Oil talks may be authorized

Ross Becker
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A majority of the 11-member Campus Natural Areas Committee said Wednesday that they will recommend President Warren W. Brandt begin oil lease negotiations — with APCO Petroleum Corp.

Contacted individually by the Daily Egyptian, seven members said they will support the recommendation if no problems arise at a Friday meeting. One member will abstain if the vote is taken Friday. Two members were unavailable for comment.

Committee chairman Gilbert H. Kroening, School of Agriculture dean, supports the recommendation "as long as the university research lots and the beauty of the campus are protected." SIU should not "do anything environmentally unsound," he said.

Committee member Tom Newman, graduate student in the Department of Plant and Soil Sciences, representing the Graduate Student Council, said he "is leaning towards recommending negotiations." But proper safeguards, including University approval of drilling locations, must be granted to SIU, he said.

Since significant problems have not arisen at other Universities where oil drilling exists, "there is no reason why SIU shouldn't negotiate," according to James Tyrrell, Graduate Council representative and assistant professor of chemistry and biochemistry.

Jack Leggett, Administrative and Staff Professional Council, Don Gladden, Civil Service Employees Council; and two faculty representatives Gerald D. Coorts, Department of Plant and Soil Sciences professor, and Paul Roth, associate professor in the Department of Forestry, all favor President Brandt entering into negotiations with APCO if information presented at Friday's meeting does not show that oil drilling would be harmful to SIU.

The lone dissenter to the proposal is Student Government representative

Betty Fitzmaurice, recreation major. "The main objection I feel is that the academic community. The University is having a hard time keeping its head above the water—getting involved with big corporations is dangerous," she said.

Faculty representative W.E. Klimstra, professor in the Wildlife Research Laboratory will abstain if a vote is taken at the Friday meeting, he said. The whole issue has become confused," he said.

"I can't cast a vote at this point. I'm not sure if the committee is discussing negotiations or leasing. To me negotiations mean asking a company what they have to offer," he said.

Robert Mohlenbrock, botany professor, and William E. O'Brien, professor in the Department of Recreation, were not available for comment. Mohlenbrock and O'Brien are faculty representatives to the committee.

APCO is interested in leasing 900 acres of University owned land for oil exploration, according to T. Richard Mager, vice president of development and services. The company has offered to pay SIU a bonus fee of $5 per acre for signing the lease, he said.

APCO would also pay a royalty of three-sixteenths on any oil recovered from wells on SIU property, Mager said. In addition the University would receive a rental fee of $1 per acre, he said.

Student aid woes hearing planned

By Jim Murphy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Students plagued with financial aid problems will have the opportunity next week to testify before a panel charged with examining the shortcomings of financial aid programs.

The two-day hearings into financial aid problems programs, will be held in the Student Center Vermillion room Feb. 26 and 27. The local hearings will be video-taped and sent to Springfield where a state-wide hearing is scheduled for March 14-15.

Louise Martin, executive assistant to Student Body President Dennis Sullivan said Wednesday that the local hearings will be open to all SIU students who have had financial aid difficulties. Martin also said area junior college students have been invited to attend the hearings.

Martin said students will be asked to describe aid difficulties to a local panel consisting of two representatives of student government, a student selected at-large, and one administrator.

"There definitely are people here with financial aid problems," Martin said. She added that the panel is interested in investigating a wide range of aid difficulties. This includes the SIU work-study plan, the Illinois State Scholarship and veteran's benefits, Martin said.

She mentioned the ISSC determination of independent student status is particularly irritating to students. Currently there is a three year lag period between the time a student is no longer claimed as a dependent by his parents and the time he can be classified as independent by the ISSC, according to Joseph Zimny, the coordinator of state programs Student Work and Financial Assistance office.

The statewide hearings into financial aid program inequities are being sponsored by the Association of Illinois Student Governments (AISG).

Doug Whitley, AISG executive director, calls financial aid "a life and death situation for many college students.

"We feel there are a number of students in Illinois who are not getting their money's worth," Whitley said. "Through testimony at the hearings, we should be better able to pinpoint many of the roadblocks to effective aid distribution and eligibility."

Can you dig it?

Dirt flies as an auger digs holes for footing for the recently approved two-tier parking garage north of the Student Center. Work on the $83,000 structure has been aided by the area's unseasonably mild weather.

Summer jobs available for students

By Mark Conroy
Student Writer

Hundreds of summer jobs in camps and resorts for counselors, water safety instructors, waitresses and hostesses, are available to SIU students.

"Mainly, we're plugging the resorts because the outlook is good, although other jobs also are available," James F. Moore, coordinator of the Summer Work Program at SIU said.

Moore explained that experience for many of the summer jobs is helpful but not essential.

Recent returns from the Student Work Office show that the largest demand is for recreation and education majors, but there are openings for people in all fields. The national concessionaries have openings for clerks, food service, gas-station attendants. Most large amusement parks like Six Flags in St. Louis have openings of all types.

The Student Work Office can put students in touch with "jobs ranging anywhere from New York to the Rocky Mountains," Moore said.

According to employment statistics, the most money probably can be earned working on farms and canning factories for firms including Del Monte and Jolly Green Giant in Northern Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin. The pay scale for farms and canneries, as a rule, is above that of camps and resorts.

Students who have worked previously under the program have said that during the harvest season, employees work about 12 to 15 hours per day, seven days a week. Moore added that dormitory type housing often is available free. There is a special need for people who can operate tractors, combines and other farm equipment, Moore said.

Feb. 28 is the last date to apply for the summer jobs under the Outstanding Student provision and is also the last date to update a written test eligibility from a previous year.

For more information and appointment contact Moore at the student work office at Washington Square.

Gus says maybe students can get a summer job digging in the oil fields.

Meet the candidates:

Brandhorst in race to solve problems

Editor's Note: This is the sixth and final story in a series of interviews with the six candidates for Carbondale City Council.

By Mary Whitler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Elmer Brandhorst said he is running for city council because he feels it's the best position from which to do something about the problems facing Carbondale.

Brandhorst, 51, of 630 W. Rigdon St., said he is concerned about the problems facing Carbondale. He said his concern has led to involvement in trying to solve the city's problems.

Brandhorst has served on the Carbondale Citizens Advisory Committee since 1970. He has worked on the Carbondale Goals Committee, and is working on the Carbondale Citizens Development Steering Committee. From 1962 to 1966, Brandhorst served on the University Civil Service Employees Advisory Committee. Brandhorst is a business representative for Local 316 of the Service Employees International Union.

Unions and their membership should become more directly involved in the community, Brandhorst said.

The No. 1 problem facing Carbondale "is that they have so many factions," Brandhorst said. "Everybody seems divided." He said, "A little change in attitude would probably help a great deal."

Brandhorst said he would help bring about the attitude change by making "an extra effort on my part to be more available."

Increasing capital improvements is his main goal, Brandhorst said. He said sewage, lighting and storm drainage have been neglected for a long time.

People in Carbondale "see their tax dollar going, but they don't see any direct return for it," Brandhorst said.

He said he would favor building a new city hall downtown if it was done as part of a comprehensive redevelopment plan. Brandhorst said money for a downtown mall is probably available for private developers. He said they probably would be just as willing to finance a downtown mall as they were to finance University Mall.

Brandhorst said the depression of the railroad tracks through town seems to be the most logical approach.

Greenbelts are nice, but Brandhorst said he is not convinced they're necessary. He said money should "provide a much more direct benefit to the people."

Brandhorst said he "learned a great deal about what people want and what their needs and concerns are," while negotiating contracts. He said his work on city committees and his knowledge of city government would aid him as a councilman.

The council should consider lowering water and sewage rates for a period of years to attract industry, Brandhorst said. However, the industries should pay enough and should provide good benefits to the workers, he said. Brandhorst favors small industries which are environmentally clean, he said.

Recreation and tourism needs to be further developed, Brandhorst said. He said if someone passes through Carbondale they spend an average of $7. If they spend a night in Carbondale, that amount increases to $21, Brandhorst said.

Brandhorst said the closing of Illinois Avenue by force is a bad thing because the confrontation always leads to bad words being passed. Alternatives should be explored, he said. He suggested that liquor on campus might help eliminate part of the problem.

Green Earth is using funds which are "indirectly still the taxpayers' money," Brandhorst said. Although the city gave Green Earth the $100,000, Brandhorst said they should still have to explain to the citizens what they're doing with the money.

The proposed U. S. 51 bypass needs to be further studied, and massage parlors should be regulated, Brandhorst said.

News Roundup

Nixon's lawyer, appraiser indicted

WASHINGTON (AP)—A federal grand jury indicted Richard M. Nixon's tax lawyer and a Chicago appraiser Wednesday on criminal charges of faking a $576,000 income tax deduction for Nixon while he was president.

Nixon's 1969 tax return stated that he had given the government papers and other materials valued at $576,000. Nixon claimed a deduction of $95,298.45 that year and said the balance would be carried over for future use. This was disallowed.

Frank Demarco Jr., 49, of Los Angeles, whose firm prepared the tax papers, was charged with conspiracy to defraud the United States, lying to the Internal Revenue Service, and obstructing a congressional inquiry into the tax case.

The three counts carry a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison and $25,000 in fines.

The appraiser, Ralph G. Newman, 63, also was charged with conspiracy, and of aiding and assisting in preparation of a false document to back up the claimed deduction. The two counts carry a maximum penalty of eight years in prison and a $15,000 fine.

A third man involved in the tax case, Edward L. Morgan, pleaded guilty Nov. 8 to a conspiracy count and is serving a four-months prison term.

After 13 months of deliberation, the Student Conduct Code Committee will release its proposed draft Feb. 26.

The conduct code group will meet Thursday afternoon to discuss suggestions from John Huffman, SIU legal counsel (regarding the proposed discipline policy, C. Thomas Busch, assistant to the vice president for student affairs and chairman of the code committee, said Tuesday.

"Mr. Huffman is in the process of responding to the document," Busch said. Busch said Huffman will submit a "formal communication" to the code committee with his comments, although it is uncertain whether Huffman will attend the meeting.

Busch said he recently showed Huffman the revised jurisdiction section "and he thought it was excellent."

Many of legal counsel's previous concerns about portions of the proposed code "have been cleaned up" by the code committee, Busch continued. "There's not a whole lot they (legal counsel) would be concerned about."

Busch said he hopes to release the document to campus constituencies and publish it in the Daily Egyptian (DE) on Feb. 26.

The assistant to the vice president said he hopes to publish the document in the DE twice, although advertising arrangements have not yet been made.

Campus constituencies will have until March 21 to submit recommendations to the code committee, Busch said.

The code committee is scheduled to meet on April 3 to discuss the constituency feedback, Busch said.

He said he hopes to submit the finalized code proposal to Bruce R. Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, by May 1. Busch said he expects the proposal to be acted upon in May at the SIU Board of Trustees meeting in Edwardsville.

Syrian objections worry Kissinger

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger returned Wednesday from his tour of the Middle East and Europe worried that Syria might thwart a Sinai settlement between Egypt and Israel.

Kissinger is understood to be confident that he has narrowed the gap to the point where he can hope to achieve an agreement during a two-week shuttle trip next month.

But Syria's mounting anxiety about gaining nothing itself while Egypt moves toward acceptance of Israel lends substance to reports that President Hafez Assad is urging other Arab nations to resist so-called "partial settlements" that could divide the Arabs.

U.S. officials said apparent efforts by Syria to thwart a separate Egyptian deal with Israel is one of Kissinger's principal worries.

As a result, as Kissinger plans strategy for his return in March, he is exploring ways of linking a Sinai agreement to Syria's drive for a further Israeli withdrawal on the Golan Heights.

One approach believed to be under consideration would be to couple an Egyptian-Israeli agreement with announcement of a date for resumption of the Geneva peace conference.

Search in process for new WIDB head

By Ray Urchel
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Joel Preston, general manager of student radio station WIDB, is conducting a search to find his replacement.

Preston said he must pick a new general manager because the radio station's "working papers" say no person can be general manager for more than two years.

Preston said all of the staff positions are reviewed annually by the station's board of directors, comprised of seven campus constituency representatives. The newly-appointed station boss will fill the other staff positions, including news and music director, Preston said.

Monday was the deadline for station personnel to apply for the position, adding that "four or five" students have shown interest in the position.

Preston, a senior in radio and television, who has worked at the station for 4½ years, will advise to appointed general manager, he said.

The station received a $3,000 loan from SIU two weeks ago to finance the purchase of equipment, which will enable the station to broadcast in stereo.

Preston said "stereo is the number one complaint of students that we can do something about."

He said the station decided to purchase the needed equipment before stereo prices rise next year, as people in the music industry predict they will.

"If we do it now, we'll be able to afford it, he commented. "If we don't do it now, we'll never be able to afford it."

The loan will be repayed by October with advertising revenues.

Preston said campus-wide cable in the future is inevitable. "I see it coming. SIU has a right to it," he commented.

He explained the city of Carbondale which franchises the cable operation has said that since SIU is within city limits it is entitled to have cable.

Initial investigation for cable in dorms is now in progress with Sam Rinella, University housing director, Preston said.

"It's an issue that's going to take one person a lot of time," he said.

BROOKFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Brookfield Zoo has developed the fastest grass this side of the Pecos—growing carpets of it in seven days as a cost-saving food supplement for animals.

Chief accused of murder runs for mayor

BROOKLYN, Ill. (AP)—The police chief of this Southern Illinois village, who is accused of murdering a special deputy, says he is running for mayor.

Chief Frank Skinner, who was suspended last summer after being charged in the November 1973 slaying of special deputy James Bollinger, is one of four candidates who have filed petitions to fill the unexpired term of Mayor George Thomas, who pleaded guilty last year to accepting kickbacks.

"The town needs complete . . . absolute law and order," Skinner said Tuesday outside the courthouse in St. Clair County. "I don't know much about being mayor, but I'm greatly concerned about who is to be mayor. We don't need anyone who may close our town completely, or anyone who may let it run completely down or out of control."

New churches seen as 'alternative'

Editor's note: This is the first of a three-part series on religion. An SIU assistant professor talks about the growth of churches formed since the 1960's and predicts the future of religious groups in America.

By Tim Hastings
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In the last half of the 1960's a rash of new churches and spiritual groups joined the already established hundreds of U.S. religions.

Members of these churches seemed to hold beliefs and worship in ways that were radically different from those of their parents.

Within the last five years, several of these new churches sprang up in Carbondale. They had no ties with traditional denominations in the United States. A list of a few of these local congregations includes the "intellectual" church—Scientology; two groups which sprang up from Eastern philosophy—Ananda Marga Yoga Society and Divine Information Center of the Divine Light Mission; and the independent Christian church—Word of Life Ministries.

Although these groups have never been listed as local churches in the Carbondale City Directory yellow pages, they are still open and functioning.

Charles Lemert, assistant professor in both religious studies and sociology at SIU, made some observations on these new churches. Lemert speculated on what has caused their heavy growth during the last decade and made some predictions about the future of these new religions.

"The members of the new churches are almost exclusively white, middle class, young people," Lemert said. "At the end of the 1960's, these young people may have gotten the idea that something was wrong with the traditional values of the church. They couldn't buy the values and religion of their parents, so they created alternative ones," he said.

Modern society cannot support large social organizations because it no longer possesses universal social values and beliefs, Lemert said. In the 1950's, the people in the United States still shared a common belief in Christianity. At that time, church attendance was very high and the country still was generally considered a Christian nation, he added.

"In recent years, national catastrophes such as the Vietnam war, Watergate and an unstable economy have broken down the common beliefs Americans once shared," Lemert said.

Beliefs and values change quickly because the freedom of personal choice is emphasized in our religion and politics, he said. This country differs from England or France where religion and politics are slow to change because they are founded in vary old traditions, Lemert said.

The individual is as important in today's religious movements as he was in the past. "The test of membership and authenticity is based on a personal encounter in the new religious groups. In the Jesus movement, importance is placed on accepting Christ into one's own life. With Scientologists, therapy and training are intensely personal," Lemert said.

In the beginning, the new religions broke away from middle class values. Lemert said the groups have adopted middle class traits and now contradict their original intentions.

"The Hare Krishna people are big on selling literature and slick movies about their religion. Everything in these new religions is marketed for appeal to American consumers," he said.

"Members of the Jesus movement criticize traditional Christian churches for lacking spirituality," Lemert said. "That criticism is ironic because their own doctrines are almost identical to the traditional church," he said.

Lemert cautiously predicts that the new religions will die out. "Religion is a social phenomenon that requires a large group of members to sustain itself, Lemert said. In the larger society, little support exists for new groups because their beliefs are so unusual, he said. This is especially true of the Eastern religions because their way of thinking is so alien to Americans, he said.

Lemert predicts the people in the Jesus movement may return to the more traditional Christian denominations. He added that members of these new groups will also return to middle class jobs and family relationships and will prefer rural to city living.

And of course, the energy and economic crisis will take a toll on the new groups, according to Lemert. "Necessary miserliness will hit the new religions and cause a reduction in their budget."

Women, minorities learning more skills

By Scott Aiken
Student Writer

SIU women and minority employees have successfully completed many training and development programs in greater numbers than whites and males.

This information was recently submitted by the Office of Training and Development with SIU's affirmative action report required by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Asked why minorities and females were slightly more successful in completing training programs, Barbara Kirkikis, director of Training and Development, said, "More development opportunities are opening up at the University all the time. Possibly women and minorities are more concerned about their growth so they are taking advantage of them."

Training and Development was required to show statistically that the number of females and minority group members who applied for training was proportional to those who received it, Kirkikis said.

If fewer received training than applied for it, in proportion to whites and males who applied, it could indicate bias in entrance requirements.

This was not the case, said Kirkikis. Between July, 1974 and January, 1975, the period from which statistics were compiled, every person who applied and registered for training received it.

Minorities and women comprised 96 per cent of the persons who successfully completed the learner and trainee programs during this period, she said.

The learner program is designed to employ persons who are not qualified for beginning-level Civil Service classifications. The trainee program is similar, but above the beginning level.

Management level courses and seminars showed a high degree of minority and female participation, Kirkikis said.

In the planned programmed management seminar, 46 per cent of those who finished the training successfully were women or of minorities. The fiscal officers' seminar, which teaches university funds management, had the same percentage.

The university managers' seminar, which was 2.5 per cent minority and female when it began in 1970, rose to 15 per cent as of January.

The only program falling short of the 12 per cent minimum participation goal is the safety officer program which had a 9 per cent female and minority participation. However, to be in the safety officer program, a person must be designated for the training by his or her department. "Training and Development has no control over selection for this program," Kirkikis said.

Senate votes oil tax block

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate voted Wednesday to block for 90 days President Ford's $3-per barrel special tax on imported oil, mustering more than enough votes to override a promised veto.

The 66 to 28 vote, three more than what would be needed, sent the House-passed bill to Ford.

There was still doubt, however, that Democrats can muster the required two-thirds majority after a vote. Democrats hope to use this issue as a first step in imposing a substitute for the Ford program, which is intended to discourage gasoline use by driving prices up.

Invitation list growing for Brandt reception

The invitation list for the reception scheduled Friday for President and Mrs. Warren Brandt has grown severalfold.

Already billed as a come-one, come-all affair for the people of Southern Illinois, the reception is especially meant to give parents of SIU-C students an opportunity to meet President and Mrs. Brandt, a member of the reception planning committee said Wednesday.

"All students are invited to invite their parents," said Kenneth W. Serfass, dean of University Programs.

"The Brandts are interested in meeting the parents of the students and we're hoping the parents will take the opportunity to meet them."

The reception will be 7:30 to 10 p.m. in the Student Center ballrooms. It's informal—fancy dress is not required, reception planners have stressed.

It will be the last in a series of campus receptions to introduce President and Mrs. Brandt to students, faculty and staff and to residents of the area. About 1,400 faculty and staff members met the Brandts Jan. 24.

Legal beagle

This University will have an opportunity to do something about protecting students' rights next month when the Board of Trustees considers a proposal establishing a pre-paid legal services program for students.

The plan, advanced by Student Government, is a good one. The attorney is direly needed. After more than eight months on the drawing table and countless meetings between the program's chief architect Forest Lightle, executive assistant to student body president, and SIU legal counsel John Huffman, the plan is nearing completion.

Pending board approval, the students' attorney program would work like this: Students will be charged a $1 fee-assessment each semester, with refunds available for those not desiring to participate. A non-profit corporation will be established to hire and fire the attorney and set wages. This corporation will engage the University to collect the fees through a contract.

The incorporation of the program into an independent body is its main strength. The corporation will be governed by a seven-member board of directors, to be appointed the first year by Student Body President Dennis Sullivan and elected thereafter. Appointments will include a person from University Legal Counsel and one faculty member. In other attorney programs in Illinois schools, governance of the operations is maintained by student government, making the position more directly in line with administrative authority. Incorporation, however, will free the attorney from subjugation to any special-interest body.

The attorney's only duties will be to protect the rights of students belonging to the program. He will be able to bring suit against landlords, merchants and any individuals except the University itself, the Board of Trustees or anyone acting as an official representative of the University.

Therein lies the program's weakness.

While the attorney would be an enormous help for students who have been defrauded or unjustly treated by landlords or merchants, he will be limited to "advice only" in cases involving the University. We see this as a further limitation of due process in SIU's disciplinary system.

The students' attorney will be able to defend clients in any court of law for any offense except a felony. But that limitation is acceptable, for the main thrust of the attorney's efforts should be directed toward protecting student tenants from those landlords who engage in shady practices and default on contracts.

A pre-paid legal service for students has been a real need for a long time. SIU has lagged behind most other Illinois universities in offering such a service. All students who value the protection of their constitutional rights should support the program when Student Government conducts its drive to collect signatures to show the trustees campus backing for the plan. Once instituted, the attorney's major problem may be determining which cases not to accept.

Truth costs

Should they? Or shouldn't they? These are the simple questions circulating through the minds of many in reference to the decision made by John Dean, Ron Ziegler and a score of others to hit the Watergate lecture circuit. The answer to these questions is equally simple. Why not?

Critics of these lecture tours seem to feel it is morally wrong for these men to make a profit (especially such a large one) from their mistakes. But is money the key issue? I think not. As one student who heard Dean speak at his first engagement at the University of Virginia put it, "four thousands dollars is a small price to pay for the truth."

Dean is currently toying with the idea of ending his tour all together. He too has heard those critics who are knee deep in their own morals. But Dean and all the other Watergate lecturers should be urged to continue on with their tours. What they have to say is far more important than the dollar figures that go along with the lecture.

Whether we accept it or not, the Watergate scandal was indeed of great historical importance and there is no better way to achieve the historical insight that would most certainly accompany these lectures.

Four thousand dollars is a lot of money. But put in its proper perspective, it is a small price to pay. Just think how much Helen Reddy or Robert Goulet charge.

"I SEE YOUR PROBLEM HERE... WHAT YOU NEED IS A WHOLE NEW MACHINE"

By Wes Smith

From picking up liquor to picking up presidents

Tom Leffler and Dan Orescanin are great guys. Plenty of people will tell you that you couldn't find two finer fellows to play a round of golf with or have over for a poker hand and a few beers.

Others could probably remind you that it was a gas to guzzle from a goatskin with Genghis Khan and that the Boston Strangler had a smile that opened more than a few strange doors.

John Mitchell, Bob Haldeman and Charlie Colson could probably keep you in stiches for hours. One way or another.

But I wouldn't lend my American Express card to any of those jovial gents. Nor would I want them running my University or teaching their wives to my students.

In Saturday's paper a letter to the editor took me to task for using editorial space to criticize Danilo Orescanin and "prolong" the matter.

I had an opportunity to talk to the student who wrote the letter. He is a senior in administrative sciences. He listened politely when I told him what I thought of his letter and why I chose to "prolong" the Orescanin affair.

When I finished he said he had not known some of the facts I mentioned but he was enrolled in Dr. Orescanin's class and wanted to use his name for a reference while hunting for a job. He added that the letter might make Orescanin more willing to lend assistance along those lines.

Another man of principle is born.

These are the same principles that just about tore this whole nation apart because powerful men were willing to do anything and everything when they were told it was necessary to achieve an end.

Luckily a few people were stubborn enough to "prolong" the issue. Fortunately for the men of Watergate their association with "men in high places" resulted in rather light punishment.

This buddy system works right here in good ole' Southern Illinois too. At Thursday's (Feb. 13) Board of Trustees meeting I asked SIU-E President John Rendleman why he hired former SIU campus security chief Thomas Leffler as his assistant following the Orescanin trial.

Leffler admitted in the trial that he had served as the pickup man for the liquor.

Rendleman said Leffler had just been following the orders of the vice-president (Orescanin) and could have lost his job if he had disobeyed.

He also said he has "known Tom for a long time." Obviously a good qualification where this type of mentality pervades.

As we were leaving the board meeting President Rendleman walked out ahead of us and got into a car with a well-tanned driver behind the wheel. They drove off smiling.

The driver was Tom Leffler.

Getting a lot of mileage out of those qualifications, isn't he?

Women are better than men; that's all

By Mary E. Gardner
Student Writer

Women unite! We must come to grips with this abomination, this so-called Equal Rights Amendment. The ERA is a threat to our social structure. We must nip this thing in the bud before it destroys our lives. If passed, the ERA will bring about changes in divorce laws. Women capable of working, of earning their own livings, would have to face the possibility of being forced to do so. Men would no longer have the legal obligation to support their ex-wives, increasing alimony payments in direct proportion to increases in their earnings. Women would no longer have the assurance that their ex-husbands would be punished for forcing their wives to divorce them. Divorce decrees would no longer have long involved passages which forever absolve the wife of wrongdoing in the marriage.

Viewpoint

The adoption of the ERA would mean an end to an era; an era of cooking and curlers and soap operas in the afternoon. If this amendment is passed, we will see men quitting their jobs by the thousands to neglect the support of their families. Women shall be called upon to support their families by themselves.

At the very heart of the ERA is fair competition. During this time of high unemployment rates the passing of the ERA would open the job market to millions of conniving men in search of work. Is it right that women should have to compete with men in such areas as child rearing? Can we leave the impressionable minds of our six-year-olds in the care of men? When the future of a nation depends upon the careful rearing of our children we cannot allow inferior care (which they would undoubtedly get from men) to damage our children's thinking.

It has always been an accepted fact that men are incapable of such work as scrubbing floors and washing windows. The ERA implies they are able to keep house. Are we to sit back while our children are forced into diets consisting of hot dogs and potato chips merely because men are not intellectually capable of cooking? Indeed, men running households would cause the inevitable economic collapse of our society. Each time the budget refused to balance they would insist upon raising it to meet their expenditures as they do in Washington. I say, if men cannot run the country satisfactorily they would not be able to run households.

Men and women have historically had their places in society. While men were free to indulge in the frivolities of governing, the more intelligent sex was entrusted with keeping the society together. After all, it was women who raised the men. Now in a time of economic instability, when inflation and recession both run rampant, the men propose to pass the ERA with the goal of worming in on our territory, where there is perpetual employment.

Men are not as good as women are and they never will be. They should not be allowed to compete with women and must be kept down. Had God wanted men to be equal to women he would have given them dresses.

A cowed faculty says 'moo'

To the Daily Egyptian:

Thank you and Wes Smith for your coverage of my suit in the Feb. 7 Daily Egyptian ("Terminated Employee Files Suit").

You realize, of course, that using statements out of context and editing inevitably generate meanings not intended by the interviewee and even some inaccuracies.

No contact as of this date was made with the Board of Trustees and wages were stopped in July of 1974. All known conciliatory personnel were contacted; when the last one, indicated to me by Mr. Lesar, failed to act, there was nothing left but legal action to have my status recognized and respected.

The national condemnation of administrative actions at SIU is public knowledge; the endless law-suits of faculty to see that rights are respected speak eloquently of the quality of our administrators. What has not been mentioned is this: How long will the state legislature appropriate millions of dollars to SIU so that the administration can fight the federal and state laws that every public officials has sworn to uphold? Yes, when will the violators of public trusts be called to account?

Saddest of all is the fact that the violation of tenure reflects on the accreditation of the University. If accreditation is suspended or denied because of personnel actions in open violation of association guidelines, tens of thousands of students may have to go elsewhere to complete their programs—just like the ones forced out of programs closed down because of "computer errors."

In my own way I am trying to forestall a major tragedy. A cowed faculty may be spurred to lift its head from the sand.

It's big of you, SIU

To the Daily Egyptian:

This weekend I received a letter notifying me that my education at SIU has been abruptly terminated. Needless to say, I am not particularly pleased.

During the first semester I received a taste of University Park's concept of justice when I was pronounced guilty of possession and use of marijuana because I made the mistake of burning incense in my room. Two RA's preferred to label the odor "the smell of marijuana." After searching the ashtrays and waste baskets in my room, they were unable to provide any evidence of my alleged use of the drug.

The disgust I felt apparently did not help matters much at my J-Board hearing as I was found guilty and ultimately assigned a probationary period extending through the fall semester.

On Dec. 18 (during finals week), I "committed" still another crime. I tossed a bowl of cottage cheese on the floor of the renowned Trueblood Cafeteria. Perhaps, this seems a bit violent; but considering the quality of the food and the pressure and stress endured as a result of exams; I hardly think the handcuffs applied by the SIU Security Police were necessary. I did not hit anyone with the food; nor did I try to.

After entering the SIU police station, I was not given the opportunity to defend myself. Instead testimony from seven so-called witnesses was taken and recorded. I was given an ultimatum: pay $50 or spend the night in jail. I presumed the $50 my friends rounded up was more than a sufficient price to pay for my actions and I thought the matter finished.

The letter I received this weekend (Thank you SIU for being so personal) informed me that I was pronounced guilty of the above mentioned incident because I was absent for the judicial hearing regarding it. I guess it doesn't matter that I was not notified I had a hearing to attend.

Presently, I am attempting to prevent SIU from erasing my number from their files, in the form of an appeal. Any assistance I might receive would be most appreciated. After all, it could happen to YOU.

Saluki dawgs

To the Daily Egyptian:

In answer to Sports Editor Ron Sutton's request for readers to step up to the soapbox in reply to the using of "Dogs" in place of the Salukis, I for one am proud to be a Saluki—I don't want to be a Dog (or chick either, for that matter).

I've been around SIU for a while and am still proud of this place even though I recognize its shortcomings — I hate to see it go to the "Dogs." Let's at least keep the basketball Salukis above that. Now the football "Dogs"....maybe.

When SIU went to the NIT in 1967, the Salukis made headlines, people wanted to know "What's a Saluki?" It was catchy and different. Our name, as well as a couple of outstanding players (Fraizer and Garrett) gained us fame, let's keep it that way....Salukis, a classy group.

River Niger overflow saved by excellent cast, good script

By Deborah Singer and
Michael Hawley
Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

Compelled to flow against its natural course, the River Niger was ripped from its African womb and forced to cross the Atlantic.

Making its way up the Hudson, Niger struggled to maintain dignity, only to be shackled by the white disdain of Harlem River Drive. "I am the River Niger. I wriggle and scream and run. Hear my waters," proclaims poet Johnny Williams, an ageing black housepainter and alcoholic. As patriarchal family head in the play, "The River Niger," this poem released Williams' feelings towards the injustices suffered by his race and family.

A play which explored the love, problems and aspirations of human beings emmeshed in Harlem's ghetto, "The River Niger" causes the audience to examine their own part in this universal drama of life. The touring company production, presented Tuesday evening in Shryock Auditorium, was a dynamic interpretation of Joseph A. Walker's Tony Award winning play.

Although at times the overabundance of rhetoric tended to cover up the play's more important themes, the very dynamic pace set by the cast and Walker's script made the production a success. The play presented many comic situations but its seriousness was gut-wrenching.

As Johnny Williams, Mel Winkler made his character one of inspiring strength and sensitivity. His performance as the African warrior fighting for a cause on a battlefield he can't find, stood out as the evening's finest.

Mattie, Williams' adored wife and mother of his son, Jeff, was adequately portrayed by Olivia Williams. Although appropriately sympathetic and devoted, her character change near the play's end was too abrupt.

Jeff, whose return after three years of involuntary military servitude functions as the focal point for the play's conflicts, was played by Obaka Adedunyo. Well cast in the role of a young man desirous of being his own person, not a "super-nigger," Adedunyo's performance contributed a sizable portion to the play's dynamism.

As Jeff's South African-born girlfriend Johnson was sensitive in this supporting role, but not always in character. Jeffrey Miller as the Williams' cynical neighbor, Dr. Dudley Stanton, gave the least inspiring performance of the evening.

In the stereotyped role of Wilhelmina Brown, the Williams' hymn-singing liquor-drinking old-fashioned grandmother, Thelma Louise Carter had some of the play's funniest material to work with. The main problem with her performance was that she never actually extended the characterization beyond the stereotyped confines of "Grandma."

Of the "River Niger's" usually adequate supporting cast, deserving special mention is Bill Henry Douglass, in the role of Skeeter, the junkie.

As a piece of theater, "The River Niger," was powerful and entertaining, but suffered from scenes involving little or no action, to others that were too action-packed for the audience to find credible.

Although some members of the audience objected to the extravagant use of profane nomenclature throughout the play, it seemed to serve its dramatic purpose. And as Mattie Williams said, "You gotta swallow a whole lot of truth around here to give folks dignity."

Rat rancher discovers business is booming

AVON, Ind. (AP)—If you can't beat the rat race, join it. That seems to be the philosophy of Bob Murphy, a central Indiana farmer with a new breed of livestock. As they say in the business, Murphy is a "rat rancher."

Calipre stage production set

"Who Are We After All?," a Reader's Theatre production, will be presented at 8 p.m. February 20, 21, and 22, at the Calipre stage, in the Communications Building. Directed by Gordon Griffin, a graduate assistant in the speech department, the production is compiled from Walt Whitman's "Leaves of Grass." Whitman, in order to force his readers into an awareness of the entirety of life, mentions the unmentionable, according to Griffin. "He dwells on the ugly, the crude, and the taboo," he said. "In directing and studying 'Leaves of Grass,' I find myself not presenting Walt Whitman, but myself contained within his poetry." Griffin explained he will present the "ugly" and the "crude" as well as the beautiful to inspire the viewer to create his own meaning and interpretation. Perhaps the viewer can answer the question, "Who Are we after all" or at least who am I?, he added. The script contains original music composed by Dan Irick, a student at SIU, and the cast includes Jane Baysinger, Linda Lorenz, Steve Rosen, Scott Sims, Gene Dyer, Gretchen Jack, Ross Whatt and Pat Drazen, all SIU Students. Admission for the production is $1. Reservations may be made by calling 453-2291.

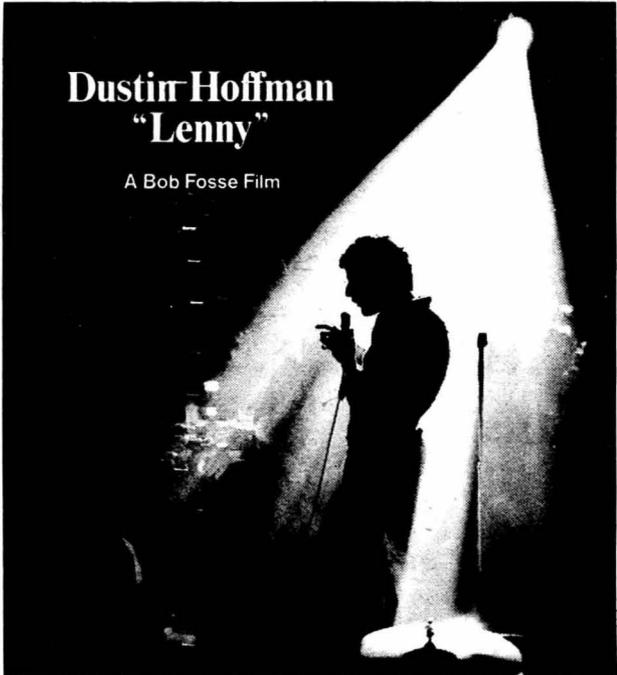

He is capitalizing on the current demand for mice and rats in animal research, something Indiana University spent $25,000 on last year. In fact, the university buys 90 percent of its mice and rats from Murphy. Murphy, 39, was a typical farmer until five years ago when his brother, a veterinarian, gave him the idea of beginning to raise the rodents for profits. What started from a few cages in a small trailer is now Murphy Breeding Laboratories, Inc., a giant "rat factory" producing about 5,000 mice, 1,000 rats and 500 guinea pigs a week.

The rat ranch is situated on 42 acres owned by Murphy's corporation west of here. The building contains 14 large rooms where mice, rats and guinea pigs are bred. "We want to double the building space we have now to make one entire building for guinea pigs," says Murphy. "Right now we are the largest breeders of guinea pigs in the U.S."

Murphy says five years of hard work, 10 hours a day every day, have been put into the business. "The last five years all the profits have been going back into the business," he explained. "I'll never retire, but if we keep on going like we have been, we'll be able to retire at a young age—if we don't kill ourselves." About 200 mice and 75 rats of Murphy's are used weekly in various departments at IU. The psychology department is running a series of tests on causes of aggression in mice, and the microbiology department uses mice for experiments to determine toxic doses of drugs. In addition to Indiana, Murphy also ships mice to Purdue and Illinois universities.

Students in the Department of Cinema and Photography announced Wednesday the reactivation of the SIU Photography Society.

John Ravella, president and senior in photography, said he expects 100 persons to attend the first meeting of the society at 7 p.m. Thursday, in the Student Center Ballroom A. "Our main concern is to promote overdue recognition for SIU photographers," Ravella said.

At its first session the organization will organize membership, establish committees and solicit support, Ravella explained.

The society has three goals:

—Sponsor meetings, social events, special projects, guest speakers, films, print sales and auctions.

—Organize group exhibitions for galleries and museums through local and traveling shows, and publish an SIU photography annual containing members' work.

—Facilitate photography exchanges with other universities.

First activity of the chapter will be a teach-in on radical economics to be held later this month. The local URPE will also engage in research projects, study groups, political action and strike support, Hamilton said.

Roam around Europe all summer for $180.

A Student-Railpass gives you two months of unlimited Second Class rail travel through 13 European countries. Buy one, we'll give you a map, and where you go next is your own business.

All we'll say is that European trains are a sensational way to get there, be it Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden or Switzerland.

100,000 miles of track link cities, towns and historic, scenic and social attractions. Our trains are fast, modern, convenient, clean and comfortable.

And you'll discover there's very little second class about Second Class. You can sleep in a couchette for only $6.00 a night. And if you want to eat on a budget, inexpensive snacks are often available.

You can even take a cruise on the Rhine, if you like. Eurailpass is valid on many European ferries, river and lake steamers and hydrofoils. It also offers you substantially reduced fares on many side excursions you might want to take by motor coach.

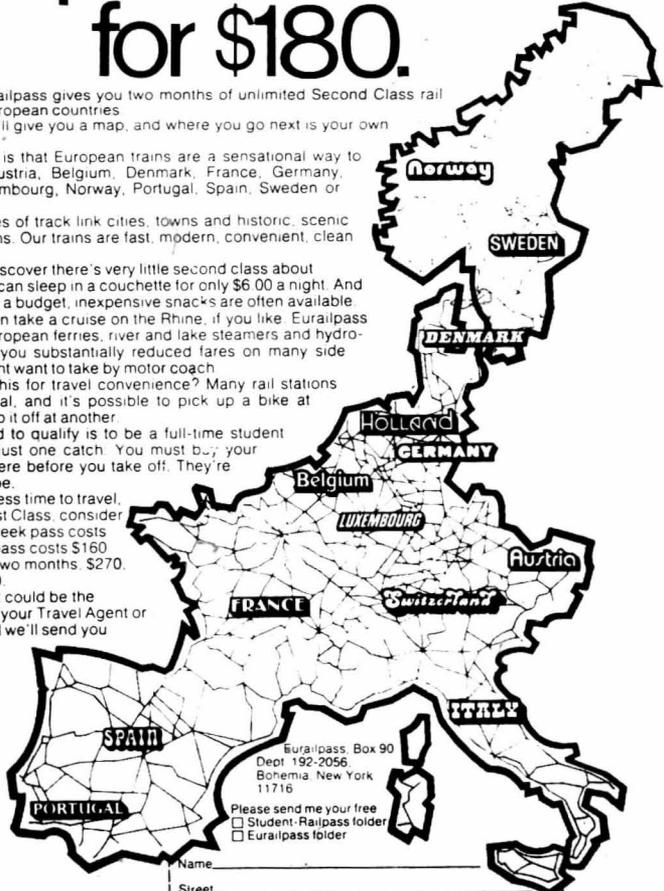

And how's this for travel convenience? Many rail stations offer bikes for rental, and it's possible to pick up a bike at one station and drop it off at another.

All you need to qualify is to be a full-time student under 26. There's just one catch: You must buy your Student-Railpass here before you take off. They're not for sale in Europe.

If you have less time to travel, or want to travel First Class, consider Eurailpass. A two-week pass costs $130. Three-week pass costs $160. One month, $200. Two months, $270. Three months, $330.

Don't wait. It could be the trip of your life. See your Travel Agent or clip the coupon and we'll send you all the facts.

'Donkey farming' is family tradition

LEBANON, N.J. (AP)—At Box Hill Farm, one of the crops is donkeys.

The Wepler family owns the 130-acre farm in the middle of northwestern New Jersey's dairy country, has raised Sardinian donkeys for nearly 25 years.

"Some friends of my parents had a couple of donkeys, and my parents fell in love with them," says Jim Wepler.

The Weplers imported the five donkeys in their original herd from Sardinia, a tiny island off the coast of Italy. The herd now numbers 60.

The donkeys are no bigger than some very large dogs. When fully grown, their backs are about three feet high. Their coats are brown or gray, and cross-shaped markings of dark brown fur embellish their backs.

"The cross is supposed to be their reward for carrying Mary to Bethlehem so Christ could be born," says Wepler. "Their basic selling point is that they're such nice animals. Donkeys are docile and very gentle, and they get along with other animals like dogs, horses and cows," says Wepler.

Most of the donkeys the farm sells are bought for children, according to Wepler.

"They don't require much care either," Wepler adds. "They don't get sick much, they aren't finicky eaters and they don't require special stables or anything."

"A lot of grandchildren buy them and keep them in their yards for the grandchildren to ride when they visit," he says.

The donkeys can carry about 75 pounds off their backs, and can pull carts.

"We also sell some to race tracks that use them for mascots," Wepler says.

pler says. "Some tracks put a donkey in the stable with the high-strung thoroughbreds to calm the horses down. We sell one to a children's zoo once in a while, too. Occasionally, we rent a donkey out to someone who's having a party with a Mexican theme or something like that."

Box Hill rents its donkeys for $50 a day. The sale prices are $275 for males, which are called jacks, and $375 for females, or jennets.

The Weplers sell about a dozen donkeys a year, but Wepler says business hasn't been so good this year.

Donkeys reach sexual maturity when they're about 2 years old, breed for about 10 years and often live into their 20s. Jennets usually bear a foal each year after a pregnancy that lasts 11 months.

The Weplers sell most of their jack foals when they're 8 months old, and they keep most of the jennets for the herd. Almost all of their donkeys are females.

"We try to replace the jacks every couple of years just to keep fresh blood in the herd," says Wepler. "That's hard to do because most of the herds around here were started from one of our donkeys."

Bifocal or single vision contact lenses can be fitted now with the aid of a computer. Bifocal lens has no segment or line to distort the vision and looks like a single vision lens.

With the use of a PhotoElectric Keratometer called PEK Mark III a photograph of the eye is made. The photo, along with the prescription is sent to the Visual Data Center in Chicago where they are put into a computer. The computer calculates the structure, size, tear layer and the RX required.

The advantage of the lens is usually more comfort and longer initial wearing time.

Mike 'Dunn' with SIU

Mike Dunn, a former graduate assistant in SIU's Men's Intramural program, has been named the Intramural Director at Marquette University.

Since he doesn't start working until Feb. 25, Dunn is starting to get itchy feet while he waits around in Milwaukee, anticipating his new job. Besides being the IM director, Dunn will also be one of three Recreation directors.

After applying for the opening, Dunn was picked out of three people who went for interviews. "I found out only two weeks ago that I got the job," Dunn said.

Marquette has just finished completion on a $3.5 million building to be used only for the intramural program.

"I'll be trying to develop a strong program with the help of the new building," he said, when contacted in Milwaukee on Wednesday.

Since Marquette is a privately funded university, Dunn will be involved in a different type of intramural program. "We'll have a strong co-ed program, and we'll also be using women to officiate the ballgames."

In his big step up from graduate assistant to director, Dunn will have a "free reign" on Marquette's program.

"The public relations aspect will be different, because at Marquette, intramurals often makes the front page of the campus paper," Dunn said.

Dunn expects almost one-hundred percent participation in Marquette's IM program, and he feels that the new building will help to achieve that goal.

"SIU's biggest need is a Recreation building. When that's finished, they'll probably have three or four times the participation that they have now," Dunn said. "It'll be like the difference between night and day."

Dunn feels that another problem at SIU will end when the new building is finished. "SIU's intramural offices are located at the edge of campus (in the Arena) and they should be centrally located," he commented. "But, again, the new Co-Rec building will take care of that."

Dunn got many ideas from SIU and he feels that this is a tribute to Larry Shaake, the SIU Director of Intramurals.

"Larry kept an open mind to anyone's suggestions about SIU intramurals," he said. "My only suggestion that was never used was to evaluate officials," which Dunn feels is a strong part of the IM program. He is going to try to set up an officials' association at Marquette.

SIU, Stetson cling to tourney hopes

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

"I've been lying to you," Stetson coach Glenn Wilkes jested after Tuesday's game with SIU. Unintentionally, he had been.

Wilkes is not on the advisory committee for selecting teams to the NCAA post-season midwest regional, as he had said he was. That turnabout came this week when he received word that his two-

Coach named

Rich Solomon, defensive coordinator at the University of Dubuque, has been named as assistant football coach at Southern Illinois University.

Solomon, 25, will join the Saluki staff March 1. His primary responsibilities at Southern Illinois will include coaching the defensive ends.

In addition to serving as defensive coordinator at the University of Dubuque for the past three years, Solomon was also head baseball and assistant basketball coach at the Iowa college.

In making the announcement, Weaver said, "Coaches from all over the country called me recommending Coach Solomon. He is talented, aggressive, and eager, and an ideal addition to Southern Illinois University and our football staff."

A native of New Orleans, La., Solomon started three seasons as a defensive back at Iowa. He also served as a student assistant coach for the Hawkeyes during spring practice after his senior season.

"It's a wonderful opportunity for me to join the Southern Illinois staff," Solomon said. "I'm looking forward to working with Coach Weaver and the other coaches and athletes."

Solomon was a four-sport prep star at New Orleans St. Augustine High. He was named the most valuable player of the Louisiana all-state team and earned prep all-America laurels.

After playing wingback as a freshman at Iowa, Solomon was switched to defensive halfback and played as a regular the next three seasons.

He has a bachelor's degree in physical education from Iowa and has completed portions of work toward a master's degree.

year term had expired.

The Salukis had emphasized the importance of impressing Wilkes, since he had those powers, but they weren't quite able to do so, anyway, in a 70-65 loss to his Hatters Tuesday night.

"I think it's got to hurt their chances a little bit, losing to Centenary and us consecutively on the road," he understated about the Saluki situation. Wilkes' team, itself, is now 18-3 and still a tournament hopeful after Tuesday's triumph.

"I think since we're 18-3, we have to be considered," he remarked. "However, we have to go to Virginia now, and they've been playing real tough."

"I think that not being the favorite took the pressure off us against Southern," he said. "We really played well. I think y'all were just so ready for us up there, and we had to play catchup ball, which we don't do well."

Wilkes changed his defensive strategy against the Salukis for Tuesday night's game, a move which paid off handsomely. The Hatters did not sag nearly as heavily on Meriweather and instead concentrated on stopping the other players.

It worked almost to perfection against deadeye Mike Glenn, who managed just six points as Fred Ross stuck with him like gum to hair.

"I thought we made too much emphasis on Meriweather at your place," Wilkes explained. "I let Otis Johnson have Meriweather and figured if he gets 50, that's Johnson's problem—we'll just stop the others."

Johnson didn't stop Meriweather with much success, but he topped the Saluki center's point production, 33-24, and dominated the boards, along with teammate Bill Seitz.

"This was Johnson's best offensive performance," the Stetson mentor praised. "And Seitz had a great game. I told him before the game that he didn't look like he deserved a scholarship at your place."

Saluki coach Paul Lambert had a quite different outlook on both Stetson's and SIU's post-season chances after the loss.

"I think that the ballgame just kept them in consideration and stopped them from being eliminated," he remarked. "They're looking for the team which can compete not just at home and against questionable competition."

"We're almost .500 on the road (6-7) against tough competition," he reasoned. "You almost have to win 18 or 19 games, and, if you get 19, I'd say the chances of being picked are maybe 90 per cent."

Lambert, whose charges are now 16-7 with three games left, differed most noticeably from Wilkes in his forecast of how many at-large berths will be open for independents. Twelve at-large spots exist, but Wilkes estimated seven of those would go to conference runnersup, eligible for the first time this season.

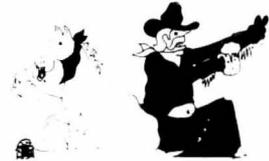

"I think that so much of it depends on how the rest of the conferences are doing," Lambert said. "I think there might be two teams from the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Pacific-8, even though Southern Cal, who's supposed to be the best, has lost three or four."

"I don't think the Missouri Valley, Big Eight or Big Ten will get two teams in," he added. "I'm concerned about our situation, but we got a good team—not a super strong one, but a good one."

"The Stetsons, Centenaries, Notre Dames and Florida States could play with anybody except maybe Indiana. Put them on a neutral court, and they're going to beat some of them."

Rule to stop cager from state tourney

By Martha Sanford
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

Women's athletic departments have plenty of problems holding their own ground in university athletics, and SIU's women's athletics is no exception. But the women's basketball is presently faced with a problem that there is no way around.

Due to a policy of the teacher education program, one of the team's starting five will be unable to play in the Illinois State Tournament Feb. 27-Mar. 1.

Kay Anderson, a senior majoring in physical education, is student teaching this semester at Lincoln Jr. High in Carbondale. A transfer student from Illinois Central in East Peoria, Kay has played basketball for the Salukis for two years and received a departmental talent award scholarship which states that if she is scholastically eligible and a full time student she must play in order to receive the benefits of her scholarship.

Thus far this season, Kay has been able to attend all the games, but the problem is according to a policy of the teacher education program, student teachers are not allowed to participate in any university activities which take time away from the regular time the student teacher must spend in the school.

Therefore, Kay will not be excused for two days from school to attend the state basketball tournament in Champaign. And by not going to play, Kay may lose the benefits of her scholarship.

"The policy shouldn't be so inflexible," said Kay. "After all I'm still a student of the University and paying tuition."

Dr. Charlotte West, head basketball coach, said this is the first time she knows of, that a situation like this has existed.

"In the past students have been allowed to continue with their outside activities," she said.

Taking this question to Dr. Billy G. Dixon, Director of Professional Education Experiences, he said, "This policy of student teachers being excused from their school responsibilities only for illness or death in the immediate family has been in effect since the 1950's. There may have or may not have been students in the past who got around this, but I haven't known about them."

One bright point in the situation is the fact that student teachers must follow the regulations of the school where they are teaching, and Lincoln allows one day excused absence for student teachers. So Kay will be able to take one day to go to state tournament, but if she takes that day and the team does well at the state tourney, they will go to regional the next weekend and Kay won't be able to go with them.

"This has really put me on the spot. Either I play and take the chance of not finishing school, or I don't play," said Kay. "I didn't know anything about this policy until it was too late to drop my student teaching and register for classes."

Dixon pointed out the guidelines for student teaching in the teacher education brochure, which every student teacher receives, and on page 304 of the undergraduate catalogue it specifically states: Clinical teaching constitutes a full professional commitment on the part of the student and is a full professional semester of experience...

At this point there is no chance Kay will be excused to attend the two-day tournament, but West plans to bring the matter up for re-consideration at the next meeting of the Center Co-ordinators Board in March.

Dixon said he would not support a change in the policy and predicted that the board won't either. To avoid such a situation in the future, Dixon pointed out that most male athletes play out their eligibility and student teach the next semester. He used Denny Shidler as a case in point of an athlete who finished his basketball career last spring at Southern and completed his student teaching last fall.

Kay Anderson

Dixon concluded by saying, "I don't want Kay Anderson to think she is being handled this way because she is a woman. All students receive the same consideration. And to be honest, the athletic department isn't the only department that comes to us with such requests. We also have problems with people in theatre and music who want to student teach and continue to participate in university activities."

Women gymnasts finally begin home season

By Martha Sanford
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The SIU elite women gymnasts will make their home debut this Saturday against Grandview College as part of another first under the Arena dome with the women's and men's gymnastic teams performing at the same time.

The Saluki women, defending national collegiate champions, opened their season one month ago against Grandview and defeated them 106.35-100.50. Since that time Southern has had one meet canceled and another forfeited. Also, due to additional spectator sports taking place in the Arena, their usual day to day training has been interrupted.

"Usually we try to offset home practice time with away competition," said Herb Vogel, head gymnastics coach. "But cancellations have blown that game plan. Our Saturday meet with Grandview will be like starting the season all over again."

Vogel predicted however, that the gymnasts will bring home another victory. All of SIU's 1974 national championship team is back and topping the list is Stephanie Stromer, runner-up in the National Collegiate All-Around Championship in 1974. Stromer is followed by SIU's leading scorer in 1974 Sandi Gross, who was also a member of the U.S. team that went to Germany last fall.

Ginger Temple and Pat Hanlon are also national championship faces to look for at Saturday's meet.

Diane Grayson, 1974 balance beam champion and runner-up uneven bar champion, is also on the team this year but probably won't be competing Saturday due to an injury suffered at practice Tuesday evening.

To round out this nationally recognized team are freshmen Lynn Govin, Beth Sheppard and Denise Diddier. Govin presently holds an eighth place national ranking and is a member of the USA's exclusive "Golden Dozen."

"Lynn's fall semester tour with the U.S. team to South Africa is indicative of her gymnastic powers," said Vogel.

Vogel said high points to look for in Saturday's meet are double somersaulting in vaulting, a stunt usually performed only by men, aerial work by all team members on the four-inch-wide balance beam and high difficulty routines in uneven bars and floor exercises.

The advanced and intermediate gymnasts have also been busy, placing third in last weekend's Southern Sectionals.

In individual events, Sue Van Baerle placed fourth in vaulting and fifth in bars, followed by Lori Smith with a fourth place on the beam.

Smith also placed fifth all-around and Van Baerle placed eighth.

"All competitors did pretty well," said advanced coach Mary Lyon. "We're really hoping to make a good showing this week-end at our only home meet against Illinois State and Tumble Town. The meet is Saturday at 10 a.m. in Davies Gym."

Indiana State beats grapplers in final home match of season

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

In their final home show of the year, the SIU wrestlers went down in defeat, 25-14.

The Salukis managed just three individual wins and one draw, dropping their season record to 13-7-1.

Probably the biggest upset of the meet came in the opening 118-pound match. The Salukis' Joe Goldsmith, boasting a 12-3-1 record compared to ISU's Jack Grimaldi's 5-6-1 record, was upset by the Sycamore, 6-4.

Chico Lutes, 17-6-1 was the better man on paper when matched with SIU's Dennis Lewis, 8-10-2, but Lewis hung tough throughout the match and tied Lutes, 7-7 in the 126 class.

The Salukis lost the next two matches before winning three straight. With SIU fighting from behind in team points, Fred Hoef, Jim Horvath and Mark Wiesen all recorded wins to bring the team within one point of ISU at 15-14.

Sophomore Hoef, 150, was the first Saluki to score winning points. Hoef scored four points early in the match against ISU's Ed Ferraro and was content to wait until less than a half-minute left in the match to score another takedown and escape to seal the victory, 7-2.

In the lowest scoring match of the night, Horvath had a little more trouble with his opponent at 158, Kent Lewis. Horvath scored midway through the match and hung on in the closing seconds, for a 2-0 win.

The final win came in the 167 weight class. As expected, Mark Wiesen won, however, he wrestled at 167 instead of his usual spot at 177. Nevertheless, he came out like he wanted to clean up early, and he did, scoring a pin over Sycamore Dee Campbell with 37 seconds left in the second period.

Jay Friedrich wrestled at 177 and proved to be no match for ISU's Dave Gaunt, who easily won, 18-6.

An unexpected turn came at 142 where Saluki Clyde Ruffin faced Tyler Campbell, both with almost identical records. Campbell pinned Ruffin late in the third period.

Other SIU losers were Dale Eggert at 134, Tim Maday, 190 and Tim Swoboda, heavyweight.

The Salukis will now prepare for the Eastern Qualifying rounds held in University Park, Pa., Saturday, March 1. NCAA finals will be held two weeks later at Princeton, N.J., starting Thursday, March 13.
