Poor interaction cause of funds crunch

By Marc Chase
General Assignment Reporter

The Undergraduate Student Government Finance Committee Tuesday discussed communication problems between the group and priority two organizations as the result of a time constraint on the allocation process.

Priority two organizations receive funding allocations first because they serve as umbrella organizations that fund several smaller organizations. Priority two is funded second because they are smaller, independent organizations.

Several priority two organizations, such as the Pre-Medical Professionals Association, Monsanto complained to the committee that it did not inform these organizations of their funding for lack of an appeal process Monday when they could argue for more money.

Steve Sewall, finance committee member, said communication problems in the priority two allocation process partly resulted because the committee had only two weeks to allocate a large sum of money. He said he was a sole committee member that called organizations to notify them of their funding.

Sewall said the committee had the same amount of time to allocate funding as in years past, but twice the amount of organizations—155, as opposed to 60 last year. He said this caused some confusion, and eventually led to communication problems.

"We have only a couple of weeks in a two-week period," Sewall said. "We can't do that without some confusion; we are not Congress.

To prevent problems in the future, the committee could begin four to six weeks earlier, he said.

Committee members said many organization members Tuesday called to ask why their funding was not revealed to them earlier and why they were not informed of Monday's special meeting. Only 115 organizations were represented at the meeting.

Shull defends messages despite opposing groups' claims of fair campaigning

By Emily Price

A presidential candidate for the Undergraduate Student Government Tuesday admitted he used negative campaigning tactics, but says he began making what is response to attacks from his opponents.

Progressive Party candidate John Shull said he made this criticism candidates from the AAA Coalition and the Unity Party, and Tuesday distributed them 160 copies.

Troy Arnoldi of the AAA Party, one of the candidates featured in posters, said Shull sent messages—criticism he is voting out of context and printed them on flyers.

On one poster, Arnoldi quoted as saying, "I have better things to do than attend Undergraduate Student Government Executive Council board meetings."

Arnoldi admitted making the comment in response to questions about his attendance at the meetings, but said he qualified it with an explanation of the "better things" taking up his time.

"I said, 'Yes. I have missed some meetings, but I have better things to do than attend executive cabinet meetings,' " he said.

"Number one, a lot of the cabinet members don't show up for meetings and didn't have an excuse, and second of all, I was in housing areas, giving voter registration classes, which is good," he added.

When Arnoldi needed to miss meetings, he said to do other student government work, he made arrangements in advance, so Shull's flyers are inaccurate, he said.

Arnoldi expressed disappointment in Shull's decision to use questioning tactics after two weeks of clean campaigning from all parties.

"I think this postures are in poor taste," he said.

"I think this is the act of a desperate man. Up until this point, the political race has been pretty fair.

Shull, however, said the campaign has not been entirely fair because some candidates attacked him in their posters and flyers.

"I feel like everybody else this been attacking me through the whole campaign," he said.

"I went positive through the whole campaign until now, but I feel like people are trying to shoot me down.

Shull said Unity Party members posted a sign in the Student Center last week denying the Progressive Party with a popularity.

The negative campaigning against Shull began after his popularity became evident the first week of the race, he said.

"We were the only party to come out strong that first week, and I think the other parties felt threatened," he said.

Shull criticized Arnoldi for distributing flyers, such as one titled "Want the Truth Behind the Lies?", bearing negative campaign comments about the Progressive Party.

But Arnoldi said he addressed issues instead of making personal attacks because he is concerned that unfair campaign tactics could cause divisiveness personal conflicts among next year's student government representatives.

I'm trying to be very fair in my campaign, because I want communication among members to go on throughout the next year," he said.

Truant senator may lack credibility

By Marc Chase
General Assignment Reporter

Undergraduate Student Government Finance Committee members and seniors Tuesday said statements made by a committee member questioning ethical allocations to priority-two organizations lack credibility.

Committee member Steve Sewall said allocations from Monday's statement was inefficient and unfair in allocating priority-two funds are not substantial because Jackson has missed three committee meetings.

He (Jackson) could have stepped forward to make party changes while we were still deciding on the funding issues, but he was rarely at any of the meetings," Sewall said. "Also, Jackson made no phone calls to RSOs to notify them of their funding or the appeals process.

Many senators, such as Melanie Skeens, said Jackson's credibility with USG as a whole is low because he has missed extensive senate meetings.

According to USG attendance files, Skeens has perfect senate meeting attendance.

As far as this semester is concerned, Jackson has missed many (senate) meetings," Skeens said. "He has missed so many meetings that he is eligible for impeachment."

The USG constitution states all senate members who miss three or more senate meetings.

ISRAELI FORCES DETAIN 300 PALESTINIANS

JERUSALEM—Israeli security forces have detained more than 300 Palestinians as activists in the militant Islamic movements Hamas and Islamic Jihad in recent days, reacting to a string of violent attacks against Israeli targets over the last few weeks. It was the largest dragnet against the Islamic groups since the 1992 deportation of 400 Palestinians to southern Lebanon, when more than 1,000 were detained and arrested. The arrests, carried out by the army and Israel's internal security service, were made across the West Bank and Gaza Strip, but appeared to be centered in Gaza, where the Islamic movements are strongest.

SEATTLE—A last vestige of America's campaign to rebuild and industrialize Japan after World War II has come to an abrupt end—by order of the U.S. Forest Service. Environmental groups have decided to rush back to court to try to save the land that was one of the most unusual in the nation.

RWANDAN ARMY SHELLS STADIUM, KILLS 20

NAIROBI—A Rwandan army unit shelled a sports stadium where thousands of panicky refugees from the country's civil fighting had taken sanctuary, killing at least 20 and wounding scores more, as officials said. Abdul Kabiru, director of the U.S. assistance mission in Rwanda, said from Kigali, the capital, that 20 bodies were counted inside the stadium, where about 4,000 civilians have lived, ostensibly under U.N. protection, for a week with little food or water.

NIKON IN SERIOUS CONDITION AFTER STROKE

NEW YORK—Former President Richard Nixon suffered a stroke Monday evening and was rushed by ambulance from his home in New Jersey to a hospital there, where he was reported in serious but stabilizing condition in an intensive care unit. The 81-year-old former chief executive, the only president ever to resign, had not spoken since the stroke occurred at 5:45 p.m. EDT as he was preparing for dinner at his home in Park Ridge, N.J., spokeswoman Kim Taylor said. After falling ill, Nixon managed to summon the housekeeper, who called an ambulance, Taylor said.

HOUSE VOTE NIXES DEATH ROW APPEALS

WASHINGTON—Voters in the House Tuesday guaranteed that no major anti-criminal legislation Congress passes this year will not include an attempt to streamline death row appeals to the federal courts. The House deleted, 270 to 159, Democratic language in a $17 billion crime bill that its sponsors said would have expedited death row appeals and guaranteed prisoners facing the death penalty competent counsel at every stage of their cases. A milder alternative was also rejected on a similar bipartisan vote of 256 to 171.

Tobacco goes under fire
Cancer month points out smoking-related diseases
By Aleksandra Macys

The World Health Organization attributes three million deaths a year to smoking, but top tobacco executives denied charges last week that cigarettes are addictive.

April is Cancer Awareness Month, and executives of the nation’s seven largest tobacco companies, such as R.J. Reynolds and Philip Morris, testified before the House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee.

According to the Value Line Investment Survey, a reference book that lists profits, the net profit for the tobacco industries in 1992 was more than $6 billion.

Projected 1993 profits are reported down because of a price decrease in cigarettes last year, but are estimated at more than $5 billion.

Kevin Lester, spokesman for the American Cancer Society, said 219,000 U.S. citizens will die from smoking this year and 5,300,000 from cancer.

Thirty percent of 161,000 cancer deaths will be smoking-related, he said.

Smoking can prevent lung cancer, but cancer of the mouth, larynx, esophagus, pancreas, areas, kidneys, and bladder, he said.

But tobacco executives denied smoking is addictive, saying that if it were, 45 million U.S. citizens could not have quit smoking since 1974.

Lester said although per capita number of smokers has decreased 3.5 percent between 1973 and 1992, and is the lowest number of smokers since 1964, people are still starting smoking every day.

"If they don’t start smoking in the time they’re 18, they probably won’t," Lester said.

Tobacco executives denied charges that children are lured into smoking through advertising and promotions.

James Johnson, chairman and chief executive of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., said its company did not want its children to smoke, but he would not want to make it too easy to smoke to sustain the industry.

After the tobacco industries’ refusal to add health warnings to cigarettes, the Food and Drug Administration is considering changing the manner in which tobacco companies could be held accountable.

"The FDA decide tobacco companies could be held responsible by tobacco companies, it could label tobacco a drug.

Lester said the administration should regulate cigarettes because other items, from vitamins to meal, have been regulated as a drug.

"The FDA controls everything else, cigarettes shouldn’t be exempted," he said.

Earth Day festivities plant, reap for future generation
By Stephanie Moleti

Earth Day is a time to take action and improve our planet for the next generation.

This upcoming generation will help ensure a better environment, as area children participate in hands-on contests and activities.

The U.S. Corps of Engineers at Rend Lake is hosting more than 500 children from area schools to participate in a variety of programs involving nature and environmental restoration.

The full day of activities include a live stream program, programs to teach students about the wetland of Rend Lake and a study of the aquatic environment and wildlife of a wetland area.

Rich Zunetta, a park ranger for the corps, said a wildlife rehabilitator will show children birds and nests.

Nearly 200 children are scheduled to plant native prairie grasses and flowers in a new prairie demonstration area behind the visitors center.

Members of the Native Plant Society also will help children identify native plants and explain their importance.

The Franklin-Williamson Bi County Health Department will be offering free blood pressure and cholesterol screening.

Alcohol and Substance Abuse Education coordinator for the Franklin-Williamson Bi County Health Department, said they also will discuss soil erosion prevention.

The University Museum and the SIUC Department of Mines and Minerals will have exhibits set up throughout the day.

Zulu tribesman optimistic about African elections
By Kyle J. Chapman

To some SIUC students, South Africa is a war-torn, racist country, but to one man it represents the honors of reality that he and his family have endured for as long as he can remember.

Vusimuzi Ngubane, a Zulu tribesman and a junior in mechanical engineering, has not returned to South Africa to see his family for two years.

For the first time, the South African government will have all race elections that may end white supremacy in the country on April 27, but have been hampered by violence from black political groups who benefit from the apartheid government.

Ngubane said the militant political violence has prompted speculation among diplomats and peace monitors that the election might have to be delayed to allow time to settle differences between whites and the African National Congress.

Ngubane said when he was in the capital, South Africa, he was not sure what the media allows to be seen and what not actually is happening to his people.

"The American media doesn’t report all the information.

People in the United States will learn very little about what’s going on in South Africa from the news," he said.

"They don’t show the things that are happening in the homelands or in the smaller townships and most of the killing takes place in the urban centers," he said.

"Groups like the Inkatha Freedom Party should have their separate political power so they can establish a separate state. The underlying factor for groups like this is political power.

Despite the claim, Ngubane said he looked for blacks as blacks marrying the first all-race election and controlling the political power of South Africa, but blacks own little land and there are uncomfortable voices.

Although most 80 percent of the land in South Africa and the population is four million Black South Africans and 15 percent of the land and they are 5 million of them, he said.

The new government will have to figure out how to get the black people who are seen as "out of place" into the African way of life.

Despite the 50 percent of white, supremacists, all groups should have input in a majority ruled government in all of South Africa, Ngubane said.

I would like to see violence stopped and people of all races show the lease of love to each other, I would like to see the rights of black people being taken care of, but I would like to see the recognition of their own," he concluded.

Most important, I would like to see majority rule without coercion, the minority should be able to have input too.

SIUC students running race; rectals viewed as marathon
By Heather Burrow

SIUC Student Min Hui Chen will participate in a marathon today, but she will depend on other sources of fuel.

Chen, a performance student in the School of Music, will perform at 8 p.m. at the Old Capitol Foundation Hall. Her recital will consist of three Italian and one Latin song.

The recital is open to the public.

"The teaching is on an instrument that I have never played. I have to work on it before I can play it," Chen said.

"All students majoring in music must perform a recital their junior year. According to music school's requirements, a full recital, which last 25 to 30 minutes, must be performed during students’ junior year. A full recital must be performed by March 29th," Wang said.

Chen says she has had a voice teacher who teaches vocal music and some literature. The other lesson is with local vocal coach Margaret Simmons, who teaches musical ideas and Latin phrases.

Chen, a native of Shanghai, is Jeannine Wagner, and she and her classmates have worked with Chen almost every day for the last couple of weeks preparing for the concert.

"Singing is very physical and is like preparing for a marathon," Wagner said.

"Basically, Min Hui is performing a 25-minute marathon every week," Wagner said.

Logo illustrates healthier lifestyle
By Aleksandra Macys

SIUC student Jack Fuller is $50 richer after designing the new logo for Peer Health Advocates.

The Peer Health Advocates logo was chosen by the agency POWER (Peers On Wellness Education, Radically!) within a yellow and purple star bust.

Fuller said the words focus on education and organization of students.

Peer health advocates work with students to promote a healthy lifestyle through workshops and other programs.

Our logo is a cartoon of a boy in a pair of glasses with a pair of icons, theme weeks and one-on-one referrals.

"It can become advocates by completing an application and successfully completing HEED 403," Fuller said.

"Peer health advocates is a certification," Fuller said.

Fuller, a graduate student in forestry from Temple, Texas, is awarded a $550 prize by Carol Johnson for the new Peer Health Advocates Logo.

Students mobilized, worked with Spiwak

AS STUDENTS GO TO THE BALLOT BOOTH today to elect a new USG president for next year, it seems an opportune time to sit back and look over the performance of the outgoing student government and student body president, Mark Spiwak.

When Spiwak was elected to office April 21 last year, his Alliance party won a landslide victory over the incumbent Bradford Cole, 1,876 to 695.

Students wanted a change. That was obvious enough in the voting and subsequent election draw for 5,000 students last year, compared to only 1,325 voters in 1992.

The newly elected president promised to "open up the Undergraduate Student Government to inform, educate and serve the students."

HAS SPIWAK MANAGED to DO THAT in the last year? While Spiwak may not be able to boast of many victories this year, he succeeded in bringing issues to the students attention and getting them to act on these issues. Some issues that were brought up were important to SIUC students and the community in general, too.

The bar-entry age, R-1 zoning, the athletic fee issue, the tuition increase, even the Crimea issue.

Of course, a mass-lying walk-out protest march may not be the most radical act, but the fact that many students were informed of the issue, were filed up by Spiwak and his gang to show up and take the streets was remarkable enough.

Spiwak also managed to rally student support from students of some of the more boisterous city council meetings.

Too much discussion, endless meetings, forums and even more events, the bar-entry age was raised to 18 and a half.

The students at these meetings pressured the city council to make the decision to raise the limit by just 1 year, but that changed to 19 since then.

The voice of the students and the show of numbers was obviously an important factor.

Spiwak may have lost the battle, since he would have liked to see the age limit remain at 18, but to ensure a vote in the students, it was a necessary decision for students, but the students mobilize to voice their opinion on an issue, a freeing occurrence at this University.

At the same time there were some occasions when Spiwak failed to make a stand.

IN HIS ELECTION PLATFORM, SPIWAK pledged not to support any fee increase unless the student body was in favor of it. When the Board of Trustees voted on the issue of a 3 percent tuition increase however, Spiwak was missing from the meeting, having handed the say in the matter to another official, not a member of the USG. This caused some unhappiness, both on the part of some officers of the USG and the students themselves, because the increase was approved.

All in all, the most important thing Spiwak and the USG has done is to bring the issues in the open and to mobilize students on these issues.

Letters to the Editor

P olitical correctness goes too far

Just the other day I was reading an article about a dispute over the changing of terms used to describe race. It talked about the tension that arises out of misuse of certain words in describing people of different ethnic groups. Nowhere in the world has this issue been so publicly discussed as in the United States.

The following is my opinion of the "politically correct" speech that has taken hold of American society. One of the things that has fascinated people around the globe for decades is how the U.S. has somehow, successfully managed to combine myriad culturally diverse peoples under one name, Americans. I think most would agree that America is a diverse world personality. Certainly other factors come into play, but the most important in achieving this global notoriety is our society's ethnic diversity and how it is portrayed on the media with the U.S. has spanned the globe.

My question is why do we insist on separation when it was the coming together that really formed this dynamo nation? The separation is the use of racial descriptors as it was in the first names. To request, even demand, that all in society heed the cultural lines that divide us and refer to people as Asian, African-Americans, or Hispanics or Japanese. In this context, any out of time to ask to be referred to as a Scottish-Irish-German-French American.

Retaining our heritage is a noble and necessary goal. But must we so "retain our heritage" that we forsake that proud heritage for and won't do so. That is the heritage we ourselves either voluntarily or involuntarily adopt as citizens of the United States. Americans.

This heritage has guaranteed us freedom. The freedom that without which we would not be able to pursue learning about our diverse roots by those Irish, African, or Asian, the one same country we so to speak.

It is this central freedom that we all share, the commonality which makes us Americans. It is not the loss of our individual heritage we should fear. It is the loss of our shared heritage that will lead to the ultimate destruction of the freedom that make this country great.

If the value of this freedom and the problem related with divided cultures living in close proximity are not readily apparent then I suggest we look closer at the strife in Bosnia, South Africa, the Gaza Strip, or even between the frat and the sorority and other similar neighbors to the north. Is this the type of heritage we want our grand children to inherit?

If I see you on the street the only name by which I wish to be known is that my parents gave me. If you must refer to my nationality, I am American. And in what I've written offends then forget me too, like the rest of us. I am also human.

-Brent A. Streicher, graduate student, communications

Anti-Holocaust advertisement good, shows Smith's hatred, ignorance

I am happy that you printed the article by Reader, Smith about the most recent history. Idiots on parade! A freak show! All the fadists, hipsters, freaks, losers, morons, jerks, clowns, pigs, and nuts, to name a few, creep out of the woodwork in order to display their ignorance. Smith, non-Christian bush baboon.

I love it. There is no better way to display how little Smith really cares about the suffering of the Jewish people than his behavior. Smith's arguments and the hatred which motivates them by him against them in public view, and no better way to value the people who believe at the price he spews than watching the world for his benefit. Put an ad in the paper. Hell, do it again. Let his voice be heard.

In no time, the word of intelligence will blow the stink of his breath away. How interesting to see persecution posing as integrity, and tapacousness as intelligence. And for some public data loss, the DH has to perform or some responsibility you have to present the "truth" and not give me a break. As if news was ever presented as a public service. That's why a news event is called a story. You can say what you want, and print what you want. And guess what? If I don't like it, I can write a letter. Or read another paper. Or not. So, thanks for printing a loser ad which annoyed everybody. At least it was better than the typical abortion letters that run eight months out of the year.

"Schindler's List," best movie made, testament to horror of Holocaust

"Whoever saves one life saves the world entire." Some people may recognize the origin of this statement from the movie "Schindler's List," but few realize the power it conveys to be the greatest movie picture ever made. Everyone should see this testament of the six million Jews murdered by the Nazi Party during World War II. "Schindler's List" gives us real people, real places, and actual events woven together to present a story that there was never a Holocaust. I have seen the film twice now — first with friends in the theater and the second time with my stepfather and sister. It moved me beyond belief. The second time I watched the film I sat at it in amazement and found myself crying uncontrollably. The next time I cried but not as hard. I got angry. I was angry that all of this had happened — that these people were killed because of their religion. Why? They all had families, loved ones, good friends like all of us, but most of all they all had a chance. Spielberg's film delivers the Holocaust in all of its bloody realism. Spielberg's epic shows the Holocaust is not a product of someone's imagination but a cruel and horrible nightmare that we must embrace in our history. It is from this history we must keep clear in our minds for all time. I have seen it myself in my entire school, and I have studied the Holocaust was in junior high through to Mr. Jim Stalker. "Schindler's List" has made a tremendous effort to even Spielberg for making it. Not only was it a test on my understanding of humanity. It shows the value of one life — what it is worth to one and what its impact on others can be. Spielberg has paid Schindler's speech at the end is speaking for all of us. It is asking those of us who choose to have a life worth keeping. We are all Schindler's list is simply the greatest film ever made. It is superbly acted, timely, and wonderfully directed. Each person I've talked to who has watched the film and learned more, becomes a better lesson on a lesson in humanity. Steven Spielberg, through his film, can teach us something.

Raine. THE ANNOUNCED
CLINTON calls for increased federal aid

WASHINGTON - President Clinton Tuesday responded to the recent shooting of a teacher at a suburban Washington high school by saying the federal government should help pay for security measures, such as metal detectors in schools that need them.

"Until we get pans out of the hands of our young people, every school that needs it should have whatever security it needs to take care of that," Clinton said. "You ought to be safe at school.

Clinton made his comments at a special 90-minute forum on violence on MTV, the cable network where he asked younger voters in a campaign appearance nearly two years ago. He was responding to a question from Brandon Dortch, a 14-year-old junior at Largo High School - Largo, Md., who referred to the recent shooting of teacher Harrison Miles by a student who was attempting to sell his father's teacher's service.

"We can't afford to have metal detectors on our doors because we have too many students. They don't have hand-held metal detectors because we have too many students," Dortch said. "What can you do for a school like ours to get funding for something like this?"

Clinton, who is appearing at a number of crime events in the House this week, noted that the Senate version of that bill contains $300 million in funding for safe schools that could be used to purchase metal detectors. "I think every school that needs it ought to have this kind of security," he said. "People should be safe in the schools and they ought to know when they get there they're going to be safe.

The forum, which included 2016-2017 adult hold and aired on MTV last night, was largely devoted to such voter subjects as juvenile crime, gang control, the illegal use of guns, the problem of drug use, and the role of the police in punishing drug users.

Dara Lynne, 17, of Bethesda, Md., told Clinton that the recent suicide of Virginia singer Kurt Cobain "exemplified the emptiness that many in our society feel, the lack of importance that we are living on life." Henry Culpepper, a Washington student representative on the Board of Education, asked the president why some children are "paid to go to school" and why the money spent on dollars dealing drugs can be expected to "leave this negative behavior."

PETS OF THE WEEK

"Fluffy" is a six-year-old long-haired domestic Calico cat that is spayed and declawed. "Rover" is a six-year-old male Husky and black and tan mix puppy. Both animals, along with many more, are available for adoption at the Southern Illinois Humane Shelter located off of Route 13 West between Carbondale and Murphysboro. The shelter offers adoption of healthy pets at a minimum cost. The shelter urges those interested in adopting to apply in person.

Panels offer hope,
memory of victims
at Newman Center

Student Health Programs

Take a moment and breathe in the life, love and joy that is the essence of winter. In spring, our awareness shifts to love and sunshine, activities as well as educational pursuits.

At SIUC there are diverse educational opportunities to broaden our views.

As university students, we have chosen to experience diverse cultures, trails, environments, races, cultures, religions and lifestyles.

Another challenge to broaden our awareness through a diverse educational experience is here.

Instead of going to another lecture, presentation, or reading another text, you are invited to intellectually, physically, emotionally, and spiritually experience part of the AIDS epidemic.

On April 28-29, Monday-Wednesday, panels from the NAMS Project AIDS Memorial Quilt will be at the Newman Catholic Student Center.

The Quilt is a symbol of compassion and unity and memorializes those who have died of AIDS.

Currently the quilt has 26,613 panels and continues to grow.

AIDS quilt projects in 23 countries worldwide

Panels are created by family members, parents, siblings, children, lovers, friends, and even those who are dying of the AIDS virus. Each panel is three feet by six feet.

Panels are constructed of a variety of fabric materials and can include pictures, artwork, flowers, poetry, and haiku.

Panelists are often bright and colorful, full of memories of a life that once was, and lives of those who remember.

Some of the panels bear the names of those who have died.

Over 10% of the names are incomplete.

A reason for concealing full names is the fear of oppression that people with AIDS and their families feel.

On October 11, 1987, the Names Project placed the Quilt for the first time on the Capitol Mall in Washington, DC.

Since that time, the Quilt has inspired people to become involved in their own community's response to the AIDS epidemic.

This event is co-sponsored by the Newman Catholic Student Center, SIU Student Health Programs Wellness Center, Southern Illinois Regional Effort for AIDS, University Christian Ministries, SIU Triangle Coalition, SIU Gay, Lesbian, Bisexuals, and Friends, and Club Parade.

Whether it be creating a panel, visiting a quilt display, reading a panel, or witnessing the reaction of others, the quilt experience involves mourning, compassion, fear, despair, pride, and hope.

A new awareness experience for all of us at SIUC.

For more information, contact the Student Health Programs Wellness Center at 532-4441.

TROJAN RIBBED for the UNITY PARTY'S Pleasure

THE UNITY PARTY WILL GIVE YOU A CONDOM SO THEY CAN SCREW YOU TOO.

The Progressive Party posted similar fliers on campus this week.

"I've come out with opposition to Shultz's platforms, because his platforms are not as clearly sound for the student body. This (poster campaign) is just a personal attack on me," Shultz said. Other candidates should not take his posters personally, he added, because he is only commenting on their political remarks.

Shultz is a political type environment on campus right now. I'm not taking it personally if other parties attack me — I'm just helping myself," said. "If people don't take it personally, we'll be able to win, as the other parties.

Craig Lee, FESC election commissioner, said although there are rules concerning size and placement of posters, there are no specific content guidelines.

Shultz said the committee had to submit his funding allocation request to the Finance Committee on April 20. Later in April, they told him it had been lost.

International students requested to participate in wellness tours

By Aleksandra Macys
Health Reporter

Snacks and prizes such as film and coupons for local merchants are available to international and minority students who participate in the Wellness Center tour this week.

Nokitta Dean, an undergraduate at social work in Chicago, will lead the tour, which begins with a description of the center's services. Participants also will meet with center members.

Pathfinders from each of the center's programs, including tips on exercise, bath control, drinking problems, and stress, will be available.

A video describing available services will be shown, followed by a focus group, where coordinators ask about major health concerns and barriers students encounter at the Health Service.

Annette Vaillancourt, assistant coordinator of stress management at the center, said most students are not aware of the services available.

"Students are sometimes told by their RA's resident assistant that they have to come here because of a drug write-up or alcohol violation," she said.

Vaillancourt said there is much more to the center than students' common misperception that they must have a problem before visiting.

"The goal is to help people make positive, healthy choices," she said.

Vaillancourt studied the use of the center between August 1993 and April 1994 and found Asian and African-American students use the center at a higher rate than their enrollment percentage.

The study also showed females use the center 3.3 percent more than males.

She said most services only are available to students, but community members are welcome to attend any programs sponsored by the center.

Vaillancourt said because of time, participants are not given a tour of the other health services on campus, such as the counseling center and the Student Health Assessment Center.

For more information on the tour or to register can call Vaillancourt at 586-4421.

Difference dominates city band

By Matthew Lamacki and Melissa Edwards
Entertainment Writer

The name Sinister Dane may remind one of a piddly pooh, but for one St. Louis band it spells success.

Sinister Dane, predicted by MTV's Thomas the Man on the street to make it big in 1994 with the release of its new album in mid-June, is performing tonight at D'Lars.

Rex Summers, guitarist for the band, said their music is influenced by the SHA and reggae sound, but it's mostly hard-core.

No doubt the band is compared to others such as Bad Brains and Black Sabbath, although Summers said the group is successful because it does not have just one sound.

Fans are attracted because we are different... it's the way we use our influences," he said.

He said the group writes about whatever happens to the band, or the songwriter that day, and says the band is political, but has fun.

The band, which is also comprised of bassist Donald Williams, vocalist Joe Sears, and drummer Matt Martin will shoot raw footage at the Hangar for an upcoming video, so anyone with MTV connections should attend the concert.

"This band definitely deserves to be signed, Summer said.

Summers said the band heard horror stories about how record companies take advantage of bands, but they have not had major problems.

But the music industry is unsure how to take Sinister Dane. They are a bre-racial band, which makes them something of a rarity, and Summers said the industry is unsure how to market them.

"The music industry is pretty racist," he said. "We don't claim sides -- we don't notice the color of people's skin, what kind of car they drive..."

Sinister Dane was formed in 1988, and has developed a following throughout the Midwest and Northeast.

The band has played shows with other well known bands such as Public Enemy, E-40-Make, 24-7 Spyz and Living Colour.

And what does Summers see in his future? "Eaze and fortune, the good life!

"I just want to make enough money so I can buy my mom a TV," he said.

Info highway clogged with traffic, mess

By Guy Gugliotta
The Telegraph

Late last year, Martha Glazner logged on to the information superhighway with an electronic cry for help. "We have been told that any piece of furniture over three feet high must be bolted to a wall." Even the stars and federal officials are getting involved. Writing on a web, her desk sat in a state climatic model. The last digit of a population forecast, she contended with the outside world.

Here, finally, was Woods Gubric's Traffic Road vision explained an "endless skew" of telephone lines, satellites, uplands, and downslopes recording the complaints, suggestions and benefits of or where 2 million federal employees embarked on a nationwide effort to make a government that works better and costs less." This Land is Your Land.

"Think about this for a few minutes," wrote Fred Delaney in a Feb. 11 complaint about safety reports. "I am in an ONE organization, but multiply it out today. I had to locate ... a SIX-page MSF's Material Safety Data Sheets for FLUID STICK."

The "Sixlegs" computer forum opened Sept. So Vice President Air Force and has National Performance Review could gather boxes for their cause to expense relief from regulations from the government wide books.

But advocates suggest being federal workers have found Sixlegs to be a great place to pontificate, plug, share information and kibitz. Reading the traffic is a hit like easy-casual-reading on a nationwide coffee break.

So one knows who works for what agency or where they are located, but everybody knows the special bonuses that Big Brother can provide.

Dennis Egan, one of the architects of Sixlegs, says the network's secret is "in the mess, and let people talk." Egan harnesses the good stuff for three every couple of weeks but stays out of the way the rest of the time.

Everything's fine, except that Sixlegs still hasn't been purged, so months-old conversations are still on the wavelength.

It's beginning to look, a bit like the mess it was designed to clean up.

"My long-term goal, even before I came to SIUC, was to become involved in a private, Christian College and an administrator and this new job helps in that pursuit," Riggleman said. "In addition to serving as an assistant coach at Bethel College, I will also be working in the development office with special projects."

Bethel College is a Missionary-Church affiliated school that has almost tripled its enrollment during the seven years. As an NAIA school, Bethel is regarded as one of the fastest growing colleges in the country with early 1,350 students enrolled this year.

One of Riggleman’s additional tasks as head coach at Bethel will be to direct and host the National Christian College Baseball Tournament at the school.

Bethel College Athletics Director Beth Lysaght said Riggleman offers more than just guidance for the schools baseball program. "Riggleman will be a great asset to our athletic program, but will also be a fine addition to the college family and community," he said. "Our coach (Dick Patterson) is retiring at the end of this season, and it is important for us to find the right man to run the program. Riggleman has the experience, enthusiasm and ambition to join us."

"We are associate head coach Ken Henderson will now take on expanded duties for the remainder of the spring campaign so his leadership abilities might be better displayed," Hart said.

Riggleman also cited his support behind Henderson, who came to SIUC four years ago from Jim Brewer Baseball Academy where he served as head assistant. "Henderson will immediately be given opportunities to showcase his strengths and skills, and handle the club in a variety of ways," Riggleman said. A classy Riggleman expressed words of disappointment for his winning percentage at SIUC, but he said believes the Saluki baseball program to be alive and well. "I certainly felt there was a bit more than a few more wins during my tenure, but there is a bigger picture for me," he said. "I have attempted to approach my job with the highest, personal integrity and honesty, and while I regret not having accomplished more on the field, I believe the character and image of the Saluki baseball tradition remains intact."

An effort was made to speak with Saluki players on Riggleman’s resignation, but no comments were given at this time. SIUC will be in action this afternoon at Austin Peay State and will travel to St. Louis on Thursday.

Son’s efforts result in success

Newsday

Louise Duckles, mother of linebacker John Thierry, has her own style of assessing the National Football League draft this spring, and there is a 1,200-mile tunnel to her dreams. "It’s like a dream," she said. "You struggle your life with the children and everything. It’s like you made it."

"Making it is hearing your son’s name called among the first 10 in the first round Sunday, when draft notices go out at the Marriott Marquis in Manhattan," she said. "It’s being proud of your son’s efforts and accomplishments. It’s a very important game academically and athletically. They’re a 6-10, 250-pound line from Alcorn State, a predominantly black school located in Lorman, Miss. (enrollment 300)." By last December, he had mastered enough chemistry and biology classes during his career in the Football League. "Analytical Chemistry is the toughest one, with the lab work and everything. I believe he’s going to be accepted into the P.H.D. program in biochemistry at Indiana University in Bloomington.

From Steve Irwin who was the No. 2 individual finisher at Bradleys, it was a little trouble with putting and chipping, he was hitting short shots," Shanefelt said. While Shanefelt has gotten some help from his middlemen, he hasn’t seen the fall potential this spring from his top golfer from the fall, Sam Scheibel. Scheibel shot as high as 91 this spring, but this weekend there was no score, he said, as he shot a 70 in a round at Bradleys.

"If Sam is able to turn it around here at the end of the season, he’s going to be very competitive coming into the end of the season," Besard said. The Saluki’s will compete at Drake on April 28 and 29.

The deciding factor in this game may be whether the Sycamore hurlers can contain the Saluki hitters and if the Saluki hitters can come through with clutch hits.

Breechlebuser said it would be nice to score early and put 11 runs in a hole from the beginning. "If we can come in and score quietly, we should be alright, but you never know," she said. "The longer we leave the team in the game the more scrappy they get."

The action gets underway today at 1 p.m. The Salukis will resume action on Thursday with their final home games of the season against SIU-C.

College player tosses nightshy pizzas for slimmer body, more opportunities

Nowaday

Consuming large quantities of food wasn't so much an obsession with Dan Wilkinson. Call it more of an involuntary reflex, kind of like breathing is to the rest of us. "I could eat all through the night," said Wilkinson, the 6-foot-4, 305-pound defensive tackle from Ohio State. "I'd get back from a party at 3 a.m. in the morning and have a pizza."

All right pieces? No problem. Wilkinson's passion for virtuals was understandable.

After all, being the next-youngest of 11 children—not to mention one of the biggest kids you could ever imagine—seems to make one a bit more aggressive than usual at mealtime.

By age 12, that much was clear. Wilkinson weighed a whopping 270 pounds and was nicknamed "Big Daddy" by his seventh-grade coach.

Actually, it got too crazy after a while. Try 348 pounds too crazy. When Wilkinson showed up at Ohio State in 1991 looking more like Refrigerator Perry than Reggie White, his coaches weren't exactly thrilled about his penchant for food.

They told him in no uncertain terms: Lose some weight, or think about doing something else.

The end result: Wilkinson shed 60 pounds as a freshman, was switched from offensive to defensive tackle, and eventually developed the skills that today make him the country's most coveted college player.

The dictionary has at least three definitions for "value." So do we.

Riggleman hangs up Saluki spikes

By Grant Deady

Saliu head baseball coach Sam Riggleman announced he's stepping down at the end of the 1994 season after five years at the helm.

"I certainly wish there had been a few more wins during my time here, but there is a bigger picture for me."

—Sam Riggleman

The 42-year-old Saluki skipper has accepted the head baseball coaching position at Bethel College in Mishawaka, Ind.

Riggleman stepped into fill the shoes of former Saluki head coach Buddy Jones following the 1990 season after serving as the team's pitching coach for two years.

"After four years of achieving and collecting titles at Southern Illinois University, I find it necessary to resign my position," Riggleman said. "I believe it is in the best interest of the Saluki baseball program and my personal and professional career."

In 16 years as a collegiate coach, Riggleman posts a 347-299-1 record including this season's current mark of 15-18. The Manfield, Ohio, native is 81-115-1 in his four seasons at SIUC.

Riggleman is highly regarded for his knowledge about pitching and has coached six hurlers over the years that have signed professional contracts.

The most notable pitcher Riggleman has guided is Tim Belcher of the Chicago White Sox. Riggleman coached Belcher at Mount Vernon Nazarene before he became the first player selected in the 1985 Major League Baseball Draft. Belcher went on to be a starting pitcher in the 1988 World Series and finished third in the "Rookie-of-the-Year" balloting.

Riggleman's duties in his new position at Bethel will go beyond just coaching baseball, which he says helps fulfill a long awaited career aspiration.

Dawgs prepare for invitational at Drake after breaking slump

by Karyn Vivenito

Sports Reporter

When Saluki men's golf coach Gene Shanholtz first took the team in the fall of 1992, his team won their very first tournament with him as head coach.

Shanholtz is 1-0 coming out of the blocks, but little did he know that it would be the only win until just last weekend when his team took first in the Bradley Spring Invitational.

"I have the same kids back this year that were here last year, and they have really gotten through a "spring" of experience," he said. "In the fall we had a lot of third place finishes and last spring I had to miss the conference championships due to an accident, so it has been a very conditioning year for us."

Shanholtz said he has seen the possibilities this spring despite the bad weather conditions have been hindering the team.

"In Florida the weather was perfect, but after that we were at Southwest Missouri where it rained and snowed, and at Wichita State the weather was extremely windy, he said. "At Bradley, the winds were around 65 mph but out kids hung in there and were able to pull out the win."

After breaking their winning slump, the Salukis must now prepare for an invitational at Drake next weekend where they will face 20 teams that include all Missouri Valley Conference teams except Tulsa.

For the Salukis, the strongest opponent this season has been Wichita State, and even there SIUC edges out the Shockers with two out of three victories against them this year.

Non-Conference Iowa State has also proven tough, but the Salukis have hung on to beat them three times this season.

With all the potential success that awaits, it is a wonder why the Salukis have been in their slump.

And coming into competition with a recent tournament win under their belts, the confidence level should begin to rise, Shanholtz said.

"These kids are starting to see the light at the end of the tunnel and are getting their confidence back," he said. "It's hard to keep at the mental level of a college see GOLF, page 18

Saluki to take on Indiana State; players' skills evenly matched

By Chris Walker

Sports Reporter

The SIU men's tennis team hopes that they will not be tapping their heels and saying "there's no place like home," beginning this afternoon as they continue Missouri Valley Conference action.

The remainder of the Saluki schedule calls for five games which is the equivalent of five doubleheaders on the season.

The Salukis first five remaining stops are in Terre Haute, Ind. where they face the 18-16, 3-5 Indiana State Sycamores.

The two teams match-up in separate ways. The Salukis were swept by Northwestern Iowa but swept Drake. The Sycamores did the exact opposite as they were swept by Drake but swept Northern Iowa.

Unfortunately the two team's coaches know what they are doing and are doing it well. They have combined for 43 years of coaching and 831 victories.

SIUC head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said either team could win both of these duals.

"Which ever team comes out ready to play is going to win," Brechtelsbauer said. "It's pretty much in their players hands."

Today's games match-up the Salukis, who lead the MVC in hitting, and the Sycamores, who are third in hitting in the Valley. The top two hitters in the conference will go at it. Schultek leads the MVC with a .470 average and ISU's Lew Twiggs (.451) is second.

Pitching has been a different story for the Sycamores. Their pitching staff's .59 ERA is only good for sixth in conference and they have to try to contain a Saluki lineup that features eight regulars who are hitting .300 or better.

On the other hand, the Salukis 246-ERA team is good for sixth in conference and they are headed by one of the conference's top hurlers in senior Tania Meier, Meier, 84-4 with a 1.80 ERA, has won 21 games in her career at SIUC including nine shutouts.

Meier fired a two-hit shutout against the Sycamores last season.

Freshman makes difference on field, batter's box

By Chris Walker

Sports Reporter

Last weekend the four seniors on the SIUC softball team went out on their final year at the University. As Saluki fans watched the seniors in their final MVC home games, it was true to the downward trend of freshman Jamie Schultek.

A little more than an hour after SIU head coach Kay Schulteck prasured the seniors in a pre-game ceremony Schulteckobbled a grand slam over the left field fence to end the game and highlight a 2-1 win over BFI. Ett. She became the eighth Saluki to hit a homerun out of the IAW Field upper diamond.

Although less heralded in the second game of the twinbill, Schulteck still batted .541 with six runs scored while going 9-for-17 on the season. Schulteck has enjoyed several successful games in her first season at SIUC and all together this area standout from Herrin has made an immediate impact both on the mound and in the batter's box.

SIUC head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said Schultek was a part-time hitter when she saw her in high school, but she did not know how soon she would see this kind of play out of her swaggering swing.

"You never know with a freshman how quickly they will adapt," Brechtelsbauer said, "They're not bad with bat or glove, but sometimes mental skills match up."

Schulteck adapted quickly. She enters today's action hitting .470 with a .707 slugging percentage.

The mound Schultek has stifled the bats of the opposition. She has posted an 8-4 mark with a 2.22 ERA.

Schulteck has held the opposition to a .219 batting average and has blazed them twice this season.

Before SIUC, Schulteck enjoyed several successful high school years. She led Herrin High School to a second-place finish at the Class AA State Championships in 1993. In her senior season she was 5-0 with a 0.58 ERA while hitting .484 and driving in 26 runs.

Bretchelsbauer said that Schultek has the skills to become both a successful pitcher and hitter and she has shown her capabilities so far in her freshman season.

"She has got the skills to be successful," Brechtelsbauer said. "I'm excited with her potential."
