IRA hints at more attacks in England

LONDON (AP) — The outlawed Irish Republican Army, saying bombs are the only thing Britain will listen to, hinted Wednesday that it will continue to pay the price for the bloodshed.

Scotland Yard's anti-terrorist squad staged a partial reconstruction of Tuesday's IRA blast in Hyde Park, where three mounted members of the Household Cavalry were killed. A dark blue car identical to the one packed with a 10-pound nail bomb that exploded Tuesday evening in the same spot. Scotland Yard spokesman said police hope photographs of the parked car, to appear in the Evening Standard Thursday night and Friday, will jog the memory of witnesses.

Israel hits PLO in retaliation for ambush-killing of soldiers

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Reagan ordered a new round of anti-soviet economic sanctions today in an effort to punish Moscow for the first Israeli air attack on Lebanon.

In a direct political and legal move, Deputy White House spokesman Lyndon B. Johnson said, "I cannot accept the unilateral measures taken by the United States on June 1st." Deputy White House spokesman Lyndon B. Johnson said, "I cannot accept the unilateral measures taken by the United States on June 1st."

The Reagan administration today ordered the United States to cease trade with the Soviet Union, to include equipment produced abroad under U.S. licenses, and American equipment sold to Europe and elsewhere. Besides the economic interests at stake, the pipeline fight represents a fundamental split within the Atlantic alliance over the nature of Soviet intervention.

The U.S. ambassador to France, Evan G, Gendron, has contended that the pipeline is the key to the rejuvenation of the deeply troubled Soviet economy, and a strong Soviet economy encourages Moscow in its "expansionist" and "aggressive" efforts.

Specifically at issue is the sale to Moscow of 40 sophisticated rotors for the compressors that will drive gas through the pipeline. Moscow's contract is with Alsthom, a subsidiary of the nationalized French electrical and electronics giant CIE.

Alsthom manufactures the rotors under a license from General Electric in the United States.

In the Lebanese capital, reporters saw Israeli jets bombarding the Fakhani neighborhood that houses Araba's command headquarters. It was the first Israeli air attack on west Beirut in 27 days. There was no immediate word on casualties.

Israel has been growing impatient with the Soviet Union's policies.

In Beirut, US sanctions on pipeline parts to Soviets

PARIS (AP) — President François Mitterrand ordered a 40-day economic embargo against the Soviet Union today and natural gas pipeline to Western Europe, defying President Reagan's boycott order.

Slump to get worse, economists say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The promise of a mid-year economic recovery, which seemed such a sure thing a few weeks ago, now looks at best and some economists even believe the worst of the recession is yet to come.

Despite Wednesday's government report that economic activity during the spring expanded for the first time since last summer, economists are voicing diminished confidence in the government forecasts of a fast but limited upturn for the remainder of 1982.

Most economists still predict it is likely the year-long recession will give way to growth but the expected upturn will be later and weaker than once thought.

Bush says Carter yielded to Soviets

CHICAGO (AP) — Vice President George Bush said Thursday that former President Jimmy Carter's foreign policy made the Soviet Union bold enough to invade Afghanistan in 1979.

Bush made this statement in Omaha. But before departing for Chicago to start a two-day visit to Illinois.

Bush said that the Carter administration's foreign policy and blamed it for the rejection of the SALT II treaty and the subsequent taking of American hostages.

"If finally, the Soviets invaded Afghanistan," Bush said, "And why not? What had the Democrats done to make their think twice? For nearly three years, our predecessors had spoken softly and carried a little stick."

Move to ban demonstrations opposed in GSC resolution

The Graduate Student Council has opposed a proposal by the President's Office to ban demonstrations in campus buildings.

The GSC at its meeting Wednesday also adopted resolutions asking University officials to maintain a list of persons who request lists of students and to devise a more effective way to inform students of their right to prohibit disclosure of record information by the University.

The GSC at an earlier meeting had opposed a proposal that the University sell lists of students.

By an 18-1 vote, the GSC approved a resolution opposing President Albert Somit's proposals for a blanket prohibition of demonstrations in campus buildings and at the north end of the Student Center. The council was told the prohibition was necessary for safety of students, maintenance of an educational environment and protection of property.

The GSC opposed the concerns of Somit's office can be successfully met by current regulations and procedures governing demonstrations, "while maintaining an environment where free speech flourishes."

The GSC, by a 19-2 vote, approved a resolution approving differential tuition rates for SIU students, an idea advanced by Chancellor Kenneth Shaw.

Mike Snider, graduate student in business, opposed the GSC's stand on the issue. Snider said the present system of equalized tuition was unfair because students in other fields had to pay the test tubes for medical students, for example.

In a lengthy resolution, the GSC listed conditions it would require before considering support for tuition increases and cuts in programs. The GSC said "education and service" programs must have priority over "comfort and convenience."

Other conditions included representation from all constituencies in evaluating programs; the administration's providing of "concrete facts and figures" about proposed program reductions; demonstration by the administration that it had taken effective steps to eliminate waste of funds, and the administration's providing of data on reductions in programs and reasons that would result if tuition increases were not enacted.

The resolution was passed unanimously.

Dave Waltrep, president of the Student Bar Association, appealed to the GSC to restore $25 or $50 that the Fee Allocation Board cut from the law student group's initial budget request. The appeal was made for senior picture proofs, for higher education for more money because educators actively supported his proposal to raise revenues with a $500 million increase in state liquor taxes, the governor requested.

Asked whether the cuts didn't indicate a revenue shortfall so pressing as to require tax hikes, Thompson said, "I see no need for an increase in state taxes in Illinois in the next year. Beyond a year, I cannot go" in predicting, he said.

He denied charges by Adlai E. Stevenson III, his Democratic opponent, that he used "gimmicks" such as delayed spending to balance the budget.

"We're not 'gimmicking.' If we were, we would have had our triple-A credit rating as other states have," Thompson said.

The GSC will review Thompson's cuts — made in the form of vetoes — when it reconvenes this fall.

the fiscal 1982 budget, 5 percent less of a base than proposed by the Legislature.

Sanders said the University will have to make modest internal reallocations to find the money" to pay the increased salaries. SIU will have to reallocate $62,000 to pay for the salary hike, according to University News Service.

"There will be pay increase, policies developed at Carbondale and Edwardsville," Sanders said. "But enough money is now available to SIU to give employees an average increase of 5 percent."

The SIU System announced last month that it planned to add 32.5 more and 4.25 teachers to equalize fiscal 1984 if Thompson failed to approve the 4 percent hike. Now that he has approved an increase, SIU will probably reduce its 1984 request, Sanders said.

"I don't know if Chancellor Shaw has made a final decision on that, but I expect a reduction of some extent in our pay raise request for next year," Sanders said.

School spending and about $12 million in higher education.

State Education Superintendent Donald G. Gill reacted with dismay, saying the trim jeopardized "the quality of our education."

University of Illinois President Stanley O. Ben- berry said he appreciated the governor's decision to protect part of the state's con- tribution to the state's four public employee pension systems for a salary increase of about 4 percent to state university employees.

But he said, "These steps not withstanding, these pay increases will be lowest of any Big Ten university."

Thompson also approved almost $8 million more for higher education than in his March budget proposal. "I was more willing to listen to the arguments for higher education" for more money because educators actively supported his proposal to raise revenues with a $500 million increase in state liquor taxes, the governor requested.

Woman beaten on way home

An SIU-C student was beaten up one block from her home on West Walnut Street Thursday morning, according to Carbondale Police. The incident was reported at 12:35 a.m.

The victim was walking home from campus when a white male grabbed her and dragged her into the bushes, police said. He then proceeded to face with his hands several times, according to the report.

Police said the victim received a minor cut on her nose along with swelling and bruises.

The suspect was wearing blue jeans and a light blue tank top, police said. He is reported to be between 30 and 35 years of age and approximately five feet, 10 inches tall, and about 120 pounds.

Police said the suspect has scratch marks on his face from the victim. He was last seen fleeing on foot toward South Commercial Avenue, police said.

Balanced budget? Yes! Now they won't try at the record deficit

NEVER ONE TO PASS up an opportunity for some political fast-talking and fancy maneuvering, Ronald Reagan has done it again. His proposal for a balanced budget amendment smacks of political demagoguery and the need to strengthen his image in the face of floundering Reaganomics.

Senate Joint Resolution 58, known as the balanced budget amendment, appears to clinch, if used by the Senate, Reagan and his conservative comrades-in-arms rallied on the steps of the Capito to start the biggest and most arduous task of forcing the proposal past the state legislatures.

DEMOCRATS SAY THE proposed amendment is a political hoax, a move by Reagan and the Republicans to preach fiscal restraint while doing the opposite. It is, of course, not a diversion; it is a long overdue process to make the budget more open and democratic.

As it is currently written, the amendment wouird not require the budget to be balanced every year. It would require Congress to adopt a "statement of receipts and outlays" prior to every fiscal year. Unless the nation is at war, or unless three-fifths of both houses are required to pass an "emergency" exception, Congress holds the record-deficit budget as the "national income." It is a measure of the budget process more open and democratic.

The amendment also included a provision that receipts cannot exceed "the national income" unless two-thirds of both houses of Congress pass it. It is a measure of the budget process more open and democratic.

IF THIS AMENDMENT is passed, it would only make the budget process the same as it has been for years. It would only do away with the budget process that Congress and the courts have already violated. It would only do away with the budget process that Congress and the courts have already violated.

Because of the ambiguous wording of the amendment, it would, of course, open up to Supreme Court interpretations, which could properly doom the amendment. It would open up to Supreme Court interpretations that could influence the issue even more and leave Congress holding the record as to which interpretation is the proper one for the particular occasion.

It is interesting to note that the Senate vote on the proposal will be held Tuesday, after the new fiscal year is in being for the remainder of the fiscal year.

REP. DAVID OBEY, a Wisconsin Democrat, summed up the feelings of those in opposition fairly well. Time magazine quoted him as saying the amendment is "an economic nonsense...paving the amendment" like saying I don't want to get killed by cancer, so I'm going to keep a heart attack." This amendment is nothing but a grandstand gesture by Reagan to divert attention from the troubles that Reaganomics has brought on.

GTE charge for emergency call shows lack of scruples, service

Today while going over my phone bill from General Telephone, I noticed a local charge of $0.24 cents. To my total disbelief and the deepest concern for the welfare of how these companies, and the president and Congress are joined with the responsibility to ensure that government spending does not exceed the income, I found out that General Telephone was $0.24 cents for an emergency call to the police station at 2:09 a.m. after my female roommate was robbed and assaulted. The officer made the comment (she offered to do so) because I was too distraught by what had just taken place. The reason for my annoyance is not the amount of the charge, but the principle of it!

The fact that I was charged for an emergency call because I was a fire and life-threatening emergency is appalling. If this is the "standard public service" indeed serve the purpose. I will never again use "I'll send up a flare. At least I'm aware that I'm paying for it. - M. Heil, Junior, Graphic Design.

Editor's Note: General Telephone responds that parties are charged for all operator-assisted calls.

C. William Horrell, professor in the Cinema and Photography Department, was awarded the Professional Photographers of America (PPA) degree by the Professional Photographers of America, Inc., at the Las Vegas Convention Center in Nevada, July 11-14.

The degree, one of the highest honors given to professional photographers, was awarded to Horrell during a special banquet held in conjunction with the association's annual convention and exposition, according to a PPA release.

"It came as a surprise," Horrell said. "I didn't even know what a photographic craftsmanship was."

According to the news release, the Professional Photographers of America degree is awarded for exceptional service to the profession.

According to the news release, a degree must be a member of the association for a minimum of three years to be eligible for the degree. The association, founded in 1901, is the oldest and largest association of professional photographers in the world.

Horrell, a native of Carbondale, is a member of PPA and photographs through the world. He had a degree that applies to the degree by teaching, lecturing or participating in a special photographic demonstration, according to the release. Other merits are earned by participating in association activities such as serving as an elected official, an exhibit judge or a program chairman. Articles published in "The Professional Photographer," the official journal of PPA, also are accepted as merits.

Horrell, a member of PPA since 1945, said, "I've had articles published in the association magazine on and off for several years and I've lectured at their national meeting."

Horrell, 62, who has been at SIUC for 33 years, said that he did not attend the awards ceremony.

"I'm not a formal person," Horrell said. "For one thing, there was a black-tie thing and the last time I've been in a tux was at my son's wedding. And, I wasn't feeling well."

Horrell has been experiencing problems with muscle spasms in his back.

Horrell did attend the convention and exposition. Almost 3,000 professional photographers from around the world attended the event to view award-winning photographs and keep abreast of the latest in photographic journal articles to learn informative tips about photography from experts, according to PPA.

"I was on the national program," Horrell said. "I presented a program where I showed the department of the Society of Teachers of Professional Photography, which is an affiliate of PPA."

Horrell's wife, Ettelye, received his bachelor's degree in education and a master's degree at SIUC in 1943. In 1948, she received her master's degree at the University of Illinois in educational administration and obtained his doctorate in audio-visual with a dissertation on photojournalism at Indiana State University in 1956.

"I started photographic services as a student here at SIUC in 1937. I did work for the newspaper, yearbook, news service and audio-visual slides for teaching," Horrell said.

After finishing his undergraduate degree, Horrell worked at Scott Air Force Base, near Belleville, as a script writer for a training film preparation unit.

"I made filmstrips for classroom use in the Air Force," he said.

In 1945, Horrell bought a photography studio in Anna, which primarily dealt with portraits. He operated the studio until 1949, when he came to SIUC.

"I teach photographic journalism and portrait photography," Horrell said. "I also co-edited a book called 'Photography and Literature' with Dick Lawson in the English department."

Besides teaching, Horrell has done photographic work for books.

"My pride and joy in Jew and Northern Illinois University," Horrell said. The book is a photographic piece about Southern Illinois history and people.

"This next year I will be busy with a survey of motion picture, still photography and graphic arts instruction."

Belew goes solo

By Tom Travis

ADRIAN BELEW has always been a bit player in the larger scheme of things, both before and after his retirement. Always hired to fill a role, he has played the part of the sideman, the gun, if you please.

Through his work with Frank Zappa, Todd Rundgren and Bowie and King Crimson, Belew has come to be considered one of the premier hired guitarists in the business today. He has played a variety of styles for a number of artists, and has been influenced by all of them. He has been a man struggling to express his personality the only way he could — playing the guitar.

But no longer. Belew has finally found himself, as on his first solo album, "Lone Rhino," he has expressed his talents in a number of ways, not only guitar playing, but also through his vocals and his songwriting.

"Lone Rhino" is a very personal album, and it allows Belew's personality to develop. Backed by a band from his chosen hometown of Springfield, he expresses his feelings in a way that is very accessible, yet sensitive and the way only he could.

"LONE RHINO" is a complementation of the styles of music Belew has been exposed to in the past few years, mixed in with his flair for lyrical invention, his very sense of humor and his personal and manicm, guitar playing. He also shows his abilities on percussion, some of the drumming on the LP.

And, in his analysis, it's all Belew's show. He has put together an album that expresses himself and his tastes, while still remaining snapping upbeat and, most of all, accessible.

Accessible on the second or third listen. The first time through, the LP may sound somewhat muddled to the uninitiated Belew listener, with its heavy percussion, swirling atmospheres, and seemingly innocuous lyrics. But with a closer listen to the lyrics, the LP becomes less disjointed.

"The Man in the Moon" is the most personal song on the album, and one of the most beautiful. Belew's note says the song is about the death of his father, and he writes "it took 11 years and one screaming child to put words on my feelings."

This is the kind of simple, poignant lyric that Belew has found is the way to convey his feelings. It is a beautiful expression for a man's feelings.

IT IS A lyrical expression of very personal feelings, and it conveys the intense thought and emotion while still remaining a piece of music that anyone who has lost his or her father can relate to.

"The Final Rhinoceros" is another beautiful, personal piece, composed by Belew and his 4-year-old daughter Audie. It seems that one night at Great Pass Point Studio in the Bahamas, Audie played what Belew terms "this very adult piano piece, which I fell in love with." He added guitar later, and as a mood piece it adds a very poignant feel to the LP. It conveys the feeling that the listener has just experienced something very close to Belew's heart — his feelings for his family.

"Noir Guitar" and "Hot Sun" are two other mood pieces. Both songs recall favorably Eno's "Another Green World" album, and some of Fripp and Eno's best collaborative work. This is not to say they are derivative, however. Both tracks exhibit Belew's personal style and feel for the guitar.

"BIG ELECTRIC CAT," with its Gary Nummuloid chorus, opens the LP with the bang and carries heavy percussive, and it takes off from there. "The Moment," which appears to be about a female version of a moon, or a person who is struggling to carry a steady 4-4 beat and a positively nasty sax line by William Janowsen. Apparently, it is about a man's wife who will never let him go. Belew also writes "it is to be believed that it is about Belew's wife, Margaret, who, like Adrian, is a very pleasant person."

"Stop It!" is another song about being on the road and living out of a suitcase, in a more comrison vein than "Neil and Jack and Me" from Crimso's "Beat" album, which Belew also composed lyrically. "But I'm out shuffling for someplace to eat, like a breakfast cereal at the can, keepin' the grind on the grindle, I'm burnt around the chest and tender in the middle," Belew sings.

"ADIDAS IN HEAT" is lyrically reminiscent of Zappa, as Belew launches into a fast-paced, tongue-in-cheek drifter against designer clothes in general, and athletic clothes in particular. The sports-awareness t-shirt, Sports-awareness t-shirt, you parsonel regalia of an athletic supporter," he sings, and the song ends with a mock high school band, whistles and cheers.

Adrian and Margaret Belew and their two daughters are all beautiful people, and one gets the feeling that there is a great love between them. This love is fully expressed on "Lone Rhino."

"Lone Rhinoceros" is a personal expression for Adrian Belew, a chance for him to finally express the feelings he has had to get out of his system for a long time. It is, overall, an excellent first solo effort, and the LP comes well enough to merit another solo album.
'Molly's Rock' is an old tale, fine production gives it new life

By Carlos Clark
Student Writer

"Molly's Rock," a new play by Kenneth Robbins, graduate student in the Department of Theater, premiered Wednesday night. It is the fourth in a series of new plays to be produced by the SIU-C Playwrights Workshop, and the best.

The play brings to the stage an old oral legend about a young woman's brutal murder and the men affected by it.

Set immediately after the Civil War, "Molly's Rock" tells the story of three men, a Preacher, a Poacher and a Peddler, who meet accidentally on the road and relate the tales of their experiences with Molly, a young woman who sits upon a rock waving and giving kindness to strangers passing by.

Molly lures each of these men into her world, winning them love and taking in return small gifts that offer along with their promises to return.

When they do return to find she is gone, each suffers loss in his own way, realizing that a bit of each of them has gone with her.

Robbins has given us a tale of suspense, making us wonder about the murderer of Molly. And, although the Preacher accuses the Peddler and entreats the Poacher to kill him in revenge Molly's death, the Poacher wavers, having decided that Molly's revenge has already taken place.

Dance evokes emotions
By Cynthia Rexor
Staff Writer

Experiencing the "Body and Soul Dance Company" Wednesdays, night involved more than just seeing a dance; it involved one's sense of humor as well as one's ability to empathize with human emotions like frustration, pain and doubt. Most of the FASU students and audience were probably already aware of the community dance company, but few participated in a dance workshop being sponsored by FSC. Bill Moore, the workshop performance may have won them over. Thirteen people danced various dances, including the quickstep, the foxtrot and the tango, and they were judged on their skill and ability to communicate emotions through dance. The audience was so impressed with the dance that they spontaneously ran to the stage to give the performers a standing ovation. The dance company will be back next semester with a new dance program.

Hard hats pledge pay

Workers help jobless

By Bob Dvorak
Associated Press Writer

ALIQUIPPA, Pa. (AP) — Hard hats at the job site of Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp. have pledged $60,000 from their payroll checks to help keep the families of steelworkers whose unemployment benefits are running out.

More than 800 members of United Steelworkers Local 1111 have agreed to give $1 to $20, beginning Wednesday, from their biweekly paychecks for the rest of the year to establish a food fund.

"I sympathize with the people who are laid off. I realize it can happen to me. I feel I have a moral obligation to help," said Steve Hornyak, 26, a millwright and one of those taking part in the payroll deduction plan at the Aliquippa Works.

I'd like to help too if I was in that situation. If you're working, you ought to consider yourself lucky," said Harold Johnson, 45, a 17-year veteran at the mill who has worked in the hot shop.

"If I was hungry, I'd want someone to feed me," said Richard Knoll of Aliquippa, a 27-year mill veteran who is giving $10 every two weeks for 12 pay periods — $120.

Union officials say 3,700 of the 8,000 workers at the mill have given pink slips, and some of them have exhausted their 39 weeks of unemployment benefits.

"People are hurting. They're running out of benefits. We decided to help ourselves," said Pete Eratino, president of Local 1111 and president of the payroll deduction plan.

Aliquippa donated its payroll computers and keypad operators at a cost of about $4,000 to the union, to automate the deductions, which will flow to a bank account to be used to buy $20 food certificates.

The first certificates will be handed out in August at the union hall.

"We thought about opening a food bank, but it's more practical than handing out cheese or cans of beans. We wanted to make it meaningful," said Eratino, who hopes to raise another $30,000 from benefit concerts and other sources for the food fund.

"This way, a family can buy perishables like milk and vegetables. It's more costly, but it's better for a family to decide," he added in a recent interview. The payroll drive will end at the end of the year, and the organizers hope the reception will have eased by then.

"If it's still needed, we'll make another appeal," said Eratino, a two-year union president who worked 25 years in the mill.

Two food stores, C&I Supermarket and Golden Dawn Store, have agreed to give the steelworkers an additional 10 percent discount. So for $22.50, a certificate buys $25 worth of food.

"We wanted to do something. When the program presented itself, we were very excited. We felt we had a civic and public duty to do it," said Bozko Selkovic, co-owner of Golden Dawn. "We'd be more in business if it weren't for steelworkers. This is our chance to help them."

Nationwide, more than one out of every three steelworkers have been furloughed. At the end of May, only 300,000 steelworkers still had jobs — the lowest employment figure since the American Iron and Steel Institute began keeping track of job 50 years ago.

To counter the hard times, several USWA locals in the Pittsburgh area have held benefit rock concerts, rallies and mill gate collections to help feed jobless steelworkers on an emergency basis.

On Monday evening, 1,000 people gathered in Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh to pray for jobs in the steel and coal industries. The meeting was sponsored by four Pittsburgh businessmen who said they had a "vision" at the end of the year of people praying for God's help.

Several other locals have contacted the Aliquippa union to learn more about the payroll deduction plan. But steelworkers grumble that the only real solution is to get union members back to work permanently.

"I signed up to give $19. I won't miss that because I'll never see it. If this gives some guy bread for his table, that's fine," said Richard Zeigler, 60, of Patter Township. "But it won't help him pay his mortgage on his car payment."

SIU-C students favoring sciences

SIU-C students are giving up on the sciences, in addition to sticking with English courses, while on the average nationwide, undergraduate students have opted for English over sciences.

In the fall of 1980, undergraduates all over the United States, taking a total of nearly 70 million credit hours, took 11.3 million credit hours of English, compared to 10.3 million credit hours of physics, chemistry, earth science, computer science and astronomy combined, according to a recent report from the American Council on Education.

During that same semester at SIU-C, students took 14,010 credit hours of English and 17,901 of the science disciplines, excluding earth science, according to the SIU-C Office of Institutional Research.

Jean Hudson, staff clerk at the office, said that since earth science is not classified under an independent department at SIU-C, the number of credit hours taken in the discipline would be extremely difficult to pinpoint.

Last spring semester, SIU-C students again took more hours of the sciences combined than the English courses, with 16,840 credit hours of the four science disciplines taken and 11,689 English credit hours taken, Hudson said.

The ACE report did show that nationwide students took more than twice as many science, engineering and technology credit hours combined than credit hours of humanities.

About 9 million credit hours were taken in 10 science and engineering disciplines, such as psychology, math, chemistry, and engineering, while 21 million credit hours were taken in four humanities fields, including history, modern languages and philosophy, according to ACE.

Students compete nationally

Six members of the SIU-C chapter of Phi Beta Lambda, the college counter-part of Future Business Leaders of America, recently returned from the 40th Anniversary Celebration of FBLA-PBL in Indianapolis.

The five students, accompanied by adviser Ginny Ritherson, placed first in state competition and four competed nationally. Kevin Allen placed eighth in the national competition as Mr. Future Business Teacher. Diana Resley, LaDonna Evans and Paity Rohnes, along with Cathy Coxen and Harvey Morris of Illinois State University, placed second in national competition as the Parliamentary Procedure team.

Engineering schools across the country are filled to capacity, according to Kenneth Tempelmeier, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology, and SIU-C is among them.

The steady rise in enrollment over the last three years has forced the college to close admissions to out-of-state students until fall semester 1983. However, restrictions on out-of-state students will be replaced by a retention policy that went into effect in mid-April, Tempelmeier said.

A 30 percent yearly increase in enrollment has been difficult for the college to deal with, said Tempelmeier.

He said the retention policy is designed so the college will experience about an eight percent increase if the interest to study engineering continues.

Under the retention policy students will be required to earn at least a C prerequisite courses in math, physics and chemistry. Tempelmeier said whether or not students fulfill these requirements will determine if they are allowed to continue in the program.

He said about two-thirds to three-fourths of the engineering colleges in the country have some form of retention policy.

"We're just forced into this position because of all the students interested in studying engineering because of job opportunities," he said.

Students who do well in the prerequisite courses generally do well in the program, Tempelmeier said. The retention policy will help students decide if engineering is really the major they ought to pursue, he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — In the back pages of magazines and comic books, the bully is still kicking and the 175-pound weakling's face, still simulating him in front of his best girl.

Charles Atlas is still there in those back pages, too, offering the muscles that let the weakling build himself up so he can go on to the dance floor and bolt the bully and impress the girl.

The man Charles Atlas has been dead 10 years, but his longtime business partner and best friend, Charles Roman, is keeping Atlas' physical culture movement alive.

The 97-pound weakling, pretty much unchanged since it was same as it was in 1928, is a measure of the lasting appeal of perhaps the most popular correspondence course of all time and a testament to Atlas' credo: "Nobody picks on a strong man."

Atlas was once a scrappy 16-year-old spitting sand kicked up by a strapping lifeguard. Atlas never went back and decked the lifeguard, but he probably thought about it a lot over the years.

He died in 1972 after checking out of a hospital where he was recuperating for a heart attack. He went to the beach to swim and jog, and his heart gave out. It probably was the only time in his 80 years that he miscalculated. It's a glorious body.

Today, Atlas' business is still going as strong as the 17-inch chest and 17-inch biceps that made him a vaseline strongman and high-profile model for sculptors in the 1920s.

Over the years, 1.3 million young men worked out, paid $30 — the same price as when Roman and Atlas went into business in 1928. The 12-lesson Atlas course is probably the only time a correspondence course was as popular and as long-lasting as the Atlas course.

The average student gains three inches around the chest and a 1.5-inch girth in each bicep, according to Roman. With a million and a half students working out, that couldn't mean the Atlas course may have added as much as 70 miles of muscle, 35 miles of right bicep and 15 miles of left bicep to 20th century bodies.

The course is basically the same as it was when Roman and Atlas went into business in 1928. The course, looking now like "Dynamic-Tension," a program that pits muscle against muscle rather than relying on weights or machines.

Part of the lasting success of the Atlas course is probably due to its independence of expensive barbells and public gym equipment. The technique of chicken-breasted 15-year-old boy may fall short, but no one since.

He was still the same weight he was at 21 after a half-century of working out, but he's still the same weight he was at 21 after a half-century of working out, and his creative muscles, dreaming up the bench press and coining the term "Dynamic-Tension," a program that pits muscle against muscle rather than relying on weights or machines.

He advised staying out of nightclubs because of germs and advocated going to bed early because "nothing worthwhile ever happened after 10:30 anyway."

Roman, meanwhile, quit his job at the ad agency and formed his own company, dreaming up the bench press and coining the term "Dynamic-Tension," a program that pits muscle against muscle rather than relying on weights or machines.

Athletic budgets increased

By Jackie Rodgers
Staff Writer

The proposed SIU-C athletics budget for fiscal 1982 is approximately $2.1 million, an increase of $1.2 million over the $0.9 million proposed for fiscal 1981.

The new budget includes a $1.8 million allocation for men's athletics, an increase of $0.8 million over the fiscal 1981 budget of $1 million. The biggest increase for both athletics and intercollegiate sports is the money allotted for scholarships, where the men's program will have an increase of almost $10,000, and the women's will have about $5,000 more to spend.

Big leaguers lack experience, says Dodger great Newcombe

By John Nelson
AP Sports Writer

In 1949, the world was at peace again, and Don Newcombe was a 23-year-old right-hander for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Although the same pitching staff were Preacher Roe, Ralph Branca and Carl Erskine, only a committee meeting Wednesday, showed an increase of $289,616 from the fiscal 1981 budget of $2.1 million. The biggest increase for both athletics and intercollegiate sports is the money allotted for scholarships, where the men's program will have an increase of almost $10,000, and the women's will have about $5,000 more to spend.

The proposed men's overall budget increased approximately $2.1 million, despite the dropping of wrestling and water polo as intercollegiate sports.

The men's budget shows a rise of $254,827. The revenue accounts are projected to be $3.2 million.

In an apparent attempt to reach Title IX compliance, the women's budget shows an increase of almost $50,000 in the area of housing. Room and board is one of the areas Bruce Swinburne, vice president of student affairs and Charlotte West, women's athletic director, believe SIU-C will be cited for non-compliance when the Office of Civil Rights completes its investigation of SIU-C.

The football program will receive a $233,500 slice of the men's budget, a cut of about $1,000 from the 1982 fiscal budget allotment, while the men's basketball budget will be $138,000.

The women's volleyball program is scheduled to receive a $110,000 boost, increasing their budget to $45,750. Softball will receive an increase of about $7,000. That sport underwent its fiscal 1982 budget of $31,287 by $13,000. The women's basketball program will receive $1,000 less for fiscal 1983, with a total of $44,174.

The proposed budget for the basketball program totals $318,000, an increase of $50,000 over the fiscal 1981 budget of $268,000. The increase includes an increase in the coaching contract for new head coach Joe Ruttan. The budget for the women's basketball program totals $110,000, an increase of $7,000 over the fiscal 1981 budget of $103,000. The increase includes an increase in the coaching contract for new head coach Joe Ruttan.
West, Itchy join SIU-C Hall of Fame

Charlotte West, women's athletics director, leads a group of the first 10 women ever to be inducted into the hall of fame. West, along with 14 other inductees, including baseball Coach Itchy Jones, will be recognized in ceremonies Sept. 15 at Soldier Field with game. West has been women's athletics director since 1969. She coached six varsity sports at SIU-C over the years, and has been honored by SIU-C's climb to big-time status in women's intercollegiate athletics.

Itchy Jones, who is being honored tonight, left the University of Kentucky after a 21-year career as a player, was named All-American at Kentucky, is the winningest woman's head coach in history. When he moved on to SIU-C in 1973, he was an assistant coach at the school. He was named SIU-C's head coach the following season. He has compiled a 207-82-4 record and the Salukis have won six conference championships since 1979.

Dorothy Davies was a teacher, coach and administrator at SIU-C for 35 years. She founded SIU-C's women's intercollegiate athletics program, and coached field hockey, basketball, softball and tennis. Davies gymnastics was named after her.

West said, "Itchy did a good job in terms of keeping the entire team on target in the classroom. He was the academic adviser, and, unforgettably, his credentials for that job are something SIU-C should take into consideration and utilize.

"Under Manuel's guidance, 10 of 13 senior football players received degrees "on time." Two years ago, 11 of 17 walked off the field, degree holders in one semester and one had another one the next semester.

But with departure of Isaac Brightman, full-time academic adviser, SIU-C turned over student-athlete advisory duties to each varsity unit. That is something Manuel doesn't agree with, but for the time being he will be a part-time顾问 for David McMichael, who is taking on those chores now for the Saluki gridiron.

"Their system of academic counseling is already intact," Manuett said. "I'm sure McMichael is doing a good job."

Chicago Bulls announced Thursday that they have traded veteran center Art Gilmore to the San Antonio Spurs for backcourt player Dave Corzine and starting forward Mark Ollinger.

Bulls General Manager Rod Thorn announced the trade but said details were not yet available.

The 7-foot-2 Gilmore, 32, had publicly expressed a wish to be traded for the last season. He is an 11-year veteran who has been named an all-star for nine of those nine years, including those with the Kentucky Colonels of the defunct American Basketball Association. He had played for the Bulls the past six seasons.

Gilmore is a member of the NBA Hall of Fame, and he was a five-time All-Star.

Corzine, 6-foot-11 and 265 pounds, averaged 8.1 points and 7.7 rebounds last season, but played stronger in the playoffs, averaging 13.6 points and 8.4 rebounds.

The 6-foot-8, 210-pound Ollinger averaged 13.8 points last season, and missed 14 games with various injuries.
