From Scotland, Magical Love

'Brigadoon' Premieres On Campus Tonight

"Brigadoon," the story of a magical Scottish village, will premiere at 8 o'clock tonight in Shryock Auditorium. The musical is presented by the Summer Music Theater.

The story centers around the experiences of two Americans who lose their way while hunting in the wilds of Scotland. They come upon the small village of Brigadoon which comes to life one day every 100 years. The two Americans, played by Robert Guy and William McHughes, become emotionally involved with the inhabitants of the village.

The stage director for the play is Joseph Stockdale, who has directed 60 major productions for the Purdue University Theater. He is professor of speech and director of the experimental theater at Purdue.

The choreographer and ensemble director is Gilbert Reed, director of the Ballet Department in the School of Music at Indiana University. He has also been a solo dancer with the Metropolitan Opera and the Ballet Russe de Monte.

"Brigadoon" is the final production of the Summer Music Theater.

Other major roles are played by Susie Webb, Elizabeth Webb, William Wallis, Guy Klopp, Linda Sublett, Jim Fox, Al Hapke and Sondra Sugai.

The musical will run today, Saturday and Aug. 26 and 27. Tickets are now on sale for $1 and $1.50 at the Student Activities Office in the University Center.

A public ceremony featuring the Black Knights Drum and Bugle Corps from Belleville will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the SIU Arena. This nationally rated corps has won numerous awards, including three commendations from the United States government.

A memorial service, in which the Legion of Honor investiture will be granted to 12 men, will also be held today.

Other events of the weekend will include athletic competition among the boys to determine state championships in golf, tennis and bowling. A new state master counselor will be elected and a new state sweetheart will be crowned.

A grand banquet will be held at 6 p.m. Saturday in the University Center Ballroom. The keynote speaker will be Ross Randolph, state director of public safety.

The conclave will close Sunday following a breakfast at the University Center Ballroom where awards will be distributed, officers will be installed and the new sweetheart will be crowned.

Youth Workshop Will Close Today

The Youth World workshop, which served to acquaint Illinois high school students with local, state and national government, will hold its closing sessions today.

Afak Haydar, assistant professor of government at Illinois State University, will speak at the banquet to be held tonight.

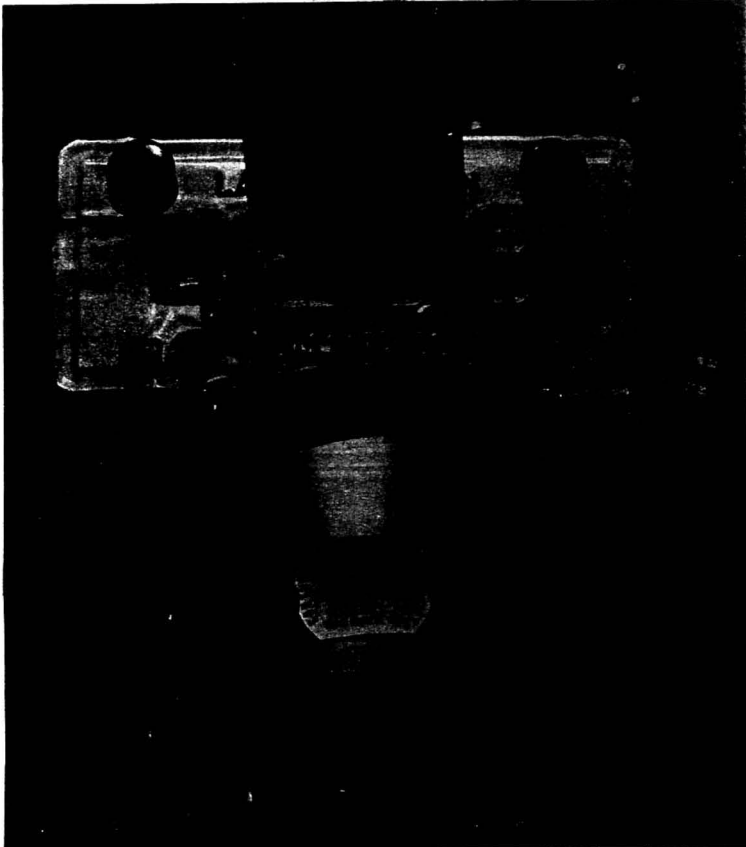

During the day the students will present their final draft of a U.N. resolution, which they have worked on in mock U.N. sessions this week. A review session on parliamentary procedures will also be held.

Two Downtown Lots

Free City Parking Areas Set for Cycles, Council Orders Study of Taxi Charges

The Carbondale City Council has approved some free parking spaces in two downtown lots for motorcycles and has ordered a study into recent increases in taxi cab fares.

The two lots open to free cycle parking until Jan. 1 are behind the Varsity Theater and on Monroe Street just west of Illinois Avenue. The council hopes the two lots will leave more space downtown for automobile parking.

In other action, the Council's taxi committee reported it has not met yet to discuss the fare increase that went into effect May 9.

The Council has approved the boundary changes and fare increase, but reportedly was not aware of how the new ordinance differed from the old one.

Three members of the City Council are on the taxi committee, but only one was able to attend a hearing Aug. 4. The hearing arose from complaints by SIU students and others over the increased fares and zone changes.

Students' Paychecks Ready This Morning

Student payroll checks for July will be available today in Room H of the activities area in the University Center.

According to Arthur Albon, office supervisor of personnel, distribution will probably begin at 9 a.m. and continue until 5 p.m.

Coed Killed In Car Crash In Chicago

Elaine M. Jurish, an SIU student from Chicago, was killed early Wednesday when she was thrown from an auto in a two-car accident at West 62nd and South Rockwell Streets in Chicago.

Miss Jurish, 20, was a freshman majoring in psychology. She lived in Neely Hall last year. She was the daughter of John A. Jurish of 6125 S. Fairfield St.

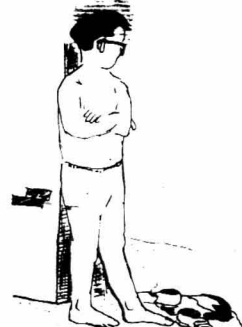

She was riding in a westbound auto on West 62nd Street when it hit a car that was southbound on South Rockwell, according to police.

The driver of the second car, Carol Culler, was taken to a hospital with a broken collar bone, a broken leg and facial cuts.

The driver of the car in which Miss Jurish was riding was not injured.

Police said Miss Culler would be charged with failure to yield the right of way.

Brooks to Judge Kentucky Project

Robert J. Brooks will visit four Kentucky correctional institutions during the week of Aug. 24-31, evaluating a special training project for young offenders.

The visit will be his fourth as invited consultant to the Kentucky Corrections Department, which conducts the project with financial support from the federal Office of Economic Opportunity.

The project involves pre-employment training at the La Grange State Reformatory, followed by parole to Community Guidance Centers at Louisville, Harlan and Paintsville.

Brooks, a staff member in the SIU Center for the Study of Crime, Delinquency and Corrections, will visit each of the four project sites, then make recommendations to the State Corrections Department for possible project improvements.

CONCERT—Herbert Levinson will conduct the Summer Orchestra in concert at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the University Center. He will be assisted by Jeordano Martinez, a graduate student in music, who will join the University of Kentucky music faculty in the fall. Six students will be featured in the Mozart Symphony Concertante in E flat major.

Student-Produced Area Movie To Premiere in Carbondale

"Wings Over Egypt," a motion picture documentary dedicated to the southern Illinois area, will premiere Sept. 20 at the Holiday Inn in Carbondale.

All production and financing of the picture were done by a group of SIU students.

According to Michael Ellis, president of Lincana Pictures which produced the film, the picture is designed to promote tourism in the Carbondale area and to serve as a tribute to "Little Egypt's" natural beauty and potential.

Production, writing, photographing and preparing the color movie took three years and about $1,000. The production crew traveled over 1,000 miles in southern Illinois during the filming.

Ellis, an SIU student from Murphysboro, wrote and directed the production. The executive producer is Patricia Humm, also a student from Murphysboro.

Filming of the picture was completed in June and closed screening will be shown on Sunday.

Swimmers Fined On U. S. Charge

Three SIU students were the first persons to be prosecuted under a federal regulation limiting swimming at Crab Orchard Lake to designated beaches.

Roger Priest, an officer at the refuge, identified the students as Gary Raines of Murphysboro, Gary Senteney of Arwood and James Vann of Mount Sterling.

Priest said Vann and Senteney were swimming in an undesignated area July 9, and Raines the following day.

The three pleaded guilty Aug. 8 and were fined $50 each by U.S. Commissioner Charles C. Hines in Carbondale, Priest said.

It Isn't for Long, So Struggle On

August begins the traditional "dog days" in Southern Illinois, and unfortunately, August is also the traditional month for summer term finals.

The clash between weather (which has been surprisingly pleasant) and students rushing to finish projects, papers, readings and tests is not a beautiful sight to behold.

Scraggly hair, bare feet or a rough beard are only a few indications that dog days have gotten the best of another student.

The general attitude becomes, "I don't care, just so I can finish these last two weeks." Although this is the attitude of many students at the end of any term, the hot weather and the boredom of summer school make the feeling much more predominant in August.

Unfortunately, there seems to be no real solution. A cool drink or a refreshing swim temporarily solve the heat problem, but all the time the student is resting so he can survive in the heat he is worrying because he should be doing something else—like finishing the paper which is due tomorrow.

Perhaps, even though there is no solution, students should take heart from the fact that other students and even their instructors are trying to survive the same hardships, and just keep struggling along.

Letter to the Editor

SIU Officials Show Lack of Judgment

To the editor:

The administration recently presented scandalous budgetary requests before the Illinois Board of Higher Education for funds unable to be spent because of a shortage of construction companies willing to undertake new contracts.

Other University administrators—Morris's and Ruffner's more illustrious peers—decried this irresponsibility because it might curtail their legitimate budgets.

Already, the Illinois Junior College Board slashed monetary requests in half, probably as the result of Southern's fiasco. Along with the mistreatment of students in the demonstrations some months ago and the new motorcycle regulations, this indicates a lack of wisdom on the part of the administration.

Such poor public relations should prompt the president and vice presidents to institute a realistic policy of budgetary requests before public bodies, and a new administration-student government relationship. A higher quality of administration is definitely called for.

Southern's size and articulate student body and government need administrators who can effectively deal with these situations without infringing upon the public interest and student rights. Only a small university with an inarticulate student body might temporarily weather such storms over public relations.

In his general letter to students and their parents, Ruffner promised appropriate studies available before it acts.

The results of the study will probably rubber stamp the ban on motorcycles, since those who will conduct the study were already presented with an accomplished fact. The promise of a study, therefore, carries little weight in his explanation.

Look! Look! See Reformers

Reading Group Out to Change Progressive Educators' Tenets

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones (General Features Corp.)

One of my favorite American organizations is the Reading Reform Foundation of New York City, a group of hopeless busybodies, headed by Watson Washburn, a distinguished New York lawyer, and Mrs. Raymond Rubicam, a battling Scotsdale, Ariz., aristocrat.

This organization was born five years ago when it was discovered that hundreds of thousands of American children weren't learning how to read at all. It declared war on the "progressive" educators of the time, who, having once considered themselves revolutionary, had gradually succeeded in infiltrating and taking over most of the American teachers' colleges and thus became the nation's educational "establishment."

The "progressive" had three major dogmas. One was "life adjustment"; competition must be discouraged as antisocial. Children must adjust to the "peer group," none censured for nonperformance or praised for excellence, and all must be promoted together, regardless of accomplishment, in the interest of absolute equality.

The second was "learning by doing," a peculiar business which in the most advanced progressive schools consisted of spending weeks on the floor building model pyramids and grass huts instead of reading anything about the peoples and history of Africa.

The third was the "look-say" method of learning to read in which students were not encouraged to discover the sounds of letters or syllables, but were supposed to recognize the whole word.

Since each word was to be treated like a Chinese ideograph it was little wonder that primers were filled with exciting repetition: "Look! Look! Look! See John run. Run, John, run," etc. It was also little wonder that years later kids taught by this method would be reading "bouquet" for "banquet," "mystery" for "majesty," "equatorial" for "equilateral," and so on.

At a conference of the Reading Reform Foundation in New York Aug. 4, Arthur Trace Jr., professor of English at John Carroll University, Cleveland, estimated that three-quarters of American youngsters are getting a heavy dose of look-say.

"The teacher's guide to the latest edition of the second and third pre-primer of a look-and-guess series," said Trace, "has 254 pages of instructions in fine print in order to teach a total of 72 words in very large print, which make up 77 pages of some of the worst writing ever published in America."

Vocabularies learned under this system are limited to about 350 words in first grade and 1,200 words in third grade—far smaller than the reading vocabularies of equivalent European children.

No wonder the normally inquisitive and excitement-seeking American child must be taken on endless, utterly boring trips to the zoo and bus station, and is practically ready for cigarettes or lipstick before one dares present the simplest excerpt from Mark Twain, Robert Louis Stevenson or Dickens.

I remember that my pre-progressive primers were filled with fascinating fragment from English and American literature that left me burning with unsatisfied curiosity. I hurried to the school library to find out what happened next. The come-on is as useful in education as it is in swindling the suckers at a carnival.

We had better see that these worlds are open to all young Americans. The "explosion of knowledge" is going to be tough enough without confusing our children with a bankrupt and amply disproven reading theory, the worst legacy of "progressive education's" zaniest years.

Minnesota Urged to Study SIU Ruling on Motorcycles

As motorcycles become increasingly popular with students, the problems they create on campus are assuming serious proportions. Cycles with noisy mufflers have occasioned numerous complaints to University Police, especially during fall, spring and summer when classroom and library windows are left open.

University Police say the number of accidents involving cycles on campus is definitely rising although exact statistics are not yet available. Where to park the cycles and scooters has also caused problems.

The Minnesota Student Association (MSA) and the administration should take a close look at a recent ruling adopted at Southern Illinois University (SIU). After consulting with student and faculty representatives, SIU officials ruled that, beginning this fall, no undergraduates except those living more than two miles from campus may operate motorcycles (a similar rule for cars has been enforced at SIU since 1956).

The SIU administration, however, adopted a policy of gradual enforcement; those students who already own cycles and have made housing arrangements may continue to use cycles (this would not include freshmen).

The situation at SIU, of course, is somewhat different than at the University. The University is much larger and has a higher percentage of commuters than SIU.

But an adaptation of the SIU plan might be feasible here. For instance, all students owning cycles would have to register them with University Police and only those who absolutely need them to get to school would be allowed to operate and park them on campus.

3 Graduates Take Jobs in Forestry

Three June graduates of SIU's four-year forestry degree program have taken positions with national and state forests.

They are Hugh E. Janssen, LaGrange, who has received an appointment as forester with the U.S. Forest Service Division of Timber Management at Ogden, Utah; Anthony E. Miss Ginsburg, who has completed the master of fine arts degree in weaving, design and fabric at Syracuse University, holds the bachelor's degree in art and sociology from the New School for Social Research. She also has studied at the Haystack Mountain School of Crafts, Deer Isle, Maine, and with weaver LUI Blumenuau.

She was employed from 1962 to 1964 by the New York State Division of Housing as an urban planner, and has also been engaged in commercial writing, community work and political research. A native of New York City, her home is in Syracuse, N.Y.

Barquist, a native of Webster City, Iowa, holds the bachelor of fine arts degree from the University of Iowa and the master of fine arts from Drake University. He also has studied at the Summer School of Painting, Saugatuck, Mich., and did graduate work in art education at the University of Iowa. He has taught at St. Mary's School, Martensdale, Iowa, in the Cedar Rapids, Iowa, public schools and, last year, at the University of Iowa.

Obelisk Needs Color Negatives

Students interested in selling color negatives ranging from 2 1/4 x 2 1/4 -inch in size and larger may contact the Obelisk office.

The staff will pay $6 for each transparency selected. Pictures of the campus and mood shots are most needed. The Obelisk office is in Barracks H-2A, near the north entrance of the Agriculture Building.

JACK HARTMAN

Hartman in Line For Memphis Job

Jack Hartman, SIU basketball coach, has reportedly been interviewed for the head basketball job at Memphis State.

There is no official vacancy now at Memphis State, but apparently the resignation of Coach Dean Ehlers is imminent. Hartman may have the inside track on the job if he wants it.

Although Hartman was unavailable for comment he previously said "they invited me to come down and talk about the job this week."

"I've got a good job at SIU, but I feel I owe it to my family to keep an open mind about the future. That's why I went down to talk to them."

'We Have to Keep Marching,' Dr. King Says

CHICAGO (AP)—The next moves in Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s marching campaign for open housing in Chicago were planned in meetings Thursday by leaders of the drive at a conference Wednesday with Chicago political, business and church leaders rejected proposals that they suspend mass demonstrations in return for pledges of help in winning acceptance of Negroes as housing owners and tenants in white residential areas. "We have to keep marching," King told a rally of his followers.

"The Chicago freedom movement will not stop until Negroes can move anywhere they want to in the city." The organized campaign of marches and prayer vigils by Negroes and one hundred or more white supporters, has precipitated violence by crowds of white counter-demonstrators, and overtaxed the city's police force.

Some of the white reaction, expressed in mobbing, jeering and rock and bottle-throwing, has been fanned by extremist teams of the American Nazi party. The Nazis found white reactionists at marches willing brandishers of the swastika.

The marches and demonstrations at real estate offices have been mounted since July 24, and grown from single small actions to as many as three simultaneous marches or a dozen picketings.

O.W. Wilson, Chicago superintendent of police, appealed to Chicagoans to stay away from demonstration areas, adding that protesters have the legal right to march.

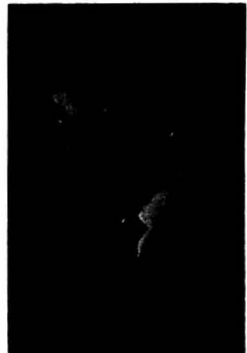

The conference of Negro leaders and white community representatives Wednesday, held under the sponsorship of the Chicago Conference on Religion and Race, kept open the possibility of negotiation by agreeing to meet again today and again Aug. 26.

Participants of the meeting said Mayor Richard J. Daley had implied that he would push for stricter enforcement of Chicago's fair housing ordinance, and leaders of the Chicago Real Estate Board agreed to accept the philosophy of open occupancy provided it was applicable to owners of property as well as agents.

The discussion generally dealt with the 11-point Negro rights program spelled out by King at a rally July 10 in Soldier Field which dealt not only with housing, but education, employment and other areas.

One point of King's platform, rejected by the Real Estate Board, was a demand that real estate agents drop their court fight to annul Gov. Otto Kerner's executive order commanding them to handle only property which owners are willing to sell or rent to Negroes.

A Circuit Court granted a temporary injunction barring enforcement of the order.

Johnson Asks Nation's Youth For Suggestions About Draft

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson called Thursday for suggestions from young people on what is wrong with the "crazy quilt" of the draft.

Speaking to thousands of interns—high school and college students who have been working at government jobs this summer—he recalled that he has set up a presidential commission to study Selective Service.

"We want a just system," he said. "That is why I have called for some fresh, hard questions about the draft:

"Does the present system have flaws or inequities which should be corrected?"

"Can we make the draft fairer and more effective?"

"Can we, without harming national security, establish a practical system of non-military alternatives to the draft?"

Some 14,000 students have been interning with the federal government this summer. An estimated 6,000 gathered at the Sylvan Theater near the foot of the Washington Monument to hear the President.

Afterward, Johnson greeted many of the students, who pressed hard against a double snow fence to shake his hand.

PASADENA, Calif. - (AP)—Lunar Orbiter televised to earth Thursday portions of 40 photos snapped earlier as it orbited within 133 miles of a little-known area of the moon called Mare Smythii.

They showed an apparently flat plain pocked by craters. The scenes were reminiscent of those televised by Ranger and Surveyor spacecraft.

Quality was indistinct and blurred—not up to clear shots of the earlier craft. Scientists said quality will be markedly improved later by laboratory processing.

Television networks broadcast the pictures as they were received.

Scientists said information radioed from the spacecraft indicated the camera shutters worked perfectly when the first 20 frames were snapped.

Experts said there were unexplained changes in the spacecraft's orbit of the moon but they expected no photographic difficulties.

This is Year of Spitball

More Pitchers Becoming Wet After Years of Relative Drought

This is the year of the spitball in major league baseball, with managers talking about it, players joking about it, and pitchers throwing it.

Although outlawed, few hurlers have been unable to overcome the temptation to throw it, if just for the novelty of it.

A few fellows, whose number is growing, turn their backs on both the ruling and the umpires and are enjoying a lot of laughs on their way to the plate.

Throwing a spitter today is about as easy as it is access to a speakeasy during the height of prohibition...and that wasn't too much of a task, or so we of the younger generation are told.

Just who threw the first spitball will never be known. Some tobacco-chewing country boy probably missed the ground with his aim one day and didn't bother to wipe off the ball. Then he threw it, and voila! By sheer chance, the ball did everything but talk.

"Gawd," the catcher must have said, and "Gawd," the batter must have said, and "Gawd, how did I do that?" the pitcher must have thought to himself.

Then, to make a long story short, pitchers began to learn to control the pitch that was to leave its mark in baseball.

Baseball history tells us that one of the wettest of the wet ever to take the mound was a fellow by the name of Jack Chesbro, who came into prominence at the turn of the century.

Not only did his spitball give the batters trouble, but it nearly drove his teammates stark mad. Chesbro soaked the ball so liberally that fielding a ground ball or snatching a routine fly ball became an art.

Ed Walsh was perhaps the most famous thrower of the pitch in baseball, although it took some convincing that the spitball wouldn't harm his arm.

It seems that Chesbro and a few other early masters of the spitter started a rumor that the pitch was hard on the arm—and that throwing it would shorten a pitcher's career. Still, the top pitchers using the pitch came back year after year, and finally Walsh decided to try it. He became an immediate success, threw the spitball virtually every pitch, and in 1908 came up with a 40-15 record for the Chicago White Sox.

Always trying to improve the natural, most spitballers found that slippery elm proved a good substance to work with, but Red Faber, with the White Sox from 1914 to 1933, grew fond of chewing tobacco. "Too much saliva," was his comment on the slippery elm, and chewing gum had its drawbacks to Faber.

"Tobacco seemed to give me just the right effect," he once said, "but I chewed it Once he held it so hard that he broke his thumb in throwing the ball.

Grimes was "a good one" as they say, with four 20-game seasons to his credit during his career.

And so it was with the spitters, colorful in a bygone era which is trying, it seems, to slip into the game once again.

And after all, what would be so bad about it? Along came the curve, the sinker, the screwball, the knuckleball, the palmball, the slip-pitch, the slider, the forkball, the change-up, and many other variations of the baseball thrown to the batter.

After many years of relative drought, a little moisture on the scene might freshen things up a bit.

only while pitching; never used it off the field."

Immortalized as "the last of the spitballers" was Burleigh Grimes, who threw the pitch for 15 years after it was banned to newcomers in 1920.

Grimes' spitter was a good one, said to slide eight inches or so on a good day. Unlike his contemporary users of the pitch, Burleigh held the ball with the grip of a vice before releasing it.
