Landlords called zoning 'culprits'

By Charlotte Jones
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Mayor Neal Eckert singled out landlords in northwest Carbondale Wednesday as "key culprits" in zoning problems facing the City Council.

In an interview on the nettlesome problem, which last surfaced at a public hearing Tuesday night, Eckert provided this assessment:

"Landlords are the key culprits in problems facing the council in the northwest section."

Landlords, for instance, stand to gain more than students if cooperatives where three or more tenants share a dwelling are allowed in the single-family zone in the district, said the mayor.

Landlords, too, are causing problems by not putting any of their rent money back into their holdings for maintenance, causing neighborhood property values to drop, he said. "It's very unfair to both the tenants and the homeowners."

Eckert's assessment was the latest development in a touchy—and somewhat confusing—problem aired but not decided Tuesday night.

Embroiled in the controversy are:

—Homeowners, who complain their living environment is going downhill because of too many tenants crowded into rental housing.

—Landlords, some of whom complain that they own houses in the single-family district that are too large to rent profitably to single families.

—Students, who rent the houses, apparently in numbers greater than permitted by existing city ordinance.

—City officials, who are trying to deal with a complicated zoning issue while, as Eckert put it, homeowners in the affected district are worried the proposed ordinance won't be any more effective than the existing one.

The proposal itself envisions no radical changes, said assistant planner Don Monty.

The northwest section, Area 1, is bounded by Pecan Street on the south, railroad tracks on the north, Oakland Avenue on the west and the business district on the east. It would remain single-family under the proposed ordinance.

Area 2 is bounded by Pecan on the north, Walnut Street on the south, business district on the east, and Oakland on the west.

Under the proposal, cooperatives in Area 2 would be limited according to the size of the house. The average two-bedroom house, for instance, could have four tenants.

Positions of the various interest groups on the proposal:

—Students, represented by Dean of Students Bruce Swinburne, and Forest "Rusty" Lightle of the Student Tenant Union, urged delay. Swinburne said the council should postpone action until fall because too many students are away for the summer to tell what the housing situation will be when fall classes start. Lightle said zoning in Area 1 could be passed, but further research is needed to determine where students can go if forced out of cooperatives in Area 2 by new restrictions.

—Landlords—in the assessment of city officials—want Area 2 expanded northward to an unspecified point.

—Homeowners in Area 1 want enforcement of whatever ordinance takes effect in their district. Little, if any reaction, has come from this quarter in Area 2.

Lack of enforcement of ordinances on cooperative housing—apparently the stickiest point in the controversy—is attributed by code enforcement officials to understaffing in their department and the fact that this area of enforcement has not gotten priority in the past.

Hopeful couples face long wait for children

By Dave Stearns

Transracial adoptions--III

An orphan shortage exists in Southern Illinois.

Currently, 214 couples in Southern Illinois are waiting to adopt children. Only 15 children are available.

Meanwhile, contradictory information flows out of the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS)—while policies against transracial adoption have evolved into a somewhat 'laissez faire' attitude discouraging the possibility of channeling tens of thousands of Vietnamese-American orphans to couples in the United States.

A committee has been formed in Carbondale—yet to be titled—to attempt to improve the adoption situation in Illinois.

Raye Beatty, a Carbondale member of the committee, said it is trying to find out which facets of adoption need the most help. One problem seems to be that the DCFS lacks personnel to conduct home case studies on couples wishing to adopt. "We could acquire Vietnamese and Korean orphans through organizations like 'Hope' or 'Friends of Children,' and follow up on the adoption with supervision of the home," Beatty suggested. "We would be open to any race. The present policy discouraging transracial adoptions—we don't accept it."

The Adoption Program Evaluation Committee, in a report submitted June 1 of this year, suggested a similar solution for the lack of case studies being made because of understaffed area offices. According to the report "It is recommended that the department enter into joint planning with voluntary adoption agencies in order to more effectively deploy their combined resources to meet the needs of those children for whom adoptive families are being sought."

The report also recommended that the DCFS adopt uniform policies in all areas of the state and hire temporary workers to "clean up" the files.

Other recommendations suggested the department clean up its public relations as well. "Parents hoping to adopt," read the report, "have been concerned about the contradictory information with respect to the numbers and kinds of children who are waiting...the need for homes is always subject to distortion within the community. The department has added to that distortion by being inconclusive, inaccurate and contradictory in its official statements about the group of children waiting. Some of the confusion is inherent in an adoption situation as a result of the failure of the public to understand or accept that adoption agencies have no responsibility for providing children to families who want them."

Besides asking the DCFS to establish a statewide adoption policy (the lack of which has been quite controversial in the transracial adoption field) the board asked that statewide communication be established. If that was done, a child in Chicago could be placed with a couple in Southern Illinois if it best suits the needs of the child. Or as the board put it, "An attempt to design a system which will both facilitate the movement of children to where the resources are and utilize meaningful relationships." In other words, if a child in Chicago would be best placed with a family in Southern Illinois, such a move would be made.

Cliff Callahan of Carbondale, whose family is bi-racial, suggested this attempt might manifest itself as a data processing center in which applications would be matched with children in terms of the couple's needs and the date of application.

"There're two sources to be considered—children available and potential adoptive parents," Callahan explained. "There's a need represented in both cases. Data processing should meet the needs of the child first, but there are also the needs of the taxpayers—those couples who are qualified and wish to adopt. This would get a lot of red tape out of the way."

This process would also eliminate what Callahan's wife, Nancy, calls "metropolitan areas taking precedence over rural communities."

Emphasis in the report was given to duties other than child placement—duties the DCFS ought to either offer or pay other agencies to perform. These services include counseling parents with recently acquired older or handicapped children; and with rehabilitating parents whose children have been put in foster homes.

Gas Bode

Gas says he bets some students have another name for the landlords.

"The only thing I don't like in this report," said Pat Phillips, a Carbondale housewife who is a member of the Adoption Advisory Committee, "is that it allows the department a year to consider these recommendations. Within a year, the department could declare the findings out of date."

While the DCFS is attempting to pull itself together, there is an alternative for couples who have completed case studies.

Callahan calls it the "grey market." "People can adopt babies privately," he explained. "If a couple meets all of the social and legal requirements, they can keep in touch with an obstetrician who may have a client who doesn't want her baby."

Callahan, who has an adopted black son, is trying to adopt another black baby to achieve a racial balance in his family. "My wife and I would give strong consideration to adopting any child that a woman doesn't want."

"Race is really no factor," he said. "But when a family is of mixed race, the child grows up with no concept of segregation or racial discrimination."

Tax relief plan OK'd by House

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—The Illinois House approved a tax relief plan Wednesday which would knock off a penny a dollar in sales tax on food and eliminate the sales tax entirely on non-prescription medicine.

The measure was sent to the Senate on a 153-5 vote, but with adjournment of the spring session only a few days away, many legislators suggested it probably will not be considered there.

The House and Senate reconvened Wednesday only hours after recessing in the early morning. The legislature plans to adjourn the spring session June 30.

The House also approved a measure to raise the corporate income tax rate from four to five per cent. The measure was sent to the Senate on a 90-64 vote although it could not be enacted without constitutional change.

The state constitution now requires that the ratio of rates for corporate and individual income taxes cannot exceed 8 to 5.

The individual tax rate is two and a half per cent, and the corporate tax rate of four per cent is the maximum allowable.

The sales tax relief plan passed in the House was sponsored by Rep. James Houlihan, D-Chicago, with the backing of Gov. Daniel Walker.

Americans more relaxed, Soviets say

MOSCOW (AP)—On the eve of President Nixon's arrival, the Soviet press poured out a stream of stories telling people that Americans overwhelmingly accept the idea of nuclear detente and don't think any more of building bomb shelters.

Even the usually hawkish Soviet army newspaper joined the chorus. The civilian weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta, published Wednesday, went on at length, playing up an article by a correspondent who visited the United States.

The correspondent wrote that while in Alaska he asked an American soldier what his artillery piece was designed for.

"For the Russians," the soldier was quoted as saying.

"Are they going to come here?" the correspondent said he asked.

"Some time ago, we thought so," was the reply. "Now, of course not. Relations with them have started to improve."

The Literaturnaya Gazeta correspondent told of spotting hundreds of underground nuclear attack shelters in his travels across the United States, which he said were built when the country "was blowing up the cold war." Now, he added, the Americans don't pay any attention to them.

Another article in Literaturnaya Gazeta assailed what it called the main argument being used in the United States against detente: that the Soviet Union is not to be trusted because it will take advantage of any situation to build up its nuclear strength.

"The possibilities of the Soviet Union are great, and nuclear war is in the frame of these possibilities," the newspaper said. "But—and now it is a common fact—the Soviet Union decisively rejects it as a means of policy."

The enemies of detente, a diplomatic term meaning relaxation of tensions among nations, were listed as "the military-industrial complex, Zionist circles, trade union officials, ultraright forces." But the paper maintained they are "overbalanced by those who in America are for relaxation of tensions."

The newspaper indicated its belief that the summit starting on Thursday between Nixon and Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev will overshadow Watergate.

Short sheeted consumer

Charging higher prices for shrunken products is getting to be a frequent method of modifying the full impact of inflation. When production costs rise, prices may rise accordingly or the product can be made much smaller or manufacturers may raise the price a little and cut the size a little.

When the cost of candy bars rose to 15 cents, the bars were smaller than the old 5-cent and then 10-cent product.

When bath towels went up in price, the size noticeably made it harder to grasp both ends firmly for a back rubdown after a bath.

Now, manufacturers say that sheets are being made shorter and narrower — not the bottom contour sheets, but flat top sheets in regular and luxury sizes.

It was too good to last. For a time, sheets that pulled out at the bottom of the bed and wadded up around the knees in the night were only a memory, as was the tug-of-war when beds were shared and one sleeper rolled over taking the sheet with him and leaving his bed companion shivering in the cold.

Americans become accustomed to extra-long or extra-wide beds with linen to match. While they were enjoying the good nights' sleep, the price of cotton zoomed; labor costs, shipping costs and all the variables including the price of polyester — the fabric that made wrinkles a thing of the past — climbed higher. To compensate, manufacturers are reducing the size and raising the price.

"Short-sheeting" was a good-natured practical joke that was funny because it was readily remedied. But there aren't likely to be many guffaws from those who sleep double if they have to fight for shares of short and narrow sheets like their grandparents did with muslin sheets that shrank. Will this be one shortage they won't take lying down?

Wage whirl

The people were down and out and losing faith in government. So the Federal Government decided to do something nice for the people. "We will pass a law to raise the minimum wages for the hard-working, under-paid people." It was done.

"This is unfair to the hard-working well-paid people. We will have the raise their wages proportionately." It was done.

"This is unfair to me," thought the employer. "I will have to pay higher wages to my workers, reducing my profits and therefore, my wages. I will raise my prices." It was done.

This put everyone proportionately back where they started from.

Meanwhile, the state governments had many employees who were expecting their raises. "This is unfair to the state governments. We do not have the money to pay higher wages. These appropriation bills for the state university student workers' salary increases are not feasible. In addition, they include money for the much-needed new hirings. There is nothing we can do right now. We must veto this bill and deliberate another until we can figure out where to get more money. Perhaps a tax increase..."

So the problem was, for the moment, passed down to the universities. Most of the universities were facing financial crises, the prime example being Southern Illinois University.

SIU had attempted to fire some faculty and staff members when faced with financial exigency. That plan did not work very well. SIU re-hired most of the terminated faculty and staff.

"This is unfair to SIU," they thought at first. But then someone recalled that students are not tenured and had a reputation for not being able to organize effectively. "Aha! We will fire some of the student workers." It was done.

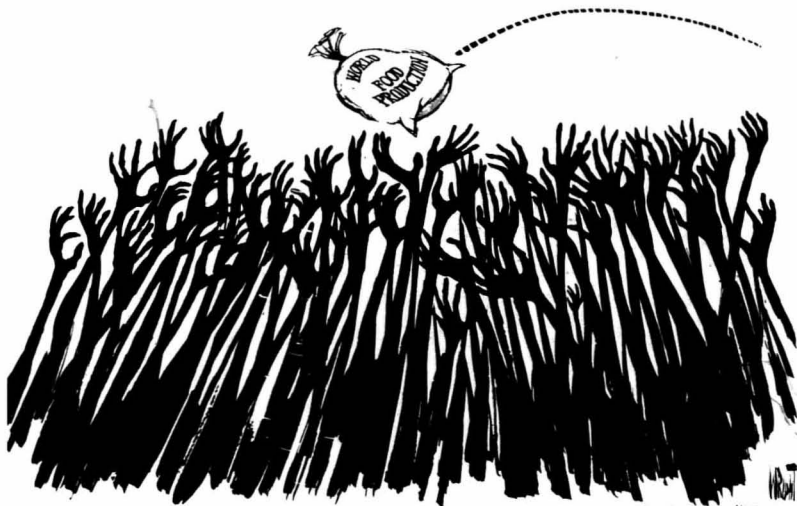

"This is unfair to the students. Now we cannot afford to put ourselves through school..."

So the students applied for scholarships, grants and loans. But the state government had to deliberate on whether or not to appropriate more funds to meet the increased demands for financial assistance. In the meantime, many students had to drop out of the university and get jobs, earning only minimum wages.

Soon, the faculty-student ratio was 20 instructors per student. Instructors had more time to spend with students and to do independent research. The students benefited. The university finally achieved "Academic Excellence."

"It was definitely an indirect route," stated an administrator who vigorously campaigned for the increased minimum wage. "But what could be more important to a university than academic excellence?"

A world grain reserve

With world grain reserves down to a 27-day supply and with anticipated growing global demands for cereals, it becomes increasingly clear that a basic restructuring is necessary for the system governing international food supplies. The stark alternative to such a change can be perceived in the famines already stalking India and parts of Africa.

One proposal that deserves serious consideration has been put forward by a 12-member panel of the Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs. It is, to be sure, an incomplete solution to the world's food needs, nonetheless it would be an important first step toward assuring hungry people everywhere that they need not fear the prospect of starvation.

The panel recommends the creation of an international grain reserve system, which could be drawn from only for emergencies and whose cost would be shared by participating nations. Such a reserve would necessarily need to be isolated from normal grain markets, so as not to interfere with international prices, and it should be separated, too, from regular food assistance programs which are drawn from on a regular basis.

The necessity for such a system becomes even more apparent when one considers that the world has become dependent to an unprecedented degree on North America for food exports. As Ambassador Edward M. Martin, coordinator for the forthcoming World Food Conference in Rome, has pointed out, "With the United States farm policy no longer producing huge grain reserves, it is essential to agree on an international system of national food reserves which will prevent us from being dependent on good weather to prevent widespread famine, as has been the case the last two years."

However successful a world food reserve system might be, however, it could do little more than stave off emergencies. The fundamental problem which neither producing nor consuming nations have yet faced adequately is that of devising arrangements to prevent emergencies from arising. Toward that end, any emergency reserve system ought to carry with it the obligation of recipient nations to accept agricultural research aid and to explore ways of increasing their fertilizer supplies. A concomitant responsibility lies, of course, upon developed countries to increase such aid and to devote greater attention to fertilizer research.

Beyond this, there are two other things that need to be done. The first is the need to expand population control programs. The second is the creation of some type of world food bank system to cope with more than emergency situations. As Roger Revelle suggests in an article in Science magazine, such a bank would include reserves of land, agricultural information clearing centers, stores of crop genes to enable new strains to be quickly multiplied, quantities of fertilizer and supplies of grain.

In testimony before the Senate panel, former Commerce Secretary Peterson said that "A tragedy of indescribable proportions is in the making in the underdeveloped world." That tragedy can only be staved off by prompt international action to develop reliable food reserves, such as the one proposed by the panel.

The right to be heard

While the First Amendment has served to be a protective device to protect the flow of ideas from government censorship, it has been indifferent to the reality and implications of private obstructions to the voicing of individual points of view. This indifference becomes critical when a comparatively few private hands are in a position to determine the content and availability of information.

The recent refusal of both Time and Newsweek to sell advertising space to a group seeking to plug for marijuana law reform brings this long smoldering issue, the right to access, once again to the fore.

Time gave no reason why the advertisement was turned down other than stating that the magazine has policies (1) of accepting or rejecting ads at will and (2) against explaining why to anyone. Newsweek based its refusal on its published policy that it will not accept advertising that in its judgement is controversial as to personal morale or ethical behavior or might well be offensive or distasteful to significant numbers of its readers.

The policy of refusing advertising to those who advocate causes slightly off color politically for fear of antagonizing major customers is common throughout the communications industry. The media avoids the novel and unorthodox because the commercial nature of mass communications makes it bad business.

The media, of course, stresses the freedom of press concept that a publisher is as free as any merchant to deal with whom he chooses, in effect saying, "The First Amendment guarantees our freedom to do as we choose with our media." Thus the constitutional imperative of free expression becomes a rationale for repressing ideas.

Freedom to publish is guaranteed by the constitution, but freedom to combine to keep others from publishing is not. Freedom of the press from governmental interference under the First Amendment does not sanction repression of that freedom by private interests.

The avowed emphasis of free speech is still on a person's right to lay what sentiments he pleases before the public. But today ideas reach the millions largely to the extent that they are permitted entry into newspapers, news magazines and broadcasting networks. The soapbox is no longer an adequate forum for public discussion. Only the new media of communication can lay sentiments before the public, and as this case demonstrates, it is they rather than government who can most effectively abridge expression by nullifying the opportunity for an idea to be heard.

When commercial purposes dominate the matrix of expression seeking First Amendment protection, it is time for our First Amendment directives to be restructured.

Reopening planned by fall

Bonaparte's Retreat to remodel

By David Kornblith
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Bonaparte's Retreat, 213 E. Main St., will be closed indefinitely for remodeling Tom Hoffman, owner of the nightclub, said Wednesday.

The bar and discotheque has been closed since last week, Hoffman said. He added that he was not exactly sure when the bar would open for business again, but was sure it would reopen by the next school term.

Remodeling has not started, Hoffman said. "Right now we're just painting and cleaning up."

Hoffman would not elaborate on the nature of the remodeling. Officials at the Carbondale code enforcement division said Hoffman had notified them that he would be taking out a building permit.

Businesses planning to do remodeling that will cost in excess of $100 are required to secure a building permit before any construction begins, said Jim Trammel, code enforcement inspector.

Code enforcement officials said they had told Hoffman three months ago that they were going to close the nightclub's second floor because of insufficient fire exits, Trammel said.

Hoffman closed the second floor voluntarily, but code enforcement officials issued a formal order for the closure to make the action official, Trammel said.

There are two fire exits on the second floor, Trammel said. One of them was blocked by some equipment. He added that the spiral staircase linking the two floors was not sufficient for a fire exit.

Hoffman said there are two usable exits on the second floor. He added that code enforcement officials have told him he needs a third.

"They originally said the plans were 'okay,'" Hoffman said. "I don't know what was wrong."

Up Your Alley, another Hoffman bar located behind Bonaparte's is open for business as usual, Hoffman said. Up Your Alley will not undergo any renovation.

Veteran's center 'up in air' as federal grant ends June 30

The Veteran's Affairs Center at SIU may be going through some changes within the next few weeks.

Jack O'Dell, coordinator of the center, explained what will be happening after a $125,580 federal grant that finances the center runs out Sunday.

"We're up in the air right now, but as of July 1, the office will be in a transitional stage while we're developing alternatives," O'Dell said.

O'Dell said he'll know more about the future of the center after a meeting Friday with the Illinois Veterans Congress and Veterans Administration (VA) representatives.

"I'll be going to Belleville to meet with the congress and Illinois VA Director Joseph Mulone to discuss effective uses of veterans representatives and the current problems facing veterans," O'Dell said.

Starting Aug. 1, there will be two federally salaried VA representatives in addition to the certification officer on campus. The two representatives are part of a nationwide VA program initiated to coordinate veterans programs on many university campuses.

O'Dell said he will be "in and out" of the center after Monday. He added that there will be a sign-in sheet for veterans who need assistance.

Local talent plans hoedown at Giant City Saturday night

It'll be foot stompin' time at Giant City State Park Saturday when a group of local musicians present a bluegrass and old-time hoedown music program at 7:30 p.m. at the visitor center.

Jerry Jennings, Phil Tedrick and Roy Davis are the featured performers, and anyone else who would like to sit in is invited. Sassafras tea and cider will be served free during the program.

Other activities scheduled for Saturday as part of the park's interpretive programs are an interpreted hike on the Giant City Nature Trail at 10 a.m. (meeting at the trail entrance sign); candlemaking on an open fire at 1 p.m. at the visitor center; and a live snake program at 2 p.m. at the visitor center.

On Sunday there will be an interpreted hike on the Post Oak Trail at 10 a.m. (meeting at the visitor center); candlemaking at 1 p.m. at the visitor center; and a bird banding demonstration at 2 p.m. at the visitor center.

In case of rain, all activities except for the music program will be cancelled. For further information contact the visitor center, 549-6151.

Patient education increase predicted by doctor at meeting

By Carl Courtney
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Patient education in the U.S. will boom during the next decade, according to Dr. Scott K. Simonds, director of the health education program at the University of Michigan.

Simonds' prediction came in the closing address Wednesday of the two-day national medical health education conference held in the Student Center.

"Medical health education will focus on techniques for the prevention of illness and the overall promotion of general health," he said.

"This all means an increased quality of life for all," the doctor said.

Attending the conference were 198 delegates from 22 states, according to Elena M. Slipecevh, SIU professor of health education and chairman of the conference planning committee.

The conference was the first national gathering to deal with education for the patient, according to Slipecevh. Different sessions dealt with the who, where, why and at what cost of patient programs. Specific topics included: guidelines and criteria for program development, cost effectiveness and reimbursement, patient compliance and evolution of patient education systems.

Patient education, deemed an important integral part of health care by most health and hospital professionals, is essentially grounded on the assumption that if a doctor can prescribe medication for his patient, he can also prescribe education for him so he could overcome certain sensitivities that may result from his ailment or disability, according to Andrew Marcec, coordinator of the SIU Division of Continuing Education and a member of the planning committee for the conference. Marcec said the conference, the first in a projected series of three, successfully helped the participants conceptualize a sound framework for developing health education programs.

Area towns unite in medical center funding campaign

Eight Southern Illinois communities have joined together in a 60-day drive to raise funds for the conversion of the Wolf Lake Lions Club into a regional medical center, according to R. N. Linsenmeyer, fund drive publicity chairman.

Representatives of the eight communities, including Neunert, Jacob, Grimsby, Sandridge, Gorham, Howardton, Grand Tower and Wolf Lake, will discuss the project at a meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Grand Tower Elementary School.

Grand opening of the facility, to be dedicated as the Dr. M. J. Hughes Memorial Center, is scheduled for Sept. 1, according to Linsenmeyer.

Nixon promises U.S. troops will stay in western Europe

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)—President Nixon promised America's Western allies Wednesday that he wouldn't sacrifice their interests to achieve further detente at his upcoming Moscow summit.

Nixon reportedly also told NATO leaders in a closed session that the American military presence in Europe would be maintained.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler quoted Nixon as having told NATO leaders at a private meeting that "Western cohesion provides the basis for conducting detente in the common interest."

Later, in a public toast to Belgium's King Baudouin, Nixon said that NATO can do much during the next 25 years toward "preserving freedom wherever it exists but also...building a structure of peace not only for Europe and the Atlantic community but for the whole world."

He reiterated, "One thing that is not negotiable is the great principles that are the foundations of the Atlantic community, the principles of freedom of justice."

Nixon's 36-hour Belgian stay focused on diplomatic formalities and private talks, but he broke protocol by walking instead of driving the two long blocks to the luncheon given by Baudouin. He stopped to chat and shake hands with many of the several hundred he passed enroute.

Nixon joined leaders of 14 other nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization—NATO—in signing a declaration of principles, worked out in Ottawa, Canada, last week. It pledges consultation and cooperation.

Of more substance was a two-hour closed meeting of Nixon, Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany and France's new premier, Jacques Chirac, and other representatives of the NATO nations.

Firm to pump more money into downstate oil search

CHICAGO (AP)—An independent oil company said Wednesday it plans to increase investments by $10 million a year in Southern Illinois in hopes of locating 100 producing wells annually.

There are about 28,000 producing wells in Illinois now, yielding about 44 million barrels of oil a year. Oil production in Illinois fields has been on the decline for years, but Barry E. Van Der Meulen, executive vice president of Energy Resources Corp., said the big increase in the price of crude oil now makes it feasible to expand explorations in the state.

Energy Resources presently has about 350 wells in Illinois, 100 to 120 of them producing oil, Van Der Meulen said.

He said he hopes to drill 200 more wells a year, doubling the firms present explorations.

Fred Pampe, a consulting geologist with Energy Resources, said he expects half of the drilling operations to produce oil. Pampe estimated that there will be a total of about 1,000 wells drilled throughout Illinois this year.

Energy Resources operates in five Illinois counties, Crawford, White, Edwards, Jasper and Carroll, as well as elsewhere in the country.

Van Der Meulen said all of the $10 million would be invested in Illinois, on 5,600 acres it has under lease in the same five counties.

Walker names SIU woman to state advisory council

Geraldine Bowie, a graduate assistant in early childhood education at SIU, has been nominated to the Advisory Council of the state Department of Children and Family Services.

Gov. Dan Walker nominated Bowie along with 11 others Tuesday. Walker said he will name four others later to the remaining vacancies on the council.

Although the positions are unsalaried, the nominees must be confirmed by the state Senate.

Claude Crockett still negotiating

Junior Saluki rightfielder Claude Crockett, drafted in the fifth round of the pro baseball free agent draft by the St. Louis Cardinals, said Wednesday that he and Cardinal scout Fred McAllister have not yet come to an agreement on Crockett's contract.

"If we can't reach an agreement I will wait until the January draft and see how that works out," Crockett said before returning to Chicago to resume negotiations and contemplate a choice between summer school or summer baseball. "And if that doesn't work out I'll just come back and play for SIU next year," the unsigned Wendell Phillips High grad said.

The fleet-footed Crockett batted .310 for SIU including his play in the District IV playoffs and the College World Series. He also stole 19 bases and scored 29 runs.

Crockett's statement echoed a similar position stated by SIU shortstop Stan Mann, drafted in the fourth round by the American League Cleveland Indians. Mann said earlier this month that he had not come to agreeable terms with the Cleveland management and that he too would consider waiting until the January draft, allowing another team to acquire his draft rights.

If Crockett should sign with the Cards, he will go to the clubs minor league team located in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Cubs go down in 12th

CHICAGO (AP)—Cleon Jones' 12th-inning single drove in pinch-runner John Milner Wednesday, lifting the New York Mets to a 5-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Milner ran for Jerry Grote who, with one out, had beat out an infield hit and went to second when shortstop Don Kessinger threw the ball into the Mets' dugout.

The teams battled to an error-filled 4-4 tie in the first seven innings after the Mets built a 2-0 lead with single runs in the first and sixth.

Wayne Garrett opened the game with a single and came around on Jones' single and Rusty Staub's sacrifice fly. The Mets made it 2-0 in the sixth with an unearned run.

The Cubs knocked out Harry Parker, a seven-time loser and a last-minute replacement for injured Tom Seaver, with three runs in the sixth after two out. Jose Cardenal's double was the key as the Cubs stroked four straight hits and scored the third run on a passed ball by Grote. The second run was produced by Rick Monday's single, his third of five hits for the day.

Chicago starter Steve Stone left when the Mets scored twice in the seventh for a 4-3 edge. The runs came on Wayne

Negotiations break down

NFL player strike looming

By Tom Seppy
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON—Negotiations between the National Football League owners and players broke off Wednesday, paving the way for a July 1 strike that could wipe out the exhibition season.

The talks were ended after it became apparent that there would be no immediate agreement on the 63 demands made by the players March 16.

Federal mediator James Searce said he thought the sessions Tuesday and Wednesday had been fruitful but, "we have reached the point now where we cannot be constructive." Searce said the sessions are amicably recessed with both of the parties subject to return to the negotiating table at his call.

"We need a breakthrough on the freedom issues," he said. "There needs to be a key."

The negotiating meeting was recessed following a lunch break after a two-hour morning session during which financial matters were discussed.

"We're resigned to a strike," said John Thompson, executive director of the NFL Management Council, the owners' bargaining agent, after leaving the 15-minute afternoon session.

Bill Curry of the Houston Oilers, the union president, said it now appears the players would strike Monday because the owners will not respond to the players' demands.

"Nothing has changed since March 16," Curry said. "We said freedom and they charged us with anarchy. They have not put forth a meaningful response to our demands."

"The gauntlet is down," he continued. "There is going to have to be a power play. We're going to have to conduct a strike."

Curry said picket lines would be established at each of the 26 NFL training camps, beginning in San Diego on July 3, and pickets would also be at training sites where players would work out.

Gymnastic camps open, draw young tumblers

By Diane Pacetti
Student Writer

Things may not be jumping all over Carbondale this summer, but gymnasts certainly are.

A series of week-long summer gymnastic camps got under way this week as young enthusiasts arrived on campus for a SIU-sponsored camp for boys and a "Tumble Down" camp for girls.

Alyce Vogel, wife of SIU women's gymnastic coach Herb Vogel, in charge of the "Tumble Down" camp, said enrollment in the camp has more than doubled since it was first offered last year. She said there are 80 participants in the present camp, and 100 signed up for the second and final session from July 21-27.

According to Mrs. Vogel, the girls in the camp range in age from 8-19, although there is no maximum age limit. The average age is 12-14.

Mrs. Vogel said most of the girls are from the central states, but some have come from as far away as Pennsylvania and Florida.

The cost of the girl's camp is $80 per week. This includes room and board and instruction. The girls receive six hours of instruction each day in four olympic events—floor exercises, uneven bars, vaulting and the balance beam. In addition, the afternoons are used for recreational activities such as horseback riding and swimming.

Because of the size of the "Tumble Down" camp, Mrs. Vogel said both the Newman Center gym and the Lincoln Jr. High School gym are being used. The camp may expand to three sessions next year.

Unlike the girl's camp, the boy's camp is in its first year. Enrollment is about the same as in the girl's camp, according to SIU Gymnastic Coach and Camp Director Bill Meade. There are about 74 youngsters in both the present session and one scheduled from June 30-July 6.

A third session of the camp from July 7-13 has only 50 enrollments so far but Meade thinks the last session will be the best. Some participants in the present session have already indicated a desire to stay on for another week, Meade said.

Most of the boys in the camp are freshmen, sophomores or juniors in high school. They also come primarily from the central states, although many states are represented.

The cost of the camp is $75 per week and includes three instruction periods a day, each in one of the six men's olympic events—floor exercise, pommel horse, rings, vaulting, parallel bars and horizontal bars. There are also exercise and rest periods. The camp is being conducted in the SIU Arena.

Both Mrs. Vogel and Meade see the purpose of the camps as improving and developing young gymnasts and exposing them to new teachers and techniques. Both seem well pleased with the results and enthusiasm shown so far.

Meeting planned by Sailing Club

The SIU Sailing Club will hold its summer quarter meeting at 9 p.m. Thursday in Room 131 of Lawson Hall. The meeting will acquaint interested persons with the activities of the club and provide an opportunity for students, faculty and staff to join the club's activities.

The club has six "Flying Junior" sail boats that are available to club members and also sponsors several functions during the course of the quarter. Membership in the club leads to the earning of a "Skippers Card" and teaches members about the technical aspects of sailing as well as providing an opportunity for members to put these skills to use.

Registration end nears for two IM activities

Registration for intramural tennis and racquetball play will end at 5 p.m. Friday in the Office of Recreation and Intramurals, Room 128 of the SIU Arena.

Men's singles, men's doubles and mixed doubles (male and female partners) play will take place from July 1-3 and July 8-12 on the SIU tennis courts and the handball courts east of the SIU Arena.

All SIU students, faculty and staff are eligible and tournament pairings and court assignments will be made available in the Office of Recreation and Intramurals, Monday, July 1.

In the tennis competition, matches will be scheduled during the evening hours after 7 p.m. throughout the tournament. Racquetball matches will be at 4:30, 5:30 and 6:30 p.m. throughout the tournament.
