Runners take the start at the Arthritis Foundation's Annual Jingle Bell Run. Despite the rainy weather more than 300 runners participated in the five kilometer fund raising event that took place Saturday morning at the University Mall. Funds raised will be used for arthritis research as well as programs and services for those who suffer from about 100 diseases associated with arthritis. More than 50,000 people in Southern Illinois suffer from the ailment.

SIUC reps to attend IBHE public hearing

By Christy Gutowski
Administration Writer

Two SIUC constituency leaders, along with 60 other state university representatives, are in Chicago today to participate in an Illinois Board of Higher Education's public hearing.

Steven Kraft, chairman of the Graduate Council, and Jervis

Underwood, president of the Faculty Senate, left for Chicago last week to discuss the board's Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative.

Molly D'Esposito, board member of IBHE and an SIUC trustee, said no action will be taken at the hearing.

"The hearing came about after (IBHE received) requests to address the board directly from a number of different campuses," she said.

But action will be taken Tuesday at IBHE's monthly meeting, she said. The board will vote on a resolution that University officials say will decide if IBHE's program recommendations or the University's own internal planning process will be followed.

The resolution encourages campus input toward PQP and other higher education cost-saving initiatives.

It states institutions and governing boards should use IBHE's recommendations or "alternatives of comparable scope developed by each campus" following its guidelines.

Kraft also will give board members a written testimony from SIUC's Phoenix Committee at the hearing, said William Elliott, an associate professor in journalism and committee chairman.

The Phoenix Committee drafted a proposal for a new communications college that would include the journalism, radio-

Somalian student speaks at benefit rice, water dinner

By Angela L. Hyland
International Writer

Organizers raised almost $1,400 at a Somalian benefit supper to provide aid to people living halfway around the world.

They didn't expect to hear first hand Friday from someone whose friends they might be helping.

Mohamoud Farah Egal, a Somalian graduate student in aviation management, said he has experienced numerous hardships in his home country and is very concerned about recent events.

"I know that I know a lot more about what's going on over there than most of the people at the supper," Egal said. "I went so I could talk about some of the problems."

Part of the reason so many people are still starving is supply trucks are being ambushed and the food is being looted, Egal said.

"The warlords control the area and don't give international aid a chance to give food to people who need it," Egal said. "But anything at all that the (Somalian) people can get will help—even five cents. Anything that gets through saves a life."

Many people who were concerned with the plight of Somalians showed up at the supper, said Elsie Speck, chairwoman of the fundraising committee.

"Some people stopped to give donations even if they didn't stay for the meal," Speck said. "I think it helped raise people's awareness and remind Americans that we live in such a rich land. Although we have problems with unemployment and lower standards of living, it's nothing like what they have to endure in Somalia."

"A rice-and-water supper isn't a real appealing meal—it isn't very festive," she said.

But even though the meal was

Deer hunting season opens

Despite bad weather hunters claim 234 pieces on first day

By John Rezanka
Environmental Writer

Local hunters and conservation officials said this year's first firearms deer hunting season was a mixed bag because of unfavorable weather conditions during the weekend.

The Illinois Department of Conservation had estimated a record-setting firearms deer harvest this year because of growing deer populations and the increased availability of deer hunting permits.

In 1991, deer hunters killed a record-setting 82,130 deer during the firearms season.

Altie Lannon, a deer hunter from Maric, said warm and windy weather on Friday and rain on Saturday made hunting difficult, but his efforts paid off Sunday morning.

Lannon checked in a 160-pound, 8-point buck at the Williamson County check-in station Sunday.

On opening day, the hunting was slow and he said he did not see many deer.

Japanese rice may spark trade war

Los Angeles Times

TOKYO — Now that America and Europe have averted a trade war over oil seeds, the trade guns will be turned on Japan.

That is what Japan fears as ' ng-stalled talks on the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade restart this week in Geneva.

A key stumbling block in the talks, now in their sixth year, has been Japan's ban on rice imports. Transatlantic friction, however, has enabled Japan to avoid the thorny problem.

Now that America and Europe have made their peace, said articles splashed across the front pages of Japan's major newspapers, the pressure will be on Japan to open up. Japan fears that failure to accept some form of rice imports will lead to its isolation in the international community. Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa's handling of the rice issue will be a Defense has not been a hallmark of the Saluki football season this year.

But Saturday, the defensive Dawgs stopped Indiana State on a game-ending drive, finishing their season with a 42-35 win over the Sycamores at McAndrew Stadium.

The victory enabled the Saluki to escape sole possession of last place in the Gateway Conference and move into a fourth place tie with Indiana State, Illinois State and Eastern Illinois with 2-4 conference marks. The Salukis finish with an overall record of 4-7 which is three fewer wins than last year's 7-4 squad.

"I'm not near as dejected about this season as some people would have me be," Saluki head coach Bob Smith said. "This season was a dream season from an offensive standpoint, and we knew we were rolling the dice a little defensively."

The Saluki defense did not crap out at the end of the game as Saluki cornerback J.J. Chaney deflected Indiana State quarterback Kip Hennelly's pass in the end zone with five seconds left. Chaney then deflected Hennelly's pass to Demetrius Dowler on the last play of the game, which was overthrown, and gave the Salukis a season-ending win in front of approximately 1,000 rain-drenched fans.

"We knew they were going to throw the ball and he was open, and J.J. made a nice through-the-shoulder play, and he broke on the ball real well," Smith said. "J.J. Chaney is a good defensive back when he is really competing hard, and that is what he is hired to do."

"It is rather ironic that about three or four key defensive plays is what finally put it away."

Wheelchair basketball wins home invitational

The Rolling Salukis proved themselves to be the unchallenged victors at this weekend's fifth annual Rolling Salukis Invitational, which featured four independent midwestern wheelchair basketball clubs.

The rollers began their killing spree by defeating the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago 75-15. This was the first time that the Salukis have beaten Chicago, though there were many factors involved with Chicago's downfall, SIUC sophomore Earl Jordan said.

Chicago's head coach was on his honeymoon and was unable to attend. Also, the team was only competing with two starters; the rest were pretty inexperienced, said

Jones, who previously played for the Chicago club.

"They were in such disarray, because their coach left them only two starters and the rest were benchwarmers," Jones said. "We're so strong right now, though that I think we could have beaten them anyway."

The Salukis continued their streak while facing the Kansas City Pioneers, the St. Louis Rolling Rams and the Southshore Breakers from Racine, Wis.

The Breakers gave the Salukis the biggest challenge out of all the teams, tying them at half time, but the Salukis rallied to win by 12 points.

"Our first few games were blow-outs, we were really playing

Bears lose, 17-3, as Green Bay shatters five-game losing streak to improve to 5-6

Zapnews

The Green Bay Packers snapped a five-game losing streak to the Chicago Bears with a 17-3 victory at Soldier Field.

The Packers improved to 5-6 while the ailing Bears, having lost four straight, drop to 4-7. The Bears have not lost more than four in a row since 1989, when they dropped their last six games. Brett Favre threw for one touchdown and ran in another for the Packers. His total on the day was 209 yards, competing 16-of-24 passes.

Bear's quarterback Jim Harbaugh completed just 8-of-18 passes for 97 yards. He was benched in favor of Peter Tom Willis who threw for 160 yards and completed 16-of-23 passes.

The Packers really took charge in the third quarter when they held the ball for 13 minutes.

Softball team inks two area athletes

By Karyn Viverito

SIUC head softball coach Kay Brechtelsbauer did not have to go very far to find the talent she needed for her team.

Recruits Jamie Schutteck from Herrin and Dawn Daenzer from Belleville both signed with the Salukis to round off the recruitment season.

Schutteck and Daenzer join pitcher/outfielder Buffy Blust from Normal, who was SIUC's first signee last week.

Brechtelsbauer said the recruits will help offset the loss of seniors Angie Mick, Colleen Holloway and Karrie Irvin who will all be graduating after the spring season.

"The three give us power, defense and base running capabilities," she said. "They all come from sound and well coached high school programs."

Schutteck, a right-hander hailing from Herrin High School, was named the Southern Illinois Player of the Year and is a strong force for her team on the field and behind the plate.

On the mound, the All-South Seven conference selection has a career record of 28-7 with 264 strikeouts and an ERA of 0.76. Last spring, she went 16-6 and fanned 170 batters in 137 innings pitched.

In the batter's box, Schutteck batted .427 to lead the Tigers in RBI, hits and home runs, while setting a single season record with 11 doubles.

Brechtelsbauer said she was extremely pleased to sign Schutteck.

"She has excellent athletic skills and has the potential to be very successful on the Division I level as both a pitcher and a hitter," she said. "She throws the ball hard and has a quick and powerful bat."

Herrin coach Bruce Jilek said Schutteck has the talent it takes to be a good ball player.

"Jamie has great tools, but it will be just a matter of making an adjustment to the college level," he said.

Daenzer is a shortstop/second baseman coming out of Belleville West High School with high expectations.

The infielder led the Maroons in six categories last season racking up a .504 batting average to go along with a .778 slugging percentage, 59 hits, 42 runs, 10 doubles and 6 home runs.

Also a speed demon on the basepaths, Daenzer was successful in stealing every base she attempted for a total of 17 on the season.

Brechtelsbauer said Daenzer is an impact player who will excel in all areas of the game.

"We believe that she can step in on our program as a freshman and make an immediate contribution," she said.

Basketball signs guard from Indiana

By Andy Graham
Sports Writer

Anticipating the loss of vital weapons to graduation next season, the SIUC women's basketball has begun recruiting new additions to its arsenal.

The Salukis snagged Kasia McClendon, a 5-7 point guard from Gary, Ind., in the NCAA early signing period.

McClendon joins the recruitment class with Tiffany Spencer, a 6-1 forward-center from Eureka, Mo.

McClendon assisted West Side High School to a 21-1 record last season averaging 17 points, five rebounds, six assists and eight steals a game.

"Kasia possesses the skills that it takes to fit in well to our running game," Saluki coach Cindy Scott said. "She is a very talented player, who will complement our returning players when we lose our four seniors."

McClendon has many skills that will be useful when it comes time to fill in the gaps that the seniors will leave behind. McClendon is a good jumper, passer and athlete, who should adjust well to college competition. West Side coach Rodney Fischer said.

McClendon will help to replace four seniors who will graduate this year. The four seniors include point guard Anita Scott, an All-American candidate from St. Louis, Mo., center Kelly Firth, forward Tiffany Bolden and guard Angie Rougeau.

PALESTINIANS WANT PROGRESS IN TALKS — The Palestinian delegation to the Middle East peace talks has warned that it will bolt the negotiations unless progress is made in coming rounds of discussion. In a news release Israeli Premier Itzhak Rabin from Dr. Haider Abdel Shaif, the chief negotiator of the Palestinian delegation, urged an intensification of talks on a Palestinian administrative council, on the control of land and on security issues, the Ha'aretz paper reported.

AUTHORITIES CONFIRM PHILIPPINE PLOT — Philippine authorities admitted Sunday the existence of a terrorists' plot to attack foreign embassies, consular offices and diplomats' residences in the capital Manila. A top official of the Presidential Anti-Crime Commission bared the information three days after the national police ordered a tightening of police security in these areas. According to the commission, the notorious Red Scorpion group, a runaway faction of the outlawed New People's Army.

TAJIK CONFLICT COULD SPREAD — The bloody six-month conflict in the former Soviet republic of Tajikistan has become a flame that could set the whole of Central Asia alight. Among all of Tajikistan's neighbors, Uzbekistan, with 20 million people the largest Central Asian republic, has expressed the most concern. One-fourth of Tajikistan's population is made up of ethnic Uzbeks, and there are more Tajiks in Uzbekistan than in Tajikistan.

PERUVIANS ELECT ASSEMBLY — Peruvians went to the polls Sunday to elect an 80-member constitutive assembly. The assembly is to replace the chamber of deputies and senate disbanded last April by President Alberto Fujimori with military support. Some 200,000 soldiers were on alert in case of attempts by Maoist Shining Path guerrillas and the revolutionary Tupac Amaru movement to disrupt the elections. The streets in Lima and other cities were deserted Sunday morning.

TORNADOES KILL 11 IN SOUTH — At least 11 people were killed in tornadoes that swept through the southern states of Mississippi and Tennessee over the weekend, reports said Sunday. Most of the victims were at Brandon, Mississippi near the state capital when a tornado destroyed a trailer park on Saturday night. Storm winds also lashed Alabama and Texas where at Houston some 100,000 homes were left without electricity. In Florida, more than 450 homes which had still not been repaired following the recent Hurricane Andrew suffered further damage.

SENATOR ACCUSED OF SEXUAL ADVANCES — Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Oregon, has been presented with detailed allegations by six women who say he made sexual advances toward them, the Washington Post reported Sunday. The women are all former staffers on Capitol Hill. But none reportedly claimed she was punished for rejecting Packwood. Asked about the allegations days before his reelection to a fifth term earlier this month, the Post said, Packwood stated none of them was true and later provided statements intended to cast doubt on the women's credibility.

CLINTON, JACKSON MEET IN ARKANSAS — President-elect Bill Clinton joined the Rev. Jesse Jackson here Sunday for services at a Catholic church. Following the service, one of two Jackson conducted, the two men had breakfast at the governor's mansion. Jackson was expected to give Clinton the message he's been preaching all month: that the president-elect must keep his promises to the Democratic core constituencies who helped elect him.

BAC makes Christmas

Program helps African-American children in need

By Vincent S. Boyd
Special Assignment Writer

In an effort to make the holiday season special for African-American children of low income families, the Black Affairs Council is sponsoring a program to make this Christmas a merry one.

Andraniki Champagne, a senior in marketing from Harvey and co-chairwoman of the Campus and Community Affairs committee, said the Sponsor-A-Child Program is geared to show the BAC's sense of responsibility to the African-American community.

"We want to show that you can give of yourself unselfishly without the need for recognition," Champagne said.

She said each BAC umbrella organization will help two or three children by buying them Christmas gifts and giving them a party.

The program will help about 55 children. The gifts are to be distributed Dec. 5, at the party at the Eurma Hayes Center on the city's northeast side at 441 E. Willow.

Kim Lemons, a sophomore in pre-nursing from Chicago and chair of CCA, said the program was created to help people in need.

Volunteers at the Newman Catholic Student Center will help people celebrate Thanksgiving Thursday with the center's 24th annual free Thanksgiving Day meal.

Bob Shearn, a campus minister at the Newman Center, said the volunteers attempt to make the day meaningful for the people who attend.

"We try to make it as special as we can for the people who come to this," he said. "We try to create a family atmosphere, and that seems to happen."

Volunteers will serve a traditional Thanksgiving Day meal of turkey, dressing and vegetables, and the center will be decorated to create a festive atmosphere, Shearn said.

Sister Kate Reid, director of the Newman Catholic Student Center, said 600 to 700 people are expected to attend. People come for a variety of reasons, she said.

"A number of international students show up because they can't go home and it's a traditional Thanksgiving Day meal," she said.

"Some people who are poor come because they can't provide a big meal for their families."

"Senior citizens come rather than eat at home alone," Reid said. "And some of the people that live in the shelters come."

Many volunteers help make the day a success, Shearn said.

"There are a number of volunteers," he said. "Community members here, people from the Carbondale community and the SIUC community volunteer."

"The Knights of Columbus (from Clinton County) provide all the turkeys each year," he said. "Other groups donate various other items."

Reid said more volunteers still are needed. "We can still use volunteers to help decorate Wednesday night and to cook, serve and clean up on Thursday," she said. "We do count on a lot of volunteers."

The meal will be from 12 to 2 p.m. at 715 S. Washington.

It is sponsored by the Newman Catholic Student Center, the Undergraduate Student Government, TCI of Illinois, WCIL Radio, local churches, community members and organizations.

Campus recycling calls for cooperation

STUDENT ENVIRONMENTAL CENTER members turned confrontational late last month when they invited the press to an Oct. 27 meeting with SIUC President John C. Guyon and demanded that the administration begin working immediately on recycling.

University officials said SEC's actions were counterproductive to establish cooperation between the student environmentalists and Guyon.

But SEC members argued that private meetings with Guyon failed to produce results. They accused the administration of moving too slowly to comply with a state law that requires universities to reduce the production of waste by 40 percent before 2000.

Recycling at SIUC will become a reality at SIUC only through the cooperation of students and the administration. Enthusiasm and effort is needed on both sides — and it is time that SEC and Guyon stop wasting their energy bickering and starting working towards solutions.

SEC MEMBERS DEMANDED that a recycling committee be formed, made up of a cross-section of campus staff, faculty and students, as stated in the Illinois College Recycling Law.

Further demands included public, bi-weekly recycling meetings and a garbage study to determine the amount of waste produced by the University. SEC also request that purchasing officials help the forestry department run a pilot program to use chlorine-free, post-consumer recycled paper.

The demands are not unreasonable, especially considering that SIUC must have a tested recycling plan on the books in little more than two years. For a plan to work, it must first be tested, to make sure it will operate smoothly. A campuswide plan cannot be created overnight.

But so far, University administrators have shown little support for instituting a comprehensive recycling plan, although they are mandated by law to provide one by 1995.

GUYON HAS STRESSED THAT THE COST of a recycling program would be high, and that budget concerns are his first priority. He has stated that recycling at SIUC could expand with volunteers instead of making it an administrative priority.

SEC has volunteered to help conduct a study to determine how much garbage the University produces. Volunteers would save the University the cost of hiring independent researchers.

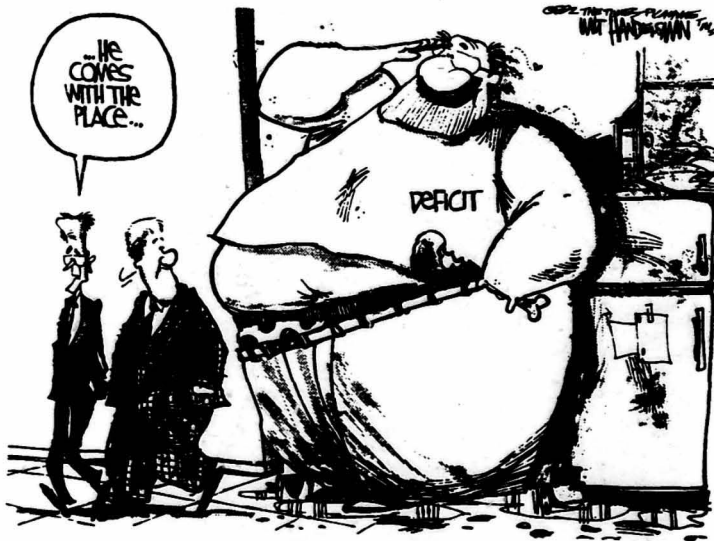

SIUC could also apply for a grant from the Department of Natural Energy and Resources to help with the cost of a recycling program. But to receive the money, SIUC must have a plan before 1993 — so far, the University has nothing.

The University of Illinois received such a grant, and it already recycles the 40 percent that SIUC needs to recycle before 2000. SIUC recycles a measly 6 percent of campus trash.

A RECYCLING PROGRAM AT SIUC will take more than volunteer work. It will take the encouragement of the administration. To work, recycling must be a priority.

It is important to reduce the amount of trash sent to landfills and to make recycled products available when SIUC departments request them. This will take education, and a complete rethinking of the "throw-away society" that the United States has become.

For a campuswide recycling effort to work, the cooperation of campus staff, students and faculty is needed. Students and the administration should spend their energy working towards solutions, instead of arguing.

Morality should not be legislated; individuals must judge own actions

I've seen several editorials in the DE lately concerned with gay rights, affirmative action, and the moral perspective of law. In each of these, I've felt pressured by the author to accept their moral view.

Now, I would like someone to tell me by what right has the government, or another individual, to tell me what morally acceptable behavior is?

Each of us ultimately knows what we consider morality to be. So is an individuals morality a sovereign right? It must be.

In America we so concern ourselves with questions of morality — is so and so acting in a morally correct fashion? I'll put it this way: IT IS NONE OF YOUR BUSINESS.

Our Constitution is based on the maxim, "If you harm no one, do what you will". Yet we make and debate laws intended to govern not only actions, but attitudes and morality as well.

Morality cannot be effectively legislated. This is one reason the current drug laws are ineffective. This is one reason why prostitution continues despite contrary laws. And why abortion is even an issue. These laws address the morality of those actions, not any real harm done to individuals.

If individuals are not allowed to judge for themselves the intrinsic good and evil of their actions, and society continues to impose it's moral will on the individual, than how can society ever hope to mature?

Society is, after all, just the sum of it's parts, therefore morality must be the individual's responsibility. I do not claim responsibility for your soul — do you claim it for mine? If so, are you going to also lead my soul after my body has passed?

Society must guide and teach, not direct and control, because you cannot morally please everyone. — Dan Scmechel, senior, philosophy

SIUC gives students second chance; reputation undermined by nude posers

This letter is in response to Kimberly McMillan's statement, "you have the right to choose what University you attend. Apparently you chose to come to SIUC," from the November 9th DE.

I would first like to tell you the reason why many, but not all, students come to SIUC. Many people had hard times in high school and needed a second chance. SIUC helps give people that second chance, and is also a rather low cost University. SIUC is well known for a lot of its programs in addition to its "party school"

Unfortunately people such as yourself would rather SIUC have a party school image than an academic image. I know many SIUC students would not have the opportunity for higher education because of costs and admission requirements at other schools.

I'm not against people posing naked for cash. But I am opposed to people helping to ruin an academic institution's reputation simply because they want the nation to recognize it for its parties, and not its classes.

If we were all going to be prostitutes in a whore house near Las Vegas, or members of the Solid Gold Dancing Squad, then perhaps a party school image would be a nice thing. However, you may not realize that SIUC offers a lot of other majors.

If you will provide me, and every other SIUC student who came here to learn, with an ACT score of 36 and $25,000 a year, I will gladly transfer out of SIUC so you can play your little "nude" games — Adam Altman, sophomore, advertising

Police Blotter

Carbondale Police are investigating the theft of an SIU student's automobile.

Taryn L. Tomi, 21, of Carbondale, reported that her car was taken from the parking lot of the Lewis Park Apartments at 800 Grand St. sometime before 5 p.m. Saturday. The car is described as a brown and silver 1989 Ford Probe with Michigan license plates DLE 091, police said.

Saturday was slow because of the rain and warm weather.

Sunday morning, after about 45 minutes in the field, Lannon killed the buck.

Lannon said he had spotted the buck earlier in the year and knew his habits.

"I did some scouting at the end of the summer and early fall," he said. "I pretty much knew where the buck would be and when he would be there."

Brenda Merriman, a worker at the Williamson County deer check in station, said there seemed to be more hunters out in the field than in past years.

Merriman said this years deer harvest in Williamson County could be a record breaker.

Hunters checked in 483 deer on Friday and 350 deer on Saturday, she said.

Figures for the 1991 harvest in Williamson County were not available.

So far he is moving cautiously. He vowed at an impromptu press conference in front of his house over the weekend that Japan would not end its rice import ban. His agriculture minister, Masami Tanabu, promised that Japan would stand by its rice farmers. Although farmers make up a tiny proportion of Japan's voting population, they have disproportionate power under the nation's lopsided electoral system.

Behind closed doors, however, government officials are busily seeking the ingredients of a compromise that could avert a showdown in Geneva. In an interview with the Los Angeles Times last year, shortly before becoming prime minister, Miyazawa predicted that Japan would negotiate a satisfactory compromise on rice "in the final hour."

With Japan's trade surpluses reaching record highs, however, there will be little sympathy for deer move less and are more cautious because they can not smell or hear hunters.

On Saturday, it was still warm and there were probably less hunters in the field because of the rain, he said. Hunting is naturally slow on third day because the deer are more cautious and less likely to be seen.

Although the numbers of deer killed were down, he said numbers of unusually large and healthy younger deer increased this year.

The younger deer were heavier than average and sported healthier racks, he said.

"Whatever those deer are eating, it is good for them," he said. "For hunters that means more big deer and some real impressive racks in 1993."

This year, a second firearms deer hunting season will be Dec. 3-6.

A special muzzleloader-only deer hunting season takes place Dec. 11-13.

Archery season is open until Jan. 14, except during the firearms season.

A handgun season for white-tailed deer is set for Jan. 15-17.

Japan's position. Although many analysts argue that Thailand and Vietnam, not America, would be the main beneficiary of an open Japanese rice market, the United States has long placed a high priority on cracking the Japanese rice market. The U.S. Rice Millers Association said Friday that it would ask Washington to take retaliatory steps if Japan did not open its rice market.

Even if there is a compromise, Miyazawa could have trouble getting the package passed in Parliament. The ruling Liberal Democratic Party is currently in turmoil as a result of a scandal involving the acceptance of illegal political contributions by many of its party leaders. Shin Kanemaru, the power broker responsible for pushing many of Miyazawa's more controversial bills through Parliament, has resigned as a result of the scandal, and nobody has emerged to take his place.

Opposition parties are likely to exploit the rice issue to court the farmers' vote. Some alarmists even warned that liberalization of rice imports could bring down the ruling party.

Japan's powerful rice lobby, the Central Union of Agricultural Cooperatives, has vowed to fight rice opening "to the end." The group argues that Japan is the world's largest food importer—and also has the industrial world's lowest level of food self-sufficiency.

Japanese negotiators are expected to make some or all of the following proposals in upcoming talks in an effort to blunt the impact of liberalizing rice imports: — Demand that Japan be allowed to place a 900 percent tariff on imported rice. That would make imported rice slightly more expensive than rice grown in Japan, which now sells for about seven times the world market price. — Include safeguards that allow maximum limits on imports in the event that rice imports grow too quickly.

Carbondale police arrest suspect already in prison

By Joe Littrell
Police Writer

Carbondale Police learned last week that the suspect in an attempted hold-up they had sought for three days was already in jail.

Detectives identified and arrested Mark E. Mika, 23, of Carbondale, Friday as a suspect in an attempted armed robbery Tuesday of the AMOCO West Service Station at 2500 Murphysboro Rd., police said.

Police said they were alerted to Mika as a possible suspect Thursday when employees of the Kroger's West Store, Route 13 West, found his wallet where it apparently had dropped in the parking lot. The wallet was turned over to Carbondale Police, who recognized Mika as the suspect in the theft of a handgun.

Detectives determined Mika was already in the Jackson County Jail and obtained a statement from him about the handgun. The statement implicated him in the robbery, police said.

During the investigation, police learned that Mika apparently had dropped his wallet while fleeing from the robbery scene and was involved in a traffic accident near Murphysboro about 10 minutes later.

Clinton warned about Russia before January inauguration

Los Angeles Times

Five weeks before the presidential election, one of Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton's top foreign policy advisers made a quiet visit to Moscow. The adviser, Johns Hopkins University professor Michael Mandelbaum, was formally attending a conference on the future of Russia, but he also carried an informal message: Clinton was serious about increasing U.S. help for Russia's reforms.

The most striking message, however, came from the Russian side of the table. Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin's reforms are in deep political trouble, Kremlin officials said. The West has promised plenty of aid but delivered little, they complained. Yeltsin is under pressure to take a tougher line defending Russia's interests, they said, and that could mean a more prickly relationship with the United States.

"Michael was shaken," another participant said of Mandelbaum. "He had not expected that kind of onslaught."

Clinton is still two months away from his inauguration, but he is already hearing warnings about a coming crisis in Russia and his responsibility to avert it.

Clinton has made it clear that he wants to focus on U.S. economic difficulties for the time being, an agenda that would not be helped by large new commitments of foreign aid to Russia. Yet the warnings about Yeltsin's prospects are growing more dire.

If Yeltsin fails, Clinton is being told, the likely alternative is far worse: a nationalistic, authoritarian regime that would be deeply unfriendly toward the West.

"The Yeltsin government is in mortal danger," former President Nixon said last week.

"We should be doing much more than we are doing now," said Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., an occasional Clinton adviser who has been mentioned as a potential secretary of state.

"The whole concept of reform ... is under grave threat," agreed Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., another possible Cabinet nominee. "And I think, frankly, the West is sleepwalking through history here."

"This is an explosive, dangerous, fragile situation," said Robert S. Strauss, who retired last week from his post as U.S. ambassador to Moscow. "It is a survivable situation ... but only, if the West gives a hand."

Is Clinton getting the message? "I'm sure he is," Strauss said. "I think he'll do right."

Indeed, Clinton made a point during his presidential campaign of backing Western help for Russia. Last spring, he proposed an aid package for Moscow even before President Bush did.

"For ourselves and for millions of people who seek to live in freedom and prosperity, this revolution must not fail," Clinton said in a speech on April 1. "I know it is unpopular today to call for foreign assistance of any kind. It's harder when Americans are hurting, as so many millions are. But I believe it is deeply irresponsible to forego this short-term investment in our long-term security."

Since his election, Clinton has not returned to that pledge, except for a general reaffirmation of his support for Russian reform after Yeltsin telephoned him with congratulations on Nov. 5 after his defeat of Bush.

But the growing alarm about Yeltsin's prospects among American officials and experts, including some of Clinton's own advisers, guarantees that the new president will face pressure to lend some serious attention to Russia's plight.

And when he does, he will find himself caught in the same dilemma that bedeviled Bush: how to mount a program of assistance with real impact on Russia's she!!-shocked economy without costing too much real American money.

"It doesn't mean just money," Strauss said, but it does mean so. "We've been pretty small and petty in terms of our financial support," he said.

The basic problem facing Yeltsin is that his attempt to launch a new free-market economy has failed to work in the short run, even though it may yet succeed in the long run. Russia's industrial production has dropped by 20 percent or more, inflation has soared, and another hard winter lies ahead.

Not surprisingly, rival politicians have accused Yeltsin of trying to institute reforms too fast, and have demanded the ouster of his economic czar, acting Prime Minister Yegor T. Gaidar.

The conflict is expected to peak beginning Dec. 1, when Yeltsin must defend his program in the Congress of People's Deputies, where his conservative critics have a majority.

Peace Corps to begin work in former USSR

Los Angeles Times

Roger Dennis was most apprehensive about the cold showers that might confront him during his two-year stay in Russian buildings with iffy pipes. But not to worry, he said Saturday. He had seen some wonderful little water heaters in Ireland and Scotland.

"I've got a great idea for a business!" Dennis said. "Why can't they make those here?"

Dennis, of San Jose, Calif., and 99 other equally enthusiastic American business professionals landed in Moscow on Saturday as the shock troops of the first Peace Corps program ever to operate in Russia.

Long condemned by the old Soviet government as a front for U.S. spies, the Peace Corps is setting up programs this year in several republics of the former Soviet Union, from the Baltic states to Central Asia. It plans to have 500 volunteers in place by the end of next year.

In Russia, the first 100 volunteers will go through three months of training, including language study, and then work to help develop small businesses on the Pacific coast and in cities along the Volga River.

"We see your arrival in Russia as an event of real political importance," Alexander Zhitnikov, told Americans at a news conference to welcome them.

St. George's Hall severely burned

National Heritage pledges to restore historic Windsor Castle after fire

Los Angeles Times

National Heritage Secretary Peter Brooke pledged Saturday to restore historic Windsor Castle to the condition it was in before an hours-long fire severely damaged the northeastern corner of the massive structure.

"The heart of the nation went out to the Queen last night," Brooke said as he toured the blackened ruins of several interior rooms, including those of destroyed St. George's Hall, the formal site of many state banquets.

"Anybody who returns to her home in the condition which this is—it is a traumatic experience for anybody," he said.

Brooke called the fire in the castle, which attracts 4 million visitors annually, a "national disaster."

Windsor Castle dates back more than 800 years and is the British sovereign's official home. Its name was adopted by the royal family in 1917, a change from Wettin, the family name of Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, consort of Queen Victoria.

Earlier Saturday, Queen Elizabeth II, accompanied by her third son, Prince Edward, returned to Windsor, dressed in a long, hooded outercoat and rubber boots against the steady drizzle of a gray and gloomy day.

She inspected the ruins of St. George Hall, where she has entertained visiting dignitaries at sumptuous sit-down dinners for 200 people. The beamed ceiling had collapsed, as had the wooden floor, and rubble was everywhere.

On Friday the queen and her second son, Prince Andrew, personally took part in the removal of hundreds of art treasures from the burning structure, bringing them into the castle courtyard.

much," Lemons said. "It is our responsibility as future leaders to help as much as possible."

Lemons said she hopes Sponsor-A-Child will increase relations between the BAC and the city's African-American community.

"I hope this program will help to better the community relations we have with the local residents," Lemons said.

Champagne said Carbondale residents should look at the program to understand that students are involved in making the area better for living.

"This program is a perfect example of college students caring about the community they live in," Champagne said.

"We want the African-American community of Carbondale to know that African-Americans at SIUC have a sense of responsibility," she said.

Lemons said that although the program is being sponsored by the BAC, everyone who wants to help is welcome.

"Anyone who wants to help make this Christmas a special one for disadvantaged children is encouraged to come forward," Lemons said.

For more information on the Sponsor-A-Child program, interested parties may call Champagne or Lemons at 453-2536.

Barbaric prison conditions lack improvement in Turkey

Los Angeles Times

One year after taking power, Prime Minister Suleyman Demirel is under fierce attack from domestic and international critics for failing to deliver promised improvements in Turkey's lackluster human rights record. For too many Turks, "Midnight Express" images of barbaric prison conditions are still a reality, the critics say.

"A new Turkey—the walls of all police stations will be made of glass," said Demirel as he took office for the third time following elections in October 1991.

Last week, the Turkish Parliament passed a law that would restrict the practice of holding prisoners for long periods without charge or access to counsel. "If someone is accused of something, it must be proved," Demirel said. "Citizens are worried about what may happen to them until they are in the end proved innocent."

Justice Minister Seyfi Oktay told Turkish reporters the law would help end trial delays that have sometimes left prisoners languishing in jail for five or six years before being acquitted.

Critics insist, however, that the new law was watered down to exclude crimes involving terrorism or national security, and they fear that it will have little real impact in a country with a long history of arbitrary authority. The pro-Kurdish newspaper Gundem recently lamented: "Our reporter was taken into custody last week for reporting that he had been taken into custody the week before."

"There has been too much talk and too little action on the part of the Turkish authorities," the human rights group Amnesty International said in a scathing report issued in London Nov. 11.

At home, where longstanding abuses around the country have been lately compounded by an ugly rash of death squad-type murders in the convulsed Turkish southeast, critics are equally outspoken.

"Despite promises of democratization and transparency, nothing positive has happened," said Akin Birdal, the 44-year-old agronomist who is the new president of Turkey's Human Rights Association. "Torture is systematic. Fourteen people have died under torture in jail during the past year, and another six are missing."

"The new law cannot stop the torture or disappearance of people under arrest. It is just to look good to the outside world."

During an interview at his office here this week, Prime Minister Demirel said he believes that the reform legislation will help repair Turkey's international human rights image but that its intended effect is domestic.

"It is going to be a law that will not take away the authority of security forces fighting against terror," the 69-year-old leader told the Los Angeles Times. "It will be applied for cases in which terror is not involved. We are not trying to persuade our friends in the West, but the Turkish people."

Botched abortions increase, Latin American women die

The Baltimore Sun

It's been years since Dr. Rosa Luz Castro treated the 23-year-old woman she calls Josefina. But her memory of the experience is a vivid reminder of an abiding condition in Latin America.

Josefina staggered into the emergency room of Mexico City's women's hospital late one December night. "She was screaming 'I'm dying. I had an abortion. Help me,'" Dr. Castro recalled. She was soaked with blood.

In examining the woman, the doctor found a thin plastic rod, shaped almost like a knitting needle. Josefina's uterus was so badly perforated that the doctors decided to perform a hysterectomy. For two weeks, Josefina laid unconscious in intensive care. When she finally came to, Castro visited her room.

"I asked her to tell me about her abortion," Castro remembers. "She got very nervous and said she had lied, that she hadn't had an abortion and only said that so we would help her immediately."

"The next day, she sneaked out of the hospital. It's probably still a secret she hasn't shared with anyone."

But Josefina's secret is shared by thousands of women throughout Latin America. For while abortion illegal in every Latin American country except Cuba, a recent study by New York's Alan Guttmacher Institute indicates that clandestine abortion has become one of the leading methods of birth control in the region.

Contraceptive methods such as birth control pills or intra-uterine devices are not widely practiced mostly because family planning education is still not widely available, nor widely sought. For example, in Mexico, youth are not taught about sexual relationships between men and women until high school. However, most young people only attend school through sixth grade.

Having an abortion is as easy as a walk to a local herb market where vendors sell "zoapatle," which causes violent uterine contractions. The names of midwives and paramedics who use even cruder methods of abortion are well-known. And in the process, botched procedures have become a leading cause of maternal deaths.

In Mexico, population experts estimate between 1 and 2 million abortions are performed every year, and cause the deaths of some 25,000 to 30,000 women.

The study by the Guttmacher Institute, a non-profit organization that analyzes public policy, found that in Brazil, with 150 million people, the region's most populated country, between 1.4 to 2.4 million abortions are performed each year—a rate higher than in the United States where abortion is legal.

Europe realigns currency value

Los Angeles Times

The European Community engineered its third realignment of currency values in three months early Sunday in an effort to head off a new round of chaos on the Continent's international currency markets.

But Germany, whose sky-high interest rates are widely blamed not only for destabilizing the EC's system of fixed exchange rates but also for choking economic growth across the Continent, resisted pressure to reduce its rates.

The actions came at the end of an 11-hour emergency meeting of central bank and finance ministry officials from the EC member nations.

Hans Tietmeyer, vice president of the Bundesbank, Germany's central bank, was asked as he left the meeting whether Germany had any intention of reducing its rates. "You can be sure that Germany will do what is appropriate," he said.

In the currency realignment, Spain and Portugal devalued the peseta and the escudo by 6 percent each against the other seven currencies in the European Monetary System whose values are linked. The system is designed to ensure international investors that currency fluctuations will not eat up profits from their European investments.

Ireland and Denmark, however, did not bow to pressure to devalue their currencies, which also came under attack last week on international currency markets.

Jose Bras, Portugal's treasury secretary, said he expected no further currency realign

Seles captures third straight at Virginia Slims

Zapnews

NEW YORK - Monica Seles captured her third straight title at the Virginia Slims Championships Sunday with a 7-5, 6-3, 6-1 victory over Martina Navratilova.

Seles, who also defeated Navratilova in the championship match last year, has won 15 of her last 19 games en route to her 10th victory of the season. Seles earned $250,000 for the victory.

Becker celebrates birthday with $2.5 million for winning ATP Tournament over Courier

Zapnews

FRANKFURT, Germany — It was a sweet victory for Boris Becker Sunday in more ways than one.

Becker received $2.5 million for winning the ATP Tennis Tournament.

And the 6-4, 6-3, 7-5 victory over the world's number one player, Jim Courier of the United States, could not have been more perfectly timed — it was also the German's 25th birthday.

The 9,000 spectators who had been backing Becker vociferously all week let out a roar when the three-time Wimbledon winner converted his second match ball to make sure of victory in two hours 24 minutes.

And there must have been an audible sigh of relief from the organizer's who, having presented Becker with his trophy, were then able to wheel on a surprise birthday cake in the shape of a tennis racket to the music of Stevie Wonder's song "Happy Birthday."

good," sophomore Chris Millet said.

SIUC will next travel to Louisville Dec. 5, where it will all depend on how it has built up its team, Millet said.

"Last year, it was pretty close, but this year, I think we have filled a lot of positions up," Millet said.

"This year, we finally have a strong starting five, so I think we will beat them pretty easily unless they have built up their team, too."

The Rolling Salukis will have two more home games this season, the next of which will take place Jan. 23 against Louisville.

"If we can just keep rolling strong, nobody will stop us from going on a long run of wins," Jordan said.

Steelers move into two-game lead; Eagles win 4th straight

STEELERS 30, COLTS 14

Pittsburgh moved into a two-game lead in the AFC central Saturday after beating Indianapolis 30-14 at Three Rivers Stadium.

The Steelers' Barry Foster ran for 168 yards and two touchdowns in his eighth 100-yard game of the season.

The Steelers have one eight in a row at home while the Colts have lost four in a row and stand at 4-7.

Pittsburgh quarterback made his first start of the season by throwing for 109 yards, while completing 10-of-22.

Indianapolis quarterback Jack Trudeau completed 19-of-41 for 266 yards, but had three interceptions. Trudeau replaced the injured Jeff George. Trudeau left the game in the final minute after suffering a possible concussion.

EAGLES 47, GIANTS 34

Randall Cunningham threw two touchdown passes and Vai Sikahema returned a punt a club-record 87 yards for another score, as the Philadelphia Eagles beat the host New York Giants, 47-34.

The victory sent the Eagles to 7-4 with its fourth straight victory over the Giants. New York fell to 5-6.

New York took the early lead after Matt Bahr hit two field goals and Dave Megget caught a 14-yard pass from Jeff Hostetler. Megget also returned a kickoff 92-yards to put the Giants up 20-6 in the second quarter.

The Eagles, having scored earlier on connection from Cunningham to Herschel Walker, fought back to tie the score by half-time with a 44-yard interception return for a touchdown by Seth Joyner and an 11-yard TD run by Walker.

The second half was dominated by Philadelphia, as the Eagles scored three touchdowns in the first seven minutes on the half.

Cunningham was 10-of-21 for 209 yards with three interceptions.

Hostetler was 11-of-28 for 154 yards, and his replacement, Kent Graham, was 11-of-26 for 141 yards.

VIKINGS 17, BROWNS 13

The Minnesota Vikings rallied from a 13-0 halftime deficit for a 17-13 win over the Cleveland Browns.

Audrey McMillian tied a club-record for the Vikings with three interceptions and returned one of them for a touchdown.

Cleveland QB Mike Tomczak led the Browns to their halftime lead, but was benched in the second half in favor of Todd Philcox. Cleveland coach Bill Belichick said that the reason for the quarterback change was Tomczak's ineffective play. Belichick added that he is not sure who will start next week.

The Vikings also played quarterback switch, as they benched Rich Gann on at the end of the first half and brought in Sean Salisbury.

DOLPHINS 19, OILERS 16

A field goal by Pete Stoyanovich with time about to expire sent Miami over the top to beat the Houston Oilers, 19-16, at Joe Robbie Stadium.

Stoyanovich hit the winning goal from 52-yards out with only 2 seconds remaining. Earlier in the game he hit two other goals from 41 and 19 yards. Stoyanovich now had 88 points for the season and 405 total career points.

Al DelGreco missed a 41-yarder with 1:49 remaining that would have given the Oilers the lead.

UNI to take on E. Washington in 16-team field

KANSAS CITY, Kansas — The 16-team field for the NCAA Division One-AA football playoffs was announced Sunday.

Northeast Louisiana, the Citadel, Northern Iowa and Delaware were the top four seeds.

The Citadel (10-1) will take on North Carolina A&T (9-2) next Saturday. In the day's other games, Northeast Louisiana (9-2) will host Alcorn State; Delaware (9-2) will play Samford (9-2); Middle Tennessee State will face Appalachian State (7-4); Marshall (8-3) will be at Eastern Kentucky (9-2); 1991 champion Youngstown State will meet Villanova (9-2); Gateway Conference champion Northern Iowa will host Eastern Washington (7-3) and Idaho (9-2) will take on McNeese State (8-3).

NCAA officials said Sunday there were 10 at-large bids given out, with the champions from the Big Sky, Gateway, Ohio Valley, Southern, Southland and Yankee conferences receiving automatic bids.

The brackets were set up so teams from the same conference do not play each other in the first round.

touchdown run, enabled the Salukis to take the 42-35 lead for good with 3:54 remaining in the game.

The Saluki touchdown march, which started on the Sycamore 30-yard line, was aided by strikes to Billy Swain for 17 yards and LaVance Banks for 26 yards which was directed by quarterback Scott Gabbert.

The Salukis and Sycamores traded leads and were tied five times during the game. Indiana State led two different times and SIUC took the lead four different times.

The Sycamores scored first on a two-yard touchdown run by Scott Wilson, but SIUC outscored ISU the rest of the half to take a 21-14 lead into the locker room.

"I took what they gave me," Gabbert said. "They left some short and deep routes open, and all I had to do was get the ball to them."

Gabbert completed 15 of 20 passes on the day for 286 yards with four touchdowns and no interceptions. Three of Gabbert's touchdown strikes were to LaVance Banks who caught scoring passes of 15, 35 and 84 yards. With 12 touch-down gasps, the junior from Rock Island finished the season with co-ownership of the SIUC record for career touchdowns. Fellow junior Billy Swain shares the record with Banks.

"We plan on going back and fourth next year," Banks said. "He will break it then I will break it."

Banks said that a reason the offense clicked so well was due in part to a meeting that Smith had with the troops.

"Coach sat us down and talked to us about it," Banks said. "He woke us up a little bit, and we got our act together."

Gabbert became the Saluki all-time leader in touchdown passes with 34 as he surpassed SIUC athletic director Jim Hart's old record of 34.

Gabbert also inked his name into the record books as the SIUC all-time completion percentage leader with a career mark of 55.8 percent.

Anthony Perry became the only the sixth Saluki in history to rush for 1,000 yards or more in a season when he gained 130 Saturday giving him 1,023 yards for the season.

The last Saluki to rush for 1,000 yards or more in a year was Byron Mitchell who gained 1,211 yards in 1985.

"He runs hard every single time he carries the ball," Smith said. "I hope he gets a chance to play on Sundays (NFL), because he is a tough competitor who can run with the football."

The Saluki offense netted 480 yards compared to the Sycamores 422 yards of total offense. The Salukis averaged a whopping 9.2 yards a play and turned the ball over only once.

Gabbert said that although he wished the Salukis had won more games, it was important the Dawgs won the finale.

"Although it was a losing season, I could care less about that," Gabbert said. "I will remember going out with a win for the rest of my life."
