Exotic Japan was a one-day Japanese cultural event that was put on by the Japanese Student Association. The Japanese letters, which spell Daily Egyptian, were written by Masayuki Mitsuyasu, a senior in international management from Japan.

An entire year of studying Japanese in college did not give Laurie Williams a full appreciation of Japanese culture until she attended "Exotic Japan" this week on campus. Williams says, "I personally feel the only way you can actually appreciate something is to actually be there or be exposed to it." Williams, a senior in hotel and restaurant management, said as she sampled Japanese cuisine and culture featured at the event.

"Exotic Japan," an exhibition of Japanese culture, took place in the Student Center Ballrooms from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Wednesday.

The one-day event sponsored by the SIUC Japanese Student Association was an effort to share international culture. Satoko Mitobe, the association's vice president, said,

"We want to show Japanese culture to members of the Carbondale community and the students and faculty on campus," she said.

Mitobe, a graduate student in counseling education from Japan, said preparations for the lunch buffet, including the cooking of 10 kilograms of rice, began Tuesday night.

Mitobe said she and some of the other 380 members of the organization were nervous and were worried about a lack of interest in the event during its three months of planning.

"Since this is the very first 'Exotic Japan,' we were wondering if many people would come or know about the event," she said.

The group's president, Keiko Kawamura, a senior in workforce education from Japan, said similar concerns about the event caused her to worry in a different way.

"I couldn't sleep (Tuesday) night, and I had maybe three hours a sleep the day before," she said. "Members of the organization spent a lot of time preparing for this day."

Mitobe and Kawamura said they were pleased the event did indeed attract more than 200 people who experienced Japanese customs such as the "Chanoyu" tea ceremony and learned oragami, the Japanese art of paper folding.

PROVOST SEARCH

Provost finalists vie for position during meeting

By William Hatfield

Student Affairs and Academic Affairs should work together to solve University-wide problems, two candidates for SIUC vice chancellor of Academic Affairs and provost said as they were interviewed in an open meeting Wednesday.

Margaret E. Winters, associate vice chancellor for Academic Affairs, and John S. Jackson III, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, both participated in the second day of open meetings in the selection for vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost. There are four candidates including Winters and Jackson with meetings this week.

This was Jackson's second meeting.

Winters said Academic Affairs and Student Affairs should work together more often in recruitment and retention.

"We have to ask ourselves what we have to offer to freshmen," Winters said.

"We need to explain the differences from our competitors that should make the University attractive to undergraduates and their parents."

Jackson agreed that Student Affairs and Academic Affairs need to work together much more often.

"My views are we have become much too decartmentalized, and I think Student Affairs and Academic Affairs have pretty much gone their own way without nearly enough cooperation," Jackson said.

"It is ridiculous for one hand not know what the other hand is doing. And I think to some extent, we've done that."

The meetings allowed both candidates to tell their audiences, about 40 people each, their vision statement and philosophy of administration. Candidates then answered

Mayor urges SIUC students to fulfill civic duties on board

By Jennifer Camden
Daily Egyptian Reporter

At a community meeting a few days after last month's riots on South Illinois Avenue, several students accused city leaders of being unresponsive to their needs and concerns.

However, Mayor Neil Dillard, who appoints citizens to some of the city's 23 advisory boards and commissions, said students should take civic responsibility upon themselves and fill two open seats on the Citizens Advisory Committee.

"We really want the members to be diverse. We try to do that, but we do depend on volunteers," he said.

Despite Dillard's desire to place students on the committee, the Undergraduate Student Government is not working on finding a representative to the Citizens Advisory Committee, a group of community members that advises the Carbondale City Council. A USG member said.

Because of that, Dillard said he has made a note to remind the organization to start looking.

USG President Troy Alim said he and other senators have met with city officials at least three times this semester to discuss how to work together. However, he said USG and the city are not working on any projects together.

Mark Terry, Graduate and Professional Student Council president, said that at Dillard's request, he has been trying to find a graduate student to serve on the committee since October, but no one has volunteered to serve.

Hinkley will not seek leave from hospital

Presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr., who was seeking to leave St. Elizabeths Hospital for monthly visits with his parents, has abandoned the idea temporarily after two court-appointed doctors concluded that he remains ill.

Hinckley, 41, has been confined to the hospital in Southeast Washington since June 1982, when he was found not guilty by reason of insanity in the March 30, 1981, shooting of President Ronald Reagan. Hinckley wounded Reagan in the chest and also wounded press secretary James S. Brady. Secret Service agent Timothy J. McCarthy and D.C. police Officer Thomas K. DeLahanty.

At least five previous requests for Hinckley's conditional release have been denied or withdrawn. Prosecutors contend that letting Hinckley go is extremely risky and puts too much faith in his parents.

Army to create panel to investigate harassment

Stung by burgeoning reports of sexual misconduct by instructors and sergeants, the Army plans to create a military-civilian panel to investigate whether it is facing a service-wide harassment problem.

The panel, to be named next week according to a senior Army official, will be headed by a two-star Army general and include both male and female soldiers and civilians, along with the sergeant major of the Army — the highest enlisted member of the service.

The official, who asked not to be named, also said: "Disciplinary action against any female Aberdeen trainees who engaged in an unlawful consensual relationship with a sergeant or other superior is unlikely."

RUSSIA

Yeltsin says he is ready to work, put to rest

MOSCOW — As a major political crisis brewed on Russia's western border, President Boris N. Yeltsin emerged Wednesday from more than two weeks of seclusion after open-heart surgery to declare himself ready to work and "in a fighting mood."

The tough posture adopted by the 65-year-old president in a closely controlled videotape was immediately put to the test with the volatile showdown in neighboring Belarus, where authoritarian President Alexander G. Lukashenko is being threatened with impeachment by parliament and the courts.

In his first diplomatic undertaking since resuming presidential duties shortly after his Nov. 5 quintuple bypass operation, Yeltsin spoke with Lukashenko by phone and sought to avert a violent clash in the country that is Russia's closest ally. Yeltsin urged Lukashenko to compromise with his adversaries for the sake of stability in the region.

Where's the fire? ...

Police say false alarms tripled in one year

By Brett Wilcoxson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The number of false fire alarms triggered in campus residence halls jumped by 300 percent from 1994 to 1995, and SIUC Police say that so far this year there already has been a 38 percent increase from the 1995 mark.

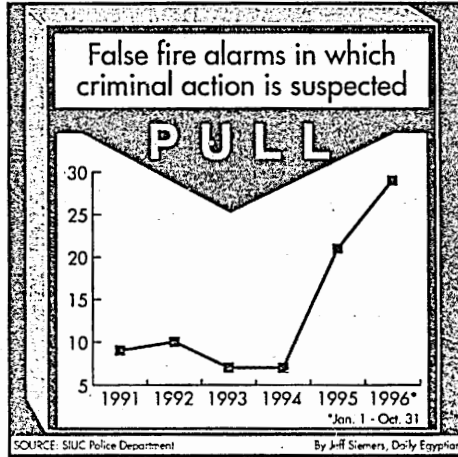

Jamie Hommert, 18, a freshman in business management from Edwardsville, said she lives at Mae Smith Hall in Brush Towers, and she is tired of all the false alarms.

"We've had about 17 or 18 of them," she said. "When it's about 3:30 in the morning and you've already heard it twice that night, it just really pisses you off to hear it."

Chief Sam Jordan said that while police have always taken false fire alarms seriously, police concern has increased along with the number of false alarms.

He said police will continue to do everything they can to see that the perpetrators are caught.

"One false alarm is a problem; 29 false alarms is 29 times that problem," he said. "The police will do all they can to identify and convict the persons who pull these alarms. We've tried to focus our attention toward it to reduce or delete it."

Jordan said it is difficult to make arrests in these cases because unless someone witnesses the incident and reports it, police would have to see the incident.

"It depends a lot on whether there are witnesses and whether they will come forward," he said.

Police would not release the names of those arrested in these cases.

State's Attorney Mike

Wepsiec said this is a serious offense and is in violation of the disorderly conduct statute. He said this form of disorderly conduct can potentially carry severe penalties for those convicted.

"It's a Class 4 felony, which means the person can be sent to prison for up to three years and fined up to $10,000," he said. "And additionally, the statute requires the person convicted perform not more than 120 hours."

and not less than 30 hours, of community service."

Wepsiec said he has seen an increase in the number of false fire alarm reports he receives, and he said that worries him.

Jordan said while false alarms do not alter the response time of emergency personnel, he does believe that residents may become less responsive after several alarms.

"False fire alarms tend to make people complacent," he said. "My concern is that students in the residence halls may not be as responsive as they should be."

John Manis, an assistant fire chief at the Carbondale Fire Department, said he also has noticed the drastic increase in false alarms this year.

"This year we've had a lot more than what we've had in the past," he said. "There's a problem. We have a few alarms that are legitimate, but most of them are false alarms."

Manis said this is a problem not only because it could cause fire department personnel to be busy when there is a real fire but also because it puts the responding firemen in danger.

"It puts us at risk by endangering the people driving the equipment. They could be in an accident," he said. "Someone could die from it. It's not fun. It's real."

Riots influence hazing code rewrite

By Dylan Fenley
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A new SIUC Student Conduct Code with more specific definitions of hazing and stalking should be in place by spring semester, SIUC officials say.

The Committee to Revise the Student Conduct Code was formed earlier this semester after University officials became concerned that the code did not adequately address offenses like hazing, stalking, jurisdiction of the code and the appeals process, SIUC Chancellor Don Beggs said.

"I'm talking about extreme behavior here. I'm not talking about disagreements with a roommate," Beggs said. "I'm talking about felonies."

The committee, which includes student, faculty and administrative representatives, also made changes to the code to clarify what actions taken off of University property fall under code jurisdiction. James Scales, director of University Career Services and committee chairman, said.

"[If a student] gets drunk and busts out some windows at the Kiel Center, then the new wording of the code would cover that."

James Scales,
Chairman of the Committee to Revise the Student Conduct Code

According to the new code, a student is not subject to the code while off University property unless his or her actions interfere with the University's mission, bring harm to other people or damage property, Scales said.

"If you have a student acting up at a game in St. Louis, say he gets drunk and busts out some windows at the Kiel Center, then the new wording of the code would cover that," Scales said.

Michael Speck, Graduate and Professional Student Council representative on the committee, said the riots on the Strip the weekend before Halloween were a consideration in rewriting the code's jurisdiction.

"The committee was influenced by the riot but not prompted by it," Speck said. "They certainly made sure that the code would cover any riot action that might occur in the future."

Forty students face University sanctions up to and including suspension under the current code for their actions in the Oct. 26 and Oct. 27 riots.

The current code only has jurisdiction over students' actions off campus if they interfere with the University's educational functions. Beggs said some students would face code sanctions because the riots damaged SIUC's reputation and therefore interfered with the University's mission.

The process students use to appeal Conduct Code decisions also was rewritten to shorten the length of appeals, which sometimes took more than a year and a half under the current code, Speck said.

"A student can go through the appeals process in the space of an academic year or semester and not have that uncertainty hanging over their heads during vacation," he said.

The current code, which was last revised in 1986, included no mention of stalking and only a vague description of hazing, Lewellyn Hendrix, associate professor of sociology and committee member, said.

"In a sense, we all know what hazing is," Hendrix said. "But when you try and define it in legal terms, that becomes very difficult."

Scales said the committee will present the final version of the code to Beggs sometime during finals week. Scales said if Beggs approves the new code, it will take effect on Jan. 1.

Council opposes Crab Orchard incinerator

By Jennifer Camden
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The incineration of PCBs in Williamson County is wrong because not enough is known about the process and its effects on humans, a Carbondale City Council member said Tuesday.

Councilwoman Margaret Flanagan made a motion to oppose the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge incineration project, which began burning PCB-contaminated soil Saturday. Incineration of the contaminated soil produced Dioxin, a cancer-causing agent.

The council unanimously supported the motion, and a letter stating the council's opposition to the project will be sent to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency today.

The incinerator is part of the EPA's Superfund clean-up project. Flanagan said tough council opposition might not affect the incineration project, it is a worthy gesture.

"We don't know enough," she said. "What about the long-term effects of even the most minute particles of PCBs in the atmosphere?"

The incineration project has been criticized by local environmentalists because of the cancer-causing dioxins released when PCBs, or polychlorinated biphenyls, are burned. Earlier this year, the activists had several protests at the incineration site.

Rose Rowell, of Southern Coalition on Protecting the Environment, said although the incinerator is not in Carbondale, the council's vote is important to the city.

"Dioxin knows no boundaries,"

Rowell, who wrote the letter to the council that prompted Tuesday's action, said. "It will enter anybody who breathes it in."

Cathleen Tracy, a senior in social work from New Lenox and a member of the Student Environmental Center, praised the council's vote.

"I think the City Council made a responsible choice in being against the incinerator and writing the letter," she said. "They're looking out for the health of the community."

E DITORIAL

Swift reaction to rioter sends good, effective message

ALTHOUGH THERE ARE STILL MANY decisions to be made about how to address this year's Halloween riots, SIUC administrators are taking the right approach in at least one area that needs attention.

By bringing swift, but fair justice to students involved in the violence, SIUC officials are sending a strong message to those who might consider rustling up mayhem in the future: "We are serious about punishing you for your actions."

LESS THAN A MONTH AFTER THE INCIDENT, nine cases have been processed and 27 more judicial hearings have been scheduled for the next few weeks. This quickness makes the message hit home more effectively than it would with a slow, drawn out process that the University could have responded with.

A good part of the credit for this speed should go to Chancellor Donald Beggs who emotionally promised action against rioters at a press conference after the riots.

THE FACT THAT THE UNIVERSITY WENT further than simply bringing charges against students brought up on criminal charges proves that SIUC administrators are willing to put in extra effort to bring real justice to this situation, not just a few token punishments.

The appeals process for convictions and charges under the Student Code will ensure that students will not be subjected to unfair punishments from the University. The appeals process is long, almost too long, and it gives those charged a real opportunity to have their cases reheard if they believe they were treated unfairly.

THE RANGE OF PUNISHMENTS THAT HAVE been the result of the hearings indicate that the University is evaluating each case on individual merits. Some students are facing suspension while another only received a written warning and a reference to the Wellness Center. This wide range of penalties is warranted as some students may have been charged for violent acts like throwing bottles while others may have been brought in for less violent offenses.

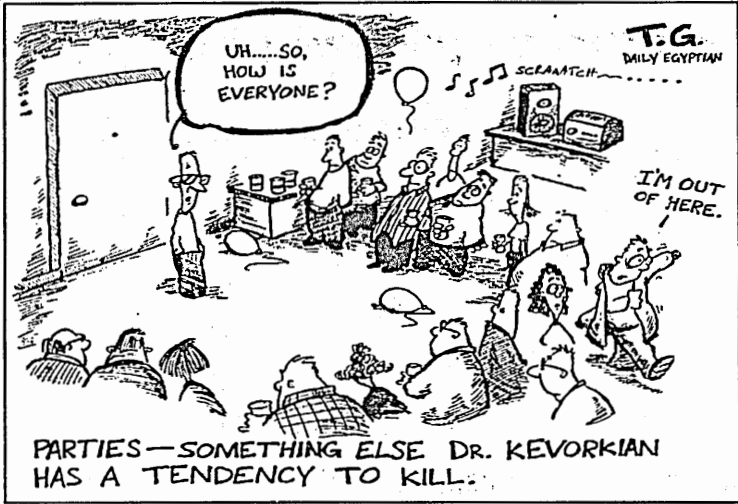

However, University administrators made an error when they decided that dormitory resident advisers should review videotapes to look for dorm residents who were part of the riots. Although part of these R.A.s' duties include making sure students are behaving, there needs to be limits on how much they are involved in this process, or their main duty of helping the residents they serve is compromised. R.A.s are employed to help dorm residents through tough times and give advice the residents can trust. There is a trust that needs to be established for R.A.s to work effectively. Some of that trust is lost when the R.A.s must view videotapes with the intention of finding the residents they serve so those residents can be punished.

But this is a small error, relative to the effectiveness of the University's speedy handling of the cases and does not spoil a solid effort from SIUC administrators on this matter.

L ETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Simple rules make life easy

This letter is not a response to a previous letter so much as it is a response to a behavior that permeates everybody's life. The behavior I am talking about is incivility.

I live in an apartment complex that has a circle drive near the entrance. Many people go the wrong way because they cannot seem to read the posted signs, and others intentionally go the wrong way to save time.

One day, I was going into the circle as another was coming out, but she was going the wrong way, and I said, "You are going the wrong way."

I did not yell it, I used no profanity, and my windows were up. This woman, who also had a child in her car, decided to follow me and then, as I get out of my car, she says, "If you have got something to say, then say it to my face!" I told her that I did, and then she said, "That is real mature behavior. I know I was going the wrong way!"

I responded with that I did not know that, and it was real mature of her to come back and threaten me.

She told me that she did not threaten me, and if she wanted to, she would come out and slap me on the head.

I know I am not perfect, but I want to know what makes some people so special that they cannot follow simple rules that were made to protect everyone? All I could think about was the child in the front seat. Now that child will grow up thinking it is OK to break the law and insult others even when she is wrong.

I am not perfect, and I apologize to this woman who seemed threatened by my simple but accurate statement. But this woman wasted more of her time turning around and insulting me instead of driving the proper direction in the circle.

Being hostile and confrontational does not solve anything, and you certainly will not get anywhere with it.

I ask everyone to try and be more considerate of others whether you are driving or not. Just by doing your part, your life, as well as the life of others, will be a little safer and happier.

Student's apology showed courage

This article is directed to some of the authors who have written to the editor in the past.

I have the privilege to read "Letters to the Editor" every day. Usually I get a pretty good laugh out of them, but lately I have found the letters to be harsh and cruel; especially the letters directed toward the Halloween riots.

First of all, I would like to clarify that I do not support the Halloween riots in any way.

But, at the same time, I do not accept those opinions of people who had only heard about the riots and had not actually witnessed them personally.

I innocently stood on the sidewalk near Sixx, unable to breathe, and watched in horror at the hostility and hatred expressed by both the students and police. So if you did not witness the riots, your opinion should remain silent.

Second, I would like to express that people should not use the excuse that the riots will ruin their chances to get a job in the future. The problem with SIUC's reputation was present before the riots took place.

I am sure that the majority of the students that attend SIUC knew of the "party school" image even before they applied here. But I guess that was a chance that we were all willing to take.

Of course the riots do not help SIUC's reputation, but being negative towards our fellow students does not help either.

I would like to commend Larry Gooding for having the courage to come forth, apologize, and to take responsibility for his actions. Most people would have hid in the shadows after being literally bashed for weeks.

What good does it do to be hateful towards someone who realizes that they made a mistake? Taria Gordon's attitude is pathetic.

I really hope that Ms. Gordon does not have any children, because that is no way to treat someone who realizes that he or she made a mistake.

All I am trying to say is that ripping apart people who are mature enough to take responsibility for their mistakes does not make any situation better.

May I remind everyone that we are in this together. People make mistakes, and most of the people that made the mistake of being a part of the Halloween riots are being punished.

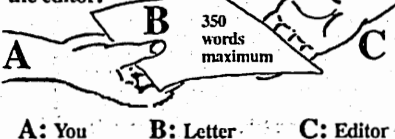

We need to stop being so negative and start working together to figure out peaceful and positive ways to better our futures.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 350 words. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Vegetarian policy: Don't ask

People say vegetarians are obnoxious.

I am obnoxious, but it has nothing to do with my eating habits. As a matter of fact, vegetarianism is one of the few topics about which I do not feel the need to be a jerk.

I am not a pushy animal-rights activist.

I do not spray paint the word "dead" on other people's coats, even if it's true.

I do not chain myself to lab rats to protest their suffering.

I do not even stop strangers at McDonald's to tell them exactly what happened to the cow between birth and the hamburger bun.

I am not idealistic enough to believe that a few people's decisions to give up meat is going to reform the entire industry. That's not why I do it.

I am a vegetarian as a matter of conscience. I personally feel guilty when I eat dead animals. I do not criticize those who can eat pork rinds with a clear conscience. (Oooh, that sounds good ... pork rinds ... maybe the barbecue kind, with that crunchy texture like deep-fried polystyrene, all spicy and salty and fattening ... oh, man ... my one weakness ... pork rinds don't really count as meat, do they? My willpower is weakening ...)

Anyway, I have found that most of the people who criticize vegetarians for being outspoken are hell-bent on making everyone a carnivore.

A friend of mine, who is a confirmed meat eater, is the first one to complain about ketchup after he orders a plain hamburger.

He also is the first one to laugh at me for complaining about meat after I order a hamburger without ground beef.

What's the difference? If I tell him he's being picky, his response is, "I'm paying for it. They should give me what I order."

He's absolutely right, of course. And if I pay for a sandwich without meat on it, I should not have to argue with the server or write an essay to get what I want. I once did lunch with a vegan, and I actually had to draw a picture on my napkin to make the waitress understand that we really wanted a pizza with no cheese on half of it.

Being a vegetarian is a lot like being single: In both cases, people whose business it is not feel free to offer advice and demand explanations for our behavior.

"Why don't you date?"

Obviously, any answer to this question is going to be wrong. If I say I don't date because I don't have time, I'm told that people make time for what is important to them.

My point exactly. I spend a lot of time making vegetarian lasagna. I don't spend much time dating. Do the math.

"Why don't you eat meat? You're too thin; you need to eat some red meat."

Again, any answer is wrong. If I explain the reasons for my vegetarianism, I am a self-righteous, animal-rights flake.

And what's the correct answer to "You're too thin?" Should I respond by informing my hefty critic that she is "too fat" according to most doctors' recommendations?

This is where the myth of the obnoxious vegetarians originated. We don't force our views on other people; we simply answer their questions honestly.

Just once I would like to order a meal at a restaurant where the employees follow Bill Clinton's policy and simply "don't ask, don't tell, don't pursue."

Freak out your family

-by james lyon

Thanksgiving is a week away, so we might as well talk about that. For some, it represents a time of great anticipation because it means a decent meal is just around the corner. But for others, namely the freshmen of the bunch, it may be the first time they see their families since leaving for college. Going home can be a little nostalgic, but it also can be very humorous. And if anyone wants to have a little fun, here are some things to do to make the holiday a little more interesting.

First of all, simple things like calling your parents by their first names are a real grabber. Also, after walking into your house for the first time, say things like, "God, I didn't realize what a dump this place was," or "Did this house always smell like this?" If you are really adventurous, go up to your sister or brother in front of your parents and give them a sly wink and say, "I never realized how hot you were!"

When Thanksgiving dinner rolls around, sit at the table in black clothes wearing sunglasses with your hair slicked back. If anyone asks about your wardrobe, ignore them. Leave your plate empty, telling everyone you refuse to eat because of the satanic implications Thanksgiving represents. Or, you could also mention, as you're eating your turkey, about what a tasty plant it is. When someone laughs and tells you it is a bird, spit it out and begin yell, "Dear God, you're serious?"

Then run to your room screaming and slam the door. Then start screaming to God about how it was a mistake and that you don't want to go to hell. Then come back down to the table in different clothes and say, "What was I on?"

Another fun thing to do is to take 10 dinner rolls. Put nine of them on one side of your plate and put one on the other side. Point and laugh at it, talking with the other rolls about how it just doesn't belong. When someone offers you butter or cranberry sauce, say "no" because you don't like what it stands for. Then begin yelling at the dead bird about how it never really loved you.

Of course, all of these are just some things you could do to pass the time, and they are all meant as jokes. I just like to freak people out every once in a while. And who better to freak out than the ones you love? And if you can't do that, you might as well freak out your family.

questions from the audience.

However, Winters did not open with her vision statement, instead opening up the floor for questions immediately.

"I've worked with a remarkable number of you over the years, so I'm not going to give any formal introductory remarks," Winters said. "I suspect that your questions will bring out most of it."

In his opening statement, Jackson said that the University has a somewhat unsettling future at the moment with budget problems, recruitment and retention.

"There is a lot of uncertainty out there right now," Jackson said. "I think that uncertainty is a part of the faculty morale that was reflected in last Thursday's vote (for collective bargaining)."

Chancellor Donald Beggs will choose the next vice chancellor of Academic Affairs based on written input received from these meetings.

The vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost oversees the mission of the University, tenure and promotion, and the academic budget. The provost also plans strategies for enrollment and retention.

Winters said she has wide experience with University activities, as chairwoman of the Foreign Language Department, and serves on numerous task forces.

"But I do come from the faculty," Winters said. "I am still teaching and still doing research, and I know I have that to offer in the position in terms of experience and viewpoint as well as administrative experience."

When questioned about the University's image, Jackson said image is important to recruitment and retention.

"Obviously, doing things like smashing glass on Halloween is not helping any," Jackson said. "I think I know something about dealing with the media and television cameras. And I think that is to some extent what we need — carrying our message to a larger public."

When asked if the recent faculty vote to unionize was a message to the administration in Anthony Hall, Winters said the vote was more a statement of the unknowns.

"There were too many things being discussed that may or may not shift the balance of faculty staff on one side to the administration and the deans on the other," Winters said. "There is some chance that if there is goodwill on both sides that the union will bring things into the open in a way that they should be."

She said although it will take time to see how the union turns out, whatever form it takes will be better for the University because there will be more openness on both sides.

Jackson said the union vote combined with the budget problems need to be ironed out.

"I think responsibility centered management is a kind of a decentralized force that pushes decisions, at least ideally, back to the college or maybe to the departmental level,"

Jackson said. "And I have to think that collective bargaining pushes everything to the central level. So we will spend thousands of hours to find what that all means."

In regards to budgeting, Winters said the University is in early stages of implementing a new budgeting process.

"One decision that has been made above my level and the provost level is that there will be responsibility centered management," Winters said. "Something we are going to have to do is make sure there are safeguards for interdisciplinary programs and what the best model is for SIU."

Jackson said in the coming years, the administration will have to find what responsibility centered management means for SIUC.

"I think we will have to sort out what that means over the next couple of years," Jackson said.

Winters said graduate programs should not be eliminated for purely quantitative reasons.

"In some cases, the only possible answer is to shutdown the program," Winters said. "In other cases, strengthening without major budgetary changes will be the way to enhance graduate education."

Jackson said he is deeply involved in defending the graduate programs in this college and that he will continue to if chosen as provost.

"I think we have a better institution overall because of the existence of our graduate program, and I think most of them deserve protection," Jackson said. "They enrich rather than diminish the undergraduate experience."

Each candidate for the position will have two open meetings.

The meetings continue today at the University Museum at 9:30 a.m. with a meeting for Donald Tindall, an SIUC professor of plant biology, and another meeting with Winters at 3:30 p.m.

Friday, a meeting will take place for Thomas Keon, the dean of the College of Business, at 9:30 a.m. and for Tindall at 3:30 p.m.

including students, can apply to join the Liquor Advisory Board, the Cable Television Commission, the Personnel Board, the Housing Board of Appeals, the Downtown Steering Committee, the Energy Advisory Board, the Library Board, the Planning Commission, the Zoning Board of Appeals and Senior Adult Services. Vacancies are filled as they arise.

Seats on the other city boards are filled by city employees or professionals in the fields they address.

But Brad Cole, USG president from 1992 to 1993 and Citizens Advisory Committee member, said student representation on the committee is most important.

"That one (committee), more than any of the other ones, deals with common issues that affect the city," Cole said.

He said student involvement in city affairs has stayed constant since his term as USG president.

"And that constant is minimal," he said. "I don't fault the students for that. There's not much of a percentage of students who will be involved unless they feel a direct impact, like with Halloween issue, the bar-entry age, zoning or parking."

Cole said most Carbondale residents, like students, do not involve themselves with the city unless they have a problem.

"So students aren't different than anyone else," he said. "They're just more loud when they get impacted."

City Manager Jeff Doherty said that during a speech he gave two years ago, he asked a group of SIUC freshmen if they were citizens of Carbondale. None raised a hand.

"But they are citizens of a community, and with that role as citizens of a community come certain rights, privileges and responsibilities," he said.

Doherty said students' interest in local government typically is lower than that of full-time residents because students may not identify Carbondale as their hometown.

Alice Foley, USG College of Business senator, recently was appointed as the undergraduate representative to the Liquor Advisory Board, which examines liquor issues in Carbondale.

The board has not met since she was appointed, however.

Cleveland Matthews, Carbondale community relations officer and Citizens Advisory Committee secretary, said the Saluki Express bus service is an example of city and student cooperation. The buses serve residents and students; the service is funded by the city and by student fees; and city government has a representative on the Saluki Mass Transit Advisory Board.

He said students and full-time residents have the same concerns.

"What do students want: jobs and recreational outlets? The folks who live here complain about the same thing," Matthews said.

surrounded by popular Japanese fashion magazines and comic books.

Participants who examined them were surprised the books and magazines opened from the left side, while similar American media texts commonly open from the right.

"Most Japanese characters are read from right to left," Semzaki, a sophomore in economics from Japan, said. "In my opinion, many Japanese are right handed, so it's also easier to turn the pages this way."

Some participants had complimentary photographs taken of them in traditional Japanese garments including keikos, less formal versions of kimonos that are used for more traditional Japanese events.

Other participants learned about calligraphy, or "shodo," with traditional Japanese tools. Japanese Student Association members used the tools, including horsehair brushes and charcoal-based ink, to create examples of English names in Japanese calligraphy for participants to take home.

Tony Williams, a junior in political science and speech communication from Oak Park, said he came to "Exotic Japan" with a friend.

"I thought I'd come out and try something new," he said. "It's exciting to see a lot of new and different traditions going on."

Williams, who has an associate degree in culinary arts, said tasting some of the Japanese foods like Horoseno no gomaae (marinated spinach with sesame) was an added incentive for him to come to the event.

"I think it's good to sample different types of food," he said.

Kawamura and Mitobe said the interest shown Wednesday in Japanese culture will inspire the organization to plan the event again to reach as many people as possible, possibly with more food and performances of traditional dances and music.

"We're very happy with the turnout," Mitobe said. "We really want to do the same thing next year."

Incinerator

the refuge have said the incinerator is necessary before PCBs poison wildlife.

The EPA has concluded that the incinerator will not produce enough dioxin to pose a risk to humans or the environment.

"Just how little is too much?" Flanagan asked. "Burning would put highly toxic dioxin into the air."

Councilman John Yow said he will support the letter, although the EPA states the incinerator is safe.

"After all, I'm no expert on this particular item, and I don't think any of us are," he said. "But the experts say the (PCB) destruction efficiency is 99.9999 percent. You can't argue with that."

The site was contaminated by manufacturers decades ago. The incinerator will burn 80,000 tons of PCB-contaminated soil by the end of January.

Flanagan said she wanted the council to be on the record in opposition to the incineration project.

"What if something goes wrong?" she asked.

In 1989, the city wrote a letter to the EPA opposing the incineration, which then was considering incinerating PCBs at the refuge.

SIUC's Undergraduate Student Government voted to oppose the incinerator project in March.

In other business, the council voted to approve the city's planned property tax levy, which will increase by 4.9 percent. That figure includes the Carbondale Public Library's 10 percent increase.

The council will adopt the $1.3 million levy Dec. 17. By law, the council had to vote on the levy amount before the levy's adoption to allow time for a public hearing if taxes substantially increase.

However, the council's increase in the property tax levy is not great enough to legally require a public hearing, and a one is not planned.

Son Volt shines on

By ALAN SCHNEFF

A disappointingly tiny crowd didn't stop Son Volt and Big Sandy and His Fly Rite Boys from giving those who showed up their money's worth at Shryock Auditorium Tuesday night.

Playing to a crowd of less than 400 people, Son Volt kicked off their 18-song set with "Cemetery Savior," a rolling, electric number that was one of four or five new songs the band is playing live. Those songs will appear on the band's sophomore release which is due out in March.

After three more rockers that sounded a bit uninspired and stale, band leader Jay Farrar replaced his electric guitar with an acoustic and started into the group's folk-country repertoire. "Tear-Stained Eye," a song about the looming threat of destruction in St. Genevieve, Mo., during the 1993 flood, inspired a handful of people to start dancing.

Aside from "Cemetery," the band's opening rockers sounded slow and tiresome. This might be a consequence of touring on and off for 18 months with only one album of material, resulting in a "going-through-the-motions" approach to performing.

After "Tear-Stained Eye," Son Volt played seven more soft numbers, the highlight being the empty country-rock song "Let a Side."

Farrar then strapped on his electric guitar again and launched into "Straightaway," Son Volt's hardest song to date. The song was reminiscent of Farrar's early days in the seminal country-punk act Uncle Tupelo, when country rhythms often served as a background for the Tupelo's barrage of power chords. "Straightaway" seemed to get the band rolling because the ensuing performances of "Route" and "Drown" were played with the intensity Farrar's songs deserve.

After "Drown," the band walked off-stage, and the crowd finally left its seats to do the obligatory encore request. After a short pause, Son Volt returned to play the acoustic, drumless "Too Early," a unique choice for an encore because of its slow tempo and sad mood. Unique choices aside, Farrar's heart-wrenching tale of "gambling days lost and won" was simply beautiful.

The rest of the encore performance illustrated how Son Volt can gracefully move along extremes on the country-rock continuum. Showing a true love of traditional country music in the fashion of Merle Haggard and Hank Williams Sr., the band played "She's Left to be Pitted," a song from the Stanley Brothers, a country and bluegrass number from the 1950s. Only minutes later, however, Son Volt was ending its show in a loud, swirling mess of feedback that concluded "Chickamauga," a song Farrar wrote on Uncle Tupelo's last album. The highlight show by far, "Chickamauga" featured a grating, frenzied guitar solo from Farrar that was miles away from the Stanley Brothers song played just moments earlier.

Another highlight of the show was the group's interaction with the crowd. Farrar, who has earned a reputation as an incredibly quiet person, actually said more to the crowd than "thanks," noting that "This (Shryock) is the nicest place we've been in for awhile."

Openers Big Sandy and his Fly Rite Boys were wonderful. Playing straight ahead rockabilly with funny lyrics like "my smoking days are over" and "over again" and a dash of "swamp" influence, Big Sandy and the crew deserve to be on their own tour. Sandy, who actually was kind of fat, was a warm, friendly performer who seemed surprised at how subdued and quiet the crowd was.

Despite a fairly crowd, Sandy and the boys played incredibly catchy and tight songs propelled by a stand-up bass, steel, electric and acoustic guitars and a hushed steady drumbeat. For anyone with an interest in rockabilly, Big Sandy is a must-see. Look for them to start receiving more praise.

A DAY LATE AND A DOLLAR SHORT

The new Ron Howard film "Ransom" is an intelligent, well-written thriller, but there is something about this movie that doesn't seem right. The film is an enigma because it pieces all the works together, but there is something about the whole that falls.

Written by Richard Price and Alexander Ignon, "Ransom" is the story of a self-made millionaire, played by Mel Gibson, whose son is kidnapped. Gibson tries to pay the ransom in a botched attempt, so he decides that no matter what he does, his son will be murdered by the kidnapers. He comes up with a risky plan in which he offers the money as a reward for the heads of the kidnapers rather than paying the ransom.

The story is well written and continually changes Gibson from the hunted to the hunter. It also includes several unexpected, witty plot developments that add to the cat-and-mouse game played by the kidnapers and Gibson.

But even with its well-written story, "Ransom" runs into problems. The film tends to become more of a slick action movie rather than the psychological thriller it could have been. "Ransom's" biggest failure is possibly in its ending. Director Ron Howard sets up what could be a very interesting confrontation between Gibson and the kidnapping mastermind, played by Gary Sinise ("Of Mice and Men" and "Forrest Gump"), but it turns into a gunfight.

"Ransom" should be hailed for its outstanding cast. Both Gibson and Rene Russo give excellent performances as the distraught parents of the kidnapped child. It, however, is Sinise who takes over the show. Sinise plays Jimmy Shaker, a detective who has been on the streets too long and is the brain: and muscle of the rag-tag band of kidnapers. Sinise and Gibson trade blows and become an effective duo, playing off each other through their phone conversations. ***

IAN MILLER'S VIDEO DELUXE: PICK OF THE WEEK

He has appeared in the video picks before. And once again, he wins the weekly prize.

Akira Kurosawa's "High and Low" is the classic predecessor to Ron Howard's "Ransom." Kurosawa's film deals with a wealthy shoe manufacturer who is attempting a takeover of his company from the other executives. He places everything he has on the line when his chauffeur's son mistakenly is kidnapped in the place of his own son. The man can't decide if he should ruin himself for the boy or hope that the kidnapers will give him up and learn they have the wrong boy. The ruthless kidnapers care little about whose boy they have and demand $30 million.

"Ransom" doesn't even come close to creating the suspense that Kurosawa builds in "High and Low." Suspense is brought to a much more satisfying closure in "High and Low" with its gritty confrontation between the kidnapper and the father.

Both films have strong scripts and performances, but Howard could still learn a thing or two from the master. *****

Reel Big Fish Turn the Radio Off Mojo Records, 1995

Another ska band — that's all the world needs. However, this band surpasses the typical superficial ska wannabe with its superb originality.

The six member band from Orange County, Calif. gives everything on their disc, "Turn the Radio Off." Songs range from super punk power-mosh ska to more of a reggae beat ska.

True ska lovers will enjoy this disc because of the hard-core horn section and the practically meaningless lyrics.

For different types of music this kind of style would never work, but because this is ska, it makes it all the better.

Perhaps the best song on the disc is "She's Got A Girlfriend Now." The song pokes fun at what men will do to get the women they care about.

To make matters worse, though, the woman in this song is a lesbian. This is a perfect example of the humor this group displays throughout the disc.

A mix of punk, reggae, and rock supply a non-stop good feeling to this group.

The entire disc is full of grinding guitar, one hell of a horn section and a great male lead singer talking about beer, dancing and sex.

Once in a while, a female voice will bust through the powerful sounds of horns, percussion, and guitar to create a great sound.

If you're a ska fan, Reel Big Fish is the best you will ever hear because of the humorous lyrics and superb sounds that the group puts together.

Rusted Root Remember Mercury Records ~ 1996

On their second disc, Rusted Root donates sounds of a soprano saxophone, a violin, a wide assortment of percussion instruments and a mandolin in a new-wave, world-beat style. The plethora of instruments gives each song a new sound, and the nice harmony between voices make this disc worth listening to.

The lyrics of most of the songs are not the highlight of this disc, but there are exceptions, as with "Infinite Space." In this song, the lyrics are poetic and heartfelt, talking of the meaning of love as opposed to self love.

The Talking Heads' Jerry Harrison produced "Remember," and his style of open song form is evident, but not excessive. The highlights are the music and the blended voices of the band. Especially when Liz Berlin breaks through with her soothing soprano voice to form a beautiful and almost chant-like harmony.

Any world beat fan will enjoy this disc.

The Wallflowers Bringing Down the Horse Interscope Records ~ 1996

If it is true that music can breathe life into a soul, then the Wallflowers could wake the dead with their new album, "Bringing Down the Horse."

With a great compilation of instruments and the exceptional voice of Jakob Dylan, the Wallflowers give a unique and fresh sound to the music scene.

The sound is not classic rock, nor is it "alternative." It is a collaboration of the two. With an upright piano, guitars and drums, some of the songs are given a slight blues feeling.

In addition to the main sound of each of the songs, the Wallflowers add great bass thumping, and electric piano interludes throughout the entire disc.

The songs "God Don't Make Lonely Girls," "Three Marlenas" and the highly played "6th Avenue Heartache" personally the ability of the band. This group is going to be around for awhile. Father Dylan should be proud.

Bee Gees glitter still produces fever in fans

By DUSTIN COLEMAN

First came the recent 1970s disco revival with platform shoes and ugly shirts with butterfly collars — styles that were made fun of a few short years ago.

Right beside the clothes was the bad music that also found its way into the '90s somehow. Thrift stores and secondhand music shops loved it.

If this was not strange enough, somehow, somehow, disco has now found its way into the rock 'n' roll shrine keeper of all shrine keepers.

In late October, it was announced that the Bee Gees will be inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in Cleveland. Known for such songs as "Jive Talking" and "Staying Alive," the Australian trio sold millions of albums and gained fame along with a lot of scrutiny.

Mike Norman, an SIUC senior in administration of justice from Morton, is one of the scrutinizers.

He said he has never been a Bee Gees fan, neither now nor when they were first popular.

"The 'Saturday Night Fever' soundtrack was all right for the movie," he said. "But the rest of their music was kind of mushy."

The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame Foundation's Nominating Committee annually selects nominees in the performer, non-performer and early influence categories. The Bee Gees were nominated for performer.

Ballots are sent to nearly 1,000 rock experts. Those with the most votes and at least 50 percent of the vote are inducted.

Other inductees this year include Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young; Buffalo Springfield; The Jackson 5; Bill

Monroe; and Parliament Funkadelic.

Norman said he believes the band's induction to an institution whose members include Elvis, Jimi Hendrix and Aretha Franklin is a reflection that the Hall of Fame may be overly accepting to performers whose credentials are only found in high record sales.

"It is kind of a crock," he said.

"The revival may have had something to do with it because it seems that more people are listening to them now than 10 years ago."

But others like Christine Tracey, a junior double majoring in elementary and special education from Wauconda, said she has been a Bee Gees fan even before the '70s revival. Tracey said her favorite Bee Gees song is "Staying Alive."

"I like their music, but it is in a novelty kind of way," she said.

"I think they deserve to be in the Hall of Fame because of the tremendous impact they had on disco music and the '70s in general."

Eric Bogren, a sophomore in hotel-restaurant-travel administration from Urbana, said he agrees that the Bee Gees deserve a place in the Hall of Fame. But he, on the other hand, does not like the band or any disco band for that matter.

"If you skip the disco thing, you skip a huge cultural and musical part of history," he said.

"You have to recognize the best of the worst music, even if it was not the greatest genre of music or not even the greatest genre of music in 1970s."

Angela Krater, an undecided sophomore from Chicago, said there is no doubt that the band should be in the Hall of Fame.

She said, if anything, the band should be accepted for being brave enough to sing about the things they sang about and dress the way they did.

"Yeah, the clothes and hair said a lot," she said.

"For those reasons alone, the band should be remembered so everyone can have a good laugh every time they visit the place (Hall of Fame) from now on."

Student Programming Council

Here we are now, entertain us

The issue of the lack of non-University, underage entertainment alternatives to the local bars has been covered, discussed and argued to death. But if the entertainment events for under-21 students are not found off campus, then should the University pick up the slack?

Story By Chad Anderson

It is the University that attracts students to Carbondale and not the city itself. So is it the University's responsibility to entertain almost 20,000 students and not the local businesses?

"Part of the role of the Student Programming Council and the University is to provide entertainment," Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty said. "I'm really not in a position, though, to say it's become more of a focus on SPC to do that in the past six months (because of the bar-entry age increase)."

Don Castle, assistant University programming coordinator, said the bar-entry age increase has emphasized the challenges that face the committee.

"I think the dilemmas that SPC faces, such as lack of funding, are just emphasized more," he said. "When people put more pressure on SPC to provide more entertainment I think those problems just become more apparent."

SPC is an on-campus organization that organizes various entertainment activities for students, including concerts.

In a perfect world, students would stay home to study and read all the chapters their professor assigned them, but that is a pipe dream. College students are young adults who, after they study, are searching for places to go with their friends and/or significant others.

It does not take very long to view every movie in town, play a few hands of cards and drink a cup of coffee at each of the three coffee houses in town. So what is there for students to legally do? The answer from one student is "very little."

"[After I do all those things] there's nothing," Stacy Davis, a sophomore in finance opportunity management, said. "I read or talk on the phone. I think that's legal. Actually, I think that's illegal on this campus."

SIUC is now at a crossroads. Caught between two identities, it is attempting to bury its party image and the horrors of Halloween, while promoting a scholarly, tame representation.

Of Sunsets and Music

One answer is putting some form of structure to the underage entertainment scene — a scheduled event that takes place often enough where people can expect it to happen and would not have to do an extensive amount of investigating to discover it.

During the summer, SPC, the Student Center and the Carbondale Park District co-sponsor the Sunset Concert series, which presents a different genre of music every Thursday night. The series is the focus of the entertainment for the summer and involves the entire community of SIUC students, faculty and Carbondale residents. Everyone in town knows when and where the Sunset series is, and the only question is what type of music is being offered.

Kim Schmidt, executive director of SPC, said the council recently has looked into extending the concert series into the fall semester, but that plan has hit a few snags.

 "It's funny that you asked about that because we were just discussing that with Troy (Allim), the president of Undergraduate Student Government, and he said that USG might look into co-sponsoring it," she said. "But we have a few problems with it. There are more people here during the fall than in the summer."

Schmidt said there are many complications involved with organizing the concert series. Along with the increase in the number of people during the fall semester comes the problem of where to put the significantly larger crowd. During the summer, the shows alternate between the steps of Shryock Auditorium and Turley Park, both of which suit 2,000 people comfortably.

Even if SPC could not find a location to accommodate more than 2,000 people, some say a series of events of that size would be a significant improvement. During the warmer months, outdoor locations such as the steps of Shryock and Turley Park could be used, and Shryock Auditorium and the Student Center could be used as indoor locations through the winter.

The biggest difference between the summer Sunset Concerts and the proposed fall version would be the inclusion of alcohol. During the summer, alcohol is allowed in a controlled area, with a non-alcoholic family section available. Schmidt said alcohol would not be allowed during the fall shows.

"The concerts are in much more of a controlled environment during the summer," she said. "The crowd is smaller in the summer, and it would be tougher to control underage drinking with a larger crowd in the fall."

But enough space is not the only roadblock SPC has before it. Such events take money.

Money Doesn't Grow On Trees

One of the biggest problems facing SPC each year is the availability of funds. SPC operates on a budget of about $130,000 each year, Schmidt said. And that money does not go far when it comes to providing a lineup of entertainment.

"That budget is a little below what the other state schools have, but it's about even," Schmidt said. "We're always looking for co-sponsoring so we can bring in more events."

Doherty said the city provides funding for the first concert of the fall semester annually but said he could not say whether or not the city would provide any supplementary funding for events such as an extended Sunset Concert series.

"That's something SPC would have to approach us about," Doherty said. "We've sponsored the first concert of the fall semester for the past few years."

"This year we provided $2,800 to the concert."

During the spring semester, SPC brought in Black Panther Party founder Bobby Seals to speak at the Student Center. The cost of his almost two-hour presentation was $3,500 plus travel expenses from New York, Schmidt said. With events such as these, $130,000 disappears quickly, and providing a diverse selection of entertainment becomes a difficult task.

"We try and plan for as many events as possible," Schmidt said. "Programming isn't an easy job. If we wanted to bring in someone like Aretha Franklin, that would cost $50,000."

So where does money for such quality entertainment come from?

No Taxation Without Representation

One remedy for providing more funding to SPC would be through a fee increase specifically for providing on-campus entertainment.

But Davis said she would not support a fee increase.

"No, I would not be willing to pay a fee increase," she said.

"I don't think I would have very much say in choosing what entertainment they would bring in," she said.

Davis said she is concerned that she would not be able to decide what shows would be featured.

And acts SPC would schedule are ill-conceived, Schmidt said.

SPC is made up of 11 committees including campus events, concerts, films, visual arts, performing arts, travel, comedy, social awareness, SPC-TV, traditions and marketing.

Schmidt said these committees are headed by student directors who have sub-committees of 20 to 30 students who provide input on which acts to present.

"These are just your average students who want to get involved with SPC," Schmidt said.

"If you don't think there's anything to do, or if you don't like what is going on, just come up to SPC and knock on my door."

Sponge is one of the bands SPC brought to SIUC.

Barton, Blake and Sweeny attracted a large crowd at Turley Park during one of this summer's successful Sunset Concert Series.

Son Volt is the most recent band to play at SIUC. The concert was Tuesday night at Shryock.

DROVER-ACHIEVERS

ONE OF CARBONDALE'S FAVORITE TOURING BANDS, The Drovers, will visit town again when it plays Hangar 9 tonight. The band, from Chicago, has played to packed houses for years in Carbondale, so packed on some occasions that patrons have had to wait outside until people left and made room inside.

The band is widely known for its mix of traditional Celtic music and beautifully written pop songs, which have been commented on in Billboard and Rolling Stone magazine.

Opening for the Drovers is the Little Rock, Ark., trio called Pokerface. The band is said to infuse ska, rockabilly and power-pop among the cover songs and originals that the band plays.

The band presently is criss-crossing the South and Midwest. The band has opened for such acts as the Reverend Horton Heat, the Nixons and Better Than Ezra.

The Drovers and Pokerface will play at Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave., tonight starting at 9:30 p.m. The cover charge is $4.

HEAD EAST YOUNG MAN

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS' OWN HEAD EAST WILL BE playing Smilin' Jack's this Friday. Known for the hit classic rock album, "Flat as a Pancake," the band experienced success in the 1970s and 1980s with such songs as "Never Had Any Reason" and "Jefftown Creek."

Though known as a local band, it has toured national for decades and has opened for and played festivals with bands including Rush and KISS. It also has recorded nearly 10 albums.

Head East plays Smilin' Jack's, 605 E. Grand Ave., Saturday at 9 p.m.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE

THE ST. LOUIS BALLET WILL PERFORM the holiday classic, "The Nutcracker," Dec. 1 at Shryock Auditorium as part of its Family Series.

This adaptation of "The Nutcracker" follows a young girl who falls asleep and finds herself in the Kingdom of the Sweets. The girl is scared by an army of mice and its leader Mouse Queen. The Nutcracker Prince then comes along and saves her.

Tickets are $16.50. There is a $4 discount for children 12 and under. Tickets can be purchased at the Shryock Auditorium Box Office Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Visa, Mastercard, Discover and American Express are welcome over the phone on weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information call 453-2787.

APOCA-LYRICS NOW

FOLK SINGER CHRIS CHANDLER WILL BE bringing his style of apocalyptic style of folk music to Melange' this Friday at 8 p.m.

Chandler, from New Orleans, is known as a storyteller-poet that plays guitar for background music. Chandler describes himself as a convenience store troubadour and sings about the average American in his songs.

Melange' is located at 607 S. Illinois Ave. The show will begin at 8 p.m. Admission is free.

SMASHING PUNKIN(HEAD)

THE GROOVE-ORIENTED ARKANSAS BAND PUNKINHEAD will play Pinch Penny Pub this Friday.

The band has said it is inspired by a mix of bands including James Brown, George Clinton, Stevie Wonder, Steely Dan and the Dead Kennedys.

In 1994 the band played for a crowd of 30,000 people when it opened up for James Brown at the Kansas City Spirit Fest. The band's name comes from the nickname given to the grandfather of Punkinhead drummer Charlie Platt during World War II.

The show starts at 9:30 p.m. The cover charge is $3.

• just to mention •

Pamela Lee Anderson has had a hard week. First, she filed for divorce from her husband Tommy Lee. Divorce papers cited irreconcilable differences as the reason for divorce. Then, Baywatch got bumped off the airwaves in Britain by The Simpsons. Courtney Cox will be appearing in the next Counting Crows video. Soundgarden has canceled some of its shows on its present tour because lead singer Chris Cornell has laryngitis. Butthole Surfer lead man Gibby Haynes has a busted eardrum. The Beatles, who have been broken up for 25 years, have sold more albums in 1996 than any other band. Album sales exceed 20 million. A publicist for Sandra Bullock has threatened Blockbuster magazine with a lawsuit if it proceeds with a profile of her in its next magazine. Dolly Parton will appear at the ultra-cool New York dance club the Paladium. Dance club DJ god Junior Vasquez, who mixed some tracks on John Cougar's new album, will back Parton up. Joey Ramone and 1960s legendary singer Ronnie Spector are laying down some tracks together. Despite the rumors, Fergie claims that her ex-husband Prince Andrew is absolutely not a homosexual. Madonna still is a mother, and there was an Elvis sighting, sometime, somewhere this week.

'A Christmas Carol' in final season

By Travis DeNeal

The final performance of "A Christmas Carol" by the SIUC Theater Department will differentiate itself from the three previous years' shows, the play's director says.

This adaptation portrays (Jacob) Marley as a central figure of the show," Lori Merrill-Fink, director of the play, said. "There is also live music and lots of pyrotechnics (fireworks, explosions and smoke) used throughout the play."

Merrill-Fink, an associate professor in theater who teaches movement and acting, said the final performance will wrap up a contract with GTE, which has helped sponsor the program. The proceeds from the show will go toward a scholarship fund that will aid theater students, she said.

The idea of producing Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" with corporate assistance was the brainchild of Alex Chrestopoulos, an associate professor in theater, Merrill-Fink said.

Chrestopoulos said the original contract was a five-year agreement to produce "A Christmas Carol" as a gift to the local community.

"We tried to find a common area between the community and the University," he said. "There has been little regional outreach, but this is a pretty good way of doing that."

While there are those in the community who may be disappointed in the Theater Department's decision to not run the play after this year, the decision is one that maximizes the benefits of students involved, Merrill-Fink said.

"Design students lose a chance to design since the sets are pre-designed," she said. "They need the experience as part of their curriculum."

The loss of "A Christmas Carol" is not a major disappointment to student actors, Ben Kramer, a theater major from Fulton who plays Ebenezer Scrooge's friend Dick, said. "The script is a lot cooler this year, and the show will go out with a bang," he said. "But having the show next year would be overkill."

"I think the directors have done a good job in past years in keeping the play fresh, but the community can only see it so many times."

Linda Vogenhtaler, a local fan of "A Christmas Carol," said the production is a pleasurable experience. She said she will be slightly disappointed at its demise, but it will not be earth shaking.

"I enjoy the show, and I recommend it to all of my friends," she said. "Even though it would be nice to keep it, there are other shows that would be equally good at McLeod, like 'It's a Wonderful Life.'"

Merrill-Fink said if there is no Christmas show next year other community Yuletide activities will be available.

"This is a very Christmas-oriented community, and there will be many such events for people to attend," she said.

"A Christmas Carol" will be performed at McLeod Theater at 8 p.m. Friday and Dec. 5-7 and Dec. 7 and Dec. 8 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $4 for students, $7 for senior and $8 for adults. Tickets are available at the McLeod Theater box office, located in the Communication Building, from noon through 4:30 p.m. weekdays.

GET DRESSED BEFORE YOU HIT THE ROAD.

Gloves help your grip. Leathers help prevent hypothermia. And all gear protects against flying objects. Which is vital if you ever become the flying object.

Burn Debris Disaster Free

Smokey is counting on you to follow the rules for safely burning debris.

1. Check local laws on burning.
2. Don't burn on dry windy days.
3. Clear a 30-foot circle around debris before lighting fire.
4. Keep shovel, rake and water nearby.
5. Don't leave fire unattended by an adult, even for a minute.
6. Consider alternatives to burning: composting, recycling, or hauling to a landfill.

REMEMBER, ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES.

Bee Gees stayin' alive via Internet sites

BY BRIAN T. SUTTON

The Brothers Gibb will be inducted into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame May 15, 1997, and it is about damn time. Find the best of the Bee Gees' shrines online.

THE BROTHERS GIBB:

<http://www.columbia.edu/~brennan/beegees.html>

The Brothers Gibb by Joe Brennan is the definitive site for Gibbness. Barry Gibb, Robin Gibb and Maurice Gibb are the ones worshipped here. The site includes the Brothers Gibb history, a complete Brothers Gibb song catalog and almost 30 links to Bee Gees' other pages.

<http://www.rockhall.com/cgi-bin/HyperNews/get/Induct/36.html>

Read the reactions of the nomination e-mailed into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame.

IF IT IS PHOTOS YOU WANT:

<http://users.deltanet.com/~twograys/beegees.htm>

The Pictorial Bee Gees. This site proudly proclaims that it is the first site dedicated to Bee Gee art.

It has album cover art, candid shots and publicity photos of the band. The site also gets you in touch with other fans to find memorabilia. It includes other things such as "the up-to-date info on the Bros," but it is the lunch-box art that will make you bookmark it.

KNOW THE WORDS:

<http://access.mvc.net/~eddy/bee.html>

The Bee Gees Song page. This site has lyrics for 424 of the Bee Gees songs.

<http://access.mvc.net/~eddy/bee/song/sa>

Go directly to and print out the lyrics of the only song that matters: "Stayin' Alive." Just remember that, "Whether you're a brother or whether you're a mother, you're stayin' alive, stayin' alive."

SHADOW DANCING:

<http://www.gate.net/~bgmelody/andygibb.htm>

The Official Andy Gibb Home Page. The younger Gibb died of myocarditis in 1988.

He was an original member of the Bee Gees and went on to a solo career. He is best known for gracing posters and as an iron on for three-quarter sleeve shirts. The site has lyrics, memorabilia, fanatic club information and photos. Why have buttons on a shirt if you are not going to use them?

VOLLEYBALL

Spikers need MVC win to be satisfied

By L. Bruce Luckett
Daily Egyptian Reporter

While just getting to the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament is gratifying, going beyond a one-round appearance is what the volleyball Salukis are striving for.

The first round of the tournament begins tonight in Springfield, Mo., at the Hammons Student Center on the Southwest Missouri State University campus.

The tournament gets underway with the University of Northern Iowa going up against Bradley University at 5:30, while the Salukis, who clinched the fifth spot in the tournament after beating Bradley Friday, open up against Southwest Missouri State at 7:30.

Marlo Moreland, a sophomore outside hitter, said although the team has made it to the MVC Tournament, it has no intentions on settling for a first-round departure.

"We're not satisfied with just making it to the tournament,"

"We're not satisfied with just making it to the tournament. Now that we have made it, we want to win."

Moreland said. "Now that we have made it, we want to win."

Last season the spikers made it to post-season action with a 13-7 MVC record. The Salukis ended this season with a 7-11 conference record, which proved to be just enough to send the squad to the conference tournament for the second year in a row.

Saluki Coach Sonya Locke said she wishes the team's record could have been better, but she is pleased that the Salukis have achieved their pre-season goal by winning their way into the tournament without having to rely on another team to lose.

"It's a major accomplishment based on the fact we lost six seniors this season," Locke said. "We've proven we are capable of winning and that we can control our own destiny. And I'm very proud of the kids."

"I don't think they (SIUC) could accept anything less. The only reason we're going is to win."

Monique Galvin, a sophomore middle blocker, said the Salukis have become accustomed to beating the odds, especially since they made it to the tournament.

"We proved something to ourselves more than anyone else," Galvin said. "Not just one of us, but all of us have to want it. And I think we all do."

However, the odds are not stacked in favor of the Salukis. SIUC has won only one game in two matches this season against first-round opponents SMSU.

Last year the Salukis fell to SMSU in the first round.

Unfortunately, the Bears have yet another advantage, with the home crowd behind them.

"We will have our work cut out for us playing the host team in the first round," Locke said. "I wish it (the tournament) were closer to home so we could have some fans."

Should the Salukis beat the Bears tonight, they will face top-seeded Illinois State Friday at 7:30 in the semifinals, while Drake would face the winner of the UNI/BU matchup.

The championship match will be at 2 p.m. Saturday.

Moreland said the team has an added incentive to win because of critics' doubt.

"I'm more excited because no one expected us to be here," she said. "It's a great feeling."

SIUC has never won an MVC championship, and Galvin said she believes the confident and talented Salukis squad is due a victory.

"We've never won a championship, and I feel this team at this time can do it."

Recruiting

the players will actually attend SIUC and play as a Saluki, Beck said.

"We watch the kids as freshmen and sophomores (in high school). So by the time they are seniors, you may be writing them letters," Beck said. "You have to be on top of them before they are seniors or you may not get the kids."

The program may contact prospects starting in September of their junior year, Beck said. On July 1 of their senior year, the program can contact them once per week, which is when the program really has to sell itself.

"I think SIUC is an equally good program," Beck said. "We are in the top 50 or at best top 25, but we have to sell the school."

"The NCAA puts a damper on how much you can sell the school, so we have limited access to players."

Freshman Melaniee Bardley was in the midst of this recruiting frenzy just last year before signing with SIUC, and she said the situation can be hectic for a student athlete.

"It is very stressful because the beginning of the school year is the open period," Bardley said. "So you have tons of schools calling and writing you."

Bardley, who played her prep career at West Side High School in Gary, Ind., said the process is stressful on the families involved as well.

"Because the coaches are constantly calling, it really affects your family," she said. "Most coaches have respect for your family, but some don't, which is not good for the overall family."

Bardley said one of her reasons for choosing SIUC was Beck and the respect she had for Bardley's family.

"My mom loved her," Bardley said. "Coach Beck was honest and anything I asked her, she gave me a straight forward answer."

When recruiting for players, Beck said there are many things she looks for in a particular player.

"In a program like Cindy's (Scott) you have to look for every position," she said. "A philosophy grows in a program, so you know what the coach wants."

Beck said one important thing is hooting. The program wants a player who can put the ball in the basket and be quick at the same time.

"The Division I game has become powerful and quick, so we need speed and quickness," she said. "We try to recruit to see if you can get the whole package, which is hard sometimes."

What a player accomplishes off the court is also important to the program, Beck said.

"You also want someone who excels in the classroom," she said. "If they excel in the classroom, then they have a better chance at excelling on the basketball court."

This year the Salukis recruited five prospects in the early signing period. Of the five, there are two players from Southern Illinois, which Beck said is important to the program.

"We have a wealth of talent in Southern Illinois," she said. "Courtney Smith and Maria Niebrugge kept basketball close to home. That will help build up the crowd. We want to keep kids in Southern Illinois."

Smith, a 5-foot-9-inch forward from Carlyle, and Niebrugge, a 6-foot forward from Teutopolis, were recruited from SIUC summer camps, which is very rare, Beck said.

"SIUC camps are not high exposure camps; they are team camps," she said. "It is a unique situation to take them from our summer camp. It doesn't happen every year."

Also recruited for next year's Salukis squad are three players who were discovered at high exposure camps in the area.

Terica Hathaway, a 5-foot-11-inch guard from Providence, Ky., was recruited at a camp in St. Louis, which was the only camp she attended, Beck said.

Tiffany Traylor, a 5-foot-8-inch guard from Detroit was discovered at a camp in the Midwest, and Kristine Abramowski, a 6-foot-4-inch center from Freeport, was seen at some high exposure camps, but also played on the American Amateur Union team with Saluki freshman forward Meredith Jackson.

Scott said she was happy with this year's recruiting class.

"I am thrilled to sign five quality players early," she said. "Now we have it out of the way, so we can concentrate on our younger kids. It is a credit to our system because it doesn't happen often."

VOLLEYBALL

Freshman spiker earns MVC accolades

Saluki volleyball freshman Debbie Barr has been recognized as the Missouri Valley Conference's Volleyball Newcomer of the Year. Barr, a setter from Muncie, Ind., is the first Saluki spiker to capture the honor since Dana Olden in 1989. Barr set an SIUC and MVC record Nov. 12 when she dished out 82 set assists in a five game victory at Western Illinois University. Barr owns an SIUC single season assist record with 1,400 during the 1996 season.

SWIMMING

Saluki swimming signs two recruits

The Saluki men's swimming team announced the signing of two Central Illinois prep swimmers to national letters-of-intent Wednesday. Brad Gilbert, from Danville, and Ryan Muety, from St. Charles, announced their intentions to join the Salukis next season. Gilbert has been a state qualifying member at Danville High School, while Muety has earned all-conference and all-state honors at St. Charles.

"Both Ryan (Muety) and Brad (Gilbert) will be expected to continue to improve and provide an immediate impact," Men's Coach Rick Walker said. "They both have a great amount of potential, and we believe they will help us in areas that may be lacking depth next season."

BASKETBALL

NCAA places Louisville on probation

The NCAA Committee of Infractions placed the University of Louisville's Cardinals basketball team on probation Wednesday for two years for violating rules on recruiting, extra benefits and preferential treatment for team members. The case reportedly arose concerning cars loaned to Louisville standout Samaki Walker, who has since left Louisville for the NBA, in the summer and fall of 1995.

Knicks' Ewing tops 20,000-point mark

New York Knick center Patrick Ewing became the 23rd player in NBA history to score 20,000 career points when he scored 24 points in a 92-88 win over the Orlando Magic Tuesday night. Ewing passed the mark early in the second quarter as the Knicks built up a 25-point third-quarter lead to snap the Magic's four-game winning streak.

Runners to determine world's fastest

Olympic champions and current world-record holders Michael Johnson and Donovan Bailey will square off in a 150-meter race in May to determine who the world's fastest man is. Johnson captured the gold medal in the 200-meter and 400-meter dashes at the Atlanta Games in August and smashed the world record in the 200-meter dash in the process for the U.S. team. Canada's Bailey set a world record when he won the gold medal in the 100-meter dash at the Atlanta Games. Toronto appears to be the early favorite for the site of the race.

Summer camps net five for team

By Donna Colter
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Recruiting for women's basketball has changed a lot over the years, and SIUC Women's Basketball Associate Coach Julie Beck has been right in the middle of it all. Beck has been in charge of recruiting at SIUC under Coach Cindy Scott for 16 years and has seen the process change with time.

Instead of localized recruiting like it has been in the past, recruiting now involves high exposure summer camps that are promoted to highlight players.

"The kids go from town to town and camp to camp," Beck said. "It is a high pressure situation. We overindulge the kids with basketball in the month of July."

High-exposure camps run from July 1 to July 30, where players play in front of about 200-300 coaches. This is also when coaches get a chance to evaluate players.

"The coaches are never home for more than a day during that period," Beck said. "We fly all over and hit the big ones." Beck said many recruiting camps are sponsored by the Women's Collegiate Basketball Association. The camps charge a limited amount for the players to get exposure in front of coaches. The camps also teach NCAA rules and academic standards to the players.

FOOTBALL

All-conference awards given to Salukis

By Kevin DeFries
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Gateway Conference has named its All-Conference First Team, but Football Coach Shawn Watson had compiled his own list at his season-ending press conference Monday.

Four Saluki football players received official mention of All-Conference First-Team selections, including senior punter Mark Gagliano, senior running back Coe Bonner, senior offensive lineman Steve Jones and senior tight end Damon Jones.

"Mark Gagliano for sure," Watson said of his senior punter's chances on being named to the first team.

Gagliano led the nation in punting average from his first game, where he averaged 53 yards per punt, through his last game, where his average was 45.04 yards. Gagliano totaled 54 punts for the season, good for 2,432 total yards. In the process, Gagliano rewrote the SIUC record books for punting and ended his Saluki career with 10,776 yards on 264 punts for a career average of 40.82 yards per punt.

"He had a tremendous year and tremendous career," Watson said.

Watson also had Bonner as a shoo-in for first-team selections.

Bonner led the league in yards per carry with a 5.4 average this season. Bonner's 112 yards per game and 11 touchdowns ranked him third in conference. The senior gained 1,234 yards on 227 carries, which ranks him second all-time for yards in a single season behind Andre Herrera's 1,588 yards, set in 1976.

Watson said that offensive lineman Steve Jones played an integral part in Bonner's success on the ground and was deserving of an All-Conference mention.

"I think Steve Jones is the best offensive lineman in the league, bar none," Watson said. "He is a dominating player."

For Damon Jones, Tuesday's selection marked his second naming to the first-team in as many years.

But Damon Jones' award came in a different light than last year because he was used more as a decoy in the passing game this season.

Yet Damon Jones had his share of receptions with 32 for 431-yards and two touchdowns, including one 80-yard score.

Unfortunately, there were a few Salukis missing from the first-team list.

"Reggie (Fowler) had a great year for us," Watson said. "He is having a great career for us. This was a breakthrough year for him."

Watson said Fowler, who will be back next year to close out his senior season, is a great receiver who works the defense and stifles the linebackers and defensive backs in zone coverage.

Fowler was one of the top receivers in the conference with 45 receptions for 643 yards. Unfortunately, Fowler was named to the second-team.

Watson said junior offensive lineman Lawrence Watkins and sophomore lineman Doug Dorley were also two of the best in the league, but only Watkins was officially recognized in the Gateway by being awarded with an honorable mention.

"Those guys, I think, are two of the better linemen in our league," Watson said.

Saluki senior tight end Dave Smith also received an honorable mention for his 25 catches for 322 yards and three touchdowns.

No players from the defensive side of the ball were named to the first-team, but Watson was expecting several to receive recognition for their efforts, especially senior defensive back C.J. McDavid.

"I think C. J. without a doubt on defense," Watson said of the Salukis' leading tackler. "He had a great year."

Despite making 116 tackles, forcing two fumbles and picking off three passes, McDavid only was given an honorable mention.

Watson also said that senior defensive end David Reid and senior defensive tackle Daryl Holland deserved special honors for their work on the defensive side of the ball this season.

Reid made 32 tackles during the season, including 10 sacks for minus 58 yards. Holland totaled 23 tackles including three sacks for minus 20 yards.
