GPSC backs grad assistant training

Plan still under debate: Full Faculty Senate to examine resolution in August before final vote.

By Rob Neff
DE Government/Politics Editor

The Graduate and Professional Student Council voted unanimously Wednesday to support a resolution that would require graduate assistants in SIUC's core curriculum to attend orientation workshops before entering the classroom. The resolution, presented to the council by Ann-Janine Morey, director of the core curriculum at SIUC, would require teaching assistants in the core program to attend workshops offered by the graduate school on sexual harassment, multiculturalism in the classroom, research misconduct and information literacy.

Under the resolution, departments that wish to exempt their core curriculum TAs from attending those workshops would have to submit materials to the graduate school demonstrating that the assistant received comparable training by the department.

The Undergraduate Education Policy Committee of the Faculty Senate will review the resolution Aug. 17, before it is considered by the senate as a whole. Morey said the resolution will become University policy if it is passed by the Faculty Senate.

Harry Daniels, associate dean of the graduate school, pointed out to the council that the school has offered TA training since 1988, and all departments on campus have been "strongly encouraged" to urge their graduate assistants to attend these workshops.

He also pointed out that the four workshops that would be required by the resolution are not the only workshops offered by the school.

Daniels addressed the council on the issue of pay. Some members of the council expressed concern because the period during which graduate students are under contract does not always include the time graduate students would be required to attend the workshops under the resolution.

Daniels told the council that the contract period was arbitrarily decided on by the SIUC Board of Trustees, and included a period between the end of finals week and Dec. 31, for which TAs are paid and are not required to work.

Monty Peerbhai, a graduate student in sociology from Arlington Heights, told Daniels he is happy with the contract.

"I am a teaching assistant," he said. "And I would like to say that the contract does not need to be

Liberal thinkers may have racist views—student

By Rebecca Hutchings
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Hidden racism can be found in everyone including those defining themselves as extremely liberal, according to an SIUC student who conducted a survey of racism on campus for a project in a performance art class.

Carolyn Briggs, a senior in speech communication and theater from Chicago, said her performance, "Am I a Racist? The Deconstructing of a White Girl," reflects on her unawareness of her own racism and others' through the use of the survey.

Carolyn Briggs

"I was reading an article in a magazine about well-meaning people that believe and act as if they aren't racist but really are," Briggs said. "I remember (the article) gave the example of a well-meaning white woman that has a black doctor and makes sure she tells all her friends what a great doctor he is and yet she has a black housekeeper but she doesn't mention that at all."

Straight up: Firemen sharpen rescue skills

By Carey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

What do McAndrew Stadium, Giant City's Shelter One and a 50-foot dry well at the sewer plant have in common? They all are sites where the Carbondale Fire Department's new vertical angle rescue team has been practicing its techniques.

Carbondale Fire Chief Cliff Manis said the nine specially trained firefighters recently went through the 80 hour Vertical Rescue One class taught by the Illinois Fire Service Institute at the University of Illinois.

Manis said interest, physical stamina and shift schedule were a few of the factors involved in choosing the members of the rescue team.

Captain John Michalesko, team coordinator, said the nine men who went through the training are the nucleus of the team, but the remainder of the department will also participate in vertical rescues.

The firefighters who are not a part of the rescue team will do some hauling and pulling of ropes to back up the main team members.

Rusty Rice, a member of the team and a graduate student in occupational safety, said he has enjoyed the training, and it has been a nice break from his daily duties.

"It's a great challenge for our department, especially because we are on an earthquake fault line and catastrophes can happen at any time," Rice said.

Michalesko said two specialists were asked to come to Carbondale for on-site training: Terry Sutphen, coordinator of the Illinois Fire Service Institute at the University of Illinois and an SIUC alumnus, and Bill Renaker, a national expert on the aspects of rescue that involve ropes and rigging.

"We are taking what we learned in school and putting it into practice here," Michalesko said.

Rice said the team members are proud of their training and are enjoying the opportunity to try different types of rescues on their own turf.

"(The training) is an opportunity for us to grow personally and departmentally," Rice said.

Sutphen said he and Renaker have been setting up different rescue scenarios and giving the team problems so they can explore different rescue techniques.

Sutphen said the team simulated a confined space rescue of a

Barney and friends survive battle over federally funded TV service

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Public television and radio, only recently under withering attack from conservative budget-cutters in Congress, have emerged virtually intact from a process that had seemed ready to put Big Bird and Barney out of their government jobs.

The House Appropriations Committee has approved legislation that would trim the Corporation for Public Broadcasting's annual budget by only 8 percent. That's a mere surface wound in the context of ongoing budget battles that have gone for the jocular of federal support for cultural institutions such as CPB, the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Earlier this week, the House panel defeated an amendment that would have eliminated all funding for CPB. The agency, once derided by House Speaker Newt Gingrich as a "little sandbox for the rich," subsidizes the Public Broadcasting Service, National Public Radio and other broadcasting outlets across the country.

The vote reflects the remarkable staying power of an operation that Republicans vowed to abolish in the heady days after the GOP seized control of Congress. But that was before lawmakers were hit by a blizzard of protest from local broadcasters, constituents and devotees of educational children's television.

"There are too many children in America who grew up on Sesame Street," said Rep. John Porter, R-Ill., principal author of the appropriations bill that includes the CPB money. "People feel this is the only real quality children's programming."

KOREAN OIL SPILL SPREAD BY WIND, WAVES — TOKYO—Winds and waves widened South Korea's worst oil spill ever along its pristine southern coast Wednesday, suffocating tens of thousands of fish, wiping out residents' livelihoods and threatening tourists and resort operators in nearby islands. About 120 vessels and two helicopters were fighting to contain the slick, caused when the Sea Prince, a Cyprus-registered tanker, began leaking an estimated 700 tons of fuel oil after running aground in a fierce typhoon Sunday. Korean maritime police said the leak itself had been stopped and that none of the tanker's 83,000 tons of crude oil—which causes more damage than fuel—had escaped from cargo tanks.

MORE MUSLIMS DISPLACED BY SERBS IN BOSNIA — SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina—For the second time in two weeks, Bosnian Serb forces expelled thousands of Muslims from their homes Wednesday, packing dozens of buses and trucks with bedraggled and terrified women, children and elderly people from the U.N.-protected "safe area" of Zepa. More than 2,500 civilians out of Zepa's estimated population of 15,000 were transported away from Serb-controlled areas in the former Muslim enclave by nightfall in a repetition of the practice known as "ethnic cleansing" that has become a notorious symbol of the 39-month-old Bosnian war.

22 YEAR BAN ON ALASKAN OIL EXPORTS LIFTED — WASHINGTON—Congressional moves to lift a 22-year-old ban on Alaskan oil exports will benefit the state's leading oil producer, BP America Inc., as well as Alaska itself, analysts said this week. But critics of ending the ban said it will result in higher gasoline prices on the West Coast because of a decline in domestic oil supplies, and will encourage more oil drilling in Alaska and tanker shipping that could be environmentally damaging. By an overwhelming vote of 324 to 77, the House Monday passed a bill to lift the ban. The Senate passed another version of the same bill in May. The two chambers must now settle differences in the bills before taking a final vote, expected as early as next week. The Clinton administration favors lifting the ban, which the Department of Energy says would spur U.S. oil production, boost government revenue and result in a net increase of as many as 25,000 jobs by the year 2000.

KOREAN WAR MEMORIAL TO BE DEDICATED — WASHINGTON—It is called the forgotten war. But beginning Thursday, the Korean War will be remembered for the ages with the dedication of a memorial honoring the 1.7 million veterans who served in the four-year conflict. "Recognition was long overdue," said Bill Norris, an Army veteran from Halfmoon, N.Y., and founder of the Korean War Veterans Association that labored for a decade to build the 2.2-acre memorial. The monument is an impressive sprawl of images, unlike any other in Washington. Nineteen seven-foot tall soldiers cast in steel and wearing foul weather gear trudge uphill against the backdrop of a 146-foot-long black granite wall. From a distance, the wall appears to be etched with snow-capped mountains, but a closer look reveals the images are of war scenes and of people who served, taken from actual photographs of the war. At the end of the wall is an inscription: Freedom is Not Free.

EMPIRE STATE BUILDING CRASH COMMEMORATED — NEW YORK—Friday, the tower lights atop the Empire State Building will be turned off to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the crash of an Army Air Force B-25 bomber into the structure. Thirteen people were killed, and the world was riveted by the tragedy at one of America's great symbols. Over the years, skyscrapers have grown taller and air crashes deadlier. But for its time, no disaster was more spectacular than what happened in Midtown Manhattan on July 28, 1945, when Fiorello La Guardia was mayor and what was then the world's tallest building was under siege.

Young, 'Youngest in Charge' at head of this week's class

By Dustin Coleman and Christi C. Harber
Daily Egyptian Reporters

Some things just never change. Well, almost never change is a better way to say it, especially in the case of Neil Young Young's new album, "Mirror Ball," is purely Young, but it is a better, crisper Neil Young of yesteryear that we hear. But that is largely due to Pearl Jam, which plays as Young's back-up band through the whole album. In doing so, Eddie and the boys have done for Young what his band Crazy Horse has tried to do in recent years, but have fallen short. Though Young wrote all the songs, and many of the tracks are purely of his genre, it is Pearl Jam which gives the album the new cutting edge that would otherwise sound like a old beat-up band trying its hardest to rock-n-roll.

The opening track, "Song X," is definitely Young. With its grungy, droney guitar chords, the song seems to come from the old scrapbooks of Young's 1970s album, "Rust Never Sleeps."

But on "Peace and Love," with the help of Eddie Vedder on vocals, the band creates an acid-psychedellic rock song reminiscent of "Vitalogy."

Young has always changed styles in order to stay on top of the music scene. From folk to folk-rock and country to punk, Young's agility to seep into so many music genres is solely responsible for his being around so long.

And with "Mirror," Young dives deep into the alterna-grunge genre, with the help of the band that has so brilliantly exploited it.

Many modern bands, such as Sonic Youth and Social Distortion, have mentioned Young as an influence, and after Pearl Young toured with Young a couple of years ago, it was seen as inevitable that they would make an album together.

It is surprising that the album is two parts Pearl Jam and one part Young, but it is evenly lost somewhere between the 1960s and 1990s. Though the album is a really good listen and compilation of two different artists, it is disappointing that Young had to recruit someone else to do so.

The Daisies—"Kowloon House" (IRS)

Many say you can tell whether an album is going to be good or bad by listening to the first sound of the first song. But not in the case of The Daisies. On the first song of "Kowloon House," the band starts out with what sounds to be a good guitar piece, only to be stymied by a rush of pop garbage, and so goes most of the album.

Songs like "Aeroplan Day" and "Day Spent" are not horrible songs, but they just sound like a million other bands coming out of England on a regular basis.

One bright spot on the album is the song "Sunday Drivers," which is a retro-folk song with lead singer Jamie Hyatt complaining about all the small but dreadful things in life.

Though they seem like a talented group of lads, you probably already have a CD that sounds identical to them in your collection.

Brutal Juice—"Mutilation Makes Identification Difficult" (Interscope)

On its newest album, "Mutilation Makes Identification Difficult," Brutal Juice lives up to the Texas riot-rock rep that has tagged so many bands and artists from the Lone Star State.

Playing an acid-psychedellic-rockabilly punk style of music, Brutal Juice has recorded one of the most violent and noisy albums in recent years. With songs like "Kentucky F*** Daddy" and "Cannibal Holocaust," the band has created an album that will probably offend most who listen. But Juice isn't just a bunch of dumb punks. This music is a thinking person's music preaching justice, anarchy, and uh, violence.

Special Ed—"Revelations" (Profile)

After a four-year layoff, Special Ed — the "Youngest in Charge" — returns with his new album, "Revelations." The album's first single, "Neva Go Back," showcases his deep, smooth voice flowing over fresh new samples. He stretches out his skills rapping off beat yet never losing the vibe. Special Ed dismisses all MCs who go commercial and live the hip-hop culture. Unfortunately, the album does not show much diversity, and some of the production could have been a little tighter. Overall it is the same Special Ed format with harder lyrics to present his non-commercial stance.

Dusk arrives for 1995's Sunset Concerts with Chucklehead

By Dustin Coleman
DE Features Editor

Funk music is about a party, said Chucklehead drummer Erik "E-Rock" Attkisson. And party the band will do, he said, as they perform the last show of the Sunset Concerts tonight on the Shryock steps.

"Live music involves getting tuned into an audience," he said. "We are going to lay down a groove and party with the audience."

Chucklehead, a Boston-based band, formed five years ago. It was one of the creators of what is called "new funk."

"Funk is an umbrella term," Attkisson said. "We try to stay away from the term retro, but we are a mix of true funk, but with modernization."

The band is currently on tour supporting its new album, "Fuzz."

The band's first album, "Big Wet Kiss," has sold more than 15,000 copies. Chucklehead also has been seen on MTV more than 90 times on programs such as "MTV Sports" and "Like We Care."

Attkisson said the band started out trying to play hip-hop but evolved into a true funk band, with influences that range from James Brown to Irish music.

Attkisson said the band has now recorded two CDs and has toured extensively, and they enjoy recording and playing live equally.

"It is very safe in a studio, and the outcome can be great," he said. "But you need that contact with the audience in a dark, sweaty place."

Theater brings viewers back to vaudeville days

By Kristi Dehority
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A time machine is not needed to head back to the late 1930s as the Marion Cultural & Civic Center is providing the theater and the 1938 fast-paced comedy "Bringing Up Baby" tonight at 7 p.m.

The MCCC was built originally in 1921 as a movie house, undergoing extensive remodeling and expansion in 1993. The Center currently houses a full-stage theater and a movie screen that descends from the ceiling.

Kevin Graham, assistant director for the MCCC, said the theater's atmosphere and its Summer Classic Movie Series has helped it develop a loyal following.

"What's nice is the facility," he said. "The vaudeville theater — bringing back that time — it's beautifully restored."

The summer series will feature a showing of Alfred Hitchcock's 1951 "Strangers On A Train" on August 3rd and the 1953 western, "Shane," with the classic bad guy Jack Palance, on August 10th.

Graham said they used a different approach than in the past to pick movies for the sixth annual series.

"This year, we chose movies from the Microfilm Cinemanía CD-ROM that has tens of thousands of movies," he said. "The dates range between 1935 to 1955 and are four-star movies."

Graham said "Bringing Up Baby" was chosen because it is considered to be a definitive screwball comedy.

Cary Grant plays a paleontologist who has just found the bone to complete a dinosaur skeleton when Katharine Hepburn and her leopard "Baby" arrive. The leopard steals the bone and Grant and Hepburn end up together.

Graham said the movie is one of the first comedies using established dramatic film stars.

"Grant and Hepburn were both serious actors in a movie with physical comedy boarding on slapstick humor with quick dialogue," he said.

Graham said the MCCC recently added a star walk in front of the theater. For a $100 donation, which goes toward paying off the 1993 renovations to the theater, contributor's names are added to the bricks.

The MCCC is located in the southwest corner of the Tower Square Plaza in Marion.

Silverstone stars as a spoiled materialistic teen whose help for others changes her for the better

I was a little late for the matinee showing of "Clueless" and I arrived just in time to see the tail end of the previews — something about teenagers who are cooler than I am. Words screamed through my head: "Run, run while you still can."

Yes, I admit it, I was a little prejudiced against the whole concept of a movie about a daddy's little rich girl who makes everyone's life better through her excellent fashion sense. The only things I had heard about this film were from my male friends who would try to explain the plot by saying the star was "that chick from the Aerosmith video."

That chick would be Alicia Silverstone, staring as Cher, who leads the idyllic life of a rich high schooler in Los Angeles. She shops, she fixes her hair, she drives around (and over things) in her Jeep.

When she gets her rather unimpressive report card, she decides to argue with her instructors for better grades; all but her debate instructor capitulate. Cher decides that the only thing her teacher needs to be persuaded is to be happy, and so she makes it her mission to fix him up with another single teacher. When the teachers fall for one another, Cher, along with her best friend Dionne, experience the joy of helping others, and it makes a change in them.

Silverstone plays the part of the materialistic teen with an ease which makes one wonder if she has had a lot of practice at it, while the rest of the cast is also well-suited for their fluffy roles.

While Cher is off playing the good samaritan, her ex-stepbrother, Josh (played by Paul Rudd), comes to visit Cher's father, with whom he is on good terms. Josh is a college student who prefers CNN to MTV and philosophy to fashion. Although she claims to despise him, Cher and Josh are friends, and although he thinks she is a superficial twit, guess what? Ah, that's amore!

"Clueless" was written and directed by Amy Heckerling, who has obviously spent too much time in the local mall. But the writing especially is kind of funny, in particular the opening scene with frolicking beautiful young people, and a comment something like "Before you go thinking this is a Noxema commercial..."

Not everyone will like this movie, so I recommend it with a disclaimer: If "Beverly Hills 90210" sends you into convulsions, avoid this like the plague. But amazingly and surprisingly, "Clueless" is kind of cute. Not "Masterpiece Theater." Not Shakespeare. But a nice way to spend two hours in someone else's air conditioning.

Motor-voter falls to Edgar's politics

IT'S A SHAME WHEN A GREAT IDEA GETS sucked into political whirlpools. That's happening to the federal mandate which allows people to register to vote at the same time they apply for a driver's license, a plan nicknamed the Motor-Voter plan. However, the issue goes beyond the typical partisan bantering politicians are known for. What originally was designed to help the American people become involved in the voting process is being turned into what seems to be a Republican method of excluding would-be voters who are traditionally Democratic.

Gov. Jim Edgar, a Republican, has done everything in his power to stop the mandate from ever getting started in Illinois. He even took the issue to court. But now that a federal judge has forced him to get the plan started, the governor has set up a redundant system by which people who register under motor-voter can vote in national elections, but not state and local elections. When this system is implemented Aug. 1, state and local elections registration will require a separate process, effectively eliminating motor-voter's purpose of making voting registration easier.

WHY CREATE A TWO-TIERED SYSTEM THAT seems to, by design, create twice as much work and cost so much more? The governor's office has claimed the main reason for such a system is to combat "Chicago" voter fraud. Gov. Edgar's spokesman Eric Robinson said Cook County has received worldwide fame for its voter fraud and because of this the governor needs to protect the integrity of the Illinois voting system.

But this makes no sense. The Illinois voting system uses a one-tiered system in every other form of voter registration. A potential voter can register for both federal and state elections at the same time. But not so with motor-voter. It is this inconsistency that points toward political motivation, rather than good intentions. Nearly 40 other states have implemented a one-tiered motor-voter system without any major voting violations. Given that fact, it is clear what is happening with motor-voter in Illinois.

THE GOVERNOR IS PLAYING POLITICS WITH A great idea, and he is not being coy about it. The majority of people affected by this complicated system will be those who would take advantage of the easier registration process: the poorer and younger voters. Traditionally, these voters have been Democratic. By deliberately making the state and local registration process harder, it seems the governor is making registration more difficult for Democratic voters.

Even Cook County Clerk David Orr says this reasoning is based on the fallacy that people are always going to vote partisan, citing that nationally, even with motor-voter, Republicans swept the 1994 elections. Aside from partisan issues, Orr also said the two-tiered system will cost his office $1.5 million. A one-tiered system would cost about $50,000.

It is clear the governor is afraid of this new mandate. In the past he has tried to kill it. He couldn't. Now, having no choice but to implement it, he is doing everything he can to destroy the spirit of the mandate. This is a travesty for all concerned, especially the voters.

Commentary

Future of affirmative action unclear

By E.J. Dionne Jr.
 The Washington Post

President Clinton's review of affirmative action could have come out quite differently. What pushed the president toward the unequivocal position he eventually took was a series of Supreme Court decisions—on school integration, voting rights and affirmative action itself—that African Americans regarded as one slap in the face after another.

Absent the court decisions, Clinton might have reformed here and cut back there, especially on business set-asides, and carved out the "centrist" position he seems to be seeking on so many other issues. The court, according to people familiar with the president's review, made such an approach impossible.

Partly, the court's "Adarand" decision had already imposed new limits on affirmative action. Simply obeying the decision will force many of the changes Clinton might have proposed himself, and perhaps more.

But Clinton was also worried about the tone he was setting. In the wake of the court actions, any pairing back of affirmative action would have seemed of a piece with a broader assault on the achievements of the civil rights era.

Many African Americans have begun to look upon the late 1990s as eerily parallel to the late 1890s. Then, the civil rights advances of Reconstruction were rolled back and replaced by segregation and black disenfranchisement. Now, there is the increasingly vocal and pointed attack on the Second Reconstruction of the 1960s. Clinton was not about to join, or even be perceived as joining, such an offensive.

Clinton was not alone in his discomfort with the country's direction on civil rights. That helps explain why his speech won such favorable comment. Even some longstanding critics of affirmative action expressed respect for the president's position, no doubt because it was a relief to hear unapologetic talk about the imperative of keeping at the struggle for equality.

The sense that something is badly wrong in black-white relations also explains the unusual split in the Republican Party on how to proceed on this question. As always where issues of civil rights are concerned, former housing secretary Jack Kemp was in the forefront, warning his party not to run "a campaign that separates people by race and by gender."

But this time, Kemp was far from alone among conservatives. House Speaker Newt Gingrich wants to stall any Republican moves against affirmative action until his party has something to put in its place. Former education secretary William Bennett was quite pointed in criticizing California Gov. Pete Wilson's aggressive stance against affirmative action, even though Bennett, unlike Kemp, agrees with the substance of Wilson's view.

Speaking Sunday on "Meet the Press," Bennett noted that Wilson had signed 21 affirmative action bills in the past. "Those who have come to this opportunistically—or if it looks like they've come to it opportunistically—are not going to serve themselves and they're not going to serve the party," Bennett said.

Clinton and Kemp, Gingrich and Bennett all revealed something utterly surprising: that there still are moral issues in politics—and that some politicians are capable of recognizing them as such and acting accordingly. With an issue such as race, it matters not only what you say—what "position" you take—but also how you say it. No, crass politics was not completely absent even in this case. It's undoubtedly true that Clinton's stand on affirmative action gained him important ground with African Americans and liberals who had been railing against him on other matters. For Clinton, even the most carefully crafted moderate stand would have satisfied no one—reforms would have been seen as a sell-out by affirmative action's supporters and a fig leaf by its opponents. Gingrich and his Republican allies have made their own political calculation: hard-core opponents of affirmative action aren't likely to vote Democratic anyway, so Republicans might as well appeal to a broader constituency by at least looking moderate and inclusive.

Still, it's cynical to assume that politics is all these politicians were thinking about. Their stand also reflects the fact that the past six months have seen a large shift in the direction of the affirmative-action debate. Affirmative action will be changed, if not by the voters then by the courts.

The discussion has forced Americans to consider what message they want to send about the country's commitment to racial equality—which is why those court decisions loomed so large for Clinton. Many, including some affirmative-action critics, have come to realize that simply junking affirmative action will send the wrong message—and that coming up with alternative approaches to promoting equality is much harder than they thought.

That, fundamentally, was the president's message. In this case, at least, he chose not to reflect an existing consensus but to try to forge a new one.

Self-expression or one hot meal: A consumer's desperate dilemma

A consumer's soliloquy:

To speak or not to speak — That is the question. Whether to let a mistake perpetuate itself through ignorance to save a little time and trouble, or to raise an issue to the fore, purging our world of inefficiency and poor service.

When I ordered a club sandwich recently and was delivered a sub sandwich (sub, club — they do sound alike I guess), these words weren't exactly what ran through my mind, but I did feel dramatically insulted.

Food is a special thing. I find food I have not prepared myself to be especially special — expectation is an important part of this. In a restaurant, you order your food from the waitress, then watch as mouth-watering entrees are bestowed upon those seated nearby. You squirm impatiently as the warm spicy aromas from the kitchen tease your stomach to a rumbling frenzy screaming — GIVE ME MY FOOD!

So when what you get is not what you expect, there is more at stake than just a messed up order. Your very happiness has been trod upon, your hopes and dreams of the last half hour dashed.

How many things like this do we put up with, and what if we all fought for exactly what we wanted? Where does one draw the line, keep the peace, get along, be nice — and when do you speak up and demand satisfaction?

I don't blame the servers of this world — please don't think I bear grudges or feel I am being singled out. I am not a bitchy person by nature. If I were I would not bother to ask these questions. The very thought of confrontation troubles me.

But is being meek really going to get me anywhere in this world? Oh sure, there are humble people who have met with success — folks like Jimmy Carter, Lyle Lovett, Paul Simon, Mother Theresa and Joe DiMaggio. Unfortunately, either being meek makes you funny looking, or these people are successful because everyone who served them said, "Oh yeah, the funny looking guy — I remember what he ordered."

Thus they had fewer disappointments, and never got discouraged enough to fail.

The sub has been placed before me, and my mouth waters as I take in the tart aroma of bacon, lettuce and tomatoes. If I ask for what I really want, at best I'll be left drooling on my empty plate for five more endless minutes (we all drool, don't pretend you don't — I drool a lot, especially in public places where attractive, poised, successful assertive people are sure to see me).

I'm raving now. I know I'm blowing this all out of proportion. I won't actually say anything — just think and think and think.

Oh gosh, my sub is getting cold. I guess I better eat it.

speech communication 574, SIUC students are doing solos of performance art on political and often taboo subjects, according to Ron Pelias, instructor of the course.

Briggs is presenting her final, performance art on racism, today at 11 a.m. in the Kleinau Theater.

Briggs said she found SIUC students tend to be less racist than those she surveyed from the surrounding community.

Briggs said some of the questions she asked included: Do you consider yourself racist? Is your family racist? What do you think of affirmative action? How many friends do you have of a different race? Do you use racial language or laugh at racial jokes?

The survey included closed and open-ended questions.

"She asked good questions," Adeline Anthony, a freshman in electrical engineering from Malaysia, said. "I think by her questions she accomplished what she wanted to know."

Briggs said everyone surveyed had used racial language or laughed at racial jokes.

"I can't tell if people are telling the truth, but I asked them to be honest," Briggs said. "I really liked one comment a girl put about racial language. She wrote 'Of course, (I use racial language) who hasn't — you can't escape it.'"

Briggs said rather than attempting to gather statistical data, she collected individual quotes and opinions on racism.

Briggs said although her liberal family does not condone racism, she realizes now that they are racist in some ways.

"I think that hidden and educated racism is sometimes worse and more dangerous than uneducated racism," Briggs said. "I wanted to recognize my own racism and try to help others recognize their racism that they may not be aware of."

Other students in the class are doing performance art on pornography, abortion, gender identity and violence, according to Ron Pelias, a professor in speech communication.

"We occasionally have people that try to censor the class because of the extreme political issues, but for the most part our discussions stay within the class itself and it works as a lab for students to deal with their own beliefs," Pelias said.

"The University is generally supportive on the standpoint of protecting the student's interest."

SIUC alumna teaches children reality of limitations

By Christi C. Harber
Daily Egyptian Reporter

For the love of children, an SIUC alumna directs a summer camp for girls to help them realize what it is like to be physically challenged.

Mary Dippe, a 1983 SIUC graduate from Herrin, now serves as a summer program administrator for a girls scout camp through West Williamson County Service Unit.

"I love working with kids, and this camp gives me the opportunity to do it," Dippe said.

"For the past four years, I worked on the planning committee for the girl scout camp, and this year, I am in charge," she said.

"During the summer, we pick a time and a month that will be good for the girls to come."

This year's theme, "Physically Challenged," was chosen to help the young ladies understand what it is like to have a disability, Dippe said.

"We have done activities to teach the girls what it would possibly be like if they were blind, deaf or in a wheelchair," Dippe said.

"They were blindfolded and had to lead each other around, we played deaf games — they had to act out what they were saying without talking, and hiking around campus and relating it to if we were in a wheel chair."

Lindsay Reynolds, a 9-year-old from Carterville, said she has learned how to be helpful to disabled students.

"I think it's nice to learn about it so if there is a blind person who needs to cross the street, you can ask him if you can help him and not tell him," Reynolds said.

On Wednesday, the girls participated in arts and crafts at the Student Center Craft Shop making necklaces.

Laurn Pyatt, an 11-year-old from Carterville, said she enjoys the arts and crafts the most.

"I am thinking about coming to SIU when it is time to go to college because (by) coming to the camp, I have seen how many things I can do," Pyatt said.

Dippe said that on Thursday, the girls will go to the Student Recreation Center and participate in wall climbing, wheelchair basketball, frisbee and jump roping.

On Friday, they are going fishing with the U.S. Forestry Service at Campus Lake, eat lunch at McDonalds and go swimming at Campus Beach.

"The girls are going to be able to fill out an evaluation about the camp, choose the prizes for next year's cookie sales and design a patch for next year's camp," Dippe said.

things seem to be going in the right direction," said Michael Shoenfeld, senior vice president for corporate communications at CPB.

Indeed, the agency might have to refight this battle on several fronts. There will likely be another effort to strip CPB funds from the appropriations bill when it goes before the full House, perhaps as early as next week, although Porter predicted the effort would fail. The issue could be reopened later this year or next, when Congress is expected to consider separate legislation to reauthorize the whole agency. And many Republicans say they remain committed to phasing out federal support for CPB, but want to ensure enough time to let the agency find other sources of revenues.

"Everybody assumes CPB's federal funding will be gone," said Rep. Scott Klug, R-Wis., a leading proponent of privatizing federal functions. "The question is how long the phaseout is."

Klug said the phaseout would likely be more than three years, which could delay the day of reckoning until early in the next century. That gives CPB plenty of time to win a reprieve.

"It is extremely frustrating," said Tim Graham, a CPB critic with the conservative Media Research Center. "By 1998, the House may be back in Democratic hands. The pessimistic conservative would say, kill it now before we lose power."

At stake in the debate is a tiny sliver of federal spending. CPB's budget, which Congress appropriates two years in advance, is set for $260 million in fiscal 1997. The bill approved by the House committee would cut 1998 funding to $240 million. The committee rejected the amendment to abolish all funding by a resounding 14-40 vote, with 17 Republicans joining in opposition.

Already the House has voted to cut the budgets of the National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities by 40 percent each, and is moving to abolish the agencies after two years.

The CPB seemed headed for a similar fate when Republicans took control of Congress last fall. Conservatives saw a golden opportunity to abolish an agency that supported broadcasting they believed was biased against conservative causes. Within days after being named House speaker, Gingrich, R-

Ga., said he hoped to "zero out" funding for CPB.

But before long, lawmakers were deluged with complaints from a much broader constituency: Fans of Masterpiece Theatre. Baby boomer parents who see Sesame Street as the last refuge of decent kids' TV. Local broadcasters who depend on the lifeline of federal funds.

Now, even CPB's most florid critic has softened his rhetoric. In a recent radio interview—carried in Washington on a National Public Radio affiliate—Gingrich said he regretted the inflammatory way he began the year's debate on public broadcasting.

"I sent the wrong signal," Gingrich said. "The point I was trying to make was that of course we ought to have public radio and of course we ought to have public television but ... I believe we can."

changed. We are happy with our contract."

Peebhah did raise concerns, however, about a clause in the resolution passed by the council which supported "the review of English language proficiency programs for graduate and teaching assistants."

The resolution had originally supported the "further development" of such a program but was changed by a friendly amendment made in response to Peebhah's objections.

Peebhah's objections were based on a policy on English proficiency explained to the council by Daniels.

Daniels said native English speakers are tested for English proficiency informally by the head of their respective departments.

However, non-native English speakers, which includes international students as well as Americans who the department heads feel do not speak English as their first language and may not be fluent, are subject to stricter testing.

Peebhah said that including Americans who may not be fluent in English in the category of students who would be tested more strictly than native English speakers was subjective and provided an opportunity for abuse by those with discriminatory beliefs.

While Peebhah acknowledged that such testing is mandated by state law, he pointed out that the procedures within the University are not mandated and should be reviewed for fairness.

Peebhah is not a member of the council and could not offer an amendment to the resolution, but he asked the 15 members in attendance to offer an amendment calling for fairness and objectivity in the review process. No members offered such an amendment.

Local government groups dispute Edgar's motor-voter plan

By Donita Polly
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Gov. Jim Edgar's two-tier motor-voter plan, which would register voters for federal elections but not state elections, met with Democratic opposition at Wednesday's press conference in the Mississippi Room of the Student Center.

Cook County Clerk David Orr, Jackson County Democratic Chair Jerry Compton and the Jackson County League of Women Voters criticized Edgar's two-tier plan.

The one-tier plan supported by Orr, Compton and the league follows the national mandate and would make voter registration available for all elections at the driver's license facility.

Orr said Edgar's plan, which — unlike the federal motor-voter plan — would not register voters for state elections, would confuse voters. Orr said it also would create excessive costs to local governments.

"If people think they're registering for all offices, they will be devastated when they find out that they aren't registered for state and local offices," Orr said. "This could lead to mass confusion at the polls."

The motor-voter plan is an unfunded mandate which requires driver's license facilities to make registering for state, local and national elections available to people when they register their vehicles.

Orr, Compton and the League of Women Voters want the national motor-voter law to be passed as-is in Illinois and for Edgar to reconsider the one-tier system.

Clara McClure, Carbondale Township supervisor and a league member, said she urges people to petition Edgar, Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-DuQuoin, and State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, to support the one-tier plan.

"We encourage people to register to vote," McClure said. "But we want to register people for all offices."

Eric Robinson, a spokesman for Edgar, said the governor supports the two-tier motor-voter plan because he is concerned with election fraud under the one-tier plan.

"The Illinois law (Edgar's two-tier plan) takes steps to make sure Illinois voter rights are protected from voter fraud," Robinson said.

Orr said there is no evidence to support Edgar's claim that the one-tier law would lead to more fraud.

"Twenty-six states have mail registration without instances of voter fraud," Orr said. "If people do cheat, the punishment will be much worse because they'll be subject to federal law."

Orr said the amount of money required to support the unfunded mandate is not as much as the amount Edgar is spending to fight it.

"The governor is spending more money fighting the motor-voter plan than just implementing it into a uniform system," he said.

State Rep. David Phelps, D-Eldorado, was scheduled to be at the press conference but could not attend.

Islamic militants and Serbian nationalists focus of search in subway car bombing

The Los Angeles Times

PARIS—French investigators analyzing the wreckage of the subway car destroyed in Tuesday's fatal bombing remained silent Wednesday about their findings, as security was stepped up across France and other European countries.

Callers believed by police to be pranksters heightened a general state of public alarm in France by calling in at least 31 fake bomb threats during the day, in one case causing the evacuation of 8,000 visitors from the Louvre.

Three more of the people severely burned in the bombing died Wednesday, raising the death toll of the rush-hour attack to seven; 11 of the dozens injured remained hospitalized in critical condition.

With all of Paris wondering whether the blast was a one-time occurrence or a frightening signal of more terror to come, Interior Minister Jean-Louis Debre took the unusual step of offering a reward of 1 million francs (about $220,000) to anyone providing information that would lead to the arrest of the bombers.

Late Wednesday afternoon, Prime Minister Alain Juppe said investigators were following "several possible hypotheses," but were unwilling to reveal any details. "You will understand that in this kind of inquest, as long as we have no certitude, discretion is a must," he said.

But government spokesman Francois Baroin said investigators were focusing on two leads: the possibility that Islamic militants from Algeria had planted the powerful, skillfully timed bomb; and the possibility that Serbian nationalists, angered by recent French military activities in Bosnia-Herzegovina, had done it.

1995 Summer Semester Final Exam Schedule

Because of the limited number of examination periods available, no departmental examination times are scheduled for the Summer. The following points are pertinent to the final examination schedule:

1. The class final exam period is scheduled based on the meeting time and days listed on the first line of the class entry in the up-to-date Schedule of Classes book (which should be the same as the first printed line for the section on the registered student's schedule print-out). For example, a class section is listed in the Schedule in the manner:

07:30 - 8:30 TR
08:40 - 09:40 WF

The scheduled class time for the first line of the entry starts with "07" and the meeting days for that line are "TR". Therefore the exam time is 10:00 - 11:50 a.m. Thursday, August 3, as is indicated on the Summer 1995 Final Examination Schedule.

Classes that meet less than the entire semester should hold their exams during the last regularly scheduled class session prior to final examinations.

It is a policy of the University that no final examination be given prior to the scheduled final examination period, and that students be given their examinations at the designated times. Any deviation from this policy must be approved by the Dean of the College.

2. Classes should plan to hold their final examination in their regularly scheduled classrooms. The space scheduling section of the Office of Admissions and Records will forward to departments information relative to the location for examinations for those classes that cannot hold their examinations in their regularly scheduled rooms because of a space conflict. This will be done sufficiently in advance of the final examination days to provide adequate notice for all.

3. Students who find they have more than three examinations on one day may petition, and students who have two examinations scheduled at one time should petition their academic dean for approval to take an examination during the make-up examination period on the last day. Provision for such a make-up examination period does not mean that students may decide to miss the scheduled examination time and expect to make it up during this make-up period. This period is to be used only for students whose petitions have been approved by their dean.

4. Students who must miss a final examination may not take an examination before the time scheduled for the class examination. Information relative to the proper grade to be given students who miss a final examination and are not involved in a situation covered in the preceding paragraph will be found in the mimeographed memorandum forwarded to members of the instructional staff at the time they receive the final grade listing for the recording of grades.

5. One credit-hour courses, and classes scheduled for meeting dates less than the full 8-week session have their examinations during the last regularly scheduled class period prior to the two formal exam days.

6. Other classes (those scheduled for the full 8-week session) should hold their final exams according to the following:

Tarkanian takes on recruiting policy controversy

The Sporting News

If anyone was going to take a chance on Richie Parker, the star guard from New York whose felony sexual-abuse conviction has scared away school after school, I figured it would be Jerry Tarkanian and his desperate-for-talent Fresno State program.

Tarkanian, after all, has never been afraid of controversy, which is exactly what Parker's signing would bring. But Tarkanian is taking a pass—for now—on Parker.

"I told his people he should go to junior college and start his life over," Tarkanian says. "I think if he goes to any four-year school now he's going to be subjected to harassment—and so is his school."

Tarkanian could use Parker, who averaged 28 points last season. Tarkanian could use anyone these days. But Parker, he says, needs anonymity and a new reputation.

"He needs to show people he's a good citizen," Tarkanian says. "He needs to start his life over."

Tarkanian, who didn't rule out recruiting Parker as a juco, knows the feeling. After his painful divorce from Nevada-Las Vegas, followed by a short, failed stint with the San Antonio Spurs, accompanied by assorted health concerns, followed by semi-retirement, Tarkanian is back at his alma mater.

"I really enjoy it up here," he says. "They treat me so good. And I like our team. I don't think we're going to be great, but I really like the guys. I feel like they're totally committed."

Fresno State finished 13-15 overall, 7-11 in the Western Athletic Conference. Anything .500 or better this season would prompt city fathers to organize a parade. It's possible, especially with freshman forward Terrance Roberson, who verbally committed to Michigan and then signed with Fresno State.

What Tarkanian is really waiting for is the 1996-97 season, when Boston College transfer guard Chris Herrin becomes eligible. Herrin, considered a can't-miss prospect when he signed with Boston College in '94.

Patriots

fans. Parcels still needs another offseason to complete the job he started in 1993, when he came out of the broadcast booth and walked into the job that had eaten up and spit out so many who had come before him.

"Hey, look, just because you win a few games doesn't mean that things are perfect," Parcels says. "There's a lot to do here."

This is no finished product. But right now, we have an opportunity to try to continue on and do something. That's why you coach, and that's why you play."

Even with last year's impressive run into the American Football Conference wild-card playoffs, it is difficult to understand why the Patriots' Super Bowl '95 bandwagon has suddenly become so crowded.

After all, there are some serious deficiencies on this roster.

For starters, there is the backfield situation, where Parcels appears ready to establish a running-backs-by-committee approach.

With Marion Butts playing himself off the roster last year, Parcels now goes to a quicker backfield with David Meggett, Corey Croon and rookie Curtis Martin.

Sure, it helps to have the best young quarterback in football.

But let's face it, Parcels is a Northeast coach, someone who is more comfortable having a big back for when the weather gets nasty.

And what about those renowned receivers—Vincent Brisby, Ray Crittenden and Kevin Lee? Tight end Ben Coates can't do it alone.

As for the defense, it's too bad Parcels couldn't get his hands on the "real" Reggie White.

Instead, he had to settle for the San Diego Chargers castoff with the same name, as well as journeymen Jon Hand, Mike Jones and Tun Roberts.

The linebackers and secondary are above average, but let's not confuse this defense with Parcels' old New York Giants teams.

Parcels has done a magnificent job pulling the Patriots off the ledge in only 30 months on the job.

It is one of the most stunning turnarounds you will see, and one that will result in a Super Bowl championship before long.

Now is not the time, though. Not just yet.

Word broke in the 49ers' locker room a few minutes after last Friday afternoon's practice:

Deion Sanders was coming back to San Francisco.

Item: In a frantic call to 911 last week, the wife of Minnesota Vikings quarterback Warren Moon complains he hit and choked her during a heated argument. Moon agrees to counseling after he and his wife make up.

Item: In May, Moon reaches an out-of-court agreement with a former Vikings cheerleader who alleges he sexually harassed her last season.

Item: Last week, Houston police charge linebacker Broderick Thomas with carrying a weapon in a secured area of the airport. One day earlier, Thomas was arrested for unpaid traffic tickets.

Item: Last January, a former Vikings coaches secretary accuses defensive backs coach Richard Solomon of sexual harassment.

Fulling

Going into his final season, Fulling said he has set a few goals for himself this year.

"I just want to stay competitive with the senior class, be a team leader and hopefully qualify for the NCAAs," he said.

Fulling said he will miss several things about SIUC when he graduates.

"I'll miss the teammates, the meets, the competition and believe it or not, getting up early in the morning," he said.

"But the friends that I made I'll keep for the rest of my life."

Walker said he will miss Fulling and the rest of the seniors on the team because their freshman year was his first year as head coach at SIUC.

"This is a very special group that I will be saying goodbye to," he said.

"As a matter of fact, there are several of those those guys I wish the NCAA would give extra years just to keep them around."

Barnhart said there will be intramural T-shirts given as prizes, and Papa John's Pizza is combining with Pepsi Cola to help sponsor the event, donating food and drink.

Today is the last day of registration for the beach bash, with a mandatory captain's meeting slated for 5 p.m. in the Rec Center's Alumni Lounge. Schedules for the competitions will be posted by 2 p.m. on Friday.

BE LESS PRODUCTIVE AT THE OFFICE.

The office has always been a place to get ahead. Unfortunately, it's also a place where natural resources can fall behind. So here are some easy ways to reduce waste at the office. Turn off your lights when you leave. Drink out of a mug instead of throwaway cups. And to cut down on trash, use both sides of a memo. Doing these things today will help save resources for tomorrow.

Cedar Lake's bike trail challenges riding gurus

Evel Knievel would have loved it! The bike trail located on the east side of Cedar Lake is one of the best in Illinois according to local bike enthusiasts.

Matt Doll, a junior in psychology from Roscoe, said the trail is not one for an inexperienced off road biker though.

"This place is nuts — nothing you'd expect," Doll said. "If you have ever been riding in state parks, this is nothing like it."

"If you mess up you could end up going over the edge of a cliff."

Only bike equipment in top condition should be used on the trail, Doll said.

"If you have crappy brake pads — you'll die," Doll said. "All the braking power you can get is needed for some of the two and three story drops on the trail.

"I wouldn't go out there without a bike with toe clips and an air pump with extra inner tubes because you can easily get a flat."

Unique bluffs, rock formations as well as cliffs line the trail as Doll said the view is the one of his favorite things about Cedar Lake trail.

"The scenery out there is just gorgeous," he said. "It's definitely the best place I've ridden in Illinois."

Andy Rohrer, a senior in food and nutrition from Naperville, said the trail, in addition to being one of the best trails in Southern Illinois, is also the toughest.

"It's pretty cool — your bike is definitely put to the test," Rohrer said. "I take my friends from out of town out there to show them what real trail riding is like."

Technical riding skills are utilized during most of the ten mile trail, he said.

"There are some sharp declines and you really have to pay attention because there is plenty of danger involved," Rohrer said. "I hold back on some of the jumps so I don't get hurt."

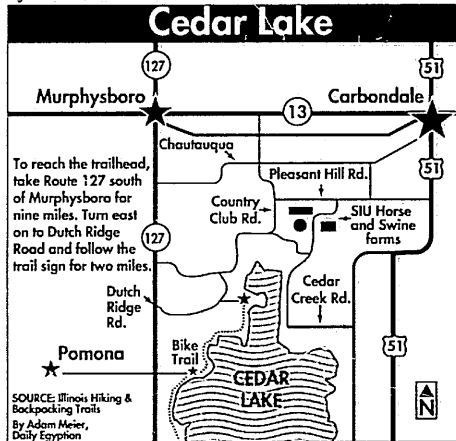

Cedar Lake is jointly owned as the north half is owned and operated by the City of Carbondale and the southern half by the United States Department of Agriculture Forest Services.

Tudi Smith, unit manager for the Murphysboro Ranger District, said the south end is used mostly for fishing.

"The primary purpose of Cedar Lake is to provide water for Carbondale but people use it for recreation," Smith said.

Camping is permitted along the bike trail at primitive tenting sites (no facilities) 150 yards away from the shore of the lake.

The lake features walleye.

Bash to offer fun, volleyball

By Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Anyone wanting to sling shot large water balloons at the Student Recreation Center director will be able to Saturday at the Volleyball Beach Bash.

Nathan Barnhart, a graduate assistant at the Rec Center, said this will be just one of the many activities put together for the event, which will be held at the Campus Lake beach from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

"I just talked Bill McMinn (the director) into the idea today (Wednesday)," Barnhart said. "We were planning on having a moving target floating out on the lake, but then we decided to ask Bill to take the target's place. He's being a pretty good sport about it."

"Everyone will be able to take a pot shot at him."

As well as the water balloon toss, there will be a 2-on-2 and 4-on-4 sand volleyball competition (open division) with double elimination and a sand castle building contest.

"We haven't had an outdoor volleyball tournament before because of lack of interest," Barnhart said. "We're trying to get people to come out just for the fun of it."

Paul Williams, who is also a graduate assistant at the Rec Center, said student turnout will depend on the weather.

"If the weather holds up, we could get quite a few teams out there and people coming by to see what is going on at the beach, watching the water balloon toss," he said. "This time, we've decided to moved the tournaments to the beach to create a more recreational type atmosphere."

"This will be a good opportunity for summer semester students to use the beach and have fun in the sand, but we're trying to get everyone involved," Williams said. "It is primarily

Patriots a good 1995 team, not Super Bowl champ yet

Newsday

Please dispense with all this New-England-Patriots-are-going-to-the-Super-Bowl talk already?

For crying out loud, the Pats are less than three years removed from a 2-14 disaster, and all anyone in New England can think about is going to play the National Football Conference champion in January at Phoenix.

"Everywhere you go, you hear, 'You guys are going to the Super Bowl. You guys are doing this or whatever,'" says quarterback Drew Bledsoe, whose new seven-year, $42 million contract has done little to rein in the excitement.

But even with Coach Bill Parcells in the third year of his impressive rebuilding plan, the Patriots still aren't ready to make those Super Bowl reservations just yet.

Not with a suspect running game. Not with a defense that's not as dominant as it needs to be. Not with a group of obscure wide receivers. And not with the Miami Dolphins standing in their way.

Now for the good news: The Patriots are going to be one hell of a team this season. Even with the monster schedule at the beginning of the season, when they open against the Cleveland Browns, Miami Dolphins and San Francisco 49ers, the Patriots are going to be a major factor.

But ease up on the euphoria, Pats

Saluki swimmer ahead in the pool and in the classroom

By Eric Helbig
Daily Egyptian Reporter

As a Missouri Valley Conference record holder, one might expect SIUC swimmer Doug Fulling to be set only on bettering his times and concentrating on swimming. However, SIUC men's swimming coach Rick Walker said Fulling is more than just another talented swimmer.

"Doug brings a lot more than just his talent — he's a team leader,"

Walker said. "We've had several conversations about being a leader. He expects it out of himself."

Fulling, however, downplayed his role of team leader.

"We really don't have team captains," Fulling said. "It's a different leader every day that we go out."

Walker said Fulling is a very positive and motivated athlete who also is very concerned about academics.

"He realizes that sports is secondary for him," Walker said. "His major function at SIUC is as a student."

Walker continued, "As I'm just starting a family, he's who I would like my kids to be influenced by."

The senior will begin his season at the home opening meet Oct. 21 against both Evansville and Drury College, slated for 12 p.m.

Fulling said SIUC's victories at the Eastern Independent Conference championship and the MVC championship last year were big accomplishments for him and the team, as was setting the MVC record in the 100-meter freestyle.

Fulling said it was exposure to a family member who swam that first got him interested in swimming at the age of 12.

"My younger brother started swimming, and I just kind of tagged along to all of his meets," Fulling said. "I got bored with watching him and decided to try it."

Fulling said his success in swimming led him to drop the other sports that he was interested in when he was younger.

"It was competitive in other sports before, like baseball and basketball," he said. "As I succeeded in swimming I gradually gave up the other sports."
