Senators focus on Souter's positions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senators are trying to divine the positions of high court nominee David Souter on a host of issues, including abortion and affirmative action.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., has not set a date for the start of hearings but it is likely they will be held in September so that Souter could be confirmed before the Supreme Court session opens on the first Monday in October.

Bush urges Senate to avoid single-issue politics in confirming Souter

According to White House officials, Souter will meet with Senate leaders of both parties Wednesday and Thursday as the FBI updates the background investigation it conducted for his appeals court seat.

Souter, who spent most of Tuesday at the White House preparing for the confirmation process, has written 191 opinions while on the New Hampshire Supreme Court but none of them directly deal with the pressing issues of the day such as the right to abortion, affirmative action or church state disputes.

He has no record of public speeches or piles of law review articles of the sort that helped lead to the demise of Robert Bork in 1987. However, despite the paucity of such documents, a picture of Souter has begun to emerge.

A review of his opinions shows him to be a judge definitely in the conservative mold who often ruled against criminal defendants. His writings, however, have none of the fire of Justice Antonin Scalia and more resemble those of Justice Anthony Kennedy, who was eventually confirmed to the seat Bork failed to capture.

President Bush, aware a Senate battle could break out over his first nominee to the Supreme Court, said Tuesday "we're not bracing for some horrendous fight with the United States Senate."

In a Senate speech, Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., a member of the

Loan guarantor in financial distress

Ability to obtain student loans to be unaffected

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government, facing a $2 billion bill to insure defaulted student loans, is considering replacing one of the largest loan guarantors with a new organization, officials said Tuesday.

The Higher Education Assistance Foundation, or HEAF—which has a $9.6 billion portfolio of loan guarantees—is facing serious financial problems that have contributed to a sharp decline in the stock price of Sallie Mae, the federally chartered student loan marketer.

HEAF, like other guarantee agencies, insures student loans by paying bank lenders 100 percent of a defaulted loan. The Education Department, in turn, reinsures the guarantors' loan. But the government only pays the guarantor 90 percent when defaults exceed 5 percent of the guarantee agency's loan portfolio and only 80 percent when defaults exceed 9 percent.

HEAF has received less than 100

Survey: Crab Orchard has potential hazards

By Karen RADIUS
Staff Writer

Boaters and water-skiers need to be aware of the potential hazards beneath the surface of Crab Orchard Lake, an SIU-C researcher said.

After surveying roughly 30 to 40 percent of the lake, Roy Frank, assistant professor of civil engineering, and a group of civil engineering technology students have found islands have decreased in size and some have submerged through wave erosion.

These underwater islands are in the popular areas of the lake and some are just four feet under the surface, he said.

The underwater islands do not show on existing maps. People need to know about them to prevent accidents and injuries, Frank said.

Every summer for the past four years, Frank and a group of his students have worked on projects that help the local area. For the past three years, they have worked with the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge. The university's "state-of-the-art" surveying equipment has enabled them to compute coordinates, draw maps of the shorelines, develop contours of the bottom of the lake and plot cross-sections, which is measuring depths at known distances.

These field projects are components of the land surveying classes offered in civil engineering technology, Frank said. The group has gone out on the lake every Tuesday and Thursday from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

The information collected in this mapping project will be extremely useful because the last surveyed map of the area dates back to the 1950s, Frank said.

Based on the information and observation, Frank said that the main lake is not becoming any

SIU-C to study groundwater pollution

By Jerianne KIMMEL
Staff Writer

A boost in funding for SIU-C researchers will allow them to study the relationship between agricultural chemicals and groundwater supply because the U.S. House of Representatives approved $600,000 for the project.

"This is important research at a time when we are trying our best to clean the environment and be aware of how some of the things we do affect our earth," U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, said.

University researchers are looking to see if the herbicide atrazine, a common chemical used by corn and soybean growers to kill weeds, absorbs to materials in the soil and are transported to groundwater, said Bill Ray, assistant professor in civil engineering and mechanics at SIU-C.

"Our objective is to determine how atrazine is transported to groundwater," he said. "The health effects are something of a concern."

The material, colloids, is one-one hundredths the size of a human hair or smaller and can travel through the soil matrix, said Joe Davis, assistant professor in chemistry and biochemistry at SIU-C.

If contaminants can absorb onto this material, they ride "piggyback" to the ground water supply where they could be a possible source of contamination, Davis said.

"There are several environmental concerns with the transport of contaminants to ground waters," Davis said. "Whether or not (atrazine) absorbs to colloidal material and washes to ground waters, we don't know yet. That's what we're trying to find out."

ATV registration fees to be refunded

By Christen CORIASCO
Staff Writer

Beginning in August, registration fees for all-terrain vehicles and off-road motorcycles previously required by the ATV law will be refunded, Anne Mueller, a spokeswoman for the Illinois Department of Conservation, said.

The fees generated by the law were supposed to provide funds to secure riding areas and repair any environmental damage caused by the ATV vehicles.

Mueller said the law, which took effect last fall, was repealed by the legislature because private landowners were exempted from registering.

"Only 1,800 of the estimated 64,000 vehicles were registered. That really cut into the amount of funds available," Mueller said. "This year they decided to close-out the program because there's no money to administer it."

Roy Miller, director of administration for IDOC, said the landowners wanted the exemption because the ATVs were not primarily bought to be used as recreational devices.

"They (the landowners) bought their ATV for agricultural purposes not recreational purposes," Miller said.

"Some own more than one ATV. The landowners would pay for their vehicle to be registered in a general sense for $2 or $3, but they didn't want to pay the price that was established to address the other concerns," he said.

Miller said IDOC is continuing to work with ATVs and the lack of public riding areas.

"We continue to look at the ATV problem and try to work with riders and dealers. We are trying to develop an ATV park like Missouri's," he said.

Miller said IDOC was searching its files to find those that complied with the original registration fee. He said a total refund of $45 will be mailed out to each individual along with a short explanation of the repealed law.

Gus says it seems that the unregistered off road vehicles drove the ATV law into the dirt.

NCAA to start random drug testing

By Tricia Lynch
Staff Writer

Beginning August 1, 1990, football players at 195 Division I-A and I-AA universities will be randomly tested for drugs under a 1990 NCAA rule.

The schools will be selected at random to participate in the NCAA's recently passed involuntary year-round drug-testing program, said Frank Uryasz, director of Sports Sciences for the NCAA.

This involuntary testing idea came from a recommendation by the NCAA Committee on Competitive Safeguards and Medical Aspects of Sports.

The new program will replace a voluntary off-season drug-testing program that has been in operation since January 1988.

"The NCAA should be doing this testing to do away with performance-enhancing drugs, not to see if there is a drug problem on college campuses," Saluki football Head Coach Bob Smith said. "If that's the case then it shouldn't be just the athletes who are tested."

During the program's first year, 36 student-athletes will be selected randomly from each school's football squad for testing, without regard to team position or playing time. Walk-ons and redshirt players will also be included.

For SIU-C, the new program should not be a problem, Smith said, who predicts his players will be 100 percent clean.

"I think it's a good idea," Smith said. "There's no place for performance-enhancing drugs in athletics or society."

The new program will test for anabolic steroids, diuretics and urine manipulators.

Ed Thompson, men's head athletic trainer, began the Student Athlete Assistance Program at SIU-C in 1986, instead of a drug testing program, to provide confidential assistance and support to students regarding personal issues that might adversely affect their academic and/or athletic performance as well as their general well-being.

"We haven't believed our athletes are at a greater risk than other students for social drugs, but maybe we need to lead by example for steroid use," Thompson said referring to the steroid abuse among high school athletes.

A student-athlete who fails a drug test will be subsequently ruled ineligible for one season. The athlete can not be redshirted during that time.

"If we want to help the student-athlete this punishment is too strong," Smith said, disagreeing with the committee's decision. "A stiff warning should be given first, then a re-test. If the athlete doesn't heed the warning there should be a stiff penalty."

"We try to instill whole life decisions with a broad scope of educational information so hopefully they'll make decisions to benefit their entire lives, not just while they're at SIU-C," Thompson said.

Channels have been developed through the SAAP with the Counseling Center, Clinical Center, Wellness Center, Health Service and Legal Counsel and coaches and athletes are made aware of services available to them.

Thompson refers to the SAAP program as "athletic sympathetic" because athletes have different needs and circumstances from regular students.

Mandarich's potential still questionable

GREEN BAY, Wis. (UPI) — Tony Mandarich arrived last year boasting of his enormous potential in the NFL. He left a quiet and humble offensive tackle who spent more time on the pines than on the field.

But the mammoth from Michigan State — who arrived in 1989 expecting to be the best lineman the NFL had ever seen — hopes his sophomore year is different.

"The problem for me was that at Michigan State we ran the ball about 80 times a game," Mandarich said. "It was a tough year. So much was expected from me coming out of college."

After a lengthy contract holdout, Mandarich arrived last year listening to heavy metal music and eating a 16,000-calorie-a-day diet. But attention waned as he was a reserve to tackle Alan Veingrad, who is a holdout this season.

"The media has a way of building you up to be bigger and better than you really are," Mandarich said. "When you don't live up to that, you really look bad. But it's something you have to deal with. If not, you should be out of the sport."

Mandarich reported to the Packers' training camp Monday at 290 pounds, the highest he has ever weighed for the team. Mandarich tipped the scales at about 300 pounds last season and played as heavy as 327 with the Spartans.

After weighing in at 297 during the team's final minicamp last spring, Mandarich has shed seven pounds in an effort to improve his pass blocking, a weakness that kept him on the bench last season.

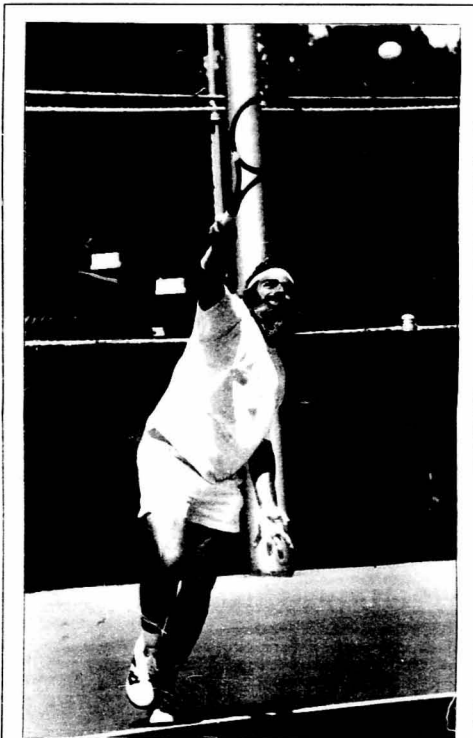

"You pass protect a lot better at 290 than at 315," Mandarich said. "If I was playing in Pittsburgh, I wouldn't be at 290 because they run the ball."

"I'm not criticizing this place at all because I think they have a phenomenal offense the way (Coach) Lindy (Infante) runs it. It's so sophisticated it's hard for defenses to stop."

"I don't think a little bit of weight loss is going to hurt my run blocking and it'll help my pass blocking."

Mandarich said he has cut down his daily intake to a mere 7,000 calories, adding that he feels quicker and more agile with the drop in weight.

"I feel better motion-wise than I did last fall when I was over 300," he said. "I felt pretty light on my feet out there today and not much weaker, although maybe I am a bit because of the weight loss."

Cardinals looking for right material

By Harry Jupiter
San Francisco Examiner

The St. Louis Cardinals are looking for a new manager. And the California Angels may soon have an opening for a television announcer. Keep an eye on Joe Torre, who does Angels TV.

Torre has talked about the manager's job with his old friend, Dal Maxvill, the Cardinals' general manager. He could be getting another call from St. Louis this week.

"We talked once," Torre said. "We haven't talked specifics, we haven't talked contracts. I think they're going to make a decision this week."

Torre and Maxvill don't need a lot of conversation to understand each other. They were teammates in St. Louis. Torre managed the New York Mets (1977-81) and the Atlanta Braves (1982-84) and he hired Maxvill as his third-base coach each time.

"We always thought alike," Torre said. "We used to have signs for three batters ahead."

Torre remembers his six Cardinal years with great pleasure. The Braves traded him to St. Louis for Orlando Cepeda during spring training in 1969.

Torre was the National League's most valuable player and batting champion with the Redbirds in 1971. He hit .363 and drove in 137 runs that year.

As a manager, Torre guided the Braves to a division championship in 1982, then finished second twice. Atlanta has had six managers since he was fired, but they haven't finished higher than fifth.

Torre has been announcing Angels games on TV for six years. "I've got a radio face," Torre said, "but here I am on television."

"I miss managing at times," he admitted, "especially when you get to September and October. But you can't have the good without the bad."

"There are nights your team gets blown out. If you're doing a broadcast, you close your briefcase when the game is over, you go home and forget about it. Managers can't forget about it."

Torre turned 50 on July 18. He is the younger brother of another big leaguer, Frank Torre, who played first base for the Braves and the Philadelphia Phillies.

Joe came up in the Braves chain as a catcher. He played a lot of first base and third base, too, during his 18 years in the big leagues.

Torre averaged .297 for these 18 years. He had five seasons with 100 or more runs batted in.

But no matter how good a player may have been, managing can be something quite different.

"It's a matter of how they play for you," Torre said.

"St. Louis was the best six years of my baseball life," he said. "It was always fun to come to the ballpark."

Cubs hot, still 13 games behind in NL East

By Marc Topkin
St. Petersburg Times

In the rollercoaster ride that has been the Chicago Cubs' season, things are suddenly looking up.

The Cubs beat the St. Louis Cardinals Monday to record their eighth straight victory, their longest winning streak in more than a year. But the first half of the season was enough of a downer that the Cubs are still 13 games behind division-leading Pittsburgh.

And the way the Pirates (and New York Mets) are playing, the Cubs may need an express if they are to defend as National League East champions.

"Every day you try to figure out what it takes, what you've got to do to regain the form from last year," said rightfielder Andre Dawson, one of a few Cubs on track to better his 1989 performance.

"Each year you have to be a little more focused because each year is different. This year we haven't been consistent, we haven't gotten the job done. We have to get a few guys hot at one time and reel off 10-12 wins, 13 of 15, and get a little momentum."

For the first time this season, the Cubs seem to be on the move. They reached the All-Star break at 36-49 (compared to 47-39 last year), and lost three straight after the break. But they've since won eight in a row, including a recent three-game sweep of the resurgent Giants.

"You've got to get the breaks and we're getting some," manager Don Zimmer said Sunday.

That hasn't been the case much of the season. Zimmer says there is no clear-cut reason the Cubs are mired in fifth place. But he has a few ideas — specifically the pitching of Mike Bielecki and Greg Maddux.

Last year, Maddux and Bielecki combined for a 37-19 record and 3.07 earned run average.

This season, Maddux is 6-9 with a 4.35 ERA and was dropped from first to fourth in the rotation. Bielecki is 4-8 with a 5.51 ERA and went from the rotation to the bullpen. The duo went 21 consecutive starts without a victory until Maddux beat the Padres on Wednesday.

"No question we've struggled, and it's a combination of a lot of things," Zimmer said. "I think the thing overall that probably hurt us the most is our No. 1 and 2 pitchers."

"You can still pitch good and get beat, but that hasn't been the case. They've pitched a couple of decent games, but so many times they've been knocked out in the second, third, fourth innings and I have to go to the bullpen. That's hurt us."

Sub-par performances from Maddux and Bielecki haven't been the only things that have hurt the Cubs.

Leftfielders Dwight Smith and Lloyd McClendon, a pleasant surprise last year with a combined .307 average, 21 homers and 92 RBI, are struggling with a .230 average, six homers and just 25 RBI.

Former ace Rick Sutcliffe, a 16-game winner in '89, has been out all season with torn cartilage in his pitching shoulder. He will throw from a mound for the first time this week.

Catcher Damon Berryhill, out since last August with shoulder problems, has yet to return, limiting

Mubarak travels to Baghdad to defuse Iraq-Kuwait crisis

KUWAIT (UPI) — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak made surprise visits to Iraq and Kuwait Tuesday in a bid to defuse a dispute over oil production that apparently prompted Iraq to stage military maneuvers along its border with Kuwait. "My trip is aimed at resolving the present crisis between Iraq, Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates and clearing the atmosphere," Cairo Radio quoted him as saying. Kuwait Radio said Mubarak began talks with Kuwait's emir, Sheikh Jaber al Ahmad al Sabah, but gave no details.

East German coalition government collapses

EAST BERLIN (UPI) — The East German government collapsed Tuesday when one of the junior parties withdrew from the coalition in a dispute over whether the two Germanys merge before all-German elections. "We have reached the limits of our tolerance (and) the prime minister has made it impossible for the Liberal faction to continue in the coalition," said Rainer Ortleb, head of the East German Liberals. After a series of meetings between Liberals, Social Democrats and Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere, the Liberals put an end to the crisis.

MONROVIA, Liberia (UPI) — A rebel gunboat shelled President Samuel Doe's executive mansion during assaults Tuesday by guerrillas who have routed troops on all fronts and brought the government to the brink of capitulation after a six-month rebellion, residents said. A rebel assault that took the guerrillas into the Liberian capital Monday apparently was staged by the forces of Prince Johnson, who has led a breakthrough rebel faction that split from guerrilla commander Charles Taylor.

Exxon skipper Hazelwood wants to sail again

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Capt. Joseph Hazelwood proclaimed his desire to return to the sea immediately after a jury in Alaska convicted him of negligence in the Exxon Valdez spill but cleared him of three more serious charges. But like any mariner, Hazelwood, who was fired by Exxon after the disaster, needs a Coast Guard license to go to sea. A Coast Guard hearing beginning Wednesday in Long Beach may determine whether Hazelwood will ever work on a ship again. The supreme penalty in such a proceeding is license revocation.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. ## Hartigan moves to delay Hendricks' retrial decision

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Illinois Attorney General Neil Hartigan Tuesday asked the state Supreme Court to reconsider its decision granting a new trial to David Hendricks, who was sentenced to life in prison for the murders of his wife and children. Hendricks, 35, was convicted in 1984 and is serving a natural life sentence. The ruling's interpretation of the appeals court's review of circumstantial evidence, the future use of evidence objected to by the court and the timing of witness' testimony were areas where Hartigan said needed further explanation.

Bands to invade town with rock, ska and jazz

By Rob Coné
Entertainment Editor

It seems as if three Carbondale establishments are jamming as much music into their entertainment schedules as they can before finals hit next week.

The bill includes local jazz artists, ska from Houston and progressive rock from Ohio.

Storytown from Miami University of Ohio is celebrating their third summer of music making with a 25-city tour of the United States and Canada. Along with stops in Toronto, Minneapolis, Boston, Atlanta and Nashville, Storytown is coming to Gatsby's next Tuesday for two shows.

The band's latest demo tape shows off the four 20-plus year olds' college pop sound that is highlighted with strong vocal lines, tight harmonies and driving rhythms. It's easy on the ears.

Shawn Farrell, vocals and guitar, Tim Martin, bass and vocals, Brad Morris, guitar and vocals, and Rick Saines, drums, develop and rehearse their music in the house they share near the Miami campus.

To date, the foursome of prolific songwriters—Martin, Morris and Saines arrange Farrell's (a creative writing major) lyrics—have been busy since the summer of '87 with 45 original songs to their credit.

Up-tempo reggae comes to Hangar 9, when Sprawl from Houston, Texas introduces itself to Carbondale audiences Saturday.

Publicized as seven-piece crazed funk/ska noise with horn section, Sprawl is in the middle of a self-financed, coast-to-coast, two-month tour designed to showcase their self-produced cassette/compact disc, "The King of Parking."

By booking its own shows, producing its own recordings and promoting itself, Sprawl hopes to become self-illuminating.

Sheer self-determination must be what keeps the band on the road even though there may not be enough money to allow them the luxury of a motel room.

Dan Robinson on guitar, Jeff Nunnally on bass, Bo Morris on trumpet, Clay Embry, tenor saxophonist, Dave Dove, trombone, and Matt Kelly, vocalist, are the rest of the Texans.

Freelance jazz singer Kathleen Shaffner and a combo of local musicians will play standards like Gershwin and Ellington and the works of contemporary artists at Mugsy McGuire's. Shaffner said she hopes Jazz Night will become a regular monthly feature.

Backing Shaffner are SIU-C professors Harold Miller, bass, Bob Allison, trumpet, and Frank Stemper, piano. Rounding out the combo are Dan Gruber on the drums and Kevin Cox on sax and flute.

'Rehearsal for a Revolution' mixes theater and politics

A Review

By Anne Ryman
Staff Writer

The powerful fictional play "Rehearsal for a Revolution," illustrates the oppression of the arts and governmental influence on entertainment in Brazil.

A European director is brought to the country to direct a comedy for a summer festival. But he has other ideas about the purpose behind theater. He believes the South American theater is being used as a political device to mask reality.

The scenes consist of rehearsals, which are actually rehearsals for a revolution as well as for acting.

Dan Stark plays the controversial director, Rene Vergent who wants to change the world through art. Stark captures Vergent's passionate emotions and desire for change. He displays strength and he gives a powerful characterization of the intense director.

Lori Señor plays the inquisitive and persistent Odelia, an actress who has consistently turned down parts for 10 years because she has refused to pay the sexual price of participation. Casting in the festival has very little to do with talent. She has finally relented and been offered a role.

To make certain that the actors follow the rigidly prescribed rules of the festival, microphones are hidden on the stage and every word is recorded.

Pete Housman plays the evil Moreis, a man determined to use military force to carry out the goals of the festival.

Vergent believes every major political event takes place during the eight weeks of the festival and the government is using the festival as a mask for its actions.

The mask theme is prevalent throughout the production. Vergent urges the actors to tear down the masks. The masks hide the truth, he says.

In a comical scene, Vergent mimics the actors. "Stop impersonating. The best characters are from real life," he says.

In one scene, the actors wear masks and black clothing. The scene portrays the actors as prisoners of life and then set free. The haunting music and stark colors of the masks and clothing leave a memorable impression.

"Rehearsal for a Revolution was written by Silvia Baeza and is part of the Playwright's Workshop.

Much of the powerful music was written by Evan Coram, who also performs it. Evan also plays a playwright struggling between trust and deception.

It will be performed again on July 30 in the Laboratory Theater.

Time to give, help transcends seasons

WHEN TIMES are good, we tend not to think about the poor and needy except during Thanksgiving or Christmas.

Delivery of surplus food to our area from the U.S. Department of Agriculture reminds us of those who need help from others. Living from paycheck to paycheck on a fixed income can leave individuals wondering constantly about their future, especially in a world where expenses keep rising rather than lowering.

Though college students live a transitory existence of four or five years in a community, this should not be an excuse to ignore community problems. These problems—the poor getting poorer, the hungry finding no relief—are problems not indigenous to Carbondale.

HUNGER, DESPERATION and a desire to improve one's standard of living are human problems that need a human solution—a compassionate solution. Personal involvement in solving our human problems should be important to each of us.

Let's hope we have learned that the self-serving follies of cut-throat competition in the 1980s are something to look back on and say, "It was a mistake."

As college students—still young, still idealistic—we need to actively take part in solutions that improve the quality of life for every individual.

IF WE are not part of the solution, we are part of the problem, as the saying goes. Honest commitment to improve ourselves so we can improve the world in which we live is a worthy objective, and one inherent in the pursuit of a higher education. Yet from time to time, individuals tend to focus on the first part of the objective and give up when trying to complete the second part.

Serious thought about the plight of the homeless, unemployed or underprivileged should not lead us to believe these are isolated problems. Nor are they problems that government can cure in short order. Societal problems are caused by society. It is up to society's individuals to find and implement the cures for our social ills.

The post-Brennan Court

Scripps Howard News Service

With his nomination of Judge David Souter to succeed Justice William Brennan on the Supreme Court, President Bush is seeking to close at last the era of judicial activism that began with Earl Warren's confirmation as chief justice in 1953. Brennan, appointed in 1956, was Warren's right-hand man and perpetuated the liberal legacy long after Warren retired.

In explaining Souter's selection, Bush stressed his desire for a jurist who would refrain from legislating from the bench. The Warren court, by contrast, took as its prime mission to right wrongs and to do good, with only secondary concern for the integrity of the process of interpreting law.

If confirmed by the Senate, President Bush's nominee seems likely to shift the court decisively toward a profoundly different philosophy espoused by several Reagan appointees: the "strict constructionist" view that the high court's role is to interpret the Constitution and legal precedent, not to make law according to the judges' preferences.

But whoever eventually takes the ninth seat on the post-Brennan court, we hope it will restore a proper balance. The people should be freer to govern their own affairs through their elected representatives — with courts the essential but impartial protectors of rights and interpreters of law.

Hasty takeover in South Africa the wrong solution; capable whites should govern

In reference to a letter by Godwin Okafor in the July 3 issue of the DE, I have a few thoughts myself on Carl McClendon's commentary about South Africa and Nelson Mandela, and also on Mr. Okafor's demeaning description of McClendon as a "senseless wild animal" and a "dead bigot."

I must agree with you that the commentary was not very sympathetic to the plight of blacks in South Africa. Mr. McClendon did emphasize the future of the South African economy and the need for a solution to the problem of 'black vs. black' violence.

If you think these are trivial matters, then you too have "destructive opinions," as you call them.

Before you write a letter calling me a "bigot" and a host of other names, let me give you my credentials. Though I am a native U.S. citizen, I was raised in Namibia, a country now independent from South Africa. I had black friends there and have black friends here as well.

So I have an intimate knowledge of the problems in southern Africa, having seen a lot with my own eyes. Even you cannot honestly deny the intense hatred that has existed for centuries between some of the black tribes in the region.

There may be a degree of unity amongst the black tribes now, as there was in Zimbabwe during their struggle for freedom, but that lasted only until the dust from the elections had settled.

Then thousands of people, African people, from what had become the opposition party and tribe, appeared for criticizing the new government, and it was not due to illness or old age. Want more? Look at Liberia today. Black tribal unity indeed!

The economies of Zambia, Mozambique, Angola and Zimbabwe (typical "banana republics") as you called them) are a shadow of what they were 30 years ago. But like most people seeking a conscience-clearing solution, you ignore the importance of South Africa and her economy to the entire world.

Why don't you check up on it, and see what minerals are used in the fighter aircraft and submarines which keep this country free for you to write letters in?

These are not black or white minerals, but minerals that any intelligent person knows the world needs, no matter who mines them. And minerals are but one aspect of South Africa's importance to the world. Mr. McClendon's concerns are based on the fact that fledgling governments all over the continent of Africa have proven over and over again their inability to produce enough capable people of the right skin color to continue to run things effectively.

There have always been some very well-educated and capable leaders, but hardly ever enough managers to keep the wheels rolling. This is not my opinion; it is the way things are, a fact, and if you look around and read some material on the subject, you will discover the same.

I oppose the system of apartheid in all respects and agree it must end soon, but I am not about to endorse a solution hastily contrived by busy-bodies who have no idea what the hell is going on or have never set foot on southern African soil.

I also am sick of reading only one side of the story, usually presented by a dimwit, anxious not to miss the bandwagon. Only a fool or someone deliberately misreading only half the picture can knowingly group all the whites and all the blacks into two different corners.

There are divisions among the English and more conservative

Africaander whites as well, but you will never see an Africaander putting a burning tire around an English white's neck because he has different political views or is from a different ethnic group.

This type of action between Xhosa and Zulus, frequently documented by the "neutral" international press, is supposed to end overnight? Be honest, Mr. Okafor, this is not something about which the world can "rest peacefully knowing that Mandela and other black activists can take care of their own people," as you put it. Tell that to the families of the 24 blacks who were killed on a bus in Natal last week by a rival tribe.

Namibia's decision allowing fair, capable (and I emphasize capable) whites to continue to run critical industries will benefit the country in the long run. Why rule out that idea in South Africa, just to give an inexperienced black person a big hat that does not fit?

Will any of the people who are on this crusade now be concerned about another failed economy and starvation then? I doubt it. They will probably be voicing opinions on another problem, about which they are just as clueless.

So stop whining whenever someone takes a careful and objective look at the so-called "liberators" qualifications to do a better job across the board. If you are really concerned about South Africa, as I was and still am about Namibia, deep down you will agree that a hasty change may solve the big problem of apartheid, but will produce far greater pitfalls down the road for all South Africans, black and white.

Who knows how any opposition to a man who embraces Gadhafi, Arafat and Castro will be dealt with at such time.—Albert P. Lense, graduate student in mechanical engineering.

Abortion is greatest threat to women's rights today

Some misled women say they have the right to choose, to control their own bodies, to murder their own unborn children.

In saner days abortionists and women who chose to kill their children were sent to prison. Some women say "you have no right to impose your beliefs on me, no right to control my body." Prisons are full of killers who also believed they had a right to kill someone. We put those killers in jail. Society controlling killers' bodies is nothing new.

The National Organization for Women says that to bring an "unwanted" child into the world leads to child abuse. Look at the statistics. Since Roe vs. Wade legalized child killing, the reported incidents of child abuse have skyrocketed.

Abortion is the ultimate child abuse and has so cheapened the lives of children that it has led to a plague of child abuse. In Carbondale, as recently as 1987, a mother let her newborn baby drown in a toilet stool and will not serve one day in jail. We have progressed from condoning killing unborns to condoning killing of newborns.

Pro-abortion advocates say bringing a child into a world of poverty is wrong. Now we see that not only unborn children and newly born children have no right to life, now poor children have no right to life. Pro-abortion advocates selfishly wish to maintain their lifestyles and not be responsible for helping the poor. They say, "Kill the poor's children but don't increase our taxes."

However, don't be by the argument that it is the poor who are aborting their children. Go to an abortion mill. See for yourself all the new cars pull in and well-dressed women enter the abortion mill, sacrificing their children on the altar of greed. Babies are not being killed because they could not be clothed and educated. Babies are being killed so families can drive two cars, own a VCR and color television and so murdering "doctors" can drive a Mercedes Benz.

Every time the abortion question is debated the pro-abortion advocates raise the false and intellectually dishonest issues of rape and incest. Much less than 1 percent of abortions are for rape or incest.

Ninety-nine percent of all abortions are for birth control and economic convenience.

Norma J. Beedle

More than one-third of abortions are on "repeat offenders" who are too lazy and irresponsible to use birth control.

The feminists say they "won't go back" to the days of "back alley" abortions. Well they don't have to. Back alley abortions are practiced now. The states have no way to control the training of personnel, sanitary conditions or facilities of the present legalized back alley abortion mills.

No one warns women contemplating abortions that 47 percent of aborting women have physical complications; 22 percent miscarry a later child; 15 percent have post-operative hemorrhage; 9 percent have infections; 8 percent have cervical incompetence; 8 percent have blocked Fallopian tubes; 6 percent report cervical cancer; 6 percent have total hysterectomies. The state cannot even make the abortion mills report the injuries or warn the patients that if complications arise, the local hospitals often won't accept women injured by the abortionists because of malpractice suit risks. What about the right to informed consent? The right of a patient to know the risks she runs? Who from NOW speaks for that right?

Missouri Gov. John Ashcroft is introducing legislation to prevent abortions for the purpose of sex selection. NOW even opposes that bill despite the fact that more than 70 percent of the babies being killed for gender selection are girl babies.

The misled "feminist extremists" condone the greatest abuse of women in history: The murder of women simply because they are female. How hypocritical. The extremists are willing to sacrifice unborn women to support their political views. I support equal rights for unborn women.

Some abortion rights extremists even insist that teen-age girls are mature enough to make such an important life-changing decision without parental consent. The same child might have to obtain parental consent to go on a school field trip and sometimes even have her ears pierced. Thankfully, the Supreme Court has seen the absurdity of this contradiction and allowed states to require parental consent.

Women exercise their freedom of choice when they choose to engage in unprotected and irresponsible sex. Once the choice is made, one must face the responsibilities and consequences of that choice. Once a child is conceived, a new person exists. What choice does the baby have?

There is no financial necessity to have an abortion; much help is available. For teen-agers, we can arrange food, housing, schooling and health care whether or not the child is put up for adoption. Please, let your baby live.

Before you decide how you will stand on abortion, think of it from the baby's perspective. She is a person. She can feel pain as she is being ripped apart or burned to death by a saline solution. Should another woman's "right" to kill prevail over her right to life?

(Norma J. Beedle, Carbondale, is a pro-life attorney.)

Supreme Court threatening women's right of choice

Two recent actions threaten women's right to choose a safe, legal abortion. In June the U.S. Supreme Court ruled on two parental notification cases, and this month the Louisiana Legislature voted to make virtually all abortions illegal. The two cases that the Supreme court ruled on were one from Ohio requiring that at least one parent be notified if a minor sought an abortion, and the other from Minnesota would have required that two parents be notified, provided that there was a provision that the girl could go before a judge to seek permission, rather than notifying her parents.

A pregnant woman's constitutional right to choose between childbirth and abortion was established in 1973 by the Supreme Court in Roe vs. Wade that all women, including those under 18, had a right to a safe, legal abortion in the first trimester of pregnancy. More than one million teen-age pregnancies occur in the United States each year, more than 80 percent of which are unintended. Nearly all pregnant teens are unwed, and some 40 percent of them choose abortion.

In an ideal world, a pregnant girl could tell her parents and seek their love and support. She could arrive at critical decisions about her future through family discussions. A majority do tell at least one parent, and often the mother will accompany her daughter if she decides to have an abortion. However, some teen-agers cannot tell their parents. Some are members of broken families; some are the victims of incest or other forms of family abuse; some have run away from home, often for good reasons.

Most counselors of young girls who come for pregnancy testing and counseling will urge the girl to tell her parents and help her make a decision about what she wants to do. But some girls say, "I can't tell my parents. My father would kill me, or they would throw me out of the house." Others say they will run away or commit suicide. Most college students are just a few years away from the turbulent adolescent years and will remember friends who simply could not have notified their parents that they were pregnant when they were in high school.

Many young teen-agers have little responsibility for their pregnancy, often the result of sexual aggression by older male relatives or acquaintances or sexual ignorance. If forced to have a baby, they often must drop out of school; they cannot find decent medical care or the emotional and financial support to be a good parent. The young mother with little education and few skills is seven times more likely than her classmates to slide into poverty and spend the rest of her life on welfare or in low-paying jobs.

Laws that restrict access to abortion by requiring parental involvement increase teen-age birth rates. In Minnesota after the parental notification law was passed, there was a 38.4-percent increase in births to teen-age girls, while the birthrate for those not affected rose by only three-tenths of one percent.

Judicial bypass, the Supreme Court's alternative to parental notification is costly, time-consuming, and often humiliating and traumatizing as well as terrifying to an already troubled young person. They must reveal detailed personal information to as many as 20 or more strangers on staff in the court system. In small communities where it is very difficult to keep anything confidential, the information may get back to the parents.

Despite the parental notification ruling and the 1989 Webster decision, the Supreme Court has not overturned Roe vs. Wade, so a woman still has the right to choose to have an abortion in the first trimester without restrictions. However, on July 8 the Louisiana Legislature passed a bill that bans all abortions in the state except those necessary to save the life of the woman and for pregnancies that are a result of rape or incest. The bill subjects physicians performing abortions to 1 to 10 years hard labor and a $10,000 to $100,000 fine. It has not yet been signed into law by the governor and he has said he may allow it to become a law without his signature, although he has the option of vetoing it.

Such a law works a hardship primarily on poor women, since those who have some means can travel to an adjoining state where abortion is legal. Louisiana ranks near the bottom of the states in the resources it allots to welfare, Aid to Dependent Children, food stamps, education, Medicaid and protective services for children. Among anti-abortionists, there does not seem to be much concern for what happens to a baby after it is born. All of their emotion and energy is poured into what happens from conception to birth, although prenatal care for the poor is almost non-existent in many places.

Older women whose reproductive years took place before abortion was legal remember what it was like. Many had illegal abortions, by back alley abortionists under the most unsanitary conditions or had self-induced abortions. A frequent cause of death, hysterectomy or sterility was the botched abortion. The World Health Organization estimates that more than 200,000 women die every year in countries where abortion is treated as a moral rather than a health issue. Thirty to 40 times that many suffer complications that can permanently affect health. Abortion is probably as old as humanity, certainly as old as recorded history, and no taboos or laws will stop it. Women worldwide are determined to limit their families. What is needed, especially for minors, is candid information about sexuality, reproduction and the availability of contraception that is safe and effective.

Since the Supreme Court's Webster decision of 1989, there has been a great upsurge in interest and participation in pro-choice organizations and demonstrations. Women who had taken for granted that the right to a legal, safe abortion would always be available, if needed, suddenly became aware that unless they asserted themselves, their right to choose would be taken from them. Polls have shown continuously from the 1973 decision that 70 percent of all people questioned believe it is a woman's right to choose. Almost as large a number believe that neither government nor the courts should be involved in the decision.

Women all over the country have mobilized to protect the right to legalized abortion—to have it treated like any other health matter.

'Butcher of Baghdad' rattles saber at Arab Emirates

By Leon Daniel
UPI Chief Correspondent

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The reckless rhetoric of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, the self-styled "Sword of the Arabs," again threatens the tenuous peace of the Middle East.

This time he has turned on Kuwait and the United Arab Emirates, threatening violence against the oil-rich but tiny sheikhdoms that helped bankroll Iraq's eight-year war against Iran.

Saddam, dubbed the 'Butcher of Baghdad,' accuses them of conspiring with the United States to drive down the price of oil by flooding the market.

So expect Iraq, which desperately needs to rebuild its war-ravaged economy, to continue the saber-rattling as OPEC ministers prepare to meet Thursday in Geneva to try to shore up oil prices depressed by over-production.

Saddam's Arab neighbors take his threats seriously. His latest rantings unleashed a flurry of diplomacy throughout the region.

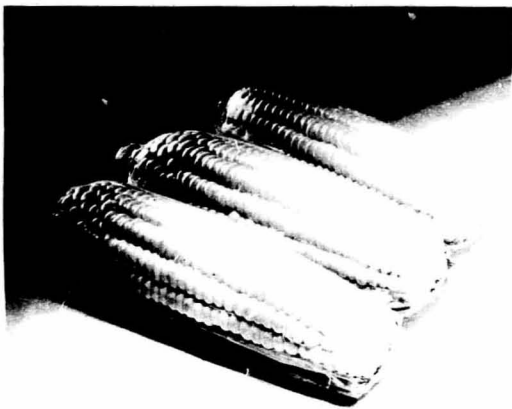

If Iraq has become one of the world's most dangerous nations, the United States and its allies share the blame. Both the Reagan and Bush administrations looked the other way as Iraq bought sophisticated weaponry in the West to prosecute its war against Iran.

Saddam often rattles his saber at Israel, which is decidedly risky, if not foolhardy. But he also has demonstrated a willingness to use his awesome arsenal, which includes chemical weaponry.

Senate Judiciary Committee, said it would be "inappropriate" for senators to ask Souter his position on abortion although he called it the "most divisive" issue since slavery.

However, on a Supreme Court where the right to abortion has been in jeopardy since a closely decided 1989 case giving states more power to regulate the procedure, both Bush's and Specter's comments may be wishful thinking.

Even though Souter testified only briefly last April prior to his appeals court appointment, he did give a glimpse of his thinking on issues.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., asked Souter about a unanimous New Hampshire Supreme Court decision he wrote overturning the conviction of a man accused of rape because the trial court excluded evidence that the victim made "suggestive advances" to several men, including the defendant.

Kenedy said the decision appeared to contradict the state's "Shield Law" which forbids the admission as evidence prior consensual sexual activity between the victim and any person other than the defendant and asked Souter "will you be sensitive to the privacy interests of rape victims."

"Yes," Souter replied, explaining there was always an "obvious tension" between protecting the rape victim and the "undoubted right" of a defendant "to present proofs favorable to himself."

"There comes a point at which the testimony which, on the face, is excludable under the rape shield law becomes so relevant and so important to the issue of guilt and innocence that the statute has to yield to the Constitutional interests," Souter said.

In June 1986, Supreme Court nominee Souter voted with the majority in an auto insurance case despite the fact he thought New Hampshire's top court was wrong.

While the case itself was of little importance to those not involved, it offers a key insight into the man who may replace Justice William Brennan. Souter wrote separately to note that the sole reason he joined the majority was "stare decisis," a term used to describe the legal principle of following previous court rulings and the mark of a cautious, workmanlike jurist.

percent reimbursement—usually 80 percent—for the last four years, Education Department officials said. HEAF is on the brink of financial collapse because it is losing the other 20 percent.

"Right now, we're looking at a range of alternatives whereby another entity or entities would perform each or all of (HEAF's) functions, either on a short- or a long-term basis," said Education Undersecretary Ted Sanders. "Under this scenario ... HEAF would not exist."

Sanders said the government has rejected HEAF's request to merge with the Nebraska Student Loan Program Inc., contending it would represent a short-term remedy and "appears to circumvent the law."

In 1988, the government reimbursed all guarantors $1.4 billion, including $500 million to HEAF. In fiscal year 1989, the government reimbursed guarantors $1.9 billion and estimates its 1990 reimbursement amount will reach $2 billion.

Between October 1989 and April 1990, the government paid HEAF $788 million. HEAF is expected to pay another $300 million to banks by the end of this fiscal year, which will subsequently be paid by the government.

Sanders said five or six other guarantee agencies are experiencing financial problems, but he said their defaults are not nearly as monumental as HEAF's problems.

Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos said in a brief statement to reporters that HEAF's situation will not affect the ability of students to obtain loans, lenders to make loans or guarantors to insure those loans.

"While HEAF's problems are serious to that organization, they do not threaten the integrity of the nationwide Guaranteed Student Loan program or the loans now guaranteed by HEAF," Cavazos said.

An Education Department task force has been sent to HEAF's St. Paul, Minn., offices to review the agency's loan portfolio.

HEAF's financial problems have triggered a decline in the stock of Sallie Mae, formally called the Student Loan Marketing Association, which is a federally chartered corporation that buys student loans from banks.

Davis said some chemicals are constrained in the soil. Some atrazine would eventually filter down through the soil from rain or irrigation and reach ground water, but at a much slower rate than it would if it was transported by colloidal material, he said.

"They are moving the whole time, one way or another," Davis said. "But they move quicker when bound to a colloid."

Some radioactive elements also are thought to absorb to soil particles, he said.

The research at SIU-C, which will take one to two years, involves researchers from several departments, including civil engineering and mechanics, chemistry and biochemistry, geology and plant and soil science.

The funding is a $100,000 increase from what the University received in the Rural Development and Agriculture appropriations bill last fiscal year.

"This is money well spent to help us continue to supply food for the world while still having a world worth living in," Poshard said. "Contamination of our groundwater supply is an extremely important issue, and this research will help us make the right decisions."

The focus of the bill is to fund research to discover ways to produce food in safe and efficient ways, Poshard said. He said SIU-C is the leading institution in the group of research universities, which includes the University of Illinois.

The appropriations bill still requires approval of the Senate and the President, but Poshard said "barring unforeseen circumstances this funding will be approved."

shallow, because the silt deposited from Crab Orchard Creek gets trapped before it reaches the main lake. This is also due to the fact that much of the land around the lake is still forested, so there is no agriculture to contribute to siltation.

The creek channels have filled in a little and shoreline erosion has occurred, he said.

"The place where I used to set up for duck hunting is now 150 feet out into the water," Frank said.

The students that have helped on the project gain a great deal of experience, Frank said.

"SIU-C civil engineering technology has the most extensive program in land surveying offered in the state of Illinois," he said.

SIU-C also has a student chapter of the Illinois Land Surveyors.

In order to graduate, the students must complete 24 semester hours in land surveying. The field project on the lake accounts for six hours.

Don't be dead certain you're too young to have a heart attack.

Last year 105,000 Americans under age 65 died of heart attacks. In fact, 45 percent of all heart attacks happen to people younger than 65. If you're old enough to be concerned about heart disease, be wise enough to take the steps recommended by the American Heart Association to reduce your risk. Don't smoke. Reduce the fat and cholesterol in your diet. And control high blood pressure. Act now. Because it's never too early to start taking care of yourself.

MAPP, Palestinian group to rally today

By Brandi Tipps
Staff Writer

Members of the Mid-America Peace Project and the General Union of Palestinian Students are sponsoring a rally for the recognition of human rights for Palestinians, at 6 p.m. today in the Free Forum Area.

The rally is being held to recognize the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza Strip as human beings, said John McHale, president of MAPP.

During the rally three speakers will be featured: John McHale, Omar Al-bishawi of the General Union of Palestinian Students and James Starks, from the Palestinian Solidarity Committee in Chicago.

McHale will speak on how Americans view problem between Palestinians and Israelis; how America does not hear all sides of the story and what Americans can do to help, McHale said.

Al-bishawi will take the perspective of a Palestinian having lived in Palestine, McHale said.

Starks will provide a historical overview and how U.S. policies for the area have changed in the last 10 years, McHale said.

Musical entertainment will be provided by the Spittunes and the Immigrant Fleas before and after the rally.

"If people are unsure of the situation or where they stand on this really complex issue, we ask that they come out and listen," McHale said.

Research: Van Gogh suffered vertigo attacks

BOSTON (UPI) — The tortured 19th century Dutch painter Vincent Van Gogh apparently did not suffer from epilepsy or madness but from a disabling inner ear disorder, researchers said Tuesday.

Dr. I. Kaufman Arenberg said an analysis of 796 letters Van Gogh wrote to family and friends between 1884 and his death by suicide on July 29, 1890 at age 37 "reveals a man constantly in control of his reason and suffering from severe, repeated attacks of vertigo" rather than epilepsy.

Although Van Gogh was diagnosed with epilepsy by a physician in an asylum for epileptics and lunatics at Saint-Remy, France, where the painter committed himself in 1889 in "descriptions in his letters are those of a person suffering from Meniere's disease," said Arenberg, of the Swedish Medical Center in Englewood, Colo.

Meniere's disease is a disorder of the inner ear, characterized by recurrent attacks of vertigo, hearing loss and tinnitus—a ringing, buzzing or roaring in the ear. People with vertigo frequently have the sensation that objects are revolving around them, or that they are revolving through space. Arenberg said the common view of Van Gogh as an epileptic, who also may have been deranged, is based largely on the diagnosis of the doctor at Saint-Remy, who wrote in 1889 that the painter was "suffering from acute mania with hallucinations of sight and hearing which may have caused him to mutilate himself by cutting off his ear."

The diagnosis reflects how slowly medical knowledge spread from cities to the provinces at the time, since Meniere's disease—and its common confusion with epilepsy—was known to doctors in Paris. Arenberg and co-researchers wrote in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

On Dec. 23, 1888, while he was living in the town of Arles, Van Gogh cut off part of his left ear and sent it to a prostitute. A doctor called in to examine him wrote that the painter, "assailed by auditory hallucinations, mutilated himself by cutting off his ear."

The researchers said this behavior suggests Van Gogh's "tinnitus had become intolerable" and he tried to alleviate hallucinations by eliminating their source.

Communists lead Mongolian election

ULAN BATOR, Mongolia (UPI) — Early results from the primaries of Mongolia's first free parliamentary election indicated Tuesday the communists would continue their seven-decade rule but the democratic opposition predicted it would win a share in power for the first time.

The government announcement on Sunday's voting left some confusion over the parties' strength but international observers monitoring the election said the communists, the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party, appeared likely to win in the final round this Sunday.

The opposition criticized the primary voting for some irregularities and for procedures that favored the communists but acknowledged the balloting had been generally free and fair. International observers, speaking on condition of anonymity, agreed. "This is our first election,"

Mongolian Prime Minister Sharabyn Gungaadorj said at a news conference at the squat, colonnaded Foreign Ministry in downtown Ulan Bator. "There are some shortcomings and bumps but it's been comparatively fair and free."

"There were no major violations," said Erdenin Batuil, leader of the main opposition group, the Mongolian Democratic Party, citing "problems" such as arbitrary disqualification of opposition candidates and invalidation of some ballots.

The two-part election comes after eight months of stunning change in Mongolia, a windswept land of plains and hills between the Soviet Union and China. The nation has been ruled since 1921 by a hidebound Stalinist-model communist party.

Prodded by reforms in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, and by a small pro-democracy movement that sprang up last December, the MPRP earlier this year changed its leadership, relinquished its constitutional monopoly of power and began opening the nation's economy.

The opposition has demanded swifter political reforms, an end to official privilege for ranking ruling party members and a faster shift to a market-oriented economy. Some opposition leaders want private property rights restored.

The primary narrowed down to no more than two the number of candidates in races for the national Parliament, the Great People's Hural, with 430 seats each representing a geographic district in the nation of about 2 million people.

The National Election Commission said the primary left 799 candidates, since only one candidate was nominated in some of the 430 districts.

Landmine explosion kills four near Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — A landmine apparently planted by the Irish Republican Army exploded Tuesday beneath a police patrol car, killing three officers and a nun who was in a second vehicle, authorities said.

The Royal Ulster Constabulary said there were no claims of responsibility for the attack near Caledon village in county Armagh, 40 miles west of Belfast, but the assault bore all the hallmarks of an operation by the IRA as part of its protracted campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

Officials said the landmine was planted in a drain beneath the road and detonated by wire when the unmarked police vehicle drove past in response to an emergency call, which was apparently issued as a lure.

They said the powerful device blasted the armor-plated car off the road into a nearby field, where it landed on its roof. A 20-foot-deep crater remained and debris was scattered around for hundreds of yards.

Police said all three occupants died instantly.

The explosion hit a second vehicle with full force. One of the occupants, a nun, died after being hospitalized, and a second woman was listed in a satisfactory condition, officials reported.

Police said masked men took over a house about 50 yards from the site before the attack. "The ground just shook beneath us," said garage owner Paul Core. "When I went to the road I saw one car lying in the field about 40 yards away. We were first on the scene and saw a white Mini Metro with two young lassies (women) in their twenties in it unconscious."

More than 30 people have died in extremist violence in Northern Ireland this year.

Reichstag minutes discovered

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The Cleveland Public Library has discovered on its shelves a rare set of minutes of Germany's parliament from early 1939 until late 1941.

The minutes of the Reichstag, the nation's parliament between the two world wars, from Jan. 30, 1939, seven months before Hitler started World War II by invading Poland, to Dec. 11, 1941, the day Hitler declared war on the United States.

Library Director Marilyn Mason said Tuesday the minutes were discovered last week during a routine check to make sure materials are listed in the catalogue.

Fran Clark, a spokesman for the library, said an extensive check with the Library of Congress and other institutions found only one other collection containing those years, at the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana.

"When we found out the New York Public Library and the Library of Congress didn't have that series, we contacted the Hoover Institute at Stanford University, which has a good collection of Eastern European history," Clark said. "But they said no."

Checks with Harvard, Dartmouth, Johns Hopkins and the State Department also came back negative.

Surgeon with AIDS no threat—study

BOSTON (UPI) — A Tennessee surgeon who died from AIDS complications apparently did not infect any of his patients with the virus: that causes the deadly disease, scientists said Tuesday.

Researchers, who combed through records of 2,160 people operated on by the surgeon during the eight years he may have been infected with the AIDS virus, said there is no evidence he transmitted the disease to any of them.

They said the results of the study—the most comprehensive of its kind—support the concept that patients who undergo surgery by a doctor who has the human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, run little risk.

Dr. William Schaffner of Vanderbilt University, co-author of the study, said there have been no reported instances of a doctor or other health care worker transmitting HIV to a patient.

Furthermore, there have been no reports of clustering of people with HIV in which the source of infection might have been a health care worker, Schaffner and colleagues reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Nevertheless, Schaffner said the potential for doctor-to-patient HIV transmission "is acknowledged by everyone experienced in this field. It could happen tomorrow."

Schaffner said he thinks the time has come to establish national guidelines for HIV-infected medical workers to follow in dealing with patients.

"We know that nationwide, about 5 percent of AIDS cases are among health care workers. This means virtually every hospital with more than 300 beds has had to deal with the problem" of having at least one staff member with AIDS or HIV, he said.

In the new study, Schaffner and his co-researchers identified people the surgeon with AIDS operated on between Jan. 1, 1982 and September 1988, when he gave up his practice because of failing health.

Although the study did not identify the surgeon, newspapers and television in Nashville, where he worked, named him as Dr. Harold Dennison. The doctor and his family acknowledged his AIDS diagnosis shortly before his death of respiratory failure on January 30, 1989.

Test tube boy dead from defective heart

CHICAGO (UPI) — Christopher Duda, a test tube baby born more than 7 years ago with a twin sister, is dead from complications of a defective heart. His twin survives in good health.

Christopher and Danielle were the nation's second test tube twins when they were born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Duda on May 14, 1983.

Danielle was a perfectly healthy baby but her brother, who was just 4 pounds, 13 ounces, was born with two chambers in his heart instead of four and had no spleen. The heart defect hindered his breathing and the flow of blood to his lungs; the lack of a spleen brought down his defenses against infection.

Christopher underwent four heart surgeries, the first when he was 2 days old, including a complex operation last week to reroute his bloodflow. Although the surgery seemed successful, fluid began building up internally and he was unable to recover.

Robert Duda tried to put the death into perspective, remembering a time not so long ago when he was told he and his wife never could have children.

"The miracle is that I had a beautiful son for seven years," Duda said Tuesday of Christopher, who died Sunday at Children's Memorial Hospital.

"We were told seven years ago that we could not have children. Then, when we turned to in vitro, we were told there was a 5 percent chance we would have one child. We had two."

The births of Christopher and Danielle at Evanston Hospital was the result of their parents' third try at in vitro fertilization.

Doctors have said the problems were not related to in vitro fertilization.

Infant deaths may be caused by faulty enzyme, study says

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — A faulty enzyme may cause a type of sudden infant death syndrome that takes the lives of 5 to 10 percent of the 7,000 babies killed annually by the disease, researchers at the Washington University School of Medicine said.

The faulty enzyme doesn't do its job of making fatty acids into energy, raw materials build up to toxic levels and the infant frequently dies due to a combination of self-poisoning and fuel starvation, doctors said.

This form of SIDS may be prevented by ensuring a consistent intake of food, which keeps the body from needing fatty acids for fuel and avoids the genetic flaw.

The problem is with "one of the three enzymes that catalyze the first step in turning fatty acids into fuel for energy," said Dr. Arnold Strauss, a professor of pediatrics and biochemistry at the Washington University School of Medicine.

enzyme—called MCAD—in some cases of SIDS," Strauss said.

Strauss's lab has cloned the gene found by researchers at Yale University, found its precise composition and clarified its connection to fatty acid metabolism. His theory was presented at an international symposium held in April in Denmark.

The babies that have the faulty enzyme usually do not have any problems unless the infants do not eat for about 15 hours, Strauss said.

"That's the threshold," he said. "Sugar gives fuel to a human for only four or five hours, then the body switches to fatty acids as its primary source of energy. But the heart, brain and liver could start to fail if energy is not provided due to the faulty enzyme, Strauss said.

A poisonous buildup occurs when unused fatty acids accumulate along with an amino acid known as carnitine, he said.

In less severe cases, the infant needs a quick, intravenous dose of sugar, he said.

Bush challenges Senate on Souter nomination

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush challenged the Senate on Tuesday to eschew single-issue politics in its consideration of Supreme Court nominee David Souter to keep the high court "above the flames of political passion."

"I've nominated this man, David Souter, because I believe his combination of education experience and integrity are second to none. He's a man of great judgment, and I fully believe he will be a great justice on the Supreme Court," Bush said at a political fund-raiser in

President against single-issue politics in consideration process

Philadelphia.

Bush announced his choice of Souter, 50, a former judge on the New Hampshire Supreme Court and currently a member of the 1st U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, on Monday. If confirmed by the Senate, Souter would succeed retiring Justice William Brennan, 84, the court's most liberal member.

"The Supreme Court must be guided by independent minds, and its members are appointed for life largely to keep them above the flames of political passion," Bush said.

"So in my nomination of Judge David Souter for Senate confirmation to fill the seat vacated by Justice William Brennan, there was no single issue, no litmus test or standard dominating my decision to nominate. And I will add that there should be no litmus test in the process of confirmation."

Bush told his audience his "full priority was to appoint a justice true to the life and the spirit of the Constitution, a priority that I'm confident will also guide the Congress in the confirmation process."

Insisting the nation "has a long tradition of judicial restraint," Bush said: "I believe I am recommending an individual with a strong incisive, independent devotion to interpreting the Constitution. He's a quiet man of enormous intellectual strength, a tough trial court judge with a great legal mind and an impartial quality that will serve the court well."

Souter sailed through Senate confirmation of his nomination to the 1st Circuit two months ago, and many Judiciary Committee members could recall little more about him than his name.

One senator called the Souter review "pretty much of a blank slate" and another said he could not think of "anything negative about him."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., one lawmaker who knows Souter, said the virtual absence of scholarly or legal writings by the nominee could help him during confirmation proceedings.

U.S. conducts joint military exercises in Persian Gulf

Pentagon denies earlier statement on ship alert status

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States ordered two U.S. warships to leave port early for a "short-notice" military exercise near the United Arab Emirates in the tense Persian Gulf, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

There were conflicting reports whether U.S. ships were on alert status, with Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams all but denying it and Navy Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett at one point confirming it.

"Just yesterday our ships in the Persian Gulf were put on alert status," Garrett told the House Armed Services' seapower subcommittee.

Later, when questioned by reporters about his statement, which contradicted earlier remarks made in the Pentagon by Williams, Garrett said, "I made that statement based on second-hand information."

During a Pentagon briefing with reporters, Williams had all but denied that U.S. forces were on alert.

"I haven't determined that our ships there (in the Persian Gulf) are, quote, on alert," Williams said in an apparent slip of the tongue that broke longstanding Pentagon policy of never discussing U.S. alert status.

Acknowledging his miscue, Williams offered, "I'm trying to disabuse you from getting too caught up in this 'alert' business."

Williams disclosed the United States this week began a "short-notice" joint military exercise in the Persian Gulf with the United Arab Emirates, and that two U.S. warships were ordered to leave port early to take part.

"These exercises are conducted from time to time, but that's about all I can say," Williams said when asked if the exercise was called in response to Iraq's threats against Kuwait or the UAE.

Asked whether it will be seen as a show of U.S. force to Iraq, Williams said, "I can't tell you how it's seen. I can only tell you that we conduct these exercises from time to time to ensure that we can work effectively with our allies in the region, and I'll leave it to others to conclude how it's seen."

The Washington Post reported Tuesday that Iraq had massed 30,000 troops on the Iraq-Kuwait border and that the U.S. Navy in the Persian Gulf had been placed on alert.

Bush sees progress in budget negotiations

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush feels progress is being made in budget negotiations and House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt said Tuesday the two sides hope to make a deficit-cutting deal by the time Congress begins its August vacation.

Bush met with congressional leaders at the White House Tuesday morning before beginning a one-day political trip to Philadelphia and New York. The negotiations, set to continue on Capitol Hill in the afternoon, are aimed at finding ways—including spending cuts and revenue increases—to reduce the projected federal deficit next fiscal year by $100 billion.

"The president feels they made progress," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said of the morning meeting.

Talking with reporters aboard Air Force One, Fitzwater said the group "is doing the heavy lifting" of sifting through budget details to fund ways to shrink the deficit.

If no agreement is reached, the Gramm-Rudman balanced budget law could force radical cuts in many programs.

Asked if Bush would use his campaign stops to build pressure on the Democrats on the budget issue, Fitzwater said the president will "be very gentle. They're working in a spirit of harmony and cooperation."

The spokesman said the two sides "agreed ... this morning that they would try to keep the rhetoric under control and really try to make this a productive week of work."

Eastern trustee expects criminal indictments

NEW YORK (UPI) — A court-appointed trustee for Eastern Airlines said Tuesday he expects the company and certain employees to be indicted by a federal grand jury for maintenance violations that took place before the carrier's 1989 strike.

"In recent days, the U.S. attorney has advised Eastern and the trustee that the company and certain of its management personnel will be subject to criminal indictments," Eastern trustee Martin Shugrue said at a news conference in Manhattan.

The criminal charges against Eastern and its employees — believed to be the first such indictment of an airline — would represent another setback for the troubled carrier, which has sought to rebuild business since its unions launched a crippling strike in March 1989.

Shugrue said the company had sought a plea agreement with U.S. Attorney Andrew Maloney and had been willing to plead guilty to certain charges concerning record keeping at Eastern facilities at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York, before March 1989.

However, Shugrue said, those discussions broke down when prosecutors insisted that Eastern plead guilty to a conspiracy charge.

Atlantis test will determine schedule

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — A final make-or-break fueling test Wednesday to check for leaks aboard the grounded shuttle Atlantis will determine NASA's launch schedule for the rest of the year, officials said Tuesday.

If Atlantis passes the upcoming fueling test, NASA would be clear to launch the spaceplane around Aug. 11 on a secret military mission. The shuttle Columbia then could be launched around Sept. 9 on a 10-day astronomy flight originally scheduled for takeoff

May 30.

But if Atlantis fails the leak test, only one flight would be able to get off the ground before a high-priority mission in October by the shuttle Discovery to ferry the Ulysses solar probe into space.

Under that scenario, sources said, NASA managers are debating two options:

■ Option No. 1: Haul Atlantis back to the Vehicle Assembly Building, remove it from its external fuel tank and attach it to the tank and boosters originally planned for use by Columbia.

Atlantis then could be hauled back to pad 39A for another fueling test around Aug. 17 and launch on Sept. 10.

■ Option No. 2: Move Atlantis back to the VAB and haul Columbia to pad 39A for a fueling test and launch around Aug. 31.

In both cases, Discovery would remain scheduled for liftoff Oct. 5.

The goal of Wednesday's test is to check for leaks around a flange where Atlantis's 17-inch-wide hydrogen fuel line attaches to a massive "disconnect" fitting that allows the tank to be jettisoned in space.

With Columbia already grounded by a hydrogen leak in its disconnect assembly, NASA managers were forced to ground Atlantis as well earlier this month because of a tiny leak in the fuel line flange area.

NASA spokesman Bruce Buckingham said about two thirds of the bolts tightened easily, implying the joint was looser than engineers would have expected. Officials were hopeful that over tightening the bolts would eliminate the leak.

Denver: Little sign of super Bowl lag

Scrapps Howard News Service

As they wandered into training camp last week, few Denver Broncos players offered a hint of any Super Bowl hangover. They arrived saying they were happy, refreshed and ready to give it that old professional try again. The only thing they weren't? Different.

Coach Dan Reeves might be loath to admit it, but the Broncos stood pat in the offseason. Oh, sure, they threw some money around to acquire nine Plan B free agents. Most will be backups and special-teams players, however.

At the most, three starting positions are open: tight end, right cornerback and inside linebacker.

The Broncos have brought in an army of tight ends in an attempt to pry the starting job from Clarence Kay. That won't be easy. Wymon Henderson isn't as big or fast a cornerback as the Broncos would like. Rick Dennison is going into his ninth year, and the Broncos probably hope fourth-round pick Jeroy Robinson can take his place at inside linebacker.

That's about it, unless rookie guard Jeff Davidson throws his considerable bulk around and makes a difference.

The question is whether this is a team that can afford to stay the course with the same personnel. The Broncos, of course, are banking on a young team getting better. They see all sorts of potential in some of their younger players.

But it's doubtful the young talent has developed enough to close the 55-10 deficit by which everyone judged the Broncos. As the Super Bowl loss to the San Francisco 49ers showed, the Broncos need help at more than three positions if they want to win it all.

They'll go into camp with many of the same faces, and that's not so bad. It's just doubtful it's enough.

■ Jim McMahon showed up at the first day of the Philadelphia Eagles' camp last week wearing a jersey with a question mark on it.

He is hoping to put pressure on third-string quarterback Don McPherson, who wears No. 9, McMahon's number with the Chicago Bears and the San Diego Chargers. McMahon wants the number.

There are a few other numbers McMahon should be worrying about. The first is No. 2. For as long as he is in Philadelphia, McMahon will be second behind Randall Cunningham, barring injury. This is important because McMahon had a habit of warming up on his own last year whenever Chargers quarterback Billy Joe Tolliver was struggling.

The other number McMahon should be pondering is $450,000, try as he might to forget. The Chargers reportedly offered McMahon a contract worth $900,000 this year, or $100,000 more than he made last year. But McMahon's agent, Steve Zucker, wanted $1 million for his client. When Chargers general manager Bobby Beathard heard the demand, he told McMahon to take a hike.

McMahon signed with the Eagles for $450,000.

■ Then there's Los Angeles quarterback Jay Schroeder.

It's not the most magnanimous decision in the world, but let's give Schroeder credit for showing some sense in a sea of insanity.

Schroeder decided to give up the idea of heading out for more money than the $1 million a year the Raiders were offering.

Why? Because he thought he played poorly last season.

"I wasn't happy with the way I played, and I didn't see any possible way I would be (sitting out), because they had the film," he said. "It didn't take a genius to figure it out. I had to be here to prove I could play the game."

■ Last week, Denver quarterback John Elway took a few verbal shots at Brian Bosworth, the mouthy linebacker whom the Seattle Seahawks waived recently.

Elway wasn't alone. This just in from Atlanta Falcons nose tackle Tony Casillas, a former teammate of Bosworth's at the University of Oklahoma:

"It's just another chapter in the book, 'The Fall of The Boz,' coming soon to a bookstore near you. I just hope his acting career lasts longer than his football career."

"I think his next book is probably 'The Fall of The Boz,' but I don't think it's going to be quite as animated as the other one because this one will have facts and the other one didn't."

Casillas — big surprise here — is mentioned prominently and not too fondly in a book Bosworth wrote in 1988.

■ When he's not kicking field goals for the Indianapolis Colts, Dean Biasucci is working on the craft of acting.

Biasucci is playing the role of Marc Antony in an Indianapolis company's production of Julius Caesar. He said he sees some similarities in the two pursuits.

"I've been a football player since I was 9, and it's so natural to me," he said. "Acting is becoming more comfortable to me. After a close game, I'm mentally exhausted. After you give a good performance, you're that way, too."

The Colts and Biasucci's fellow actors differ on whether he should break a leg.

would repeat, but I thought leaving Arizona (spring training) that we would be very, very respectable."

The Cubs lineup and also prohibiting them from offering a catcher in trade for pitching help. Berryhill last week started a two-day rehabilitation assignment.

Carl Lewis' days numbered?

Burrell fraction of second away from world record

SEATTLE (UPI) — Leroy Burrell has officially become the latest challenger to Carl Lewis' decade-long claim on being the world's fastest human.

After Monday's narrow victory over Lewis in the Goodwill Games 100-meter dash, Burrell declared his intentions to break Lewis' world record of 9.92 and to reign as the world's top sprinter through the 1992 Olympic Games.

"I am looking forward to winning some more races this summer to solidify my No. 1 ranking," said Burrell, 23, whose career-best time is 9.94. "I don't think 9.8-something is out of the question; it is an obtainable goal.

But you would need perfect conditions and the perfect race. We all hope for that."

Lewis relinquished his No. 1 ranking after his first loss to his friend and Santa Monica Track Club teammate in six races. He indicated, however, that his domination of the event may not be over.

"There's no doubt Leroy is the best in the world right now," said Lewis. "But I'm in better shape than ever before and there's no doubt in my mind that my best race is ahead of me. We both have better races down the road, which is a good situation for the sport — having two clean sprinters competing to be the best."

Lewis said the competition could include Ben Johnson, who beat Lewis in the 1988 Olympics, only to be stripped of his 100-meter gold medal and world record after testing positive for steroids. Johnson, who admitted to using steroids over an eight-year period, is hoping to be reinstated this fall and to resume his career.

"The race people want a match race between us, but it remains to be seen if Ben Johnson can run clean," said Lewis, who has won six Olympic gold medals and remains the most visible track athlete in the world at 29.

Lewis expressed reservations when a journalist said Johnson was drug-free and running better than ever in training for a September return.

"If he's clean, fine, welcome aboard," Lewis said. "But let's not worry about him now. He was the best in the world because he used drugs and he's going to have to prove he can reach that level clean. I'm not sure he can."

76ers name Gene Shue to GM post

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Gene Shue, a former player and coach in the NBA, accepted his first administrative job Tuesday when he was named general manager of the Philadelphia 76ers.

Shue, who coached for three franchises during his 23-year career, was signed to a two-year contract to replace John Nash, who resigned after last season and was later named general manager of the Washington Bullets.

"He has over 20 years of experience in the NBA and I've always felt he is a tremendous evaluator of talent," Philadelphia owner Harold Katz said in announcing Shue's appointment.

Shue, whose 784 coaching victories rank fourth in NBA history, was fired by the Los Angeles Clippers in January 1989 and most recently worked in the banking and mortgage business in California.

Shue, 58, who coached in Philadelphia from 1973 until 1977, said he approached Katz about the general manager's post because of "a need to continue my career in basketball."

Katz said Shue would initially concentrate on the basketball responsibilities of his position, then move into the business end of the job.

"We hope to get Gene accredited in the next six to nine months and then let him get active in the business end," Katz said. "I will probably add one more person (in the marketing department) but we're pretty satisfied with the way things are going."

David Katz, the owner's son and team vice president, and Gerry Ryan, the business manager, have handled the business duties of the general manager's position since Nash left and have done a good job, Katz said.
