U.S., China sign nuclear reactor agreement

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Energy Secretary John Herrington and Chinese Vice Premier Li Peng, culminating more than two years of frustrating negotiations, signed an agreement Tuesday that allows China to buy U.S.-made nuclear reactors.

The wording of the accord was the same as that initiated in Peking April 30, 1984, U.S.

officials said, despite concerns about the spread of nuclear weapons that prevented the pact from being approved and sent to Congress.

The agreement, subject to review by Congress, would allow American companies to compete for part of what China has estimated will be a $20 billion civilian nuclear power program between now and

President Reagan approved the agreement Tuesday and announced his long-awaited decision in a meeting with visiting Chinese President Li Xiannian.

The multibillion-dollar door to China has been open to French and German firms, but efforts to qualify the down-on-its-luck U.S. nuclear industry have been hung up on questions about China's commitment to nuclear nonproliferation.

Less than a month after the nuclear pact was initiated in Peking, reports of Chinese assistance to Pakistan's supersecret nuclear weapons program prompted a reassessment by the administration.

Grant volumes added

After 18 years of extensive research, the editors at the Ulysses S. Grant Association in Morris Library reached another milestone this week in their compilation of Grant documents.

Volumes 13 and 14 of "The Papers of Ulysses S. Grant" were formally added to the growing series Tuesday, the 100th anniversary of the death of Ulysses S. Grant.

The concluding campaign of the Civil War and the assassination of Abraham Lincoln are included in these latest volumes.

"These latest volumes are particularly appropriate to commemorate the Grant Centenary because they show Grant at the pinnacle of his military career," said John Simon, executive editor of the papers, in an SIU Press news release.

SIMON DELIVERED a speech Monday at the National Archives in Washington, D.C., in recognition of the Grant Centenary.

"As we have found in our research, Grant was the most written about person next to Lincoln during the 19th Century," said David Wilson, associate editor of the Grant Papers.

The first 14 volumes document Grant's career from 1837 to April 30, 1865, in his own

Trial testimony includes con scheme

By Bob Tita
Staff Writer

Former residents of the House of Glass, 805 W. Freeman St., Carbondale, testified Tuesday about a false scheme they devised to murder Marie Azevedo during fall 1979.

Joseph Hatchett, inmate in the Vienna Correctional Center, said that he and Darrick Cook, resident of the House of Glass in 1979, obtained $2,000 from Dr. Allan B. Azevedo to murder Mrs. Azevedo.

Azevedo is on trial in Jackson County Circuit Court for allegedly contracting for the murder of his former wife on or about March 25, 1981.

Hatchett said that he and Cook both received dental work at Azevedo's Murphysboro office while they were residents of the House of Glass, a center for prison inmates near parole.

Cook said Azevedo approached him about the murder of Mrs. Azevedo while he was in his office for dental work. "He asked me did I know anyone who would kill somebody for him," Cook said.

"He told me that his wife was getting ready to divorce him and take his kids away. He said he would be broke," Cook said about Azevedo.

Hatchett, who was Cook's roommate, testified that he wanted to acquire money from Azevedo but never intended to actually kill Mrs. Azevedo.

"I'm a thief. I'm not a killer, a murderer. I don't think I could have killed her," he said.

He claimed he telephoned Azevedo from the House of Glass and identified himself as "Frank" from Chicago and would be interested in killing Mrs. Azevedo.

He said he wanted $10,000 for the murder, with 50 percent of the money paid before the job. Hatchett said that Azevedo told him that he could only come up with $2,000 before the murder. Neither Hatchett or Cook could recall the exact dates when the incident took place.

Hatchett was driven to Murphysboro to pick up the money by his then girlfriend Lynn Crowther, a student at SIU-C. Crowther testified that she was not aware of the plan until she went into Azevedo's office to pick up a package that contained the money.

She said that she was "totally shocked" when Azevedo began giving her instructions about the murder of Mrs. Azevedo.

"He said that there were gas valves around the house that could be turned on and she (Mrs. Azevedo) could be hit on the head," Crowther said. She said that Azevedo had also drawn a map of the house.

When she returned to Hatchett with the package containing the money and the map she said she became mad at Hatchett and told him that she wanted no part of the plan.

Hatchett said that he kept $1,500 for himself and told Cook that Azevedo paid him only $500, giving Cook $250.

City OKs pedestrian overpass plan

By Art Maton
Staff Writer

A second pedestrian railroad overpass for SIU-C is one step closer to becoming a reality.

Plans, specifications and a cost estimate for the proposed $3.2 million project were approved by the Carbondale City Council at its meeting Monday.

The council's action allows the plans to be submitted to the Illinois Department of Transportation, for possible bid letting on September 27. The actual construction contract will be awarded by the council, with IDOT concurrence.

Depending on the weather, construction could begin in late October, and continue for about one and a half to two years.

The Federal Highway Department would account for $2,964,000 of the construction funding, as part of the Carbondale Railroad Relocation Project. The city would provide $70,200, while SIU-C would contribute $7,800. Remaining funding would come from IDOT and the Illinois Central Gulf Railroad.

The proposed 1800-foot long, 20-foot wide structure would be similar in construction and appearance to the existing span over U.S. 51 and the Illinois Central Gulf railroad tracks.

The west end of the new overpass would start near the SIU-C power plant, on the south side of the power plant road. On the east side, the overpass would split into two ramps, one extending to the plaza area between Wright and Trueblood Halls, the other ending at the parking lot entrance south of the electrical substation.

In addition to the ramps, there would be two sets of stairways on the east side, one near Wright Hall, the other near the electrical substation. The overpass would be accessible to emergency and light service vehicles.

Construction is not expected to interfere with traffic along U.S. 51.

In other council action, an ordinance to rezone 12.2 acres of land at the entrance to Brush Hill subdivision on East Park Street from general agricultural to rural residential was adopted.

The action will allow owners Steve Sisulak, Robert and Nancy Gozenbach, and Thomas Davis to subdivide the property for building residences. Several adjoining property owners had opposed the rezoning, and had filed two petitions in an attempt to

South African police kill 2; anti-apartheid base raided

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police killed two black men Tuesday and raided the headquarters of South Africa's largest anti-apartheid organization. Bishop Desmond Tutu led 25,000 blacks in chants of "We shall be free!" A mob of 150 blacks threw stones at police members and their vehicles. Two men also sustained minor injuries, a police statement said. Tutu said he opposed all violence and urged the crowd not to harm other blacks who they suspect of being government informers.

Israel sinks ship thought to carry PLO guns

SIDON, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli gunboats shelled the southern Lebanese port city of Sidon Tuesday, sinking a ship believed to be carrying weapons for Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas, witnesses said. Eight people were wounded. The three gunboats chased the merchant freighter Rula, which was sailing under the Greek flag, into the port of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut, and sprayed the shore with machine-gun fire in an apparent attempt to seize the vessel, the witnesses and Sidon police said.

House leaders split from Senate to cut budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democratic leaders began trying independently to cut the federal deficit Tuesday, regardless of whether a budget compromise is reached with the Senate. The leaders prepared legislation that would make all House spending bills conform to the House-passed budget, which cut $56 billion from the more than $220 billion deficit. The move was another signal that House-Senate budget talks, which have been stalled for more than six weeks, are faltering.

Soviets apologize for truck ramming incident

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Pentagon has received what it considers an apology from the Soviet Union over the July 13 incident in which Col. Roland Lajoie, head of the U.S. mission in East Germany, suffered a fractured facial bone when a Soviet army truck rammed the vehicle in which he was riding. In an explanation to the Pentagon, the Soviets made it clear that the driver of the Soviet military truck exceeded his instructions and was not acting with the coordinated authority of the Soviet command when he rammed the U.S. Army vehicle.

Meese, officials differ on parking ticket status

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The saga of Attorney General Edwin Meese and his 5-year-old unpaid $10 jaywalking ticket continued Tuesday with him saying it's been taken care of and court officials saying it hasn't been. Meese's brother, George, said reports that he was going to pay both the ticket and the $115.50 in late penalties and take care of his brother's arrest warrant were false.

Defense industry to offer spare-parts refund

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The defense industry, worried about its public image in the midst of spare parts pricing scandals, offered Tuesday to refund the cost of spares if the Pentagon finds their prices unreasonable. The "money back guarantee" by two major contractors prompted Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger to announce the start of a new voluntary refund policy and to urge other defense companies to join the campaign.

June consumer prices rise 0.2 percent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices inched up 0.2 percent in June, holding inflation to a moderate 3.7 percent annual rate despite costlier medical care, electricity and telephone service, the Labor Department said Tuesday. Food prices rose for the first time since February, but not much. The 0.1 percent increase reflected cheaper pork and beef, fruits, vegetables and milk, offset by more costly cereals and baking products.

Toyota plans more car building in America

TOKYO (UPI) — Toyota Motor Corp., Japan's biggest automaker and an affiliate of General Motors Corp., said Tuesday it will build more passenger cars in the United States and Canada beginning in 1988. Reports in the Mainichi, Sankei and Nihon Keizai, Japan, newspapers said Toyota plans to invest an estimated $625 million to build a facility in the Midwest somewhere along the Mississippi river.

Shaw says action needed to draw minorities

By Paula Buckner
Staff Writer

Affirmative action is needed to increase the participation of minorities, especially blacks, in higher education, says Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw.

But, during an Illinois House Appropriations Committee hearing last month, Shaw was criticized by two black Chicago representatives, Mary Flowers and Robert LeFlore, for not recruiting enough minorities for faculty and administrative positions.

Shaw said in a recent interview that the low number of minorities in personnel is the result of a limited pool of minorities, especially blacks, available for those positions.

"The pool isn't large enough and the narrowness of the educational pipeline cannot be ignored," Shaw said.

SIU-C fall 1984 statistics show that minorities fill 7.93 percent of faculty positions, 6 percent of administrative-professional positions and 6.98 percent of executive administrative positions.

Blacks account for 1.37 percent of faculty posts, 3.78 of administrative-professional positions and 4.19 percent of the executive administrative positions.

Minorities in education, or the lack of them, has been a problem plaguing the Illinois Board of Higher Education since the mid-1970s when the board was concerned with increasing minority participation in the medical professions.

More recently, the concern has shifted to advancing minority participation in engineering and other areas in which they are underrepresented.

This problem of minority participation in higher education, according to reports published by the IBHE, is only a part of a much larger pattern of social problems. This pattern includes one-parent homes, poverty and educational problems.

Statistics show that nearly 30 percent of blacks do not graduate from high school. Of the 72 percent who do graduate, 29 percent go on to college and 12 percent graduate with a baccalaureate degree.

Eight percent of those blacks enter graduate or professional school, with 4 percent actually completing their work.

To increase the pool of minorities to choose from, Shaw said "grow your own" consortium programs are needed — such as SIU-C's recently funded $255,000 Minority Graduate Incentive Program — to encourage them to seek faculty and staff positions in state colleges and universities.

Shaw said the program will slowly build the pool of minorities and its funding "is a direct response to an area we feel we need to do something about."

It also shows SIU's "long-standing commitment to" minorities, he said, one which is documented in a U.S. Department of Education study.

The May 1982 study ranks SIU tenth — between University of California-Berkeley and Lincoln University, Mo. — of 20 predominantly white institutions which granted baccalaureates to the largest number of blacks, 39, who eventually went on to earn doctorates from 1975-80.

The ranking was published in the April 1985 issue of "Black Issues in Higher Education."

Shaw said the ranking isn't surprising to him because of the University's commitment. But other methods — financial inducements and opportunity for placement — need to be used to recruit talented minorities into higher education positions, he said.

"They look at the economy and make their job choices," Shaw said of high school-aged minorities. "We have to make higher education look like a worthwhile investment of their time versus their resources," he said.

While Shaw pointed out that he isn't "downplaying the need to recruit minorities" for academic positions, he said getting them into the pool of availability was needed first.

"We've got to solve the pipeline problem instead of shifting minority students from institution to institution," Shaw said. "Whatever we do, we must be moving forward, taking a positive position and getting something done."

Bargaining might be separated

By Paula Buckner
Staff Writer

If recent recommendations made by a Board of Regents hearing officer are upheld by the Illinois Educational Labor Relations Board, SIU collective bargaining representatives may be looking out for the interests of faculty only on a separate campus basis.

Arlene Tobias, representative for the National Education Association-Illinois Education Association, said Judith Jansenn's 61-page report "supports the NEA-IEA's argument that SIU-C and SIU-E faculty should be represented as separate bargaining units."

Jansenn filed the report with the Labor Board July 15 and recommended that collective bargaining be done on a "separate campus basis for the Board of Regents schools" — Northern Illinois, Illinois State and Sangamon State universities.

She also recommended that only faculty members be included in, and chairpersons be excluded from, a proposed bargaining unit.

The Board of Regents schools and the Illinois Federation of Teachers both argued for single unit representation and for faculty and administrators to be included in the unit.

Bargaining representatives have 21 days to appeal Jansenn's recommendations. If no appeal is made, "historical findings show that" the Labor Board will uphold those recommendations, Tobias said.

Tobias said Jansenn's findings are "germane to" the stand her group and the American Association of University Professors have taken in disputing the board and the IFT's arguments.

Lawmakers scrambled to beat session's close

When the clock ran down on the Illinois legislature June 30, formal procedure was last on the agenda.

"The tax plans within the Education Reform Package had to be passed in both houses by midnight June 30. By 11 p.m. no agreement had been reached in the House," said Ross Hodel, special assistant to the governor on education.

At issue were the state cigarette and long-distance phone call taxes that would raise a cumulative $134 million in education revenue.

"Senate and House party leaders exchanged amendments to the reform package taxes at nine summit meetings over two and one half weeks, with each meeting about four hours long," Hodel recounted. "It all came down to the last 30 seconds."

Help for minorities

THE EFFECTS OF RACISM can still be easily seen in our nation, despite efforts to erase them. Here at SIU-C, where blacks make up 9 percent of the student population, only 1.37 percent of the faculty is black and members of other racial minorities in total make up only 6.56 percent of the faculty.

The disparity between the percentage of black students at SIU-C and the percentage of black faculty members is not the result of poor recruitment efforts. It is caused by the small pool of blacks qualified for faculty positions. According to The New Republic (July 15), only 1,265 of the 32,436 doctorates awarded in 1981 went to blacks. That's only 4 percent. The magazine also cites a recent report by the College Board that shows black enrollment in college to be declining and the dropout rate among blacks to be increasing.

With such dismal statistics confronting the black community it is heartening to see SIU-C making an active effort to turn the tide. The University recently received a $235,000 grant to be distributed among nine public colleges in Illinois, including SIU-C, to attract minorities to faculty and staff positions. The grant money will be used to establish fellowship programs open only to minorities.

While the overall contribution of the grant to increasing the number of qualified black educators may not be seen for several years, the fact that SIU-C is helping to overcome the problem is commendable. If we want to make things better in the future, we have to start working today.

Why stop at seat belt laws?

I want to thank Albert Kent for enlightening me on the merits of the new seat belt law and on "the need to implement laws to promote the common welfare." (July 16) I never thought of it like that. But let's not stop saving lives with the good seat belt law.

I don't think I should have the right to choose to smoke. After all, many more people are killed from tobacco each year than from not buckling seat belts.

It's a proven fact that flying is by far the safest way to travel. But many people are terrified of planes and "feel" safer going to California in an automobile. Should they have that right?

Then we could have a law requiring gloves and earmuffs when the temperature falls below freezing.

I'm sure, Mr. Kent, if we put our heads together we could fill the books with laws to prevent people from making the wrong decisions about themselves, and at the same time "promote the common welfare."

After all, "The minimal loss of personal freedom is justified if lost lives and torn bodies can be prevented." — Tim Rambeau, Carbondale

USO commission did its job

I'm writing this letter in response to the editorial that appeared in the Daily Egyptian July 17. At the close of the editorial the D.E. tries to justify calling the actions of the former USO city affairs commissioner "childish" by referring to the actions of the former USO elections commission.

First, let me correct your error by stating that the former USO elections commission remained on the job until not only the results were finally released, but through two appeals to the Judicial Board of Governance and finally a senate hearing.

Second, no one but Mike Shannon knows why he resigned. It is not my place nor yours to question it. It is Mike Shannon who has to live with his decision and no one else. If he understands and is comfortable with his reasons for resigning, then he did the right thing.

Last, if you got your facts straight before printing your editorial, I wouldn't be so offended. All you had to do was ask me or the USO executive secretary to find out for sure if the former elections commission completed its duties.

Furthermore, if you had spoken with Mike Shannon at length rather than jump to conclusions, we would all have been a little better off. — Lamont Erik Brantley, graduate student, Finance.

Editor's Note: According to statements made by Lamont Brantley on April 22, 1985, the entire Elections Commission resigned due to differences with a ruling made by the Judicial Board of Governance. Although written resignations were never submitted, Brantley said "the resignations are forthcoming." Three days later Brantley said the Elections Commission had not resigned, and would pursue and appeal of the Judicial Board's decision along with completing its duties.

Quality of library rapidly declining

This letter is in response to the lack of concern and assistance by many employees of Morris Library. This letter is also an indication of concern for the effectiveness of this library.

One could attribute many reasons for this grave problem. Some argue that departments are being cut financially to the bone. Others contend that civil service workers are too complacent being held in one position too long. The list goes on and on.

Many workers and staff members are unhappy with the overload of work and the administrators are constantly saying, "We must cut back." One wonders if anyone is speaking on behalf of the employees of Morris Library. The sad thing about the whole issue is that employees are silent. They are silent because they fear losing their employment.

The atmosphere in the library should be such that employees feel welcome to express their concern and frustration. This may not prevent further cutbacks, but it will certainly send a strong message to the administrator.

There are some librarians who are just not concerned about assisting anyone. If they don't have a legitimate reason, they should be pressured, civil service status or not. If it turns out that those librarians are being overworked, the library dean should care about it.

There are also student workers who are frustrated, but yet there is no forum for these workers. The assumption could be that there is no forum for such purposes because the library dean and others really don't care. How can an administrator know how to administer if he does not have access to his employees' concerns?

Believe it or not, Morris Library is on a rapid road of decline. If the Somit administration does not place Morris Library as one of its main priorities, it will continue to decline. How can any administration boast about its school without a decent library? There can be no research without "good" libraries. There can be no good students without "good" libraries. Has the Peterson and Somit administration forgotten their goals as administrators? Certainly, if Morris Library is not given top priority they have "missed the boat" entirely. One can only hope that those administrators will respond expeditiously and effectively.

— Blane Roberts, student worker, Morris Library.

Christian aid surpasses 'Live Aid'

Once again, some ill-informed journalism student tried to make an unknowing student body nod their heads in agreement at an unresearched piece of speculation I dare not call journalism. I am referring to Mike Frey's viewpoint in the Daily Egyptian July 18.

Mr. Frey pointed out that Jerry Falwell informs the world of the evil of rock bands while all they want to do is feed the world. How profound, how intrinsically good, how naive can you be?

Fundamentalists (whatever that means) do not attack rock-and-roll per se, it is the sexual promiscuity, drug use and devil worship that is encouraged by a minority of groups. Listen to the songs on the radio, most are either concerned with making love, getting high or mocking God — read Madonna, Plasmatics or Motley Crue lyrics.

Mr. Frey stated that "Mr. Falwell and his associates" (whatever that means) have done nothing to fight world hunger. Allow me to set the record straight. Christian groups have been feeding the world since long before it ever became fashionable. I would even speculate that $70 million is a drop in the bucket compared to what the Christians of the United States have been doing for years. So it seems that Mr. Frey has his facts a little backwards.

I say it's about time that some of these rock-and-roll heroes got off their duffs and did something for humanity, not their pocketbooks. Christians have been doing it since before any of us were born.

David A. Miller, graduate student, Recreation.

Cards and Cubs not alone in N.L. East

Mr. O'Brien, put aside your own emotions. This is a reply to your letter about the Cards winning the National League East (July 18). Yes, I am a Cub fan, but also a baseball fan. As far as I've known in past history, the first half of the season does not necessarily decide the division. To say the Cards will win the N.L. East at this point is ridiculous. There is a team in New York called the Mets and believe it or not, there is one from Canada called the Expos. Holding a two and a half game lead over the Mets doesn't sound secure at this point to me. Even seven and a half. I think you had better wait to put on your party hat until September or so. That is if you still feel like partying.

— Paul Walchli, senior, Commercial Graphics and Design.

Thanks for support

I want to thank the people, departments and organizations who through their generous contributions of time, advice and resources have made it possible for me to attend the 12th World Festival for Youth and Students in Moscow. For it is they, and others too numerous to mention here, who make it a pleasure for me to represent the United States as a delegate from SIU-C.

I am grateful for the honor that has been bestowed upon me through all the help and I will do my best to reflect what is great about America.

— Nicole Glasser, junior, Political Science.

U.S. must not rule out retaliation

By Morgan Falkner
Staff Writer

WINTER SEASON has been reserved for Americans traveling abroad. On a plane bound for Greece or in a sidewalk cafe in San Salvador, there seem to be few places they can go without fear of being bombed or shot.

Americans are by no means alone in this respect, but they are quickly becoming the target of choice among those who kill and maim for a cause. The two-week Beirut hostage crisis is only symptomatic of this.

The nondescript band of thieves and murderers who paraded the American hostages in front of television cameras was truly pathetic. Typical of hijackers who manage to capture the media spotlight, these hijackers wasted no time eliciting moral support for their plight — the plight of the hostages obviously being of secondary importance.

When warring with other Muslim factions — namely the PLO — is no longer enough to maintain the world's interest, what better way to attract the cameras than to target the United States as the "real" root of the Islamic world's ills. Besides, Americans wouldn't dream of responding in kind to terrorists: they never have before, why should they now?

THE UNITED STATES' tendency toward paralysis in dealing with terrorism was perhaps brought on by such misadventures in foreign policy as Vietnam, and later manifested in such debacles as the aborted Iranian hostage rescue mission and the more recent Marine presence in Beirut.

But regardless of the root causes, American lack of resolve in dealing with the worsening problem of terrorism has only served to encourage more terrorist activity.

IT SHOULD be painfully obvious by now that the United States — indeed most sovereign governments — has been not only ineffective in combating terrorism, but in effect has encouraged it. The notion that restraint, in the face of gun-toting, propaganda-spouting hijackers, can serve any useful purpose has been proved dangerously naive.

Certainly the folly of such idealism has been obvious to the Israelis for decades. For Israel, the threat of terrorism is neither new nor unusual. Sadly, the rest of the civilized world may forever have to view the problem in the same way.

What then can the West — the United States — do to combat international lawlessness? Much can be learned from the Israelis, who have made anti-terrorism an art form.

First, it is imperative that the United States make it a matter of policy not to negotiate with terrorists while hostages are still in captivity. Let the world know now that a strict policy of non-negotiation will be adhered to.

AIRPORT SECURITY, already being scrutinized and revamped, is of obvious importance. The lax security at the Greek airport, where the hijacking originated, is deplorable. Any nation that conducts the business of air travel with the United States should be strongly "urged" to tighten its airport security; if a country doesn't comply, don't allow it to do business with American travelers.

But the keystone to an effective U.S. policy of dealing with terrorists is the option of retaliation. Were it not for a firm policy of swift, exact punishment, could Israel hope to make even a pretense of maintaining secure borders? Ask Syrian President Hafez al Assad, the scourge of the Arab world and kingmaker of the many warring factions in Lebanon. He may not think of the Israelis as kin, but he also knows better than to think that he can get away with sponsoring terrorism through his country's border with Israel. The consequences are just too costly.

THIS IS NOT to say that, as a matter of policy, the United States should send in squadrons of F-15s to pacify any party thought not friendly to the West. But there are a number of known military targets which the United States could, and perhaps should, attack. There is no reason why the kind of "surgical" strikes now under consideration cannot be employed. Now, with the seven original hostages still in captivity, is not the time for such a strike? Indeed, the Reagan administration showed its usual lack of sensitivity and forethought by discussing retaliation in public.

But the time will come when the option of retaliation will be made available. Because turning the other cheek only inspires contempt, the West should seriously consider responding with a clenched fist to the law.

Violence won't deter terrorism

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

THE HIJACKING of TWA Flight 847 in Beirut and the massacre of four U.S. Marines and two U.S. businessmen in San Salvador have dropped out of the headlines, but the question of how the United States should respond to acts of terrorism lingers on. The question has no easy answer because, no matter how much Americans prefer to deny it, terrorism may at times appear to be the only way to force change or at least draw attention to a problem.

Among the suggestions of how to deal with terrorism, one of the most popular is military retaliation — send in the troops to bring a swift and violent end to the crisis. Unfortunately, such action would not solve the problem. As the saying goes, violence only breeds violence.

The United States is singled out by terrorists around the world because it is perceived as being an oppressor or an ally of oppressors. In the Middle East, the United States has supported Israel in its attempt to build a Jewish nation in an Arab region. While the Israelis can hardly be labeled "oppressors," they have made their share of enemies within the Islamic community by creating and defending their state. By befriending Israel, the United States has allied itself with the enemy in the eyes of most Middle Easterners.

ALSO, AND especially with

Viewpoint

respect to followers of the Shiite faction of Islam, the United States' support of the Shah of Iran made it an enemy in the Middle East. A leader who lived in opulence while relying on his blood-thirsty secret police, the Savak, to maintain domestic security could hardly be expected to enhance the image of his allies. When Iran exploded in revolution in the late 1970s, the United States was labeled the "Great Satan" by the nation's new religious leaders in part because of U.S. ties to the Shah.

In Central America, U.S. "gunboat" and "dollar" diplomacy — military force and economic influence — have left deep scars. Instead of dealing with elected governments on a one-to-one basis, the United States dealt with Central American governments as inferior bodies to be manipulated at will.

IN GUATEMALA, for example, the United States aided the overthrow of a popularly elected government under Major Jacobo Arbenz Guzman in 1954 because, in the U.S. view, it was too sympathetic to communists. Since that coup, Guatemala has never been able to re-establish a non-violent political system. It is now racked by violence between factions on the far left and on the far right.

In El Salvador, the United States has been training and supplying military forces that conduct sweeping search-and-destroy missions against rural guerrillas. The guerrilla movement grew out of an economic system dominated by 14 families that once monopolized land and political power in El Salvador, and a political system headed by military dictators who gained office through fraudulent elections.

THERE IS no way to justify victimizing innocent citizens over disputes with past or present policies of their government, at least not under the U.S. Constitution or the charter of the United Nations. However, when people are oppressed they are naturally going to lash out, violently if they feel it is necessary. The best way to fight terrorism is not to respond in kind, for that could only lead to an escalating level of fighting.

The United States is influential worldwide. It can tailor its policies to bring about a more just and peaceful world. Whatever action our nation takes, whatever policy it follows, the United States has to realize that it is performing on a world stage with over four billion inhabitants from various backgrounds watching. The U.S. government may not be able to meet all of the world's demands but, probably more than any other government, it has the power to represent and champion the needs of groups that might otherwise be voiceless and that may resort to violence.

Simon applauds Grant editors

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

Sen. Paul Simon heaped praise upon John Simon, editor of "The Papers of Ulysses S. Grant," David Wilson, associate editor, and the SIU Press, publisher of the papers, saying "they should be applauded" for their efforts in compiling the Grant documents.

Sen. Simon made his statements Tuesday in the Capitol Rotunda in Washington, D.C., during a ceremony commemorating the 100th anniversary of Grant's death.

The senator was introduced by John Simon, who is also vice president of the SIU-C based Ulysses S. Grant Association. John Simon is not related to the senator.

"He (Grant) was a giant as a general; but he would not be today regarded as a giant as president. But in the field of letters, he would have to be considered among the top three or four presidents we have had in his contributions to literature," said Sen. Simon.

Sen. Simon also noted Grant's association with humorist Mark Twain.

"Mark Twain was involved in persuading Ulysses Grant to write his memoirs, one of the really significant contributions that Grant made to all of us," he said.

As a general he faced problems and he moved on the problems.

necessitate a superior majority, or four out of five council votes, for approval of the ordinance.

The petitions were withdrawn after it was discovered that they did not comply with state laws, which were applicable since the property in question is outside city limits.

A request by Loretta Cooley that 6.1 acres of land on Park Avenue between Lewis Lane and Park View Mobile Homes be rezoned from general agricultural and high density residential to the "planned mobile home" designation was also approved.

While voting for rezoning, councilmen Neil Dillard and Keith Tuxhorn expressed concern over traffic problems that could come about on Park Avenue if a proposed 50-lot mobile home park is created on the site.

The council held a two-hour closed session at the end of its regular meeting. Mayor Helen Westberg said that discussion focused on land acquisition and potential litigation in relation to downtown hotel project.

VOLUMES: Grant series gets addition

words, clarified by explanatory notes by the editors and commentary notes written by some of Grant's associates.

These volumes highlight Grant's days as a 17-year-old Army cadet and his quiet civilian career, right up to his position at the end of the Civil War as one of America's most celebrated commanders.

THE PAPERS are both business-oriented — military orders and official documents — and personal — letters to his wife and his military superiors and subordinates.

"We also collect all available papers that refer to Grant," said Wilson. "From these we can create a documentary of his life and times."

The Ulysses S. Grant Association, housed on the third floor of the library, is the largest collection of Grant material in the world. The association was first established in 1962 by the Civil War Centennial Commission and housed at the Ohio State Historical Society in Columbus, then relocated to SIU-C in 1964.

ITS PURPOSE was to create a memorial to the Union general that would last longer than centennial recreations of Civil War battles.

"In addition to keeping tabs on Grant's history, researching the documents is a way of providing a perspective on the people and events of the time," said Wilson.

Most of the association's work is done from photocopies of archival material or with actual documents uncovered by researchers. A number of the documents on file with the association have been donated by the Grant family. To date, more than 200,000 documents pack the association's files.

"It happens that after a volume has been published we will find a paper or letter and cringe," said Wilson. For this reason, the association may compile an appendix of these loose documents once the entire series of Grant papers has been completed.

"WE HAVE been given until the end of the century to complete our research," said Wilson. "Specifically, 1997 is the project's termination date."

Wilson said he estimates a total of 25 volumes will be published before the project ends.

"We endeavor to publish two volumes every other year," Wilson said.

Wilson explained that Grant's prolific document output stemmed from his practice of writing every day; he rarely dictated to others, and out of the reams of correspondence it is the letters Grant wrote to his wife and father that give the most insight into the Union commander and 18th President of the United States.

Both men testified that they never made any attempt to kill Marie Azevedo.

The two men told police of the incident in spring 1983. In August 1983, Cook was wired for sound and videotaped having a conversation about the murder with Azevedo.

In the videotape Cook attempted to get Azevedo to admit to knowledge of the actual killers.

Azevedo said he did not know who had connected Cook with the murder.

Original shows take the stage at workshop

By Martin Folan
Entertainment Editor

Four original one-act plays written by four SIUC playwrights can be seen at the Annual Playwright's Workshop at the Laboratory Theater through the end of July.

"Mudsplatters," a children's play written by Ellen Wass, and "Lu Lu Lucy Blows the Blues," a children's musical written by Tim Bryant and John Gerdes, entertain the youngest to the oldest audience members.

"I think children from pre-nursery age on up understand it at different levels," said Christian Moe, originator of the workshop.

"MUDSPATTERS" IS about the conflict between two kingdoms and their princesses. The buildup of weapons parallels the Soviet-American nuclear tension, which holds the interest of adults, but remains simple enough to keep children entertained.

"A small child wouldn't get it at the level of the arms buildup, but they would get it at the level of the princess and that she lied," Moe said.

A narrator-referee of the battle between the kingdoms helps the audience understand the story.

Bryant mixes his talents of playwrighting and songwriting with Gerdes' skillful music writing talent in "Lu Lu Lucy Blows the Blues."

THE MUSICAL sounds out the loneliness in 12-year-old Lucy Burton's (Jenny Alexander) life and her attempt to find friendship.

The horn she finds in a dumpster-shopping cart and an old man (Howard K. Wilson II) she meets outside the apartment building spark her desire to learn to play jazz and audition for the Moonpie radio show.

The colorful characters of six street kids, who tease Lucy throughout the production, and Miss Stoneburner (Nancy Jo Humfeld) enliven the performance.

Musical numbers help the performance flow during most of the show, but the dialogue should be slower in the intense moments to help the children understand.

AT A critique session after the musical, some of the audience members complimented Bryant and Gerdes on the originality of the production, props and music.

Both productions will be shown Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m.

"Kaboooom," a farce

written by Mary DeSalle-Kevern, tries to show misconceptions about foreigners.

Mayor Cromwell (Andy Cook), newspaper editor Harv Griffiths (Steve Turner), and the townspeople of Iuka, Miss., must decide what to do with an unfinished nuclear power plant. Two Turkish businessmen are interested in buying the plant with secret plans to turn it into a munitions plant.

TWO JANITORS of the mayor's building (Charles Ramsey and Bryan Smith) keep the audience amused with their performances.

Several relationships are intertwined in the plot — the friendship of the two janitors, the working relationship of Mayor Cromwell and his assistant Barney Finkelman (Tim Bryant), and the loving relationships between the editor's daughter (Helen Vikskins) and the son of a Turkish businessman (Jeffrey Henderson) and a Bible-thumping spinster (Nancy Jo Humfeld) and a Turkish businessman (Michael Grogan).

DeSalle-Kevern deserves credit for this genuine comedy, especially for the original humor and the ending of the play.

THE LAST performance of "Kaboooom" is at 8 p.m. Monday at the Laboratory Theater.

"Yankee Gentleman," a historical drama written by Dan Haughey, tells the story of Ulysses S. Grant (Haughey), the nation's 18th president and a loser most of his life.

This play shines light on one of Grant's greatest victories and attempts to erase his losing image.

Carbondale prepared for fire, famine and flood

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

Imagine the tiny metropolis of Carbondale hip deep in sludge from flood waters, battered and bent from hurricane force winds or tornados, or jolted and crumbling from an earthquake.

Jim Churney thinks about these morbid scenarios all the time.

Churney is Carbondale's Emergency Services and Disaster Agency coordinator. He gets paid to think and prepare for all the worst that can happen to the community.

But Churney has help, in the form of a six-pound, four-inch-thick black binder known as "the book," with references to every calamity from structure fires to nuclear attack.

"It's a general plan for anything, but most of the wording details the chain of command in emergency situations," he said.

Emergency preparedness planning is common in communities across the nation through advisory assistance and partial funding from the Federal Emergency Management Association. The association provides consultation for widespread disaster plans, such as coastal preparation for hurricanes, tornado warning orientation for citizens and some damage estimates for earthquake-prone areas.

FEMA also has outlines for such "moderate" emergencies as severe thunderstorms and forest fires.

Churney said about 80 percent of emergency preparation for Carbondale has normally been devoted to severe weather. Lately, the concern for earthquakes has shifted that priority.

"Right now we're having our earthquake plan re-evaluated because of all the recent concern," Churney said. "Both FEMA and the state will review the plan and the state will tell us how much money is available for implementation."

The concern over earthquakes has grown in Southern Illinois during the past decade since geologic studies of the area have shown it to have the greatest potential for an earthquake within the next century.

A series of earthquakes near New Madrid, Mo., south of Cape Girardeau, in 1811-12 are considered the strongest ever on the North American continent. Carbondale is considered by FEMA to be one of six prime earthquake scenario plans surrounding the New Madrid area.

"Allen and Hoskell Consultants from Memphis was contracted by FEMA to design the earthquake plan. Representatives from Allen and Hoskell went around Carbondale checking wall structures," Churney said.

The consultant's findings are the basis for two plans, one for a 7.6 Richter scale reading and an 8.6 reading. At 7.6, few buildings remain standing, all bridges are destroyed and all utility services are put out of action. At 8.6, the maximum intensity of the New Madrid quake, there is destruction.

"We figure Carbondale will be without any contact from the outside world for a minimum of 72 hours in either case, which means whatever assistance with fires, floods or medical services will have to come from volunteers," he said.

Churney quoted a study done by Otto Nuttli of St. Louis University in 1983. Nuttli said there is a 7 percent chance of a 7.6 quake in the Carbondale area within the next 15 years. The chance rises to 90 percent within the next 50 years, while a 10 percent chance of an 8.5 to 9.0 quake possibility existing over the same 50 years.

Severe weather presents a daily chore. Each day Churney checks special regional weather reports via telephone printers in the "war room," a basement "bunker" under the Carbondale Community Center where severe weather throughout the Midwest is monitored through a series of short-wave, ham and emergency radios and television reports from Capr Girardeau.

Although some particulars on disaster management exist for each calamity scenario, most of the management follows a general pattern. According to "the book," a civil emergency, in terms of natural causes, is "any disaster ... within the city limits of Carbondale resulting in the death or injury of persons or the destruction of property to such an extent that extraordinary measures must be taken to protect the public health, safety and welfare."

"That covers a lot of problems," Churney said.

Should the disaster fit the definition, the mayor must declare an emergency by proclamation, after which the mayor may restrict the sale and distribution of liquor, gasoline and firearms. The proclamation will last at least 48 hours or until terminated by another proclamation that the civil emergency no longer exists.

Churney said a "lead" department of all the primary civil services would be assembled by the mayor for disaster control, with one or more "support" departments on stand-by. The departments will assess the damage and attempt to devise other smaller plans to address separate emergencies.

"We're talking about roughly 50,000 people in the Carbondale metro area during the daytime, including University students," Churney said. "All the able-bodied will be pressed into service."

Thompson Woods, where herbicide has been sprayed to control honeysuckle growth.

Thompson Woods spraying called adequate by official

By Justus Weathersby Jr.
Staff Writer

Treatment of Thompson Woods with Roundup herbicide to control honeysuckle has been called adequate for now. Botany and plant and soil science experts say the area sprayed is under observation and continued sprayings may not be needed.

Robert Mohlenbrock, professor of botany and chairman of the currently inactive Natural Areas Committee, said, "All we're doing is monitoring it and there is no scheduled spraying in the future at the present time."

Mohlenbrock said that if there is a need for additional treatment of the honeysuckle, the Physical Plant will notify him and the committee will be activated to choose an appropriate action.

"I DON'T think that anything that we wanted to save was damaged. The plant life of ornamental value wasn't hurt," Mohlenbrock said.

Sprayings were completed in the spring of 1984 after licensed contractors worked five days covering about 20 percent of the woods, he said. The treatment was targeted for the southeast area of Thompson Woods, the cost was under $100 and the honeysuckle was successfully knocked back, he said.

"There's no real problem now. There is some regrowth but hopefully the honeysuckle won't have to be sprayed again," he said.

Mohlenbrock said that trees in Thompson Woods remain unaffected by the treatment and that those trees and tree limbs that have fallen are a result of disease, aging and past inclement weather.

GEORGE KAPUSTA, professor of plant and soil science and a former member of the committee, said that Roundup essentially has no effect on anything other than the plant life it's sprayed on.

"It's safe to people and animals," he said.

Kapusta said Roundup, produced by the Monsanto Co. of St. Louis, is 37.5 percent N-(phosphonomethyl) glycine, an active ingredient needed to destroy weeds. The remaining balance is an inert ingredient that makes it possible to spray Roundup, he said.

"Spraying Roundup at the base of the trees will not harm the trees because it cannot gain entry through the bark," he said.

THE BARK acts as a barrier, Kapusta said, and Roundup cannot reach the roots because it is inactive in soil. Eventually the Roundup will break down into carbon dioxide and water, he said.

Kapusta said all herbicides have to be used properly and responsibly to ensure their intended effect and to avoid damage to the environment. Specific guidelines given by the originating company must be followed to avoid en-

Vietnam vets sue government for malpractice

NEW YORK (UPI) — Five disabled Vietnam veterans sued the government Tuesday saying doctors misdiagnosed a tropical disease they caught from bug bites in the jungles of Southeast Asia — the first malpractice suit of its kind.

The medical malpractice class-action suit filed in U.S. District Court sought no monetary damages. Instead, it asked Judge Henry Bramwell to order proper disease testing, diagnosis and treatment for all Vietnam veterans in Veteran's Administration medical facilities across the country.

Lawyers for the veterans said it was the first medical malpractice class-action suit filed against the United States and the VA.

The veterans named in the suit were: William Hartman, 39, of West Hampton; Joseph Bernagozzi, 35, of East Quogue; Joseph Naples, 38, of Babylon; George Agnostakios, 35, of West Islip; and Charles Arnao, 32, of Selden, who claim that they are unemployable.

All claimed they caught the disease filariasis during their tours of duty in Vietnam in the 1960s and early 1970s — but were never properly diagnosed as suffering from the tropical disease.

Because of the alleged neglect, they claimed, they suffer from scrotal edema, elephantiasis, lymphedema, lymphangitis, abscess and rashes, ulcers on the penis, and extreme swelling in the groin, arms and leg area.

Dr. Harvey Wachsman, a neurosurgeon and lawyer for the veterans, said the number of Vietnam veterans afflicted with the disease could run "into the tens of thousands."

"We want the VA to treat us," Hartman said outside the courthouse.

The veterans said the VA told them they were suffering environmental problems, he said. Failure to follow the guidelines, intentionally misusing chemicals or ignorance may cause problems, he said.

"The spraying did a very good job of killing the honeysuckle that was choking the trees. I think it really did do the job very well with no risk to the environment."

from "jungle rot," a minor disease, rather than the debilitating filariasis.

Agnostakios said the action "should open the door for people to be treated properly." He said that in 1982 the VA told him that he was suffering from "athlete's hand," and that swelling in his lips, ear and knees were due to food allergies.

Dr. John Frame, an adjunct assistant professor of tropical medicine at the School of Public Health College of Physicians and Surgeons at Columbia University, filed an affidavit in support of the action.

USFL's instability attacked by Cribbs

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Running back Joe Cribbs says his talents are much too superior to be wasted on the financially troubled USFL and plans to be back in the NFL this season.

Cribbs and his agent, Louis Burrell, claim they have reached an agreement with the Birmingham Stallions to buy out the remaining three years of the running back's five-year contract. Cribbs told the Birmingham Post-Herald he is tired of playing before small crowds and worrying about the future of the USFL.

"I don't know the direction of the league because it changes from week to week," Cribbs said. "I'm too good of a player to be subjected to that."

"People will say it's the money, but it's not the money," said Cribbs, who left the team for three games last year in a contract dispute. "It's the stability of the league itself. It's the fact that I don't feel I can accomplish what I want out of this game by staying here in Birmingham."

Cribbs, a former Auburn University star, said he was disappointed with the support the city had given the team. He said when he moved to the USFL he expected to see sell-out crowds like he played before in college.

"I don't think Birmingham is really deserving of a professional football team, based on the way (the fans) supported us. Playing before 18,000 and 19,000, that's not what I call professional football," he said.

Cribbs reportedly will buy out the remainder of his contract for $750,000. Stallions President Jerry Sklar denied that any such agreement had been reached, but said he would be "receptive" to such a deal.

Burrell said he is close to an agreement with the Bills, and that Cribbs will be in Buffalo by next week.

"Joe is definitely on his way to the NFL," Burrell said. "We thank the Birmingham Stallions for being understanding and fulfilling Joe's wishes. They fulfilled a dream of his, of playing in his home, in front of his home fans. But Joe belongs in the NFL and he should have the opportunity to be in the Hall of Fame."

Cribbs, the Bills' second-round pick in the 1980 draft, was named Rookie of the Year and earned All-Pro honors in 1980, 1981 and 1983.

After signing with the Stallions, Cribbs led the USFL in rushing in 1984 with 1,467 yards. He gained 1,047 yards last season, marking the fifth time in six professional seasons that Cribbs broke the 1,000-yard barrier.

Cribbs said his goal is to earn a spot in the professional football Hall of Fame.

"I feel like I have the opportunity to achieve something in my career in professional football that only a handful of players have a chance to do," he said. "Right now, if I continue to play like I have, I could make the Hall of Fame. I just don't feel like I can do that in the USFL."

U.S. athletes set to excel at National Sports Festival

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — More than 3,000 athletes in 34 Olympic and Pan American Games sports will compete over the next 12 days in the National Sports Festival, an event which in its short history has become a proving ground for top American athletes.

Although opening ceremonies will not be held until Friday night, the sixth festival will get off to a relatively quiet start Wednesday evening. The only competition to be held will be the pairs figure skating event. Action will pick up Thursday with six sports being contested.

Almost every one of the American athletes who took part in the 1984 Olympics had competed in one of the five previous Festivals.

On the eve of the first competition, however, the Festival suffered slightly from the withdrawal of two Olympic medal-winning cyclists.

Matt Gorski, who won the gold medal over teammate Nelson Vails in the sprint last year, was forced to withdraw from the competition because of a scheduling conflict.

In addition, silver medalist Rebecca Twigg chose not to compete in order not to compromise her altitude training in Colorado. Twigg finished second in the initial woman's Olympic road race ever held.

The basketball competition, meanwhile, appeared to be strengthened by the addition of three of last year's top collegiate freshmen.

The basketball games between four Festival teams is always a highlight because it provides an opportunity to see future college and pro stars.

Former Georgetown superstar Patrick Ewing made his first major national level appearance at the 1982 Festival.

Danny Manning of Kansas, John Williams of LSU and Levy Middlebrooks of Pepperdine were all added to the NSF basketball rosters.

The 6-11 Manning will play for the North squad, coached by his collegiate coach — Kansas' Larry Brown. Williams (6-8) will play for the South team and Middlebrooks (6-7) will represent the West.

The first basketball games will not be played until Saturday.

Following Friday night's opening ceremonies at Tiger Stadium on the campus of Louisiana State University, the highlight of the first weekend will be the track and field activity.

San Francisco reaches terms with Rice

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers signed their top draft choice Jerry Rice, a record-holding wide receiver from Mississippi Valley State, Tuesday to a multi-year contract.

Terms of the contract were not revealed, but it was believed the deal was worth $1.8 million over five years.

Rice is the 11th NFL first-round draft choice to be signed.

Rice, who set 12 NCAA Division I-AA records, caught 112 passes for 1,845 yards and 28 touchdowns last year. He has been working out with the 49ers for the past week.

He said he worked out a month before that at Mississippi Valley State and is in "tip-top shape."

Rice believes he will have no trouble making the transition from a small college

Dorsett faces tax liens filed by IRS

DALLAS (UPI) — The Internal Revenue Service said Tuesday it has filed liens totaling more than $400,000 against Dallas Cowboys star running back Tony Dorsett.

Marlene Gaysek, an IRS spokesperson in Dallas, said the liens covered the years 1979, 1980 and 1983. She would not give the total amount, but she said in Collin County, just north of Dallas, liens totaling more than $414,000 have been filed.

"We do have tax liens against liabilities owed for '79, '80 and '83," she said. "We cannot say anything beyond that this delinquency does exist."

Gaysek said "about 10 liens" have been filed against Dorsett in Dallas and Collin counties.

In Collin County, liens were filed totaling $74,143.09 for 1979, $172,656.54 for 1980 and $167,448.28 for 1983, Gaysek said.

Dorsett, 31, who is in the fourth year of a six-year contract with the Cowboys, was thought to be in Southern California with his agent Tuesday, said Cowboys spokesman Greg Aiello.

Aiello said Dorsett had called coach Tom Landry recently and said he was in Los Angeles with his agent Tuesday, said Cowboys spokesman Greg Aiello. "working to take care of some business" and would report for training camp in Thousand Oaks, Calif. in "a couple of days."

Holdout Nunn losing cash

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The St. Louis Cardinals reportedly are reducing their contract offer to Freddie Joe Nunn, the team's top draft choice, by $5,000 a day for every day he fails to attend training camp.

Rookies and free agents were to report to the camp at Eastern Illinois University in Charleston by Monday.

"The Cardinals say they've made their last offer," Frank Bauer, Nunn's agent, told the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. "And Bill Bidwill (the team's owner) has relayed the message that the team will begin to deduct $5,000 per day from their final offer until Freddie Joe arrives in camp."

"The Cardinals are not going to budge, and I'm not going to budge."

Nunn, a defensive lineman from Mississippi, is the only one of this year's crop of 12 Big Red draft picks yet to be signed.

The Cardinals are said to have offered Nunn a four-year deal worth close to $1.4 million. Bauer, however, said players chosen behind Nunn in the draft are signing for more.

"It's the same as it's always been — fair market value," Bauer said. "And I'm making concessions. I'm willing to make a deal with St. Louis that would represent a 22 percent cutback from what first-round draft picks signed for in 1984. We're not being greedy."

The going rate in the National Football League for signing draft picks has decreased dramatically because of the lack of competition from the rival United States Football League, which is ailing.

Absent Perez suspended by Atlanta

ATLANTA (UPI) — Braves officials suspended Atlanta pitcher Pascual Perez without pay Tuesday because he failed to show up in Montreal where the team is playing a three-game series.

"He's still on the active roster, but he's been suspended without pay retroactive to yesterday," said Braves spokesman Bob Korch. Korch said general manager

John Mullen made the decision to suspend Perez from the team Tuesday afternoon. The Braves pitcher, 29-16 over the past two years, has fallen to 1-8 this season.

Korch said no one in the Braves organization has seen Perez since he disappeared following a game in New York against the Mets Sunday. Perez was the losing pitcher in that game.

The IAAC committee listened to comments made by chairperson Ruth Bauner, center, during the meeting Tuesday at the Anthony Hall balcony conference room.

IAAC: 'Plan C' gains approval

 assistant athletics directors. Plan B would set up athletics department with a director and two associate directors, one for each department.

In a presentation to the committee by a non-member, assistant women's athletics director Nancy Bandy expressed the opinions of the women's athletics department.

"RIGHT NOW, I enjoy extensive personal responsibilities," Bandy said. "I enjoy my job and I hope it continues."

While addressing the committee, Bandy said that she did not feel she could continue to do the quality of work in a merged department. Bandy also said that she would question her responsibilities in a Plan B situation, a question which was earlier raised by West.

Bandy added that she felt "both Plans A and B are totally unacceptable and unworkable according to the parameters set by the president."

"WE NEED goals and missions of the athletics departments before any final decision on structure or personnel can be made," Stolar said. "There are just too many questions left unanswered."

Stolar had pushed for a vote that would have added this statement to the amended plan. "Although Plan C has been formally adopted by the IAAC, some of the members are in philosophical agreement with Plan D." Although the vote did not pass, some members insisted that Plan D would be the most cost-efficient proposal.

ANOTHER POINT brought out by members of the committee expressed concern over the filling of temporary positions. Some favored that these interim positions should be filled internally to save money in the search for personnel in a system not yet chosen.

Williams considers Wake Forest

BOSTON (UPI) — Boston College basketball coach Gary Williams spent Tuesday mulling a reported offer to assume the head coaching reins at Wake Forest University in North Carolina.

A Boston College spokesman said Williams could make his decision by late Tuesday, although athletic director, William Flynn could not confirm Wake Forest's offer.

"I don't know if an offer has been made," Flynn said. "I gave (Wake Forest AD) Gene Hooks permission to speak to (Williams). I have nothing else to say. That's between him and Wake."

Wake Forest officials also declined comment. "We will not confirm any offer," sports information director Bert Woodard said. "We're issuing no statement."

While Williams also refused to say whether an offer had been made, he discussed the job with Boston media upon his return from North Carolina, where he spoke with university officials and attended a conference of the North Carolina Coaches Association Monday.

Robbins wins gold at Prairie St.

Carmen Robbins, a freshman on last season's SIU-C women's track team, won a gold medal in the open division 400-meter hurdles at the Prairie State Games held last weekend in Champaign.

Robbins had a time of 1:18.5 in the 400-hurdles although it was only the second time she has ever competed in the event. Robbins also won a silver medal in the open division long jump.

Robbins was one of several SIU-C track athletes who fared well at Prairie State. Teammates Brenda Beatty, Amy Marker, Kathy Raske and Darcy Stinson also won medals, as did incoming freshman Pam Quarengi. Ron Harrer, a member of the men's track team, won a medal as well.

Beatty took the silver medal in the 100-meter dash, edging Raske, who won the bronze. Beatty also won a bronze medal in the 200-meter dash.

Marker, who is the Salukis' top returnee in women's cross country, won a silver medal in the 5,000-meter run with a 18:05. Stinson won a silver medal in the 400-meter dash with a 48.2.

Quarengi, a native of Collinsville, won the silver medal in the scholastic division 10,000-meter run. Quarengi will also compete for the women's cross country team in the fall.

Harrer won the silver medal in the javelin.

Two other athletes with ties to SIU-C also experienced success. Jim Watson, a former member of the men's swimming team, took a bronze medal in open division 3-meter diving.

Cathy Kampwerth, a 6-foot-4 center from Highland who will play for the SIU-C women's basketball team this season, was a member of the scholastic division team that won the bronze medal.

'Plan C' receives IAAC approval

Amended plan awaiting final approval from Somit

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

After much controversy and heated discussion, the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee met Monday and decided on a possible plan for the future structure of the SIU-C athletics departments.

'Plan C', a proposal submitted by Glenn Stolar of the Graduate Student and Professional Council, was originally proposed to the committee last week but was not voted on because of a lack of time. Monday's meeting was a continuation of that meeting, which was held on July 12.

THE AMENDED Plan C would provide for an interim executive director who will be responsible for examination of coordination between the two existing departments. The interim director would also be responsible for policy and direction formulation before a final proposal is accepted.

Some members of the committee believed that the amended Plan C was better than the original plan because it bought time for evaluation. These members said an interim director was a more logical approach since extensive research into the ramifications of any of the existing proposals have not yet been presented to the IAAC.

"THE PRESIDENT will now meet with Dean Stuck and a representative of the IAAC to review the proposed plan," said Charlotte West, director of women's athletics. "Hopefully, I will get a chance to meet with the president and express my opinions."

"I would like to point out that nothing is concrete yet," said Dean Stuck, special assistant to the president on intercollegiate athletics.

West said that she favors 'Plan D', a proposal in which the directors from both departments would report directly to the president. Stuck has insisted that the president has been against such a plan "from the beginning."

"I HAVE made my position clear," West said. "I feel that 'Plan A' is totally unacceptable, and I do not agree with either 'Plan B' or C because of their financial implications."

The proposed Plan A would provide for a director of intercollegiate athletics with an associate director and four IAAC chairperson Ruth Bauner, left, and Dean Stuck, special assistant to intercollegiate athletics, discussed the plan to restructure SIU-C athletics during the meeting Tuesday.

Kuhn concerned by possible baseball strike

NEW YORK (UPI) — Every morning, rain or shine, Bowie Kuhn jogs anywhere from three to six miles before he goes to work. And every morning, rain or shine, someone always recognizes him and asks the same question.

"You think there'll be a strike?"

"I'm worried," answers Kuhn, who went through the last baseball strike four years ago as the game's fifth commissioner and now has a perfect opportunity to sit back and second-guess the sixth one, his successor, Peter Ueberroth.

Kuhn isn't doing that, though. Despite the fact some of Ueberroth's recent statements about how he is quietly studying the situation and still putting his faith in the collective bargaining process are essentially no different from those made by Kuhn before the 50-day strike in 1981.

"I can understand better than anyone else what he's going through," Kuhn says of Ueberroth. "He has my complete sympathy. I haven't spoken with him in some time so I don't know what he's doing, but I can see he's keeping his options open. I wish him a lot of luck. I mean it, too."

Kuhn says he's very happy practicing law for the firm of Wilkie Farr & Gallagher.

One of the allegations made by some of the owners responsible for costing him his job as commissioner two years ago was that he "didn't do enough" to prevent the 1981 strike. In the face of the present strike threat by the players, Kuhn could enjoy a good laugh about that never actually supported charge leveled against him, but he doesn't. Not publicly, anyway.

"I'm not sitting back and smiling over all that's happening now," he says. "It wouldn't be in character for me to do that. I hear a lot of things now, a lot of the same rhetoric, I heard in 1981 and I'm worried that I see it drifting in that direction."

"I don't think a strike is inevitable. It looks more likely we'll have one than not, but having said that, I don't think it's inevitable. It would be a brutal shame to have another baseball strike, to take this away from the fans. I wouldn't want to test their patience again."

During his stewardship as commissioner, Kuhn was a leading exponent of profit-sharing of television revenue among the owners. This is the chief bone of contention between the players and owners today. Some owners still believe the introduction of profit sharing could serve as the best possible foundation upon which they can reach an agreement with the players.

Kuhn says he feels he has a solution to the current impasse between the players and owners but no one has bothered asking him.

"If they asked me, I'd tell them what I think would be the general framework for finding a solution," he says.

Talks resolve small issues

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two weeks away from the major league baseball players' strike deadline, negotiators for the players and club owners Tuesday discussed several non-economic details but did not come to grips with the major money issues.

In a 3-and-one-half-hour bargaining session at the Major League Baseball Players Association offices, the parties talked about some 25 smaller, non-critical issues — such as scheduling, allowances, waiver procedures and spring training — trying to clear them out of the way.

"We have, hopefully, put some of those issues to rest, and we have narrowed the differences on the other ones," said Donald Fehr, acting executive director of the Players Association.

Fehr said that once these non-critical issues have been cleared, the two sides can begin negotiating economic differences for the first time since early March. It was then that both sides became locked in a protracted debate over just how much money the major league clubs were losing.

"Hopefully, we're going to complete that process by tomorrow morning and get back into some of the more significant issues such as minimum salaries, some licensing matters, as a prelude to the major issues we have to get back to."

The next negotiating session was set for Wednesday at the American and National Leagues' offices.

The major issues — the players' demand that the owners increase their contribution to the players' benefit plan to $60 million a year and the owners' proposal that a salary cap be imposed on teams to slow down salary increases — will likely carry the talks to the players' Aug. 6 strike deadline.

"I think it's inevitable, yes, that the talks will go down to the last couple of days. Hopefully by that time we'll have been able between us to work out some solutions," said Lee MacPhail, chief negotiator for the owners. "Certainly, neither side wants a strike."

The owners and players have been negotiating since November, trying to reach a new contract to replace one that expired Dec. 31.

The players presented their pension and benefit proposal in December. They contend the owners' benefit contributions has been one-third of their national television revenues for 18 years and should remain at that level.

Since new television contracts average about $180 million a year, the players want $60 million annually to increase pensions and other benefits.

The owners have avoided discussing the pension plan at the bargaining table, maintaining that it must be considered in conjunction with their salary cap proposal presented last May.

For their part, the players' negotiators view the salary cap as an unacceptable assault on free agency, the players' ability to offer their services to the highest bidder.

"As a matter of philosophy, we think any reserve system stinks," Fehr said. "If they (the owners) have an agreement with one another that they won't hire you, it's something that's just philosophically anathema to us."
