Democratic officials split on Clinton's decision

By Signe Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Southern Illinois Democratic officials at the national and state level are divided in their feelings on President Clinton's recent decision to deploy US troops to Bosnia, but all hope for the best for the soldiers.

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., said the move into Bosnia is needed to protect U.S. interests, and the President needs full support on this decision.

"The President is showing the leadership that the world expects from the United States," Simon said. "He deserves bi-partisan support for this task. If we don't make this effort to restore stability, the war in Bosnia will spread and will represent a long-term security threat to our national interests."

Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Edwardsville, said as of right now he is against the involvement of US troops in Bosnia, but is open to hearing the full plans of the mission.

"First, I am not sure there is a legitimate US interest, it is more of a European interest," Durbin said. "Second, I have seen some of these military missions fail, and I want to be satisfied this military mission is completely thought out."

Durbin said the only way he will be satisfied with the mission is if he sees all the plans.

"I will spend the next two weeks trying to learn everything about this mission," Durbin said. "Basically, they will close the door and call it top secret. They'll turn off the lights, and bring out the maps and charts to explain the basics of the mission."

Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Bellefonte, said he appreciates Clinton's decision, but disagrees on the involvement of the troops once in Bosnia.

"I am not in favor of putting US troops on the ground in Bosnia," Costello said. "I believe the ground belongs to the European community, not us. We should be playing a supportive role for NATO, but that support should not include sending our troops to Bosnia to be on the ground."

Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Marion, said he will be holding off his decision on whether or not to back Clinton's plan until more details are made known.

"The President did not get specific in regards to the plan itself — perhaps he

Phone first: Carbondale Police call on SAV program

By Carey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Ring! Ring!
"Hello?"

"This afternoon I was running a radar speed check as part of a traffic safety program of the Carbondale Police Department. At that time I logged your vehicle speeding. I am calling to ask you to drive slower, and to follow the posted speed limits in our community."

Those who drive 10 mph or more above the speed limit in Carbondale may receive a phone call similar to the one above — not from a police officer, but from a citizen volunteer.

Mary Hart, coordinator of Carbondale volunteer services, said the Carbondale Police Department is in the process of getting the SAV (Speed Awareness Volunteers) program started.

Hart said the SAV program was Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom's idea.

"It's his concept," Hart said. "As far as we know it's the only one in the country."

According to the Carbondale Police Department the purpose of the SAV program is to respond to neighborhood complaints of speeding through the use of civilian volunteers on stationary patrol in marked vehicles.

Hart said all cars used by the SAV program are extras that the police department is not using.

Hart said stop sign and red light violators will also be called in by SAV volunteers on stationary patrol.

After their shifts, volunteers will call the people caught disobeying the law and tell them that they were observed and what the consequences would be if they are ever stopped by an officer and ticketed.

Hart said SAV volunteers will probably only be out during the daylight hours.

"At least for now," Hart said.

Hart said 10 volunteers are in currently in training, and more are needed to fill the desired 144 volunteer hours a week.

Hart said all volunteers must pass a background check, have references and fill out a liability waiver.

If anyone wants to volunteer they should call the SAV program at 457-3200 ext. 450.

Volunteer Guidelines

- Volunteers use marked police cars that have a magnetic sign on the front fenders that identify the occupants of the vehicle as volunteers.

- All SAV program volunteers must go through radar and police radio training.

- Volunteers do not have arrest powers or the authority to conduct traffic stops.

- Vehicles assigned to volunteers must be parked on a public way or driveway, unless permission is granted from a private landowner.

- Overhead emergency lights are not

University Housing officials may dig into meal refund program

By Signe Skinion
Daily Egyptian Reporter

University Housing officials are considering a program for next year that will allow refunds for students who do not eat every meal on their cafeteria meal ticket.

Edward L. Jones, director of University Housing, said the refundable meal program is being investigated for viability and for student reaction.

The program will allow a student to receive a portion of the total food cost back from every meal throughout the semester they didn't eat, Jones said.

"Because a lot of students do not eat all of what they are paying for, the refund from those unused meals would go to their Bursar account at the end of the semester," Jones said. "Students will either eat all of their 12 meals, or they will get some money back."

Mary M. Morgan, assistant director of Residence Hall Dining, said this is one of the best programs Housing has looked into for the students' best interests.

N. IRELAND HOPES CLINTON VISIT HELPS PEACE—
BELFAST, Northern Ireland—This divided city is recovering from decades of ethnic strife, and President Clinton will add his own morale boost this week with an overnight stop at a downtown site that defiantly calls itself "the most bombed hotel in Europe." On the eve of the presidential visit, though, a fragile 15-month cease-fire by Roman Catholic and Protestant paramilitary groups that underpins the Northern Ireland renaissance is in danger. Repeated attempts by the British and Irish governments have failed to extend the cease-fire into an ongoing search for peace. For the 1.6 million people of Northern Ireland, then, the first visit by a sitting American president is a chance to both celebrate the absence of violence and press partisan visions for a long-term peace settlement.

CENTRAL AFRICAN LEADERS MEET ON RWANDA—
CAIRO, Egypt—As concern mounts over the fate of 2 million refugees from last year's ethnic bloodletting in Rwanda, former U.S. President Jimmy Carter began meeting with Central African leaders here Tuesday in an unprecedented effort to find a regional solution to the crisis. Carter said he hopes the three or four-day summit would produce a lasting solution for the refugees, the largest number of whom—about 800,000—are camped in Zaire near the border with Rwanda. Carter was joined in Cairo by South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu. The refugees, most of whom are members of Rwanda's Hutu ethnic group, the country's largest, have resisted resettlement in Rwanda out of fear they will be subject to reprisals by the country's Tutsi minority, which now dominates the government and army after toppling an extremist Hutu regime last year.

COMPLAINTS ABOUT FURLOUGH CONTINUE—
WASHINGTON—The Great Furlough of 1995 is over (at least until Dec. 15), but the memories linger on. And on. The politically motivated lockdown angered lots of people for lots of different reasons. Among the ticked-off: federal workers who got free, no-stress vacations while their "essential" colleagues toiled and "nonessential" workers boiled at home. But the big group of unhappy furlough campers are feds themselves. Based on reader comments the arguments go like this: Many feds, designed as "essential" or who work for agencies or operations untouched by the budget standoff, felt slighted. They will get their regular pay—but nothing more—for working while many of their officemates were at home on full pay. Some "nonessential" feds who in retrospect did all right are unhappy too. They got three and a half days off, with pay, though many didn't enjoy it because of fears they wouldn't get paid.

FOOD STAMP STING GETS SOME STORES BOOTED—
WASHINGTON—In a news release that mentioned fraud six times in the first page, Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman announced late last month that he was booting out of the food stamp program 753 stores in seven cities, including the District. One problem: Most of the stores caught in the department's "crackdown" weren't engaging in fraud. Or exchanging stamps for cash or drugs. Or doing anything illegal. About 10 percent of the stores are under investigation for potential fraud, department officials say. The remainder were dumped because they didn't meet eligibility requirements. Inspections found they didn't have enough of the right kind of food and shouldn't have been allowed to accept food stamps in the first place.

Age changes in Neely Hall opposed by USG

By Signe K. Skinton,
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Two Undergraduate Student Government Senators at tonight's USG meeting will continue to oppose a proposal by University Housing to convert Neely Hall to the only over-21 dorm next year. David Vingren, USG Senator and writer of a resolution opposing the change, said he and his constituents feel an alternative to the conversion would be more acceptable. "USG supports making more housing available for 21-and-over students," Vingren said. "However, we oppose not having housing for these students on both sides of campus."

Vingren's proposal requests the decision for Neely, in University Park, to be the only over-21 dorm to be changed to allow the first and second floors of Warren Hall, in Thompson Point, to be reserved for older students.

"This idea was first proposed by Ed Jones (University Housing Director) over Halloween break, so it has been considered by the administration," Vingren said. "We just want to keep 21-and-over housing available to students on both sides of campus."

Andrew Ensor, USG Senator, said he feels there is no reason for the conversion at all, but a need for more housing availability.

"Mr. Jones does not need to change current housing assignments," Ensor said. "There is nothing that necessitates the change in housing. There is a need for expansion."

USG will also be discussing a resolution in support of the construction of an intramural recreational sports field complex, and a bill to reduce maximum general funding of Registered Student Organizations that do not follow USG funding policy.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Renaissance Room.

Today's classrooms may be thing of past

By Alan Schnepf
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Today's classrooms will soon be a thing of the past because of advances in educational research, a visiting official from the U.S. Department of Education said Tuesday.

Sharon Porter Robinson, assistant secretary for educational research and improvement, met with SIUC education experts and area school officials to discuss educational research's role in shaping tomorrow's schools.

The roundtable discussion, in the Student Center, was one part of Robinson's two day visit of SIU facilities in Springfield, Edwardsville and Carbondale.

SIU Chancellor Ted Sanders, who served as Robinson's guide, said the trip was an opportunity for Robinson to get away from Washington and see the tangible results of federal education policy.

"It's important to get outside the Beltway and see what's going on in the real world," Sanders said.

Robinson said because the nation's educational needs are changing, the structure of schools should change as well.

"It's not a time to continue to fund what we've already begun," she said. "Our old habits are going to be challenged by new knowledge."

She said a "great influx" of new students into the education system and growing diversity of students are two issues education researchers must study to make schools that meet students' needs.

She said such changes in American family life also create a need for enhanced school systems.

"Families that have working parents have schedules that are different than what our social services were set up for," she said.

Robinson said school schedule changes to fit working parents would have been "nice 15 years ago, now it's necessary."

Robinson said government education research should be taken into the field and analyzed to see the effect different methods have.

"We want to make systems that make us aware of our impacts," she said.

Robinson also said the traditional image of teachers as workers who merely follow instructions from their superiors and supervise one group of children should be phased out.

She said teachers must be allowed to have more input on school curricula and must work with each get home.

"It would be a big inconvenience to people who don't have a car," Bonanno said. "There would be a lot of angry parents."

One student says he would not be stranded in Carbondale if the route is cut, but it would cause some problems for him.

Darrell Booton, a senior in psychology from Naperville, said he would still be able to get rides home from friends, but life without Amtrak would be inconvenient.

Booton said the train helps him because it lets him schedule when he leaves and returns to Carbondale around his work hours. He said if the route gets cut, he would have to try to work around other people's schedules for rides home.

"I rely on the train. It's nice. It's consistent," Booton said. "I can always rely on it."

Kelly Geisler, a senior in English from Minneapolis, Minn., said she was planning to take the train home for Spring Break, but if the route is closed, she would be

Congressional cutbacks threaten United Nations

By Carey Jane Atherton
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Valuable services that the United Nations provide to the world community are being threatened by the attitudes of some freshman congressmen, a top official with the United Nations Association said Monday night.

James M. Olson, vice president of the United Nations Association of the United States of America, spoke in the Lesar Law School auditorium on the crucial role the United Nations plays in the environment, peacekeeping and human rights around the world.

Olson said a major problem facing the United Nations is legislation passed by Congress for more cuts in the United States' U.N. funding.

"The United Nations is broke," Olson said. "The United States is the single largest debtor among U.N. members."

The United States owes the United Nations $1.25 billion, he said.

Olson said a freshman U.S. Representative introduced a piece of legislation that calls for the withdrawal of the United States from the United Nations.

Rep. Joe Scarborough, R-Fla., also orders the United Nations to move its headquarters out of New York City in the legislation he put forth, proposing the United States withdraw from the world body.

Olson said Scarborough's proposal may be straw in the wind, because it probably will not get out of committee or passed. However, he said it is hard to tell what will happen to the Scarborough legislation.

"Scarborough is not perceived as a kook, he is well focused, attractive member of Congress," Olson said. "His attitudes toward the United Nations, unfortunately seem to be characteristic of many members of Congress elected in 1992 and 1994."

Olson said the end of the United Nations is a troubling prospect, and illustrated what the world would be like if there never was a United Nations.

Olson said if there was no United Nations there would not be a universal declaration of human rights, established by the U.N. General Assembly in 1948, and there would have been no international framework for negotiating an end to civil wars in Cambodia and El Salvador.

There also would not be a U.N. High Commission for refugees, an agency that deals with 25 million refugees around the world on a daily basis, Olson said.

"It provides for (refugee's) immediate needs," he said. "Looking after their resettlement or return to their

U.S. on target for peace in Bosnia

THE LATEST UNITED STATES GLOBAL intervention in Bosnia is a sign. It represents a move that could secure pole position for the U.S. in the world leadership race going into the next century. The peace keeping mission in Bosnia is a must as we have seen European nations fail to bring the warring Croats, Serbs and Muslims to peace. The DE backs the president's proposal for a peace keeping mission under one condition: the U.S. forces stay for one year and one year only.

The power struggles that lead to bloodshed and despair for innocent civilians are constantly being waged in the wake of the Soviet Union's demise. European countries have not been successful in attempting to quell these flare-ups between different ethnic, political or religious groups.

We see this in Bosnia.

We see this in Africa.

We see this in the Middle East.

NO COUNTRY BUT THE UNITED STATES IS SO committed to creating peace and free market democracies. The commitment to peace in Bosnia stems from humanitarian and possibly financial concerns. There are legitimate reasons for the U.S. to be an integral part of the peace forging mission.

Because women are being raped.

Because men and boys are being tortured and murdered.

Because the children are witnessing ethnic cleansing and through this are encouraged to accept it. Remember the Nazis?

OPPONENTS OF U.S. INTERVENTION IN BOSNIA are likely to be heard loud and clear if servicemen start coming home in bodybags. Questions will demand answers and Clinton said he will take responsibility. Are the people of former Yugoslavia worth dying for? What makes peace in this region of the chaotic world so important that we lose our sons and daughters to achieve it? What real responsibility do Americans have to ending an ethnic dispute half way around the world?

Clinton has declared that U.S. troops will "fight fire with fire, and then some." If attacked, it may take a round or two with the reigning heavyweight champion of the world before rebellious Bosnians, Serbs or Croats recognize the overwhelming strength of the lone superpower. The implementing of a peace keeping force which risks the loss of American lives is necessary because this could be the final chance at laying the foundations for peace for Bosnia and ultimately Europe. Remember the Nazis?

THE BOSNIAN CONFLICT IS SIMILAR TO THE diagnosis of a serious illness in a human. The illness must be treated to bring the body into full health as ailing Bosnia must be nursed back to strength. Over the counter drugs (cease fires) haven't worked, so it is time for an at home visit (to Bosnia) from the doctor (U.S. forces). If the illness goes untreated, the result can be deadly. The DE urges the president to send forces to Bosnia for one year. If intervention fails within that time we must regroup and seek alternate plans. Peace can't be forged by the U.S. everywhere but it must be attempted here.

Turkish-Cypriots need protection of Turkey

The Cyprus conflict generates intense emotional reaction from certain Greek-Cypriot quarters who are quick to frame the issue in terms which would confuse and distort all historical and constitutional facts. The American public is entitled to an honest history lesson without revisionist attempts. To that purpose, let's answer two burning questions.

Q: Why has Turkey intervened in Cyprus?

A: Because, under the Treaty of Guarantee (Lausanne Accords signed by Greece, Britain and Turkey), Turkey, as one of the three guarantors of the Republic of Cyprus, was duty-bound to protect the Constitution of Cyprus which in turn was supposed to protect the Turkish minority. A minority which was under imminent threat of "ethnic cleansing" following the military putsch which deposed Archbishop Makarios and in the process violated the provisions of the Constitution. Turkey did not "invade," but rather exercised her right of intervention as sanctioned under the London-Zurich Accords.

Here is how the then US Secretary of State George W. Ball, in his memoirs, described the events leading to the Turkish intervention of 1974: "Makarios' central interest was to block off Turkish intervention so that he and his Greek-Cypriots could go on happily massacring Turkish-Cypriots."

Q: Why was it necessary to have in the London-Zurich Accords a provision enabling Turkey to intervene unilaterally in Cyprus on behalf of the Turkish-Cypriots?

A: Because long before the negotiations leading to these Accords, the Turkish minority on the island was subject to pogroms and ethnic violence the likes of which were not witnessed since WWII. Indeed, between 1955 and 1958, the Greek Cypriot terrorist organization E.O.K.A. were the instigators of what is nowadays called "ethnic cleansing." The press reports of the time are replete with horror stories which would match savagery for savagery with anything we might read today coming out of Bosnia.

For Turkish-Cypriots the moral of all this is simple enough: NEVER AGAIN!

For refugees, invasion of 1974 still not over

I would like to refer to Mr. Berk Berkmen's comments published in the Nov. 16 issue of the DE. Mr. Berkmen was asked to give his opinion regarding the rally held by the Greek Cypriot students on Nov. 15 protesting the illegal invasion in 1974 and continued occupation of 37 percent of Cyprus by Turkish Troops. Mr. Berkmen's statement read, "The University is not the place for the Cypriots' political propaganda."

Well, I think that Mr. Berkmen has a problem distinguishing between political propaganda and humanitarian issues. The Greek Cypriot students of SIUC are not great politicians that give promises and pompous speeches. We do not represent any particular political parties, Mr. Berkmen. We represent a small percentage of the 200,000 Greek Cypriots that were violently expelled from their homes by Turkish troops in 1974. We represent the relatives and friends of the 1619 MIAs (including five Americans) who were captured by Turkish troops in 1974. We represent the families of the dead, the injured, the raped, the tortured Greek Cypriots of 1974. We simply represent a part of the world where Turkey has been violating human rights for the last twenty-one years.

The United Nations Resolutions clearly state that Turkey should immediately withdraw Turkish troops from Cyprus. The Greek Cypriot students were not promoting any political propaganda the cold evening of Nov. 15. We were trying to make the people of Carbondale aware of the injustice and violation of human rights in Cyprus. We were trying to share our pain and anger with other people. Pain because we are still suffering as refugees in our own country. Anger because in the 21st Century, Turkey ignores all UN resolutions and continues to illegally occupy 37 percent of our land. And a final word, Mr. Berkmen: we are determined to continue our struggle. We will not stop until the problem is settled.

How to submit a letter to the editor:

NATO hangs on U.S. troop decision

By David Gompert
The Los Angeles Times

The House has cautioned the president not to expect Congress to agree to include American troops in the NATO force that will police a Bosnian peace settlement. Fair or right. Because this issue could divide the country, the president would be wise to set aside his prerogatives and seek a political mandate. Congress will demand to know what the force's main task will be—keeping the warring sides apart or keeping Bosnia together—and how the force can be removed without plunging Bosnia back into war.

Granting that the administration must answer all the tough questions about the purposes, limits, costs and risks of sending American forces to Bosnia, the public and Congress, even those who would relish Bill Clinton's political failure, should make no mistake about the consequences of a defeat for the president on Bosnia. With a peace agreement reached, say administration officials, refusal to commit U.S. troops to NATO peacekeeping force will cause the sky to fall. They are right.

The first casualty would be NATO itself, which would find itself without a mission, a leader, or a future. When the Cold War ended, the United States and its allies decided to keep NATO in place and American troops in Europe, having learned this century's painful lesson: When the United States walked away from its role in Europe after World War I, back came war in Europe and back came the United States in World War II. But in the second half of the century, when the United States stayed in Europe, peace prevailed, the Cold War was won, and American interests thrived.

Most of history, the United States renewed its commitment to European security at the Rome NATO summit in 1991, even as the Red Army streamed home. In 1992, at the urging of the United States, NATO announced that it was prepared to perform peacekeeping missions for the sake of security in Europe. Enforcing a settlement in Bosnia is precisely the sort of challenge we and our allies had in mind when these decisions were made to preserve NATO, retain an American military presence and use alliance capabilities to keep peace.

If the alliance leader now fails to live up to these solemn undertakings, all bets are off: NATO's main mission will be nullified, leaving American military commanders to guess what their job is. Since the American troops in Europe will have no clear function, the consensus for keeping them there will crumble. And our allies—malign them if you like, but bear in mind they already have thousands of peacekeepers in Bosnia—will conclude that the United States does not, after all, accept responsibility to join in restoring security to Europe. The dormant idea of an independent European alliance, excluding the United States, will awake with a vengeance.

Because the very premise of NATO in the new era would be erased if the United States evades this call, such dire predictions are not far-fetched. A Europe without NATO, a Europe without America, means a different world from the one that the United States has tried to create since the collapse of communism, under presidents of both parties and with broad public and congressional support. Those who say we have no important interest that would justify sending American peacekeepers to Bosnia should consider whether they would prefer that different world. While pundits might say fine, statesmen will think twice.

Even worse consequences are imaginable. If a peace agreement cannot be implemented because the United States declines to do its part, we will receive and deserve the blame for whatever happens. The Europeans will surely withdraw the forces they now have in Bosnia and the savagery of the last three years will resume and possibly spread. The United States might then need to enter in force, under truly perilous circumstances—just as we had to return to Europe after trying to escape our responsibility earlier this century.

Weighed against these dangers, the opponents' case comes down to one point: the risk to American lives. They forget that this will not be a U.N. operation but a NATO operation, answerable to the supreme allied commander: an American general. If we lack faith in NATO to conduct military operations, we should have closed it down by now. In the event Americans are killed, we would not be callous to recall that we have all-volunteer armed forces, whose members have signed on to risk their lives in the nation's interest. And with the $260-billion defense budget American taxpayers fund, our armed forces are hardly being asked to operate at a disadvantage.

Most fears about American peacekeepers in Bosnia are superstitious caused by past failures, especially Vietnam and Somalia. The administration cannot ignore these fears. Neither can Congress ignore that refusal to join and lead our NATO allies will earn it a special place in American history.

Gompert is a vice president of RAND and former senior director for Europe and Eurasia on the Bush administration's National Security Council staff.

The invisible, unspoken budget cuts

The Washington Post

The largest spending cut in the Republican plan to balance the budget has been the least examined. The Republicans would save more than $400 billion over seven years by cutting domestic appropriations.

These appropriations are the operating budget for most of the government. They don't include the cost of entitlements, national defense or interest on the debt, but they cover everything else from tax collection and highway funds to Head Start grants and the operation and maintenance of veterans' hospitals and the national parks.

The president himself would freeze this spending over the seven years. The congressional budget would cut it even more. In real or inflation-adjusted terms, it would be reduced by about a fifth over the seven years combined, and in the seventh year alone by nearly a third.

It isn't clear to anyone that cuts of this magnitude are sustainable, that the government could function to general public satisfaction if they were made. The beauty of the system from the politicians' standpoint is that no one has to confront that fact.

That's because appropriations are made item by item and a year at a time. These caps or limits on total appropriations three and five and seven years from now are abstractions only. It's easy to say yes to fiscal abstractions whose specific programmatic implications you aren't required to explore. That's what's happening here.

President Clinton hasn't made a major issue of the appropriations caps. Nor has enough attention been paid to them in Congress by members of either party. Clinton, like other Democrats, has complained about individual appropriations cuts in particular fields he favors (and thinks the voters also favor)—education, training, environmental protection, child nutrition etc. But the overall limits that even this year have begun to force these cuts have been much less discussed.

This editorial appeared in Tuesday's Washington Post.

"Students can receive $1.71 back every time they don't eat on this program," Morgan said. "I'm glad we're able to offer this option for next year along with the carry-out meals and the unlimited trips to the cafeterias we implemented this year. We're really trying to give students what they want."

Jones said this is a complicated program, but the work is going very well, and he hopes to have this program implemented for Fall 1996.

"We've pursued this idea for a few weeks, and it's working. It's way off the boards into reality," Jones said. "This program is a little more complicated than the Neely conversion, but I am hoping that by next year it will be an option for the students."

"I want to see the mission defined with respect to how we go in there, what our role is one we're there, and what kind of exit strategy is available if the mission should falter."

All four officials said they are fearful for the loss of American lives in Bosnia.

"The toughest assignment I've had in all my years in this job has been attending the funerals of a Marine killed in the Beirut barracks bombing and a Marine killed in the Persian Gulf War," Durbin said.

homeland is dirty, unglamorous, but essential work and the U.N. High Commission is there to do it."

Olson said a good example of why the United Nations, or something like it is essential, is the Montreal Protocol.

The Montreal Protocol is a treaty in which governments agree to curb or to stop the production of chemicals that deplete the Earth's ozone layer.

"No one country by itself... can deal with something like the holes in the ozone layer," Olson said. "It absolutely requires nearly universal cooperation among all the nations on the Earth."

Olson said although the United Nations receives a lot of criticism and Congress' attitude toward it is hostile, overall public opinion of the United Nations remains relatively high.

He said between 60 and 80 percent of respondents answer "yes" when asked in opinion polls if they believe the United Nations is doing a good job. Public opinion is particularly high in the area of the U.N.'s humanitarian work, but low in the areas of peace-keeping and security.

However, Olson said the high level of public support for the United Nations is not based upon a large body of public knowledge.

"Support for the United Nations is a mile high and an inch deep," Olson said.

Olson urged all citizens to take the time and learn about what the United Nations is doing and has done, and to watch how Congress is dealing with it.

Olson said that all of the work the United Nations does comes at a relatively low price.

Total U.N. expenditures equal $13 billion a year, and of that amount the United States provides $1.8 billion.

Olson said the U.S. portion of the U.N. budget is about one-third of the New York public schools' budget, and equals out to $7 a year for every woman, child and man.

Olson said the United Nations needs a simpler, more streamlined administrative system, a strengthening of its peacekeeping machine and increases in its security council and leadership.

Olson said that these things needed to build a stronger, United Nations are going to come about by the demands of people. He said a strong, vocal public opinion is essential.

"We have to show that we know that the U.N. has an impact on our community," Olson said.

Olson suggests voting and joining non-governmental organizations. "We need to take sometime to learn a little bit about what is happening at the U.N. just as we do at city hall," Olson said. "Please take some time to express your point of view."

Solo Springsteen sheds rock-star image for reality

Los Angeles Times
LOS ANGELES—Bruce Springsteen's performance on Sunday at the Wilshire Theatre had more of the feel of a one-man play than a concert, all the way down to the sign in the lobby warning that late seating would be at the discretion of the management.

Fair enough. The evening — the formal start of Springsteen's first solo tour — was high-stakes drama, both in the context of the singer-songwriter's long career and in the purposefulness of the musical focus.

At a time when his relevance in the rock climate of the '90s has been widely questioned, Springsteen delivered nearly two hours of music that was uncompromisingly bleak and frequently brilliant.

"A lot of the songs were written with a lot of silence and they need silence to work," Springsteen told the audience after the opening number. "So if you like singing and clapping Dustin Hoffman, Jim Carrey and Jackson Browne — got a chance to laugh.

There's a lot of looking back these days in pop, as evidenced by the stampede to record stores for what amounts to table scraps virtually every emotion that has been important in rock. There were moments of celebration and comfort, commentary and rebellion.

On Sunday, however, there was little comfort and no celebration. He even wiped away the glamorous rock-star image of the '70s and '80s by combing his hair back to spotlight, rather than hide, his receding hairline.

Without a band by his side, Springsteen continues to sing about dreams, but there's a profound difference.

Where he once urged his young fans to follow their sometimes elusive dreams, he now asks an audience of all ages to reflect on the shattered dreams of those caught on the wrong side of the line in a land where the term "two Americas" underscores the harsh socioeconomic realities.

He sang old and new tunes in a voice so gruff and pointed that it stripped the songs of any trace of comforting melody, in much the way that conditions have stripped the songs' characters of their hope.

"A lot of the songs were written with a lot of silence and they need silence to work. So if you like singing and clapping along, please don't."

along, please don't."

On a lighter note, he added, "I know this is L.A., so I hope I don't have to come out there and confiscate any cellular phones."

It was about the only time the audience — which included such celebrity guests as Tom Hanks, album's 12 songs, continued in that spirit.

Much of the power of Springsteen's live shows over the years has been in their marathon nature — three or more hours of glorious music and motion with the E Street Band that served up

Prosecutor defends choice of Simpson trial location

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES—Before O.J. Simpson tried on the glove that didn't fit, before former Detective Mark Fuhrman was discredited, before police criminalist Dennis Fung stumbled through his trial testimony, prosecutors made a key decision that critically handicapped them from the start, many legal experts say. They filed charges against Simpson in a downtown court instead of in the upscale, neighboring city of Santa Monica. The Sixth Amendment states that a trial should be held "in the district" — not the city — where the crime is committed.

Juries drawn from the Santa Monica courthouse are more affluent, better educated and have a different ethnic mix than those at the downtown courthouse.

A Santa Monica jury in the Simpson double-murder trial, legal experts say, would have been much more receptive to the prosecution's case.

The wrongful-death lawsuits that have been filed against Simpson are scheduled to be tried next spring in Santa Monica, which will give plaintiff's attorneys a tremendous advantage and will, once again, highlight the prosecution's decision in the Simpson case, the experts contend.

In two of the biggest cases ever tried by the Los Angeles County district attorney's office — the Simpson case and the Simi Valley trial of four white Los Angeles Police Department officers accused of beating black motorist Rodney G. King — the location of the trial was a crucial factor.

Both trials revealed the chasm between Southern California's white and black communities and showed that in a multi-ethnic, polarized city such as Los Angeles, where a case is tried may be as important as how it is tried.

When Los Angeles County District Attorney Gil Garcetti faces re-election in March, his decision to file the case downtown may come back to haunt him.

Garcetti's political opponents already have blasted him for micro-managing the Simpson case, and have criticized a number of key decisions made by him and his team of prosecutors, including not filing the case in Santa Monica.

Garcetti denied in a recent interview that the racial composition of the jury pool influenced his decision to file the Simpson case downtown.

Film blamed for subway assault

Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK—A gruesome arson attack that left a subway token clerk fighting for his life in a hospital burn unit Monday led to a call for a boycott of the new movie "Money Train" after Mayor Rudolph W. Giuliani and police officials said the assault appeared to be a copy of a scene from the film.

The clerk, 50-year-old Henry Kaufman, remained in critical condition at the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center with burns over most of his body after the attack in Brooklyn early Sunday morning in which two men sprayed a flammable liquid into his subway token booth, set it on fire and blew it up.

A similar attack appears twice in the Wesley Snipes-Woody Harrelson movie, in which a pyromaniac named "Torch" terrorizes the city's subways. In the movie, however, the clerks escape without injury. Although New York suffered a series of arson attacks on token booths a decade ago, city officials blamed the weekend attack on the movie. "This is a horrendous crime," said Giuliani. "So far as we know this has been done for no reason. This appears to be very, very similar to scenes in the movie."

Snipes' publicist, David Pollack, released a statement quoting the star as saying that "my prayers are with Henry Kaufman and his family."

Columbia Pictures, which released the film, also issued a statement saying company officials were "appalled and dismayed" by the attack.

'Hotline' puts D.C. online

Los Angeles Times

ALEXANDRIA, Va.—A scant 10 minutes past his 11:30 a.m. deadline, Hotline Publisher Robert Balkin scampored down three sets of stairs and into a basement control room.

As Balkin and a computer expert tried to unravel a mechanical glitch, tiny red lights flickered impatiently on a stack of black metal boxes nearby.

"Those are our readers," Balkin explained breathlessly. "They're wondering where we are."

The red lights flashed and died, ignited and disappeared as members of the political Establishment tried to get "The Daily Briefing on American Politics" hot off the Hotline's high-speed computer.

Finally, at exactly 11:45 a.m., the day's Hotline was liberated into cyberspace. By 11:46 a.m., the Heritage Foundation and the U.S. Information Agency had already logged on for their copies. At 11:47, The Chicago Tribune and the Environmental Protection Agency were among those downloading 22 pages of political tidbits, with Newsweek, Rush Limbaugh, and The New York Times getting theirs by 11:49.

Whether it brings news of who really won the presidential straw poll in Florida or which side blinked in the federal budget battle, the daily Hotline for the last eight years has been a strong force that informs and unifies the political community, particularly the media.

As a kind of hometown daily for an estimated 12,000 political insiders, the Hotline also provides a clue about why the media tends to stampede in the same direction, to follow the same trends, the same stories.

In the eyes of its publisher, the Hotline is a force for democracy within the nation's press corps.

By quoting those from outside Washington or New York, the Hotline "has brought a lot more diversity and many different voices into the conventional wisdom," Balkin argues.

Others, however, see its influence as more constricting, increasing the tendency of reporters and editors to all head in the same direction simultaneously.

"Most people are essentially lazy, and if you can give them a shortcut, they'll use it," says Everett Dennis, executive director of the Freedom Forum Media Studies Center at Columbia University in New York.

"If you can say, 'Come to my Kmart and I'll give you everything you need,' they'll come."

Hotline "can make reporters lazy and pundits all too similar, and it is galling to hear someone on Sunday regurgitating Friday's Hotline," says Tim Russert, host of NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" show.

Still, he adds, the best political reporters and consultants "use it as a resource and not a crutch."

For the company's founders, political consultants Doug Bailey (a Republican) and Roger Craver (a Democrat), the dependency on Hotline by journalists and campaign consultants is exactly what they had in mind when they began the Hotline in September 1987.

Back then, in what seemed like the dawn of cyberspace, computers were slow and clumsy, the information highway still on the horizon.

Many clients got the package by fax or even in the mail. (A few still do).

Today, with most readers receiving the publication by noon EST, at prices that begin around $4,000 per client, Hotline manages to do the hard work of digesting news stories so that the politically savvy can say they have heard of a long article or a TV show, even if they have only read a blurb about it.

And some scan Hotline for good political headlines, a striking image or simply the day's insider joke to take to lunch.

A recent Hotline, for example, noted that Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., could not make it in person to the Republican Governors' Association meeting in Nashua, N.H.

As a result, Dole spoke by satellite, "which made him look like a giant peering in through a 12th-story window," according to the Concord (N.H.) Monitor.

The quote of the day came from Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who was in the process of suspending his presidential quest.

He told the Philadelphia Daily News: "I would have kicked myself in the ass if I hadn't tried."

Schedules for the candidates were listed, as well as the latest polls.

Amtrak

forced to buy a plane ticket.

She said the plane ticket would be too expensive for her to afford.

However, some students say the train is not relied on and cutting Carbondale from the route would not cause them any problems.

Danielle West, a freshman in athletic training from Chicago, said she plans to fly home from now on.

West said she could take a shuttle from Carbondale to St.

Louis for $35, and when she buys her plane ticket 21 days in advance, it costs $22.

"It's cheaper to take a plane," West said.

"I don't like the train anyway."

According to Amtrak, a round trip ticket to Chicago ranges from $79 to $138 for adults depending on timely rates.

Greg Sadler, a graduate student from Milwaukee, Wis., also said the cost of Amtrak prevents him from using services.

"It cost more over Thanksgiving break to take Amtrak from Carbondale to Milwaukee than to fly to Milwaukee," Sadler said.

FRED'S

If you only go to Fred's once a year this is the week to go!

A good way to describe a Kenny Carlyle night would be the way springfest used to be - wacky, good natured and fun. Last year you saw 'em at the Illinois State Fair and at the DuQuoin State Fair, now see 'em at Fred's!

Kenny doesn't just draw from the immediate area—some folks will be traveling 180 miles to see Kenny at Fred's. We've got reservations as far away as Champaign and Mattoon, Terre Haute, IN and Hopkinsville, KY.

Fans should enjoy Northwestern's campaign

The Sporting News

Northwestern, the Halley's comet of college football, will make its twice-every-century trip to the Rose Bowl this winter. My, my. The wondrous Wildcats have streaked high over the smokestacks of football factories littering the landscape from Pennsylvania to Iowa. The temptation is to say that Northwestern's ascension shows that college football is all that it's cracked up to be: actual students attending an actual university with the idea of actually getting an actual diploma that has actual meaning.

In celebration of such a thing, we should retrieve our purple sweaters from Goodwill and wear them proudly. We should announce ourselves as the Wildcats' subway alumni. We should make up lies about sneaking Ann-Margret out of her dorm. We should say we knew Charlton Heston before he went biblical. We should even get a map and learn where Evanston is.

Because this is the best story in college athletics today, we should enjoy Northwestern's thrill ride as long as it lasts—for, alas, the end is coming. We can see it. We can see the inevitable result of magical work. We know what will happen. This will happen...

It's the week after the Rose Bowl, maybe even the next morning. Northwestern's coach, Gary Barnett, calls a press conference at which he does an Ara Parseghian. That is, having worked a miracle, he leaves for an actual football job at an actual football school. A year later, mighty Northwestern is again Northwestern the mediocre. We subway alumni then repair to our usual dark places to wait another 50 years or so to see our Wildcats light up the sky.

This will happen because college football at the major-bowl level is about three things. It's about winning. It's about winning big. And it's about winning big all the time. The Northwestern stories are the beautiful exceptions that allow us to lie to ourselves. They allow us to imagine that college football is about kids having fun all over America.

For Northwestern, a private university that long ago made peace with its identity as a big-time football failure, the occasional success is all that's necessary. But for nine or 10 of Northwestern's conference playmates, perennial success is not only necessary but expected and needed. It's needed to sell 80,000 tickets every other Saturday. It's needed because college football is peripherally about college and directly about money.

At the top levels, college football is professional football with millionaire coaches, multimillion-dollar budgets, national television performances and the world's largest stadiums. All that's amateur about it are the players, who work for free in an exploitation so shameful that universities hide the truth even from themselves.

If college football occasionally gives us a Northwestern story, all warm and fuzzy, more often by far the story is a different one. Usually, it's about a professional college football team deciding good isn't good enough—such as the University of Georgia, which last week fired its coach, Ray Goff.

Moscow site of Davis Cup tennis battle

By Bud Collins

Special to the Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW—Should Tom Gullikson declare himself a latter-day homesteader and camp out on a plot of crimson earth in central Moscow to protect his rights?

"Might not be a bad idea," he says, only half kidding. Gullikson's mission to Moscow, as U.S. Davis Cup captain, is to win the 95-year-old sterling tub that is emblematic of the world team championship in tennis, the climax of a tournament that involved 115 entries. Only the guys from nine countries—Americans 30 times—have guzzled victors' champagne from the basin donated by a rich Harvard kid, Dwight Davis, in 1900.

Gullikson wonders if it's the Cold War revisited as he prepares his troops—Pete Sampras, Andre Agassi, Jim Courier, Todd Martin and Richey Reneberg—for this weekend's clash with Russia in the cavernous Olympic Stadium, where the specially constructed clay court could become a quicksand patch for the Yanks.

Gullikson, perhaps unwisely, didn't bring a sleeping bag so that he could monitor the battleground round the clock, but is well aware that the court was doctored favorably for the natives before Russia's staggering 3-2 upset of favored Germany in a September semifinal.

"I'm on my guard to prevent a repeat," the captain says. "And so are the (neutral) officials from the ITF (the governing International Tennis Federation)."

That latest version of court intrigue was, indeed, a sticky wicket for the fast-court loving Germans, Boris Becker and Michael Stich. Customarily, the town's annual pro tourney on the ATP Tour, the Kremlin Cup, is contested on a quick plastic rug. It remained in place for the 1994 Davis Cup final, in which Sweden beat the Russians, 4-1.

Not so good for the favorite team of presidential first hacker, Boris Yeltsin. The answer was to put the brakes on speed freaks Becker and Stich, throw dirt on their parade in the form of a turgid clay court. Thus it was laid for the occasion inside the massive, deteriorating arena that seats 40,000—cordoned off to 17,000 for tennis. It worked.

Not satisfied that the court was pokey enough, Russian management—was the KGB involved?—decided that miring the Germans was even better.

chances to see the team play last year. Likewise, Callahan had the opportunity to see Ruggeri play over the last year or two.

Ruggeri was not unfamiliar to Callahan before the recruiting process began. Callahan said he had heard about Ruggeri even before he became the head coach for the Salukis.

"After seeing him (Ruggeri) play, that was reason enough to start the recruiting process," Callahan said.

"Signing guys like Steve Ruggeri is what can help turn the program around if you can get enough of them," Callahan said. "We brought in three players this past year who were first-team All-State as seniors."

Ruggeri is not only one of the top 100 high school players in the country, he is also a top notch student.

Callahan said Ruggeri has been encouraged by his family to do well in school and that support will in-turn help Ruggeri adjust to college academics.

"His academic background is sound," Callahan said. "He is very conscientious; his grade point average is good; his class rank is good; his ACT score was good and sometimes there is not always a correlation between the ACT score and how well an individual performs in school."

Ruggeri said that even though he had been recruited by professional scouts, his desire was to go to college first and will welcome the opportunity to play at the professional level later on.

"I am interested in sports medicine, but I am undecided on a major right now," Ruggeri said.

Retiring may be only play Shula has left

Newsday

He has won more games than any man in NFL history, more than George "Papa Bear" Halas, more than Tom Landry, more than Chuck Noll. He has built a wondrous career whose longevity is measured not in years, but presidential administrations—seven and counting.

He has his two Super Bowl rings and his undefeated season. He has a room waiting for him at the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

But now it is time for Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula to leave the game he once brought to its knees with an iron jaw and an offensive genius. It is time for Shula to walk away.

This was supposed to be the year the Dolphins gave Shula a Super Bowl farewell party, when all those first-round draft picks and free-agent acquisitions would ride Dan Marino's vapor trails all the way to Phoenix in January. Instead, the 6-6 Dolphins have become a team that looks like it would have trouble beating Iowa State, no less the watered-down contenders in the AFC.

After a 4-0 start, the Dolphins are in chaos, and Shula bears the ultimate responsibility. His leaky defense, which is spiraling out of control with overmatched defensive coordinator Tom Olivadotti, is regularly getting torched by such quarterback luminaries as Jim Harbaugh, Elvis Grbac and Bobby Brister. Shula's inability to lure Pete Carroll, the former New York Jets head coach and defensive coordinator, is proving to be a huge liability.

The Dolphins have only four games left to salvage a playoff spot and give Shula a fitting sendoff into his NFL sunset. But the way the Dolphins have been playing lately, they will be lucky to finish 8-8 and flirt with a wild card.

Women's Basketball

Salukis outrun Racers in overtime win

By Melanie Gray
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC's women's basketball team pulled out a 51-48 overtime victory over the Racers of Murray State University last night at Racer Arena, bringing the Salukis' record to 1-1.

SIUC went into the contest without starter Nikki Gilmore, who, prior to game time was reportedly sidelined indefinitely with a lower-leg injury. Information on Gilmore's condition will be released later today.

The Salukis adjusted their lineup accordingly, and went out to an early 6-0 lead on two three-point baskets by senior guard Tracy Holscher, who started the first game of her SIUC career. The squad continued to build a lead, but the Racers refused to yield, and the Salukis took a 24-21 lead into the locker room.

MSU was able to keep within striking distance in the first half due to SIUC foul trouble. Nine of the Racers' 21 first-half points came from the free-throw line.

SIUC came out slowly in the second half of play and MSU tied it up at 25-25 with 16:50 left in the game. The Salukis went ahead and held a seven-point lead, 40-33, with just under five minutes remaining in regulation.

A Racer surge closed the gap to 43-42 late in the second half, but Kasia McClendon, who led SIUC with 15 points, hit two clutch free throws in the final minute of regulation to put the Salukis up 45-42.

MSU fired a desperation three-point shot at the buzzer from well

"We've had so many things happen to us of late that we'll have to deal with. I thought Beth Hasheider played well and the freshman (O'Desha) Proctor played well."

Cindy Scott

SIUC women's basketball coach behind the three-point line, sending the game into overtime tied 45-45. The trey was the Racers' only three-point field goal in the contest.

The score was tied 47-47 when McClendon stole the basketball and scored on a break-away layup, putting SIUC ahead for good 49-47. An MSU free throw with just over two minutes left to play pulled the Racers within one, but two key free throws down the stretch by senior LaQuanda Chavours ensured a Saluki victory. Chavours scored 11 points in the contest.

SIUC head coach Cindy Scott said her players gave a great effort to win the game.

"The kids fought really hard," she said. "They did everything I asked them to do."

Scott said Gilmore's absence will hurt her squad, but that the team adjusted well Tuesday.

"We've had so many things happen to us of late that we'll have to deal with," she said. "I thought Beth Hasheider played well and the freshman (O'Desha) Proctor played well."

Scott also said McClendon played one of her best games ever.

"Kasia McClendon played a beautiful basketball game," she said. "She did everything I asked her to do."

SIUC's first victory of the season extended the Salukis' winning streak over the Racers to 10 games and increased the squad's lead in the MSU series to 26-4.

Men's Basketball

Dawgs head north to take on Huskies

By Chad Anderson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Grinch may have stolen Christmas from Whoville, but he must have stopped at SIU Arena to steal the preseason from the Saluki men's basketball team as well.

After dropping both of its exhibition games this season, SIUC is looking to start the regular season on a positive note with a win over the Huskies of Northern Illinois University tonight in DeKalb.

In the preseason, the Salukis lost a heart-breaking game to Zagreb (Croatia) 67-66, and also lost to Athletics in Action 97-83.

In the Athletics in Action game, SIUC shot only 34 percent from the floor in the first half, but rebounded to shoot 51 percent in the second half. Sophomore guard Shane Hawkins, the only returning starter from last season's team, hit only three of 13 during the game—with 12 of those shots coming from behind the three-point arc.

Hawkins said there was no excuse for his shooting performance, but the team cannot rely on just one player.

"We're going to play nine or 10 guys, and we can't rely on one player," he said. "All the shots I missed, I was wide open. Obviously the shooters have to shoot well for us to win."

As for the Salukis' game plan against the Huskies, Hawkins said the Dawgs will try to wear them down with a full-court, up-tempoed game.

"We are going to run because we have so many players, and that works to our advantage with the running game we play," he said. "Controlling the tempo is the key in every game we play this season."

With NIU's 0-for-18 performance from behind the three point line against Austin Peay Monday, Hawkins said the Salukis will have pressure the Huskies' shooters to take bad shots.

"I thought they could shoot the ball, but with their 0-for-18 against Austin Peay, our guards will have to put pressure on their shooters, and we will have to rebound to win," he said.

After dropping its two exhibition games, Hawkins said the team's spirits were low, but a win would help boost it.

"With the two exhibition games we performed poorly in, morale is low," he said. "We would like to win, and that's our main goal, but most importantly we would like to play well."

"We just didn't perform good enough in the preseason to compete in the Missouri Valley Conference this year."

Saluki Baseball

SIUC signs top-ranked prep player

By Jared Driskill
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Steve Ruggeri, a senior at Herrin High School who was named by "High School Baseball USA" as being one of the top 100 prep players in the nation, has recently signed a national-letter-of-intent to play baseball for the Salukis.

This would not be of any surprise except that Ruggeri was actively recruited by 70 other NCAA Division I schools including Cal State—Fullerton, Florida State, Illinois and a host of other well known programs.

SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan said early recruiting contributed to Ruggeri's decision to sign with the Salukis.

"I think a couple of things we had on our side were that we got in on him early as far as the recruiting process goes," Callahan said. "As the recruiting process evolved we also found out that he was very close to his family."

Making the choice to attend SIUC in the fall of 1996 was not an easy choice for Ruggeri considering the opportunities to venture elsewhere.

"It was not an easy choice to make, but my family had a big influence in my decision," Ruggeri said.

Some top high school prospects are lured away from home by the adventure of attending college far from home. Since Ruggeri is close to his family, Callahan's job of signing him was made a little easier.

"Maybe one of our best selling points was the fact that we were close to home so his family would get the chance to see him over the next three or four years," Callahan said.

"Thank goodness for our sakes (through the closeness to his (Ruggeri's) family—it consequently helped us," Callahan said.

Callahan said Ruggeri had a few
