student may make an informed vote.

If a student supports Mike Spiwak, or Brad Cole for that matter, I would hope it was because he or she has heard both sides of the story.

Unfortunately, the DE is clearly being biased. Second of all, if there was a problem with Brad Cole representing the College Republicans at the national convention, Mr. Scott should have addressed the problem months ago.

In Gus Bode, also on April 15, Mr. Cole was presented as someone who would deliberately cheat the students for his own personal gain, and that is just flat out false.

I have been a student senator and finance committee member for two years. It is unfortunate that students cannot see all the very positive things that Mr. Cole has done, not just during his term as president but in his entire time here at SIUC. Brad Cole should be praised for his service and contributions to this University, not continually criticized.

At least let him tell his side of the story. When everyone at the DE has done as much as Brad Cole has for SIUC, then they may be in a position to judge. — Amy K. Goodhart, senior, marketing

USG president candidates air views

Cole, Student Party leaders with necessary experience

Brad Cole

With student government elections just around the corner, we must focus on issues which directly concern the student body. The following accounts for what the Student Party believes in and is prepared to do.

My administration has had a very successful and positive year of accomplishments. Allow me to name just a few: Monday we dedicated Class Gift 1993, a sculpture commissioned by a student and presented to the University on behalf of the Class of 1993. The piece now sits prominently in front of Morris Library. By doing so, we hope to give rebirth to a tradition lost in the past, a tradition of students giving back to their institution.

Beyond that, what do students care about? We care about jobs. Along the line of jobs, I supported the expenditure of $63,000 to be put towards enhancing the Saluki Patrol program. What this has done is two-fold: first, it ensured nearly 30 student work jobs in the program. Second, it works to provide more patrols and greater safety on campus during the day and evening hours.

Also, just this last week, I dedicated funds to be used for a Voice and Touch Response system through the Office of Admissions and Records. This will enable students to access information via telephone and micro-computer terminals. Information that may be obtained includes grade reporting, admission information and status, general campuswide information, and schedules of cultural and athletic events.

This system, after it is fully installed, will allow students to spend less time waiting in lines, it will make payment problems easier to address, and it will be available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

These are things we have already done; now, what are we going to do next year? Well, next year we will have direct representation on the Illinois Student Assistance Commission. I will serve as the single student on this statewide board which oversees financial aid awards to students throughout Illinois.

Further, we will overhaul the Student Senate and make it more accountable to the students it represents and the organizations it monitors. As Vice President, Greg Carter will make this his top priority. And having served as a leader in the Senate already, he knows what needs to be done and how to do it.

But most importantly, one of our primary concerns is academics. The real purpose for us to be at SIUC is to get an education. I have been one of only two students involved throughout the entire program planning process. I bring to the table literally hundreds of hours of reading, discussions, and meetings solely focused on academic programming. I fear to think that this student body can afford to be under-represented in this most important area.

Our leadership and experience speak for themselves. I can only ask for your support as we work to make this campus better for everyone. Thank you. — Brad Cole, USG presidential candidate, Student Party

Spiwak, Alliance Party offer powerful voice for students

Mike Spiwak

"Why should I vote? What's in it for me?" Good question. Last year only 1,300 undergraduates voted.

So why should you vote? I'll give you 318 reasons. That's how much you paid in fees this semester.

You paid close to $40 for a Student Center that isn't yours, and $12 for conferences you did not get to attend.

Bar entry ages may go up; livable off-campus housing is going down; on-campus housing fees are going up, while food quality is going down; financial aid problems are increasing, and classes are being cut.

What do you think about voting now?

As USG President I intend to open up student government to inform, educate and serve the students. These are some of the ways I intend to do this:

I will reinstate a student-run class evaluation book entitled The Mirror to provide students with an alternative to standard advisement procedures. The Mirror would fill the advisement gap and improve student class choices with descriptions of all instructors and class sections.

A computer linked to a financial aid network will be made available in the USG office for all students to use, and our Financial Aid Commission will be the problem solvers for students.

We will advocate a point system for University cafeterias so students can pay for only as much food as they wish to eat.

I will be a strong advocate for open housing, so that students will be able to live where they want, how they want, and not be discriminated against by zoning laws or taken advantage of by opportunistic landlords.

To revamp funding procedures, I will convene a Summer Senate to install a system of checks and balances, ensuring all RSOs are treated fairly, and no one person may corrupt the funding process.

And, unless the students support an increase, we will oppose all proposed tuition and fee increases.

The Alliance Party has been formed to put student government where it belongs: in the hands of the students.

Why should student groups not be allowed to bring our own food into the Student Center for meetings when the "University Club" brings in its own liquor to "live it up"?

The Student Center is paid for primarily by students; they should be its priority customers.

Why must students bear the brunt of costs, as salaries go up and services go down?

This Wednesday, vote for the party that has your interests at heart. Vote for the party that will speak for and empower the students. Don't get fooled again.

This Wednesday, vote Alliance. — Mike Spiwak, USG presidential candidate, Alliance Party

Student trustee candidates explain positions

Cano: Experience, fairness crucial part of trustee position

Al Cano

Please allow me these few moments to appeal to the student body, for their rights as students. I am a candidate for student trustee at SIUC, running with the Student Party. As an experienced leader, I have served nationally, statewide, regionally, locally and campuswide. I can proudly say my constituency was fairly represented at all levels, and the time, quality and consideration involved with these positions is guaranteed for the student trustee's office as well.

As a member of the Student Party, I stand by its platform 100%, but as a student trustee candidate, all of my concerns must be addressed. I believe this office must address issues including those resulting in educational, financial and social impacts. This affects the whole constituency, graduate and undergraduate and is something other candidates neglect. Issues such as educational reforms now taking their toll as a result of the 21st Century Program, and the Long Term Planning Committee greatly affect the diversity of programs offered to SIU students.

Financial concerns, such as the housing increase passed in lieu of a more costly plan, should be an issue for the student trustee because it affects a whole constituency. Mass transit fees (if implemented) and medical insurance fee and student activity fee increases put a crunch on our pocketbooks but can be realistically justified if relayed to the students in detail.

Social atmospheres also are ideal issues for consideration. The call by the Vice President of Student Affairs to students of all ethnic backgrounds helped us confront campus violence. The compilation of such a group runs on with another of my concerns — minority special programming, higher degree of minority representation including foreign students, all ethnic classifications, women, handicapped individuals and homosexuals. These are all groups that should be supported on campus with an equal opportunity for representation on their concerns.

These are three basic classifications for issues we need to concern ourselves with. I am fully aware of them. I know how the students need to be represented, and I have a working experience with committees directly involved. With so many proposed changes on the horizon we need informed, experienced representation which is competent enough to inform its constituency. I possess those qualities and can stand for your rights as a student. I challenge the constituency to make an informed, rational decision and support my quest. — Al Cano, student trustee candidate, Student Party

Independent Ensor promises to reform SIUC's weak spots

Andrew Ensor

I can remember the night I stood in front of the Student Senate and said I did believe that housing needed more money.

I also reminded the Senate that they had an obligation to represent the student body.

I remember how guilty I felt. My shame was only magnified when the Undergraduate Student Government Senate, led by Brad Cole, voted in favor of raising the housing rate.

During spring break I decided that I would never let that happen again!

When I returned to school after break, I filled out all the required papers to run for trustee as an independent candidate.

When I was sure that I would not win the fight to stop the housing increase, I came up with an alternative plan.

It was a lot more fair than the one the students were having shoved down their throats.

I was representing Warren Hall. I can't fully express to my friends at Warren how truly sorry I am I lost.

But I'll be Damned-Into-Hell before I lose again!

So, to the folks who serve what they have the nerve to call food on this campus; you are history!

There is no way I'll let another student get sick off of what you've been dishing out!

To the teaching assistants who can't speak English, sorry guys!

It's the law, and you will all have to seek employment elsewhere.

To the police officers who stand by while tow trucks steal private property, it is over fellas! Get with the program or get lost!

To the instructors who rack up a 50 percent total withdrawal and failure rates, and I am addressing the accounting department; your tenure is not going to protect you from me!

Fix your programs or get a lawyer. I promise you are going to need one! — Andrew Ensor, student trustee candidate, independent

Kochan would hear students, respond actively as trustee

Mark Kochan

Do you know who your student trustee is?

Do you know what his responsibilities are?

Well, if you are like most students you have answered "no" to both of these questions. The student trustee represents all graduate, professional, and undergraduate students to the Board of Trustees.

The Board of Trustees has final authority over President John C. Guyon and even Chancellor James Brown.

The Board of Trustees affects students directly because they give final approval or disapproval to issues such as tuition increases, capital projects, and program cuts.

I feel that my experience will be an asset to this position.

As a past student trustee at John A. Logan College, I ensured increased parking lots and sternly resisted tuition increases.

In 1990, I was elected by student trustees from around the state to represent all community college students in Illinois on the Illinois Community College Board.

I also completed an internship with the city manager of Carbondale this past summer. With this experience, I hope to strengthen the relationship between students and the city.

In the past, I have lobbied state and federal elected officials to increase funding for education.

Currently, I am completing an internship with a local congressman.

Also, as Student Trustee I will represent a consensus by attending meetings of Undergraduate Student Government, Graduate and Professional Student Council, registered student organizations, and other organizations in order that the voice of the students is heard and stated strongly on the Board of Trustees.

To do this, I will host regular town meetings across the campus and have daily set office hours at the Student Center.

I am willing to put this knowledge and sincerity to work for the SIUC student body as your advocate on the Board of Trustees.

I thank you for your time and I would appreciate your vote for myself and the Alliance Party on Wednesday. — Mark Kochan, student trustee candidate, Alliance Party

Author's work captures experience of black press

By Thomas Gibson
Minorities Writer

A new book by an SIUC professor reflects a sign of the times by showing the changes in the black press.

The black press began in the 18th and 19th centuries during the era of slavery, said Julius Thompson, associate professor of history and author of "The Black Press in Mississippi: 1865-1985."

"The first efforts at mass communication were exposed through music, songs, religion, legend and stories," he said.

The book describes the plight of the African-American underclass and the black press' effort to voice the anger of African Americans.

However, if the black press was too radical in stressing economic parity they faced losing white economic dollars, Thompson said.

Thompson said the black press is in a double bind. It is viable institution much like the African-American church, he said.

"The black press is unlike the church which faces the problem of dual economics," he said.

Thompson said the press would be ridiculed by African Americans if it appeared to be weak in confronting controversial issues that would have been beneficial to blacks.

"Although when the press became radical, its workers were met with violence from the Ku Klux Klan and the White Citizens Council," he added.

However, the African-American newspapers are not attracting much mainstream advertising, he added.

"The newspapers face a problem in attracting and keeping black journalist," he said.

Thompson said the journalist at the African-American newspaper work longer and harder for less.

"They are over worked and underpaid. Many black journalists see their work at a black newspaper as giving back something back to the black community," he said.

He said majority of the black press survives because of the efforts of the editors.

"There is a need for the black press in the 90s because black people are under represented in the media," he said. "Blacks own very few mainstream publications."

Thompson said many African-American students do not read as much as they should.

"The modern black press is compilation of TV, radio, and film," he said.

He said young African-American students must be aware that African Americans kept the print industry alive.

The black press helps to promote African-American culture, you can not put everything into video, Thompson said.

"Part of the historical black record that we want to pass from generation to generation," he continued.

He said writing in the 1990s is of prime importance for the survival of African Americans.

"In the United States blacks number 30 million in population larger than Canada, one of the major countries in the world," he said.

He said the written word ensures that African-American culture will grow and develop.

Thompson said he received inspiration to become a writer while a undergraduate at Alcorn State University.

Thompson received his doctorate from Princeton University in 1975. Culture must serve in the writers forum, which will tie in with black people in Africa, Brazil and Europe, he said.

"Everywhere on this planet where black people are there is a struggle," he said.

He said black people all over the world have a common hope for the future of Africa.

"So that Africa will be able to protect the interest of all black people in the world," Thompson added.

Mining engineering department awards top scholars, professors

By Erick J.B. Enriquez
General Assignment Writer

Students who will one day find themselves trouble-shooting the intricate problems of mining engineering were awarded last Thursday at the Annual Joint Meeting and Banquet of the Department of Mining Engineering and Midwest Coal Section.

Bradley Bingenheimer, a senior in mining and electrical engineering, said the evening was successful.

"Everything went well," Bingenheimer said.

"I was surprised by the number of people that turned out," Bingenheimer added.

Bingenheimer, who received the Illinois Mining and Mineral Research Institute Scholarship, which will pay his full tuition for the next year, said he was happy to receive the award.

"This is something I've looked forward to," Bingenheimer said. "I really needed the money."

Bradley Paul, an assistant professor in mining engineering and recipient of the Outstanding Teacher Award, said being recognized for something he enjoys was an honor.

"I consider it quite an honor," Paul said.

"Teaching is one of the reasons I came to the University in the first place, so it's nice to be told that I'm doing well in one of the things I enjoy," he added.

Awards given to students majoring in mining engineering that night were as follows:

■ IMMRI Scholarship: Bradley Bingenheimer from Chatham; Louis Palmer, a senior also majoring in industrial technology from McLeansboro; and Steve Swanson, a senior from Carbondale.

■ IMMRI Fellowship: Da Lei a masters student from Carbondale; and Joydeep Mukherjee a masters student from Carbondale.

■ Outstanding Teacher: Bradley Paul.

■ Coal Industry Scholarship: Mike Wilda a senior from Belleville; Anthony Graham a senior from Carbondale; Teresa Hudson-Handy a junior also majoring in electrical engineering from Chicago; Brian Lanningham a senior from Marion; Lars Lindquist a senior from Carbondale; Vertricia Lockett a senior also majoring in civil engineering from St. Anne; Robert Wireman a senior from Media; and Rodney Sisk, a senior also majoring in electrical engineering from Carbondale.

George Shifflett, president of Peobody Coal, was the guest speaker and discussed the future of the coal industry in the state of Illinois.

Forestry students compete in Eastern Illinois Conclave

By Erick J. B. Enriquez
General Assignment Writer

In 22.8 seconds, two SIUC students sawed through a 10-inch thick red oak square log and helped their team place first at the Eastern Illinois Forestry Conclave.

Last weekend, students from throughout the state and from as far as Michigan, met at the Forest Glen Preserve near Westville in events such as the two-person log roll, women's buck sawing, speed chopping, bolt throwing, the Jack and Jill log roll, Jack and Jill buck sawing, and pulp tossing.

Tim Scott, a freshman in forestry from Ottawa, said the tournament was the best he has participated in.

"It was great," he said. "I've been to two conclaves and this one was a lot better set up than the last one. It was not all spread out, but in one general area so everyone could watch each event."

Tracy Williamson, a senior from Bulpitt, said the event was relaxing because it was all for enjoyment.

"It was fun," she said. "It wasn't stressful because we were relaxed and didn't worry about beating anyone."

Other schools involved in the conclave included Michigan Technological University, Michigan State University, Southeastern Illinois College, and the University of Illinois.

Work Abroad program offered to students

Council provides job opportunities around the world

By Candace Samolinski
International Writer

Independent students who are not afraid of a challenge may want to look into a work abroad program for a summer or a semester.

"Part of the program's appeal is that it gives students a chance they would not normally have on their own," Garth Horn, program coordinator for the Council on International Educational Exchange, said.

"The bureaucracies in many countries allow only a limited number of students the chance to work abroad, our program changes that," he said.

The council has a relationship with eight countries to allow students from the United States to work abroad in exchange for allowing students from those countries to work here.

The countries included in the agreement are Britain, Ireland, France, Germany, New Zealand, Costa Rica, Canada and Jamaica.

"This program is open to American citizens or permanent residents of the U.S. only," Horn said.

"It is not a job placement program, which I think is one of the attractions of the program."

Horn said the first step interested students should take is contacting the CIEE office.

The office provides them with a participant handbook and issues them a work permit once their application is processed.

"Part of the program's appeal is that it gives students a chance they would not normally have on their own."

—Garth Horn

"The application process usually takes from three to four weeks," Horn said.

"We do allow express mail and that can speed it up to about 10 days."

The eligibility requirements for the program include: being 18 years old, full-time student or pursuing eight hours or more of study towards a degree at an accredited U.S. university and be a U.S. citizen or permanent resident.

"This program is not for everyone, but it is geared toward those people who are looking for international experience beyond a classroom setting," Horn said.

Horn said participants in the program are responsible for finding employment, housing and finances.

"Once they arrive in a country either our agency or a co-organization conducts an orientation for them, he said.

"This provides them with necessary information like where to look for jobs, possible job leads and how to interpret classified ads."

Marshall Sprung, a senior in political science from Brown University, participated in the program last summer in Britain.

"I really enjoyed the program and found a job in about five days," he said.

"The agency is really helpful and provided me with names and addresses of possible leads."

Horn and Sprung agreed the program has advantages over study abroad programs by providing students the chance to experience life as a local citizen.

"I felt overwhelmed when I first got there, but it got easier," Sprung said.

"I found it relatively easy to meet people through my job and I got to know the city as someone who lived there not a tourist."

Sprung lived in London and went through the program alone and relying on contacts there for social relations.

Horn said it is not uncommon for students to join the program alone,

Applying for Work Abroad

Submit all of the following together:

1. Completed application. Be sure to read all eligibility requirements carefully and sign the declaration at the bottom of the application form.
2. Proof of current student status. ONE of the following acceptable forms of proof of student status:
  - Completed school declaration form
  - Official letter from your college registrar (not accepted for Germany)
  - Most recent grade report or official transcript (not accepted for Germany)
  - Photocopy of your current International Student Identity Card (not accepted for Britain) but some students go with friends.

"This program is ideal for people who have participated in a study abroad program and want to go back," Horn said. "I would also recommend it to graduating seniors."

Sprung said he too would recommend the program to students who are graduating and believe their first job will be entry level.

"If I were going to take a job in the states that was an entry level position that is common almost anywhere I would definitely get involved in this program," Sprung said.

"After all it is more glamorous to have an average job on an international level on your resume."

Students are allowed to apply to work in more than one country.

There is a $125 application fee for each country a student sends an application to.

The time in which a student can work varies from country to country.

In Britain a student can work anytime of the year for up to six months, Ireland anytime up to four months, France anytime up to three months, Germany from May 15 to Oct. 15 for up to three months, New Zealand from April 1 to Oct. 31, Costa Rica from June 1 to Oct. 1, Canada from May 1 to Oct. 31 and Jamaica from Dec. 15 to April 1 or June 1 to Oct. 1.

For more information on the work abroad program contact the CIEE at (212) 661-1414 Ext. 1130.

Information Technology's Role at SIUC

In the early days of computing at SIUC, Information Technology (then known as Computing Affairs) wrote computer programs and revised operating systems. Products on the market often didn't fit SIUC's needs so we developed them ourselves. We built the Personnel Payroll Information System (PPIS) and the first Student Information System (SIS) from the ground up and custom-tailored the commercially produced Financial Accounting System (FAS).

We could afford this investment because computer industry changes occurred more slowly then. Now, resources don't permit us to devote staff and time to programming software because rapidly evolving technology can make our products outdated virtually overnight. In addition, we can get what we need from software vendors who have the resources to devote to research and development of quality products. So, when we can, we buy their programs and systems rather than creating them from scratch.

For example, we would need a dozen staffers to develop an SIS package like the one we bought several years ago to replace our original home-grown one. Also, we would have to devote six people to maintaining the system. Instead, the software vendor handles the maintenance, and we retain two staffers to work with them. This results in a significant cost savings for SIUC.

As for customizing operating systems like Multiple Virtual Storage (MVS) or Virtual Machine (VM)/ Conversational Monitor Service (CMS), vendors quit providing their products in a form that other programmers could alter several years ago. Now, we can run their systems, but we can't decipher them. However, we can negotiate with vendors to incorporate new functions into their products, and if a system fails, they give us help and replacement parts.

We still design programs that have no commercial counterparts such as the Campus Wide Information System (CWIS). However, the bulk of our work today deals with the maintenance of vendor software. This includes installation, troubleshooting, diagnosis, disaster recovery and capacity planning. -Db work have involved IBM or IBM-compatible machines. However, Information Technology can also connect Macintosh machines (whether or not they're in a local area network). Currently, about a dozen Mac networks enjoy the benefits of the CAN.

"Rapidly evolving technology can make our products outdated virtually overnight"

Information Technology would like to bring your Mac into the campus area network fold. It's a little more involved to connect them than IBM or IBM-compatibles because Macs require protocol conversions and special hardware. However, it's worth the effort. It opens up a whole new world of computing to the Mac user.

If you work on a Mac and would like to become a part of the campus area network, submit an Application Development Request (ADR) to Information Technology/453-5155. We'll give you a detailed estimate of the project's cost. If it's approved, our experts may be able to start to work on your job in about 75 days. The cost and length of the project will vary depending on your computing situation. -Db

The Macintosh Connection to the Campus Area Network

In 1988, SIUC began developing a campus area network (CAN) that will ultimately encompass the entire University. The network is a system of local area networks of computer users with common software and hardware needs who share resources, applications and information. The CAN expands a user's telecommunications horizons by offering access to other local area networks, the mainframe and international networks like Internet and Bitnet.

So far, most hookups to the campus area net-

Bitnet: An international network linking more than 350 educational and research organizations including nearly 200 in Europe, Canada, Japan and the Far East. It works like a postal service. You can send and receive messages to and from computer users hooked into the network.

Internet: Another worldwide network that's bigger than Bitnet (it has 1.3 million hosts). It's interactive, like a phone system. You can logon to remote hosts, transfer files and research databases as well as send and receive messages.

*Information about Internet and Bitnet is available online through DOCS, Information Technology's documents program on the Campus Wide Information System (CWIS).

Information Technology Needs Your Help

The Information Age is making many standard uses of paper obsolete. Whether it's a one-page memo or a 100-sheet report, many documents that were once typed or handwritten on paper can be viewed easily on a personal computer screen or mainframe terminal today. In addition, PC hard drives and diskettes can store these "paperless" documents indefinitely.

The University saves money when the campus uses less computer printout paper. Currently, Information Technology spends about $125,000 each year on computer paper. If you follow the tips below, you'll use less paper and help us reduce costs and the amount of paper we need to recycle.

1. Before you run a large report, first consider routing it to Infopac, a report management system in MVS that stores documents you create from MVS jobs. Then you can view the report at your terminal or personal computer and select the pages you really need to print. Information about Infopac is available in CADOCS, which is found in DOCS, an option on the SIUC Campus Information submenu of the Campus Wide Information System (CWIS).

2. Route long documents to CMS if you have an account on this system. You can view or edit them there before deciding what to print.

3. Print documents on microfiche instead of paper (see this issue's Q&A).

4. Send reports, notes and other documents via electronic mail (E-Mail).

5. If you must print on paper, be selective in the output you request. Many software packages have options and parameters you can set when running a report. For example, you can choose to print the summaries of a job's results first to determine if you really want to see the entire report.

If you don't know how to change your printing parameters, ask your professor or call the Computing Information Center at 453-5155. -Db

Make Room for Microfiche

Q. Paper reports are cluttering our office, but we need to keep them for reference. Is there a better way to store them?

A: Yes. Microfiche is a good way to store large amounts of output you need to reference only occasionally. For example, you would probably need a paper copy of only the last pages of a large accounting report because that's where the cash-in and cash-out figures are summarized. Still the entire document could be neatly filed away on microfiche.

Q. What is microfiche?

A: It's a 4 x 6-inch sheet of film that bears a photographic record of printed material on a reduced scale. It's viewed through a microfiche reader, which enlarges the sheet so it can be read easily.

Q. Why should I use microfiche?

A: It's cheaper, smaller and less bulky than paper. It can be stored more easily. Microfiche is most useful if you develop an index system for the sheets—otherwise you'll have a difficult time finding specific documents.

Q. Can anyone use it?

A: Yes, if you work on the mainframe and send output to one of the public or secured bins at the Wham Building.

The procedure for getting microfiche output is nearly the same as for paper. If you are printing from CMS, simply type in the command FICHE where you would ordinarily type PRINT. If you are in MVS, change the output class to E (it's A for standard paper printouts). The job will be printed on microfiche and sent to your usual output bin. -Db

Information U·P·D·A·T·E

—Information Technology can't order equipment for FY 93 turn-key requests after April 15, 1993. We will process all Application Development Requests (ADRs) received after that date as usual, but the department must order its own equipment. This will ensure that equipment ordered by Network Services on behalf of our clients is received, installed and billed by September 1, 1993, in accordance with state law. We will continue to accept FY 93 ADRs that don't require equipment expenditures. FY 94 ADRs will be accepted and processed as usual after July 1, 1993.

—Look for these new offerings in LINKS, the Campus Wide Information System (CWIS) option that connects you with Morris and other library catalogs:

the Colorado Alliance of Research Libraries (CARL), featuring periodical indexes you can research by name, word and title

the complete text of 33 plays by Shakespeare (SHAKESPR)

new items in the On-line Catalogs at Other

Libraries (OTHRCAT). We've added more libraries and divided them into three groups:

Greater Midwest Research Library Consortium, SIUC Reciprocal Libraries and SIUC Non-Reciprocal Libraries. The first two contain libraries where we have low-cost borrowing agreements; the last features libraries with high costs to borrow materials.

—View Dawg Bytes issues on-line. Type DOCS at the CWIS command line for a menu of Information Technology's documents programs. Choose item number eight (#8).

—The new security package we installed last July require VM/CMS users to change their passwords every 254 days. If yours hasn't been changed by the 255th day, a "password expired" message will appear on the screen after you logon with the old one. To proceed, you must enter a new password that is five to eight characters long.

Daily Egyptian staffers win awards in national contest

By Tina Davis
General Assignment Writer

Twelve awards were given to Daily Egyptian employees in two national journalism competitions for their achievements, doubling the number of awards in previous years.

Eleven design awards went to employees for the Columbia Scholastic Press Association's Annual Gold Circle competition, ranging from first to honorable mention. Another DE employee placed 13th in the March Spot News Writing Competition sponsored by the William Randolph Hearst Foundation.

However, the students who won did not enter their work themselves, and did not know they were being considered in the competition.

"I didn't even know they submitted my work, so I was extremely surprised to hear I won," Bill Mullican, first place winner for overall portfolio, said.

Brian Gross, winner of three awards, said it is great because students are not trying to blow their own horns so when they win it is a good feeling.

Joe Littrell, who placed 13th in the March Spot News Writing

Competition for his story on the Pyramid Apartment fire, said his feelings were mixed.

"I was not that excited by winning," he said. "I can't really feel good about winning an award from this tragedy."

Sally Turner, DE writing coach said the best stories are clipped every day and at the end of each week the best of those are filed away and entered when a contest comes up.

According to John Ryan, also a DE writing coach, said a "Best of the Week" story is one that is above average, well-written and has multiple sources. All the stories submitted are selected by managing editor Wanda Brandon.

"We've performed very well this year, better than any time since I've been here," she said. "We had some good in-depth coverage, excellent graphics, and we aced strong on the editorials. I think it's a good sign of the quality of the school as well as the college of communications, but even with recognition we're not perfect. We're still learning and we still have a long way to go."

Among the winners were Gregory Norfleet, Sherri Wilcox, Trumier Camphor, Gross, Rebecca Campbell, Kevin Johnson, Mullican and the staff as a whole in overall design. These winners were recognized for their photography, layout, features, editorials, in-depth news, and single subject presentation.

Giving the gift of life

Carbondale resident Bill Crippen donates blood for the Red Cross at the Recreation Center. In addition to Monday's drive, the Red Cross will be having blood drives throughout the week. The drives will be Tuesday at K-Mart, Wednesday and Thursday at the Student Center and Friday at St. Francis Xavier Church.

Police Blotter

SIUC Police arrested two students because of outstanding warrants Friday.

Thomas O'Brien, 22, of Carbondale, was arrested at 6:19 p.m. Friday in the SIUC Recreation Center weight room on a Jackson County failure to appear warrant. O'Brien could not post bond and was incarcerated at the Jackson County Jail.

David Holder, 36, of Carbondale, was arrested at 8:42 p.m. Friday in front of the Student Center on a Douglas County warrant charging him with contempt of court. Holder posted $100 bond and was ordered to appear in Douglas County court May 3.

Police arrested a Carbondale man for drug possession after a traffic stop Saturday.

Carbondale Police arrested William N. Cobb, 24, of Carbondale at 11:41 p.m. Saturday after officers making a traffic stop found crack cocaine in Cobb's possession. The cocaine, along with $581 in Cobb's possession, was seized by police for possible forfeiture.

Cobb was charged with possession of a controlled substance and possession of a controlled substance with intent to deliver. A court date has not been set.

SIUC Police arrested a student for drinking and driving Sunday morning.

Craig Butler, 24, of Carbondale was arrested at 2:58 a.m. Sunday after an SIUC officer spotted him speeding. The officer allegedly fell in behind Butler, who, despite the presence of the officer behind him, repeatedly squealed his tires at every stop.

Butler was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and operating an uninsured motor vehicle. He posted his driver's license and was released on his own recognizance.

A May 5 court date was set for Butler.

Homosexual rights leaders plan March on Washington

The Washington Post

They call this decade "the Gay '90s" and say, without apology, that people better get used to it.

Homosexual rights leaders say this kind of confidence was missing two years ago — back in what they call the "dark ages" of a hostile Republican administration — when they began planning a third march on Washington in hopes of ending social and legal discrimination.

"With the march set for Sunday, and 1 million people expected, things feel different. Achievements thought impossible just months ago now seem within the reach of activists, who say homosexuals have lost children, jobs and even lives because of their sexual orientation.

"We are at a crossroads of unprecedented power and progress," said Robert Bray, a spokesman for the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force. "At the same time, we are suffering a dangerous and destructive backlash."

Among their official demands, march organizers are seeking the repeal of a 50-year-old ban against homosexuals in the military and the passage of federal legislation to extend the protection of the 1964 Civil Rights Act and other major civil rights legislation to gay men and lesbians.

The march is intended to stimulate movements in statehouses and town halls and to promote tolerance in private homes and the workplace.

Gay rights leaders are calling for the repeal of state and local laws against sodomy or any other private sexual expression between co-ting adults. They also are seeking legal and social acceptance of alternative family relationships among gay men, lesbians and their children.

And they want more funding for AIDS education, research and health care as they battle a fatal illness that has taken a heavy toll on gay men.

March organizers also have called for an end to discrimination against bisexuals and "transgendered people," an umbrella term that includes those who have had or hope to have sex-change operations and those who dress in the clothes of the opposite sex.

"Myself, as well as other minorities, felt that you (Cole) put together the unity coalition as a political gesture for the upcoming election," he said. "Why did you just sit this up three months before the election?"

Cole said the coalition is designed to better improve relations for the future, and questioned Westbrook's involvement with USG since he ran and lost for a senator seat.

"I do believe you ran for a senator seat, and since then I haven't seen much of you," he said. "We do the best we can, and the unity coalition is a good idea. It is a good project."

"We're pretty close to what the student quota looks like, and I don't think (the student party) are."

—Mike Spiwak

Cole said he rests the reputation of himself and his party on their accomplishments during their USG term.

The dedication of a class gift to the University, the appropriation of $63,000 for the Saluki patrol program; and the student employment opportunity guide for on-campus jobs are some of the programs put together by the student party, he said.

Spiwak said his party represents the true students at SIUC, including women, minorities and veterans.

"We're pretty close to what the student quota looks like, and I don't think (the student party) are," Spiwak said.

Cole said his own party also consists of representatives from minority groups on campus.

"Tony's done a good job. What we've seen is a shift from a trustee that tried to meddle in campus activities to one who works with student government and the board."

Svach and Cole served together on USG in 1991-92.

Svach was the USG vice president and Cole was USG chief of staff.

Although the undergraduate constituency is content with Svach's role, the Graduate and Professional Student Council has not seen much of Svach around its office, said Susan Hall, GPSC president.

"Tony receives GPSC meeting agendas, and we haven't seen him but once, and we are disappointed in his lack of attendance," Hall said. "Other trustees have made it a point, but this hasn't been carried out this year."

Svach is not in his office much, either, according to Jonathan Dotson, University Park hearing officer, whose office is next to Svach's.

"I have never seen Tony Svach in his office," Dotson said. "I'm in the building at least once a day."

When Dotson did speak to Svach either through a phone call or at his one appearance at a GPSC meeting, Svach told him that the student trustee should be more accessible.

However, Dotson said he got the impression that Svach did not want to be tied to an office to carry out his duties.

Svach's term may have taken off on a bad start because his office was moved to a much smaller location, said William Hall, Svach's predecessor as trustee.

Hall served as trustee for three years and is the GPSC vice president for administrative affairs.

When Hall became student trustee three years ago, he was given a larger office than usual because of groups switching offices.

Richard Hayes, Student Life Office coordinator, took the trustee office, Susan Hall said. Hayes refused to comment.

William Hall said after his term, the offices were switched again, and Svach was given a smaller Committee, said the committee members were hoping for a more decisive attitude from the President.

"We were hoping he would be able to commit at least in principle," he said.

Elliott said the executive committee of the Faculty Senate will consider today if they want to hold another hearing.

"We are facing a limited time frame," he said. "There are only two more Faculty Senate meetings before the end of the semester."

The Phoenix committee is made up of faculty from journalism, radio and television, broadcasting and cinema and photography, the four units that did not move to the College of Liberal Arts.

Walter Jaehnig, director of the School of Journalism and Phoenix committee member, said the committee presented Guyon with a petition urging the approval of a new college.

It would replace the College of Communication and Fine Arts, which is being abolished. The petition was signed by 563 students, faculty and staff of the academic units that would become the new college.

Jaehnig said Guyon addressed some concerns he has with a new college, including the location of the college within the University, its organization, its name and its status as a college.

Jaehnig said four options were discussed with Guyon.

The remaining units of CCFA could move as a group to COLA, move independently to COLA, become a college or become a center for communication studies.

The last option would allow the units to organize as an academic unit with its own line of authority, but not as a school or college and absent a dean, he said.

Jaehnig said the meeting gives the committee more to think about and lets them know that Guyon has not yet taken a position on the proposal.

"Tony was extremely angry that his office accommodations were not to his liking," Hall said. Svach denied that office accommodations were an issue for him.

"I just need a place to get messages," Svach said.

Around July, Hall said he began to make arrangements to move from the office, and he invited Svach to go through any files that he needed to.

But in August, when Svach accepted the invitation to his office, Hall said he trashed it.

Cole confirmed that he and Svach entered the office to look at files but denied that they vandalized it, saying that the office was already a mess.

"Tony got fed up around August and basically looked through everything to see if there was stuff he needed, and I went with him," Cole said.

"Bill had a big office with a lot of stuff in it. It was a big pack rat's nest." Hall said Svach may have blamed Hall for the switching of offices, and this could have driven him to throw things about.

"When I returned to the office, a sign for IBHE was torn up and various files and desk top materials were strewn about the floor," Hall said.

"Neither Brad nor Tony would admit to who was responsible for the damage but Tony said he would pay for the sign."

(Svach) believed that I had something to do with his being assigned a small office with less accommodations and facilities," Hall said.

"He is frequently inaccessible and it may be from this incident," Hall said he considered taking the incident before judicial affairs but decided against it.

"It was childish vandalism and since they (Cole and Svach) were starting a new term, I decided to give them a second chance," Hall said.

Hall said the building secretary, Darla Sheppard, let Cole and Svach into Hall's office, but Sheppard would not comment on the incident.
