萧 strange, the members generally supported the administration's stand against reinstating expelled students and Stuart Novick. But we didn't take any official action on that then and whether we got involved in that sort of thing now is anybody's guess.

Koller confessed that he felt the club would start lending its weight against its power as part of some issues but he indicated it was impossible to make predictions. He stressed that the club had rejected taking specific stands on campus politics since its origin in 1966. He said that there was definitely no indication yet that the membership would actively support the administration in any showdowns with such groups as the Southern Illinois Peace Committee (SIPC) or denounce radical Student Senate moves.

Spring quarter, the Vet's Club leadership changed hands and it went through internal struggles on policy. Although the group seemed split on many issues, the burning questions were whether to take stands against the activists attempting to remove military recruiters from the University Center and the question of major purposes of the club—whether to be primarily a social organization or actively engage as a lobbying force in campus, state and national events which affected them.

Though it's generally referred to as a "club," the veterans group is actually a corporation complete with the legal responsibilities, freedom and power normally available to such business enterprises. Veterans are usually older than most undergraduates with the average age about 25, Koller said. Veterans occupy key positions in many campus affairs and they are given many privileges by the administration which are not normally allotted to younger, non-veteran undergraduates.

No headway gained in parking dispute

Ed Pool, representative of Council 14 of the Food Service Employees Union, said Thursday a meeting with University administration officials resulted in no progress.

Purpose of the meeting was to consider food service employees' refusal to purchase parking decals. John M. McDermott, SIR Labor Institute director, that not reported that any dissatisfaction to his superiors according to Pool, who spoke for the food service employees.

Pool said McDermott would contact him as soon as his superiors had been informed. Pool expects another meeting to be scheduled for the first part of next week.

Pool said he supports the employees refusal to purchase decals and pay parking tickets because "the membership of the union voted to do it this way."

He said it was too early to talk about what measures would be taken should the University administration uphold its present system and demand employees pay their parking tickets.

McDermott was unavailable for comment and Chancellor Robert W. MacVear was out of town.
UN advisor to deliver talk

Major General Indar Jit Rikhye, military advisor to the Secretary General of the United Nations, will deliver a U.N. Week address at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the University Center Ballrooms. His topic will be "Peace Keeping by the United Nations." Intercollegiate and the International Relations Club, co-sponsors of the address, will hold a reception for Rikhye from 4 to 5 p.m. in the Intercollegiate Lounge in the south wing of Woody Hall.

Earlier in the afternoon, Rikhye will be interviewed by a U.N. Association panel on WUI-TV. This program will be aired at 9 p.m. Thursday, United Nations Day on Channel 8.

Following the speech, the local U.N. Association will hold a public reception for Rikhye in the University Center.

Rikhye served as the last commander of the U.N. Emergency Force in the Middle East from December, 1965, until May, 1967, when United Arab Gus, actionless?

Is nothing sacred to James H. Hanson? Or, might you be aware of the author of a witty little article which appeared in the Oct. 7 issue of the Southern Free Press—an article entitled “Who Is Gus Bode?”

In the article, Mr. Hanson attacked the personality of Gus—Gus of Page One of the Daily Egyptian—or several points, and accused him of being “faceless, faceless, actionless.”

Strong accusations, these. But, of course, Mr. Hanson has his own bag, and who are we to knock a person just because he doesn’t dig Gus Bode? Indeed, Mr. Hanson is right: Gus does have his hang-ups—but being “faceless, faceless, actionless” aren’t among them.

First off, the “faceless” accusation: Who, pray tell, on the Carbondale campus wouldn’t immediately recognize Gus in a crowd? His profile is perhaps better known than that of any other individual at SIU, possibly even more so than that of President Morris—and certainly more so than that of Mr. Hanson.

Secondly, about Gus being “faceless” (rather vile accusation, Mr. Hanson; here’s the Wednesday, June 26, Daily Egyptian: “Gus says the loss relief for younger bites is to have your date scratch them.” Miss Hanson is, as we may be persuaded, the one who may be persuaded his date to scratch his younger bites has to have something going for him, right?

Thirdly, about Gus “lack of action”: Actually, he tried—but in his own way, to put it in the style of the Southern Free Press, “Gus does his own thing.” He’s a cautious individual, this Gus Bode, and he’s the first one to admit it: “Gus says he would like to protest the University Center coffee, but first he wants to see what happens to the 11 demonstrators.” (Tuesday, Aug. 15).

And: “Gus says he is not sure he wants to help close down the University with a strike. After all, it’s no fun to cut a class that is not meeting.” (Tuesday, Nov. 14, 1967).

And, if he could, perhaps Gus would take that “ultimate protest step,” but as he explains: “Gus says he’d resign but nobody can find his boss.” (Thursday, March 7).

No, Gus is not really faceless or faceless or actionless: he simply realizes what he is. He’s above all—a realist. He’s been to the SII wall, beat his head against it, and has returned somewhat the worse for wear—but also somewhat wiser.

As for Mr. Hanson’s slights to his character, Gus had a reply for that, long ago (Wednesday, Nov. 8, 1967): “Gus says there is so much amateur griping going on around the University that he wonders if there is much future for an old pro like himself.”

To the editor:

Since the first appearance of Young Americans for Freedom (YAF) many students have acquired the false opinion that YAF supports the violence found in many left-wing student organizations. YAF is not a left-wing group nor does it support the philosophies of such groups as the SDS (students for a Democratic Society). YAF is a student political organization of about 30,000 members who believe in the genius of the United States Constitution, and who are opposed to Marxism or Maoism which tend to suppress the individual. YAF believes that foremost among the transcendent values is the individual’s use of his God-given free will which derives his right to be free from the restrictions of arbitrary force. YAF feels that we have the fairest system of government, but that blemishes which have dishonored it must be removed.

YAF does not condone violence, but it does believe the student should be allowed more freedom. YAF intends to work with the SIU student body in bringing needed changes to our campus.

The Eskimos leap to the 20th century

Jenkin Lloyd Jones

Imuvik, Northwest Territories, Canada—We never did get into Aklavik.

Ten minutes out of the Eskimo village of Tuktoyaktuk, the gray-green waters of the Arctic Ocean to the north faded beneath the low clouds and the snows came down.

The treeless, drowned lands of the Mackenzie delta were powered with new tulem, and bush pilots—Klaus Krey, the 31-year-old German from Bremen, brought the little Cessna down to 600, 400, 300 feet and peeled alternately at the bewildering maze of channels and the map he kept unrolling in his hand.

Twice he pointed down to ruined, crude structures of driftwood and to a dot on his map, “Cabin,” it said, simply. These are the checkpoints of the Arctic.

At last there was nothing ahead but a black curtain. Just at that moment, the gyro went out on the needle-ball. Klaus picked up the microphone, held a short conference, then turned to me. “Aklavik has no radio and Imuvik reports 300 feet and closing,” he said. “We’d better head for home.”

Imuvik, 3,000 population and seven years old, sits on 1,000 feet of permafrost. It was built by the Canadian government “to be the first community north of the Arctic Circle to provide the normal facilities of a Canadian town.”

It does well. The whole place centers around a power and heating station from which above-ground “scurvies” containing heating water, fresh water and sewer pipes spread through the community, the streets and sidewalks rising to bridge them.

Chauvinistic fears cause Russians to continue Czech encroachments

By Antero Pietila

This certainly is not a year for over optimism. The Red Wallacoues of Russia whose chauvinism based on fear is no different from that of their tsarist ancestors continue their efforts to destroy Czechoslovakia and have just sentenced five intellectuals, three to exile, two to labor camps.

And yet amidst all this, and because of all this, one is tempted to quote these verses:

"Out of the distance of time
Appeared a different thought
The third revolution
The revolution of spirit."

Thus wrote Vladimir Mayakovski, the great poet whose life was cut off by firing squad in the darkest hour of the Russian Revolution.

Yes, it's true: there are rays of hope sparkling from the very courtroom where the intellectuals were tried. The accused not only defended the right to voice their protest against their government's actions, but did it in such a way that they will be heard even from the wilderness of Siberia.

In fact, they did not speak only for themselves but millions of other believers disillusioned by Stalinist repression had lost everything but their optimism and his belief in man. Eventually he lost them also and found no other way out of darkness than shooting himself in 1930.

"I do not think that the prosecutor himself would say that, for then he would have to say that all the crimes of the Stalin times were the results of our social and state system." Mr. Litvinov's defense gained its height when he began talking about one of the basic concepts of communism, that all liberties are to be used in the interest of the state. Mr. Litvinov argued that it is in the interest of socialism and the toilers that the people are given these rights. The prosecutor interrupted him complaining that this argument was too relevant. Mr. Litvinov then explained:

"This is what I find ominous. Evidently it is these people who are supposed to know what socialism is and what counterrevolution is.

"That is what I find terrible, and that is why I went to Red Square. That is what I have fought against and what I shall continue to fight against for the rest of my life, by all methods known to me.

What Mrs. Daniel and Mr. Litvinov said during the trial is certainly the talk of the town in Moscow. And this may cause some major unpleasantness to the government.

In 1956, after the Hungarian revolt, the Soviet authorities had some difficulty in suppressing students. Now with hundreds of thousands of Soviet soldiers returning home from Czechoslovakia, the situation is growing more delicate all the time. What they tell must be to some degree in the dark and the picture official media has painted.

A great majority of Russians have, no doubt, readily accepted the official explanation that it was the West German threat that made it imperative for the government to act. However, if this argument is accepted, a credibility may still be deglopping.

Those who are not blinded by the traditional Russian chauvinism can clearly see the difference between Hungary in 1956 and Czechoslovakia now. Although what happened in Hungary caused a major break in many European communist parties, surprisingly many believers found the brutal action justifiable because the country had withdrawn from the Warsaw Pact and the Communist Party had been often bypassed in the decision to stage the Imre Nagy regime had made during the revolt.

Czechoslovakia, on the contrary, was a model of socialist decision-making process. Although the Communist Party was losing its power, thus everything else in the liberalization movement happened by the decisions had some itself. Prague leadership did not make any efforts to change the country's commitment to the socialist bloc. The result was that the Soviet army crushed this budding independence; it is almost impossible to imagine the different many believers. They may not be disillusioned with socialism but they certainly are with communism if it means only a hidden form of the reactionary Russian chauvinism.

Another thing that may or may not contribute to the formation of the credibility gap in Russia is in Western broadcasts. There is enough evidence to assert that in a rather early phase of the Czechoslovak liberalization process, the cold hand of the state Department began "controlling," what Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty were broadcasting. Both are "privately owned" American-stations. The former directs its programs to all Eastern European countries except Russia, and the latter specializes in transmissions in various languages spoken within the Russian empire. The official government network, the Voice of America, was also ordered cautious, because Washington did not want to endanger Russo-American relations. Therefore, it is possible that the sheer fact that American propaganda media has been subdued in any way may give more soundboard to indigenous protests.

Group gains learning of West, spreads culture of the East

By Thomas Bills

A group of SIU students is trying to develop a better understanding of Western culture and spread more Eastern culture in the process.

The group is the Indian Student Association, which will observe the Mahatma Gandhi Centennial as part of its program this year.

President of the association is Dilip Desai, a graduate student in research, working for his Ph.D. He said the purpose of the association is that of an internal cultural exchange. The association's membership is comprised of 40 Indian students and five non-Indian students. Membership is open to anyone for $2 per year fee.

One of the major goals of the association is to help the Indian student adjust to a new environment, both socially and academically, Desai discussed some of the experiences the foreign student might encounter in this country.

"We experience about the same problems as American students do. Perhaps a bit more homesickness, but it is natural," said Desai.

Desai said that the language difference poses more problems to the American than to Indians. "In India we study English as a foreign language in the grammar schools for about five years. It is then used as a teaching medium in later school years. The problem arises from the fact that we are taught by Indian teachers who may not use the correct pronunciation, therefore we may pronounce the words incorrectly to Americans. We do not have difficulty understanding them, but they may have difficulties understanding our speech.

Desai, who received his B.S. degree at an Indian university, came to the Illinois Institute of Technology where he received his masters degree in technology.

Desai said that Indian students select a university in the U.S. in much the same way as in India. "We evaluate several schools on the basis of what we wish to study, usually science or technology," he said.

"Nearly all the Indian students at SIU and in the U.S. are studying science and technology," Desai said. "They receive a good education in India, because India has much to offer in humanities. However, we wish to study technology here because it is constantly growing and progressing."

Desai added that it was easier to study technology because of the conducive environment and financial assistance. "(Illinois Institute of Technology) and large cities like Chicago illustrate technological advances clearly. In India we get very little financial aid, if any, for school. One might have his traveling expenses to the U.S., paid for, on a promise that he will work for the Indian government for a specified period of time when his studies are concluded," Desai said.

Labor training pushed by British government

By Jan Pratt

Britain has a much broader manpower training program than the United States, says a visiting SIU professor who is a research associate with authority on training costs.

The Man Power Training Act, which dates back to 1956, is limited to training those people who have no basic skills. Britain's Industrial Training Boards cover the whole of the working population, according to Douglas Garbutt who is teaching courses in managerial and cost accounting at SIU.

Each year the boards must tax the companies under them, said Garbutt. He explained that this money is used for grants to induce employers to train their workers. If an employer uses his own money to train workers, he in turn gains a grant to help pay the training cost. Occasionally an employer will receive more money from a grant than he paid in the tax, in which case he will make money by training his workers. Garbutt explained.

Garbutt said 22 boards had been set up when he left in June. He said the Act intended for 30 to 40 boards to be established. The government must set up training programs for its own employees.

Garbutt has written four books which are used in accounting courses in England. They include "Principles of Managerial Accounting," "A Simple Introduction to Capital Expenditure Decisions," "Planning for Profits" and "Carters Advanced Accounts," a textbook, is used in over 100 of the colleges in England.

Garbutt, who is presently evaluating the training program in Britain to determine whether or not the money we are spending is worthwhile.

Garbutt, his wife, son and daughter will be at SIU until June. After a trip around the states, they will return to England in July or August.

Jobs to be talk topic

Howard B. Woods, publisher of the St. Louis Sentinel, will be the guest lecturer for the Monday Convocation Series "Jobs in Journalism. The hourly sessions will run from 9 a.m. to noon in the Seminar Room of the Agricultural Building.

Woods is the former associate director of the United States Information Agency and editor of Sengstacke Publications.

During the span of his newspaper and radio career, Woods has served with the St. Louis Call, Chicago Defender, both newspapers, and as a newspaper and regular commentator on current affairs on St. Louis Radio XMOX. He joined the St. Louis Argus as city editor in 1948 and became executive editor in 1954.

Active in civic affairs, Woods is a former member of the President's Committee on Equal Opportunity and the National Citizens Advisory Committee to the Community Relations Service established under the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

Woods has received such awards as Best News Story, Best Editorial Writing and Best News Column from the National Newspaper Publishers Association.

Group to discuss nature preserves

Proposals to set aside parts of the state conservation areas of Hopewell Lake and Mermet Lake as nature preserves are among the topics for discussion by the Illinois Nature Preserve Commission meeting today.

The nine-man commission, set up by legislation in 1963, convened this morning in the Seminar Room of the Agriculture Building.

Commission members will be guests of Chancellor Robert MacVicar at a dinner tonight.

FBI in on SDS controversy

been given anything official from either the senate or Thompson.

Suzanne Faulkner, west side non-dorm senator, defended SDS and said the SIU chapter plans to divorce itself from direct association with the national organization.

She said members of the national organization have endorsed violence. "We are more of a community thing," she added.

Miss Faulkner was joint sponsor of a bill that would have sought recognition of SDS if the Campus Organizations Committee had failed to bring in a report which must precede recognition.

Senate Chairman Pete Rozell declared the bill to be out of order after it became apparent that the committee had finished the report.

The senate meeting starting time had been delayed 20 minutes while the committee caused in another room.

Jack Seum, Thompson Point senator and a member of the Campus Organizations Committee, was critical of the short time allowed for consideration.

He described the senate action as a "ram rod affair," and protested early in the meeting that the committee had not even taken a formal vote on approval.

Rozell called a five minute recess during the height of debate over the issue, and the committee hastily re-convened and a formal vote taken.

The senate finally voted 15-5 to accept the committee report, officially recognizing SDS as a campus organization.

According to Seum, the total time involved in actual consideration of the organization's constitution was something less than 20 minutes, while senate debate over the issue lasted for over half an hour.

The Thompson Point senator was also critical of the fact that the senate was not given an opportunity to question a representative of SDS, as it has been customary with other campus organizations.

Jackie Kennedy to wed Onassis

NEW YORK (AP)—Jacqueline Kennedy, the woman who has become a symbol to the nation's 35th president was ended by an assassin's bullet, announced Thursday she will be the bride of one of the world's richest men, Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis. He is more than 20 years her senior.

A short time after the announcement, Mrs. Kennedy and her two children boarded an Olympic Airways plane at Kennedy Airport, presumably bound for Onassis' native Greece.

Accompanying Mrs. Kennedy aboard the jetliner were two of her sisters-in-law, Mrs. Stephen Smith and Patricia Kennedy, the former Mrs. Peter Lawford. The destination of the flight was not made known. However, Olympic is a Greek airline. The wedding is expected to take place next week. The time and place have not been announced.

A British Broadcasting Corp. correspondent reported from New York that the wedding will be on a Greek island owned by Onassis, in the Ionian sea.

The announcement of the planned marriage came after years of speculation by the nation and the world as to what the future held for the glamorous presidential widow. Born in New York, educated in the United States and Europe, fluent in French, Spanish and Italian, Mrs. Kennedy was as graceful at home in the far corners of the world as she was in the White House.

Everywhere she went, the appearance of an eligible man at her side set off gossip as to her marital future. The public found it hard to believe than a woman still young and vivacious, with her cultured background, could long remain a widow.

Onassis is a friend of the Kennedy family, and he entertained various of its members aboard the Christina.

The announcement of the second tragic Kennedy assassination, the slaying last June of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., found Jacqueline Kennedy and her brother-in-law, Sen. Edward Kennedy, seeking solace in their grief aboard the Christina.

Onassis started out with less than nothing—a stateless person—and was a millionaire at 25. He piled on his millions as his shipping fortune grew with the accumulation of tankers, freighters and whalers—the largest private fleet in the world.

At 24, Onassis was appointed Greek consul general. His work as consul involved supervision over Greek grain vessels from start of his shipping career.

During the depression in the early 1930's, Onassis bought two Canadian freighters at a bargain price. As business improved, he prospered, built an enlarged fleet around oil tankers, eventually sailing his ships under the flag of half a dozen nations.

Onassis has a fortune that has been estimated as high as $500 million. Operating through multiple corporations, he has a fleet of some 100 ships. He travels more than 100,000 miles a year on business, speaks English, Spanish, French, Italian and Turkish, as well as Greek.

Onassis makes his headquarters in Monte Carlo, where the tiny principality of Monaco loves no income tax.

Onassis, 62, was divorced in 1960 after a 15-year marriage to the former Tina Livanos, blonde daughter of another multimillionaire Greek shipowner. They had two children. She later married England's Marquis of Blandford.

It could not be determined immediately whether Mrs. Kennedy is free to marry Onassis in her Roman Catholic faith. Since he is divorced, the church prohibits such a marriage unless his first union is found to be invalid. Onassis, who is Greek Orthodox, has that church's approval of divorce, and the couple could be married in his faith.

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By Jim Simpson

Here's this for a football oddity — Did you know that the careers of Virginia and William & Mary football teams are synched for EVERY season? They tied every year from 1906 through 1916. William & Mary was head coach in 1906. Hammond Johnson in 1907; N. C. Cooke in 1908; John Neff in 1909; Charles Crawford in 1910; Kemper Yanney in 1911; Speed Elliott in 1912; Rice Warren in 1913; Joseph Wood in 1914; Henry Yanney in 1915; and Preston Evans in 1916!

Virginia had 11 different coaches in 11 straight years!

Has Notre Dame ever played in a post-season football bowl game — and if so, when?

To find out, check the list of bowl games that have played in one... They were named in the 1925 bowl game beating Stanford 27-10.

In a football player allowed to catch his own pass in a game... For example, the quarterback throws the pass but an opposing linebacker jumps up and hits the ball in the air... Can the quarterback throw the ball back to his own pass and start to run with it? Answer is yes — and it's happened in recent years — in the Orange Bowl... Such passes as Johnny Unitas, A. Tittle and John Couch... Such passers as Johnny Unitas, A. Tittle and John Couch...

In the 1906 Sugar Bowl, 14 out of 27 Lynn Plunkett had done it in games at the Sugar Bowl. Plunkett gained 20 yards on such a play several years ago.

I bet you didn't know that college graduates have a longer life expectancy — lower death rate and are living five years longer on the average than a noncollege man... The lower death rate of college men makes possible broader benefits and greater cash values in College Life policies. This certainty makes good sense...

Saigon opposes U.S. consultations for bombing halt

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States pushed ahead with bombing halt consultations with its allies Thursday despite protests from Saigon and a denunciation from Hanoi.

The White House and State Department kept tight silence on the latest developments in President Johnson's effort for a major peace move before he leaves office in January.

In Saigon, informed sources said President Nguyen Van Thieu refused to sign a joint declaration condemned by the United States on stopping the bombing of North Vietnam and U.S. ambassador Ellsworth Bunker was meeting again with the South Vietnamese chief. In Hanoi, the official North Vietnamese newspaper said the United States was negotiating in order to return to the United States for the possibility of a return to the United States for further negotiations.

The United States is consulting with its allies under the normal practice of discussing potential policy, practical or diplomatic moves with them. However, almost all the bombing of North Vietnam is done by American forces, and the final decision on any actions rests with Johnson.

Humphrey backers happy as McCarthy ruled off N.Y. ballot

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) - Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey's problem-plagued New York backers won a major victory Thursday, as the state's high court ruled U.S. Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy off the New York presidential election ballot.

Declaring that McCarthy should not have run against his will, the Court of Appeals unanimously upset a lower-court decision that the Minnesota Democratic party's name should be on the ballot Nov. 3.

The ruling brought a much-needed boost to Humphrey's New York State organization, which has been beset by a variety of woes. In Washington, a spokesman for the Democratic National Committee said the decision made Democratic leaders more confident that the vice president will carry New York.

Also, beginning in 1970, out-of-state tuition rates will be increased $100 to a total of $700 for the four schools and will be increased $100 annually thereafter until tuition fees equal undergraduate costs.

TOTAL RESIDENT ENROLLMENT at the four schools is 25,084 compared with last year's enrollment of 25,894.

LSD use slowing down, Cohen tells Convocation

LSD's long, wild trip may never be over, but it is gradually slowing down, Dr. Sidney Cohen, LSD author and researcher, told a Convocation audience here Thursday, "We are seeing the beginning of the end. We will never quite have a drug that will solve human problems. Humans will have to do that themselves."

Even habitual users of drugs no longer pin their hopes on LSD, he said. There have been too many bad trips, serious side effects and increased awareness that for those of us who want to transcend ourselves, the chemical way is best.

"When you're on a trip, you think you can fly or walk on water or stand in front of a car and stop the motor. It hasn't worked yet," Cohen said. "If you get killed falling out of a window in Los Angeles while under the influence of LSD, it doesn't even make the newspapers anymore."

Cohen, who has taken psychoactive drugs himself as part of his research, said LSD creates paranoid and panic states, flashbacks, prolonged anxiety and sometimes chronic psychosis, but the real loser is the "dropout," the user whose life suddenly seems mundane and superficial, "so he just drops out of his work, his family, school and everything else for a perpetual trip." He is the individual who doesn't know "what's down here that counts," Cohen said.

He questioned the profound discoveries LSD users claim to have made on trips. He cited one psychologist who had assisted in his research by taking LSD. After an eight-hour trip, the psychologist went to the toilet and came out saying "the final answer to life's problems was in there." The answer: "Flush after using."

"So maybe the great insights people gain from using LSD are not so great after all," Cohen said.

Researchers still have high hopes for psychedelic drugs, he said, and "as of 8 p.m. Wednesday" had found no conclusive proof that they cause brain or chromosome damage.
Probation head serves better than counselor

By Sam Cox

Mrs. Dorothy Ramp, supervisor for General Studies and VIT students who are on probation, is more than an academic counselor.

Mrs. Ramp, who holds a master's degree in counseling, spends much time discussing personal problems with students as helping with their classroom difficulties.

"Lots of times a student may have a personal matter that is affecting his work in class, and we end up talking about that problem," Mrs. Ramp said.

Many students think that Mrs. Ramp's services are limited only to students on probation.

"But now we have an increasing number of students who are on good standing, or warning, and are simply having trouble studying, who come in for help," she explained.

When a student goes on academic probation, he receives a letter from Mrs. Ramp asking him to meet with her and a group of other probationary students early during the next quarter.

"In our group meetings, we use pamphlets which describe good study habits," explained Mrs. Ramp. "It's surprising how many students simply have not learned how to study. We try to give them help which will really benefit them.

"At these meetings we also discuss the rules and regulations that apply to them. Many students aren't as concerned as they should be about being on probation."

Some have the idea that it's simply a matter of procedure to petition back into school after they are suspended. Unfortunately, many of them are finding out that it's not that easy anymore.

Peltzer recital Sunday

Dwight Peltzer, artist in residence in the SUI Department of Music, will present a recital at 4 p.m. Sunday in Shryock Auditorium.

He will play several piano compositions, including Schubert's "Sonata in B Flat Major" and pieces by Methil, Weber, Berg, Lewis and Castaldo.

After the initial group meeting, the student is allowed to decide whether or not he needs more help. Mrs. Ramp leaves her meetings free to work with students individually.

No other counselors work directly with Mrs. Ramp's office. However, she explained, "I may refer a student back to his regular advisor or to people in a certain department for information."

She may contact teachers who help the student in a particular class or call his attention to various study facilities on campus.

Mrs. Ramp said the adjustment to college life is the biggest stumbling block to studying.

"A student can get lost in the shuffle in a hurry and go from good standing to warning to probation before he knows it," Mrs. Ramp said.

It's not unusual for former probationary students and students from other colleges to come to Mrs. Ramp.

"Sometimes a student who has been back on good standing for a couple of years will come back just to let me know how he's doing," she said.

The Free School concept:
classes without pressure

By Carol Barham

A learning experience minus the pressures of grades, tests, credits, mandatory attendance and assignments—this is the goal of SIU's Free School.

There are no requirements for enrollment. A membership drive this fall has resulted in the biggest membership response yet, according to Steve Mirowitz, chairman of Free School.

Mirowitz described Free School as an experimental class type situation. It allows students to get together and hold open informal discussions concerning any field of interest.

This is the third year of Free School operation at SIU. John L. Baker, advisor to Free School, said it is one of the 11 committees of the Student Government Activities Council.

Free School gives students an active part in the learning process. "It is a learning experience, not only for students, but for anyone interested in gaining anything in the way of knowledge," said Mirowitz.

Those involved are not considered teachers and students, Mirowitz explained. They are called leaders and participants. "Leaders are knowledgeable resources, but they also learn," Mirowitz said.

A committee of students is in charge of trying to organize the leaders, and those who want to attend," Baker explained. Anyone can work on this committee.

Mirowitz explained that the curriculum is selected according to public response for a course. Also, if someone wants to teach a course, Mirowit will try to organize it.

Mirowitz said that the course content may be changed. At the first meeting, the members decide exactly what they want to discuss. "Anything can be changed with cooperation from those who show up," Mirowitz explained.

In two class sessions, 60 people have attended. This was more than the Free School people expected. Mirowitz pointed out that in a few weeks the attendance will probably drop because students will have other activities to attend.

"A person may come whenever he wishes, and classes never close," explained Mirowitz.

He also said he believes that an ideal number in each class will probably prove to be 10 to 12. With this size, there seems to be more interaction. Mirowitz said that he hopes to get about 20 classes organized for winter quarter.

Free School is also planning some weekend camping excursions. This and more projects will be discussed later in the quarter.

A schedule of the fall class sessions is available at the Student Activities Office.

Higher postal rates effective Saturday

Postmaster Hubert L. Godforth of Carbondale reminded postal customers today that higher parcel post and catalog rates will go into effect Saturday.

The rate increase will average 10.5 per cent and in most cases will mean an additional ten cents postage per parcel.

The higher rates were approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission in July.

Under the new rates, the minimum charge for local parcel delivery will go from 40 to 50 cents. The minimum charge for parcels destined outside the local delivery area will be raised from 50 cents to 60 cents.

Higher rates for the delivery of packages and catalogs are required to bring revenue from this type of mail within four percent of operating costs, as required by law, Postmaster Godforth explained. The higher rates are designed to put parcels and catalogs, which are fourth-class mail, on a break-even basis.

Additional revenue is needed from parcel post and catalogs to offset higher costs resulting from pay increases approved last year for postal employees.

Hollinger's tasks varied

By Brent Phelps

SIU's Doug Hollinger isn't satisfied with just being in the starting line-up—he wants to try his hand at every position.

Hollinger, a 5-10, 160-pound senior from Scotts Bluff, Nebraska, won the "Mr. Versatile" title last year when he saw action on the Salukis grid team as punter, kickoff and punt returner, fullback, end, defensive halfback and quarterback.

"Last year Hollinger led the team in punt and kickoff returns, maintaining a 14.9-yard average on punt returns and a 22-yard average on kickoff returns," said Hollinger.

As an offensive back, Hollinger gained 153 yards by rushing in 49 attempts.

"As a signal-caller, he passed nine times last year, completing four with one interception, gaining 35 yards. On the other end of the toss, Hollinger caught four passes for a net gain of 58 yards." The year "Mr. Versatile" has seemingly settled down somewhat and has been most of his action from the split end position and as a punt and kickoff returner.

Hollinger has caught two passes this year, one for a touchdown.

"I have hopes of some day playing professional football but my size might ruin that idea," Hollinger said.

"I have received questionnaires from Oakland and San Diego but no offers as yet," Hollinger commented.

Hollinger began his football career in the seventh grade playing tailback for Holdrege Junior High, Holdrege, Neb.

In his sophomore year of high school, Hollinger played varsity ball, making All-Conference as a tailback. The following year he made All-Conference again, but this time for both offense and defense.

As a senior, Hollinger transferred to Scotts Bluff High School where he saw action as a halfback, gaining ratings as All-Big Ten and All-State.

Not only is Hollinger versatile in football but he is also talented in basketball and track.

He attained All-Conference ratings in basketball at both Holdrege and Scotts Bluff High Schools.

In his senior year at Scotts Bluff, Hollinger led the state in the 220 in track with a time of 21.9 seconds. Hollinger also participated in baseball at Holdrege and Scotts Bluff as a pitcher and shortstop.

At McCook Junior College, McCo0d, Neb., Hollinger made All-American two years in a row. As a freshman he was selected as an All-American defensive safety and in his sophomore year was an All-American back.

When asked why he decided to come to SIU instead of another university, Hollinger commented, "The school itself impressed me. The program is relatively new and I just wanted to be a part of it."
MEXICO CITY (AP)—Venerable Ralph Boston broke his own Olympic long jump record with a qualling leap of 27 feet, 11 1/4 inches Thursday as U.S. athletes resumed their gold medal chase following the Games' shocking racial furor of Wednesday night.

While "the U.S. Olympic Committee met in extraordinary session to discuss demonstrations" by Negro members of the Smith and Carlos teams, and John Carlos after their 1-3 finish in the 200-meter dash Wednesday night, Boston, a black veteran of three Olympics, eclipsed the long jump mark of 27 4/5 set eight years ago in the Rome Games.

The confrontation between some disenfranchised black athletes and the Olympic establishment threatened to become acute again when the U.S. Olympic Committee emerged from its meeting with a formal apology to the International Olympic Committee and the Mexican Organizing Committee for the actions of Smith and Carlos.

Villa Nova's Ely Hall cracked the Olympic record with a 13.3 victory in his 110-meter hurdles semifinal. Willie Davis, son of Southern University coach Leonard Coleman of Washington, D.C., in the other semi, both matching the old mark of 13.5 set by Americans Len Calhoun and Jack Davies at the 1936 Melbourne Games.

Barbara Ferrell, another Negro flash who took the silver medal behind teammate Lee Evans in the women's 200 meters Tuesday, set an Olympic record for the 300-yard sprint by winning her first-round heat in 22.9 seconds.

Two other American girls, Madeline Manning and Doris Brown, qualified for the women's 800-meter semifinals and U.S. farmers gained the finals of all seven rowing events for the first time in Olympic history.
Rushing attack improved

Although SIU has scored only 35 points in three games, after last week’s performance maybe the offense is going to move.

Against Lamar Tech last Saturday, the Salukis pounded out 43 yards. In their first two games they were able to pick up only 452 total yards.

The Salukis’ rushing attack has improved, but their passing game is still questionable.

The ground game has gained a total of 620 yards, 990 last week. John Quillen is SIU’s leading rusher with 267 yards for a 4.2 average per carry. He gained 140 of these yards and scored his only touchdown against Lamar Tech.

Mike Bradley, who carried six times for 104 yards last week, has rushed for 175 yards for a 14.5 average. He is the leading scorer with 11 points on three field goals and two conversions.

But Southern’s aerial attack isn’t keeping pace with the ground game. The Salukis have mustered only 108 yards by air, hitting on only 23 of 65 attempts.

Jim McKay has completed 18 of 40 passes for 210 yards and no touchdowns. He has thrown five interceptions. Tom Wise, last week’s starting quarterback, has been able to connect on only 3 of 20 attempts for 47 yards and no touchdowns, and he has tossed three interceptions.

Barclay Allen and Mike Bradley have thrown the only two touchdown passes for Southern this season. Together they have completed two of five passes.

Quillen and Bradley are the leading receivers. Quillen has caught eight passes for 89 yards, and Bradley has made six receptions for 95 yards.

In other departments, Doug Hollinger has returned eight punts for 81 yards and five kickoffs for 83 yards. Quillen has returned four kickoffs for 90 yards.
