Turnout at Halloween hearings low

Prime opportunity: Officials discuss closing campus, bars as ways to end partying on the Strip.

By Stephanie Moletti and Kellie Huttes
Daily Egyptian Reporters

While many students could be found eating, studying, lounging and visiting in the Student Center Monday afternoon, only a handful showed up to voice their opinions on Carbondale's Halloween party.

The hearing was conducted by the Mayoral/Presidential Task Force on Halloween in the Student Center Auditorium.

Kerry Colella, a field representative for SIUC's New Student Admission Services, said one of her office's primary functions is to promote the university, and on numerous occasions she has been faced with the negative reputation of SIUC's party school image.

"Halloween contributes to the party image," Colella said.

She said she would like to see the party come to an end by closing down the University.

"It's an inconvenience to go home twice a year, but I believe it's the only solution," she said.

Colella said the last time the University installed a fall break, there were significant effects on the party. However, she said the University did not keep the break long enough for the party to end.

Deborah Perry, another field representative, said she typically tries to leave Carbondale each year at Halloween. She suggested establishing a law that would close all bars during the weekend, as well as opening the Arena for a costume party to last throughout the weekend.

"I don't think it's possible to eliminate it, so we should turn it around and make it to our advantage," Perry said.

Off-campus housing policy criticized

By Dean Weaver
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Kimberly Gill, like many freshmen, wanted to leave the dormitories her sophomore year at SIUC.

Gill said the University required she live in University approved apartments, so her choices were limited and expensive. She moved into approved housing but said she was disappointed.

There were loud parties and no signs of supervision, she said.

Now that she is a junior, Gill, a psychology major from Pekin, has the freedom to live where she chooses and has found living in unapproved housing cheaper, quieter and safer.

Gill said this type of housing should not be limited to juniors and seniors.

"I think responsible sophomores should not be told where to live," she said. "If they have good grades, the University should let them (sophomores) live off-campus."

John Winn, owner of Georgetown Apartments, said he agrees SIUC's requirements for living in approved off-campus housing is unfair to students.

"They (students) deserve the right to choose a living atmosphere which will enhance their ability to learn," Winn said.

SIUC requires students to earn 56 academic credit hours before living in unapproved off-campus housing.

Winn has submitted written requests to SIUC officials urging them to drop the credit hour

Clinton proposal to affect coal research

By Stephanie Moletti
Daily Egyptian Reporter

State and local coal projects which are dependent on federal funding will feel the impact of President Clinton's recent proposal to cut spending on coal research and the development of clean coal technologies.

Bill Wicker, a spokesman for the Department of Energy, said the exact figures will not be released until the proposal has been presented to Congress.

"There are no monies in the budget for future clean coal technology after completion of some 45 projects in this area," Wicker said.

He said there are a number of projects still in the works, and money has already been allocated for their completion.

looking at the situation and has several areas at risk.

The Illinois Clean Coal Institute, located at SIUC's Carterville campus, currently receives $750,000 from the U.S. Department of Energy.

"Next year's allocations are going to be reduced," Philo said. "There are several other ongoing projects where DOE is a co-funder."

Ban on nitrous to concentrate on distributors

By Aaron Butler
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A city-wide ban on non-professional distribution and use of nitrous oxide will make a second appearance on the Carbondale City Council agenda tonight.

Originally proposed at the Jan. 17 meeting, the council decided to re-examine the ordinance to ensure the penalties for distributing the gas would be effective against distributors, yet not too severe on first time users.

The proposal will go before the board tonight with a note that although the maximum fine for violation is $500, it would be unusual for a judge to impose the maximum penalty to first time offenders.

SOLDIERS PREPARE FOR CUBAN REFUGEE MOVE — CAMP 4, Panama—Preparing to embark on a sensitive and potentially hazardous operation to transfer 7,500 Cuban refugees temporarily housed here to a U.S. base in Cuba this week, American soldiers are rehearsing ways to combat riots, arson, escapes, even suicide attempts. Special hostage rescue teams have been brought here in case Cubans take soldiers hostage as groups of 500 refugees are transferred from four camps along the Panama Canal to Howard Air Base outside Panama City for flights to the U.S. Guantanamo Bay Naval Base in southern Cuba.

POPE COMMEMORATES AUSCHWITZ LIBERATION — VATICAN CITY—Pope John Paul II, raised in his native Poland not far from Auschwitz, on Sunday recalled the 50th anniversary of the death camp's liberation with one of his strongest condemnations of anti-Semitism. "Never again anti-Semitism. Never again the arrogance of nationalism. Never again genocide," the pope implored in a midday message from his apartment window to pilgrims massed in St. Peter's Square. The Auschwitz-Birkenau camp where between 1.1 million and 1.5 million people died, 90 percent of them Jews, was "one of the darkest and most tragic hours of our history," the pope said "It was a darkening of reason, of conscience, of the heart."

JACK KEMP WILL NOT SEEK PRESIDENCY IN 1996 — WASHINGTON—Former housing secretary Jack Kemp, once seen as the leader of the conservative forces within the Republican Party and the heir to Ronald Reagan's political legacy, announced Monday he will not seek the presidency in 1996. The apostle of a philosophy of economic growth, internationalism and an optimistic, inclusive Republican Party said he cared more about his convictions than he did about making the long and often brutal march required to win the presidency in the modern age.

SICKLE CELL ANEMIA TREATMENT BREAKTHROUGH — WASHINGTON—Federal health officials Monday announced a major breakthrough in the treatment of sickle cell anemia, a disabling blood disorder, saying that clinical studies of the first drug therapy against the disease showed a dramatic reduction in episodes of painful and sometimes life-threatening "crises" in adult patients. The findings were so compelling that the study was stopped early and a "clinical alert" has been issued to physicians nationwide urging them to prescribe the drug, hydroxyurea.

An article in the Friday, Jan. 27 Daily Egyptian incorrectly stated the national champions of debate were Northwestern State University from Lakadash, La. The champion is Northwestern State University from Natchitoches, La.

An article in the Monday, Jan. 30 DE incorrectly stated that Robert Henderson is the engineer of broadcasting services. He is the operations manager at WSIU.

In the Monday, Jan. 30 DE story "Market Control," a quote by Professor Charles Matthew Rendleman should have read, "Let's say you want to cut chemical use by 10 percent. The government could sell permits to farmers which would allow for only 90 percent of chemical use overall." Also in the same story, a highlighted quote was incorrectly attributed to Warren Goetsch of the Bureau of Environmental Programs. The quote was said by Rendleman.

A story which ran Jan. 26 titled "Clinton suggests wage hike" could have been read to say that the University budget office decides how much of a department's budget is spent on student wages. Each department decides for itself how much of its budget is spent on student wages.

An article in the Thursday, Jan. 26 DE stated that the Turkish established an illegal government in northern Cyprus. The statement should have been attributed to Saluki men's track athlete Stelios Marneros. Marneros was commenting on the 1974 Turkish invasion of his home island that preceded the establishment of the government in 1983. Most Greek-Cypriots feel the northern part of the island is still their land.

USG registers 500 new voters in drive

By Amanda Estabrook and Dustin Coleman
Daily Egyptian Reporters

The latest registration drive by the Undergraduate Student Government has brought the number of student voters eligible to vote in the city council elections equal to the number of resident voters, a registration official said.

Susan Hall, a coordinator for the registration drive, said about 4,200 students were registered for the Feb. 28 primary election, versus 4,700 local residents registered before Christmas break.

USG registered more than 500 students this week, bringing the numbers much closer, she said.

Hall said USG calculated the numbers after labeling the different precincts by whether the majority of the residents are students or non-students. Hall said there is some overlap in the numbers of students versus non-students because of the mixture of students and local residents in some precincts.

USG spent the last day registering students in the Student Center, at different houses on Greek Row and in Neely Hall.

Hall said USG is registering people to vote regardless of who they are going to support. She said deputy registrars are prohibited from campaigning and registering people to vote at the same time.

Anna Lundsteen, a city council candidate, said the registration has been fair and impartial.

"We have been registering more than just students," she said. "Not everyone we registered is going to vote for us."

Matthew Parsons, a mayoral candidate, said the number of registered student voters looks good for the student candidates.

"We're in good shape. There seems to be an adequate number to win the primary," he said. "Since there is no mayoral primary, I'm sure it will benefit my running mates."

Hall said the numbers were good, but people still need to get out and vote.

"We could register all the people in town, but if they don't vote, then it doesn't matter," she said.

Juarez Morgan, a senior in industrial engineering from Tucson, Ariz., said registering gives him the opportunity to voice his opinion on issues that concern him.

"It is important for me especially," he said. "If an issue comes up that I am interested in, I have the opportunity to vote now."

"It's hard to get involved when you're from a different area like me, so registering is a good start," Morgan said.

Jeff Jacobson, a sophomore in electrical engineering from Cornell, said he registered so he could get acquainted with the political system.

"I wanted to register and find out how the system works," he said.

"You can't complain if you are not registered."

Deirdra Greathouse, a graduate student in pre-med from north Chicago, said she would also like to get involved in the political system.

Since Greathouse does not live in Chicago all year long, she said she wants to participate here in Carbondale.

Student candidates' platform addresses mass transit, safety

By Shawwna Donovan
DE Governmental Affairs Editor

Getting student input on the Carbondale City Council will be one of the main goals of the three student candidates if they are elected April 4.

Mayoral candidate Matt Parsons said he wants students to have a real voice in local government.

"The main thing our team is concerned about is getting the students involved and making sure they have input and not just lip service," Parsons said. "This has not happened in the past."

"The common goal is to get a student on the council," he said.

The three student candidates, Parsons and city council candidates Lorenzo Henderson and Anna Helene Lundsteen, have developed a 12-point platform touching on economic development, community awareness, improvement to rental property and safety concerns.

Parsons said the platform touches on different issues and is not a one-issue campaign. "It's not about Halloween," Parsons said. "It is about making life better for people in Carbondale."

The platform states the proposed mass transit system, still under consideration, would promote greater community access for students and citizens.

Bill Hall, a member of the campaign, said the system also would give the city an extra economic push by making businesses more accessible to residents.

Other issues included in the platform are improving rental property by enforcing the Criminal Housing Act, which prosecutes negligent landlords, developing neighborhood plans with community leaders and increasing opportunities for small business expansion.

Parsons said he is encouraged by the outside support the campaign has received.

"After the hearings, people began to call up and encourage us," Parsons said. "We received support from the community. They're very supportive."

Parsons said a press conference outlining their platform is scheduled for Wednesday afternoon.

Eleven names appear on the Feb. 28 primary ballot.

The students are not on the ballot, but are write-in candidates.

Professors debate wage hike

By David R. Kazak
Daily Egyptian Reporter

If President Clinton gets his way, the minimum wage could be raised to $5 an hour, but opinions on the necessity and benefits of such an increase vary among instructors at the College of Business and Administration.

Gola Waters, a professor in the School of Finance, said he would be opposed to a minimum-wage increase, because it would have adverse effects on businesses that would be required to pay the extra money.

Waters, who once was a vice president of human relations in the industrial sector, said a rise in the minimum wage would lower the number of entry-level positions for unskilled workers.

"There will be an entry-level barrier," he said. "If the margins are squeezed and a company has to consider a $1,500 per employee per year increase in wages, there is only so much a company can do. There just won't be as many jobs."

Waters said other adverse affects from raising the minimum wage would include raising wages for every position level.

"That is something known as wage compression," he said. "When you raise the bottom, a company needs to keep a certain separation of job grades and wages, and the company would be forced to raise other wages to maintain that separation."

But School of Management Chairman Arlyn Melcher said the increase the president is proposing would result in a small compression of wages and would not matter or cause any problems.

Melcher said effects of the wage increase on businesses would be insignificant.

"No one is going to lose their job — at least, not at an essential level," Melcher said. "The duties those people perform are not going to disappear just because the minimum wage has increased. There still will be a job to do."

Melcher said a minimum-wage increase will pass, even in the Republican-controlled Congress. The popularity of the wage increase is what he believes will cause politicians to view it as good for Americans.

As far as businesses are concerned, Melcher said most managers would like to see the wage affected only by market changes and not by government intervention.

"The controversy about this increase is whether you can improve the living standard by government rule," he said. "In this case the argument is pointless, because any negative consequences (of the increase) would be offset by the positive ones."

Students employed by SIUC — at least those who receive federal work-study awards — would only stand to benefit from an increase in the minimum wage, according to financial aid officials.

Flights available between Carbondale, Chicago

By Dave Katzman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Students can once again make the five-and-a-half hour trip to Chicago in under two hours for little more than the cost of a train or bus ticket.

Flight service from Carbondale to Chicago, which was discontinued Dec. 16, has resumed on the new Northern Star Airlines.

Service from Carbondale to Chicago was handled by Midway Connections Airlines from April to December 1994, when Midway went bankrupt.

Northern Star Airlines took over the Carbondale-to-Chicago route Jan. 10.

A one-way ticket from Carbondale to Chicago is $75 for students and senior citizens; round-trip is $158. Chicago to Carbondale is $83 one-way, due to a passenger charge at Midway Airport in Chicago.

The airline offers three flights a day Monday through Friday, and two flights on Sunday.

MICHAEL J. DESERI — The Daily Egyptian

Northern Star Airline pilot Mike Janelli of Chicago welcomes passengers aboard flight 194 to Chicago Sunday. The plane departs from SIUC's airport three times a day Monday through Friday and twice on Sunday. Students and senior citizens pay $75 for a one-way ticket from Carbondale to Chicago. Round-trip tickets are $158 because of an $8 passenger charge at Chicago's Midway Airport. The airline has expanded its marketing efforts to attract student passengers.

President's address worth consideration

BILL CLINTON APPEARS TO LEARN FROM HIS MISTAKES.

When he came to power two years ago, Clinton was promising impossible reforms and dramatic changes that had no hope of passage, even with a Democratic majority in Congress, because of the political risks involved with such sweeping measures. Without the benefit of partisan support, Clinton is recognizing the value of compromise.

IN HIS STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS LAST week, Clinton acknowledged his past mistakes and promised to cooperate with the new Republican Congress on issues that had been shoved aside after his initial ideas were rejected.

Cooperation between Congress and the White House could be just what the doctor ordered for health care — after Clinton's speech, conservative House Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., agreed to support moderate health-care proposals as long as the Democrats do not demand drastic, immediate reforms.

Clinton compromised with Republican "family values" advocates in his presentation, emphasizing his commitment to welfare reform, federal programs designed to combat teen-age pregnancy and a tax break that will promote education and help keep poor and middle-class kids in school long enough to get job training so they can avoid the welfare trap.

CLINTON ALSO APPEASED BOTH SIDES BY calling for a more grassroots approach to government by insiders and citizenry alike. Pledging to sign any campaign-reform legislation passed during the remainder of his term, Clinton reminded members of Congress that even if there are no laws to stop them, they do not have to accept lobbyists' campaign contributions — a noble, if politically naive, idea.

Continuing his encouragement of personal responsibility and activism, Clinton urged Americans to volunteer in their communities and maintain a spirit of civic pride, emphasizing the idea that individuals can change their world.

Clinton's concepts were not new — the entire address was reminiscent of his 1992 campaign speeches, which focused on cooperation between the government and the governed. But with his administration floundering in rough political waters, it was wise for Clinton to return to the kind of thinking that got him elected the first time.

BY AND LARGE, PEOPLE LIKE TO FEEL THAT they can effect change through their individual actions. According to a CNN/USA Today poll, Clinton's address catapulted his drooping approval rating to 83 percent among those who watched the speech, and key Republicans such as Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kansas, agreed that Clinton presented himself well. But if Clinton is to maintain this temporary popularity surge, he will have to support his words with action.

The question of Clinton's success lies largely with the American public. It would be easy to take a cynical approach to his address and assume that he put the ball in our court to absolve himself of responsibility for any future social trends. But however politically contrived they may be, Clinton's words hold a degree of truth.

A CHILD OF THE 1960S, CLINTON KNOWS firsthand the power of grassroots activism. Individuals can accomplish positive changes if they really try. Regardless of our political affiliations, we all ought to consider the president's words and look around to see what we can do to improve our country from the inside out.

Clinton speech mirrors Truman

The Baltimore Sun

"Perhaps not as conservative as might have been expected from a Republican president addressing a Republican Congress, the message nevertheless was much farther to the right than would have been anticipated if the Democrats had been returned to power." —The Baltimore Sun, Page 1, Jan. 7, 1947.

Bill Clinton, meet Harry Truman. Forty-seven years ago, President Truman delivered the first Democratic State of the Union speech to a Republican Congress in over a quarter-century. He was, as President Clinton was last Tuesday, conciliatory and dropped several pet programs from the agenda he had pushed the previous two years to a Democratic Congress.

Then, as now, the congressional response to the president's speech was mostly partisan. Unlike last week, the applause in 1947 did not seem to those who reported on it to be orchestrated. We believe the reaction to Clinton's State of the Union speech was unprecedented. It often appeared that the two men seated behind the president were performing as competing directors.

Cue the Democrats. All! Loud applause and cheers on the left side of the aisle. Cue the Republicans. New! Loud applause and cheers on the right side of the aisle. Speaker of the House Newt Gingrich, we thought, was particularly Cecil B. DeMille-ish. Of course, he had more — and more spirited — extras than Vice President Al Gore.

Even if the Democrats had wanted to play such a game in 1947, they could not have. Both men seated behind Truman when he delivered his State of the Union speech were Republicans. There was no vice president. (Truman ascended to the presidency from the vice presidency in 1945, when President Roosevelt died. Under those circumstances, the president pro tem of the Senate joined the speaker of the House as presiding officers of Congress when a president addressed it. In 1947, both men were Republicans.)

Truman and the Republican Congress in 1947 started off with the appearance of cooperation. The president praised it (and it was a pretty distinguished body, including three future presidents). But before long, it had become in his speeches "the good-for-nothing, do-nothing 80th Congress" and "the worst Congress in history." He ran for re-election on that theme.

Clinton, the first Democratic president since then to face a Republican-controlled Congress, probably likes to look back to Truman's performance — and maybe forward to a revival. Given up for politically dead, Truman was re-elected in 1948.

Self-test for AIDS virus needs approval; many victims lack diagnosis, counseling

Los Angeles Times

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has come under harsh attack from many Republicans and some Democrats in Congress who call it a sluggish federal agency that deprives Americans of worthwhile drugs and medical devices. We do not necessarily agree, for the agency has proved over the years to be a good shield against such tragedies as the horrible birth deformities that occurred in Europe a generation ago after an improperly tested pregnancy drug, thalidomide, was approved there.

But the FDA is only providing ammunition to its enemies by delaying its decision on an over-the-counter self-test for the virus that causes AIDS. After nearly eight years of litigation and debate, an FDA advisory committee last June recommended approval. Agency officials hinted strongly then that at least one such mail-in test would be approved by last September or October, pending resolution of difficult questions of how best to counsel those who prove positive for the deadly virus. In a memo dated Sept. 20, Dr. David A. Kessler, the agency's commissioner, assured the White House chief of staff, Leon E. Panetta, that the FDA was working "expeditiously" on the application.

The main applicant to supply the home test is Direct Access Diagnostics, a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson, the New Jersey-based pharmaceutical maker. The gay clinics recently charged that the company was engaging in unlawful promotion of the test by using the former surgeon general, Dr. C. Everett Koop, in television appearances. He is a consultant to the company, earning $10,000 a quarter.

FDA officials say that such considerations are not delaying approval; they attribute the delay to concerns about whether the company is properly equipped to manufacture the test and whether the test would hinder public health efforts to monitor the epidemic. Those are proper concerns. But the fact remains that fewer than half of those at risk for contracting the AIDS virus have been tested, and even most of those who test positive get little counseling. The FDA should act soon.

requirement to live off-campus, but SIUC Housing Director Ed Jones said there are reasons for the policy. "The requirements allow us to pay off the revenue bond debts and provide students with developmental and educational support," Jones said.

The on-campus housing fees contribute $1.3 million annually to paying off the bonds which are financed until the year 2018, Donald Wilson, vice chancellor for financial affairs, said.

The debt owed on the bonds is due to the construction costs of the campus dormitories.

Jones said the dorms also give students an opportunity to meet people and provide a more structured environment that helps in earning high grades.

Leslie Wilson, a freshman in administration of justice from Carmi, said she has enjoyed living in University Hall for the past two years, but said requiring sophomores to live in approved housing is unnecessary.

"I recommend everyone live in the dorms for a year, but after a year it's time for many to move on," Wilson said. "If a student isn't mature enough to live on their own after their sophomore year, they never will be."

Eight of Illinois' eleven public four-year colleges do not require sophomores to live on campus or in approved housing.

Winn said he wants the University to allow any 18-year-old students with written consent from a parent to live off campus.

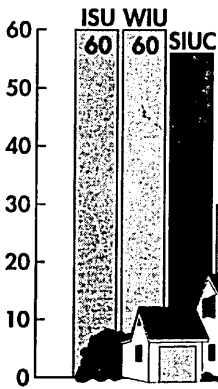

"This competition would force the dorms to be more consumer oriented," he said.

The dorms would offer students more. Winn said, by providing newer furnishings and carpet. He said the dorms might also allow students to live on-campus during breaks.

Jones said the SIU Board of Trustees is the only group that can make changes to this policy, but he has heard few complaints with the current requirement.

SIUC is one of six public universities in the state with academic requirements to live off-campus, and only one of three requiring sophomores to live on-campus or in approved housing.

in Charleston and the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana have eliminated their housing requirements for sophomores.

In 1980, the U of I reduced the number of academic credit hours necessary to live off campus from 60 to 30, Lou Henderson, director of U of I housing information office, said.

Henderson said a strong student initiative caused the university to reconsider its policy. Although the number of students living in the dorms dropped initially, he said the numbers have now stabilized.

"We (the university) thought, if we were providing adequate housing, we could keep the students in the residence halls," he said.

Henderson said the U of I has 26,000 undergraduates with 8,100 students living on-campus.

Jones led a joint meeting between the residential housing authority and Undergraduate Student Government senators Jan. 25 and brought up the request to change the requirements.

The senators, who represent residence hall students, did not voice any concerns with the current requirements and said they agreed that it was in the best interest of the University to keep the requirements in place.

Chris Ballard, a USG senator from Neely Hall, said students can move off campus with 28 academic hours as long as they live in approved housing and disagreed with Winn's statement that competition would improve living conditions.

Laura Guebert, a freshman in elementary education from Red Bud, said she thinks the University approved off-campus housing for sophomores is inadequate. "I would like to have more choices of where to live," she said.

Off-Campus Housing Director Patrick Brumleve said SIUC plans to continue approving off-campus housing in the future.

Winn said there is a shortage of on-campus housing for students, but Jones disagrees.

The SIUC Office of Admissions and Records reports there were 6,423 freshmen and sophomores attending classes on campus in the fall '94 semester.

The state of Illinois coal

Restrictions force research into product cleanup

By Stephanie Moletti
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The future of Illinois' high sulfur coal industry continues to become more uncertain with the stronger regulations of the Clean Air Act. With that miners' jobs are becoming increasingly insecure.

State legislators have tried to promote Illinois coal and ensure the stability of the state's coal industry with a law encouraging state electric utilities to burn Illinois coal, requiring installation of scrubbers as a part of Clean Air Act compliance plans. The law was ruled unconstitutional according to the Jan. 9 ruling by the U.S. Court of Appeals. Scrubbers are a gas desulfurization process that cleans pollutants from emissions.

The court ruled that the state's attempt to ensure a high sulfur coal market was an economic protectionist measure inconsistent with the commerce clause of the Constitution.

The decision affirmed an Illinois federal district court ruling issued in December 1993 that found the statute unconstitutional.

Illinois produces about 60 million tons of coal annually, about 6 percent of the coal mined nationally.

John Mead, director of SIUC's Coal Research Center, said the Illinois Coal Act is an example of the state seeking near term effects through changes in regulations.

David Arey, associate director of the center, said the act was written at a time when Western coal was more expensive due to transportation costs.

Western coal is low sulfur and more appealing to utility companies attempting to bring their plants up to clean air standards.

As the battle between Western and Eastern coal continues to rage, Mead said the "stakes are high and the players are serious."

"Coal is such a fundamental part of our society," Mead said.

State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, agreed that coal is important to the 115th District.

"I'll do everything I can to promote Southern Illinois coal," Bost said. "As long as the push for low sulfur coal continues, we're going to have to look for different avenues for jobs for the miners of Southern Illinois."

Bost said making conditions in the state more appealing will help lure manufacturers to the state, creating more job opportunities for Illinoisans.

As mining technology continues to improve fewer miners are needed, Mead said.

"The steady decline in the number of miners will continue as production declines," Mead said. "For Southern Illinois there is no escaping this reality."

After a strike in 1993, there were 7,389 miners working in Illinois. That compares to 10,129 in 1990; 9,667 in 1991 and 8,831 in 1992, according to Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

Gary Philo, an energy resource specialist at the department, said the department projects that the number will decrease to 5,700 by 2000, mostly due to the Clean Air Act.

He said projections for the use of Illinois coal show declines.

Last year 54.5 million tons of Illinois coal were used nationwide. Projections for 1995, the year the Clean Air Act standards come into effect, show use of 43 million tons of Illinois coal. By the year 2000, Philo projects that 33 million tons of Illinois coal will be used, a 21.5 million ton decline.

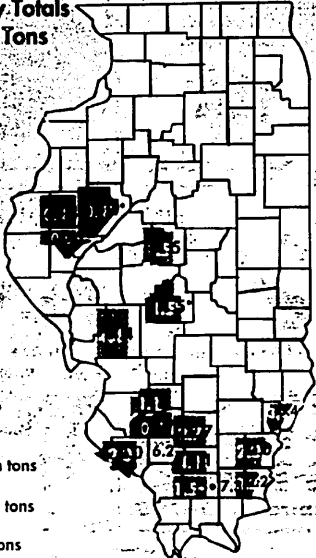

"It will send shock waves through the coal industry and will have a big impact on employment."

A mine of ideas

High sulfur coal usage, production focus of researchers' recent efforts

By Stephanie Moletti
Daily Egyptian Reporter

It looks like a child's sand box on stilts filled with miniature machines. It's actually a model of a surface coal mine, used to improve efficiency of mining. It's also one of many SIUC projects at the Illinois Coal Development Park.

The sand box is used to model specific mines. Companies pay the University's coal experts to evaluate a particular mine using a scale model and improve the effectiveness of dragline operations.

The Dragline Productivity Center, just one SIUC program at the coal park in Carterville, advises outside mining companies on the quickest, easiest and most efficient ways to surface mine coal.

Randall Lubbert, dragline training coordinator, said the dragline simulator is the only one available for mine training in the world. The simulator was built 13 years ago for the U.S. Department of Energy by McDonnell Douglas Corp. for $1.5 million. The University received the simulator in 1983, Lubbert said.

Mining companies have sent dragline operators to SIUC's one-week training course since 1988.

SIUC's Coal Research Center, which began campus operations in 1978, and the center's coal park work closely with the state in developing new coal technologies. It helps that the center is located in the heart of a major coal producing region.

SIUC's center focuses mainly on sulfur related research and the effects of reclamation of surface mine lands.

"In general we work exclusively with high sulfur coal," David Arey, associate director of the center, said.

However, the Institute of Gas Technologies' Mild Gas Process, the gasification of coal, will include some testing of low sulfur coal, he said.

Construction is planned to start on the gasification plant at the Carterville park early March. SIUC is working on the project in conjunction with Kennecott Corp. and Bechtel Corp.

Another project in the park separation," a method of removing impurities from coal.

Coal does not like water and floats to the top while the impurities sink during the cyclone process, Arey said.

Another cleaning method being tested at the park is the fluidized bed combustor. By mixing coal with limestone, the process captures the sulfur in the coal, removing impurities prior to burning.

Coal waste products also have been combined for road construction in 28 different mixtures, Arey said a sample road was recently constructed in Carterville to see how the various mixtures hold up to weather conditions.

The coal water slurry project turns coal into a fuel oil substance. Arey said the material acts like a thick heating oil. The coal liquid is a cheap alternative to fuel oil.

The center and the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources are both part of an effort to make the general public more aware of the uses of coal.

Philo said. There are currently 37 mines operating in Illinois.

Philo said he was disappointed the department lost the Illinois Coal Act case, but the state will continue to enact programs to promote the use of Illinois coal.

The 1990 Clean Air Act regulations came into effect Jan. 1, and many utility companies are switching to the western low sulfur coal, primarily from Wyoming, to meet federal emission standards, according to state coal officials.

Mead said the 1990 regulations are the "latest in a string of increasing restrictions on how much pollution goes into the air."

"It has become more difficult for companies to use Illinois coal and meet the requirements," he said.

Many utility companies are moving toward mixing high sulfur and low sulfur coals and purchasing emission allowances from the government, allowing them to exceed emission regulations, in an attempt to meet restrictions.

"The Illinois coal industry will decline over the rest of this decade as low sulfur coal becomes more available and relatively cheap," he said.

The turn of the century will bring about a new set of standards for utility companies that may increase the cost of meeting clean air restrictions.

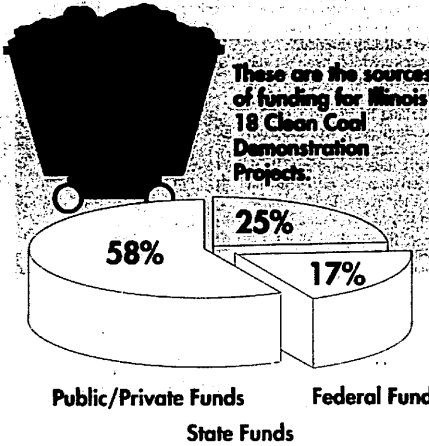

State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, said he believes continued research will make Illinois coal more marketable and companies will eventually come back to Illinois coal. Dunn has been a member of the Illinois Coal Development Board for 20 years. The board reviews and approves funding for research projects.

"The key is learning how to burn (Illinois coal) without polluting the air," he said. "The researchers are doing a good job; it's just a slow process."

Mead agrees that new technologies will help to promote Illinois coal.

"The year 2000 will also see more restriction standards, and companies may turn away from western coal and come back to Illinois coal." Mead said.

With the 1990 Clean Air Act standards in effect this year, Mead said there are many areas of uncertainty. Over the next five years the state will attempt to direct more near term projects, such as increasing the effectiveness and efficiency of cleaning coal prior to burning, he said.

The Illinois Clean Coal Institute in Carterville works in conjunction with SIUC researching and promoting the use of Illinois' high sulfur coal. The institute is funded in part through the Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

Another such program is the Clean Coal Technologies Demonstration Program, which was formed in 1977.

Philo said the state authorized the Department of Energy and Natural Resources to provide funding for projects that utilize high sulfur coal through pollution control methods and advanced boiler designs.

To date the state has spent $139 million for 18 projects in the program. The federal government has spent $200 million on the projects, and the program has received $462 million from public and private industry, Philo said.

With the aid of continued research funding projections show a growth in the Illinois coal industry beyond 2000.

"There are hard times ahead, but potentially good times ahead of that," Philo said. "Research is laying the ground work for that growth."

Utility companies are facing phase one of the Clean Air Act this year and phase two in 2000. Phase one deals with sulfur dioxide emission levels. As utility companies attempt to bring plants up to standard, western coal is the easiest solution.

Projects

Department of Energy and Natural Resources projects were recently approved for state funding by the board contingent on selection as DOE projects and will receive additional funding from the federal government.

These projects include the High Efficiency Control of Fine Particulates and Air Toxics, which has requested $2.1 million in federal funds, and Teolytic DeNOx Process for Ultra-Low NOx Emission Control, for which the state has requested $2.5 million in federal funds.

Philo said approval has not been granted for either project yet.

Combustion 2000, a low-emission boiler system research project, just completed phase one. For phase two and three, Department of Energy and Natural Resources has requested $9.1 million in DOE funds. This request has not yet been granted.

Dave Stricklin, press secretary for U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, said the pressure is on for government funding of coal research.

"I agree that there is a downward pressure on funding fossil fuel research — everything from reducing funding to outright elimination," Stricklin said.

Stricklin said Poshard is an advocate of clean coal research and will do everything he can to advance research and secure the mining economy of Southern Illinois.

"There has been a tremendous amount of discussion about budget cutting and reducing the deficit, but how to go about it is unclear," he said.

Stricklin said regardless of what the cuts amount to, it will be hard to maintain the current level of funding for coal research.

Clinton is proposing to reach back into fiscal year 1995, the current budget, to make cuts and also is proposing further cuts for fiscal year 1996, which begins Oct. 1, 1995.

The overall Department of Energy budget request of $18.5 billion for fiscal year 1995 represents a 6-percent decline from fiscal year 1994.

The department's Clean Coal Technology program budget decreased in fiscal 1995 dropping from $225 million to $37 million.

The department has concentrated its coal research and development efforts on developing ultra-clean, high-efficiency electric power systems for the post-2000 era and on continuing efforts to bring down the costs of producing transportation-grade liquid fuels from coal.

Clinton has not yet submitted the budget proposal to Congress but is expected to by the second week of February.

As for the future of Illinois coal, Wicker said it is possible coal will become more marketable.

"As utility companies are required to burn coal with greater efficiency and research projects are piloted, demonstrated and fine tuned to the point where they reach the commercial market," Philo said. "Illinois coal may perhaps become a little more desirable."

'Guys and Dolls' display colorful performance

By Kristi Delaney
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The cast to one of the most critically acclaimed comedy musicals, "Guys and Dolls" performed at Skyrock to an almost packed house Sunday night.

The plot of the story intertwines the four characters Nathan Detroit, Miss Adelaide, Sky Masterson and Sarah Brown. Detroit, portrayed by Jason Singer, plays the part of a bookie who's 14-year engagement to Miss Adelaide proves he's not the marrying type. The understudy for Miss Adelaide, Sharon Kay White, did a great job as the lounge singer/bimbo who wants nothing except to be married.

Sky Masterson (Ross Neill) and Sarah Brown (Jen Little), are thrown together after Masterson bets Detroit he can take any "doll" he wants with him to Havana. Detroit picks the one girl he knows is not a normal "doll," Sarah Brown. Brown wants nothing but to save sinners: and her faltering mission. "Save a Soul."

The well put-together costumes added to the understanding of the cast. The gangsters were dressed in silk-striped double-breasted suits in obnoxiously bright colors. These outfits ranged from every color in the rainbow; a few were hot pink to forest green with brown orange undershirts.

Dolls were decked out in satin numbers during the day, with full-out showgirl costumes at night. In one scene, the dolls stripped out of their evening gowns and pranced around the stage in lace corsets.

The conservative clothes were left to the missionaries, each wearing a plain basic burgundy suit with gold buttons.

The comedic script went over

well with the audience. As Detroit is selling Adelaide he forgot to buy her an anniversary present, she replied, "I like it when you forget to buy me presents, it makes me think we're already married."

The scene, which brought the most reaction from the audience was the duet between Miss Adelaide and Sarah Brown. The two are singing "Marry the Man Today," telling the other how they wish their men would act. With each description, the men walk out playing their parts: Detroit walks out with suspenders, a farm hat and a spray bottle waving like a hick; Masterson comes out in an apron holding a baby.

The musical spans over two days with a pace to match. Seventeen scenes were intermingled with 19 songs each giving a closer look at the characters and their personal feelings. The songs ranged from gambler woes to the perfect love to the showtunes performed at the Hat Box Club.

The comedy song "Adelaide's Lament," explains Adelaide's hypochondriac condition because of Detroit's neglect to marry her. The cover tune "Guys and Dolls," shows how each character's actions are based for a "doll's attention. This song strongly impacted the last scene with the 21-member cast involved.

The cast did a wonderful job acting and singing to bring a Broadway classic to the Southern Illinois area.

Ideas vary at 'party' hearing

By Stephanie Moletti
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Few people appearances and offered suggestions at the Monday evening public hearing conducted by the Mayoral/Presidential Task Force regarding Halloween.

The hearing, at the city council chambers, 607 E. College, was an attempt to get community input on what should be done about Carbondale's Halloween party.

Dameoca Moultrie, a Carbondale resident, said it seems the more provisions officials take to do away with the party, the more students come out.

"We should work together to come up with something safe that everyone can live with," she said.

She suggested a beer garden manned with police officers and asking various organizations to help with the cleanup.

Charlie McCaughan, retired fire chief and a member of previous Halloween committees, said he would recommend the city council end the party and enforce existing city ordinances rather than creating new ones for the weekend.

"Let Halloween come to them and deal with it," he said. "We discussed this for 10 or 12 years and the city council didn't want that kind of confrontation."

McCaughan said he believes the party is more dangerous now with fewer people than it has been in the past.

Dan Ostreng, a junior in political science at Aurora, said he thinks the party should be kept where it is and pushed inward to be contained.

George McCabe, of the Forgotten Truth Ministry in Dix, said for moral reasons the city should outlaw Halloween celebrations.

"You need to educate people," McCabe said. "Halloween is a day of evil — it's a religious revival."

The task force will review all suggestions at its next meeting, Feb. 6.

Opinions

Brad Cole, a graduate student in higher education from Macon, said the problem is people behaving irresponsibly.

Cole, former student body president, suggested controlling the party by providing a designated area and alternatives to drinking.

"If an SIU student creates a problem downtown, then pack their bags for them and send them home," he said.

Cole suggested expelling students involved in mob action and establishing such a provision in the Student Conduct Code book.

He said community officials could make the action more extreme without shutting down the city or establishing a police state.

"Small steps will hopefully lead to great bounds as long as attention is kept focused," Cole said.

Rick Ferrero, a senior in advanced technical study from Chicago, said city officials should close the entire Street and impose a 10 p.m. curfew for motorized travel.

James Prowell, of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce and a member of the task force, told Crane he had the same thoughts in 1983.

"We tried for six years and it failed," Prowell said.

Paulette Curkin, SIUC Housing Program coordinator, said she has seen the party from two sides. First as a bar owner in the 1980s, and now as a housing administrator.

"We need to embrace it and make it our own or close the University and put an end to it," Curkin said.

Students not attending the meetings Monday afternoon had differing opinions on what should be done to curb the violence at the Halloween celebration.

Jenifer Roosevelt, a freshman in psychology from Murphysboro, said SIUC students always will oppose changes proposed by city council and University members.

Ban

The request for council action accompanying the proposed ordinance describes nitrous oxide as a colorless, sweet-tasting gas often used by doctors and dentists for general anesthesia.

The request says the Carbondale Police have been unable to take effective action against individuals using this legal but dangerous gas.

Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty said the city is determined to deal with the nitrous oxide problem directly. He said the decision to take action against nitrous oxide use and distribution was based on evidence that use of the gas is a growing problem among younger Carbondale residents.

Michael Nolan, Under-graduate Student Government city affairs commissioner, said the senate is studying the nitrous proposal, but has not yet decided on a position.

"We are looking at a lot of new information, and we probably won't have it all put together until Tuesday afternoon," he said.

Nolan said he felt the issue was a difficult one, because the city is a home rule unit of government, but that this power should be used carefully.

Drew Hendricks, a Carbondale resident who expressed concern regarding the effectiveness of the ordinance at the Jan. 17 council meeting, said the proposed ban on nitrous use is "silly in its scope."

"The city is trying to make illegal a state of consciousness," he said. "That is the definition of thought crime."

Hendricks said he believed the city was taking the easy way out by cracking down on nitrous, when young people are in far more danger from using everyday products such as paint, glue and scotch guard to get high.

The city council also will address a proposed anti-lockout ordinance, which would allow police to issue fines or arrest rental property owners who lock out tenants late with their rent. Like the nitrous oxide ban, the anti-lockout ordinance was held over from the Jan. 17 city council meeting for further consideration.

The U.S. economy is highly dependent on coal. Arcey said. "It is the cheapest source of electricity."

Arcey said 15 percent of the coal mined nationally is used in the manufacturing of metal, particularly steel. About 85 percent of the coal mined in the United States is used to make electricity.

John Mead, director of the center, said it is important to continue to develop new ways to use coal.

"We see a continuing need and interest for progress (in coal technology) with an emphasis on the environment," Mead said.

However, he said the main purpose of the center is to help faculty on campus develop coal research ideas, get funding and make progress in the understanding of scientific and engineering problems.

"SIUC contributes to improving the use of coal and studying its environmental performance and in a sense meeting society's need by developing good research," Mead said.

Arcey said the faculty's research also adds to their classroom lectures benefiting students.

"I'm convinced the research process enhances the instructional process," Arcey said.

Mead said reclamation research has a positive environmental effect by finding new ways to turn virtual waste lands into productive farm land and wetlands.

The creation of wetland habitats for water fowl from abandoned mine lands is an area of research done by SIUC's Co-operative Wildlife Research Center.

"This is an area where habitat and mining can come together," Arcey said. "It has helped to establish SIUC as a leader in reclamation. SIUC has pushed a lot of new ideas with benefits to industry and to the environment. A motivated and activist faculty really makes a differences. The Wilshire mine south of Carrier Mills is an example of an abandoned mine land restored as a wetland habitat. The center and park receive about $700,000 in funding annually from the state. In 1993, the center submitted 52 projects for external funding. Six of the projects were funded. In 1994, 72 projects proposals were submitted and about 30 were funded. Arcey said. "We're operating at about half, which is a very good (funding) record for any research center." The center receives about $2 million to $2.5 million annually in external funding of projects. About 20 employees work at the coal center, including graduate assistant Arcey said. The U.S. Department of Energy gave the space to the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources, which operates the two buildings in conjunction with the University. The Illinois Clean Coal Institute and Illinois State Geological Survey programs both share the space with SIUC. The University's programs include coal analysis and material and energy process labs. The park provides lab space to relieve some of the Carbondale campus space problems, space for large-scale research projects and provides a host site for individual testing of new technologies, Arcey said.

Radio station offers real-life experience

By Benjamin Golshahr
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Students can gain practical work experience and have fun at WIDB, SIUC's student radio station.

The radio station, which has been on the air for 25 years, operates solely through students who volunteer their time. It airs in the Student Center, barely on 600 AM, and is cabled to the on-campus dormitories.

Positions available

WIDB is in need of a new sales manager and sports director, as well as several staff positions, including disc jockeys, promotion, production, programming, sales, news, casters, sportscasters and public relations.

Bill Barker, a senior in radio and TV from Park Ridge and WIDB's general manager, said anyone interested in working for WIDB should attend their interest meeting 7 p.m. tonight in the Student Center's Video Lounge on the 4th floor.

Barker said anyone who wants to work will not be turned away, regardless of age or major.

"We'll train anybody," he said. "Freshmen or young people shouldn't feel intimidated, and you don't need to be a radio and television major."

Effective training

He said WIDB's ability to train new people has kept it on the air for the last 25 years.

"We can get someone on the air with a week of training, if they want to do it," he said. "One reason the station has gotten along so well for the last 25 years is because we have had good people to instruct new ones on what to do."

Barker also said WIDB has its own engineering team.

"(The engineering team members) are responsible for maintaining and rebuilding anything that needs to be done to the equipment we have," he said. "We don't hire anyone to fix anything around here. We can always use more engineers, because something's always going down."

Barker, who used to work in sales at WIDB, said the station has a strong alumni that often helps pull students into the industry after graduation.

Experience most valuable

Melissa Miller, a junior in radio and TV from Mokenca and WIDB's account executive, said even though the sales force earns a 10 percent commission on each sale, the students primarily work for job experience.

"The biggest sale you'd make is about $500, so you'd get $50—but that's only the biggest accounts," she said. "This is for experience. If you can put on your resume that you were a sales director or that you held five accounts, that will look good."

Phil Landeros, a sophomore in radio and TV from Midlothian and WIDB's news director, said his job has prepared him for the future as much as his classes at SIUC have.

"I love my job here," he said. "I've learned so much over the past months that if I wouldn't have had this job, I wouldn't be as ready for the industry when I graduate."

Brad Francis, a junior in math and chemistry from Nashville, and WIDB's assistant music/metal director, said working as a DJ has taken a lot of time from his already busy schedule, but it is worth it.

Climbing the ladder

Francis said he has gained leadership skills while working at WIDB.

"I started out as a freshman DJing and worked my way up to assistant director here," he said.

Valencia Wadlington, an undecided freshman from Chicago who DJ's Urban music at WIDB, said the best thing she enjoys about the job are the people she works with.

"Some of the DJ's have taught me a lot," she said.

"It's a lot of fun. It's something to want to wake up for in the morning."

"Federal work-study money is not tied to increases (in the minimum wage) in any way," Donna Williams, financial aid accountant, said.

"An award might translate into lesser hours available if the increase is approved, but in almost all cases, students do not lose their jobs once their work-study award runs out," she said.

Williams, who is in charge of both federal work-study and non-federal work-study student employees, said during an average academic school year, some 6,000 students are employed by the University. Their base hourly wage is $4.25 and the average hourly wage is $4.38, she said.

Associate Director of Financial Aid Daniel Mann said work-study money is not the only form of funding upon which the school relies. Various sources, including state funding, comprise the $9.3 million; the school pays student workers.

Williams said because there is no connection between the minimum wage and how the government figures aid, past minimum wage increases have not been followed by increases in federal work-study funding.

Mann said during the past two minimum wage increases, other sources of funding have increased. But Mann stressed that past performance is no guarantee that such an increase will happen again, should the minimum wage increase.

"The truth of the matter is we are not really thinking about an increase too much right now," Mann said. "Right now, it's all talk. Once a proposal actually comes through, that's when we will take a good hard look and see what needs to be done."

expand its service, said Gene Gauss, ceo of Northern Star Airlines. Three cities under consideration for service from Chicago are Springfield, Minneapolis and Flint, Mich. Northern Star flies 19-seat Beechcraft 1900 airplanes, which were not affected by the Federal Aviation Administration's ban on certain models of small planes in October.

"The aircraft is used by more regional airlines than any (other) type," White said.

Northwestern College of Chiropractic is now accepting applications for its next three entering classes.

(April 1995, September 1995, January 1996)

General requirements at time of entry include:

- At least 2-3 years of undergraduate college in a health science or basic science degree program. (Inquire for a complete list of specific requirements.)
- A minimum G.P.A. of 2.5. (A more competitive G.P.A. is favored.)
- A personal interest in a career as a primary care physician.

Northwestern College of Chiropractic offers a rigorous four year professional education. Our focus on science, diagnosis, chiropractic methods, patient care and research provides our graduates with the tools they need to work as primary care physicians in the health care environment. NWCC is fully accredited by North Central Association of Colleges and Schools and the Council on Chiropractic Education.

better time through the first six laps until fatigue began to set in the final two laps.

Homer and DeNoon anticipated a stronger challenge prior to the meet, but that challenge weakened when Illinois (fourth with 56 points) decided to send the bulk of its lineup to another meet.

Although DeNoon does not prefer third-place finishes, he said his team improved from last weekend and on any other day his squad could come out on top.

"We did okay," he said. "We were somewhat flat. "On another day, Purdue could win, or Indiana, or SIU."

Both Indiana schools had some type of home-track advantage with Purdue hosting the meeting and Indiana's athletes receiving support from numerous relatives and their school's men's squad.

The Salukis will spend the remainder of this week preparing for Saturday's Indiana Invitational.

was sophomore Stelios Marneros, who ran a season best 14: 47.46 in the 5,000 meter run.

Giesler said he was also extremely pleased with Neophytos Kalagerou's 6-10.75 high jump.

Also establishing personal bests in field events were Mike Claycomb and Allen Bradd, who pole vaulted 15-7.5 and tossed the shot put 51-0, respectively.

Two personal bests came from the 400-meter run with Harry Foster and Jubal Alvis accomplishing times of 50.84 seconds and 50.91, respectively.

Neil Emberton and Garth Akal also put up their best times of the season by running the mile in 4:16.08 and the 3,000-meter in 8:39.41, respectively.

The Salukis were without head coach Bill Cornell who remained home to rest an aching knee that he had surgery on Dec. 7. Cornell said he would be ready to travel to the Indiana Invitational this weekend.

Recruiting

"And No. 3 is the direction of our program and that they can be part of the solution to the commitment toward improving not only football, but all sports."

One of the controversies surrounding Saluki football when Watson took over the program was the sparse amount of Illinois-based players on the team.

Traditionally, Illinois has ranked among the top-five states in the country in prep football talent, behind Florida, Texas, California and Ohio.

Watson said SIUC is pursuing just one player from outside the midwest geographic area and his staff has done its best to pool the talent-rich areas of Chicago and St. Louis.

"Chicago is one of our main-stream areas and we've got a good handful of kids from there," he said. "We also went to St. Louis and the metro area like Belleville and Alton."

Despite the grueling schedule that accompanies the recruiting season, Watson said chasing after the prep and juco standouts is one of the most enjoyable parts about being a college coach.

"It's (recruiting) a passion of mine," he said. "To be successful, you've got to be a good recruiter and I love it."

Young-Rice duo pushed 49ers to win

Newsday

"I want my performance to stand for myself and for my teammates."

Steve Young
San Francisco 49ers quarterback

MIAMI—A simple victory would have done the trick for Steve Young and the San Francisco 49ers. That's all Young needed to emerge from the towering legacy of Joe Montana, and all the 49ers needed to establish themselves as the premier franchise in NFL history. But, no, they wouldn't allow themselves to be only ordinary. That would have been ... well, boring.

"We wanted to come here and do something special," coach George Seifert said afterward. "We wanted to make history."

And they did, all of them. In a told-you-so performance, the 49ers won an unprecedented fifth Super Bowl, dominating the San Diego Chargers, 49-26, in Super Bowl XXIX Sunday night at Joe Robbie Stadium. They scored on the third scrimmage play of the game — Young-to-Jerry Rice, 44 yards — and the rest was easy.

"We knew we were going to kick their butts," cornerback Deion Sanders said.

The toast of the team was Young. The 33-year-old quarterback, overcoming pressure few athletes have known, capped his spectacular season by throwing for six touchdowns. Young broke Montana's Super Bowl record of five touchdown passes in a game, a fitting footnote to a near-flawless evening. Young completed 24 of 36 passes for 325 yards, with no interceptions. He threw three scoring passes to Rice, two to Ricky Watters and one to William Floyd. Young also was the leading rusher in the game (49 yards) and the unanimous MVP selection.

When it was over, when the enormous pressure on Young and the team finally had been lifted, the 49ers opened their emotional spigot, letting loose. For Young, it was sweet validation.

"I wish that anybody who ever played football could feel this; this is a wonderful feeling," said Young, pressing the Vince Lombardi Trophy against his chest. "Honestly, I've distanced myself from (the Montana comparisons). I did so a couple of years ago, and you guys (reporters) will, too, in time. I want my performance to stand for myself and for my teammates."

Seifert, who won his second Super Bowl ring, said of Young: "I think he freed himself, emotionally."

Young & Co., undaunted by being the biggest favorite (18 points) in Super Bowl history, jumped on the Chargers early and destroyed them with a relentless and awesome display of offense. It was an exhibition of grace and toughness, especially by Rice.

The future Hall of Famer, who was under the weather with flu-like symptoms, suffered a bruised left shoulder in the second quarter.

He went out for two series, but returned to finish his masterpiece—10 receptions for 149 yards. "Jerry Rice with one arm is better than everyone else in the league with two arms," Young said.

As the final seconds ticked away, Young and Rice embraced on the sideline, the way Rice and Montana did so many times. "This one is special because of Steve Young," Rice said. "He deserves everything he's getting right now."

The Chargers, hoping to shock the world, never had a chance. They fell behind 14-0 and were out-classed by one of the most prolific offenses in history. Stan Humphries, who was no Joe Namath, was 24-for-49 for 275 yards and one touchdown, but he threw two interceptions.

"I'm more ashamed than I am mad," said running back Natrone Means, who was held to 33 yards on 13 carries. "We stunk it up."

A shell-shocked coach Bobby Ross said, "The quickness and speed of their offense shouldn't have surprised us, but it looked like it did surprise us."

The Chargers, known for big-play explosiveness, played like a damp firecracker until late in the third-quarter, when rookie Andre Coleman returned a kickoff 98 yards for a touchdown. It ignited a spark, but the Chargers were too far behind (42-18 after the two-point conversion) to make a serious run. "I don't know if we were awestruck or what," Ross said.

Young had the MVP award locked up by halftime. He completed 17 of 23 for 239 yards and four touchdowns, tying Doug Williams' Super Bowl record for scoring passes in a half.

Men's tennis nets a pair of wins at MVC tourney

Something is better than nothing.

At least that has to be the philosophy of the SIUC men's tennis team as two Salukis won consolation events in the Missouri Valley Conference Men's Individual Tennis Championship in Des Moines, Iowa, Jan. 27 to 29.

SIUC's Bojan Vuckovic won the No. 3 singles consolation flight and teammate Jack Oxler won the No. 6 single consolation flight for the Salukis.

Tulsa earned the most titles, winning three singles and one doubles championships, while Indiana State won three titles. Wichita State went home with two crowns and Drake left with one. The Golden Hurricane won four championships after only winning just one the year before.

Robert Novotny of Drake defeated Indiana State's Grant Silcock in the No. 1 singles match (7-5, 6-3), while John James/Pascal Savekoul, of Indiana State, disposed of Wichita State's Phil Cooper/Shawn Harrop (6-2, 6-2).

The Saluki men's team starts its spring season Feb. 10 at Austin Peay State.

Crum: Doing things his way

The Baltimore C.

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—His office is a little more than two miles from the twin spires of Churchill Downs, and if Denny Crum doesn't produce another NCAA champion, maybe he'll train a Kentucky Derby winner.

Farther to the east is his 75-acre farm, where the stable houses Medium Cool, a 7-year-old colt by Conquistador Cielo with earnings of $550,000.

His golf course, Valhalla, the site of the 1996 PGA championship, is nearby. The hunting and fishing in Kentucky were other amenities that helped Crum turn down two offers to return to UCLA, where he learned the game from John Wooden.

Freedom Hall is filled and his likeness pops up on about every third billboard on Interstate Highway 65, but, best of all, Denny Crum gets to do it his way, whether it's telling the NCAA to get off his back about graduation rates, or going places others in his position never would—such as the Towson (Md.) Center Monday night to play Towson State.

"I've known him since 1977, and he's pretty much the same guy he was then," said Scooter McCray, an assistant coach who played on Crum's first NCAA title team. "He's been at Louisville for 24 years, and he's going to stay here until he retires. He knows what he wants, and he knows who he is. He's very secure with who he is."

Being in a circle whose only other members are Bob Knight and Dean Smith will do that to a man. They are the only active coaches

"When you recruit a kid, you have an obligation to do what's best for him. If it's best for a kid to go (pro), I'm the last person in the world to tell him not to."

*Denny Crum
Louisville head basketball coach* who are in the Basketball Hall of Fame and have more than one NCAA title to their credit, Crum's coming in 1980 and '86.

Crum, 57, is secure enough to take the knocks over the poor graduation rate of Louisville basketball players. Fifteen percent of the freshmen basketball players who entered Louisville between 1984 and '87 got degrees within six years, but Crum won't apologize for top recruits who go to the National Basketball Association early or begin playing professionally as soon as their eligibility has expired.

As a junior last season, Cliff Rozier was an All-America center. Crum told him to take the money and run to the NBA, even though it set back the Cardinals.

"As far as I'm concerned, the NCAA has to take a back seat," Crum said. "When you recruit a kid, you have an obligation to do what's best for him. If it's best for a kid to go (pro), I'm the last person in the world to tell him not to."

Without Rozier and two others who were taken in the NBA draft, Crum was 12-7 before Monday night's game with his youngest team ever.

Three of the losses came on the road early, to Brigham Young and Villanova in the Great Alaska Shootout, and at Michigan State. The Cardinals won at Georgia Tech and beat Kentucky at Freedom Hall. In the last two weeks of the regular season, Louisville will go to Massachusetts and play UCLA at home.

"What you've got to remember is there isn't any place in the country we haven't been," Crum said. "We play everywhere."

Deferred Apple Computer Loan offer expires February 11, 1995. No payment of interest or principal will be required for 90 days. (Some retailers may require a deposit to hold merchandise while loan is being approved.) Interest accruing during this 90-day period will be added to principal, and the principal amount, as so increased, will determine loan interest which will be included in the repayment schedule. Monthly payments are an estimate based on the following information: For the Performa 578 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $1,849.00, which includes 6.5% sales tax, including loan fees, the total loan amount is $1,943.77, which results in a monthly payment obligation of $33. For the Performa 636 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $1,817.95, which includes 6.5% sales tax, including loan fees, the total loan amount is $1,912.70, which results in a monthly payment obligation of $33. Computer system prices, loan amounts and sales taxes may vary by your authorized Apple Computer Retailer or representative for current system prices, loan and tax amounts. Loans are for a maximum of $1,000 to a maximum of $10,000. You may take out more than one loan, but the total of all loans cannot exceed $10,000 cumulatively. A 13.5% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable, based on the commercial paper rate plus 5.5%. For the month of November, 1994, the interest rate was 10.65% with an Annual Percentage Rate of 12.07%. 8-year loans have no prepayment penalty. The monthly payment and the Annual Percentage Rate shown assume the 90-day deferral of principal and interest described above and no other deferral of principal or interest. Students may defer principal payments up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferral will change your monthly payments. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit review. Watson begins 'rebuilding' process

By Grant Deady
DE Sports Editor

College football coaches across the nation are in a frenzy this week trying to get commitments from the thousands of high school and junior college prospects that have what it takes to play at the next level.

Feb. 1 (Wednesday) is the national signing day for this year's recruits, but several players have already made an oral commitment to join a collegiate football program.

SIUC has not released any list of blue-chippers that it has in the recruits, but several players have already made an oral commitment to join a collegiate football program.

SIUC head coach Shawn Watson and his staff have been working diligently during the past few months trying to persuade players to roll the dice on their rebuilding program.

"You keep long, hard hours," Watson said of his schedule this time of year. "It's (recruiting) the second season and the most important season. It's the life blood of a program."

On several occasions last fall, Watson expressed his teams "lack of size" as the reason for his 1-10 record. He claimed that opponents would just simply wear his players down throughout the course of the game — especially within the offensive and defensive lines.

Watson made bringing in bigger athletes the main priority this off-season and believes fans will be impressed with the size of the recruits he hopes to sign Wednesday — describing some Saluki prospects as "huge."

But regardless of who Watson tries to bring in or what position the player might fit-in at, the coach said he sings the same song to every one of the potential SIUC athletes.

"No. 1 is academics, graduate, and get the job done. This is a very diverse school that offers a quality education," he said.

"No. 2 is the beauty of the campus and the university community. The professors and the deans were awesome with their help in recruiting, which adds a special touch beyond the football staff.

Reggie Fowler, an SIUC freshman wide receiver in administration of justice from St. Petersburg, Fla., spends Monday afternoon working out in the weight room at the Arena.

Horner 'highlight' at Purdue meet

By David Vingren
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Jennie Horner's easy first-place time in the mile that broke an SIUC record at last weekend's Purdue Invitational actually came up a bit short.

Horner's time of 4:49.76 won her first place by more than 13 seconds in what was a rare non-competitive event at a meet where the Salukis fell to a pair of teams from their neighbor state as Purdue and Indiana tied for first-place with a score of 192 to SIUC's 162.

"Horner's performance was the highlight," SIUC women's track coach Don DeNoon said. "Last year that would have been one of the top 20 times in the nation. Hopefully it'll rank that high this year."

Since a challenge for Horner was lacking in the competition,

"We just knew she (Horner) was going to win this."

*Don DeNoon
SIUC women's track coach*

head coach Don DeNoon decided he could risk giving her a big one himself by issuing a goal time of 4:46.

"We just knew she was going to win this," DeNoon said. "Even if she hit the wall she would still come out on top."

In order for her to accomplish the feat, DeNoon yelled to Horner her times after each lap she made around the track, something he normally does not do.

"She was ahead of time except the last two laps," DeNoon said.

Horner's school record came up short of the actual goal, but DeNoon said Horner may be able to accomplish the 4:46 at a future meet under different conditions.

"In a real competitive race that might happen, but I don't see a real competitive race in the future," DeNoon said.

Horner said the presence of DeNoon was her primary driving force since the competition was not.

"He helped out a lot," Horner said. "He knew exactly where I was and where I needed to be to get the time. Every time around he'd tell me I was three seconds ahead or four seconds ahead."

"Jen's one of those athletes that responds to me well," DeNoon said.

Horner was on target for a

Men enjoy career days at U.S. Air Invite

A special group of Salukis put on special performances at last weekend's meet which featured some of the world's best track and field athletes.

Eight of the 17 SIUC men's track athletes that head coach Bill Cornell decided to send to the non-scored U.S. Air Invitational in Johnson City, Tennessee produced season bests in their respective events.

An indication that the quality of the competition was special was the setting of a new world record for the indoor 100-meter run with a time of 10.13 seconds.

The non-collegiate record setter participated at the meet on an individual basis and, therefore, did not represent a team. For the accomplishment he was awarded a 1995 Porsche. Under NCAA rules, a college athlete would be required to decline a prize.

"This was a high class meet," assistant coach Mike Giesler said. "It raises athletes to a higher level."

"That certainly was true for the Saluki representatives, who were coming off a sluggish 102-54 stomping to Illinois in their previous meet.

"There was a change in attitude," Giesler said. "More people wanted to do well."

Salukis stalled by Lady Jays, lose second straight on road

By Doug Durso
Daily Egyptian Reporter

It is hard to win when the other team gets a lot of free shots, but that was a tough lesson the Saluki women basketball team learned in a 73-60 loss to at Creighton, Monday.

A huge free throw advantage and an early second half run sent the Salukis down to their second straight road loss.

Creighton dwarfed the Salukis women hitting 25-41 free throws compared to 13-25 shooting from the line by the Salukis. SIUC women's basketball coach Cindy Scott said her squad's inability to convert from the charity-stripe was a factor in the loss.

Creighton's Holly Sivesind added 17 points and Becky Flynn chipped in with 11, nine in the second half.

Scott shook up the Saluki lineup, after a disappointing 92-70 loss to Drake last Saturday, by making last year's First Team All-Missouri Valley Conference members Nikki Gilmore and Angenette Sumrall come off the bench.

Gilmore responded by scoring 20 points and Sumrall earned her sixth double-double of the year scoring 12 points and grabbed 13 boards, but hit only four of 13 shots from the field.

SIUC falls to 5-4 in the MVC and 10-7 on the season, while Creighton improves to 6-3 and 12-5 overall.

The Salukis fall to fifth-place in the conference and do not play again until Feb. 6 when SIUC hosts Evansville.

"I thought we gave a great effort out there, and we feel better after this game," she said.

Creighton jumped out to an 11-point lead after an 11-3 run to open the second half.
