Native voices and rhythmic drums called out the rarely heard but familiar sounds of the American Indian culture to John Rivera at a pow wow.

Rivera, an American Indian, appreciates his culture displayed by other American Indians through a variety of dances and clothing.

"A pow wow is an opportunity for me to be with people who are like me," Rivera, a senior in biology from Lake Villa, said. "I don't normally have the opportunity to do that."

The American Indian Association of SIUC sponsored the second annual Pow Wow Program, "Spirits of the Midwest Pow Wow," Saturday at the National Guard Armory, 900 W. Sycamore St.

A pow wow allows American Indian tribes to display their cultures. Involving songs and dances, pow wows usually last for two to three days at a time.

Historically, pow wows were a time of celebration and togetherness. They allowed the opportunity for trade as well as families to celebrate together.

Now, pow wows are a way to dispel stereotypes and educate people about American Indians.

Iris Creasy, president of the American Indian Association, said the main purpose of a pow wow is to present the American Indian culture to other people.

"This is a chance to get and share our culture with ourselves as well as others," Creasy said.

A variety of different costumes were worn by the dancers at the pow wow representing a variety of dance styles.

Some women wore jingle dresses, also known as prayer dresses. Stories say the dress appeared in a medicine man's

COLA dean candidate turns down SIUC's offer

NO, THANKS: Texas A&M official declines; search may be delayed for another year.

J. MICHAEL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The College of Liberal Arts finalist for dean declined SIUC's offer and took a position elsewhere, leaving officials considering delaying the search a year.

Herman Faatkamp, professor and chairman of the Philosophy Department at Texas A&M, was the finalist to take COLA's top position Aug. 16 to fill the vacancy left by John Jackson when he became provost in January 1997.

Faatkamp interviewed for four other positions across the nation and accepted an offer made by the Indiana University at Indianapolis for an unknown amount.

Jackson, former COLA dean and current vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, made the announcement at the Faculty Senate meeting Tuesday.

Jackson negotiated with Faatkamp and would not disclose the offer SIUC made to him. He said Faatkamp's decision was related to moving to Southern Illinois. Faatkamp also was concerned the college's support budgets for travel, telephone and other expenses were insufficient, Jackson said.

Jackson noted the recommendation of the COLA dean search committee to before he decides how the search will progress.

"Whether or not we need another year is not clear to me," he said. "We could start over."

The COLA search committee consists of COLA faculty, staff and civil service members. The committee met Thursday to decide what should be done now that Faatkamp turned down the position. The members advised Provost Jackson to meet with the chancellor upon receiving a recommendation from the committee.

Search committee chairwoman Marjorie Morgan could not be reached for comment.

Acting Dean Robert Jensen said he thinks the search will see another delay, and he is willing to serve as acting dean until another dean is found.

"I think we're looking for another year," he said.

The search was narrowed down to three finalists, each of which spent two days on campus. All three met with the search committee, and Faatkamp was the only one that met with Jensen. Faatkamp was the last to visit the campus.

Jensen said Faatkamp would have been the best candidate for the college.

"I'm disappointed," he said. "He would have been a marvelous addition to our Philosophy Department. His addition would have been a real boost."

The other two finalists were notified of the college's decision, and the committee found problems with both, Jensen said.

Jensen said colleges sometimes keep a second choice on the back burner in case of a situation like this but said the committee's move was justified.

"It was a perfectly reasonable approach," he said.

"We didn't want to keep anybody in limbo. That's not fair to them. They need to get on with their life."

BAC candidates focus on services

POLITICAL PARTIES:

Debate marked with opinions, strategies, a little bit of squabbling.

TAMEKA L. HICKS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Back and forth, the candidates for the Black Affairs Council squabbled for more than three hours, presenting their best efforts to be elected into the organization's executive office.

During the BAC debate Thursday night, the panel of nine candidates from three parties expressed their views and insights toward the future of the organization. Among the topics discussed were the annual BAC Leadership Conference and a recently proposed task force that would express African-American student concerns with the SIUC administration.

The three parties were the Experienced Party with candidates Sean Smith, Romante Archer and James Morris; Operations Arise Party with candidates Enoch Muhammad and Yvette Johnson; and Forty Acres and a Mule Party with candidates Joshua Polite and Malik Freeman.

As the debate got underway, candidates began to feel the pressure they would face if elected to the council. When asked by an audience member about the programs the candidates for coordinator would like to continue, Joshua Polite answered with confidence.

"The most important programs are those that directly involve the students," said Polite, a junior in political science from Chicago. "Programs like the Welcome Back Party, the Chat 'n' Chew and especially the Black Leadership Conference that brings high-powered speakers like Benjamin Chavez are programs I would like to continue.

"How you get students involved in an organization is that you give service to students."

But when questions concerning his Pan-Hellenic Council status as a possible Priority One organization, like BAC, Polite suspected a bit of unfairness.

Polite, who is the president of Beta Phi Pi Fraternity, said if he became BAC coordinator with the possibility of Pan-Hellenic Council becoming a Priority One organization, there would be no inequity toward either organization.

"It was a lot of mudslinging going on," Polite said after the debate. "The questions that were

U.S., Europe urged to use troops to arrest war criminals

The United States and European nations should order their troops in Bosnia to use force to apprehend indicted war criminals, a panel of experts said Friday.

The failure of these governments to resort to military force to nab war crimes suspects has "elped consolidate Bosnia's ethnic partition between Serbs, Moslems and Croats, said a report by a task force sponsored by the Century Foundation, a private organization that supports work in international law and human rights.

Former chief prosecutor of the international tribunal for the former Yugoslavia Richard Goldstone chaired the task force that included philanthropist George Soros and Nobel Peace Prize winner Elie Wiesel.

"There can be neither lasting peace nor an end to the long national nightmare of Bosnia until all war criminals are arrested and brought to justice," said the report titled "Making Justice Work."

Units from NATO's 31,000-strong force in Bosnia have made four attempts to arrest war criminals in the two and half years since the Dayton peace accord was reached in 1995.

Columbia space shuttle blasts off on brain mission

After a day's delay because of computer problems, shuttle Columbia soared into orbit Friday on a two-week mission to explore the secrets of the brain.

"It's a little bit like a Cecil B. DeMille production; years in the making, cast of thousands, and it went off like it was supposed to," said NASA's chief veterinarian, Joseph Bielitzki.

The space agency expects the mission to provide the best look yet at how the brain and nervous system adapt and develop in weightlessness.

The shuttle vaulted into a clear afternoon sky to the delight of the tens of thousands who jammed the Kennedy Space Center in a postholiday crush.

NASA's oldest shuttle, Columbia's crew consists of seven astronauts and 2,000-plus crickets, rodents and aquatic animals.

Progress Party takes control of USG

SARA BEAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Progress Party took control of Undergraduate Student Government with the election Wednesday, claiming not only the executive offices but a majority of the senate seats.

When final results came in, Progress Party senators took 22 senate seats. The Shakedown Party got another 10 senate seats and the Saluki Party walked away with one.

Progress Party member and College of Business and Administration senator-elect Melissa Carlson said she was surprised at the turnout of the election but thinks the new USG lineup will work well together.

"I think we should all get along well and should be able to get a lot accomplished," Carlson said. "I don't know many of the senators from the other party, but I don't believe there will be a problem."

Progress Party senators swept College of Education, Academic Affairs, COBA, Science, Mass Communications and Media Arts, Greek Row, the West Side and Thompson Point.

The Shakedown Party took the majority of the East Side, filling five of the six seats.

Saluki Party write-in candidate Kevin Buford took one of the two open Brush Towers seats.

There are 41 senate seats representing eight geographic and eleven academic districts.

After the election, eight senate seats remained open in the West Side, Brush Towers, Evergreen Terrace, Southern Hills, College of Education and the School of Social Work.

Trustee meeting hears concerns of international students; takes action

DIFFICULTIES: Focus groups to answer questions of students.

HAROLD G. DOWNS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Asian financial crisis and declining international enrollment prompted the University to develop focus groups that will investigate problems faced by international students at SIUC, administrators say.

The groups will concentrate on the financial difficulties facing international students. SIUC administrators found a need for the groups after international students voiced their concerns to the SIUC Board of Trustees at its March meeting. SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs said.

"This is in response to talking with the students' leadership," Beggs said. "After the board meeting, the students indicated there were other questions and concerns they would like to talk about and address to others."

International students protested outside the meeting while SIUC President Ted Sanders introduced Jo Ann Argersinger as SIUC's next chancellor. The protest called for recognition of international students by the board and a lowering of out-of-state tuition by fall semester 1998. The board approved lowering out-of-state tuition by one-third beginning fall semester 1999; but transfer students from SIUC Nakajo, Japan, will see the lower tuition this fall, which prompted discontent.

At the request of the international students, Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Harvey Welch will head a task force to oversee the discussions. The six or eight groups were scheduled to meet before the end of the semester but now will not meet until fall

Welch could not be reached for comment.

Sanders said addressing international students' concerns is important for student retention.

"[International students] provide an opportunity for American students on our campuses to interact with different cultures much as they will in the global economy," Sanders said.

The details of the discussions have yet to be hammered out, but Beggs said a tentative format has

Tales of the Great

Jewish Mystics

There is a substantial body of Jewish mystical tales that constitute the legendary dimensions of the Jewish tradition. They accompany and in many ways complement a body of mystical Teachings that can broadly be defined as "kabbalistic". These tales cover a range of mystical experiences, not only of mystical union but of visions, dreams, soul travel, encounters with angel and demons, possession by both good and evil spirits, miracles and experiences out of body and out of lines and out of time. This lecture is based on stories collected in the Gabriel's Palace: Jewish Mystical Tales, edited by Howard Schwartz.

History professor wins SIUC Outstanding Teacher of Year award

TOP HONOR:
 Professor loves being involved, teaching students in Carbondale.

BRIAN EBERS
 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Marjorie Morgan says the keys to successful instruction are caring about being a good teacher, being genuinely interested in your students and keeping yourself amused and entertained by what you teach. Morgan, associate professor of history, is the recipient of this year's SIUC Outstanding Teacher of the Year award, an award that pays $5,000. Looking at the award, however, in terms of the amount of time Morgan spends outside class involved with education, the $5,000 equates into pennies on the hour.

"I just love to teach, and I spend a lot of time outside class with my students and being involved with the department and the academic community," Morgan said. "It's what I enjoy."

History Department Chairman David Werlich said Morgan symbolizes the care the department places into core curriculum classes where it is particularly important to shape young minds.

"She is a marvelous teacher in and out of the classroom," Werlich said. "From her mentoring of students to her role with the Undergraduate Studies Committee, Marjorie remains one of our finest instructors."

Phillip Corbell, a senior in electrical engineering from Carterville, is enrolled in a core curriculum class taught by Morgan. Corbell is taking the course to fulfill graduation requirements, but he said Morgan makes the material interesting by provoking intelligent conversation among her students and including their comments into her lecture.

"She does a good job relating the past to present issues," Corbell said. "Her lecture leads up to her asking questions of the students, often controversial, but she won't let things go if she calls on someone who doesn't want to comment. She makes you get involved."

At times, Morgan's lecture is more like a welcomed sermon as is evident by the intelligent and questioning expressions on her students faces. Morgan enlightens the class by encouraging student participation and by taking a genuine interest in what her students take from the lecture.

"The core classes are the most challenging and rewarding," Morgan said. "I enjoy core classes because I like teaching non-majors and I like the diversity in the classroom."

In her History 112 class Wednesday, Morgan lectured about 1960s Chinese culture and got students involved on several levels. One student quoted the Chinese dictator Mao as saying, "I keep my friends close, but I keep my enemies closer." A Chinese student spoke out later, taking the unpopular position by calling Mao a madman, and added a disclaimer that most Chinese believe Mao was a good and prudent leader.

Morgan "got tall" in Los Angeles and later attended high school in New Orleans. As the daughter of college-educated parents, Morgan finished her education with a doctorate in Modern British History from Tulane University in 1988.

She came to SIUC the same year as an assistant professor of history, and was promoted to associate professor in 1994.

Linda McCartney dies at 56

WASHINGTON POST

Linda McCartney, a musician, photographer, noted vegetarian and animal-rights enthusiast who was the wife of the former Beatle, Sir Paul McCartney, died of cancer April 17 in Santa Barbara, Calif. She was 56.

A statement issued by McCartney's office said that Mrs. McCartney, who had been treated for breast cancer from 1995 to 1997, learned in March that cancer had spread to her liver. The statement reported that the McCartneys were on holiday in Santa Barbara, and the couple had been horseback riding two days before her death.

A spokesman for the family said that McCartney has asked that instead of flowers, people make a donation to cancer research or animal welfare charities — or simply "go veggie."

Linda McCartney, who grew up Scarsdale, N.Y., studied art history at the University of Arizona. She then took a job as a receptionist with Town and Country magazine in New York. She began taking pictures of rock groups, including the Rolling Stones. She was acclaimed by one critic for "moody, gritty" studies.

She met her future husband in 1967 while in London and married him there two years later.

After the breakup of the Beatles, Paul McCartney recorded a solo album, "McCartney," in 1970, which sold more than a million copies in mere weeks. The following year, he and Mrs. McCartney, who had learned to play keyboards, synthesizer and percussion, released the album "Ram." It was a popular success but received mixed reviews from critics.

The McCartneys, with guitarist Denny Laine and other musicians, then formed the group Wings, barnstorming the world to critical acclaim. Linda McCartney played the keyboard and sang. The groups albums "Band on the Run," released in 1973, and "Venus and Mars," in 1975, went platinum.

"What we have talked about is that we need to identify seven or eight questions that would be asked in each focus group," he said. "We would have a recorder in each group, and we would have a variety of responses."

Welch, Beggs and Sanders will serve as co-chairmen of the focus groups.

The focus groups will provide a way for both students and administrators to understand each other's viewpoints, Beggs said.

"This is an opportunity for people to listen to varying opinions," Beggs said.

Anthony Huang, a graduate student in journalism from Taiwan who spoke at the board meeting, said the groups are important for international students to voice their concerns.

"Basically, if they have a lot of complaints, they won't talk to anyone," Huang said. "It is a good chance and opportunity to talk."

SIUC's international community has to be tapped into so declining enrollment can cease, Huang said. To do that, Huang said the University's own policies toward international student issues should be amended. Argersinger, who begins at SIUC July 1, must be willing to meet with international students outside of her office for progress to be made, he said.

"They have to address what kind of unique service is it [they provide] because if they don't know why international students are here, then what?" Huang said. "How far can they reach out?"

"SIU should know what kind of service they should provide."

little on accomplishments in the classroom," Morgan said from behind her sturdy desk, supporting the weight of countless papers and folders, which somehow remain in an orderly fashion.

"A weakness of [institutions] overall is that there is not enough reward for teaching," Morgan said.

Having an insightful relationship with history is important to Morgan because it allows her to make sense of the world around her. Morgan said it is important for students to understand current politics in the larger context of the historical arena.

"Leaders talk in terms of the past; they frame policies. And people in the present make decisions based on their leaders," Morgan said. "I think Americans have always been present and future oriented rather than historically based."

Morgan currently heads two academic committees, volunteers for several organizations and has served on 15 master's and doctorate committees at SIUC.

In a Jan. 23 letter of recommendation to the COLA Teaching and Learning Committee, Werlich wrote of Morgan, "In a 30-year career with SIUC's Department of History,

I have not encountered an instructor so inspired, dedicated, and effective as Dr. Morgan. Professor Morgan loves to teach. Her commitment to this vocation has been manifest since her arrival in Carbondale."

From her office in Faner Hall, Morgan said her dedication is ongoing, and she has no plans to slow the wheels of her academic ambitions.

Asked whether she has time to do anything other than study, research and mentor her students, Morgan said she finds time to travel to London every summer to study.

"Well, when I'm in London I am usually doing research or studying," Morgan said. "But I find time to travel around Europe. But even then, I still think about teaching."

dream as an object to heal afflicted people. The dress was first created by a medicine man who believed that if his sick granddaughter wore the dress and danced she would be healed.

The jingle dress is made of rolled up tobacco lids that cling together to produce the jingle sound. It is worn by women who have lung problems or know someone who has lung problems.

Other women wore a Fancy Shawl. This is among the newest form of dance and women's clothing. The large piece of colorful cloth has long fringe hanging from the edges.

When women wear the shawl over the shoulders, they dance as butterflies in flight by spinning and jumping around to the beat of music.

Men's dress is much different from the style of women's dress.

The traditional male dancer wears a porcupine headpiece made of bone, metal, rawhide or leather. The headpiece can then be carved, painted, or beaded. A breast plate is worn that covers to the waist. Armbands are made of leather or beads. Beaded leg bands are also worn. A man might carry a wing fan, a pipe bag or a quirt. The movement of the dancer is to imitate the movement of a prairie chicken or a warrior searching for the enemy.

A pow wow is an opportunity for me to be with people who are like me.

JOHN RIVERA
SENIOR FROM LAKE VILLA

More elaborate costumes were worn by the Oklahoma Feather Dancer, or the fancy dancer. This style is found at many pow wows across the plains. Men paint their legs and faces to add to the costume.

The outfit is covered with beads, leather and feathers that create an authentic design. Moccasins are fully beaded and are worn to the knee.

The dance performed is a simple step with intricate footwork around a drum combined with a spinning and jumping movement.

Eddie Swimmer performed the Hoop Dance, an awesome performance when a more than a dozen hoops are passed around and over the body of the dancer.

The intense dance is 15 minutes of nonstop twirling. The hoops were used to create wings for the dancer and sphere shaped objects.

Creasy stressed the importance of American Indian students taking part in the pow wow to keep in touch with their native culture.

"This may be the only opportunity for students to go to a pow wow while they're in college because of time constraints," she said.

Rivera has only been to a few pow wows but still understands the importance.

"Our main goal is to educate people," he said. "A lot of people still have negative stereotypes and don't realize the amount of American Indian population in Illinois and at SIUC."

After the forces of nature prematurely took hold on the original dog slated to defecate in the "Dog Chip Bingo", a fund-raiser sponsored by Bowyer Hall Council and Residence Halls Association in an effort to raise money for an SIUC canine unit, Bandit, an Alaskan Malamute was called in to perform the duty. However, stagefright prevented Bandit from doing so. (Below) As a replacement for the dogs, Cpl. Ken Sneed of the SIUC Police was blindfolded and spun by (from left) Becky Nowik, a sophomore in cinema and photography from Grand Rapids, Mich., Bowyer Hall Council President Sarah Manning, a freshman in law from Pawnee, and Marla Sweetlin, a second-year graduate student in public administration from Bonnie. Sneed was directed to drop a wallet on the squares. The winner received a $100 gift certificate from the University Mall and the SIUC Police made $250 for a canine unit.

asked, they knew they were unfair. It was quite evident."

Kori Logan, a senior in electrical engineering from East St. Louis and a council member, posed several questions. She said it is important candidates know the operations of the council and have some insight toward the progression of the organization.

"I felt some of the things said by the Forty Acres and a Mule Party was unrealistic," Logan said. "I was impressed with the things Sean and Romante (of the Experienced Party) said because they know and they have been there. But you can't just jump off the top and say you're going to do certain things if you don't know what's going on in the organization."

"This was an opportunity to see what the candidates were really about. [The Forty Acres and a Mule Party] avoided several questions. Some of the candidates' strengths were made apparent, and some of the candidates' weaknesses were made apparent."

Sean Smith, a sophomore in administration of justice from Abilene, Texas, said being a part of the council means to support the African-American population on campus and in the community. He said his one-year experience as a BAC member has provided him with concepts to maintain the positive structure of BAC.

"I want to improve the relationship between the community and the campus," said Smith, a candidate for coordinator. "We have to work together whether we like it or not. The people in the community have power. We have to use that outlet."

"It's all about experience. It's up to the people and their dedication to vote for who they want in the organization to represent them."

Yvette Johnson, a junior in administration of justice from Vista, Calif., presented herself as a "mover, shaker and a doer" during the debate. Johnson, candidate for assistant coordinator, said making African-Americans aware of BAC as a resource will attract more participation and success of African-Americans.

Johnson's main point centered around an effort to increase the low graduation rates of African-American students. Her ideas included providing textbooks for students to borrow throughout each semester.

"I want to let [BAC] be an outlet for students to come to — not just for social events," she said. "We have to try to inch away from only social events and kind of force people to get into something intelligent. We could provide information, scholarship and books. Simple things like that."

BAC member Tenisha Anderson, a senior in marketing from Peoria, said each candidate expressed their individual interests and tactics toward being elected the council. However, each candidate must stick to their proposed plans if they are elected.

"[The debate] was very informative," she said. "All the candidates have good qualities. A lot of points were made, and I wish the best of luck to all of them."

"But, it is important that once they do get into office that they follow what they spoke upon in the debate. Because if they don't do anything, then nothing's ever going to happen."

Administration to announce new rules for juice safety

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration this week will announce new regulations designed to improve the safety of juices, in particular fresh-squeezed varieties such as the bacteria-tainted apple juice that caused one death and widespread illness in western states in 1996.

While many consumers buy expensive fresh-squeezed juices on the belief that they are healthier, food-safety experts say the opposite often is true if these juices have not been pasteurized or undergone other procedures to kill disease-causing organisms.

The Food and Drug Administration this week will seek public comment on proposed new rules that would require nearly all juice-makers to implement these procedures, administration officials said. In the interim, the agency intends to require warning labels on unpasteurized juices to alert consumers that the products can contain hazardous bacteria and pose a special danger to children, the elderly, or people with suppressed immune systems.

Contaminated juices are not a widespread public health problem. The vast majority of juices — some 98 percent — on the market are already pasteurized, regardless of whether they are fresh or made from concentrate, according to government and industry officials.

Even so, in recent years considerable attention has focused on the 2 percent that is not treated. In perhaps the most notorious episode, a 16-month-old Colorado girl died and some 70 other people in Washington and other states became severely ill in 1996 by drinking Odwalla brand apple juice. The juice had become infected with an especially toxic strain of E. coli bacteria, causing kidney failure and heart damage in the girl, Anna Gimmesstad of Evans, Colo.

Under the proposed FDA rules, recently endorsed by senior White House officials, all juice producers would be required to set up procedures to prove to inspectors that they are monitoring health concerns and have sharply reduced the level of microbes that typically are found in untreated juice.

Administration officials said those juice bottlers who already pasteurize their products would most likely have little trouble meeting the new standards, although they must also demonstrate that they are monitoring for pesticide residue and glass shards in their products.

The new regulations also would allow for exceptions. Stores that sell juice for drinking on the premises, such as juice bars, would not be affected. Grocery stores and other retail outlets that press their own juice for sale on the premises but not for broader distribution would not have to pasteurize, but their products would have to carry the warning labels.

President Clinton has put an emphasis on food-safety issues over the past two years, beginning in the 1996 campaign when he and his political advisers were searching for issues that resonated with average voters and were looking for ways to counter conservative claims that the federal government should be scaled back sharply.

The new juice safety procedures mirror those already put in place by the FDA for seafood, which is also under that agency's jurisdiction. The Agriculture Department, which regulates beef and poultry, last year announced new rules designed to reduce contaminated meat.

The new regulations, after being published in the Federal Register, may be revised after a public comment period, but administration officials say they expect them to be in place by the summer.

Gates responds on antitrust controversy, as Windows 98 debuts to public

WASHINGTON POST

SAN FRANCISCO — Think of this as "Windows" week.

On Monday, Microsoft Corp. Chairman Bill Gates will start off the week by debuting the company's newest version of its software for personal computers, the Windows 98 operating system, at an industry trade show in Chicago.

It's the first step in Microsoft's carefully choreographed rollout of the software program: if all goes according to plan, analysts expect that by mid-May Microsoft will send a final copy of the software to personal computer makers so they can begin putting it on their newest machines.

Consumers will be able to get copies of the software either in stores or on new computers on June 25.

Before that happens, however, Microsoft may face objection not from just competitors but from government antitrust forces.

On Tuesday, lawyers for the software company and the Justice Department are scheduled to face off in the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, over whether a federal judge overstepped his authority when he issued a temporary injunction requiring Microsoft offer computer makers a version of its current software, Windows 95, without its Internet Explorer 4.0 browsing software. Microsoft complied with the order but contends that it was made without a proper hearing.

Analysts and legal experts believe that the confrontation is likely to be just a prelude to a more complex battle, namely whether Microsoft has taken advantage of its market clout unfairly and is squelching competition in several software areas.

The Justice Department and a dozen state attorneys general have been weighing taking action against Microsoft. The federal and state lawyers said they were cooperating with one another in the investigations. If they find cause for a complaint, legal experts said, federal and state antitrust enforcers soon might launch their suits together. If the government takes action against Microsoft, it will likely do so before the software company ships its final version of Windows 98, most likely by the end of April.

A sixth title for shaky Bulls anything but guaranteed

3-PEAT: With rumors floating around of Jordan's retirement, the Bulls start their playoff run.

NEWSDAY

If this is Michael Jordan's Farewell Tour, he was reminded last week that a happy ending that includes a sixth NBA title is anything but a sure thing.

First, the Bulls lost in Chicago to the Indiana Pacers, who played better down the stretch of the regular season than any other Eastern Conference team. Then the Bulls got upended in Detroit by the Pistons, who failed to make the playoffs, and Jordan was badly outplayed by Grant Hill, one of the leading candidates to be his successor as the league's leading man.

The Bulls were 69-13 last season, but they lost three of their last four regular-season games. It didn't matter. They went 15-4 in the playoffs on their way to Jordan's fifth title. But this year is different. There's a sense of vulnerability that wasn't there last season.

Toni Kukoc returned to the lineup in Detroit, but center Luc Longley's status remains uncertain because of a bone bruise on his left knee. Not only do the Bulls miss Longley's defensive presence, but he has to be guarded on offense. If the Bulls have to go with Bill Wennington, Dickey Simpkins or Joe Kleine at center, that makes it easier to double-team Jordan, who made only 14 of 44 shots from the field against the Pacers and Pistons.

Jordan got his shot blocked four times by the Pacers, who waited to double-team him until after he beat his first defender. He looked like the younger Jordan, who tried to do too much by himself, and his teammates noticed.

"I think Michael has to make the adjustment," Bulls guard Steve Kerr said. "He has to step back and pass and cut because, right now, they're loading up on him. It's not so much the blocked shots as the fact they're sending a lot of people at him."

Bulls Coach Phil Jackson said his team has had trouble executing on offense recently because Jordan and Scottie Pippen, who often take 50 percent of the Bulls' shots, have been misfiring. Pippen didn't play against the Pistons because of kidney stones.

That left Jordan to carry the full load, and he wasn't up to it against Hill, who covered Jordan one-on-one for much of the game even though they play different positions. The Bulls scored only nine points in the first quarter, and Jordan was scoreless after missing five shots. Hill beat Jordan to the basket with his quickness on offense, and his defense was so strong that he forced Jordan to settle for jump shots.

"Grant Hill was just unbelievable," Pistons Coach Alvin Gentry said. "Holding Michael to 7 of 25 from the field and 19 points was the story of the game. I just thought he did as good a job as you can ever do on Michael Jordan."

Jordan won't see Hill in the playoffs, but he agreed the Pacers' aggressive defense exposed the Bulls' offensive problems.

"I hate to lose, but I'm not going to panic," he said. "I'm not really worried unless (Longley) can't get healthy for the playoffs."

NFL draft almost goes according to plan

NEWSDAY

The two franchise quarterbacks went where they were expected to go, even if the decisions weren't made until the last minute.

The franchise running back went to the team that everyone thought would trade the pick away.

And the controversial wide receiver with all that talent but all that personal baggage slid all the way down to the bottom of the first round.

All was as it should have been — well, sort of — in the glamor portion of Saturday's NFL Draft. As expected, Peyton Manning went to the Indianapolis Colts, but only after Owner Jim Irsay slowly walked up to commissioner Paul Tagliabue to hand him the Indianapolis choice shortly after noon at the Theater at Madison Square Garden. Irsay thus took the first steps toward exorcising the demons of 1983, when his late father, Robert, wound up trading the rights to John Elway to the Denver Broncos because Elway didn't want to play for Frank Kush, then the Colts' coach.

Ryan Leaf, the gunslinging Washington State quarterback with Dan Marino's arm and Brett Favre's bravado, got his wish when he was passed over by the Colts. Leaf spent a good portion of the offseason dropping not-so-subtle hints that he preferred the sunshine of San Diego to the mundane Midwest existence he envisioned for himself in Indianapolis.

And if you think the Chargers weren't tickled to get Leaf, then all you had to do was see Owner Alex Spanos gush over the kid he believes will turn out to be the next best thing to Dan Fouts.

"Boy, I tell you, I'm looking forward to the next 15 years," Spanos said as he introduced Leaf at a news conference. "Son, I'll tell you what, we're going to make it work. ... God, Ryan, just come up here, son, and let me just look at you."

Leaf was just as enthused as Spanos.

"I'm very happy to be with the San Diego Chargers," he said. "Just to be able to play under coach Kevin Gilbride and (quarterbacks coach) June Jones is unbelievable for me, because they're such offensive mavericks. That's the one thing I'm looking forward to."

Manning also is looking forward to big things in his new locale, although he was his low-key self while being introduced as the Colts' savior.

"To me, this is just the beginning," said Manning, whose father, Archie, was the second overall pick in the 1971 draft behind Jim Plunkett. "This is where it starts. It's up to me to make the most of this and go out and have a career that puts wins on the board."

Irsay certainly hopes so, especially after the ordeal of losing Elway, which reached its apex last January when Elway's Broncos won Super Bowl XXXII.

SIUC SOFTBALL

Salukis roll to doubleheader sweep of Bradley Braves

The SIUC softball team cruised through a doubleheader sweep of Bradley University Saturday in Peoria.

Sophomore hurler Carisa Winters and freshman Erin Stremsterfer combined to hold the Braves to just three hits in SIUC's 9-0 and 11-0 wins. Freshman Marta Viehhaus led the Salukis at the plate by going 5-for-7 with eight RBIs on the day.

In the first game, Winters gave up two hits and struck out eight in a five-inning, eight-run rule contest. Junior Jen Feldmeier went 3-for-3 with two RBIs as the Salukis produced 14 hits for their nine runs.

In the second game, Stremsterfer bested Winters' effort by allowing just one hit in the first inning while striking out two. Feldmeier went 3-for-3 again with one RBI.

SIUC GOLF

Salukis travel to Wichita for MVC Championship

The SIUC women's golf team is in Wichita, Kan., today to begin play in the two-day Missouri Valley Conference Championship at Willowbend Golf Club, a par-72, 6,029-yard course.

After placing second in the tournament for four of the past five years, the Salukis and coach Diane Daugherty are more than ready to take the next step and earn a conference crown. Both Wichita State is the favorite in the eight-team field, with Illinois State picked third.

"I'm glad Wichita is favored," Daugherty said. "We've been the favorite the last couple of years since Tulsa left. Wichita State definitely has an advantage if it's windy, but I think we're ready. We need to get four of our six scores in the 70s, and we know that."

Senior Stacy Skillman leads the Salukis and the Valley with an average of 78.8. By shooting three rounds in the 70s, Skillman can break the school record for scoring average as well as match school records for single-season (16) and career (34) rounds in the 70s.

The 54-hole tournament begins with two rounds Monday and the final round Tuesday.

NCAA BASKETBALL

Shyatt leaves Wyoming to return to Clemson Tigers

Larry Shyatt, a former assistant to Rick Barnes who was selected Western Athletic Conference coach of the year in his only season at the University of Wyoming, is Clemson University's basketball coach, the school announced Saturday.

Shyatt, 46, will be introduced at a news conference Monday. He worked for nine years as an assistant to Barnes, who left this week to take over the program at Texas. Barnes and Shyatt were together for nine seasons, six at Providence and three at Clemson.

Shyatt spent his only season as a college head coach guiding Wyoming to a 19-9 record and a berth in the NIT.

"Larry Shyatt is a great fit for Clemson," Clemson athletic director Bobby Robinson said. "He will provide us with a quality basketball program in all areas."

Shyatt did not return several telephone messages left at his home and office late Saturday. There was no word of Shyatt's contract or how Clemson will handle a nearly $400,000 buyout of his Wyoming deal.

Salukis split twin bill with Governors

JUST SHORT: Salukis win first game of doubleheader, fail to improve on overall record.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A pair of three-run homers was all Austin Peay State University had, but it was enough to force a split of the doubleheader Sunday at Abe Martin Field.

The Salukis committed two errors in the second game, and two unearned runs crossed the plate. That was the difference in the game as the Salukis came up one run short in the bottom of the seventh, falling 6-5 to the Governors.

SIUC trailed most of the day, but the Salukis had a late-inning rally in the first game and won 6-4.

The Salukis were trailing 6-2 going into the bottom of the seventh when junior center-fielder Joe Schley beat out a throw for an infield single. Senior designated hitter Brad Benson homered and senior third baseman Matt Dettman hit a solo shot to left center to make it 6-5.

But the rally came up short and the Salukis had to settle for a split.

"It was a little too little — too late," Benson said. "We just didn't get the hitting early on. [When] we jump out early, it seems like everybody starts hitting the ball well. It seems like when we get behind a little bit, some games it just takes a while to get going. I don't know why. It may take us four or five innings to get going and in a seven-inning game like that — it's over."

Benson had four of the five RBI in the second game and had five hits on the day.

Both games were seven-inning games. The Salukis were scheduled to play one game at Austin Peay on Saturday and one game in Carbondale on Sunday, but a rain out forced the doubleheader Sunday.

Sophomore pitcher Jay Schwerman suffered the loss in the second game and is now 1-4 on the season.

DOUG LARSON/Daily Egyptian

SAFE: Designated hitter Brad Benson, a senior from Tempe, Ariz., safely finishes a slide into second in the first game of a doubleheader against Austin Peay Saturday at Abe Martin Field. (Below) Outfielder Joe Schley, a junior from Shorewood, slides into third on a triple early in the second game. SIUC won the first game 6-4 and lost the second 6-5.

With the split, the Salukis are now 15-25 overall, while the Governors are 18-26.

Junior pitcher Dave Piazza pitched five innings and got the win in the first game. He had to battle a pair of errors that led to one unearned run crossing the plate, but he managed to keep the Governors at bay so the Salukis could come back.

"I thought he battled really well," said baseball coach Dan Callahan. "We didn't execute very well defensively in the second inning. They ended up scoring three runs on basically four ground balls — two balls that we booted and two little three or four hoppers that just happened to eat through the infield. He was pitching a lot better than the situation he was in early on."

The Salukis got five runs in the bottom of the fourth inning of the first game to take a 5-4 lead, and they never looked back. SIUC added one more run in the fifth.

The Salukis' biggest boost came from the bat of sophomore outfielder Marty Worsley, who hit a one-out three-run homer to take the lead.

Worsley said he admired his team in the way they all battled back and almost won both games.

"We never gave up, and that's good," Worsley said. "I think the coaches respect that, and I respect that of other players. We were just doing a good job picking each other up."

Saluki senior helps pace team to third-place finish

TRACK: Athlete breaks record for javelin throw while preparing for upcoming meet.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC women's track and field senior Lorraine Parkinson shattered both the competition and her personal record in the javelin at the Pacesetter Sycamore Invitational in Terre Haute, Ind., Saturday.

Parkinson won the event with a throw of 132 feet 3 inches, almost 15 feet ahead of her closest competitor (117 feet 5 inches). It was also Parkinson's best throw by more than 10 feet this season.

Parkinson, who is preparing for the heptathlon competition at the Drake Relays this weekend, finished sixth in the long jump (16 feet 8 inches), eighth in the 100-meter hurdles (15.5 seconds) and seventh in the shotput (39 feet 6.5 inches).

"She had a good solid day preparing for the Drake Relays heptathlon," women's coach

Don DeNoon said. "She looked really good in the hurdles, long jump and the javelin. The other events, like the shot, will take care of themselves."

Parkinson's efforts helped pace the Salukis to a third-place finish behind Missouri Valley Conference powerhouse Indiana State University with 247 points and Illinois State University (125). The Salukis finished with 109 points in the meet. Western Illinois University (41) and Ohio State University (34) rounded out the top five in the eight-team meet.

Another aspect of the meet that caught DeNoon's attention was the sprinting core of freshmen Yolanda Mask and Shaneka Williams.

Mask finished fourth in the 100-meter (12.50 seconds) and 200-meter runs (25.51 seconds), while Williams was right behind for a sixth-place finish in the 100-meter run (12.55 seconds) and an eighth-place finish in the 200-meter run (26.24 seconds).

"We definitely had an outstanding day with Mask," DeNoon said. "It is indicative of what we expected when we recruited her."

"Those two young ladies looked really good this weekend. We have some sprinters on the verge of becoming top Division I athletes."

Other top finishers for the Salukis were junior Felicia Hill with a first-place finish in the triple jump (39 feet 5 inches) and a second-place finish in the high jump (5 feet 5 inches). Following Hill was junior Danielle Jordan with a third-place finish in the triple jump (34 feet 6.75 inches).

Sophomore Joy Cutrano ran a personal-best time of 10:16.35 in the 3,000-meter run for a second-place finish, while sophomore teammate Jenny Monaco followed her at third (10:19.76).

DeNoon thought the team performed well on Saturday against the solid competition of its MVC foes.

"Overall, I thought with the team we have now, we had some pretty good performances," DeNoon said.
