Conduct code change considered

By Tony Mancuso
and Brian Gross
Staff Writers

To give faculty more authority in the classroom, the Faculty Senate wants to make changes in the SIU-C student conduct code that student groups are saying denies students due process.

At its Nov. 28 meeting the Faculty Senate unanimously passed a resolution that would amend the student conduct code and allow faculty members to detect and punish class-related cheating without going through the dean's office.

The resolution calls for allowing a faculty member who accuses a student of cheating to dismiss that student from class, lowering his or her course grade or failing him or her. The student would then be able to challenge the accusation.

Proposed by the senate's faculty status and welfare committee, the resolution was sent to SIU-C President John C. Guyon's office.

In turn, Guyon asked Harvey Welch, vice president for student affairs, to respond to the committee's request.

"(Welch) will respond, and we'll see where we go from there," Guyon said. "At this point, we have no plan to change the conduct code. We're just looking at it. If the conduct code is to be modified, it will not be done by one communication by one individual. There is a prescribed process to change the conduct code. We will get the full public input."

Welch, who has discussed the proposed change with student leaders, is preparing a response, he said.

"We're talking to students and student leaders," Welch said. "The graduates and undergraduate governments have written me. They think it's the wrong thing to do, that it would take away due process. Garner and some others think we need it."

"Some say it would deny due

Bar overcrowding nets two citations

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Two Carbondale bars received citations last weekend for being over their legal occupancy, ending at least a six-month stretch of no issued citations by Carbondale.

Frankie's, 204 W. College St., and American Tap, 518 S. Illinois Ave., were cited for overoccupancy by the Carbondale Police Department after both bars were reported as being overcrowded two consecutive weekends in February.

Carbondale Police did not issue citations to the bars Feb. 10, but filed a report on the bars being overcrowded with the City Attorney's Office last week.

This past weekend, the two bars were cited for being over their legal capacity. Frankie's manager Kenneth Akers and American Tap assistant manager Gordon Wellons declined comment on the citations.

Carbondale Fire Chief Everett Rushing said the city is beginning to crack down on overcrowding with recent combined efforts of the Police and Fire departments.

"The police is giving us some help on this thing. That's what is making the difference," Rushing said.

In the past, conducting patron counts and issuing citations for overoccupancy were not Police department duties, he said.

In the last three or four weeks, however, the police began noticing a problem with overcrowding and upon discussion with the fire department, the police began issuing citations, Rushing said.

Bed and Breakfast inn ordinance on City Council agenda tonight

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Wheelchair accessibility to bed and breakfast inns is the focus of an ordinance the Carbondale City Council will act on tonight at 7 p.m.

During the Feb. 6 council meeting, the council was in favor of adopting the bed and breakfast inn ordinance, but indicated concern over wheelchair accessibility.

According to the state Bed and Breakfast Act, the inns are defined as any owner occupied residence with no more than five guest rooms. Handicapped-accessibility standards in the state do not apply to lodging establishments with less than four rooms.

The council directed the city staff to present the matter to the Partnership for Disability Issues for recommendation before voting on the ordinance.

A letter from Curt Kohring, the group's president, to the city staff urged the council to adopt higher standards for wheelchair accessibility than the state mandates.

Kohring said the organization voted to recommend to adopt the higher standards to serve all members of the public including wheelchair users.

"Our motion strongly supports the notion that if public money is to be used to assist a specific enterprise, then that enterprise should be required to serve all the public," Kohring said.

Another roadblock standing in the way of the bed and breakfast inns is the amount of the licensing fees.

Bed and breakfast establishments are subject to the same sales taxes as hotels, motels and restaurants, but the council report stated that it would be unfair to subject bed and breakfast inns to large licensing fees.

"The staff feels it is unfair to require a fee for a bed and breakfast license for such a small-scale establishment," the report stated. "If the council decides to have a bed and breakfast licensing fee, a fee of $50 would appear appropriate since that is the amount the county will charge for a license in rural areas."

Pittston Coal Group expected to end strike

DANTE, Va. (UPI) — Striking Pittston Coal Group miners in three states voted Monday and were widely expected to approve a settlement ending a bitter, expensive and sometime violent 10-month walkout.

"I think it'll pass, but I think it's going to be closer than they say it is," said striker Benny Neal, who predicted only 60 percent approval. "It was tough deciding. There was good parts in this contract and there was bad parts in this contract, and a man's just got to decide whether he can live with it."

The polls were to close

Monday evening and results will be announced Tuesday at a district union office in Castlewood, Va.

United Mine Workers official John Cox said non-union replacement miners who have been maintaining Pittston production at about a third of normal capacity apparently believe the dispute is over, because many packed up over the weekend and left.

Some UMW miners said they were unhappy that, under the new agreement, the company may put them on rotating sched-

Romanian government warns against unrest

BUCHAREST, Romania (UPI) — Romania's interim leaders shielded themselves behind troops and tanks Monday and issued stern warnings against "counter-revolutionary" acts after anti-government protesters trashed their headquarters.

President Ion Iliescu condemned the Sunday night disturbance in a nationally broadcast speech and said further outbreaks of violence would be met with a "severe application of the law."

The government said at least 50 soldiers were injured, five of them seriously, in quelling Romania's worst unrest since the overthrow of communist dictator Nicolae Ceausescu in December.

A number of demonstrators suffered cuts from broken glass, but troops did not use violence in clearing them from the government building, the official news agency Rompres said.

First Deputy Interior Minister Col. Gen. Jean Moldovan told a news conference more than 1,000 demonstrators broke into the government's headquarters late Sunday, and police arrested 102 of them.

Moldovan said two detainees had given statements to police saying they had been paid $30 to storm the building, leading authorities to "infer that the demonstrators were manipulated." He said others had been given expensive foreign brands of cigarettes and still others were drunk.

Meanwhile, about 4,000 miners from the Jiu Valley coal fields staged a pro-government rally in Victory Square to protest the ransacking of the government headquarters. Other pro-government rallies were held in Cluj, Brasov, Turda and Bistrita, Rompres said.

Iliescu, in his speech Monday, thanked the miners for their support but said "there is no need"

Salukis fall; Illinois State alone in 1st

Drake upsets Creighton, Valley race tightens

The Salukis missed an opportunity to move into a first place tie in the Missouri Valley Conference after being upset by Wichita State 79-72 Thursday at Levitt Arena.

The Salukis, 21-6 overall and 7-4 in the league, started slowly and fell behind by eight points early in the first half before coming to life in the contest. The Shockers improved to 8-17 overall and 4-7 in the Valley.

Drake pulled off a major upset over Creighton, 65-52, leaving SIU-C a chance to tie for first place with Illinois State. The Redbirds now own sole possession of first place with an 8-3 Valley record. The Salukis host Illinois State Feb. 24 at the Arena, setting up a possible showdown for the conference crown.

Two Ashraf Amaya free throws put the Dawgs up by two, 55-54 midway through the second half but a Shocker 3-pointer gave Wichita State the lead 57-55. The Salukis could manage only four more points in the next five minutes as Wichita State jumped out to commanding 10 point lead, 69-59, with 3:59 remaining in the game.

The Salukis responded by turning up the defensive pressure and scored the next 6 points while forcing two Shocker turnovers.

That was as close as the Salukis would get as Wichita State scored their final 10 points from the charity stripe. Wichita's free throw shooting down the stretch (10 of 13) proved to be the difference.

Wichita State's John Cooper finished with a game-high 21 points.

SIU-C was led by Senior center Jerry Jones' 16 points. Junior forward Rick Shipley contributed 15 points. The Salukis' guard tandem of Sterling Mahan and Freddie McSwain finished with 20 points — 14 below their combined averages — on five of 22 shooting.

For the game, the Salukis managed only 39 percent shooting from the field.

The Shockers held the Salukis without a basket on eight of their first 10 possessions in building a 12-4 lead. Down by four points, 18-14, the Salukis went on a 15-4 run and took a 29-22 lead. Shipley scored seven of those points and sophomore guard Kelvan Lawrence added 5 points during the run.

Wichita's John Cooper got hot and scored seven of his team's final nine points to tie the game at 36 just before halftime. Two McSwain free throws sent the Salukis to the locker room at the half up by two, 38-36. Shipley and Lawrence scored nine and eight first half points respectively.

The Salukis held a 24-14 rebounding edge while Wichita State shot 48 percent to the Dawgs' 41 percent at the half.

Women's track squad fares well at warm-up

By Sean Hannigan

The FAX are the women's indoor track team out-performed the other teams in the Gateway Conference at this weekend's warmup held here Saturday.

After comparing the results of other teams' performances via FAX machine, coach Don DeNoon's Salukis out-performed the competition. Of course that's not on a track, that's on dot matrix.

This weekend the three dimensional runners come to town.

However, the Salukis who competed Saturday were more than for real. In 37 events 21 Salukis achieved personal-best scores, an indication the team is gearing up for what coach DeNoon predicts will be a real "gun battle."

"We're looking for our kids to get encouragement from this weekend and I think they did. We had better performances than the other teams in the conference," DeNoon said.

Teams from Illinois State, SEMO, SIU-E, Austin Peay, Murray State and Memphis State competed in the SIU-C pre-conference warmup indoor track meet Saturday at the Recreation Center.

Nacolia Moore appears ready for battle. She won the 55-meter dash (7.19) and took the silver in the triple jump with a 37'-3 3/4" leap.

"Moore moved into a three-way tie for third in the conference, just an 800th of a second off the leader. That's the difference of about a wrist," DeNoon said.

DeNoon added that Moore, like many of his athletes, is recording her bests late in the season. They are moving up while others are static.

Fellow jumper Michele Williams had an incredible 18'-10 3/4" long jump that put her at No. 3 on the Salukis' all-time jump list and gave her the blue ribbon in the event.

Men's tennis falls to Huskies in weekend match in Dekalb

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

It went down to the wire Friday in DeKalb, but the Saluki men's tennis team couldn't pull out a victory as it lost 5-4 to Northern Illinois.

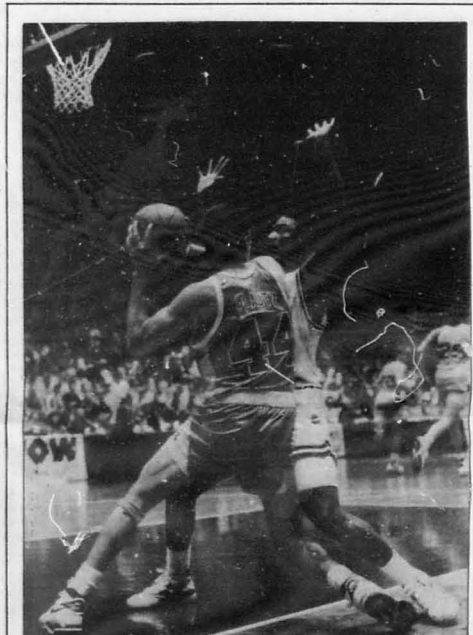

The Huskies tied the score at four when their No. 2 doubles team of Mats Persson and David Settlemeyer defeated the Saluki team of freshman Rikard Stenstrom and senior George Hime 6-2, 7-6.

The Salukis' No. 1 doubles team, freshman Yan Lerval and freshman John Brown, then took their match to three sets and were serving at 4-3, but couldn't hold serve and lost the match 6-3, 6-7, 6-3.

"It was a really good match for us," SIU-C tennis coach Dick LeFevre said.

The team was without its No. 1 player, Mickey Maule. Maule, who pulled a stomach muscle in the Feb. 3 match against Vanderbilt, was told by the team physician to rest for a week, then get re-examined.

Alleged NCAA violations give Illinois a black eye

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Illinois assistant basketball coach Jimmy Collins says the allegations brought against him by the NCAA in an investigation of the school's recruiting is beginning to play tricks on his mind.

One of the two players the National Collegiate Athletic Association charges were recruited improperly by Collins is LaPhonso Ellis, a former East St. Louis Lincoln High star who is a sophomore at Notre Dame.

Collins says he has given so much thought to why Ellis allegedly implicated him in interviews with the NCAA and Illinois investigators that he's seeing Ellis in his nightmares.

"LaPhonso was right in front of me, laughing in my face, and all of his teeth were gold," Collins said. "I was so mad I jumped out of bed and paced the room. My wife said, 'Calm down, calm down — it was only a dream.'"

"I don't understand any of this. If they can prove I did all those things they say I did, it will be a better act than Houdini. I never offered anything to LaPhonso. Never."

Reduced team runs at Illini Strider

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

The men's indoor track and field team racked up some personal-best times as it strode through the Illini Strider Invitational this weekend.

Using the meet as a tune-up for this weekend's conference chamampionship at the Recreation Center, SIU-C featured just 16 athletes, many in events foreign to them.

Coach Bill Cornell had many of his runners in shorter runs to avoid burnout and to work on speed. The change in events explained some of the personal bests, but Cornell says his team is peaking at the right time.

Ed Williams and Greg Hubbard finished second and third in the high hurdles and achieved personal best times of 7.53 and 7.58.

Mark Stuart was second in the mile with 4:12:94 and Garrett Hines ran second in the 55 meter dash with 6:39.

made by Collins to freshman Deon Thomas. The loan was repaid three days later, Collins said. He reported the incident himself to Mike Slive, a Chicago attorney who is conducting the school's independent audit of the NCAA investigation concerning recruiting practices by the school.

The NCAA probably would not have learned of the loan if Collins had not volunteered the information. How many basketball coaches in the country have given illegal meal money of small amounts to their players and not reported themselves to the NCAA? You couldn't count them all.

It was 11:15 on a night in early November when the phone rang at Collins' home. He was asleep. Thomas told Collins he was hungry and he had no money to eat. Collins gave him permission to come to the house. Collins knew the loan broke an NCAA rule. It would have been equally improper in the NCAA's eyes if Collins had sat Thomas down at the kitchen table and fixed him a sandwich. What if Collins turned him away? How could he?

Cheney snubbed; says U.S. to cut troops in Philippines

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, greeted by anti-American protests and snubbed by President Corazon Aquino, told officials Monday that Washington plans to keep its strategic bases in the Philippines but will cut 2,000 troops over three years. Police using truncheons and tear gas dispersed some 100 leftist students at the seafloor U.S. Embassy yelling "Cheney go home" and demanding the dismantling of the bases. One student was arrested and four policemen were hurt in the melee.

Mandela to meet with exiled leaders of ANC

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — The government gave black leader Nelson Mandela his first passport Monday and announced President Frederik de Klerk would meet African leaders in Zaire. Mandela is expected as early as next week to travel to Zambia for his first face-to-face talks with exiled leaders of the African National Congress since his Feb. 11 release from more than 27 years in prison. De Klerk on Saturday will attend his first direct talks with black African leaders.

WEST BERLIN (UPI) — East German Prime Minister Hans Modrow said Monday his meeting with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl last week laid groundwork for the quick unification of the country divided since the end of World War II. Report says health costs impetus for strikes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The percentage of strikers who walked off the job over health benefits more than quadrupled during the late 1980s as soaring medical costs led to a breakdown in labor-management relations, a union study said Monday. The report by the 925,000-member Service Employees union found that disputes over health coverage motivated 78 percent of the strikers in 1989.

Officials link cancer risk in food to nature

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — About 99 percent of the cancer risk posed by food comes from natural substances rather than pesticide residues and other man-made contaminants, federal officials said Monday. Tapping into syrup

Touch of Nature offers program on tapping for maple syrup in Southern Illinois region

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

Making that delectable pancake topping, maple syrup, is a sweet benefit anyone can reap from the maple tree in the front yard.

"It's a very simple process. There's not much to it," Curt Carter told about a dozen people gathered Saturday afternoon in the wooden cabin decorated with mounds of owls, deer bones and other petrified elements of the Southern Illinois environment.

Carter is the coordinator for the environmental workshops program at SIU-C's Touch of Nature.

The program started with Carter explaining that all one needs to make maple syrup is maple sap, a few pieces of equipment that can be simply made and the patience to boil gallons of sap down to pints of syrup. Carter said it takes 40 gallons of sap to make a gallon of the amber-colored syrup.

In the sugar maple grove, Carter and Doug Welsh, part-time program leader and senior in outdoor recreation the rest of the time, showed how to get started. A hand drill is used to bore a hole about seven-eighths of an inch in diameter a few inches into the tree at about an 8 degree upward angle. Drive the spile, or tap, into the tree with a wooden mallet. Hang a bucket from the spile and place a piece of sheet metal over the bucket to serve as a rain guard. The sap was flowing before the spile was in the tree.

Carter explained the best place to find sugar maple trees are around old homesteads and ravines that haven't been subjected to logging operations. The other 11 kinds of maple trees, and walnut trees, can be used but sugar maples have the highest natural sugar content, about 3 to 4 percent, and require less time to render into syrup, Carter said.

Welsh explained that stainless steel spiles can be purchased for about $25 per hundred or they can be made. To make a spile, Carter said, simply take a sumac stick about 4 inches long and a little larger than the hole in the tree. Hollow the sumac out with a heated wire rod. Using a knife, taper one end to drive in the tree and make a notch to hold the bucket.

Carter said a good tree can produce as much as 5 gallons of sap a day. The spiles must be kept clean of bacteria, Carter said, to maintain full flow.

Timing is the key to making the most of gather sap, Carter said. He said the best time of year is when the nights are cold and the days are warm. This keeps the sap flowing up and down the trees and pouring into the bucket as it travels both ways.

Tree identification is also very important, Carter said.

"You really want to stay away from unhealthy trees," he said.

Welsh said trees under 10 inches in diameter should not be tapped. One tap may be used for each 5 inch increment above 10 inches with little damage to the tree and a new hole should be tapped each year, Welsh said.

started to bud will give the syrup a strong, sour taste, Carter said.

After the sap has been gathered, the next step is boiling the water out of it, Carter said. The longer the sap is boiled the thicker it gets and syrup, chewy candy or sugar can result, he said.

Carter said candy thermometers can be used to tell when the cooking syrup is done, but there is no need to buy one just for syrup making.

"Eyeballing it is just about as good as any method," he said.

When the syrup will drip from a spoon leaving a string of syrup dangling behind the drop, it's done, Carter said.

Though most maple syrup production is done in the northern parts of the eastern United States, Carter said, there are enough trees to make syrup in Southern Illinois, though not enough to make a living. However, it is hobby with sweet benefits, Carter said.

Distinctly American, maple syrup production began with the native Americans and played an important part in early economic development, Carter said.

Carter said anyone wanting more information about making syrup or would like to attend the next workshop, scheduled for Feb. 24, should call him at Touch of Nature at 453-1121.

Rights are for takers, not apathetic citizens

PROBABLY ONE OF the greatest ironies in the United States exists in the millions of people who live in this democratic nation and fail to take advantage of its abundant privileges. Voting is one.

Millions of citizens every year are too busy, tired, lazy, preoccupied or too ignorant to vote. And a look around would prove that voter apathy in a free society is an unforgivable habit.

Consider those who live in a suppressed state such as China, where voters somehow continue to elect to power oppressive party members. Of course, a one-party authoritarian government leaves no room for choice.

OR CONSIDER THOSE citizens of some Central American countries whose ability to participate in political activities is in direct correlation to their ethnic heritage, their accumulated wealth and the country's demography.

Members of the working class of Guatemala — a good portion of the country, at that — have a very clear choice: a) vote, miss a half-day's work traveling to the polls and go hungry, or b) forgo voting in the interest of self-sustenance. Very subtle, mind you.

And what about the black sector of South Africa, or the whole of China? Thousands of people have died for the dream of democracy and like water on hot pavement, the dream grows smaller.

ORGANIZATIONS SUCH AS Amnesty International have tried to fuel lingering hopes for justice, and in some cases have been successful. At the very least, Amnesty focuses on countries believed to be abusive of human rights.

Every American citizen has the right to vote. But Americans already know that. No sense in reciting the obvious. Right?

What many Americans may not know is that by not exercising that right, it may die up and be replaced by a more viable system. Life would be different, of course, but there's no guarantee that it would be fun.

APPARENTLY, MANY in the United States have their blinders on and their hats pulled down over their ears. Democracy is as foreign to students in China as communism is to students at SIU-C. Still, the majority of Chinese students want what we have, and some of us couldn't care less.

To be sports about it, we might want to switch places with those striving for the rights we take for granted. It's a crying shame that there exists such an imbalance between those dying for democracy and those wallowing in it.

THE UNITED STATES is becoming a sad excuse for a good example. We are a nation with nerve enough to blame those making supposed ill-fated decisions, when in truth the only ill-fated decision was nondecision. The voter is the real decision-maker in a democratic society.

Today is the last day to update voter registration in Illinois. Please make the best of it.

Voter turnout in America: low

Chicago Tribune

The low percentage of Americans who bother to register and vote is embarrassing. ... In this country only about half of the voting-age population shows up at the polls to pick a president — and just over a third in non-presidential election years. ... The House (has) approved a bill aimed at addressing low voter turnout ... but the bill is bad news. The legislation would require states to allow voters to register by mail, at public offices and when they apply for driver's licenses. It make sense to let people sign up at public offices, including those where they get driver's licenses. But registering by mail without requiring identification could result in a person registering several times under several names. The turnout would go up, all right — to about 120 percent of Cook County's ghosts.

Sweden: not a good model for Europe

Scripps Howard News Service

As the countries of Eastern Europe rebuild their economies, many Westerners have offered Sweden as a model, a semi-free economy softened by the "cradle to grave" benefits of a compassionate welfare state.

But the Swedish model is rapidly losing its luster. Shortly before resigning last week, the Swedish Prime Minister announced that his country's economy is "falling apart."

Swedish banks were recently closed for two weeks as a result of a strike involving 62,000 employees. Another 110,000 municipal workers, who manage public transportation and state-controlled medical and day-care services, have threatened a walk-out as well. Pressed for cash, the stock market has ground to a halt, and inflation has risen above eight percent, twice the European average.

In response, the ruling Social Democratic party threatened its long alliance with the country's powerful labor unions by calling for wage and price controls and a limit on the right to strike at least through 1991. When this rescue plan was rejected, the government resigned.

What happened to Sweden? As one economist put it, for years the key to Swedish governance was "to recognize a need, create a public service project to fulfill that need, and then raise taxes for it." As a result, Sweden's taxes are the highest in the industrialized world. More than 56 percent of Swedish GNP is swallowed up in taxes; an individual making $35,000 a year pays a marginal rate of 72 percent.

These high rates discourage productivity. The average Swede works 31 hours a week. Because any work beyond that is so heavily taxed, workers who have to work "overtime" generally prefer to take compensatory vacation time instead of cash for the extra hours.

The high tax rates have also led to high wage demands — the primary cause of inflation. Meanwhile, public services, including the state's vaunted day-care and medical systems, have steadily declined from lack of competition. Year-long waits for major surgery are common.

Nobody yet knows for sure whether the cracks starting to show in the Swedish model are endemic or temporary. But Eastern Europeans should wait a while before embracing that model as their own.

Banking with China ignores human rights abuse

Kansas City Star

The Export-Import Bank's approval of a loan and outright grant for China raises the same question that was raised by the administration's re-opening of high-level contacts with Beijing. What have the Chinese done to merit this gift?

The answer, once again: nothing. The Chinese government still jams Voice of America broadcasts. Arrests and "re-education" continue. The dissident Fang Lizhi remains trapped in the U.S. Embassy.

Against this backdrop the Ex-Im bank has quietly approved a $9.7 million loan, allowing the Chinese to hire a New Orleans company to do engineering work on a natural gas plant.

A few days later the bank authorized a $10 million grant to help build a subway in Shanghai. That's right: Eight months after the Beijing massacre, the Export-Import Bank of the United States has decided to give tax money to the Chinese government.

Not for nothing has Budget Director Richard Darman described this agency as one of the budget's "hidden Pac-Men." Defenders of the bank promote its activities as crucial to reducing the trade deficit because its loans and grants allow other countries to buy American goods and services. Besides, they say, everybody does it.

One of these defenders is former Treasury official C. Fred Bergsten. He argues that the United States is losing billions in exports because of inadequate government backing. But Bergsten has also ranted on the dangers of the federal deficit, and here he is defending an agency that is a consistent money-loser.

Bergsten is saying that an appropriate way to reduce the trade deficit is to increase the budget deficit. It makes about as much sense as the Bush administration's China policy.

Photograph and editorial in contrast — student

In response to your editorial on Feb. 15 regarding protection for motorcyclists, I must agree with you in that motorcyclists who choose not to wear a helmet are jeopardizing their lives.

One would think that with the recent deaths and injuries of SIU students, motorcyclists in the area would think twice before jumping on their motorcycles without helmets. Evidently, the majority still believe that sunglasses offer the best protection. Simply take a look around you and count how many riders are wearing a helmet. Maybe their rational is that ultra-violet rays are harmful.

These motorcyclists belong at the beach, not on a motorcycle.

The least a motorcyclist can do is provide a helmet for their passenger. After all, shouldn't they be responsible for the passenger?

The photograph on the front page of the D.E. on Feb. 15 pictured Julia Gleason, sophomore in Education, riding on back of Jamie Fisher's motorcycle.

Jamie Fischer was wearing a helmet and was shown preparing to drive off. Julia Gleason was all smiles holding her Valentine's day flowers.

Oh yeah, you can tell she was smiling because she was not wearing a helmet.

It is scary to know that someone going into the field of education has yet to get a grip on common sense: helmets save lives.

The Daily Egyptian contradicted itself by expressing the need for motorcyclists to wear helmets on page four, and then placing a cheerful photo on the front page glamorizing these two students.

I think the D.E. should take a closer look at the photographs that they publish and consider how they relate to the paper's stance on a topic, such as helmets. — Rob Shields, sophomore in photography.

process, some say it would enforce academic authority and freedom of the faculty. The questions we're looking at are: Will it in fact deny students dignity and will it result in effect treating students unfairly?" Welch said.

Student leaders said they believe Welch will not call a committee to amend the code, and the proposal will die.

"It is my understanding Dr. Welch doesn't want to touch the code," Charlie Ramsey, Graduate and Professional Student Council president, said. "He doesn't want to call (an amending) committee unless compelled by President Guyon."

Tim Hildebrand, Undergraduate Student Government president, said the University has had no problems with the conduct code thus far.

"If something has not been broken, why fix it?" Hildebrand said. "I don't believe the change will ever happen."

He said students should not be automatically guilty and have to prove their innocence.

SIU-C Student Trustee William L. Hall said there has been no detailed proposal for revision of the student conduct code.

"As a result of a vague proposition, a recommendation was made to the administration. However, I think with a detailed reading of the student conduct code, the Faculty Senate may not see a necessity to continue with it,"

Hall said. "The Faculty Senate was misled into believing the student conduct code prohibited faculty from disciplining academic dishonesty. However, that's not the case. The student conduct code is just one part of the SIU-C policies, procedures and regulations."

He said those regulations require a very detailed proposal to amend or revise the student conduct code, which includes quoting the section to be reversed and lining through objectionable phrases and writing and underlining the proposed replacement phrase.

"It's my understanding that most faculty who voted to amend were not told what was objectionable and what was proposed to be changed," Hall said.

A faculty member can dismiss a student from a classroom for behavioral misconduct, but as long as the student is not disruptive, he should not be dismissed because he is accused of cheating, Hall said.

"The SIU-C student conduct code is a model to create conduct codes at other campuses across the country," he said.

Don Garner, chairman of the senate's faculty status and welfare, sent a memo to Welch Feb. 1. In the memo, a copy of which was obtained from Ramsey, Garner said he feels the Student Conduct Code "is a source of very deep faculty concern" and "seems to deny teachers the authority to manage their classes."

"Part of the responsibility (and academic freedom) of teachers regularly involves giving a lower grade to a student who has plagiarized a paper and failing a student who has cheated on an exam," Garner said in the memo.

Balancing the respect of teacher authority with the interest in treating students fairly was approved in Hill v. Trustees of Indiana University, a decision by the Federal Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals, a circuit that includes Illinois, the memo said.

Garner's memo urged Welch to clarify the formal code and allow faculty members to fail students for cheating.

As mandated by section VI of the code, Guyon, Welch, Vice President for Academic Affairs Benjamin A. Shepherd or any person appointed by Guyon must call a committee for amendment of the code if any recognized constituency requests such a committee.

If called, the committee will be comprised of two undergraduate students, one graduate student, two faculty members, one academic dean, one representative from the University Housing Office, one representative from the Office of Judicial Affairs and one non-voting representative from the Legal Counsel Office.

and force them to work on Sunday. Many miners have worked the same shift for decades and none have ever worked Sundays.

Others said the union should have done more for 13 Kentucky strikers who are suspended for alleged illegal strike activity, men who will have to go to arbitration if they want to win the right to go back to work.

Cox said the union did not like leaving the men hanging, but noted that Pitston originally wanted 800 strikers in arbitration because of strike-related violence.

The walkout — which began April 5 and involved mines in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky — saw the unprecedented UMW use of widespread non-violent civil disobedience tactics, but it also sparked confrontations and violence that led to 71 injuries.

Most miners remained confident that the contract would be approved. James Gibbs of Bristol said his 16-person local unit voted 15-1 to accept. An election overseer, Bo Willis, said about 200 miners had been through the Dante polling place by noon and that he had heard only five or six negative comments.

"I believe it'll be ratified," said Paul Fleming of Hanging Rock. The dispute — more over scheduling, job security and health care than wages — involved some 1,700 miners represented by the UMW. Because laid-off workers are affected by the contract's rehiring provisions, some 4,000 union members were eligible to vote.

A tentative agreement was announced on New Year's Day, but translating general bargaining table agreements into specific contract language delayed the ratification vote.

The union compromised on sweeping work rule changes — including the unprecedented rotating shifts — and in return, Pitston agreed to keep the health care benefits available at other union mines.

for such rallies. He appealed to the country for "quiet and wisdom" while warning that the government would not tolerate a repeat of Sunday's unrest.

"Those who violate the law must be severely punished because they commit acts against national interests," Iliescu said in the speech carried on state-run radio and television.

He blamed the disturbance on "circles interested in destabilizing the situation in the country." Another government spokesman earlier described the incident as the work of hooligans.

"This is not about actions taken by people who want to safeguard the revolution but about counter-revolutionary actions which do nothing but undermine the constructive activity of those interested in promoting democracy," Iliescu said.

Leaders of the National Unity Provisional Council held an emergency session to discuss the disturbance and voted unanimously to draft a law that would "firmly and severely prevent any hooligan act... aimed against the state institutions" as well as political parties and private citizens.

It was not clear what charges would be filed against the 100 detainees, who allegedly were part of the mob of protesters who used iron bars and clubs late Sunday to smash their way into the government headquarters on Victory Square.

tions for overoccupancy have been issued at least in the last six months.

City Attorney Pat McMeen said her office received notification that Frankie's and American Tap were overoccupied on Feb. 10 during a routine police inspection for underage drinking and again when the bars were cited for overoccupancy last weekend.

According to the Carbondale Fire Inspection Bureau, Frankie's has a capacity limit of 124, and American Tap has a capacity limit of 244. McMeen said because the overoccupancy charges are the only ones pending against the bars, they will be processed through city court, not the Carbondale Liquor Commission.

Representatives of Frankie's, owned by A & W Enterprise, Inc., and American Tap, owned by J.P. Winfree Enterprise, Inc., are scheduled to appear in court March 5.

If found guilty, bar owners could face a $10 to $500 fine.

SIU student critically hurt in accident

By Eric Reyes Staff Writer

John Harkaway, 25, a University student injured in a one-vehicle accident Sunday night, is in critical condition at Barnes Hospital in St. Louis, a hospital spokeswoman said Monday.

Harkaway was injured around midnight Sunday when his truck left the roadway while traveling east in the 2000 block of East Walnut Street near the sewage treatment plant, a Carbondale police spokesman said. Harkaway struck a tree along a curve 200 feet west of Country Club Road, police said.

Police said nearby residents telephoned and reported the accident.

Harkaway of Route 2, Box 27, was transported by ambulance to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale and then taken to Barnes Hospital, police said.

Goal of condom week to encourage safe sex

To Your Health

By Julie Maier
Wellness Center

Whether you are worried about pregnancy or sexually transmitted diseases, condoms are a good method for adding extra protection for those who choose to be sexually active.

The week of February 14 - 21 has been designated National Condom Week. The goal of this week is to reduce the incidences of sexually transmitted diseases, including AIDS, and unintended pregnancy in the United States by increasing the proportion of sexually active men and women who use condoms correctly and consistently.

Condoms can be a highly effective method of contraception if used regularly and correctly. They are 90 percent effective when used alone and if used in combination with a spermicide can be as high as 98 percent effective.

Condoms also provide protection against a wide range of sexually transmitted diseases, including the major epidemics of gonor-rrhea, genital warts, genital herpes, AIDS and chlamydia.

The main limitation of condoms is that many men and women do not use them regularly or carefully, even when the chance of pregnancy and sexually transmitted disease is high.

Condoms are sometimes considered a nuisance or that they will reduce sensation. Others may think the idea of condoms may offend their partner while some fail to use them because they have been drinking. Whatever one's reasoning may be, there seems to be no greater reason to use condoms than their obvious consequence being an unwanted pregnancy or a fatal disease.

Using contraceptives and deciding to be sexually active is a responsibility and a decision best made by both individuals. While it can be difficult and even embarrassing discussing the use of a condom, learning to communicate about sexuality and condom usage is definitely easier than dealing with a disease like herpes or having a child.

Ruling Japanese party win attributed to money, power

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

Japan's Liberal Democratic Party's victory in the country's general elections Sunday comes as no surprise even in the light of recent sex and bribery scandals, Tien Wei Wu, professor of history at SIU-C, said.

"Reality is reality," Wu said. "Without this scandal there wouldn't have been this challenge because they (the Liberal Democrats) have the organization and the money." The Liberal Democratic Party has been in control for 35 years.

"The other parties (including the Japan Socialist Party) were just too small and the Liberal Democratic Party was too powerful," Wu said.

Haruhisa Fujimoto, president of the Japanese Student Association, said before the election he thought the Japan Socialist Party had a good chance to win partly because of the appeal of its chairwoman Takako Doi.

"Takako Doi was charismatic and the female population was very supportive of her," Fujimoto said. The Japan Socialist Party also had in its corner the fact that it was seen as clean, while the sex and bribery scandals were harmful to the Liberal Democrats, he said.

The Japan Socialist Party, however, did not have a solution to Japan's tax problem, Fujimoto said. The Liberal Democrats introduction of a sales tax in exchange for a reduced income tax, though initially unpopular, was gradually being accepted, he said.

Another factor that was in the Liberal Democratic Party's favor was the worldwide trend away from communism, Wu said. However, he said, the Japan Socialist Party does have a future if it continues to grow.

Fujimoto added that Toshiaki Kaifu, currently the prime minister, holds that position because he has not been associated with any of the scandals.

Fujimoto said that if he could have voted in the Japanese elections, he "would have stayed with the Liberal Democrats because sex and bribery scandals do not measure political ability." Soon the scandals will be forgotten and the Liberal Democrats will gain the control, Fujimoto said.

Poland creeps forward, held back by distortions of Marxist economy

Scripps Howard News Service

GDYNIA, Poland — It's one of the economic distortions of Marxist economics that there are no shoe repair shops here: the craft just died because of price subsidies for shoes and the refusal of the government to buy cobblers' tools from western suppliers.

Around the shipyards of this port city near Gdansk, there are also no bars or social clubs.

The communist alcohol and beer monopolies refused to distribute to blue collar bars or clubs, which could be centers of discontent and could not be put under political control.

Thus it's no surprise that the really serious vodka drinking here is done in the social atmosphere of being on the job. It's not unusual to see shipyard workers staggering out of the plant gates of the Gdynia Shipyard and weaving their way home unsteadily at the end of shifts.

It's those sort of market distortions that the Solidarity-controlled government now is trying to eliminate as Poland is put on what's called here a "market economy." It's called that because 30 years of communist indoctrination has made capitalism a dirty word in Poland, and Poles still regard themselves as socialists.

The economic reforms are an exciting and revolutionary concept, but it's easy to read too much into what's happening here.

Poland is not a democracy, not yet, and the old political machinery that ran Poland for a half-century creeps on.

Local and state governments have been virtually left alone by the Solidarity-controlled governments. The distribution centers and the monopolies which the communists used to control the country haven't yet been dismantled. Many new so-called "limited liability companies" are sham firms the communist plant directors spun off as independent concerns for themselves last year.

And, although most don't call themselves communists anymore, the former first secretaries of the People's United Workers Party — the official name of the communist party here — still hold power over local and regional officials and key industries.

Much has changed since last September, when the communists conceded they had been beaten by a simple shipyard electrician named Lech Walesa, and allowed Poland's first non-communist prime minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki to create a government and implement economic reforms.

But much has stayed the same.

The bureaucracy that gathered worthless statistics for the communists still faithfully streams to work each day to gather meaningless production information. In the six ministries that the Solidarity-controlled government took over, reformers just created a new layer of government on top of the old.

Still in the hands of Polish communist holdovers are control of the army and the police.

Poles insist it's all over for the communists and communism is dead here. The corpse will just rot into dust as the winds of the new economic order sweep across it.

FMLN guerrillas link in operation against Salvadoran defense forces

San Francisco Examiner

SAN SALVADOR — He first knew it would happen very soon when he looked around at the protest march and saw dozens of faces new to the streets.

He recognized them as hardened combatants from the countryside, uncomfortable in their civilian clothes.

In the next weeks he waited, like hundreds of others around the city, for the signal: a coded message in a paid newspaper ad.

When it came, he went Saturday morning to a safe house in the southeastern section of San Salvador to make sure the secret cache of weapons built up over the months was still hidden there.

As instructed, at 6 p.m. that day Pablo joined a wedding ceremony in the nearby San Jacinto district. The happy couple wasn't really betrothed and many of the other guests had an entirely different and deadly serious purpose.

After a march through the streets, there was a party, with music and dancing, which lasted into the night. But by 8 p.m. Pablo and dozens of other celebrants had slipped away, turned a half-hour later into fully armed guerrillas, participants in the largest urban offensive ever launched by the leftist Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) in El Salvador's 10-year civil war.

In a score of other barrios, identical fake weddings had taken place, as well as fake funerals in which the coffins held guns and ammunition.

By 9 p.m., on Nov. 11, 1989, the capital was a city under siege.

Pablo — an alias he insisted on using in an interview — had been an important member of a popular organization, part of a network of leftist student, labor and human rights groups. But, unlike many of his companions, he also played a more aggressive part in the war: At night, he would make explosives and plant them in phone and electric poles as a leader of an FMLN urban command unit.

With the guerrilla call to arms, he was joined in the battle by an estimated 1,500 fellow clandestine rebels in the city, full-time fighters from rural areas and civilian members of leftist organizations who decided to join the FMLN ranks.

While many of the legal groups have resurfaced since November, opening their offices again, Pablo now lives in a nearby country and has come back to El Salvador briefly only once.

"We started combat a little before 9" on Nov. 11, he said. "When we attacked an army patrol, they called for reinforcements. We were facing units of the National Guard, national police and several military battalions."

In fact, the 75 rebels under Pablo's command that night dug into defensive positions among houses in the Santa Marta neighborhood.

Play tackles difficulties of dealing with death

By Jeanne Bickler
Entertainment Editor

Family members face denial, anger, depression and feelings of despair when a loved one is dying.

All these feelings are accurately portrayed on the stage in "The Shadow Box," now showing at The Stage Company, 101 N. Washington St.

The play, written in 1977 by Michael Cristofer, was directed for The Stage Company by Roy Weshinsky.

It is the story of three terminally ill patients, Joe, Brian and Felicity, living in adjacent cottages on the grounds of a hospital. Although all of the scenes take place side-by-side on the stage, the actors do not interact between cottages.

The set is arranged such that each cottage appears to be a separate place. A different view of each cottage is available to the audience. Joe's cottage is only seen from the outside, Brian's only shows the family room and Felicity's only shows the kitchen.

These varying views also seem to offer some insight into each person's character. For example, Joe is an outdoorsy type of person, so we only see the outside of his cottage.

All three patients discuss their impending deaths with family members. Some of these scenes are touching, but don't confuse touching with depressing. These scenes are not depressing.

Jean Devlin, as Beverly, is the "former wife" of Brian, who is dying of AIDS. Beverly is the high spot in cottage number two. She bursts in, all sparkles and flash, upsetting Brian's lover, Mark (played by Bryan Smith).

Some emotionally charged scenes occur between Mark and Beverly. Mark resents Beverly's sudden intrusion into their lives and seems to resent the attraction Brian obviously still has for her.

Beverly, although loud and obnoxious, seems to confront death with the most honesty.

Devlin's tough Beverly doesn't hide from death or pretend it doesn't exist like Joe's wife, Maggie (played by Jo Ann Hensley), does.

Maggie depicts denial. She will not set foot in Joe's cottage, or even stop talking long enough to allow him to speak.

Felicity (played by Carolyn Barnes) is a spicy old woman, who is holding on to see her favorite daughter one more time. In the meantime, her other daughter Agnes (Barbara Cordoni Kupiec) is taking care of her, receiving no thanks.

All of the characters except Steve (Ritchard Williams), Maggie and Beverly are interviewed by an unseen doctor, who is heard only as a voice.

The doctor questions the characters about death. Sometimes these sequences run a little long, but the insight provided in the sessions is valuable.

Overall, this play is terrific. There are many funny scenes, as well as richly emotional scenes; don't let the death theme scare you off.

"The Shadow Box" will be performed Feb. 23, 24 and 25 and March 2, 3, and 4.

University Press to offer internships

By Aaron Nauth
Staff Writer

Students interested in gaining hands-on experience in the basics of book publishing can apply for a nine-credit internship program with the University Press, said Dr. Carol Burns, director of the University Press.

To be eligible, a student must be enrolled as a graduate or undergraduate at SIU, have a knowledge of the written word and a good academic standing.

Four interns will be selected to work on books-in-progress under the guidance of professional staff members who train them from the manuscript editing stage to designing and marketing the book, Burns said.

"It's an attempt to combine theory and practice," Burns said. Student interns receive six credits for their work in the copy editing process during fall semester. They edit a book-length manuscript like actual editors, which will eventually be published by the University Press.

The interns receive three credits when they move to the production department in spring semester.

"It's a career outlet for people who've got good verbal skills," Burns said. "They get an introduction into the tools of the trade."

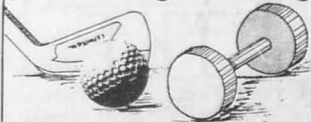

They try to have students work their internships on books from their particular field, like history or English, said professor Richard Lawson, director of Undergraduate Studies in English.

The deadline for turning in a sample paper and getting an interview is March, 9.

Women's tennis team wins at Louisville, needs day off

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

The Saluki women's tennis team returned from Kentucky battered, but not bettered, capturing a team win from Louisville on Thursday and individual triumphs at the Eastern Kentucky University Invitational last weekend.

Coach Judy Auld's team has four members who have various pulled muscles from this weekend who will use next week's day off to recover.

The team skipped one of the doubles matches against Louisville, but could have forgotten them. SIU-C already has won the match, winning 5 of 6 singles matches.

"They played really well, they kind of continued from where they left off last weekend," coach Judy Auld said. Her team went 3-1 in its opening weekend.

Wendy Varnum and Michele Toye won their flights at the Invitational which featured athletes from six teams including Louisville, Ohio State, West Virginia, University of Toledo and Eastern Kentucky.

Toye went 3-0 in her flight polishing off Kelley Madauss of Louisville 6-4, 7-5 in the final of flight six.

"She (Toye) was down in both her sets, but battled back. She needs to be more consistent than she is right now. Traditionally she's been solid" Auld said.

Wendy Varnum won flight 3 by defeating Eva Almkvist of Toledo 6-2, 3-6, 7-6 in the final.

"She had lost to her the last weekend and she was really ready to play. She played unbelievable the first set. That's what I was afraid of," coach Auld said.

She was afraid because Varnum was "tired", which is tennis slang for playing excellent because you are psyched up, but which usually leads to a let down. After winning 6-2, Varnum lost 3-6.

The third set went into a tie-breaker where, "Varnum just blew her off the court," Auld said.

Both Boardman won the flight 1 consolation round with a 1-1 record. She won 2-6, 7-5, 7-4 over Julie Guess of Louisville whom she had lost to a few days earlier.

"It was probably one of the best matches she has played this year. I think it's given her some confidence," Auld said.

Angie Nunn pleased her coach by taking second in the 400-meter dash with a 56.7 time. DeNoon had been disappointed in Nunn's performances following Christmas break. Nunn has the best time in conference in the 400-meter dash.

"We all perform best in front of our peers."
—Don DeNoon

Leeann Conway took second and recorded a personal best in the 1,000 meter run with a 3:00.8 time. Teammate, Christine Gabler captured fourth with a 3:05.7 personal best in front of the home crowd.

"We all perform best in front of our peers," DeNoon said of next week's home-field advantage.
"I imagine a lot of athletes will have friends that will come out to cheer them on," DeNoon said.

Collins said he didn't think twice. He's the closest friend Thomas has at Illinois — a surrogate father, the shoulder Thomas has leaned on. Collins gave him $10.

The school has to accept part of the blame for the violation. It came about in part because of the school's actions. When school officials told Thomas he couldn't play this season until the matter was clarified, he stopped eating on a regular basis with the rest of the team at the training table. The reason? At mealtime he was being asked about the investigation and heard jokes made of it. But it wasn't funny to him. He wasn't playing. He was frustrated and depressed.

The point is that Thomas and Collins were trapped by the enormous pressures of college basketball and a continued failure of the NCAA to address the need for realistic rules. The system isn't working.

The bottom line among boosters is that their favorite schools win. How? That's the coach's job, they say. School administrations keep the pressure on coaches to win to keep boosters happy and to reap a share of the huge sums being generated by the popularity of college basketball.

To keep a job, coaches must

To win, coaches fight with other coaches over the best high school players. It's a vicious cycle and it has made recruiting a nasty job full of dirty tricks.

win. To win, coaches — without the benefits of tenure — fight with other coaches over the best high school players. It's a vicious cycle and it has made recruiting a nasty job full of dirty tricks.

The NCAA is quick to point fingers when it feels violations are being committed, but some of its rules bury coaches in a no-win situation. It's scary to think that because of the politics that currently control the NCAA, needed reforms might be light-years away. College basketball has become a billion-dollar business. It's become so big so fast the pressures to win at all costs threaten to cripple it. Or, worse, destroy it.

Black Eye: Illinois is recognized nationally as a bastion of academic excellence, but you rarely hear about that. The school has been smudged by repeated abuses of NCAA rules since a secret $21,000 slush fund for the use of athletes was uncovered in Illinois Chancellor Morton W. Weir says the type of attention the school has received in the seven months the current investigation has been under way is troubling. There's no way to measure the depth of the damage to the school, but the hits it is taking might affect its recruiting in both basketball and football for a long time.

Thompson's Return: Former North Carolina State great David Thompson came back for the first time in 10 years to the arena where he heard the cheers. Why did he wait so long? He said he was self-conscious about drug problems.

When asked by NC State officials if they could introduce him at midcourt before the game, he declined, saying: "If I heard even one person boo it might make me cry."

Buffalo's Mogilny receives time off for fear of flying

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — Buffalo Sabres winger Alexander Mogilny, who defected from the Soviet Union to play in the NHL, was granted an indefinite medical leave of absence in order to receive help for his fear of flying problem.

Mogilny began his leave Sunday night before the Sabres hosted the Hartford Whalers. He will not accompany the team on a trip this week to Winnipeg and Edmonton.

Mogilny, an amateur star in Russia, missed a road game in St. Louis last weekend because he was afraid to fly. He took a 10-hour train trip to join the team in Chicago but did not play.
