Auto burglaries up; police suspect ring

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

The city's auto burglary rate has quadrupled in the past two weeks and police are investigating the possibility of ring involvement in the break-in, Lt. Terry Murphy of the Carbondale Police Department said Thursday.

Most of the burglaries have occurred after 5 p.m. near commercial businesses, Murphy said. However, geographical trends or common methods of entry could not be determined among the five auto burglaries reported to police over a 10-hour period, from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesday.

"When this trend was noticed about two weeks ago the officers on regular patrol were notified to look for suspicious persons in areas with a high density of parked cars," Murphy said.

No arrests have been made.

Each week, an average of two or three burglaries are reported to city police with a total of 33 auto break-ins reported since the beginning of the year. Although 38 auto burglaries were committed for the same period of time last year the incidence of break-ins was more evenly distributed over the three-month period, records show.

Murphy suggested that residents place valuables kept in their cars out of sight when parking and that when leaving a car parked for an extended period of time to lock valuables in car trunks. Also, he suggested that residents park in well-lit areas when leaving a car parked at night.

Display on abortion sparks legal dispute

By Mary Harmon
Staff Writer

An anti-abortion display, assembled in the Student Center by a group called Students for Jesus and removed by Student Center officials, has sparked a dispute over First Amendment rights.

Lynn Anderson, of the center's Office of Scheduling and Catering, said that after several complaints were lodged concerning the display, the photographs, posters and other materials depicting the group's anti-abortion sentiments were removed Tuesday morning from a display case across from the University Book Store.

The exhibit featured a sickle stuck into a butcher block table that was covered with a purple velvet cloth. Plastic dolls were strewn beneath the table. Posters explaining various abortion methods and a picture of aborted infants in a garbage can were included in the display.

The display, Anderson said, was in violation of the Center's display case guidelines which specify that the case be used for fine arts exhibits, such as drawings and photos of a cultural nature, and displays involving public and informational announcements.

However, Matthew Daub, vice president of Students for Jesus, said the display met the criteria required for the case's use. He charged that the material was removed because of the organization's abortion stance.

"If the display weren't anti-abortion, it would still be up there. I certainly feel that our First Amendment rights have been violated," Daub said. "Sure, people will get offended and angry. But we have a right to express our opinion."

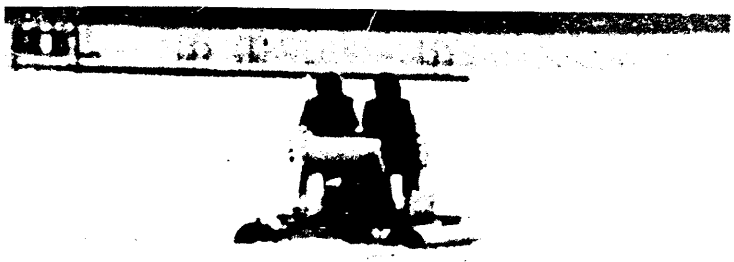

Daub said that he and the Students for Jesus have contacted a lawyer concerning their legal rights in the matter.

Shari Rhode, associate legal counsel for the University, said her office was contacted after Daub told Anderson he was seeking legal advice.

"It is not a First Amendment question," she said. "It is based solely on compliance with the Student Center's guidelines for use of the display case."

"The guidelines allow for regulation of the time, place and manner of the case and any other attempt to explain the action is to confuse the issue," she said.

Daub admitted that although the display was blatantly presented, he maintained it was done artistically.

GONE FISHING—Although Mike Kisly, a senior in administrative science, did not catch any fish at the Campus Lake, he did find the sun and air warm. More warm weather is expected for Friday with highs in the upper

Nuclear power—still on trial by public

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

On the first anniversary of the Three Mile Island incident, nuclear power is still on trial in the United States, and a bewildered public is the jury.

Exactly one year ago, the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor near Harrisburg, Pa., malfunctioned, causing what has been termed the worst accident in the history of commercial U.S. nuclear power production.

The governor of Pennsylvania advised the evacuation of pregnant women and preschool children living within five miles of the power plant. Thousands of residents fled the area as radioactive steam seeped into the atmosphere.

The accident at Three Mile Island, caused by a handful of design flaws and human errors, prompted demonstrations, sit-ins and benefit concerts in the United States and Europe in protest of nuclear power. Anti-nuclear groups, such as the Appletree Alliance in Carbondale, sprouted all over the country.

Opponents of nuclear power called for a moratorium on construction of new nuclear plants and the closing of existing ones. At the time of the Three Mile Island incident there were 72 existing nuclear power plants in the United States, 94 under construction, and another 30 planned.

Illinois leads the nation in the number of operating plants, with seven facilities in the state. At the time of the Three Mile Island accident, seven more were under construction and two were planned.

After the Three Mile Island incident, the president appointed a 12-member commission to investigate the accident and recommend reforms. Headed by Dartmouth College President John Kemeny, the commission issued a report in November, and although called for stricter regulations on nuclear energy, it did not endorse a moratorium on new reactor construction.

While thousands engaged in protests reminiscent of anti-war activities of the 1960s, the government and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission has been busy trying to figure out what to do about the problems of nuclear energy. The NRC imposed a moratorium on licensing new nuclear plants, but the moratorium has since been lifted, and a nuclear plant in the Tennessee Valley Authority was recently licensed.

Most of the uranium used to produce nuclear power in the United States travels through Southern Illinois from western mines to a conversion plant in Metropolis, Ill., and then an enrichment plant in Paducah, Ky.

The Appletree Alliance sponsors several awareness-raising activities such as a march on the Paducah plant last fall.

About 75,000 demonstrators marched on the White House in May and were greeted by President Carter, who is trained in nuclear engineering.

Several public personalities and entertainers have joined the anti-nuclear movement, including rock singers Jackson Browne and James Taylor. Both who joined several other musical groups for a benefit concert in New York's Madison Square Garden in September.

Budget snarls prompt rent hike

By Paula Donner Walter
Staff Writer

A complex arrangement in the ownership and operation of Evergreen Terrace Housing Complex has contributed to deficits in the facility's operating budget and delays in administration, proposals for rent increases, according to University officials.

Bruce Swinburne, vice president of student affairs, and Larry Juhlin, Swinburne's assistant, met with the officers of the Evergreen Terrace council Wednesday to discuss a $30 per month rent increase—the second increase proposed in three months. An $18 rent increase was initiated in January. According to Swinburne, the rent increases for Evergreen Terrace met delays because of the approval process, which involves the Federal Housing Authority, the SIU Foundation and the SIU Board of Trustees. Evergreen Terrace is owned by the Foundation, funded by the FHA and operated by SIU-C.

For example, he said, the $18 increase initiated in January was originally intended to begin last August, but it was delayed in the approval process. When these "unbudgeted" delays occur, the University is faced with a deficit in operations, Swinburne said.

The new $30 increase is not intended to make up for the almost $100,000 deficit which has accrued because of delays, Swinburne said. Rather, he said, it will be used to help the University "break even" in operations this year.

Rent at Evergreen Terrace rose in January from $150 to $168 for a two-bedroom apartment, and from $165 to $183 for a three-bedroom unit. With the additional proposed increase, rent would be $198 and $213, respectively.

Although residents received notice of the increase March 14, Swinburne said the approval process "will have to go exactly on schedule to meet a (tentative) deadline of Aug. 1."

Swinburne said SIU must submit the previous year's audited statement of the complex operations to FHA before consideration of a rent increase can begin.

Vincent Russo, a renter at Evergreen Terrace, said the complex needs a management plan where increases would be tied to salaries of University employees, and that increases should not occur sporadically. "Even in years when you operated with a surplus, there still should have been rate increases for an on-going influx of money, so that when we do have these deficit years, you'll have a cushion with which to work," he said.

While Juhlin agreed with Russo's idea, he said it would be impossible because the FHA does not approve rent increases until the audited statements show a deficit in operations.

Jan Hebert, vice president of the council, voiced concern over residents who "do not have the extra $30 to pay."

"We feel like we're involved in crisis management right now. What do you say to someone who says, 'I don't have $30 more dollars?'" she said.

The two major causes of the "needed" increase are utilities and maintenance, and Swinburne said he is checking into some alternatives to make the apartments more energy efficient.

At the suggestion of a resident, Swinburne said he is looking into the possibility of an energy conservation system at Evergreen which would control the surge of electricity caused by heating and air conditioning compressors turning on and off. In addition, he is also considering the possibility of metering the individual apartments for electricity usage.

Swinburne said he was pleased with the meeting and understands "the hurt the residents are feeling relative to what's happening with inflation."

Prosecutor will speak on media, trials

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

The Illinois Supreme Court last week struck down a death penalty sentence for the third time this year, but did not challenge the constitutionality of the law.

The prosecuting attorney in the case, Boone County State's Attorney John Maville, will be one of several speakers featured in a free press-fair trial workshop scheduled for Saturday in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

The Supreme Court overturned the death sentence of Curtis Brownell, convicted of murder, aggravated kidnapping and rape in the slaying of Louise M. Betts. The Court remanded the case for resentencing because of trial court error.

Brownell was sentenced by a circuit court last November to be executed. The lower court imposed the sentence under two provisions of the death penalty law. The court ruled that one of the provisions in the law—which allows the death penalty in cases where the victim is a potential witness against the killer in a criminal case—should not be used because it would open the door for the death penalty to be imposed in every murder case.

Saturday's workshop focuses on extensive publicity of trials. The Brownell case received a great deal of publicity, and Maville said some of the pretrial coverage may have affected the outcome of the case.

USO to use referendum as student poll

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

A referendum held this week on the proposed constitution for the Undergraduate Student Organization invalidated because not enough students voted—was considered "a student opinion poll that was also a learning experience for the election commissioner," Student President Pete Alexander said Thursday.

"Since we didn't get the 1,000 votes needed to make the referendum valid, we are using it as a student poll that will be taken into consideration by the senators," Alexander said, in reference to his decision to submit the constitution to the Student Senate for approval.

Only 364 students voted in the election at a cost of about $1.22 per vote. A full-page Daily Egyptian advertisement, taken out by the USO for two days at a cost of $416, was the major expense of holding the referendum. Printing expenses for the ballots ran "no more than $30." Student Vice President Chris Blankenship said.

According to Alexander, a major difference between the old and new constitutions is the student bill of rights, which was included in the proposed constitution.

"These rights are already guaranteed to the students," Alexander said. "It is now the USO's mission to stand up for student rights. The old constitution does not include this."

Alexander said the student bill of rights was drawn from elements of the U.S. Constitution, the SIU-C System Code of Policy, the SIU-C Code of Conduct, and the standard operating procedures of the USO and the Graduate Student

Alexander also responded to the constitution's qualification requirements for the offices of student president, vice president and representatives.

"I don't agree that candidates for those offices should have to be full time students," Alexander said. "It is impossible to spend a lot of time working for the students when you're carrying a full class load. I would like to see this (requirement) changed."

A bill to amend the old constitution was passed by the senate.

Triad council questions delay in solving building problems

By Andrew Zinner
Staff Writer

Peeling paint, leaky plumbing, loose floor tiles and broken lights in the Triads, a group of three dormitories on East Campus, are some of the complaints that have been aired during the last four months by members of the Triad House Council.

Now, according to THC member Ron Hearst, because of intensified maintenance efforts in the last two weeks, about 85 percent of the problems have been taken care of, but not before one resident required three stitches in his foot because he tripped on some loose baseboard.

Hearst said the council is pleased with the repairs and appreciates the efforts of Jim Henry, a building service worker assigned to the Triad case by University Housing Director Sam Rinella. But the council questions why the repairs were so long in coming.

According to Rinella, the delay in repairs was caused by a lack of communication between council members and housing officials.

"We went over there to find the things complained of, but couldn't find all of them. It was not until I assigned Henry to meet with the council that we became aware of the repair needs," Rinella said.

He added that after finding out where the problem areas were, maintenance had to wait for parts and schedule labor to handle the repairs. Vandalism caused many of the problems, especially the ones in the bathrooms, Rinella said.

Henry said "prioritizing" of the work may have contributed to the delay. "I have priorities that the THC people don't have."

Further delays were caused, he said, because floor tiles now come in different sizes and colors than what were needed.

But Hearst and Bob Sagen-dorf, secretary of the THC, say there are inherent problems with the repair process. They explained that Area Service Requests must be filled out by the Resident Assistant or by maintenance workers, and from there go to the area office. From there, the requests go to custodial supervisor James Gullidge, who sends them off to the Physical Plant, where they are prioritized.

"It takes months for things to get fixed this way," Sagen-dorf said. "This is a very erratic route, and we'd like one direct route between the initial request and the Physical Plant."

Both Henry and Rinella admit there are problems with the repair system.

"We thought the system was good until the problems surfaced. We're now studying the process to try to make more information available to students," Henry said.

Rinella said housing officials are working on the repair system, noting that as soon as the next group of Triad House Council members is elected, an orientation meeting will be held to explain the system.

THC members Hearst and Sagen-dorf have concluded that "no one at housing works as a team."

"There's no togetherness. Everyone looks out for themselves," Hearst said.

They pointed out that union barriers cause some of the work delays. Sagen-dorf said Civil Service workers can't replace light bulbs because the union "lampers" are supposed to do that, but added that the lampers are not getting the requests for the jobs at the Physical Plant.

Draft plan pulled from scheduled vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's draft registration plan was pulled back from a scheduled vote in the House Appropriations Committee on Thursday after problems arose over the proposed method of paying for it.

The administration needs $13.3 million to begin registering young men this summer. Carter's proposal to register women appears dead.

"The votes were there overwhelmingly for registration but they thought they were going down the wrong road and the funding plan was a bad precedent," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

U of I student killed in van accident

DALTON, Ga. (AP) — A van carrying 12 members of a University of Illinois fraternity, one of them an 18-year-old Murphysboro man, on a vacation in Florida crashed near this north Georgia city Thursday, killing one of the students and injuring the others, authorities said.

Whitfield County Coroner Leon Helton identified the victim as Stephen W. Acheson, 18, of Champaign, Ill.

The driver of the van, Jeffrey D. Patterson, 21, of DeKalb, Ill., was taken to a nearby Chattanooga, Tenn., hospital, where he was listed in serious condition with a head injury, officials said.

The others, including John Hudgins of Murphysboro, were treated and released at a Dalton hospital.

Iran hostages' release delayed again

By The Associated Press

The U.S. Embassy hostages will probably languish in their Tehran imprisonment for at least two more months, possibly into the summer, a member of the U.N. investigatory commission on Iran was quoted as saying Thursday.

Thursday was the 145th day in confinement for the 50 Americans captives at the Tehran embassy and three U.S. diplomats at the Iranian Foreign Ministry.

Revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has said the new Iranian Parliament must decide the hostages' fate.

Long-quiet Mount St. Helens erupts

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Mount St. Helens, dormant for a century, erupted with smoke and ash Thursday after a week of earthquake swarms that rattled the area, and officials said part of the mountain was collapsing. The U.S. Forest Service began evacuating a handful of people at the Spirit Lake area at the base of the mountain and in other sparsely populated areas surrounding the 9,766-foot peak.

SIU openings bother 'off-the-wall' source

You've heard the phrase "if walls had ears".

Well, I found one that not only listens but talks. And at SIU-C's Anthony Hall of all places. You know, the building where administrators hang out and sometimes work.

"Fsst. Hey, kid," a voice said to me out of nowhere as I was passing through Anthony Hall on a shortcut from the Student Center to the Rec Building.

At first I thought it was one of those bugged telephones I've heard they sometimes use over there. (You know how much administrators around here trust each other.)

"Over here, kid," the voice said. "Put your ear up to me. I've stonewalled it long enough and I've got to have a friendly ear to unload some things that are really bothering me."

I looked around in case there was anybody who would see how silly I'd look with my ear to the wall, but the coast was clear and I listened.

"Yeah, I'm kind of apprehensive about where our future leadership is going to come from," the wall said. I told him not to worry because there's no way Reagan can get elected.

Nick Sortal

"No, silly. I mean SIU leadership. We ARE looking for two new presidents you know. And our top vice president is leaving to be chancellor at University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee."

"So can't we hire some more ex-jocks like we did for chancellor?"

"I'm afraid not. You see, the people in charge of picking our administrators have worked us into one heap of a problem. It all started back in June when (former SIU-Edwardsville president) Kenneth Shaw got appointed chancellor and (former SIU-U

"I didn't think losing Brandt was such a problem," I said.

"It only was because of the chancellor deal. And when Shaw was appointed, that made two presidential openings. And we had managed to put an awfully big monkey on our backs," the wall replied.

"How's that?"

"We now have a problem with the reputation of our search committees. When a university searches all over the country, then grabs someone from its own back yard to run the system, people cry 'foul.' And with two presidential spots to fill we, um, kind of have our backs against the wall. If we pick people from within our system, everyone will scream bloody murder. And if we don't pick the SIU-bred candidates—and there's a couple that might be worth looking at—then they will probably leave, like Forton. Which brings even more instability to the University," the wall said, looking like it was about to crumble at any moment from the pressure.

"I see. In a span of about one year, the SIU system could be faced with having to dig up a couple more vice presidents, in addition to the two presidents we're already looking for. Plus our chancellor has only been on the job for less than a year."

"Next thing you know, they'll be putting a revolving door through me," the wall said. "And the thing is, even if we had hired one of the internal candidates as president (none of them will be, however, because the final list of eight had no internal candidates on it) the other vice presidents still would probably leave. Unless, of course we keep Acting President Hiram Lesar on for a while, as is being rumored. But no matter what, things don't look good."

"By the way, you said none of the final candidates was from the SIU System, but you didn't say who the final eight were. Would you mind telling me their names?"

"Forget it kid. You're talking to a wall!"

Synergy: There to help

Ten volunteers from Synergy were on hand at the Arena to assist concert-goers who overdid the concert parting for the Marshall Tucker concert. Providing emergency and non-emergency drug and alcohol crisis treatment is a Synergy service that has been provided for the last seven years, and yet many people are still not aware of it.

Synergy's volunteers are trained in crisis intervention, a process whereby the significant stresses or difficulties of a personal crisis are temporarily relieved. Volunteers are also specifically trained in drug crisis treatment, whereby the volunteer can recognize symptoms of a drug-alcohol overdose, as well as assist a person who is simply having a negative physical or emotional reaction to a drug. Also, at least half of the volunteers at concerts must be certified in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and they are also trained in the Heimlich technique for clearing blocked air passages.

At the Marshall Tucker concert, volunteers found ourselves surprisingly busy, and our efforts were met with some resistance due to lack of understanding of our role at concerts. This lack of recognition does not make the already difficult position of the volunteers any easier for them. To intervene with someone who is confused, drunk, high or even vomiting, without being asked, is difficult enough. But when people think that you are a narc or if they do not understand why you are helping them, the difficulty increases. If you find yourself in this situation, remember, the volunteers are not there to hassle or bust you, they are there to assist you and keep you out of trouble.

Synergy volunteers are presently identified by armbands with a red cross and Synergy printed on them. We are positioned around the arena in a pre-determined fashion and the ushers have knowledge of our location. Some volunteers are stationary, such as at both entrances, by the stage and near the upstairs entrance, while others are "roamers" who scope a specified area.—Teresa J. Bumgarner, Synergy Staff

Withdraw South African investments

I read with dismay the revelation of Dennis Brutus as regarding SIU's investments in South Africa. More disturbing is the statement made by Joseph Goodman, Executive Director of SIU Foundation, that "anything is all right" in those investments in that fascist, oppressive and racial country, as long as they are profitable (March 13 DE).

I wonder whether there is any compatibility between democracy which this institution stands for and its economic actions in South Africa. It is regrettable that while America with her institutions is talking loud about democracy and human rights, she is closing her eyes to oppression, racial segregation and unjust political incarceration of South African blacks because of economic gains. There is nothing more comparable to the slave trade brutality many years ago and Hitler's holocaust against the Jews than the present South Africa's apartheid system.

South Africa is the most condemned country in the world today. Perpetuation of apartheid and the killing of innocent school children and women continued on a day-to-day basis due to technological aid flowing in from western nations and their institutions.

I am here not only to get an academic degree but also to learn about America's democracy and morality. But when these are thrown into the air for capitalistic gains, I am greatly disillusioned and left with nothing tangible to learn. I now understand better why the world seems to be going against America and her institutions.

If I were given the presidency of my country today, I would not complete the first hour before nationalizing all the multinationals that make apartheid's perpetuation possible.

I call on SIU's Foundation members to withdraw those investments immediately, in the name of democracy and human rights which are denied the South African blacks. What is economically profitable may not be morally acceptable.—Dada Olowu, Freshman, Sociology

Early implications unfair

I must take issue with the news coverage of the alleged second "arson" in the Carbondale City Complex as reported in the March 12 DE. I will not question the facts but rather the implications of the report. Even so, the facts are not yet in on the second fire and there is as yet nothing to tie the accused to that fire or whether or not it was even arson. Early implications are very unfair.

Very seldom do I read where an accused individual works so that his place of employment can be implicated as well. In this case, the Jackson Community Workshop does not need this kind of "yellow journalism." Readers of the DE need to know that Jackson Community Workshop bids competitively for the City Complex custodial contract and for the past four years has received that contract because of consistently high quality work. You may ask the people there about their satisfaction.

Furthermore, we had, in the past four years, employed 40 to 50 handicapped individuals working in the complex without major incident. Please do not disparage their efforts on the basis of one individual. I will also point out that all workers are closely supervised while on the job and that no one, with a known history of dangerous activity, is placed in community employment.

Unfortunately incidents happen with all types and classes of people. We have gotten away from identifying persons of racial minorities involved in incidents because of the prejudices it fosters. Please, let's get away from identifying other minorities, i.e., the handicapped, because it only serves to foster prejudices, too.

Curt Kohring, Executive Director, Jackson Community Workshop

Enough on theory of creation

I do not know how other readers feel about this, but I happen to be very tired of this seemingly endless argument between those who support the theory of evolution and those who support the belief in "God's creation of mankind."

It seems to me that this is not a debate of theories but is, in actuality, a debate about the existence or lack of existence of God.

And I as a non-believer can safely say that no amount of letter writing reporting "facts" and "scientific evidence" of Biblical creation—i.e. God—is going to convince me of the existence of creation or God. And I can be equally sure that none of my arguments, no matter how articulately and vehemently expressed, will convince believers in the non-existence of God.

So please, why don't we all just drop it?—Lisa L. Goodlin, Junior, Cinema and Photography

Draft protestors favor communism

What is the United States coming to? I was embarrassed to see the front page of the March 10 DE which pictured the anti-draft march through Carbondale. To say the least, the protestors and their cause make my stomach turn. As I see it, plain and simple, people against the draft are in favor of communism.

Our nation's pride is diminishing because of radicalism. The people of this country enjoy all the freedoms guaranteed and protected by our government, yet, when the government asks for draft registration to sustain our way of life, the by-product is a release of dormant radical ideas of the 1960s. I don't want war any more than the next guy or gal, but when the United States asks for help, it is our duty to comply.

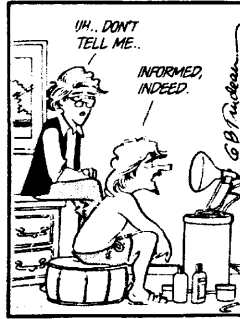

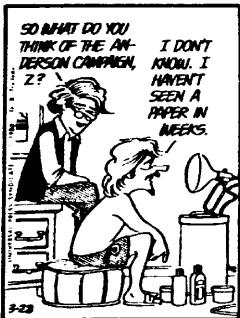

Douglas MacArthur said it best, "duty, honor, country"—over and over again. Our country depends on these ideals. Future generations depend on these ideals. But people talk instead of listen and that's a slap in the face.

This country and its foundation are the best in existence. So let's not ruin a good thing—listen and think before you speak.

Civil War battle re-enactment puts emphasis on authenticity

By Ken Mac Garrige
Staff Writer

"The Second Battle of Makanda Junction" is being held this weekend. Unlike your average battle, the public is invited to attend this one.

Makanda, Ill., a town between two hills, will host a re-enactment of a battle between forces of the North and South.

The battle will include a brief skirmish between the North and South troops at noon on Saturday, and the "real" battle is to be held 1 p.m. Sunday. Everything is to be like it was 120 years ago: authentic Civil War uniforms, tents, cannons, guns, and the like, says David Dandis a member of the group sponsoring the re-enactment.

This year's battle promises to be bigger and better than last year's Dandis predicts.

Last year 150 soldiers participated. This year he expects 400-500 to show up, some coming from as far as Florida, Texas, and points "way out West."

And why would anyone want to fight in a sleepy little town like Makanda?

"It's one of the first battles" in a series of re-enactments around the country, Dandis said. "They go to a lot of battles in the South. This is one of the bigger ones and one of the first ones."

Dandis said another selling point Makanda has is that it remains an authentic period looking town. He said the Bluffs on both sides of the valley provide good spots for spectators to watch the battle.

Due to Makanda's small size, an influx of cars could prove hazardous to the re-enactment and to the town itself. That's why eight buses will be making trips all day between U.S. Highway 51 to Makanda. Visitors are asked to park by U.S. 51 and board a bus to town.

Dandis advises those who come through Giant City to bring some good walking shoes. "If they arrive late it might be hard to get to the battle."

For those bored with the battle, there will be 11 blue grass and country bands pickin' and grinnin'. Also, the downtown area will be used for an arts and craft sale from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., both Saturday and Sunday, featuring work by local artists in woodwork, stained glass, pottery, sculpture, jewelry, the works. A magician will also perform.

Abe Lincoln is even scheduled to make an appearance, reading something called the "Vintyburg Address." And how did you get Lincoln to appear? "It wasn't easy," said Lincoln.

As for the battle itself, who will win and why is worked out the night before the fighting, Dandis said. Nine full-scale authentic Civil War cannons will be firing up and down the valley. Between 25 and 30 cavalrymen will be charging on horseback.

Infrared photos of city businesses, homes to be featured at energy fair

By Mary Ann McNulty

Carbondale residents can find out if their homes or businesses are wasting energy, as well as learn ways to improve energy efficiency at Carbondale's first "Low Cost-No Cost Energy Fair" to be held Saturday.

Speakers, films, demonstrations of energy products, and a display of thermographs of every home and business in the city are scheduled from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Community Center, 607 E. College St. said Robert Pauls, Carbondale energy coordinator.

The thermographs, or infrared photography, were taken in January from an airplane and indicate where heat was escaping from buildings in the city.

City employees who have been trained to interpret the thermographs will be on hand to show residents where their homes or businesses are located on the graphs.

Manufacturers and dealers of energy-related products—including solar energy systems, wood stoves, insulation and other products—will have displays set up both inside and outside the Community Center, Pauls said.

"Low cost—no cost" building weatherization workshops, an energy saving cost computer, working solar energy systems and a windmill will also be on display.

Energy efficient building designers, realtors and consultants, representatives from local, state and federal energy offices, and public interest groups will also be on hand to answer questions, Pauls said. Representatives from the Southern Counties Action Movement will discuss "Is Conservation Enough" at 10:45 a.m. in the center.

Pauls will lecture on "Tax Incentives for Conservation and Solar Energy" at 11 a.m. Richard Archer, an instructor in SIU-C's Comprehensive Planning and Design Department, is scheduled to discuss "Alcohol as Southern Illinois Renewable Resources" at 3:05 p.m.

Beg your pardon

A news story in Wednesday's Daily Egyptian incorrectly reported the dates of "Holiday on Ice," an ice skating show featuring music, dance, and comedy to be held in the Arena. The correct dates are April 4 to 6, not April 6 to 8, as was reported in the story.

Orchestra of Mexico disappointing in slow-moving, monotonous show

By Carrie Sweeney
Staff Writer

The Orchestra of Mexico, performing a slow-moving and generally monotonous concert in Shryock Auditorium, proved to be a disappointment when it could not muster-up enough enthusiasm during the first half of its show to be entertaining.

The opening pieces of Wednesday night's performance, Symphony No. 40 in G minor by Mozart, and Siegfried Idyll by Richard Wagner, were both redundant and sluggish renditions. Only on occasion were the slow, sleep-inducing sounds perked-up by contributions from the woodwind section.

Mozart's piece, said to be his most romantic work, was depressing; the lack of enthusiasm from the orchestra itself carried the mood into the audience. Even the Musical Director, Enrique Batiz, appeared unable to go through more than the bare minimum of direction.

The concert improved somewhat with Bedrich Smetana's piece, The Moldau. The up-beat rhythm of this number was enjoyable and the orchestra followed suit by performing with color and zest. However, once the string section took charge of the song, the lethargic mood set in once again.

The reward for those who stayed for the second half, as the originally small crowd became even more scant, was a vibrant performance of Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 6 in B minor.

A recognizable melody for even those without a knowledge of classical music, the number incorporated the use of brass and percussion with the traditional strings and woodwinds. The results were dramatic.

It is said that this opus, Tchaikovsky's last symphony, was written as an outline on life. The first, short movement, which depicted the thirst for activity, was a flowing, interesting piece that smoothly transgressed into the second phase, love.

Typical of love's pattern, the melody and velocity of this second number faltered in and out. At times projecting a solemn, almost sad mood, the number eventually blossomed back into full swing before its conclusion.

Disappointments, the third movement, was performed with more robust and vibrance than any of the other numbers. Batiz, for the first time during the 2 1/2 hour concert, showed tremendous energy.

The finale, which ended dying away, was somewhat of a let-down. Sometimes mournful and sometimes dramatic, the piece brilliantly climaxed into intense musical statements before subtly fading out to the end.

One left hoping the Orchestra of Mexico had begun its program with the pizzaz found in the second half of its program.

Costuming to undressing, student work varies at SIU-C

By Charity Gould
Staff Writer

There are more than a hundred different ways of obtaining MONEY. One way for SIU-C students to obtain those needed dollars is through student work jobs that range from janitorial work to nude modeling.

Little did Ann Swanson, a senior in interior design, know that making doll clothes in the fourth grade would help her obtain her current job as a seamstress in the Opera Department.

Armed with needle and thread, Swanson puts in zippers, repairs rips, and alters and makes costumes used in the department's operas.

Swanson, 22, works on operas done by graduate students and has worked on one bigger production done in conjunction with the Theater Department.

"I had to sew pearls on a dress that seemed to be miles and miles long for the play 'The Merry Widow,'" Swanson said. "I enjoyed it, but it was tedious."

Swanson, who works 10 hours a week, usually has to do fittings the night of dress rehearsals.

"As the actors and actresses come back stage, I grab them and alter their costumes, because that's usually the only time we can get together.

"My job is like a study break," said Swanson, whose home town is Carol Stream, Ill. "I enjoy sewing. I sew for myself and I worked in the costume department in high school."

A job drafting at the physical plant decided what career Jane Cappeller decided upon.

"My first semester here, I was in business. I needed a job and had always thought about going into architecture. I went to Woody Hall, told them I had two years of architectural design in high school and referred me to the physical plant."

Cappeller, 20, of Lake Bluff, was hired for the 20-hour a week job and liked it enough to change her course of study. She will graduate in May with an associate degree in architectural technology.

"I work directly with architects and engineers. I draft and update maps," she said.

Cappeller, who has held the job since September 1977, has drawn up a map for the University's farms from "scratch."

Director: Aid available for all

By Ken Mac Garrigle
Staff Writer

You can't always get what you want. But if you try sometimes—you get what you need.
Rolling Stones

College is an expensive proposition that's getting more expensive every year. It takes money to make it. The money is out there, sitting, waiting in Woody Hall, B Wing, 3rd Floor.

"I don't think you can show me a student who's not eligible for some sort of financial aid," said Carl H. Harris, assistant director of student work and financial assistance.

"Financial aid is not simply for the lower socio-economic or the minority student. Just about everybody is eligible for something.

"Take advantage of what's available—that's why it's there. There are a number of people who aren't applying that should be," he said.

Harris estimates that approximately 17,000 people at SIU receive financial aid of one form or another, be it a scholarship, grant, loan, or student job.

Submit two (2) forms, you'll be considered for 90 percent of EVERY financial aid program available at SIU, he said. These two magic forms are the ACT and the ISSC.

ACT stands for "American College Testing." The friendly folks in Iowa City ask for a family financial statement used to see if you're eligible for any cash.

ISSC stands for "Illinois State Scholarship Commission Monetary Award." That's a nice college expression which means that the ISSC is a scholarship (gift) that is based on need—not brains. It pays for tuition and fees—$48 increase and all.

Need is a funny word that often stops people from applying for aid—any aid—Harris said. He said that if need is shown it almost guarantees some kind of aid.

"We would like to make it a requirement that every single student apply for two things: the ACT and the ISSC." No matter what your parents make? "No matter what Mom and Dad make because they don't know!"

"I can show you a Mom and Dad who are making $50,000 and you wouldn't think junior would need any assistance, but I can also show you that Mom and Dad have eight kids in school, are mortgaged up to the hilt, and have enough financial circumstances to justify it for the formulas that are used by the federal government."

Harris says there are some misconceptions about financial aid. One is that it's more trouble than its worth. In some minds, red tape and Woody Hall go hand in hand.

"The actual ACT form isn't that imposing," Harris says. He holds one up for inspection. "That's all it is. What might be imposing are the instructions!" He holds these up. "The instructions are this long because they are in effect a cookbook...step-by-step instructions, with a paragraph on each item." He leaned back in his chair.

"If you're sober, you can't blow it. It's not that difficult. It's really not."

Having an ACT on file means you're eligible for a "Basic Educational Opportunity Grant," BEOG to its friends. BEOG grants are sweet deals because most people are eligible for them. They can be used to pay for anything used for educational purposes—and that's a rather broad field. The fact that they're outright gifts which won't have to be paid back is another selling point. And Uncle Sam runs this program so the BEOG money will always be there.

Harris says that filling out the ACT form takes about an hour. The minimum BEOG award is $200. It costs 30 cents for stamps to mail it. Let's see, that's $200 for two hours time...$100 an hour!

"There is a misconception that it's much more difficult than it is," Harris says. "Now it does require that you have access to relatively accurate financial statements such as your income tax of the last year."

"But as far as being an imposing process so that you can avoid staying out of Woody Hall, no it's not. If you are an intelligent, or just an earnest student, you can make application for just about every form of financial aid."

After you make the first initial move by letting Woody Hall know you're interested in finding out what's out there, the staff can start looking for you.

"No one is expecting students to be comprehensively knowledgeable in everything," Harris says. "but we do expect them to assume a portion of the responsibility in getting in the ball park in which they want to seek financial aid."

"If they can get in the ball park and bring that information to us, we have 29 full-time people on the staff, and there is somebody here who can zero in from the ball park to first base to get them some bucks."

Some feel that getting a scholarship, be it ISSC or academic, is dreaming the impossible dream. Harris disagrees.

"Certainly not," he said. "No, it is not the impossible dream. If you have academic excellence, don't be ashamed of it! A lot of people are for some reason. If you have that excellence you should certainly contact your department and see if you meets its criteria."

Harris advised that no one make any assumptions about financial aid. Instead, they should invest the time and the effort to determine what's available.

"Financial aid is nothing you should be ashamed of," he says. "It is not just for the poor. It is an investment. It's an investment that society is making in its young and the leaders of tomorrow."

But you gotta apply."

Student work offers variety of jobs

"I had to drive out and check out where everything was located. There was no previous map drawn."

Cappeller hopes to work in the office after graduation as a civil service employee and continue her education by obtaining a bachelor's degree in either interior design, engineering or urban design.

Mary Engbring, 21, of Valmeyer, Ill., has a student work job that deals directly with her career and is giving her "good experience."

Working as a lab assistant in Archaeological Investigations, Engbring, a junior in anthropology, counts, categorizes and weighs artifacts.

Engbring, is one of about eight student workers who determine how the artifacts will be sorted.

Previous experience as a lab assistant for other projects and majoring in anthropology, helped Engbring obtain her 20-hour-a-week job.

"I would like to continue working here," said Engbring. "Artifacts are neat, interesting, and a source of wonder."

One art student has a job that relates, in an unusual way, to her major. Drawing art forms has given Patti, 21, who asked that her last name not be mentioned, an insight into her job as a nude model.

Patti models nude for art, sculpting and photography students.

"The easiest part is taking off

Anthropology student Mary Engbring works as a lab assistant in Archaeological Investigations cleaning and sorting artifacts.

your clothes," she said. Sitting still for hours and hours is what's hard.

"Modeling is not how you look, but your attitude. I've had models that are like plastic. A model needs to build a good rapport with the teachers and students."

"I've never had a bad experience with anyone, but at the same time I don't want anyone kooky calling me up. That's why I don't want to use my last name."

Patti, who makes as much as $5 an hour, never answers ads in the paper. She only models after being referred to someone.

"I don't think anyone should call straight from an ad. A person who wants to do modeling should go through the Art Department," she said.

False information on ACT forms won't fool the Financial Aid office

By Ken Mac Garrigue
Staff Writer

Want to break the bank at Woody Hall? The trick is knowing how to beat the system by finding some loopholes and not getting caught.

And it may not be that easy. "I'd be surprised if you could get away with it for free," says Carl H. Harris, assistant director of student work and financial assistance. "I can say that you'll not get anything which doesn't comply with your demonstrated need."

"I can assure you that there is no way you can be crafty about need," he said. "If you don't have the need, you're not going to get the financial aid."

Harris says that it's very difficult to submit falsified information on financial aid forms when copies of your income tax are enclosed and when you're being asked about signed affidavits.

"You've got to have a heart and a stomach of stone to get away with it and keep your cool."

Harris says the system is not easy to manipulate because of verification checks made on each application.

ACT stamps at random to percent of the forms that come into the Financial Aid office. The student is required to present forms that prove that the information they put on their ACT is indeed correct.

"It's a random selection," Harris says. "It's something that's automatic. It shouldn't be viewed as 'hey, I singled you out cause you're funny money.'"

In addition to the random checks, the ACT has a number of what it calls "flags." These are built into its computer need analysis logic standards. Harris says. When something is inconsistent with its band of standards, it will make a flag and say "is this really correct?"

This doesn't stop anything, he said, but it is a signal to Woody Hall that the information may need some checking later on. SU has the option of doing validation checks as well.

"It is not something that is easy to lie about," he said. "If there are discrepancies it's easy for the financial aid professionals to see. When you work with this day after day you see a standard kind of band people fall into. If they fall outside of that band, it's very easy to find out where the discrepancy is."

"Someone may have a large income but their unpaid income may be substantial. They may have a low income and may have a widowed mother who has an income of $7,000 a year but her hubby left her a $100,000 home fully paid for. That could throw the whole thing out of kink. Against a $100,000 home you can take out a lot of low interest mortgage loans."

Music professor to lecture on mind and body control

Professor Alex Murray of the School of Music at the University of Illinois will speak about "F. Mathias Alexander and John Dewey: A Neglected Influence" at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Catipre Stage in the Communication Building.

Dewey, as well as George Bernard Shaw and A.C. Huxley, was a practitioner of the "Alexander Technique," which has been described as a method of consciously controlling the body and mind to function at the maximum of a person's capabilities in daily life.

Murray, who is a certified teacher of the technique, will give a demonstration following the lecture.

Piggy-back rides would improve present student work conditions

By Craig DeVrieze
Staff Writer

(On the whole, student workers are a pretty unappreciated lot. They sweat and slave behind brooms, typewriters, stoves and sales counters by day and diligently usurp facts and figures from garbled textbooks by night.

They break their backs to collect minimum wage and when that paltry paycheck arrives every other Friday, they do what they can to squeeze a few luke-warm draft beers from it. Not the care-free co-ed existence pictured in the movies.

What can be done to improve these rancid working conditions? We suggest benefits (a) the fringe.

How about if student janitors were allowed 15 minutes a day to sniff the Spic and Span. Might make the drudgery a wee bit more bearable.

Certainly life could be made more exciting for student employees over at University Farms. Let 'em saddle up the pigs and take them for a twirl every now and then. Or train employees there as possible Olympians. Give them 20 minutes a day to work on cow-chip hurling.

Student workers at the various cafeterias around campus could do the same. Is there really any difference between a cow-chip and a Mama Grinnel! taco?

You get the idea. Fringe benefits, with the exception of Workmen's Compensation, aren't granted student workers through official University policy. But certain student work jobs, either inherently or through the kindness of individual supervisors, do come with a few niceties on the side.

Student employees at the University Bookstore are given textbooks on loan each semester for free. Mona Glenn, assistant manager at the bookstore, said this is a policy at college bookstores throughout the country and that the policy pays dividends in terms of worker satisfaction.

"It's one way to show that we appreciate them," she said. "It means a lot to them and they give it back to us in terms of performance."

Valerie Ashman, a student secretary at the bookstore, concurs.

"I can't speak for everyone, but I think we all appreciate it. It's a great savings to most of us and increases our sense of responsibility," she said.

The bookstore offers employees access to used books. The workers must show a schedule and are allowed to take the books needed for that schedule. Glenn said. They must return them before the last day of finals each semester.

Other student jobs don't offer such fringe benefits quite that openly but some jobs have enticing fringe side-lights that just come with the territory.

As entertainment editor of the Daily Egyptian, Bill Crowe is privy to some advantages that a lot of students probably wouldn't mind. A part of his job requires him to cover plays, concerts and films. The newspaper provides the funds for that coverage.

"It gives me a bigger sense of responsibility at times," Crowe said. "Since the newspaper is paying for this, I try to do a better job."

Student workers at the Arena and Shryock Auditorium sometimes are able to catch glimpses of concerts and ballgames while at work. A mild fringe benefit.

Cary Drake, Arena manager, admitted that, while workers are kept fairly busy, they probably are able to sneak an occasional glance at an event.

"They're expected to keep fairly busy, but I would guess that they do get to see snatches of a concert or a ballgame," he said.

John Walker, a student janitor at the Arena, said that being able to see events is one

Many scholarships available for go-getters, says counselor

By Jene! Olson
Staff Writer

Like the missing heirs to a fortune, many students are not aware of the money that is available to them through hundreds of thousands of different scholarships.

While many students simply apply for Basic Educational Opportunity Grants or Illinois State Scholarships, money can also be obtained through community clubs, banks, churches and corporations. In addition, many scholarships have been created to assist students from different ethnic backgrounds with particular career interests and qualifications that distinguish them from other groups of students.

"Getting private grant money isn't easy," said Susan Nahlik, a counselor of the Student Work and Financial Assistance Office. "It's like looking for a job. You have to really sell yourself and have a lot of initiative. It's not like applying for a government grant."

Nahlik said the best place to look for private grants is in your home town. Local branches of organizations such as the Elks, Eastern Star, the Knights of Columbus, B'Nai B'rith, the National Urban League, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions Clubs and the Jaycees often provide their members' children with scholarships.

The Elks Foundation, for example, awarded $840,000 in scholarships to 1,156 students for the 1979-80 school year. Students who were in the jurisdiction of the Benevolent and Protective Order of the Elks received grants ranging from $600 to $3,000.

Scholarship programs have also been created by corporations seeking to assist their employees' children. In addition, many labor union locals have designed scholarships for union members and their children.

An example of such a program is the Clark Scholarship Plan, which provides financial assistance to children of employees of the Clark Oil and Refining Corporation in Milwaukee, Wis. The program distributes about $5,000 per year.

There are also scholarships available to children of deceased workers. For example, children of deceased railroad workers may be eligible for benefits if their parents were insured under the Railroad Retirement Act.

In addition, children of coal miners who were afflicted with black lung disease may also apply for compensation if they are between 18 and 22 and single.

"Another place to look for money is in the local banks," Nahlik said. "Trust departments often have money that people left in their wills to help support students in higher education."

In addition to clubs, corporations and banks, scholarships are also offered through churches. Most organized religions provide some educational assistance for their members.

While Nahlik said most of the grant money goes through her office at some point, she does not supply applications for the funds.

"Most of what we do is process the grants that students have already acquired," Nahlik said. "They usually hear about the grants from someone in their home towns or in their high schools. There are also several books in the library that list the various grants. You can read through the books to find out which ones you would be eligible for and then write and ask for an application. It's a lot of work, but it might pay off."

Nahlik said the criteria for the grants varies. Some are based on financial need, others on outstanding ability, unusual talent or a particular career interest.

Several scholarships are being created for women who are over 25 and have been out of school for four or more years. For example, the McCall Life Patterns Fund provides 17 $2,500 awards to help such women. In addition, the Clairor Loving Care Scholarship Program awards $50,000 a year to women who are 30 or over.

"Sometimes we get information about scholarships that are designed for students in particular majors," Nahlik said. "When we do, I send the information to the department because the faculty knows more about who is eligible to receive the money."

Nahlik added that some departments are compiling lists of such scholarships so that students will be aware of them. The School of Agriculture currently has such a list that describes the scholarship, the amount of money available and the qualifications necessary to secure the funds.

In addition to scholarships designed for specific majors, there are also many designed for students of specific races. Black students can apply for funds through the National Achievement Scholarship Program for Outstanding Negro

Air Force offers free education

By Carrie Sweeney
Staff Writer

Tuition: $287, fees: $141.90, housing: $1,000, books: $100, food: $750, miscellaneous: $300. There is no doubt that the cost of a college education, when combined with the high cost of living, is phenomenal. Solutions to the problem, however, can be found.

Take this for instance: tuition: $000, fees: $000, housing: $000, books: $000, food: $000, Plus $448 base pay, $160.80 quarters allowance and $96.30 subsistence allowance if you are married.

Where can you find such a cost-free education? At the Community College of the United States Air Force.

The CCAF officially opened in April of 1972 at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, and since that time has been awarding college credit hours for the completion of on the spot technical training and learning experiences, said Gerry Dunn, Air Force recruiting officer for the Carbondale area.

"The educational process begins from day one in the way of training for the Air Force. The structured six-week basic training period, (which is worth four semester-hours of physical education credits), is an education process in itself because it includes training on lifestyle, rules and regulations, Air Force customs and health and safety," Dunn said.

The accumulation of credits, according to Dunn, begins with enlistment. By completing technical requirements and moving up the hierarchy of ranks, one can, in about two years, earn an Associate in Applied Science degree and specialize in almost any field.

"There are seven technical training centers, stationed at various Air Force bases, that cover nearly every interest. We offer training in areas such as electronics, mechanics, administration and general support fields, which include law enforcement, security and fire protection," Dunn said.

Once a person has qualified for induction into the Air Force and has survived the strenuous basic training, the learning speeds up tremendously.

The first step is a technical school where college credit is given for classes taken and for on the job training. (OJT). The length of the courses, according to Dunn, varies between four and 52 weeks. During this time learning and technical ability is evaluated through tests and "lab" experience.

"A trainer is assigned to each individual and the learning is on a one-to-one basis. This helps the individual apply what he has learned in the classroom to practical work," Dunn said.

"At this point, the learning is similar to going to a regular college, with more emphasis on the practical application of what is learned," he added.

"The courses, however, are immensely condensed and an individual is working at a skill almost all day long. One semester's worth of studies is roughly compacted into about one week of time."

Recruiting standards 'strict'

By Carrie Sweeney
Staff Writer

The standards for admission into the United States Air Force, which were set up in 1947 and since then have not, and will not change, are strict, said Gerry Dunn, Air Force recruiting officer for the Carbondale area.

Basic enrollment age is 17 to 28, although a person 17 years of age must have parental permission to enlist. Once past this point, the scrutinizing process of acceptance begins.

The second step in the process, Dunn said, is the passing of the enlistment exam. Prepared to be administered at a level equivalent to the ninth grade, the exam covers the areas of general education, electronics, mechanics and technology.

"All that is needed to pass the test is a good qualifying score in general education background and a good over-all score in the other areas," Dunn explained.

"The composite score is also used as a counseling tool. The

"The credit assignment," Dunn explained, "is also about one credit per week of technical schooling."

In two to two-and-a-half years an individual will have progressed through technical school to the Journeyman level, with credit given along the way. At this point, a person is almost fully trained and can perform with minimum or no supervision.

It is at this level, Dunn said, that people begin to repay the Air Force for their training by assisting the next individual in line with OJT.

In about half of the initial enlistment time, a person, with the addition of required civilian courses, can earn a Career Education Certificate with 64 credit hours.

The Tuition Assistance Program enables enlisted persons to take those courses needed to complete their degree at any on- or off-base accredited college or university. This applies to those within the United States and overseas.

The Air Force, Dunn said, pays up to 75 percent of the tuition and fees cost on an unlimited number of courses. Once a degree is granted, the individual may still take additional courses under this same program.

According to Dunn, the Tuition Assistance Program can also be used in the form of correspondence courses with any accredited college or university. This program, he added, is useful for people stationed in secluded areas who wish to complete their degree.

"Under this program, an individual is assigned a professor at whichever university he chooses. The assignments are mailed in to be graded and the tests are taken on the honors system," Dunn said.

Also, through the VEAP program, individuals can save up enough money to attend school once they have completed their enlistment time.

"The Air Force then matches that amount of money two-to-one, so that at the end of their enlistment time the people have a fairly large sum of money to put toward their education," Dunn said.

(Continued from Page 12) test measures aptitude, interests and abilities, and helps place people in a field they are qualified for," he added.

A physical examination, the next step, is rigorous and detailed, and many people are disqualified at this level for a variety of reasons.

The complete examination, conducted in St. Louis, leaves no aspect of health untouched. Such physical disabilities as asthma, ulcers, missing fingers or limbs and flat feet, Dunn said, are not acceptable.

In addition, each person must meet certain height and weight specifications. Each individual, male or female, must be at least five feet tall and not over six-foot-eight inches tall. The weight stipulations, Dunn added, are based on the individual's height.

"The Air Force sets high standards for enlistment. We make it difficult to qualify because we need good, qualified people," Dunn said.

Blanc brings characters to life

By Jenell Olson
Staff Writer

From Bugs Bunny's "What's up, Doc?" to Tweety's "I twaw I taw a puddy tat" to Sylvester's "Sssufferin' sssuccotash!" to Woody Woodpecker's laugh, Mel Blanc brought his famous cartoon characters to life in the Student Center Wednesday night.

After jumping from one voice to another during the opening minutes of his lecture, Blanc said, "I just did that to let you know who the hell I am." The audience cheered, for they knew he was the man behind the cartoon characters they grew up with.

"I can create a different voice by just looking at an animal," Blanc said during an interview before the lecture. "If I see a little kitten, for example, I wonder how it would talk if it could. I know it has a little tiny voice so I tighten up my throat and make it sound very small," he said as the pitch of his voice changed to a squeak.

Blanc said he created the voices by looking at still pictures of the characters and the story boards indicating what they were going to do. Several of the voices were created in an instant, he added.

"Bugs Bunny was a little stinker," said the man with a likeness of the character embroidered on his tie. "I thought I had to create a tough voice for him—small but tough. I wasn't sure which was tougher, Brookland or the Bronx, so I put the two of them together, Doc. That's how I got the voice of Bugs," he said as his voice changed to that of the famous rabbit.

When asked exactly how many voices he does, Blanc said he wasn't sure.

"In 1961 I was in a car accident that almost killed me," he said. "I was in a full-body cast for a year. One day I decided to figure out how many different voices I do. I started early in the morning and passed the 400 mark before I fell asleep at midnight. That was 19 years ago and I've done many since then. So they're not kidding too much when they say I'm the man with a thousand voices."

Blanc added that he knows every dialect and can do eight or 10 voices for each one. For example, Pepe Le Pew, the amorous skunk, speaks with a French accent and Speedy Gonzales speaks with a Spanish one.

"I'm able to do all of the different creations because of my throat. When I had it x-rayed several years ago the doctor said it was the first time he saw a throat with the same muscular construction as Enrico Caruso's. I can't sing the way he does, but I can redeem my voice within an hour after losing it," he said.

Of all the characters he portrays, Blanc said Bugs Bunny is his favorite.

"Bugs is perhaps the most recognized voice," he said. "Surveys have shown that he is heard by 100 million people every day. They even use his voice in cartoons shown in Europe. They simply write the words in their language underneath the picture."

Since he started lecturing at colleges almost two years ago, Blanc has learned that Bugs is not the most popular nationwide, however. In Texas, Yosemite Sam and Foghorn Leghorn seem to be the favorites, he said.

In addition to discussing the histories of his characters, Blanc also showed three Academy Award-winning cartoons during his lecture. He supplied the voices for each of them. Sometimes there are eight or 10 voices in a picture.

One of the cartoons that was shown, "Birds Anonymous," inspired a woman in the audience to yell, "Alright Tweety Bird!"

Speaking in the bird's voice, Blanc said, "You like Tweety Bird? I like him too. He's made me lots of money."

In addition to lecturing, Blanc said he is doing "as many or more" cartoons as ever. He is also the voice of Twiki, the robot on the TV show "Buck Rogers and the 25th Century."

Even though he is 72 years old, Blanc said he is not planning to retire.

"My wife says to me, 'Why don't you retire?' You don't need anything. But I say, 'Look, I won't retire until I kick over.' I would go nuts if I had to retire because I love my work so much," he said.

However, if he does have to retire someday, Blanc said that his son, Noel, will be able to take over the voices.

"He could do them when he was just 12," he said. "I would talk to him in a dialect and he would answer the same way. He

'Old' Faithfull spits out depression

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

Once upon a time there was a girl named Marianne Faithfull—the lithe, blond, quavery-voiced girlfriend of Mick Jagger—who recorded one of his tunes, "As Tears Go By" in 1964. As time went by, Faithfull's music career and her relationship with Jagger fizzled. She was left by the wayside of drugs and gossip.

Surprisingly, Faithfull is back to tell us what it's like at the bottom. She survived the drugs, dirt and loneliness and on "Broken English," her first LP on Island Records, Faithfull's voice is a frightening croak from the past. She is angry, muddled, confused and frightened, but she has mustered enough courage to tell us about it.

The songs on "Broken English" are not autobiographical, but they match Faithfull's austere mood. Some tunes are better than others, but on each one Faithfull's scratchy, masculine voice expresses pain as keenly as the cry of an animal caught in a trap.

The band is low-keyed and dreary, which actually helps bring the mood of the album into focus. Most of the tunes have a modern British rhythm and blues style with the low rumbling of synthesizers. The tunes can be classified as either pathetically bitter or hazy and confused. They are filled with spite and menace rather than self-pity or remorse.

"Broken English" contains John Lennon's "Working Class Hero," Shel Silverstein's "Ballad of Lucy Jordan," Barry Reynolds' "Guilt," Joe Mavety's "What's the Hurry" and Ben Brierley's "Brain Drain." My favorite tune is the latter: it has a real haunting and drowsy beat. Faithfull's rendition of "Guilt" is enveloped in pain and confusion ("I feel guilt, I feel guilt. Though I ain't done nothin' wrong, I feel guilt.") She also co-wrote three of the songs, including the title tune.

Perhaps the most powerful and revealing tune on "Broken English" is the last one, "Why D'Ya Do It." It's an obscene and crude confession of sexual jealousy and Faithfull spares us no pain as she moans and growls.

Here is where the suffering and loneliness of the past years is revealed as she implores her lover, "Why'd you do what you did? Drove my ego to a really bad skid" and "Why'd you do what she said? I feel blood on my fangs but it's not enough."

Girlfriends, lovers, and sidekicks of rock 'n' roll heroes will forever be fading into the past, but every now and then one comes back to haunt us. The rancid taste of defeat is still fresh in Faithfull's mouth and in a controlled and unique style she is determined to spit it out. Record courtesy of Plaza Records reason why he enjoys his job, although he ranks it behind flexible hours and pleasant working conditions.

"It's definitely more pleasant to work at a concert than to be a janitor in a cafeteria and watch people eat," he joked.

Other work positions don't offer fringe benefits per se. But some supervisors try to do things for their employees.

Joe Gasser, assistant housing director for operations, said his office tries to throw parties for employees when occasions dictate.

"It's because they're nice people," Gasser said. "We couldn't run this place without student workers."

James Moore, assistant director for student work and financial assistance, thinks student work jobs are fringe benefits in and of themselves.

Counselor: scholarships available

 Students and the National Scholarship Service Fund for Negro Students along with a host of others.
 The Bureau of Indian Affairs Higher Education Assistance Program provides financial assistance to students who are one-fourth or more Indian, Eskimo or Aleutian. These grants are governmental rather than private.

 "There are also several scholarships that never come through this office at all."

Nablik said "For example, sometimes a women's club will have a banquet and end up giving a $250 check to a student who will be going to school the following year."
 Nablik added that because there is an abundance of scholarships available, students who don't qualify for BEO, or ISSC needn't be discouraged. A lot of digging and a little paper work may result in a cheaper ride through school.

Wanted: a few good leaders.

Being a Marine officer requires many things. Total responsibility. Ability to give 100% to every challenge every time. Above all, leadership; the single most critical skill sought after by an employer—military or civilian. If you have the potential, desire, toughness and determination, we can make you a leader. Not just while you're a Marine officer but for the rest of your life. See your Marine Corps Programs Representatives in the Student Center at the River Rooms, Apr. 1-3 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. or call (314)263-5814 collect.

Shoes kick hard in foot stompers; the sneakers are on the wrong feet

By Ken Mac Garrigue
Staff Writer and
David Flechs
Student Writer

In the interest of fair play, the Shoes debut album, "Present Tense," is given point-counterpoint treatment by two "experts" who know GOOD music when they hear it.

Shoes, from Zion, Ill., is one rock band that kicks ass. Their stage show must consist of each member of the band kicking another on the hind end during each song—hence the name, "Shoes."

Their distinctive sound reminds one of the Rasberries and the Byrds, recorded today in the "Present Tense." The song remains the same and it's worth hearing again.

As Jimmy Page once said, the song DOES remain the same; however, he was referring to the primitive rock sounds of the Byrds and Rasberries and how those have matured into the high class progressive rock of those such as Led Zep, Kansas, etc.

Shoes receives good airplay because it has managed to mainstream its sound. The performers' record company (Elektra) seems to be 100 percent behind them, and that's rare, because (for now) they're not a "name" band, though they hit the AM market strong with their killer single "Too Late." From the opening guitar hook, the listener is immediately brought into a song that won't let go.

A Music Review

It possesses one's brain much like the noise in a boiler factory, and the doors in this boiler factory are locked. Its AM success is no surprise, since attaining AM radio status has lately been associated with the demise of any given rock band.

These Shoes are built to last. They followed up "Too Late" with the powerful "Tomorrow Night." The sophomore jinx seems to have no effect on these foot-stomping rockers.

Of course, a freshman who flunks out the first year has no worry of doing worse. So it is with this offshoot-of-disco band. Its fame now rests mostly on its INFAMY.

The Shoes display their versatility on the rest of the album, slowing down most of their songs, yet leaving the bite in them. Unlike some bands, Shoes doesn't have to sledgehammer its point across. Of course, this is easy since they have no intelligent points to get across other than the Freudian subconscious drives such as "drugs, sex, violence..." As for versatility, their idea of this is shouting a few decibals louder or softer.

The Shoes wear them proudly

One has to admire them for kicking off Elvis' blue suede and donning sneakers, but they should at least put them on the right foot.

Blanc's voices thrill audience

only has trouble with one voice—Yosemite Sam—because it's kind of raucous and deep in the throat," he said, taking on yet another character's voice.

In addition to speaking in several of his famous voices, Blanc even devised a new one during his presentation. When a member of the audience described SIU-C's mascot, the Saluki, Blanc created a voice for the dog and the audience cheered wildly.

The sentiments of many members of the audience could probably be summed up in the words of one student who told Blanc, "I used to drive my parents crazy when I got up on Saturday mornings to turn on the cartoons. I'd just like to say thanks for making cartoons enjoyable to me on Saturday mornings for a long time."

Blanc's lecture ended with a standing ovation.

'Innuendo' promising, but flawed

By Craig DeVriere
Staff Writer

"Innuendo," the recording debut of respected L.A. session guitarist Danny Kortchmar, shows that we can someday expect an interesting rock 'n' roll effort from the ambitious, determined musician. But, unfortunately, this isn't it.

While "Innuendo" shows promise beneath the surface, there is too much wrong with it up front. Lyrically, Kortchmar leans too heavily on cliches and musically the guitar work is one-tracked and indistinguishable.

This is particularly disturbing. Kortchmar is not a guitarist without credentials. He was instrumental in injecting an electric sound or James Taylor's 1977 release "J.T." and authored a hit single off that album, "Honey Don't Leave L.A." He also turned in some impressive session work on Linda Ronstadt's "Living in the U.S.A."

One problem here is that Kortchmar chose to handle the bulk of the guitar-playing himself. Kortchmar backing himself simply doesn't work. He has a distinctive ringing, riff-oriented guitar style and throughout "Innuendo," his leads blend too closely with his rhythm lines.

This becomes evident on the only unflawed effort on the album, "Hair of the Dog," a song Kortchmar co-wrote with another L.A. session man, Waddy Watchel. While Kortchmar is a fine session-guitarist, Watchel is the finest. They join together here and Watchel fills the musical voids that are all too conspicuous on the rest of the album.

Kortchmar's biggest mistake may have been his decision to produce the album himself. There are several presentable efforts here that, with different treatment, could have come across much better. A more experienced producer could have made this a better album.

"Endless Sleep," which enlists vocal help from Ronstadt, is one song that badly needs a more subtle production touch. A heavy, flowing ballad, the song requires a much softer approach than Kortchmar gives it.

Another song with a similar problem is "Ego Tripper." This is a semi-humorous, Eagles-like tune that would have benefited from less heavy production techniques.

The title-track, "You and What Army" and "Betty and

A Music Review

Her Friend" are spirited rockers that are under-mixed and could have used a lighter approach also. On these, Kortchmar's guitar work gets lost within itself.

All through "Innuendo," the artist's song-writing inexperience trips him up. He employs over-used song ideas and cliché lyric lines. For instance: "All the best laid plans of mice and men. Somehow work against you in the end," (from "When the Eagle Flies") or "The streets are crowded with a thousand rules. The books are crowded with a thousand rules." (Killer's Kiss).

Still, "Innuendo" has some good points. Kortchmar handles the lead vocals quite well. And songs like "Lost in the Shuffle," "Killer's Kiss" and "When the Eagle Flies" show implicitly that he has something to say. "Lost in the Shuffle" and "Killer's Kiss" work well in tandem. On the former, Kortchmar discusses his innate confusion with the city and with life and on the latter shows the fortitude to push through that confusion.

"I Starred in that Movie" is the one composition Kortchmar penned by himself that works really well. Backed by an acoustic soriba rhythm line, the song is lyrically sound and interesting. Here, he calls for sincerity in male-female relationships because he found out the hard way that smooth, calculated movie-star techniques fail in the end.

That song, "Hair of the Dog," and other sporadic glimpses of potential throughout the rest of the album prove that although "Innuendo" isn't by any means a classic record album, such a product may be forthcoming from Danny Kortchmar in the future.

Specials' ska-reggae tunes alternative to disco drudgery

By Bill Crowe
Entertainment Editor

Punk, disco and even power pop are all passe in England now. "Ska" is the first and last word in dance music in the U.K. for the year 1980. Bands like the Specials may help make it the next big thing in the United States as well.

Ska music is a Jamaican-influenced predecessor to reggae which was popular in the early-to-mid '60s. It was originally a non-political offshoot of calypso which was popular with the Mod movement of the times. Its recent reirth—through such bands as Madness and the Specials—has also fostered a new interest in Mod fashions, which include mohair suits and porkpie hats.

The Specials' debut album, with Elvis Costello at the production controls, is a tightly-paced 15-song set which deftly blends the best of punk, ska and rock music forms. These "rude boys," as they wish to be called, are skilled rhythmic technicians who feel equally at home with frenetic rockers or the more traditional reggae-ska forms.

Much of the album consists of keyboardist-songwriter Jerry Dammers' simple, concise, yet effective lyrics punctuated by a throbbing, precise beat and stinging guitar work by Roddy Byers and Lynvy! (the only name I could find for him).

Dammers is a perceptive, intelligent songwriter who does his best work in the area of satire or social commentary, such as "Stupid Marriage" and "Too Much Too Young." His threat to "spread manure on your bed of roses," aimed at a now-married old girlfriend is just as perceptively angry as it is hilarious.

THE SPECIALS

The Specials also pay homage to the old masters, including Robert "Dandy" Thompson's "A Message to You Rudy," a reworking of Rufus Thomas' "Do the Dog," and the Maytals' early "Monkey Man." The band should be given credit for presenting these old classics to today's younger audiences.

There's also a communal aspect about this album which gives the Specials an undeniably tight, nearly live sound. Vocalists Terry Hall and Neville Staples work wonderfully with the rest of the band's classy harmonic backup and the interplay between the two is effective and comically angry. The band sounds like a well-tuned machine with all the gears functioning in precision. There is no superstar in this band, and rightfully so.

If anyone stands out on the album it's Horace Panter with his punchy bass work. Costello wisely took note of Panter's expertise at punctuating the Specials' rhythm section and gave him work a prominent position in the final mix.

Elvis has also learned a thing or two about production from his own mentor of the mixing board Nick Lowe. The Specials debut moves along at a rapid pace without compromising the artists' musical or lyrical integrity, much like Lowe has done on his work with Costello. Elvis is also giving new talent a much-needed push, much like he got a few years back with Stiff Records, his first label.

America is tiring of the disco drudgery it has suffered through for the past few years. However, good dance music is always in demand. Maybe new bands such as the Specials and their ska-reggae counterparts are the perfect solution.

Carol Foss returns a shot during her singles match against St. Louis University. The lady Salukis won their fourth meet of the year, defeating the Billikens, 7-2. The next, and last, home meet of the season is April 14 against Principia College.

Netters overpower Billikens, 7-2

By Rick Klatt
Staff Writer

Winning, it's so much fun. Just ask the women's tennis team. They upped their spring record to 4-1 Thursday with a 7-2 victory over the St. Louis University Billikens at the University tennis courts.

SIU won five of six singles matches and two of three doubles matches, all in straight sets, to take its first win since returning from its spring trip. The match was one of two dual matches the Salukis will have at home in the spring. The other is April 14 against Principia.

"I can't remember the last time we started off so well," Saluki Coach Judy Auld said. "We looked really good, a lot better than we did in the fall." Last fall, the Salukis were 6-1, but were hindered by the absences of Mauri Kohler and Lisa Warrem, two of Auld's top players.

"The biggest difference between the spring and fall is that the team is anxious to play," Auld said. "In the fall, the girls fell into a rut. They were losing, and losing, and losing. They went out to the courts and just figured they'd lose. Now they've got a really good positive attitude."

And with good reason. The Salukis easily handled a Billiken team that entered the match with a 5-1 record.

"They've just got so much depth," St. Louis Coach Fred Dobney said. "We just couldn't compete with them at the lower positions."

The Billikens' wins were at the top of the lineup. No. 1 singles player Julie Bookmeyer defeated Jeannie Jones, 6-1, 6-1, and teamed up with Sue Pulley to defeat Jones and Mauri Kohler, 7-5, 1-6, 6-4, in No. 1 doubles. But the rest belonged to the Salukis.

Lisa Warrem defeated Dena Hawkins, 6-2, 6-3, in No. 2 singles; Kohler downed Barb Smith, 6-2, 6-4, at No. 3; and Debbie Martin beat Pulley, 6-2, 6-2, at No. 4.

At the bottom, where Dobney said the Billikens were out-classed, Carol Foss defeated Angela Dippe, 6-2, 6-0, and Fran Watson downed Maureen Hemann, 6-2, 6-4.

As it was during the Salukis spring trip, the doubles teams were successful. At the No. 2 position, Foss and Warrem won their fifth match in as many tries, defeating Hawkins and Smith, 6-1, 6-4. Martin and Watson improved their record to 4-1 by topping Hemann and Toni Pulpen, 6-3, 6-2.

Golfers aim for top 5 at Evansville

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

Coming off a somewhat disappointing first outing in the Gulf Coast Intercollegiate, the Saluki men's golf team is hoping to rebound Friday and Saturday in the 36-hole University of Evansville Golf Invitational.

The 12-team field is much the same as last year's. However, last year's competition was cut short by heavy rains. Although SIU-C coach Walt Siemsgluz has conceded probable team and individual honors to the opposition, he's expecting a finish in the top five by the Salukis.

"I expect Eastern Kentucky to win it going away," Siemsgluz said. "They have a balanced squad with five super players. A guy by the name of Dave Gher is their No. 1 man. He won at Murray State in the fall with rounds of 69 and 73.

"SIU-Edwardsville is always tough, too," the coach added. "They have Les Agne, a senior who's been All-American in Division II the past three years. He's been winning quite a few."

So where does SIU-C fall in here? In only its second match of the spring season, maybe not

"I can't conceive not going to the finals," Schieble said. "If I make the finals, I'll be only the second gymnast in history to make the NCAA finals four years in a row. The other gymnast was Ted Marcey. He is a legend among side horse men."

Schieble said he obviously is trying to finish first, but would not make a prediction of where he would end up. His scores have been among the nation's best all year long.

He said his top competition will come from people he has competed against before. According to Schieble, Dave Stoldt and Butch Zunich from Illinois will be two of his toughest opponents.

on top, but, according to Siemsgluz, in the upper half of the standings.

"We have a great chance of winding up in the top five," Siemsgluz said. "Although we don't have our regular No. 4 man (Mike Thompson), it doesn't mean we'll be out of it."

Siemsgluz expects other top-five candidates to include Ball State ("They used to be pretty tough"), Western Kentucky ("They were tough in the fall") and Purdue ("They're good, but we beat them in the fall.")

The five Salukis expected to compete at Evansville's Oak Meadow Country Club include Doug Clemens, Butch Poshard, Rich Jarrett, and freshman additions Rob Hammond and David Glass. The early-season lineup change is nothing new, because a standard five- or six-man group is usually not arrived on until later in the season.

"Usually five players gradually separate out and it's easy to arrive on a lineup," Siemsgluz said. "Their scores usually show it. But other times, there's a lot of competition for that fourth or fifth spot. I won't know for a while."

Oak Meadow is characterized by large greens and tree-lined, tight fairways, according to Siemsgluz. The putting problems his team encountered in the Gulf Coast Intercollegiate should be lessened somewhat by the regular grass surface at Oak Meadow, as well as the similarity of its greens to those on the back nine at the Salukis' home course, the Jackson County Country Club.

"Since we're back on the regular putting service, putting shouldn't give us as much of a problem," Siemsgluz said. "In fact, although I expect higher scores from everybody, I don't think any one factor should give us any difficulty."

"It's a little longer course and might make our iron shots a bit more difficult, but it seems like the tougher the course, the tougher we play," he said.

The tough going the Salukis encountered at the Gulf Coast Intercollegiate hasn't been a detriment to the team, either, he said.

"Considering the fact that we hardly had any chance to practice beforehand, we didn't let it get us down," Siemsgluz said.

"I will buy or trade for scrap gold and silver."

Things normal on 'Hill'; SIU beats Panthers, 4-1

By Mark Pabich
Staff Writer

The SIU baseball team opened its home season Thursday afternoon at Abe Martin field and all was in place. The sunshine was out, the stands were full, the "hill" was reasonably crowded, and the Salukis won, defeating the Greenville Panthers, 4-1.

Sophomore John Bauer, who came in relief in the third inning for starter Bob Huber, picked up his first win of the season, the Salukis' eighth. Junior Paul Evans, who has won eight straight games, relieved Bauer in the seventh, pitching three scoreless innings.

Saluki Coach Itchy Jones said he used three pitchers because "it's still so early in the season. It was a little cold out there today and we didn't want anyone to work that long."

Greenville's lone run off SIU's pitchers came in the third inning. Panther centerfielder Tim Summers scored on a sacrifice fly after being pushed to third on a fielder's choice

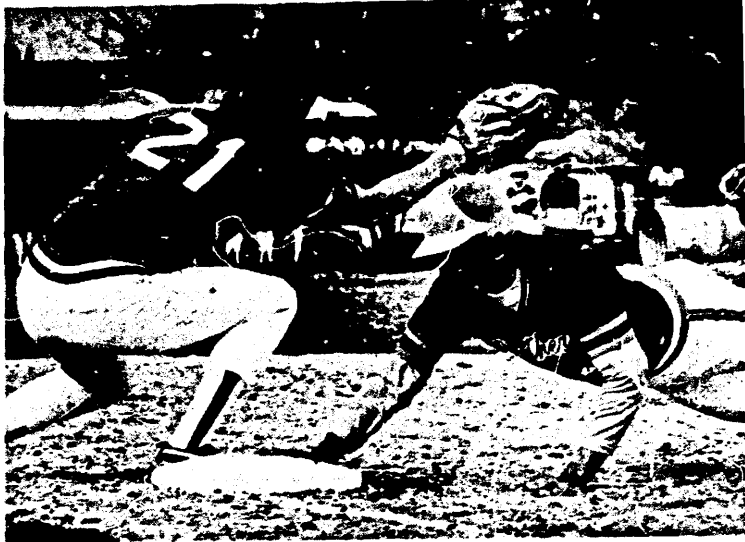

The Salukis scattered six hits off Panther pitchers Glen Hobby and Murry Salmon. Jones said his team is not hitting up to its potential.

"We still are striking out too much and the same guys have been the ones who are hitting," he said. "We need to have everyone in the lineup hitting." SIU tied the game, 1-1, in the fourth inning after senior Rick Fiala doubled in junior Jim Adduci, who reached first on a single.

Three of SIU's hits came in the fifth inning when the Salukis scored three runs. Senior shortstop Bill Lyons opened the inning with a single and junior second baseman Bob Doerrler followed with a walk, putting two men on.

Senior Kevin House drilled a deep triple, scoring Lyons and Doerrler. Adduci, the Salukis leading hitter so far this season, drove in House with one of his two singles for the day, ending SIU's scoring.

A Greenville baserunner reaches first base before Paul Ondo can make the tag on a pick-off attempt. The Salukis, 8-5 this season, defeated the Panthers, 4-1, in Thursday's game. The Salukis have double-headers Friday and Saturday at Abe Martin Field against Miami of Ohio.

Salukis to host lone home track meet

By Rod Smith
Staff Writer

Southern Illinois track and field fans will have their only chance to watch the men's track team compete when Lincoln College of Missouri comes to McAndrew Stadium Saturday for the Salukis' lone home meet.

The shot put, discus and javelin will begin at 12:30 p.m. at the athletic fields east of the Arena. Action starts at McAndrew Stadium with the pole vault, long jump and triple jump at 1:30 p.m. and the running events starting at 2 p.m.

"It should be very interesting track meet," Saluki

Coach Lew Hartzog said. "Lincoln is void in several field events, so we'll show dominance there, but its running team is one of the best they have had in a few years. The events on the track at McAndrew should be very competitive."

Lincoln, a primarily black four-year college in Jefferson City, Mo., finished second in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association indoor championships earlier this year.

Hartzog said Lincoln is strong in the mile, half mile, hurdles and sprints.

"They have three outstanding half-milers and that should be one of the best races," Hartzog said. Avery Bolts, who anchored the East St. Louis High School mile relay to a state championship. Kenneth Stevenson and Regenold Williams will run for Lincoln against the Salukis' Tom Ross and Ken Perkins.

Derek Booker, Lance Peeler and Mike Ward will run the 400 against Lincoln's top three sprinters.

Lincoln also has an outstanding miler in Mike Lamb. The Salukis' top miler, Karsten Schulz, has been stricken with a sore throat and won't run the mile, but he will meet Lamb in the 1,500 meters.

David Lee, who qualified for the NCAA championships in the intermediate hurdles last week, won't be entered in the jumps, but he will run both hurdles, as well as anchor both the mile relay and the 400-meter relay.

Hartzog said Lincoln has two good sprinters in Harrison Carry and Lyndon Byrd. They will run both the 100- and 200-meter dashes against Clarence Robison, Ed Hester, Marvin Hinton and Dan Jeffers of SIU.

The coach said that the outdoor season is being used much like the indoor season—a tune-up for the Missouri Valley Conference Championships in

May. "We're trying to use this season to condition our young people for the MVC meet. I'm losing sleep already," Hartzog said. "They'll literally have to compete at the same level that they did indoors—a super effort."

The Salukis won't have any trouble finding tough competition. Next week, SIU will run against Big Ten track powers Indiana and Wisconsin and it faces interstate rival Illinois the week after.

"We're really going to have our hands full these next two weeks," Hartzog said.

New faces abound for ISU, SIU in softball opener

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

It's generally accepted that the Saluki women's softball team is lacking an experienced lineup, with the exception of the outfield. Illinois State, which will visit SIU for a doubleheader at 1 p.m. Saturday, has something in common with the Salukis in regard to new faces on its roster.

But with ISU, there's a difference. Although Redbird fans might wonder who they will be seeing early in the season, they can rest assured that with the new faces come experience. The freshmen-dominated SIU team may get a baptism by fire Saturday afternoon.

The story of ISU's new-look team starts with the coach, Margie Wright. Wright is in her first year for the Redbirds after guiding Eastern Illinois to its first state title last season. Accompanied by her assistant coach of last season, Melinda Fischer, Wright came to ISU after Eastern elected to compete in Division II this season.

With the new coaching duo arrived in Normal, some new players arrived, also. Third baseman Jane Grebner, designated hitter Glenda Simmering and pitcher Bonnie Kraemer all became Redbirds and quickly made their presence known last week, when Illinois State played in the Oklahoma Invitational.

ISU won three games in the tournament—a pair of 6-0 shutouts against Kearney State and a 4-2, 11-inning decision over Kansas. Michigan State finally eliminated the Redbirds in the next round with a 6-0 win, giving ISU a 3-1 mark going into Saturday's double-header against SIU.

In the early going, Kraemer, who probably will start against the Salukis, has a 2-1 record. Saluki Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer should be familiar with the Redbird junior, as she pitched a pair of 1-0 shutouts against SIU in last year's state tournament.

Kraemer pitched wins against Kearney State and Kansas before losing to Michigan State last weekend. In her three outings, Kraemer has struck out 18 while walking eight.

Grebner collected eight hits, including five doubles, in the Oklahoma tournament, giving her a .532 average. Simmering is batting .400 as a designated hitter.

Another familiar face to Brechtelsbauer will be Redbird shortstop Deb Stamm, who was a Saluki last season before transferring to ISU. Traveling hasn't seemed to affect her playing ability. Stamm has a .307 average with three RBIs in the early going.

There are a few old faces in the Redbird lineup, including junior outfielder Wendy Smith, who carries a .333 average.

Saluki pitchers expected to contain the ISU offense are untested freshman Donna Dapson and sophomore Vicki Staffko.

NCAA qualifiers brighten gym year

By Ed Dougherty
Staff Writer

There is always some reward to a coach who goes through an unsuccessful season like the one men's gymnastics Coach Bill Meade has just gone through.

His team just finished a dismal 3-10 injury-riddled season, but the silver lining is that three of his gymnasts qualified for the NCAA gymnastics championships.

Brian Babcock, Randy Bettis and Dave Schieble have qualified for championships, to be held April 3-5 at Lincoln, Neb. Babcock qualified as an all-around performer and a parallel bars specialist. Bettis in the floor exercise and Schieble on the pommel horse.

"I'm really pleased that the kids made the finals," Meade said. "I'll be happy if they make All-American."

To be considered a gymnastics All-American, a gymnast must finish in the top six in his particular event. There are 30 gymnasts who will be competing for the national championship in six events and an all-around championship.

For Babcock, it will be the first time in championship competition that he is not competing for the all-around title. Because of an ankle injury he sustained against Ohio State in February, he will be competing only on the parallel bars.

Babcock said he qualified for the all-around competition, but decided to let someone who will do a better job of competing at this particular time take his place.

He said he has not put as much time into training for the parallel bars as he should because he still wants to qualify for the United States Gymnastics Federation all-around championships in late April.

"The USGF meet is the most important meet of the year," Babcock said. "Even those gymnasts who are not at the NAAs are at the USGFs. It will give me a chance to see how I compare to guys like Kurt Thomas and Bart Conner."

Babcock said he is not as excited about the NCAA meet as the USGF, but thinks he still will do well.

"If I do well, I think I can place in the top six," he said.

Bettis is not as nonchalant as Babcock.

"I really was surprised when Coach told me that I had qualified," Bettis said. "Originally, I had not made the finals, but they (the NCAA selection committee) called Coach and told him I had made it."

"We don't know how come I made it so late, but we aren't going to ask any questions. I'm just glad I made it," he said.

Bettis said if he does well and "hits" the set that he has been working on, he should finish in the top five. Even though this is his first postseason competition, he said he does not feel any added pressure to perform exceptionally well.

"The only pressure I feel is the pressure I put on myself," Bettis said.

The other Saluki to qualify for the NCAA championships, Schieble, is no stranger to the pressures of postseason competition.

Schieble is the real veteran of the Salukis' tournament squad. This will be the fourth time he has competed in the NCAA finals. Last year he finished what he termed a "disappointing" seventh.

His best finish was two years ago, when he ended up fourth in the country.
