Candidates clash over experience

DAN CRAFT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Depending on which party students listen to, experience is an advantage or a detriment in upcoming Undergraduate Student Government elections.

Millennium Party candidates Joe Sanchez and Ted Clark are pushing a new approach and fresh blood for next year, while Select Party candidates Sean Henry and Brian Atchison have pointed to their prior involvement with USG and other campus groups.

While both platforms include many of the same issues, solutions suggested by each side differed on several accounts. Both parties oppose Select 2000 and favor increased diversity and security on campus, but the Select Party has focused on issues such as parking where the Millennium Party has not concentrated its efforts. The Millennium Party, on the other hand, is advocating a public relations-oriented approach to promoting USG.

Officials: Spring Thing a success

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Despite an increase of arrests, a lower turnout than last year and cold weather at the George Clinton and the P-Funk All-stars' performance Saturday, Spring Thing organizers characterize the event as another success and are making tentative plans for a third show.

Attendance at this year's Spring Thing in Lot 56 south of the Arena was 8,000 — down by about 1,000 from last year's concert at McAndrew Stadium, which featured Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers.

"For as cold as it was, it turned out really well," said Andrew Daly, executive director of Student Programming Council. "We would like to keep it a tradition."

But Daly said Clinton and the All-Stars brought in an assorted group. "Getting a diverse crowd out there is one of our main goals," he said. "And that happened."

Daly said he had more volunteers than expected this year. He said SPC originally ordered 220 bright-yellow SPC shirts, but the shirts quickly ran out Saturday afternoon. He said concert-goers were "handling themselves appropriately" during the concert and insisted the volunteers were not policing the lot.

"They just warned them that police were present," Daly said. "We are in no way there to turn anybody in (to police)."

University police, characterizing concert-goers' demeanor as "great," made eight alcohol-related arrests in or around Lot 56 Saturday. Police arrested no one at last year's concert.

As shot bottles and flasks littered the parking lot and portable toilets, suspects were arrested on charges including public and underage possession of alcohol.

Greek student vote sought at most Select 2000 campuses

Select 2000 around the country

KAREN BLATTER
ACADEMIC AFFAIRS EDITOR

Editor's note: This is the first part of a two-part series exploring the effects of the Select 2000 Initiative nationally and at SIUC.

In 1996, SIUC, Florida Southern College, Villanova University and University of Northern Colorado were approached by the National Interfraternity Council to become Select 2000 pilot schools.

In the past three years, only two of the four are still involved in the program — the University of Northern Colorado and SIUC.

"Values in Action: The Select 2000 Initiative" is a nine-part program designed by the NIC to improve the greek system. The initiative focuses on achieving higher grade point averages, community service, integrity, subsistence-free living and better recruitment of value-centered leaders. SIUC greeks will try and battle the Select 2000 initiative in an Undergraduate Student Government referendum in Wednesday's election, while several more universities have started and have considered adding the program.

Jon Smith, director of fraternity relations for NIC, said the University of Oregon and Rutgers University have added Select 2000 to their greek life. Smith also said the University of Akron and Saint Louis University are considering adding the program. From all the universities that have become part of the Select 2000 program, all but SIUC have had student input to the program, but each vary in results.

Florida Southern College

When Select 2000 started on Florida Southern's campus in fall 1997, greek leaders and university officials took part in several discussions before they decided to implement the program.

Florida Southern College is a dry campus and has a deferred freshman rush, where only upperclassmen can become part of a greek chapter. Greeks make up 28 percent of the 17,000 students on campus. All chapters have on-campus housing.

Shortly after Florida Southern College in Lakeland, Fla., started the program, the greek leaders and administration changed.

The change in leadership at the university led to Brad Bishop, the new director of student activities, and the new greek leaders to further look into the program. They found Select 2000 would not work for them.

Greeks and administration had many discussions about the program, then greeks voted to get rid of the program and administration agreed.

Police Blotter

CARBONDALE

- A 22-year-old SIUC student reported the damage of a vehicle while it was parked in Lot 40 near the Communications Building between 11 a.m. and 2:50 p.m. Friday. The car was keyed and a fire was slashed, police said, causing more than $300 damage. There are no suspects in this incident.
- A 21-year-old SIUC student's vehicle allegedly was moved on Douglas Drive to an illegal parking spot around midnight Friday, causing a hazard. When University police arrived at the scene, the victim could not be located, and her car was towed. The victim is responsible for the tow and will have to pay a fine, according to police.
- David C. Faxed, 18, and Jeffrey M. Fasching, 18, of Bailey Hall were arrested on... charged with possession of drug paraphernalia at 9:50 p.m. Friday at their residence. Both posted a cash bond and were released pending a May 6 court date.
- An SIUC student told University police he has received nearly one harassing telephone call every day since the beginning of the semester. A possible suspect has been identified, and the investigation is continuing, police said.
- Tonya A. Price, 20, of Carbondale was arrested and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol when University police noticed her vehicle swerving across the center line on East Park Street at 3:16 a.m. Sunday. She was unable to post bail and taken to Jackson County Jail.
- Julie D. Flores of Norridge was issued a citation and charged with failure to yield the right of way after her vehicle struck a Carbondale police squad car at 5:13 a.m. Saturday in the 1100 block of East Walnut Street. Both drivers involved in the accident and a passenger in Flores' vehicle were taken to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, treated and released. The vehicles sustained major damage and had to be towed, police said. As a result of the accident, police also cited damage to an apartment building sign in the area.
- Two Neely Hall desk workers reported receiving nine harassing telephone calls between midnight and 1 a.m. Sunday. University police have no suspects in this incident.

Moonbuggy team places tenth

LUNAR: Engineering students learn from last year's mistakes and improve rover design.

FRANK KUMAS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Donning helmets and kicking up "moon dust," SIUC mechanical engineering students drove their moon buggy on a lunar surface Saturday.

The squat, two-person all-terrain vehicle received 10th place from the 20 collegiate teams at the 6th-annual "Great Moonbuggy Race." Five mechanical engineering students designed and built the human-powered vehicle as their senior design project.

The event, which is intended to inspire students to confront the kind of tasks National Aeronautics and Space Administration takes on, took place at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

Team captain Eric Gray, a senior in mechanical engineering from St. Francisville, explained the team learned from last year's mistakes and tried to design a better, more sturdy moon buggy.

"We had vast improvements over last year," Gray said. "It worked exactly as designed, but we need to be faster."

This year's design featured four-wheel steering for tighter maneuvering and all-terrain vehicle tires. The coed driving team traversed the course in 11 minutes and 13 seconds, which is a success from last year.

The world's first moon buggy, or lunar roving vehicle, was designed and tested at the Marshall Space Flight Center for the Apollo 15 mission to the moon in 1971. The four-wheeled, electric powered car enabled two astronauts to drive 17 miles on the moon's surface.

The moon buggies that raced at the U.S. Space and Rocket Center were collapsed to fit into a four-foot cubic area to mimic the space limitations of the real lunar missions. The unassembled moon buggy had to be carried 20 feet to the starting line.

The race began by assembling the 130-pound vehicle and then navigating the half-mile simulated moonscape obstacle course, which included lava ridges, craters, rocks and lunar soil. The SIUC moon buggy was one of only four vehicles competing that cleared every obstacle.

"We were able to handle everything they threw at us," Gray said. "Other teams had to get out and push, so they lost time."

Some team's buggies could not handle the obstacles and fell apart on the course. Many more will not race again because they were designed to be fast but not sturdy.

Team members prepared for the race by riding the moon buggy around campus, which often caused some curious responses.

"We get a lot of attention when we ride on campus," said

Facilitators, mediators make meeting run smoothly

TIM CHAMBERLAIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The first meeting of the Residential Leasing Task Force was marked by cooperation and the possible formation of a mediation group help in leasing disputes, parties from both sides said.

One of the representatives for Undergraduate Student Government, President Jackie Smith, was encouraged by the dialogue at the first meeting as well as the lack of animosity that marked the last round of meetings.

"This was the best discussion we've had so far," Smith said. "Having facilitators and mediators there helped a lot."

One participating property owner, Bonnie Owen of Bonnie Owen Property Management, 816 E. Main St., agreed that this round of discussions are an improvement because of increased cooperation.

"Before [this round] we didn't really have direction and now we do," Owen said.

Smith said much of the discussion from the first meeting centered around forming a mediation group to help resolve landlord-tenant disputes.

Owen said the talk of a group to help resolve these disputes is a step in the right direction.

"If we can put together some kind of [tenant-landlord] coalition, that can lead to something workable," Owen said. "Hopefully we can work together for cooperation, not laws."

The task force is scheduled to give recommendations on the three ordinances from the March 30 City Council meeting to the council tonight, but the members of the task force agreed that more discussion was needed. The next task force meeting is scheduled for April 26.

Another reason for a second meeting is that the property owners wanted data to back up some of the tenant complaints, Smith said. She said Student Legal Assistance gathered the information from their office and this information will be presented at the April 26 meeting.

Smith said having another meeting also would give USG the chance to bring the newly elected officers into the meeting and familiarize them with the discussions.

Owen was most pleased at the signs of cooperation that marked the first meeting.

"That's what came out of it," Owen said. "We all want to work together."

TV casts unblinking eye on Illinois politics at work

IN ACTION: Program to give summary, analysis of state legislature's actions.

TRAVIS MORSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

With its closed door meetings and secret policies, the government can sometimes seem like a faceless, monolithic entity carelessly making decisions that affect the rest of the populous.

To help shed some light on the mystery of governmental decision-making, the Illinois public broadcasting system will run a new season of the television program, Illinois Lawmakers, starting this April.

It is scheduled to run every Wednesday from Wednesday to May 26 at 10:30 to 11:30 p.m. on WISU-TV Carbondale and WUSI-TV Olney.

The program will feature the only continuing statewide coverage of the Illinois General Assembly and the state government also will include up-to-date coverage of Gov. George Ryan's initiatives as a public official.

Trina Lyons, programming and operations coordinator at WSIU/WUSI-TV, said broadcasting Illinois Lawmakers has a dual purpose.

"On the one hand, we want to give a weekly summary of the happenings of the state legislature," Lyons said. "Then again, we also want to include an analysis of the day's events to show people the importance of the issues discussed."

One of the issue analysts will be producer/statehouse correspondent Jak Tichenor. Tichenor, along with political analyst Bruce DuMont, will conduct in-depth interviews with major lawmakers and give on-site reports from Springfield to track the legislature's progress until its adjournment in May.

In addition to giving an overview of each governmental session, the program also will target Gov. Ryan specifically and highlight his successes or failures in getting his policies through the legislative process.

Tichenor said there were four major issues likely to be discussed by the state legislature this time. They will include livestock waste management, education funding, budget agreements and managed care reform.

He also said the TV program will offer viewers a more in-depth look at political affairs in this state.

"Normally, viewers don't hear anything beyond a television sound bite," Tichenor said. "With this show, the viewer gets to hear the lawmakers talk, at some length, about the important issues of the day."

As a side from just gaining an insight into significant issues, Tichenor also hopes the program will help viewers understand a state government that, on the outside, can seem like a Kubrickian maze of bureaucratic red tape.

"I think it will be very exciting and informative for the viewer to get an inside look at the inner-workings of government," Tichenor said. "In fact, I would like to see it shown in government classes because it's a wonderful snapshot of the Illinois government in action."

LAWMAKERS

Members of the Undergraduate Student Government Senate managed to maintain quorum Sunday night and completed an agenda left unfinished last Wednesday night.

The senate was unable to vote on several pieces of legislation at the regular meeting April 14 because several of the senators left and the senate lost quorum. One of the agenda items that was necessary in order for USG elections to proceed Wednesday.

Legislation included a bill approving polling places for the USG election, the recognition of the Pakistani Student Council as a Registered Student Organization and approval of an RSO event funding request.

A resolution calling for the University to review conditions in off-campus residence halls was not on the Sunday agenda because Thompson Point senator John Pluskota, who wrote and submitted the bill, was out of town, according to Vice President Brian Atchison.

The Sunday meeting lasted only 20 minutes. Little debate or discussion was offered on the agenda items.

Black law students discuss ex-convicts in society

The Black Law Student Association presents its second-annual criminal justice roundtable at 6:30 p.m. at Lesar Law Auditorium.

The public is invited to join panelists today in a roundtable discussion of how to integrate ex-convicts into society.

"The public needs to know exactly what the ex-convicts go through," said association president Jodie Moore, a second-year law student from East St. Louis. "Child molesters have to register in the community they live in. Something like that has an effect on the public."

The four panelists will focus on topics such as whether prisons really rehabilitate convicts for re-admission into society and how to improve ways to inform the general public about ex-convicts' experiences in the hope that they can influence government leaders.

Trial begins for bouncers accused of murder

Attorneys for two bouncers on trial for the beating death of a graduate student at the University of Illinois said their clients were only trying to protect themselves from a drunk and violent customer. But prosecutors hoping to convict Ruben Navarete, 28, and Robin Jurkacek, 32, of first-degree murder said during the trial's April 13 opening arguments that the dead man, 21-year-old Ernest Seri, was obviously no match for the two massive and muscular bouncers.

Navarete and Jurkacek have different lawyers with different defense strategies but are being tried by the same jury.

Seri died of massive head injuries two days after the June 25 brawl, which happened on the sidewalk and in the street outside Gypsy, a bar in downtown Champaign.

Convicted, Navarete and Jurkacek each face between 20 and 60 years in prison.

As a result of the fight and its outcome, the Gypsy voluntarily closed in December, and city officials have begun to review safety at bars and training procedures for bouncers.

Syfert and Select Party the right choice for students

Wednesday will see the dawning of a new face for student government. The student trustee seat will be up for grabs, and the Undergraduate Student Government office will see a new executive staff as well as some new senators. But who to vote for?

For student trustee we have Ben Syfert or Connie Howard. In our candidate interviews, Howard's involvement at SIUC was impressive and commendable, but her lack of initiative to find out what the job of student trustee entails was a big turn-off. She simply lacked enough current knowledge of the position and seemed too content on waiting to be elected to inform herself about qualifications of the student trustee role to warrant our endorsement.

Syfert, while also not too impressive, stayed in control when taken to task about his knowledge of state politics and showed that while he may have a personality that is easily swayed by others' opinions, he'll hit the ground running.

We just pray he doesn't become too complacent with making noise or caught up in the opinions of GPSC President Ed Ford or the new USG president to actually get something accomplished.

For Undergraduate Student Government we have two parties with executive board candidates, and the choice between Sean Henry/Brian Atchison and Joe Sanchez/Ted Clark isn't an easy one. USG has already seen enough tragedy in the recent past to be able to afford a weak executive staff, and we're sorry to say this election's vice presidential candidates are more appealing than their presidential partners. Last year, Sean Henry's bid for an executive position was laced with accusations of forgery and misconduct in a question of fund transfers from the RSO account of Blacks Interested in Business. These past problems have recently been muckraked to the surface, as well as other valid concerns about Henry's previous views on the Select 2000 initiative conflicting with his current stance. People change, but for Henry, there's still an unclear question of character left unanswered.

On the other side we have "Magnum PR." Joe Sanchez. Somewhat of a newcomer to the USG scene in his role as public relations commissioner, he's running for president with only a partial semester of USG involvement under his belt. While his running mate Ted Clark is a respected senior, Sanchez's lack of experience is a killing factor.

Yes, new blood is sometimes a good thing to have in office but only when it's accompanied by proven quality. We just haven't seen enough of Sanchez to know if he can do the job. There are also personality concerns silhouetting Sanchez's character that have been expressed in some currently circulating campaign flyers.

In short, there is little saving grace for either of the prospective presidents other than their vice presidents, which both impressed us as quality individuals and candidates. Too bad Atchison and Clark aren't sharing a ticket.

With that point made, we believe the lesser of two evils is the Sean Henry/Brian Atchison pairing.

They have more combined experience in student government than Sanchez and Clark, and they bring a diverse senate ticket with them. As long as Henry can allay character concerns through positive presidential performance and Atchison can assist in the process, these two have the better proven potential to lead student government and for that we support their executive bid for office.

A license is more than a tool to buy beer

I was driving at the pleasant pace of 55 miles per hour, trying not to look at the flat, ugly land on either side of Route 51, when I hit a wall. Not a physical wall, but it just as well could have been a 100-foot pile of asbestos because there was no getting past it. It was an elderly driver.

Now, at 26 miles per hour and too much traffic to pass her, I have a little bit of extra time on my hands. First I follow very closely, my thought process being something really clever like, "I will annoy her into speeding up."

Soon I see that I never could have passed the woman anyway because she keeps swerving into the lane reserved for oncoming traffic. This is when I started mumbling about the elderly and how they should have to take tests to have a license after the age of 65.

I imagine myself trying to pry that little card from my grandfather's fingers. What it must mean to be stripped of the legal right to drive. I think of what it meant for me to get my license.

Vote Millenium Party to rid SIUC of Select 2000

Dear Editor,

This upcoming election is a very important one for students. The students will be choosing leaders that will make decisions for them all next year. As a student, I feel that the best candidate should win. This is the reason why I am writing this letter.

Joseph Sanchez and Ted Clark are heading the Millennium Party, while Sean Henry and Brian Atchison are heading the Select Party. The Select Party is banking on the greek vote.

They are running with the issue of abolishing Select 2000. The problem is that they are deceiving the greeks.

In the Sept. 17, 1997, Daily Egyptian, Sean Henry said greeks' complaints about Select 2000 are unfounded. "It seems to me that there are just a bunch of people whining because they can't have alcohol in their frat houses," Henry said.

Henry went on to add that the greeks were exploiting Undergraduate Student Government in order to abolish Select 2000. "Those people whose livelihood is drinking may be trying to use USG to get their point across."

This is the person that wants your greek vote. This is the person who is telling you that he will abolish Select 2000. Isn't it strange that he is taking a different stance now that he is running for office and he needs your vote? Don't let him fool you.

The only person that will help abolish Select 2000 is Joseph Sanchez with the Millennium Party. So this Wednesday, vote Millennium Party/Sanchez for president if you truly want to see a change in the greek system.

Sanchez does not possess leadership qualities

Dear Editor,

I would like to remark about the credibility of one of the candidates running for president of the Undergraduate Student Government.

I feel that students who do not know Mr. Joseph Sanchez need to know something about his character before heading to the elections next week.

I have worked with Mr. Sanchez in an on-campus Registered Student Organization and I have come to believe that he is the wrong choice for USG president. At first, I thought I could deal with his seemingly "cocky" attitude as we were working on an account together. As the weeks wore on, he became disrespectful of me, almost beligerently. Mr. Sanchez, the "account manager," also was disrespectful of other members working under him.

Is that the kind of person the students should have for president? I would like to think not. Also, upon organization leaders begging for reports, he gave one where he took the credit as to our successes, and worst of all, he spoke with this heavy "cocky" attitude, which I feel makes me look bad. I have found that he tends to put his work off on other people and is extremely unavailable for assistance. These are not qualities of a leader, a team player, or a president of USG.

Those of us who know Joe Sanchez and how he really works would probably agree that he is lacking many of the important characteristics that a leader must possess. I am of no party affiliation, therefore I encourage those who do not know the candidates to get to know them or at least about them prior to Election Day.

I also encourage students to check out Mr. Sanchez's credentials and credibility prior to making your decision. According to my knowledge of Joe Sanchez, I would not want him representing me as president of Undergraduate Student Government.

Tech fee in hands of students

BURKE SPEAKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The students' vote will guide the future of technological advancement at SIUC when a proposed technology fee appears on Wednesday's student trustee election ballot.

The technology fee is the subject of an advisory referendum to determine if students are willing to pay an extra $25 per semester for improved campus technology.

Although the advisory referendum is non-binding, meaning the results will not officially determine the fate of the referendum, Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger said she will only recommend the technology fee to the Board of Trustees if the students favor its implementation.

"This should be a student decision," Argersinger said in January at a USG meeting. "I would support it unless it was a designed fee, with a specific line item, that was student-decided for student use."

Students currently do not pay a technology fee in their tuition.

There are separate technology fee referendums for undergraduate and graduate students.

The graduate student referendum outlines preferences for the makeup of a technology advisory board.

SIUC would use the additional technology funding for purposes including Internet access, software upgrades on a three-year cycle and increasing the flexibility of computer lab hours.

Thomas Guernsey, interim provost and vice chancellor for Academic Affairs, said SIUC's state of technology is in dire need of improvement.

"There are significant technology needs on campus and insufficient resources to meet those needs," Guernsey said.

If the students approve the referendum, it is unlikely the fee will be imposed for the fall semester. Because of the lengthy process of Board approval, the fee would be implemented beginning in the spring semester.

While students have a major responsibility in deciding the fate of the technology fee, the Select 2000 referendum will have no relevance other than to gauge student response. The referendum will appear on the USG ballot.

Select 2000 is a program intended to maintain alcohol-free housing for fraternities and sororities, improve community service work and set higher standards in academics.

Greek leaders presented Argersinger with a petition in March, signed by 71 percent of Greeks opposed to the program. The petition cited the program caused negative morale and low Greek membership numbers.

Tony Blood, president of the Inter-Greek council, said the administration is not relying on what students think, and therefore, voter turnout for the referendum may be low.

"If the vote was binding, there would be a lot more concern about it," Blood said. "I'm not sure what the turnout will be."

"It's almost irrelevant in a way."

Commission hopes for smooth election

SARA BEAN
POLITICS EDITOR

In an election that is historically wrought with problems, Undergraduate Student Government Election Commissioner Kris Bein is making sure that this year is an exception.

"There have been a lot less problems this year," Bein said. "I think that is because the election commission is more experienced than last year's."

Only three grievances have been filed in this election, as opposed to about 20 grievances filed in the Spring 1998 election.

Of the three filed, only two resulted in strikes against a party. Both of those grievances were filed by Select Party presidential candidate Sean Henry against Millennium Party presidential candidate Joe Sanchez.

Henry said Sanchez broke USG election rules by canvassing in the residence halls after 7 p.m. and posting unauthorized posters in the residence halls.

Millennium Party Vice Presidential candidate Ted Clark filed a grievance against Henry after the Select Party reserved the available display cases in the Student Center. The election commission did not issue a strike against the party.

USG election guidelines maintain that the accumulation of three strikes against an individual candidate will result in disqualification. An accumulation of seven strikes will result in the disqualification of the entire party.

Bein said the commission is working diligently to ensure that there is not a repeat of last year's election troubles.

"We have been very clear on the rules and regulations," Bein said. "We are not bending the rules for anyone."

In addition to Bein, the election commission is made up of SIUC students Tim Rice, James Morris, Mandy Jewell and Zach Kuhn.

Bein, who served as election commissioner for the Graduate and Professional Student Council the last three years, said experience is a key factor in success of the election.

"I've got a very good team working on the election commission this year," Bein said. "We are listening to all sides to the story and keeping fair and impartial."

"We have a strong, experienced election commission."

they did on the project.

"Other engineers are impressed with how much work it took," he said Thursday before the race. "Everybody knows we're working on it."

The challenge for the five mechanical engineering students was to employ the skills they have learned in the College of Engineering. The team separated the tasks to design and build the vehicle. Two worked on the chassis, another two worked on the gearing and Gray handled the steering. A sixth team member, Amelia Larsen, was added to the team as the female half of the coed driving team.

Only 10 percent of the cost and materials to construct the moon buggy were supplied from the mechanical engineering department. The other 90 percent to complete the project came from donations sought by the team.

While other schools were able to outsource the construction of their design to local business, Gray's team had to build everything themselves using only their experience and limited resources.

Gray said they wish they could have used aluminum, which is lighter, instead of steel, but they only had the experience to work with steel. Lighter materials need to be used to construct a faster, yet sturdy, vehicle. Gray hopes that students at SIUC will succeed his team with a better moon buggy.

"A lot of the younger guys are curious if they can do this for their [senior] design project," Gray said. "A lot of guys want to carry on where we left off and make it better."

was released on $100 bond.

The court dates of these men were unavailable Monday.

Additionally, a student recently banned from University-affiliated functions allegedly attended the concert illegally.

Matthew O. Todisco, 19, of Elmhurst was arrested and charged with criminal trespass to government-supported property at the concert. University police recognized Todisco, who was banned from functions pending the outcome of campus hearings on previous charges. He was taken to Jackson County Jail after being unable to post bond and later released.

Todisco has a recent history of arrest in the Carbondale area. He was arrested on charges of domestic battery and aggravated battery after an incident earlier this month at the Copper Dragon, 760 E. Grand Ave., where he allegedly bit the tip off a woman's finger.

Todisco was also caught at a residence hall in March and charged with possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia.

SIU Police Lt. Todd Sigler said more officers were present around Saturday's concert than previous events at the stadium and the SIU Arena because of the concert's location, but University police jurisdiction was not affected.

"We don't jeopardize the normal allotment of officers," Sigler said. "So the service to the community remains generally unaffected."

Sigler said he is unaware of any changes the department will make to heighten security at future Spring Thing concerts.

SPC officials are pondering the site of a prospective location for a 2000 event, which may include an all-day concert featuring multiple acts, Daly said.

"We're still sitting down and weighing out our options," he said.

Database to keep track of alumni

TRAVIS MORSE
 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Keeping track of SIUC alumni is not just a localized challenge. It is one spanning the globe.

Because SIUC has alumni in more than 100 countries, the SIUC Alumni Association is hoping to improve its tracking methods with a new database, the International Advancements Datatel System.

The computer program, which goes into effect this year, will make it easier for the University to maintain detailed files on its international alumni.

Edward M. Buerger, executive director of the alumni association, said the program's main attribute is its ability to capture and retain more information.

"The program will allow us to collect more accurate and up to date information about our alumni living in foreign countries," Buerger said. "The single best thing about it is it can hold more different characters and letters for foreign names."

Buerger said it is important to stay in contact with international alumni because it benefits the University.

"Staying close with our international alumni benefits SIUC in many ways," Buerger said. "A lot of international alumni are interested in sending their children to SIUC because of the positive experience they had, many are building partnerships with different colleges in their professional area, several return as lecturers and a lot of them are willing to give contributions to SIUC in the form of scholarships."

Jared Dorn, director of International Programs and Services, agrees maintaining contact with international alumni is a major priority for the school.

"It's important to maintain these relationships because it aids in enrollment, recruitment and overall human resource issues," Dorn said. "With some countries, we've even had second and third generation family members all attending SIUC."

In smaller, more densely populated countries like Taiwan and Malaysia, it is easier for the University to communicate with its alumni. This is especially true in Taiwan, where there is a large population of SIUC alumni in a condensed area.

Countries like Iran and China, on the other hand, present more of a problem. Because of their strained relationships with the United States, it is often impossible to keep in touch with alumni there.

The key to combating these various international difficulties, Buerger said, is increased communication.

"Communicating with alumni is vital to establishing long-term relationships," Buerger said. "That's why the alumni association sends out e-mail and the Southern Alumni Magazine to our international graduates."

For future generations, Dorn said, the Internet will be the most successful way of staying in contact with the University's foreign alumni.

"The SIUC home page and the alumni newsletter will be very successful in ensuring international relationships in the future," Dorn said. "If we keep them informed constantly about the college, then it will build loyalty in our alumni."

USG

Henry said a recent Graduate and Professional Student Council proposal asking for more parking for graduate assistants is evidence that parking on campus simply is not adequate. He wants to examine the possibility of constructing a garage over the current parking lot north of the Communications Building.

Atchison said the Select Party has taken the initiative in encouraging diversity on campus by including minority representation on his ticket. Henry wants to equalize the percentages of minority representation on staff with minorities in the student body.

This attention to diversity has gained the support of the Black Affairs Council, which endorsed the Select Party Monday.

"One of the main reasons we decided to endorse the Select Party was that it represents the diverse makeup of the campus, and we want a USG that reflects the campus," said DelMarcus Collins, the BAC Public Relations chairman.

BAC Acting Coordinator Romante Archer agreed.

"Sean has brought a lot of good things to the BAC table," he said. "Our endorsement of him was a hands-down choice."

Millennium Presidential candidate Joe Sanchez said he was not contacted by BAC and did not feel they made a well-informed endorsement.

The abolishment of Select 2000 is also a main issue for both the Select and Millennium parties. Atchison said the program was unfairly implemented without input from the Greeks and news review.

Atchison and Henry are stressing their involvement as student leaders in USG and other campus groups as evidence of their executive qualifications.

Henry has not been involved in USG this year but is active in the Black Affairs Council and as a Student Resident Adviser. He ran for USG president last year under the Saluki Party name.

"My record speaks for itself," Henry said.

Henry cited involvement in numerous RSOs and his part in improving on-campus housing conditions during the last year as examples of his leadership and organizational capabilities.

Atchison ascended to the vice presidency following the resignation of former President Kristie Ayres Jan. 20. Atchison was promoted from his place senator from the College of Agriculture. He was also the chairman of the Internal Affairs Committee.

Atchison and Henry seek to approach the office with negotiation and compromise in mind. Among their goals internally are better participation in USG and more input from students via their senators.

"We're going to be all over the place," Atchison said. "Sean and I have put a lot of work into this campaign, and hopefully it will all pay off."

Millennium Party

Joe Sanchez thinks an administration that works from a public relations perspective is exactly what USG needs to become a more effective advocate for students.

He hopes that by applying a public relations approach to his administration, he can improve the output and efficiency as well as the involvement in USG.

Sanchez and running mate Ted Clark have been relating with any members of the public who will listen, touting issues including the abolishment of Select 2000, increased representation of minorities in faculty and staff positions, a tenant's bill of rights and seeking support for a fresh perspective in the presidential office.

Increased involvement will be the biggest step in resolving the big issues, Sanchez said. By working with the senate and students, a tenant's bill of rights could be implemented and used by the off-campus residents.

"We don't have to wait for the city on this," Sanchez said. "Let's put it in the students' hands."

Communication also will improve the chances of removing Select 2000, Sanchez said. Without a concerted effort between the Greek community and student government, student support could appear fragmented, according to Sanchez.

His signature program, however, is called "Communiunity." Designed to strengthen ties between the University and the city, the program would place incoming freshmen with "foster families," allowing students to see other aspects of Carbondale while easing students' transition to SIUC.

Communiunity was originally the idea of City Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan and student leaders, who proposed the idea in 1997. The program was never fully implemented, and Sanchez is looking to complete it.

Sanchez hopes his public-minded administration can sell the program to residents and University officials.

Improvements in recruitment and retention also might come out of the program, Sanchez said.

"The relationship between the students and the city has often been us vs. them," Sanchez said. He said he thinks Communiunity is a big step toward changing that attitude.

Communicating with city and university officials is the first step toward implementing Communiunity, Sanchez said. He thought his relational approach would work well in that capacity.

Sanchez, a senior in speech communication, has been active in USG for two months, when he was appointed as public relations commissioner. Clark, a sophomore in biological sciences/pre-med., has been an East Side senator for the past two years.

"Experience isn't necessarily a good thing," Sanchez said. "When you've been there too long, you can become apathetic."

Sanchez characterized his team as hand-picked and sharing his dedication to the job.

Other objectives Sanchez put forth include a revision of the RSO funding process and close communication with the student trustee. He hopes to gain input from the trustee and use that position to bring the views of USG to the Board of Trustees.

Sanchez advocated spreading awareness of the USG name through event sponsorship.

"We need more events with the USG name on them, things that get everyone involved," Sanchez said.

Events could be used to provide students with an entertainment alternative, Sanchez said.

"In Carbondale, the three choices the students have are drink, drink or see a movie," Sanchez said. "We want to provide a fourth option."

Sanchez said new blood is needed and that new blood is a strength of the Millennium Party.

"We are doing grassroots campaigning," Sanchez said. "We're trying to reach the student who doesn't want to vote, who has lost interest in student government."

New faces in office might be just what those students are looking for, Sanchez said.

"I challenge everyone — can we do better?" Sanchez said. "I think the Millennium Party can."

Volunteering enlightens, lifts people's spirits

IMPACT: Program allows participants to make a difference for those in need.

ERIN FAFOGLIA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A family waits impatiently while their daughter is in labor. A young boy is shaken up after he gets a routine blood test. An old man's spirit is crushed as he gets in his car to drive home without his wife, knowing he will never see her again.

Volunteers can provide the bright light in situations like these by lending a helping hand, an encouraging word or a warm smile. They devote their time in exchange for the reward of the spirit rather than the dollar.

National Volunteer Week, which will continue until Saturday, is a time to reflect on its true meaning and the impact it has on lives it touches, said Kathy Suprenant, director of volunteer services at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, 405 W. Jackson St.

Suprenant said volunteers need to possess qualities of compassion and empathy at the hospital because there is a wide variety of situations they will encounter.

"There might be someone who is so frail or impaired [that] comes into the hospital looking to visit a patient," Suprenant said. "They're in no shape to be running all over this place, so a volunteer can help them find their way."

Suprenant said the volunteer ages at the hospital range from 14 to 90 years old.

"There is a good amount of volunteers in all ages here, but we can always use more people," Suprenant said.

The 14 volunteer programs vary from working at the Pink Geranium gift shop to admitting and discharging patients at the main lobby volunteer information desk.

Suprenant said whether helping an anxious new father pick out a gift for his wife at the gift shop or putting together packets for surgery, the little things that add up.

Suprenant said the third-floor surgery volunteer desk is one spot consisting of a very compassionate individual. The desk's responsibility is updating patient status to those family and friends awaiting results.

"They like knowing there is someone out here to be a go-between," said Betsy Highland, a Carbondale resident who has worked the desk for three years. "It feels good knowing I have helped ease their pain."

Highland began volunteering 27 years ago and said she enjoys the interaction aspect it brings to her life.

"Volunteering makes you look at your problems in a different perspective," Highland said. "You feel like something is so big, when it really is just minimal."

Belinda Wicks of Carbondale has volunteered for six months at the volunteer information desk in the hospital main lobby.

Wicks volunteers seven hours each week day on her day off and said there are unique experiences with each task of the job.

"I like bringing down the newborns and their mothers to escort them out," Wicks said. "It's a special time when the family is making movies, taking pictures and everyone is happy."

Wicks also takes terminal patients up to hospice rooms and said it is an equally significant experience.

"It leaves quite an impression, and you know it is the last time they will ever go into a room," Wicks said. "You remember each patient as part of your life."

"When I come in on Monday, it starts my week off right," Walchly said. "People are so appreciative of friendliness. As they leave, we wish them well. They might not have had an easy time, but we try and make it easier for them."

Lori Leathers, a second-year graduate student in administration of justice from Du Quoin, volunteers at the Women's Shelter, 406 W. Mill St., Carbondale.

Leathers began volunteering for a college class two years ago at Network Crisis Center, known as the Suicide Hotline.

"I liked it so much I stayed there," Leathers said. "Some people say 'Why do you volunteer? You don't get paid.' But it is a great learning experience."

At the Women's Shelter, Leathers answers the crisis phone calls, helps new clients and talks to those who need assistance.

"It's great to make a contribution to your community by helping others out, and I think it's very important for people to volunteer at some point in their life," Leathers said.

Leathers said she has benefited greatly from her volunteering experiences.

"I have learned how to deal with people better, and it has opened my eyes to the difficulties people go through," she said.

Suprenant said being a volunteer ultimately involves commitment, time and patience.

"One of the main things I look for, no matter how enthused someone is, is compassion and reliability," Suprenant said. "Being a volunteer takes dedication and responsibility, and you have to treat it like a real job."

"A volunteer's mission is the dedication to improving the well-being of anybody who comes in that door."

SIUC men to show off buff bodies at competition

STORY BY RHONDA SCIARRA

Mark Kattenbraker grimaces, posing at the whims of Don Melrose. He stands among a group of seven other men, all glaring into a mirror, clenching their fists and struggling to hold their breaths.

Their bulging biceps and triceps, their ripped chests and the sweat on their faces all boast of months of dedication.

The group of bodybuilders followed Melrose through three rounds of standard bodybuilding poses Friday afternoon at the Recreation Center in final preparations for the ninth-annual SIUC Bodybuilding Show.

The event, sponsored by the SIUC weightlifting club, will consist of a pre-judging competition at 1 p.m. and an evening show at 7 on Saturday at the Recreation Center.

A round of posing in a bodybuilding competition incorporates a series of body stances where participants flex various muscle groups from the front and side angles.

BUILDING BODIES

The SIUC Bodybuilding Show will take place at 7 p.m. Saturday at the Recreation Center. To participate in the show, contact Chris Wright at 549-1750. Entry forms and spectator tickets for the afternoon and evening shows are available at the Recreation Center Information Center.

The pre-judging portion of the show requires participants to execute the series of basic poses designed to show the body from all angles.

The pre-judging portion of the show requires participants to execute the series of basic poses designed to show the body from all angles.

The competition is divided into male, female and wheelchair divisions which are then arranged into height classes.

Participants return in the evening competition and present a 90-second routine of poses set to the music of their choice. Melrose, vice president and faculty adviser for the club, said the nighttime atmosphere gives contestants a chance to have some fun and show their creativity when they compete.

"Each of the competitors choreograph their routines using poses to show their body as artfully and tastefully as they can," he said. "It is a chance to express themselves using their own style."

A panel of six judges, including Melrose, who have experience in evaluating bodybuilding shows, will determine each class winner in the afternoon and decide upon an overall winner in the evening. Melrose said the characteristics that judges look for in a bodybuilding competition include the symmetry of muscle definition of each contestant and the amount of lean muscle mass.

"We are looking for the best overall package of symmetry, muscularity and muscular definition," he said. "We are looking for someone who has geared their training towards achieving that goal."

Cynthia Gayman, a graduate student in philosophy, also will judge this year's competition.

Kattenbraker, a freshman in exercise science from Chester, decided to enter SIUC's competition at the request of friends who already were entered in the show.

He started lifting weights three years ago. In 1998, he competed in the all-natural Illinois Open, placing third in his weight class; and the all-natural Missouri Open, placing first in his weight class.

Kattenbraker starts his day with 45 minutes of cardiovascular activity at 5:30 in the morning six days a week. In the afternoon, he returns to the weight room more for an hour long session. In a typical day, Kattenbraker consumes at least four chicken breasts, 12 egg whites a day and 120 ounces of water. He said he adjusts his diet to intake a minimal amount of carbohydrates.

"When you do cardiovascular exercise on a very low carbohydrate diet you burn fat at a more efficient rate," Kattenbraker said. "When you go into these competitions you want to be tone and lean."

Kattenbraker said competing in this weekend's competition is a chance for him to show off his effort and hard work during the past months.

"Being up there and being judged is very exhausting," he said. "At the same time it is an adrenaline rush for me because all those weeks of hard work come down to a matter of minutes."

A.J. DeCicco, a junior in English from Wheaton, decided to enter the competition with a friend after watching the competition last year.

"I like competition and lifting weights," he said. "I saw the show as an opportunity to do both of what I enjoy."

DeCicco said the time he has spent preparing for this event has occupied the majority of his time, energy and focus.

"Between my grades and weightlifting, I have no time for anything else," he said. "I go to sleep at night thinking of posing routines."

Melrose said the discipline that bodybuilding requires can easily take its toll on the lifestyles of bodybuilders, making weight lifting a priority in their lives.

"The act of posing is very strenuous. Bodybuilding competitors are generally sore for several days after an event," he said. "We are talking about very focused people here that don't want to let anything get in their way."

Bishop said the program was unworkable at the university and because of that, the greek system would not benefit from the program.

"The students started to question it," he said. "It is a good program but with the details, it was a major project that we couldn't deal with it."

Villanova University

Villanova University in Villanova, Pa., has a slightly different story.

Michael Carey, director of leadership and greek affairs, said when he came to Villanova seven months ago, the greeks wanted to change the Select 2000 program.

Previously, the students accepted Select 2000 but wanted to create a program that better fit their greek system.

At Villanova, out of 6,000 undergraduates, 59 percent of students comprise the greek system, representing eight national sororities and 10 national fraternities.

Greeks decided to create the Greek Action Plan, which is the same initiative as Select 2000 without the substance-free living provision.

Carey said the change in the program would work better because greek leaders did it themselves.

"They do want to have higher standards," Carey said. "They are very supportive of this."

With this plan, greek leaders can alter it if they want to. They created a three-fold pamphlet that explains the program and is easy to modify.

"It can be continually changing to improve or greek leaders can keep it the same," Carey said. "For now, this program is working fine."

Carey said student support is very important to the program and improving the greek system.

But Carey said whatever regulations are placed onto greeks, they have to be responsible for their actions.

"Prove to us that you can be responsible for their actions."

"Prove to us that you can be responsible. But with responsibility don't make us ask 'Why are people still getting hurt?'" Carey said. "Groups run themselves into the ground faster than the administration does."

University of Northern Colorado

The tale of Select 2000 only shows one successful storyline, which revolves around the University of Northern Colorado in Greeley, Colo.

Robert Kerr, greek life coordinator at the University of Northern Colorado, said the key to making Select 2000 successful is student support.

Before the University of Northern Colorado entered the Select 2000 program, the university had national headquarters from seven different chapters come to campus and evaluate the quality of each selected chapter.

From there, University officials had numerous meetings with students to discuss Select 2000.

When it was time to vote on the initiative, students said they wanted the program.

In Fall 2000, the final initiative of substance-free housing will be in place. In order to prepare for this, Kerr said several fraternities have gone alcohol-free.

Student input in the program every step of the way is why it has been successful at the University of Northern Colorado and unsuccessful at other universities, Kerr said.

"When we made this choice, it needed student support to make sure everyone liked it," Kerr said. "We had to show them facts and give us the platform that we want to improve."

Since the implementation of the plan in 1997, greeks went from 3.2 percent to 5.5 percent of the total 11,700 students at the University of Northern Colorado. This is the highest number of greeks in seven years.

Kerr said Select 2000 has recreated their greek system to meet the goals for which greek systems were originally started.

"Academics, community service, leadership and a home away from home are the reasons why the greek system started," Kerr said. "We have been recruiting members for the wrong reasons: girls, parties and beer."

Kerr said one thing the University of Northern Colorado does different from SIUC is the University of Northern Colorado tries to focus on the larger picture, the overall success, rather than details of month-to-month numbers.

The University of Northern Colorado does not look at the number of community service hours or GPAs to measure success or failure in the program like what is done at SIUC.

"One of the challenges is no one has a definite vision about what is supposed to happen," he said. "They need to stay focused on the whole picture."

Not only has Select 2000 improved the greek system, but it also increased the sense of community between greeks and rest of the University.

According to Kerr, greeks said Select 2000 changed the way they were viewed, giving them a positive image and increased pride to be greek.

Kerr and the University of Northern Colorado success is what is important about the Select 2000 initiative. As the only university that can display the program as a positive, they provide an example to other schools.

"Greeks can improve with this program, but if university officials are looking for a quick fix, it won't be," Kerr said.

University of Oregon

Officials at the University of Oregon could not be reached for comment, but Interfraternity Council President Bryan Myss has been part of the Select 2000 program since it was first an issue on the campus a year ago.

The administration of the university did not want to push the program on the greek system, so each individual chapter is able to make a decision to participate in the program, according to Myss.

The University of Oregon greek system is made up of 28 chapters consisting of 1,300 students out of 17,000 at the university.

Myss said one chapter has gone dry and two more are going dry by fall 1999.

"We put the decision in the chapters' hands," he said. "This way they can take ownership in their action and make their own decision."

By seeing other chapters sign onto the Select 2000 program, Myss hopes other chapters will see the success and want to be part of the initiative.

The success of the one chapter involved in the program is a cleaner chapter house and better protection of members and guests of the house.

Rutgers University

Rutgers University became a Select 2000 school in spring 1998 and started to make plans as to the way to implement the program.

Joann Arnholt, dean of fraternity and sorority affairs at Rutgers University, did not return phone calls about Select 2000.

Rutgers University has more than 40 greek organizations totaling 1,500 students.

University of Akron

At the University of Akron in Akron, Ohio, Coordinator of Greek Affairs Joseph LoCascio said a decision about Select 2000 may be reached during the fall 1999 semester.

In January 1998, the university administration and greeks started talking about implementing Select 2000.

"We had long talks about Select 2000's implementation and what it could do for campus," LoCascio said.

The Akron campus consists of 22,000 students, of which 600 are greek. Greek houses are not alcohol-free. In fact, alcohol is sold in the campus student center.

Since Select 2000 was considered on the campus, the 12 fraternities and five sororities have been involved completely with the process.

"It needs to be a student decision and has to be supported by the University," LoCascio said.

Each chapter house was visited to further talks about Select 2000 and to ensure all greeks understood the program. After these talks, the program was widely supported.

However, when greek leadership changed at the end of the semester, the support of Select 2000 went with the leaders. When the implementation of the program was voted on in November 1998, it was not approved.

"Some chapters said yes and some said no," LoCascio said. "They all said they wanted to keep on talking about the program but they did not want to implement it."

Controversy on the campus regarding Select 2000 increased, and LoCascio did not want to pursue the issue on campus under negative feelings. Talks and consideration of the program will restart during the fall semester.

"It is a positive program and a good idea, but it really needs student support in order to be successful," LoCascio said.

Saint Louis University

Linda Wardhammar, assistant director of Student Life at Saint Louis University, said other issues in the greek community at the university has led to no final decision about implementing Select 2000.

About a year ago, Select 2000 became an issue on the campus. NIC came to the university to talk with Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council to address becoming involved in the initiative.

The three groups, along with greek advisers, met several times during the spring semester. During the summer semester, a student task force determined greeks needed more information about the program before they could agree to take part in it.

All greeks continued to meet and discuss Select 2000. The outcomes of those talks resulted in the 15 greek organizations creating a mission statement. In February, the 1,000 greek students at SLU got to vote on the initiative. Panhellenic voted it down, and Interfraternity decided to discuss other options.

The spring semester brought forth another issue — an all-greek resident hall, which became more important to the greeks, Wardhammar said.

But Wardhammar said the Select 2000 issue is not dead.

"It is on the back burner right now," she said. "Another thing has taken precedence."

An alcohol policy would make problems for the university because many on-campus events have alcoholic beverages, Wardhammar said.

Wardhammar said the administration is for Select 2000 and if they wanted to they would have implemented the program but knew the importance of the student voice. Wardhammar said she approves Select 2000 and has the support of two fellow administrators.

"If it was going to work students need to support it," she said.

Regardless of the effect or the results of the Select 2000 program, each one of the possible Select 2000 universities left the decision to the students, unlike at SIUC.

The second part of this series will discuss the implementations and the outcomes of SIUC's Select 2000 policy.

Saluki honors announced

Running back Karlton Carpenter and high jumper Felicia Hill were named SIUC male and female athletes of the year at the 1999

Saluki Letterwinner's Senior Banquet Sunday in Ballroom D of the Student Center. Carpenter, a junior from Chicago, set the school's all-time record for most rushing yards in a season with 1,892 yards. He is tops in the career mark with 3,178 yards. Hill, also a junior from Chicago, has been a constant force on the track. She has set the school records in the high jump (5-9 3/4) and the triple jump (40-7), and she also provisionally qualified for the NCAA Championships. Others honored at the event: volleyball player Lindsay Resmer and tennis player Gustavo Goncalves were named the Outstanding Leader athletes. Swimmer Kirstie Albertyn was given the Virginia Gordon Scholar-Athlete Award. Basketball standout Monte Jenkins and volleyball player Mario Moreland were named the Daily Egyptian Senior Athletes of the Year.

Tyson Invitational a tough place to play

Track and field teams battles one of the best teams in one of the worst track conditions.

ROB ALLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Battling athletes from the No. 1 track and field school in the country can hurt. Taking them on in 30-degree weather can be pure torture.

Another weekend of top-level individual competition met the SIUC men's team at the 1999 Tyson Invitational in chilly Fayetteville, Ark., Friday and Saturday. The Salukis squared off on the frigid grounds of top-ranked University of Arkansas. To make things feel a little colder,

No. 19 Iowa State University and Missouri Valley Conference rival Southwest Missouri State University were also on hand.

No team scores were kept, so it was up to the runners how they would brave the elements. Many rose to the occasion.

Head coach Bill Cornell got the toughness he sought when the team stepped off the bus Friday into some very uncharacteristic April temperatures.

"Considering the cold weather, we had some really good performances," he said. "Normally, you get the cold weather and everybody's crying, but we saw very little of that this weekend."

The Salukis had two athletes — sophomore Dan Stone and freshman Chad Harris — tie for first place in the pole vault with leaps of 15 feet, 5 3/4 inches.

There was only room for one at the top, however, and Stone won the tie-breaker for championship honors.

Senior javelin thrower Peter Juszczyk returned to the team following a two-week absence because of an injured left foot. He picked up right where he left off — at the top of the event leaderboard, with a toss of 216-6.

Junior Brad Bowers recorded his longest outdoor leap of the year in the long jump, flying 24-4 1/4 into third place. Junior Matt McClelland set a personal-best in the 3,000-meter run, crossing the finish line at 8 minutes, 28.43 seconds (ninth place).

The Saluki 4-by-400 relay team also impressed. Seniors Baye Wilson and Romante Archer and juniors Loren King and Jeraldo Henry stormed to a fourth-place finish in 3:14.95.

Coach Cornell was content with his team's all-around effort, as the Missouri Valley Conference Championship meet (May 15 at SIUC) approaches rapidly.

"I was very happy with what the team did this weekend," Cornell said. "Our mile relay and 1500 relay teams ran very well, and we had some good individual performances."

"Time's getting short (until the MVC meet) — we've only got a couple meets left."

CANCELLED

The women's track and field team's scheduled competition at the Rosemeier Invitational in Terre Haute, Ind., last weekend was canceled because of inclement weather.

'Great One' leaves an even greater void for game

LOS ANGELES TIMES

Wayne Gretzky was ready to let go of hockey, but hockey wasn't ready to let go of him.

His NHL finale Sunday went to overtime before he and the New York Rangers lost to the Pittsburgh Penguins, 2-1, and his splendid career officially ended.

It wasn't the storybook finish he'd envisioned, but he faced it with his usual dignity and class.

"I said to a good friend, 'This is not a passing on. This is a moving on,'" he said. "I'm going to miss this game. You (reporters) cover it — it's a great game to cover, it's a great game to watch and it's going to kill me not to play. But time does something to you, and it's time."

There is never a good time to lose a Gretzky or a Michael Jordan, athletes who transcend their sports and leave them better than they were when they found them.

But for the NHL, whose stars are not as

"It's going to be difficult for the NHL to lose the best hockey player who ever played the game. He's been such a great ambassador, selling the game not only in Canada, but in the United States."

— MARIO LEMIEUX
FORMER PITTSBURGH PENGUIN STAR

visible or well promoted as NBA players, this loss will sting for a long time.

"It's going to be difficult for the NHL to lose the best hockey player who ever played the game," said retired Penguin star Mario Lemieux, who attended Gretzky's send-off. "He's been such a great ambassador, selling the game not only in Canada, but in the United States."

Certainly, the league is going to miss him and the hockey world is going to miss him. But look at the other side. There's some great young stars coming in, so the future looks good."

The NHL has half a dozen players capable of carrying the torch Gretzky carried so gracefully the last 20 years, but none has the sense of responsibility and media friendliness that made Gretzky the perfect face and voice for a league desperate to be seen as more than a regional oddity.

Jaromir Jagr of the Penguins, whose game-winning goal Sunday ended Gretzky's career, has the world-class skills to be the torchbearer but is uncomfortable in the spotlight.

record with a 2.10 ERA in seven starts this season.

"(Tracy's) playing a key role," Brechtelsbauer said. "She doesn't have the starts that the other two (pitchers) have, but I think she's handling her own every time out and doing very well."

While Stremsterfer and Winters have pitched for a combined total of 273.1 innings this season, Rempescher has been limited to only 26.2 innings of work, giving up only eight earned runs and striking out

18. Brechtelsbauer has been pleased with Rempescher's ability to accept her role on the pitching staff as well as contribute solid innings when called upon.

"I think she handles it well," Brechtelsbauer said. "She's done a very good job in games that we've started her to pitch. Those innings that she pitches for us are very, very critical. It's that many less that Erin and Carisa have to pitch to keep them strong down the stretch."

Rempescher may not be the only Saluki seeing some additional playing time against SLU (4-36 prior to Monday's doubleheader with Wichita State University).

Brechtelsbauer hopes to utilize most of her roster in order to keep everyone well-rested for the three remaining games the Salukis have this week.

"We'll try to use our roster so we can keep everybody fresh and also build some experience throughout the roster," Brechtelsbauer said.

Offensively, the Salukis will try to maintain the hitting tear they have been on the past few weeks led by Stremsterfer and senior infielder/outfielder Jaymie Cowell.

Stremsterfer is in the midst of a career-high 13-game hitting streak that has raised her average to .302, while Cowell leads the team with a .359 average.

Sophomore center fielder Marja Viechhaus, who tied the SIUC all-time career home run record (16) Thursday after hitting her eighth home run for the season, will have an opportunity to break the record today against the Billikens.

Although the Salukis pounded SLU 8-0 at the Saluki Invitational (March 26), Brechtelsbauer does not want her team to look toward Wednesday's matchup with regional power University of Missouri.

"You have to be careful about that," Brechtelsbauer said. "Those are the teams that can sneak up on you if you take them for granted. Although they don't have a great record, they can sneak up on you."

(21-14-1) in a makeup game of the April 14 rainout. The Thoroughbreds have played just 2-7 baseball in the month of April.

SIUC coach Dan Callahan and company can relate because they have gone through a variety of mood swings in recent weeks.

"After the Southwest (Missouri State) weekend we were very, very disappointed because things were going so well," Callahan said. "After the Creighton weekend, I think we were shocked. And after this weekend, it has just got to the point now that it's disappointing."

But whether the team has undergone an identity crisis or just a bad case of the blues, it does not matter. With 19 games left in the 1999 season, the Salukis quickly have to overcome all of their woes soon just to have a chance at the MVC crown.

"When things have been going as poorly as they've gone the past three weeks, it's easy to extenuate the negatives, and that's what we don't need to do. I've seen some things that I liked, and I think our guys are still playing hard."

Some other positives Callahan has seen in his team is in the relief pitching department. Luke Nelson

(2-0, 3.91 ERA) and Donnie Chester (0.00 ERA in 5.1 innings) have been singled out by Callahan for their solid performances during the skid.

Battling .324 as a team, the Salukis have struggled offensively at the plate. MVC hit leader Marty Worsley only managed one hit in 14 at-bats against the Shockers.

Other top hitters for the Salukis are senior Joe Schley (.385) and Dave Pohlman (.355).

But the big test for the Salukis may come in the form of starting pitching.

With senior David Piazza nursing a tender throwing elbow, the Salukis will have to use a potpourri of pitchers the next few games until it is determined by the team if a Piazza will be able to return. Piazza is expected to meet with doctors either this week or next to determine the length of his injury.

Senior Jason Frasier (4-2) might get the nod as starter in today.

"The one thing that we have to stress to our guys is that we've played the top teams," Callahan said. "The other guys that we are going to play are anywhere from (No.) four to nine (in the conference standings). So when you look at it from a theoretical standpoint, those are games that we should be able to win."

against him like crazy, and [Souza] was pumping his fist toward the crowd," Ifner said. "So in enemy territory, Dante was able to pull out that win, Kenny (Hutz), as a matter a fact, wrote 'Money' next to Dante's name. That's definitely one of our biggest moments of the year."

The win was Santa Cruz's 11th consecutive win and 14th in his last 15 matches. But more importantly, the team win helped secure a 6-3 conference mark, creating a three-way tie with Southwest Missouri State University and Illinois State to fill the third, fourth and fifth seeds of the MVC tournament. The seeds will be determined later this week.

Hutz's 5-7, 6-2, 6-3 victory over the Redbirds' Roger Jung was his first career win over Jung. Hutz has either lost to Jung in the past or did not finish the match because a winner had already been decided.

"This was a real hurdle for Kenny that he wanted to get over," Ifner said. "This was huge because he has had some tough matches at No. 1 and so hopefully this will be a real positive for him to take into the tournament."

Against Indiana State Friday, the SIUC dropped a hard-fought 6-1 decision, but the Salukis are not discouraged. Once again, it was Santa Cruz coming through for the Salukis. He picked up the only singles win by defeating Nathan Crick, 7-5, 6-1.

"What I liked about it most about it when the match was over," Ifner said. "I like that Gustavo [Goncalves] brought it up asking, 'Do you think you can beat the guy you played?' All of the guys felt that 'yeah, I can beat that guy.' So now there's no intimidation factor when we go to the tournament."

A present from Santa

Freshman Dante Santa Cruz is as good as 'money' in the bank

PAUL WLEKLIŃSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC men's tennis lineup card for the 1999 Missouri Valley Conference Tournament will read: No. 1 Kenny Hutz, No. 2 Gustavo Goncalves, No. 3 Valentin Epure, No. 4 Jack Oxler, No. 5 "Money" and No. 6 Tim Marsh.

Money?

Freshman Dante Santa Cruz is now known by his teammates as "Money" after finishing the weekend with a 2-0 record in singles play against Indiana State University and Illinois State University.

The Salukis (13-8, 6-3 in the MVC) finished the weekend 2-1, falling to the Sycamores 6-1 and defeating the Redbirds 4-3. The Salukis defeated Bradley University by default because Saturday's match with the Redbirds lasted six hours, forcing the match to be postponed until Sunday morning. The Braves had only four players show up Sunday, resulting in a 1-0 forfeit in favor of the Salukis.

POSTSEASON

• The 1999 MVC Men's Tennis Tournament begins Friday in Terre Haute, Ind. The Salukis will learn who their first opponent will be Thursday when the coaches decide tournament seeds.

Santa Cruz virtually single-handedly earned SIUC coach Brad Ifner and the Salukis a top-four seed in this coming weekend's MVC tournament — a team goal all season.

With the team match tied at 3-3, Santa Cruz and Illinois State's Fabiano Souza was the last match of the day. Santa Cruz would drop his first set 3-6.

"That's actually the first time that in my mind I thought we may not be able to beat the Redbirds," Ifner said. "The whole time I thought it was going to be tough, but we'll pull it out."

Santa Cruz did just that by taking the second match 6-4. But down 5-4 in the final set, Santa Cruz responded pulling out the next three points taking a 3-6, 6-4, 7-5 win.

Winning with aces

Erin Stremsterfer, Carisa Winters and Tracy Remspecher form one of the most prolific staffs in MVC

S IUC head softball coach Kay Brechtelbauer will probably use her third ace, junior pitcher Tracy Remspecher, when the Salukis (30-14, 7-1) play host to Saint Louis University in a non-conference doubleheader at 3 p.m. today at IAW Fields.

As the pitching duo of junior Carisa Winters (12-8) and sophomore Erin Stremsterfer (14-6) have captured much of the limelight this season for the Saluki pitching staff, Remspecher has quietly compiled a perfect 4-0

Salukis try to stop its eight-game losing skid when they welcome Murray State to Abe Martin Field for a makeup game

MIKE BJORKLUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC baseball team is not just looking for a win, they are desperate for one.

After losing four straight games to Wichita State University this weekend and eight overall, the Salukis will take a victory any way they can get it.

With a 21-15 overall record and 7-12 mark in the Missouri Valley Conference, SIUC will have one more chance to end its losing streak at 3 p.m. today at Abe Martin Field.
