Rescuers still search for survivors

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Rescuers detected the weakened voice of a survivor Wednesday evening, setting off a frantic scramble to unearth one of the hundreds of people buried by a highway that collapsed in the deadliest earthquake to hit the United States since 1906.

"We heard a voice," a spokesman for the mayor's office said, adding that rescue crews then confirmed "by touch" that someone had survived the collapse more than 24 hours earlier.

It was not immediately known whether anyone else survived the collapse, but officials earlier in the day had said they were abandoning their search after concluding no one else could have escaped alive.

Rescuers were still trying to reach the survivor as nightfall approached, digging and lifting away debris.

There were 271 killed in the quake that struck at 5:04 p.m. Tuesday, more than 2,500 injured and thousands forced into emergency shelters.

As many as 200 of those killed were crushed below the top deck of a two-tiered, 1 1/4-mile section of Interstate 880 in Oakland that crashed down on rush-hour traffic. A section of the upper level of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge also collapsed, killing one person.

"To the best of our knowledge, there are not likely any people alive up there," Mayor Lionel Wilson said earlier Wednesday as he looked up to where the top level had pancaked onto the lower deck of one of the Bay Area's busiest highways.

Search crews using trained dogs tried to find victims, but the effort was abandoned before the day's end.

The quake, the second deadliest in U.S. history, caused at least $1 billion in damage, prompting President Bush to quickly grant California's request for federal disaster aid.

Effect of San Francisco quake will not be felt in regional area

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

The earthquake that shook San Francisco shouldn't have any effect on the New Madrid fault zone that extends into Southern Illinois, John Sexton, associate professor of geophysics in the SIUC Geology Department said.

The New Madrid fault zone runs from northern Arkansas through southeast Missouri into Southern Illinois, he said.

"I would say the chance of a quake like the one that occurred Tuesday in San Francisco occurring here is something like 10 percent over the next 50 years," Sexton said.

If an earthquake of 6 or 7 magnitude on the Richter scale were to occur in Southern Illinois, there would be some major damage to a lot of structures, particularly those that haven't been reinforced or built up to earthquake standards, Sexton said. Tuesday's quake in the San Francisco area measured 6.9 on the Richter scale.

The Richter scale is a gauge that measures energy released during an earthquake by measuring ground motion recorded on seismographs.

The New Madrid fault zone produced the largest earthquake in the U.S. in 1811 and it continues to be active with smaller earthquakes, Sexton said. That quake was estimated at 8.6 to 8.8 on the Richter scale.

Three earthquakes that occurred in the New Madrid fault zone in 1811 and 1812 rank among the top five earthquakes in the nation's history, according to Robert Herrmann, professor of geophysics at St. Louis University's Department of Earth and Atmospheric Sciences.

If an earthquake of the same magnitude as San Francisco were to hit Southern Illinois, the damage could be worse because buildings in San Francisco have to meet certain earthquake standards, while here they do not, Herrmann said. This section of the nation also has a ground make-up that carries shock waves farther than in California, he said.

A magnitude 6 earthquake, which is smaller than the earthquake in San Francisco, should happen here about every 100 years or so," Herrmann said.

Sexton said, however, that the return period for a magnitude 6 earthquake could be as short as 30 to 40 years in this area.

Earthquakes less than magnitude 5 have a return period of about three and a half to five years, while magnitude 7 earthquakes, like the one that hit San Francisco, have a return period of 200 to 500 years, Sexton said.

Sexton noted that although there is a chance that San Francisco could have another large earthquake, it's more typical to expect a number of smaller aftershocks over the next few weeks or months.

"Since 1980 there have been three or four earthquakes in the Bay area that have shaken things up several times, (however) this has been the largest one in the extent of damage," Herrmann said.

Persons who are concerned about friends or family in San Francisco and are unable to contact them can do so through the SIUC Amateur Radio Club, according to Roban Hanus, club president. Only information about health and welfare can be given, he said.

Court hears tape-recorded interview of former SIUC student

By Doug Powell
Staff Writer

Veronica April, former SIUC student charged with first degree murder for the death of her newborn baby, sat motionless for three hours in Jackson County Court Wednesday while the prosecution and defense listened to testimony during the first day of her bench trial.

A quiet courtroom, with Circuit Judge David W. Watt presiding, listened to a tape-recorded interview April gave Aug. 4, 1988, to two Carbondale Police officers.

The interview revealed April gave birth to a baby on April 7, 1988, at 304 W. Hester St., where she was living at the time. She said in the interview she sat on a toilet until the baby was born.

"I stood up, looked and saw the baby move a little and I sat back down," she said in the taped interview. "I sat down for a long time, till I didn't see it move for a long time."

During the interview, April said 30 minutes after the baby was born, she picked it out of the toilet, went to the kitchen, cut the cord and wrapped it in a blanket.

She said she put the baby in a black purse and kept it for a week on her bed inside the purse. She said she would take it out and look at it once in awhile.

On May 15, 1988, seven days after April alleges her baby was born, a dead baby was found in a black purse inside a trash bin behind 304 E. Hester St.

A summer-long investigation by the Carbondale Police Department led to April's arrest in October 1988 at her home in Joliet.

Hartigan, officials try to settle abortion issue

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Both sides of an Illinois abortion controversy want to settle even if it's not with Attorney General Neil Hartigan.

Hartigan met Monday with officials representing both parties in a dispute over Illinois regulations of abortion clinics that is scheduled to be argued before the U.S. Supreme Court Dec. 5.

"We are trying to find a solution that both sides can live with," Penny Strong, spokeswoman for the Illinois Department of Public Health, said.

Hartigan is defending Health Department Director Bernard Turnock against a challenge by Dr. Richard Ragsdale of Rockford on Illinois rules regarding out-patient abortion clinics.

"The regulations are excessive and do nothing to preserve the health or safety of abortions," American Civil Liberties Union spokeswoman Gwen Osborne said.

Osborne said the regulations do nothing to monitor the skills of the physician performing the abortion, which she said is the most important aspect.

ACLU attorney Colleen Connell has represented Ragsdale since 1985.

Osborne said the meeting with Hartigan is a good idea because the attorney general is trying to find common ground for the two sides.

The ACLU's goal, she said, is to either resolve the case with Hartigan and make sure there is access to abortions in Illinois, or have the Supreme Court uphold the decisions made by the lower courts.

But Kathleen McCusker, Illinois Federation of Life president, said Hartigan's role in the issue should be to uphold state regulations, not change them.

"If he wants to settle the case

Hungary declares country a republic not dictatorship

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UPI) — Parliament adopted a new constitution Wednesday that declares Hungary a republic instead of a dictatorship, putting the Eastern European country ahead of other Soviet bloc satellites on the tortuous path to democracy. The amended document abandoned the hardline Soviet-style constitution that was adopted in 1949 and left no more than 10 percent of the original text untouched. It dropped the word "socialist," which is a common term in the communist world for communist countries. The departure from the Communist Party is another rung added to the democratic ladder.

Salvadoran peace talks move into 3rd day

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — Peace talks between the Salvadoran government and leftist guerrillas continued for an unscheduled third day Wednesday as mediators worked to break a deadlock and salvage the meeting. The peace talks between representatives of Salvadoran President Alfredo Cristiani's government and the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front nearly broke down Tuesday in disagreement over each side's separate proposals for a cease-fire in the nation's 10-year civil war. Costa Rican President Oscar Arias and Catholic mediators intervened and persuaded negotiators to focus on a less-sensitized political agreement.

Soviet physicians offer help quake victims

BOSTON (UPI) — Soviet physicians, who were aided by American equipment and staff after last year's Armenian earthquake, Wednesday offered whatever assistance they can provide to northern California's quake victims. The offer came in a telex to the offices of the International Physicians for Prevention of Nuclear War, a Soviet-American organization that won the 1985 Nobel Peace Prize and was very involved in shipping medical equipment to Armenia 10 months ago. "The natural disaster in the San Francisco Bay area which led to the tragic loss of human lives is a matter of great concern," Mikhail Kuzin said.

Florida's water table jugged by earthquake

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Florida, probably the most earthquake-free state in the United States, still felt the effects of the destructive earthquake in the San Francisco area, a state geologist said Wednesday. The water level of the Florida Aquifer System fluctuated 3 inches, said Ed Lane, a geologist with the Florida Geological Survey of the Department of Natural Resources. A water level recorder in a steel-cased well in the back parking lot of the Survey's office in Tallahassee recorded the sloshing Tuesday night, Lane said. The change was temporary, lasting only a few minutes and having no consequences for residents.

High radon level in 25 percent of homes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Elevated radon levels have been found in one of every four homes surveyed in 25 states, confirming initial suspicions that the radioactive gas poses a nationwide health threat, the EPA said Wednesday. In releasing new survey results on eight states, the EPA said it now has tested 37,313 homes across the country and found 26 percent have radon readings at or above four picocuries per liter of air — the agency's "action level."

State to receive $62 million more than expected in 1990

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — There will be $62 million more in the state's coffers this fiscal year than originally expected but not enough to counter the expected recession next year, according to a report released Wednesday. The Economic and Fiscal Commission report said general funds for 1990 should total $13.81 billion, an increase over the $13.75 billion originally predicted.

SIU-C prof heads world-wide council

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer
and United Press International

Lee C. Drickamer

SIU-C zoology professor Lee C. Drickamer has been elected to head the world's most prestigious organization of animal behaviorists.

Drickamer, 43, chairman of the University's Department of Zoology, begins a four-year term in 1991 as secretary general of the International Council of Ethologists.

He said he was elected in August during a meeting in Utrecht, The Netherlands, after being involved in the council for about ten years and serving as vice secretary general for eight years.

Drickamer said the council consists of ethologists, also called animal behaviorists, from 24 nations or regions. He said there are between 7,000 and 8,000 ethologists worldwide, 600 to 1,000 of which represent their countries at the council when it meets every two years.

"Ethology is one of the major branches of zoology. It involves the study of how any number of internal or external factors, ranging from biochemistry to neurobiology to ecology to evolution, affects an animal," Drickamer said. "These four areas help ethologists attempt to understand how an animal works and why."

He said his own research involves rodent behavior, emphasizing the factors affecting puberty, reproduction and, ultimately, population dynamics.

Drickamer said animal behavior is a relatively new field that did not become well recognized until the 1930s and was not taught in the classrooms until after World War II. He said early animal behaviorists used to generalize their findings on animals to humans.

"Today we can't apply what we learn to humans ... but it might serve to spark questions I could ask about humans," Drickamer said.

Drickamer said he hopes to increase the number of council members from Africa, Eastern Europe, Latin America and Southeast Asia during his tenure.

"Third World countries generally dispense money only for studies that will directly affect the nation's economy or health. Only by appreciating the animals in their region, and by setting up national academies for conservation and animal behavior studies, will they begin to solve human problems," Drickamer said.

He said many of the researchers from the Third World countries were trained and educated in western countries with ethology programs and the council will attempt to convince these people to represent their own countries.

"More and more researchers from ... North America, Western Europe and Japan have begun to work in Third World areas, and we hope they will also encounter local people who are also interested in ethology and would wish to represent their country at the council," Drickamer said.

Drickamer, who came to SIU-C in 1987, edits "Animal Behavior," a monthly journal.

Undergraduate art contest offered

By Carrie Pomeroy
Entertainment Editor

The Undergraduate art competition, sponsored by the Student Programming Council's Fine Arts Committee, will give student artists a chance to display their work and to vie for a partial tuition waiver.

Teresa Sherekis, fine arts chairwoman, said the competition is open to all undergraduate students and all media. Winning works will be displayed in an exhibit in the Student Center's Art Alley.

Works will be judged by Brent Kingston, director of the School of Art and Design, Richard Mawdsley, chairman of the metals department, and Ed Shay, chairman of the painting department.

Sherekis said SPC sponsored an undergraduate art competition last semester, but has tried to make this year's competition "more of a big deal."

She said she expects to attract more entries than last year's competition, which attracted fifty competitors.

"I think we're going to get more and better quality. I think that people will take it more seriously," she said.

Last year, the winners of the competition were awarded a $50 gift certificate from the University Bookstore. This year, the best-of-show winner will receive a partial tuition waiver donated by the School of Art and Design.

"They just happened to have some extra money in their budget," Sherekis said. She said the extra funds made the school receptive to SPC's proposal for a tuition waiver as the best-of-show prize.

Other winners will receive gift certificates from area businesses, Sherekis said.

"This is the only art show for undergraduates at this University," she said.

Entries will be accepted until Oct. 31 in the SPC office on the third floor of the Student Center.

Student memorial service to be held Friday

A memorial service for former SIU-C student Jason Jackson, who was killed Oct. 14, will be held from 5 to 6 p.m. Friday in the Student Center Auditorium.

Jackson, who was a senior in forestry, was killed after pursuing an armed robbery suspect outside Jeremiah's restaurant, where he was employed.

Funeral services for Jackson, 21, were held at 2 p.m. Oct. 17 in his hometown of Greenup. A wake was held from 5 to 9 p.m. Monday at Barkley's Funeral Home in Greenup.

USG President Tim Hildebrand said Campus Ministries will conduct the service.

Area should prepare for possible quake

THE NO. 2 position is often thought to be a good place to be because it is right after the No. 1 position.

However, this No. 2 position that the Midwest occupies isn't exactly a place that other regions are fighting to obtain.

The Midwest is America's second most active earthquake area, right behind California. Considering the calamity that has just taken place in the San Francisco Bay area, those of us in the Midwest should be well aware of the ground that rumbles beneath us.

There are four fault zones that cover Southern Illinois and Missouri. The New Madrid zone stretches from northeast Arkansas through Missouri and Southern Illinois. The Illinois Basin, stretches from St. Louis east to the Indiana border. The third fault zone is the area located in the Wabash River Valley and the fourth is located in Missouri's Ozarks.

A series of quakes in 1811 and 1812 that occurred across Missouri and Illinois had a great effect on the course of the Mississippi River. The quakes rank among the top five in the nation's history and were larger in magnitude than the famous 1906 San Francisco quake, Ken Taylor, St. Louis University researcher, said.

"THOSE QUAKES rang bells in Washington, D.C., and there are reports that every church steeple in St. Louis collapsed," Taylor said.

No one can tell when the next earthquake will take place in any region. However, John J. Sexton, associate professor of geology at the University, said that because of the distance between San Francisco and Southern Illinois, the recent earthquake will not spark problems in this region.

In the case of such natural disasters, one can never be too prepared. Many who live in the Midwest do not even realize that they are building their houses, office buildings, livelihoods and even their families on a fault line. To think that everything that one owns and takes for granted everyday could be lost in a few horrible seconds is frightening.

Especially in the Midwest — at least according to the rest of the nation — where the corn is high, families are large and life is simple; the threat of an earthquake seems impossible.

Well, it is not. It can happen, and if it does one must have emergency supplies and a good idea of how to act after the disaster.

THE FOLLOWING tips have been stated by the Federal Emergency Management Agency to help people prepare in case an earthquake takes place.

Before an earthquake has a chance to happen, everyone should check for potential fire risks by detecting electrical wiring and faulty gas connections. It is important because these are dangerous in the event of an earthquake. Also, knowing where and how to shut off electricity, gas and water at main switches and valves would be an aid in safety.

A flashlight and a battery powered radio should be on hand in case power is cut off and large and heavy objects should be placed on lower shelves. Bottled goods, glass, china and other breakables should likewise not be stored in high places or left where they can freely slide on shelves.

Overhead lighting fixtures such as chandeliers should be made fast and deep plaster cracks should be investigated and fixed because it could result in large pieces of plaster falling during an earthquake.

We are not trying to foresee the future and predict when the next earthquake could hit — it could be tomorrow or it could be in 100 years. We just suggest that everyone be prepared for such a disaster.

Truth-in-labelling law would force colleges to be honest with students

By Thomas Sowell

Colleges are complaining because Congress is considering a law to make them reveal how many of their athletes graduate. Actually it will reveal how few of their athletes graduate — which is why they don't like it.

Why they don't like it, the National Collegiate Athletic Association, are now saying that legislation is unnecessary. They say that they should be given a chance to put their own house in order. Who was stopping them from cleaning up their act, all these years, all these decades, all these generations?

The time is long overdue for the laws that apply to other people to apply to academia, including truth-in-labelling laws and anti-trust laws. The colleges' customers are primarily inexperienced young people.

Athletes are not the only people who need consumer protection laws when dealing with smooth-talking academic administrators. Colleges should also be forced to publish the rates at which their students are victims of crime and violence. Violent crimes are 10 times more common on some campuses than on others. Students and their parents deserve to know that before they make their choices.

They will never learn such unpleasant facts from reading the pretty brochures that colleges send out. In those brochures, college is just a happy wonderland of smiling students, friendly professors, and lovely scenery. Nothing as ugly as burglary, muggings, rape, and murder spoil this picture — though such things are much more common on some campuses than on others.

Some colleges are much more concerned with hushing up such crimes than with taking any steps to reduce them. With the rest of the world subject to full disclosure law and warning labels, why should colleges where students are unsafe be allowed to conceal that fact?

Some colleges congratulate themselves on their avant-garde attitudes and wide-open policies on sex. Many actively promote "the sexual revolution" in official literature (and condoms) routinely handed out to students during registration. It is by no means unknown for deans to make public statements supporting experimentation or for colleges to deliberately seek out homosexuals to act as resident advisors in student dormitories.

What is unusual — indeed, virtually non-existent — is for colleges to take responsibility for any of the consequences of this. "Date rape," pregnancies, and venerable disease are spoken of as things that just came out of nowhere, like lightning out of a clear blue sky. This will undoubtedly continue to be the official attitude, at least until courts of law allow students and parents to sue colleges for maintaining an atmosphere of sexual incitement.

In the meantime, however, a truth-in-labelling law can force colleges to reveal their rates of pregnancy, venerable diseases, and AIDS infection. Informed choice seems the least that parents and students deserve.

In recent years, as the lofty rhetoric of "diversity" has concealed the ugly reality of double standards and polarization, increasing numbers of colleges have imposed restrictions on free speech.

Truth-in-labelling laws should compel colleges to state in advance, to applicants and their parents, the specific grounds on which a student can be expelled from class or suspended or expelled from college. Before making large commitments of time and money, you at least deserve to know whether you are also expected to walk on eggshells and to take insults from others without replying.

Warning labels for colleges are long overdue.

Those who behave violently are accountable

An untimely death is tragic and often leaves us wondering "why?"

However, in response to Oct. 18 letters from Cowan and Dupuy, the person who fired the shot is the one to blame for the death of Jason Jackson.

When disaster singles out someone so similar to ourselves, we often end up blaming the victim in order to reassure ourselves that we could act differently and therefore control the outcome of such a disastrous situation.

By their letters, Cowan and Dupuy express their grief and a commendable desire to protect others.

Nonetheless, no matter how intensely anyone wishes to replay the past, it is extremely difficult to predict such violent behavior and it is those who behave so violently who must be held accountable. — Karen Yaple, graduate student, psychology.

Student should take initiative to plan projects

Karl Rademacher, an art festival, jazz, rock, or food fest, are great ideas!

So why not spend some time learning what you can do to get some of your ideas turned into reality.

It takes a lot of time and effort, creativity and persistence to successfully organize something, and in the process you'll be too busy to be bored.

Give the University and Carbondale a break, it was the irresponsibility of a few that ruined the Halloween festival.

If students like yourself had played a greater role in the planning and running of such an event, you'd see it ain't easy.

The vast majority of students that complain of nothing to do spend too much time complaining and not enough time doing something about it. — Jim Becker, graduate student, community development.

Bush quick to send aid for earthquake victims

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With a swiftness earlier seen as lacking, President Bush sent federal aid to earthquake-ravaged northern California Wednesday and promised to "take every step and make every effort to help the Bay Area."

"We're going to turn to the American people to help those in need," he said. "So far, I think from an organizational standpoint, people are moving in the right direction and we're going to follow it very, very closely from here."

Just more than 12 hours after the San Francisco Bay area was jolted by its worst killer quake in 80 years, Bush signed a disaster declaration that could clear the way for hundreds of millions of dollars in federal assistance.

Having taken political heat for a slow response to two other disasters — the Exxon oil spill and Hurricane Hugo — Bush cranked the federal machinery up to full speed, rushing civilian and military assistance to the area.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said $273 million of the $1.1 billion appropriated by Congress for cleanup efforts after Hugo would be available immediately for earthquake victims in California.

Within minutes of Tuesday's quake, White House officials began marshaling federal resources for an all-out response that included activation of a 2-year-old catastrophic earthquake response plan involving the Red Cross and 26 federal agencies.

Though it was too early to estimate the eventual cost, Fitzwater predicted it would far exceed the damage caused by Hugo, which struck the Carolina coast after hitting the U.S. Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

During a visit to headquarters of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, Bush was hopeful the quick response would lead to "less carping" than was heard after Hugo and complained that FEMA "took a bad hit" in that earlier case.

Fitzwater said Bush had received messages of sympathy from many foreign leaders, including Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, and general offers of aid from such earthquake-savvy nations as Japan and the Soviet Union.

Speaking to reporters at the White House, Bush said he wanted the people of the Bay area to know "that our hearts are with them as they face this terrible tragedy."

WSIU TV to broadcast quake show

By Katherine Lydon
Staff Writer

In response to the earthquake that shook northern California, WSIU Channel 8 will air a documentary, "Mid-America's Unsettled Earth," 8:30 p.m. Friday. The program focusing on earthquakes in Southern Illinois will be followed by an hour-long panel discussion at 9.

The documentary has an emphasis on Southern Illinois and what people in the area can do should an earthquake occur.

"The show gives folks in Southern Illinois as much information as we can about the potential for earth-quake locally and what they can do to prepare for that eventuality," Lee O'Brien, executive director of broadcasting service, said.

O'Brien stressed that people should be aware of the consequences of an earthquake and that one in this area "can have dramatic and devastating effects."

2,750 people were treated, with 250 still hospitalized Wednesday. The Red Cross said 5,000 people spent the night in 30 shelters set up between San Francisco and San Jose.

Shaken residents endured a day of chaos with transportation, communication and power facilities grudgingly resuming service.

Most of the 271 deaths attributed to the quake were the result of the 1-880 highway disaster, where between 150 and 200 vehicles were sandwiched between the collapsed cement decks. The Alameda County coroner's office asked local refrigeration firms to make space available for corpses.

One survivor of the 1-880 collapse was a 6-year-old boy who was freed after three hours of surgery to amputate a leg above the knee. He was identified only as John Doe.

Acting City Manager Craig Kocian, noting criticism that state transportation crews were slow in responding to the highway disaster, said the structure was "like a house of cards. If you move one part, the rest could tumble."

Kyle Nelson of the state Department of Transportation said the highway, built in the 1950s, had not been reinforced to withstand a strong earthquake. He said it would be closed indefinitely and repairs could take up to two years.

The 15-second quake, measured variously at 6.9 to 7.0 on the Richter scale, collapsed buildings throughout the area, sparked fires and postponed the third game of the World Series. Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent said Wednesday that the Series would resume no earlier than Oct. 24 in San Francisco.

A fire fed by a ruptured gas line in San Francisco's Marina district destroyed six buildings. Other blazes sprang up in Berkeley across the Bay.

About 1 million Pacific Gas & Electric Co. residential customers and tens of thousands of businesses were without power after the quake. By Wednesday, at least 150,000 homes and scores of office buildings, including the Pacific Stock Exchange, remained blacked out.

Utility officials said electricity to remote areas may not be restored for days, in part because of the threat of gas leaks.

A 15-block area of San Francisco's Marina district, a neighborhood built on landfill and sandy soil near the bay, was among the hardest hit.

"There may be as many as 30 buildings that have to be torn down," Fire Chief Frank Jordan said.

Carl Koon, a city emergency planning official, said about 1,500 people were provided shelter by the Red Cross, while others slept in parks or on the streets.

Asked when the situation would return to normal, Koon said: "For some people, months; for some people, years; for some people, never."

city.

Gov. James R. Thompson recently signed legislation allowing the city to formally establish a Carbondale Civic Center Authority to "investigate the feasibility of establishing a civic center in downtown Carbondale," Hoffner said.

A sub-group from Uptown Inc. discovered through research that Carbondale was in need of a civic center, Hoffner said last week.

The research was a key reason the city's administration asked Thompson to sign the bill, he said.

Once a feasibility study has determined whether or not there is a need for a civic center, the city will apply for money from the state government, Hoffner said.

A report from the city said the money would only be contributed to the civic center if additional state funding could be obtained.

"The state has traditionally given considerable amounts of money to cities to build the civic centers," Hoffner said. "However, there are a lot of areas wanting to build civic centers right now so the fund may be limited."

Four other areas in Illinois to receive a Civic Center Authority were Randolph County in Southern Illinois; Riverside and Matteson, suburbs of Chicago; Ottowa, in Northwest Illinois; and Illinois Valley, in Central Illinois.

stand was Carbondale Police detective Don Barrett, who conducted the tape-recorded interview with April.

Several former SIU-C students also took the stand, including the alleged father of April's baby, Wayne Butler.

Butler said April and he agreed

April would get an abortion over the 1988 Christmas break.

Toni Alamilla, a former student who now resides in Chicago, testified that she lived with April at the time the baby was found in the trash bin.

Alamilla said she asked April several times if she was pregnant and April always denied it.

Alamilla identified a picture of the black purse that police found the baby in as a purse that April had obtained from The Carnival shoe store in Carbondale.

The trial is to resume at 9:30 a.m. today at the Jackson County Court House in Murphysboro.

Gov. vetoes ban on use of fetal tissue

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — Anti-abortion forces vowed Wednesday to override a veto of a fetal tissue bill and blamed the media for recent setbacks in a rally on the Capitol steps.

Some 400 sign-waving demonstrators braved bitter cold for more than an hour to cheer, sing and listen to anti-abortion speeches before moving into the statehouse to lobby lawmakers.

Reps. Penny Pullen, R-Park Ridge, and Ron Stephens, R-Troy, urged the crowd to tell their legislators to vote against the governor's changes to a bill Stephens sponsored banning the use of fetal tissue for medical experimentation.

Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson let stand language that prohibited encouraging abortions to gain fetal tissue but vetoed a ban on its use, saying the tissue has helped lead to advances in research of Parkinson's disease, Alzheimer's disease and diabetes.

The House is expected to vote on the override motion this week.

"We need to tell Governor Thompson that we won't stand for little babies being killed so that their tissue can be used," Pullen said.

Pullen told the crowd the battle to restrict abortions has just begun in Illinois and urged supporters to lobby lawmakers "until they're sick of your face."

A motion to move an anti-abortion bill to the full House fell one vote short of approval Tuesday, virtually ending the possibility anti-abortion legislation will be considered during the General Assembly's fall veto session.

Speaking with a baby-sized white casket at his feet, Nicholas Stojakovich of the Illinois Pro-Life Coalition said the media has focused on the fight between pro- and anti-abortion forces instead of educating the public about the issue.

"You get the feeling that you're watching a report on rival gang fights in the inner city," Stojakovich said.

Joseph Scheidler, director of the Illinois Pro-Life Action League, denied speculation that recent setbacks have left the anti-abortion movement in disarray.

"The media have been trying desperately to put on a front that the abortionists are winning," Scheidler said. "We are going to and uphold regulations, fine," McCusker said. "His role as attorney general is to defend state law, not change it."

McCusker said Hartigan used the meeting "to advance his own political career in an unethical way."

Ernie Slottag, spokesman for Hartigan, said the attorney general is acting only in a lawyer-client relationship.

"Whether or not it is resolved, (the case) will end with some kind of rules for (abortion clinics), he said.

Strong said Turnock will make sure some standards are set to ensure the health and safety of women in Illinois.

Karen Mitchell, public policy coordinator for the National Abortion Rights Action League, said the league would like to see the issue settled out of court.

"If the case goes before the Supreme Court, it could totally dismantle Roe," she said.

Because of recent Supreme Court decisions slanting toward abortion restrictions, Mitchell said, the case would have a better chance if settled out of court.

A motion to move an anti-abortion bill to the full House fell one vote short of approval Tuesday.

go from one victory to another."

Pro-Life Coalition chairman Ralph Rivera dismissed abortion supporters as members of the "what's-in-it-for-me generation" whose lobbying efforts have been ineffective.

"They're too busy worrying about making money and deciding which day to take their vacations to come down here," Rivera said.

SIU-C POLICY STATEMENT ON AIDS

GENERAL POLICY

After careful study, the University AIDS Task Force has accepted the conclusions of the American College Health Association, that: Current knowledge...indicates that college and university students or employees with AIDS, ARC (AIDS Related Complex) or a positive HTLV-III antibody test do not pose a health risk to other students or employees in the usual academic or residential setting.

AIDS on the College Campus (1986)

The following policies are based on the current state of medical knowledge, and are subject to change as new information becomes available.

POLICY FOUNDATIONS

1. University decisions involving persons who suffer from AIDS shall be based on current and well-informed medical information.
2. Current prevailing medical authorities agree that AIDS is not communicated through casual contact but requires intimate sexual contact or an exchange of body fluids.
3. For the purpose of this policy statement, the term "AIDS" shall include AIDS, AIDS-Related Complex, and a positive test for Human Immunodeficiency Virus.
4. This policy should be reviewed periodically to ensure that it reflects the most current information available from both governmental and medical authorities.

NON-DISCRIMINATION

- (A) The University shall not discriminate in enrollment or employment against an individual with AIDS.
- (B) No one shall be denied access to campus activities or facilities solely on the ground that they suffer from AIDS.

CONFIDENTIALITY

- (A) The University shall comply with all pertinent statutes and regulations which protect the privacy and welfare of persons in the University community who suffer from AIDS as well as the welfare of others within the University community.
- (B) The University will maintain procedural safeguards throughout the University with the objective of protecting the privacy of persons living with AIDS.
- (C) All confidential medical information about an individual shall be handled in compliance with legal requirements and professional ethical standards.
- (D) The University will not disclose the identity of any student or employee who has AIDS, except as authorized by law or pursuant to guidelines following the general standards included in the American College Health Association's Recommended Standards and Practices for a College Health Program, fourth edition:
In general, it is recommended that no specific or detailed information concerning complaints or diagnosis be provided to faculty, administrators, or even parents, without the expressed written consent of the patient in each case.

UNIVERSITY RESPONSIBILITIES

- (A) The University shall develop and maintain a comprehensive educational program about AIDS.
- (B) The University shall identify sources of competent and confidential testing for AIDS as well as counseling services upon request.
- (C) The University shall identify sources of qualified medical care and encourage those with AIDS to utilize such sources.
- (D) The University shall adopt and implement safety guidelines as proposed by the U.S. Public Health Service for handling and disposing of blood and other body fluids.
- (E) Decisions in all situations involving students or employees with health problems are to be made on a case by case basis, based on the medical facts in each case and with concern for the confidentiality and best interests of all parties involved. The President, or his designee, shall identify the person(s) to be involved in each case.

Man charged with racial violence allegedly distributed bats to mob

NEW YORK (UPI) — A suspect in the racial killing of a black teen in Brooklyn handed out baseball bats to a white mob before they cornered the victim and shot him to death, prosecutors said Wednesday.

The new allegations against Charles Stressler, 21, came at his state Supreme Court arraignment at which he pleaded innocent to the indictment charging him with murder in the Aug. 23 death of Yusuf Hawkins, 16.

Hawkins was killed as he and three other black youths tried to flee a bat-wielding mob of whites in the Bensonhurst section. The attackers mistakenly believed the blacks were in the neighborhood to see a woman who had begun dating blacks and Hispanics.

Stressler looked stunned as Assistant District Attorney Bruce McIntyre asked that his $75,000 bail be revoked, a request rejected by Justice Thaddeus Owens, who continued the bail.

McIntyre said his request was prompted by additional information in grand jury minutes.

"We know now from a number of witnesses that this defendant was responsible for supplying 8 to 10 bats" for the attackers, McIntyre said.

The prosecutor told the judge the bat-wielding mob cut off Hawkins' escape route before he was shot by Joseph Fama. He said Stressler was a ringleader of the mob.

But Owens called the $75,000 bail "appropriate."

Owens has refused earlier requests to revoke bail for other defendants in the case but emphatically denied motions by defense attorneys to free Fama on a $2 million bail package.

Owens also explicitly warned Stressler to appear in court Nov. 13 for the next hearing in the case. He said a bench warrant would be issued if he does not show.

Shuttle lifts off with nuclear powered payload

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — The crew of the shuttle Atlantis, rising above the protests of environmentalists, rocketed into orbit Wednesday to fire the $1.4 billion nuclear-powered Galileo probe on a six-year voyage to Jupiter.

"Frank, it's an incredible ride!" shuttle skipper Donald Williams radioed mission control after Atlantis' picture-perfect blast-off at 11:54 p.m. CDT.

"You looked great," astronaut Frank Culbertson replied from mission control in Houston.

"Congratulations to all of you." Circling the globe every 90 minutes at an altitude of 184 miles, astronauts Shannon Lucid, 46, and Ellen Baker, 36, prepared to deploy the costly Galileo probe from Atlantis' 60-foot payload bay six hours and 21 minutes after blast-off.

"For your information, if you look out in the payload bay, Galileo looks absolutely super," Lucid told mission control.

The flight plan called for the probe's solid-fuel booster to fire at 8:15 p.m., an hour after release from the shuttle, to send Galileo off on a convoluted trajectory that will carry it once past Venus and twice past Earth for speed-boosting gravity-assist flybys before it heads off for a 1995 encounter with Jupiter.

Galileo, the most sophisticated interplanetary spacecraft ever built, was designed to explore Jupiter in unprecedented detail during a 22-month orbital tour, beaming back pictures 20 to 1,000 times better than the spectacular photos taken by the successful Voyager probes in 1979.

"We're all extremely pleased to finally get this one up," Galileo project scientist Torrence Johnson said after Atlantis' pyrotechnic liftoff. "The payoff from this, we'll be realizing for years."

After Galileo's deployment, Lucid, Baker, Williams, 47, copilot Michael McCulley, 46, and flight engineer Franklin Chang-Diaz, 39, plan to conduct a variety of experiments during the remainder of their five-day mission.

If all goes well, Williams and McCulley will guide Atlantis to a landing at 2:39 CDT Monday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

The 4.5-million-pound rocket-ship thundered to life at 11:54 p.m. CDT and majestically vaulted skyward to kick off the fourth shuttle flight this year, the sixth since the Challenger disaster.

Liftoff came six days later than planned because of bad weather at an emergency landing site in Africa, but early concern about clouds and rain over the Kennedy Space Center evaporated as the countdown ticked into its final stages.

Roaring with power, the $2 billion spaceplane streaked through a deep blue sky atop twin pillars of flame, thrilling thousands of spectators as the booming thunder of the ship's two 14-story solid-fuel boosters crackled over the launch site.

The ground-shaking liftoff followed weeks of protests by anti-nuclear activists who claimed Galileo's twin atomic power packs could crack open in the event of a launch disaster, releasing a cloud of radioactive fallout that would put thousands of area residents at risk.

"We gave it our best shot. We thought the launch was dangerous. So far there has been no accident and we're happy for that," said Rick Emrich, a spokesman for the Christic Institute, one of the groups that went to court to ground Galileo.

But NASA officials said a $50 million test program proved the generators were safe to launch.

NASA recruiter praises SIU grads, wants more

By Brian Gross
Staff Writer

Working on the launch operations of the Space Shuttle at Kennedy Space Center in Florida's 72-degree, year-round weather was an opportunity offered SIU-C engineering students Tuesday.

NASA representative Richard Uhrmann, director of the Kennedy Space Center's personnel office, visited the campus Tuesday to interview applicants graduating in December and May for recruitment into NASA. The center has hired 15 to 20 SIU engineering majors since 1983, Uhrmann said.

"SIU employees have done very well with us," Uhrmann said. "One of the reasons our SIU employees work out well is that we feel they have both academic qualifications and practical work experience, which gives them the balanced qualifications we look for."

Thomas Hoffman, one of the first SIU graduates hired by NASA, has moved up to a senior systems engineering position in the guidance, digital and software division and is getting digital systems expertise, Uhrmann said.

"Most of the people we hire do go into the shuttle operations area," he said.

NASA is looking at nine shuttle launchings next year, Uhrmann said, and after much work on perfecting the solid rocket boosters, shuttle launchings will be back on a regular schedule.

"We're looking for candidates who not only have academic preparation but who also are good communicators," Uhrmann said. "It's in the nature of our work. They're part of a big team at Kennedy. (Teamwork) is essential to being efficient in getting the job done there."

Women and minorities also are part of the team, Uhrmann said, stressing NASA's equal opportunity employer status. Of the 1,400 engineers at Kennedy Space Center 180 are minority and 180 are female, Uhrmann said.

"That's a pretty good size composition," Uhrmann said. "We strive to be an employee of choice. We're very interested in minority and female candidates as well as others."

"NASA has been very happy with the type of engineering majors that have come from SIU," Mike Murray, University placement adviser for engineering students, said.

Uhrmann said Murray has a very good relationship with the Kennedy Space Center.

"He works very closely with Kennedy Space Center to help us get good candidates from SIU," Uhrmann said, "but credit goes to SIU students, who pave the way and provide opportunities for other candidates."

Travolta's performance surprising in new movie

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Despite the way it's been advertised, "Look Who's Talking" is not a straight comedy about a baby's perspective on the world.

What it resembles more is a "guy-meets-gal-and-becomes-friends-until-they-fall-in-love" movie with a twist to it, but it's a good film anyway.

Kirstie Alley stars as a woman who gets pregnant by a married man she is having an affair with, played by George Segal. John Travolta is the cab driver who takes Alley to the hospital when she goes into labor and eventually becomes her friend. Alley must then decide whether to try to stay with the father of her baby (which is tough to do, as Segal is scum) or to start a relationship with Travolta.

This film takes a different turn because, almost from the point of conception, Alley's baby communicates his thoughts to the audience with Bruce Willis' voice. Combining the baby's actions, like sucking Travolta's thumb and trying to powder himself while his diapers are being changed, with Willis' voice makes for some very funny moments.

The movie focuses on Alley's attempts to find a suitable father for her son, Mikey. While this could be a serious subject, or the source of the movie's humor by itself, the majority of the laughs come from Mikey or from others' interaction with Mikey.

The humor is almost always present, from Mikey's observations about his new life to Travolta's babysitting techniques to Alley's dates with potential fathers to Alley's conversations with her mother (played by Olympia Dukakis) about marriage. A strong element of the film is that the jokes don't build up to a big payoff at the end. The mood of the movie is light without going overboard on comedy.

Another bright point of the movie is (make sure you're sitting down) John Travolta's performance. It sounds strange, mainly because he's made a number of bad films, like "Staying Alive" and "Perfect", and his one good movie, "Saturday Night Fever," represents disco music and wide collars and all sorts of things that people today love to hate.

Not everything in the movie works as well. There are not one but two "car chase" scenes in the film that seem out of place.

"Look Who's Talking" mixes the "talking baby/talking animal" movie formula with the "guy-meets-gal" movie formula and creates a cute little film. Aided by the technical wizardry of Harvey Fedor, this movie is light and funny.

Prize winner: Journalism is self-taught

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

A Pulitzer-Prize winning journalist who began his career as a janitor told University students Tuesday they would have to teach themselves "the craft of journalism."

"You're all in college and you're learning a lot in your various classes, but journalism is a self-taught art," Dennis Bell, a reporter with the Washington Bureau of New York Newsday, told the crowd gathered to hear him speak in Lawson Hall. "I can't inspire anyone. If you don't have that fire in your belly, there's nothing I or anyone else can do for you."

Invited by the School of Journalism and the Society for Professional Journalists, Bell answered students' questions, met one-on-one with several students and spoke at length about the journalism field during his two-day stay on campus. He cautioned aspiring journalists against becoming "laundrylist reporters," who ask for a list of assignments and cover these superficially with "reactive reporting."

"You've got to dig beneath the surface. Don't just print 'The President said today.' Find out what he had to say yesterday and the day before and the day before that when you do the story," Bell said.

He discussed several stories he has worked on, including the Meese-Webtech scandal and the 1984 series on the African famine for which he was awarded the Pulitzer Prize.

Bell and two colleagues spent three months on location in six African countries conducting an in-depth investigation before writing "Africa, The Desperate Continent."

"Journalists tend to be a hard, cynical lot who can joke about the assignment at the end of the day, but this was the first time I've ever seen silent journalists with tears in their eyes," he said.

Bell also told students "any experience is good experience." After his stint as a janitor, he worked for about four years in Newsday's composing room and a year as an editorial assistant in its sports department before being promoted to staff reporter in 1978.

Bell, who had one year of college prior to working for Newsday, said journalism is learned by observation and experience, not from textbooks.

"It's always a sink or swim proposition. You can have all the guidance you want, but in the end, it's your name on the top of that copy," Bell said.

SPJ faculty adviser Robert Spellman said guest lecturers such as Bell give students a feel for latest developments in journalism.

Soviet microsurgions visit to share ongoing research

By Irene Oplow
Staff Writer

Six of the top microsurgions from the Soviet Union will exchange medical information with the faculty at the SIU School of Medicine in Springfield Thursday and Friday.

This is one of the first such cooperative medical programs between the two nations and could lead to an ongoing exchange, Robert Russell, professor of plastic and reconstructive surgery at the School of Medicine, said.

The microsurgery center at the SIU School of Medicine has been in existence for about 12 years and has become well known internationally, Nancy Zimmers, director of public affairs, said.

The Soviets also will share innovative uses for hyperbaric oxygen, a technique where a person is put in a large container which is sealed and filled with 100 percent oxygen. Zimmers said the process causes some unique things to happen since the body regenerates more quickly in the pure oxygen environment.

The program is the first between the two nations and could lead to an ongoing exchange.

Hyperbaric oxygen could be used in obstetric deliveries and treating bone infections, Zimmer said.

The Soviets will also share their information on the new Ilizarov fixation device. The device is used to stretch a bone microscopically over a long period of time and can be used for people who lose part of a bone from an accident or from birth defect, Zimmer said.

The Soviet group is headed by Dr. Nikolai Milanov, professor and doctor of medical science and department head of microsurgery of the All Union Center of Surgery of the Academy of Sciences of the USSR in Moscow.

Other physicians in the group come from the Kirov Military Medical Academy in Leningrad, and the Tadzhikistan State Medical Institute in Dushanbe.

The Soviets will tour special facilities at SIU and Memorial Medical Center, including the electron microscopy laboratory, biomedical communications, the skin culture laboratory, the hyperbaric oxygen unit and the bion unit.

United Nations Association leader to talk about roles of U.S., Moscow

By Irene Oplow
Staff Writer
and University News Service

Ed Luck, national president of the United Nations Association, will be the guest speaker at a potluck dinner at 7:30 tonight at the First Presbyterian Church to discuss the roles of the United States and Moscow in the United Nations.

The dinner is sponsored by United Nations of Southern Illinois.

Luck, a 1966 graduate of SIUC's University High School, recently returned from Moscow and will discuss "Moscow, Washington and the United Nations: Our Common Future."

Luck has broad-ranging interest in the United Nations, according to Emil Spees, associate professor in educational administration and higher education.

Luck has written extensively on arms control, national security policy in the United States, Soviet foreign policy and the United Nations.

He has worked at the United Nations Association since 1974, supervising research projects on the Soviet Union, Japan and China. Although United Nations Day is Oct. 24, the Carbondale chapter has scheduled the meeting early to accommodate Luck's schedule.

The United Nations Association is an international organization designed to bring the concerns and discussion of the United Nations to local communities.

The local chapter of the United Nations Association was one of the first founded, according to Spees.

Founded in 1951, the local chapter has been met with varying degrees of interest, Frank Klingberg, emeritus professor and founding member of the local chapter, said.

"Beginning in 1957, the Southern Illinois chapter had a model U.N., which continued for 17 years," Klingberg said.

The model United Nations is a program where teams of students accept a given country, do research on it and act as delegates, taking the position of their given country.

Students lost interest in the U.N. Association in the mid-70s, during the Vietnam War, Klingberg said.

The model United Nations in Southern Illinois was brought together again from 1980 to 1986, Klingberg said.

"Though there is currently no model United Nations in the Southern Illinois chapter, Klingberg said the United States is more involved in international affairs and there should be a renewed interest in the United Nations.

"The United Nations has become more important now that the Soviet Union has opened up. It is a hopeful time," Klingberg said.

The talk is open to the public. A $3 donation is requested for the potluck dinner.

Walkathon to help the homeless in United States and El Salvador

By Irene Oplow
Staff Writer

A 10-kilometer walkathon Sunday will benefit the homeless in Southern Illinois and El Salvador, E.G. Hughes, walkathon coordinator, said.

Entitled Steps to Freedom/Walk For Humanity, the walkathon links foreign and domestic issues to help people understand that U.S. policy creates homelessness both at home and abroad, George Ann Hartzog, member of Southern Illinois Latin American Solidarity Committee, said.

The event is part of the nationwide march held by the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador.

The local walkathon has been scheduled for the day after the University's homecoming celebration because "there is no place like home, unless you have no home," Hughes said.

SILASC, which organized the walkathon, is a campus-community group and Registered Student Organization which arose in protest of the Reagan Administration's actions toward El Salvador about a decade ago, Hughes said.

The purpose of the march is to educate people about the homeless in Central America, particularly in El Salvador and in the United States. Another purpose of the organization is to provide humanitarian aid to the homeless.

Hughes, a disabled Vietnam Veteran, said many of the problems in Central America are a direct consequence of U.S. foreign policy. Support for these policies allows the government to continue to wage this war.

Nearly one third of the people in El Salvador are refugees, according to Hughes, and the United States provides the Salvadoran government with nearly $1.5 million a day to wage its war, money which Hughes says would be better spent on the homeless.

Half of the money earned from the walkathon Sunday will go to New El Salvador Today, a group which provides food and shelter to refugees made homeless by the war in El Salvador.

This money will fund the work of the National Unity of Salvadoran Workers, El Salvador's largest coalition of labor, agricultural and community organizations, according to a SILASC leaflet.

The rest of the money goes to the Good Samaritan House, which serves the homeless of Southern Illinois.

Last year, the Good Samaritan House provided shelter for 325 homeless people, according to Elsie Speck, director of the house.

The walkathon also will be supported by the Newman Center, the Church of the Good Shepherd, and the University Christian Ministries.

The walk will begin at 2 p.m. at the Interfaith Center and will conclude with a bowl of soup at the Good Samaritan House, 701 S. Marion.

Homecoming's top 10 vie for king and queen titles

By Carrie Pomeroy
Entertainment Editor

The candidates for Homecoming King and Queen have one thing in common—they all want to win. This year's candidates are as diverse as the areas they represent.

Brush Towers University Park, Thompson Point, the Inter-Greek Council and Off-Campus are all represented. Elections for King and Queen, which began Wednesday, will continue today from 12 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the Student Center.

The 1989 Homecoming King and Queen will be named during the half-time show of Saturday's SIU-C and Southwest Missouri State football game.

Greek representatives are Shannon Taylor, a member of Alpha Gamma Delta, and Chad Tuneberg, a member of Pi Kappa Alpha.

Taylor, a junior in radio-television sales from Clinton, has been active on the Women's Softball Team and in charity organizations such as the March of Dimes and Special Olympics.

Tuneberg, a sophomore in marketing, participates in intramural athletics and the Weightlifting Club. He is from Rockford.

"The people here are great, better than I've seen at any other college campus I've been to, and I'd feel proud knowing that wherever I go I'm representing the people and students of this University," he wrote in his nominee's statement.

Freshman Michelle Abramowicz and senior Brian Lintner represent University Park.

Abramowicz, an undecided major from Crestwood, enjoys dancing, aerobics and badminton.

Lintner, a product design major from Frankfort, is a Resident Assistant in Boomer II and fills his free time by playing guitar, singing and skiing.

Thompson Point representatives are Rachel Coston, a junior in journalism and James "Shannon" Benson, a sophomore in radiology technology.

Coston serves as Resident Assistant in Baldwin Hall and participates in the Benson, whose extracurricular activities include modelling, playing guitar, basketball, racquetball and skiing, is from Shelbyville. Elected Homecoming King at his high school, Benson said he "feels school spirit begins with the individual."

The Brush Towers candidates are Penny Felton and Dan Martino.

Felton, a sophomore in pre-business, is from Alton. She has been on the Dean's List and participates in the Black Affairs Council and Undergraduate Student Government.

Martino, a freshman in pre-med/biology from Blue Island, is a floor representative to the Schneider Hall council and was involved in his high school's symphony orchestra and Students Against Drunk Driving.

Off-campus candidates are Brad Clark, a freshman in education and Candice Stark, a freshman in accounting.

Clark, who comes from Western Springs, participates in the Climbing Club and the Volleyball Club.

Former queen recalls Homecoming of 1948

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

It's been more than 40 years, but Erma Douglas Turner says she remembers her reign as SIU-C Homecoming Queen like it was yesterday.

"I loved Carbondale and it was very exciting for me to be elected homecoming queen. I never, ever dreamed it would happen," she said.

The year was 1948. World War II had been over for a few short years, Truman had been elected President and the Cleveland Indians had won the World Series four games to two over the Boston Braves.

SIU-C, like many other educational institutions at the time, had experienced an enrollment boom at the end of the war. When Turner first came to the University in 1944, there were about 900 students on campus, but enrollment had shot up over 3,000 by the time she had graduated.

Erma Douglas was then a senior from Dongola majoring in kindergarten and primary education. She represented Anthony Hall, which was a women's dormitory, in the queen contest.

"It was the first time an independent candidate had won. Up until that time, the independents hadn't been too strong in the contests. Only the girls with the organizations behind them usually won," she said.

Eight candidates entered the highly competitive queen race that year, Turner said, and the entire student body was "very enthusiastic about the whole thing."

The front page of the homecoming edition of the weekly campus paper, the Egyptian, reported that "for literally months, every student on campus has been made homecoming conscious. Everywhere signs and articles blossomed forth proclaiming the 1948 homecoming the greatest and biggest in the school's history."

A contributing factor to the enthusiasm was record enrollment figures. SIU-C, like many other educational institutions at the time, had experienced an enrollment boom at the end of the war.

"Suddenly, you had all these people coming back from the war. The campus was flooded with them," she said.

Campaigning for the queen election had been underway all semester. Signs and banners spread all over campus by zealous campaign workers portraying "the beauty and queenly traits of the candidates," the Egyptian reported.

"Never before has such poetic and artistic talent been on display on this campus," reporter Phyllis Lee wrote.

Homecoming week kicked off with pep rallies and last-minute pitches for each candidate by the Greeks and the independent organizations.

On Tuesday, the Egyptian noted everyone was strongly urged to vote. "In fact, everyone was practically pushed to the polls."

Tuesday night's bonfire officially opened the homecoming festivities. The Egyptian reported the freshmen, who had been forced to wear identifying green ribbons to denote their lowly status, "sang, shouted and snake-danced" on campus before going to the bonfire to torch the hated ribbons.

Another pep rally was held after the bonfire. University President Delyte W. Morris, the namesake of Morris Library, spoke and school spirit was noted to be at an all-time high.

"In fact, a cheer had not died away until someone would begin another one, even if it was only 'eat hot dogs,'" the Egyptian commented.

Friday morning an all-school assembly was held. The school's football team, the Maroons (the Saluki hadn't been adopted as the mascot yet) was introduced and a few pointers were given on the homecoming adventures, Western Illinois University's literary sketches.

A free movie, "Linda, Be Good," was shown Friday afternoon and everybody

SIU-C alumni take care of University's two Salukis

By Tim Crosby
Staff Writer

"You haven't lived until you've seen them run."

With this kind of love and admiration, SIU-C alumni John and Linda Saunders care for the University's two Saluki mascots Khalid and Thunder.

"They are just beautifully regal dogs," John, a former track athlete at SIU-C, said. "They are very independent and aloof."

The Saunders have been raising Salukis at their home in Chester for the past four years and have four dogs of their own, including a dual champion male dog, Shubaka.

"Saluki breeders, to their credit, have maintained the function of the dog instead of trying to improve them," Saunders said. "They're hunters, and for one to run from here to Steelville (about 14 miles) would not be unusual."

The Saunders volunteered to care for Khalid and Thunder in 1987 after they observed one of the dogs limping at a football game and after visiting the University kennels where the dogs were being kept.

"The dogs weren't being abused, but they weren't receiving quality care," Mrs. Saunders, who received a degree in special education at SIU-C, said. "They needed to be bathed and groomed and one's toenails had grown clear up underneath his foot."

Khalid, the oldest of the two mascots, turned 13 on Sept. 14. Thunder is about 12 years old. The Saunders said this is unusual for a Saluki.

"Anything over 10 years old is a plus," Saunders said. "We didn't expect Khalid to make it this far."

However, Saunders said he was concerned about Khalid's recent drop in weight.

"That's got me worried. He's the last one of his litter and all his littermates have died of cancer," he explained, adding that Khalid has several suspicious lumps on his body.

Salukis are probably the oldest pure-bred dog in the world. Some scholars say that every reference to a dog in the bible refers to a Saluki.

Salukis are gazehounds, that is they hunt by sight. They are also known for their agility and speed, which can reach 40 miles per hour.

"They run with a double-suspension gait—like a deer runs," Saunders explained. "This means all four feet are off the ground at the same time during its stride."

The Saluki was chosen as the SIU-C mascot in 1951, after the student body indicated it wanted a change from the old team name, the Maroons.

It took nearly two years for the school to acquire its first Saluki, King Tut. Three other dogs, including Khalid and Thunder, were later donated. The third dog, Bandit, had to be put to sleep in 1986 after developing a congested heart. It was soon after that the Saunders volunteered to care for the dogs.

Mrs. Saunders said the University pays for the dog food and medical bills.

"They've been very good about paying bills. We've never submitted a bill that they haven't paid," she said.

"I know if I sent them a bill for heating, grooming and other supplies, they wouldn't hesitate to pay it," Saunders added. "I don't bill them for that, and I like the control that gives me."

"It's easier to adopt a child than it is to get a Saluki," Mrs. Saunders said. "The breeders want to make sure you can properly care for the dogs before they'll sell you one."

"They want to know you and what you want the dogs for," added Saunders. "They don't want you using the dogs to run a 'puppy factory', which is a breeders' term for an irresponsible breeder who breeds dogs only to make money."

"They want to make sure you will either improve or maintain the quality of the breed," he said.

Homecoming Parade will begin festivities

by Dale Walker
Staff Writer

Aunty Em, Aunty Em, it's a twister, it's a twister!

No, Dorothy, it's just the Homecoming parade. The theme this year is "There's no place like home," and there surely will be some imaginative floats Saturday when the parade begins at 9:30 a.m.

"Lions and Tigers and Bears, Oh my!" Yes, Dorothy, and probably a few Witch's Winged Monkeys and maybe a horse of a different color, or two.

There are 103 groups scheduled to appear in the parade and about 17 of those will have a float, according to the scheduled parade line-up.

"The floats are judged on creativity, theme and SIU spirit," Kris Fabian, Homecoming chairwoman of the Student Programming Council's student events committee, said. "There should be some good floats this year. There's a lot you can cover with this theme."

The largest turnout among the floats is from the fraternity and sorority organizations, Fabian said.

"The Greeks traditionally have won the top three spots," Fabian said, "because they're organized and they put a lot of time into floats."

Last year's winning float was designed by Alpha Tau Omega and Alpha Gamma Delta, Fabian said.

Four floats have been entered by groups that have never had a float in the Homecoming parade before, Fabian said. Among these new entrants is a float co-sponsored by the Student Alumni Council and the Alumni Association of SIU-C, Jay Hawkinson, Homecoming and Springfest chairman for the Student Alumni Council, said.

"It's (the float) a vehicle to show more people who we are," Hawkinson said. "We're going to have a lot of Wizard of Oz characters and maybe a rainbow, but we don't know for sure, because the float (is still being constructed)."

The parade precedes the Saluki Tailgate, which begins at 10:30 a.m. and lasts until the start of the football game at 1:30 p.m.

According to University News Service, Fabian thinks student interest in Homecoming will jump this year, thanks partly to "teasers." One of them will be an airborne delivery of the American Flag by a skydiver when the band plays the National Anthem before the football game Saturday.

According to the University News Service article, Fabian said she hopes the skydiver "will lead a lot of people from the tailgate area into the stadium."

What was considered to be superior competition. Although not coming away with any wins, the Salukis performed respectably against two teams ranked in the top 20 in Division I-AA. The Salukis lost to Murray State 24-12 and then fell to ASU. Two weeks ago it was Division I-A NIU that dropped the Dawgs.

Both the Salukis and Bears will enter Saturday's contest on losing streaks.

SMSU lost for the first time this season against unranked Western Kentucky 42-33.

The Bears were the 4th-ranked team in Division I-AA going into the game but fell to No. 8 with the loss.

The Salukis have lost their last four and have managed only one win in their last 12. That coming against Eastern Illinois.

The 21-17 loss to Illinois State last Saturday ruled out a chance at a winning season for the Salukis. A chance at a conference title and post season play also were greatly reduced.

Weekend celebration to involve everyone

Increased participation by students, alumni wanted by organizers

By Carrie Pomeroy
Entertainment Editor

Homecoming will feature a variety of events this weekend designed to try and involve everyone on campus.

This year's homecoming festivities, with the Wizard of Oz theme, "There's No Place Like Home," will include the traditional bonfire pep rally, parade, football game and king and queen coronation, to more unusual events such as a flag jump into McAndrew Stadium by the Saluki Skydivers.

Kris Fabian, campus events chairwoman for the Student Programming Council, said this year's events were chosen through evaluations of past homecomings.

"We go by what was done in the years before. USG gives us a budget and you see what you can do," she said.

She said some homecoming activities have been changed to help students feel more involved.

"Homecoming is as much for the alums as it is for the students, so in the past a lot of students haven't felt involved," she said.

Homecoming activities will kick off on Wednesday with Wizard of Oz characters making appearances all day on campus and in classrooms.

On Thursday, Mr. and Mrs. Saluki contestants will appear on campus and in classrooms. Fabian said SPC is "looking for hams" for the Mr. and Mrs. Saluki competition. Contestants, who will be screened by SPC, will have to wear dog ears to class and live up to the contest's motto, "If you're not fun, don't run."

"The Wizard of Oz" will be shown in the Student Center Auditorium at 7 and 9 p.m. Thursday. Admission is $1.

Friday's activities will start with a bonfire and athletic pep rally at the volleyball pit on Grand Ave. from 7 to 10 p.m. Fabian said the pep rally had been switched from its traditional location at the Arena to make the rally more accessible to students.

The rally will include a performance by the local band, The Reform. Mr. and Mrs. Saluki candidates will be called out of the audience to perform for the title, which will be awarded based on audience response.

Saturday's festivities include the homecoming reception from 8:30 to 9:15 a.m. in the Wabash-Vermillion Rooms at the Student Center. Fabian said the reception is for invited guests only and is primarily for visiting dignitaries.

Homecoming activities will kick off Wednesday with Wizard of Oz characters making appearances all day on campus and in classrooms. Mr. and Mrs. Saluki contestants will appear on campus Thursday wearing dog ears.

The homecoming parade starts at 9:30 a.m. and will include more than 1,600 marchers: from area high school bands and also floats, a gospel group, gymnastic tumblers and military divisions.

The tailgate in the free forum area will follow the parade at 11:30 a.m.

The football game at 1:30 p.m., which pits SIU-C against Southwest Missouri State University, will open with a flag jump into the stadium by the Saluki Skydivers.

The homecoming king and queen will be crowned at halftime.

donna their "glad rags" that evening to attend the homecoming dramatical production, "Kiss and Tell."

Saturday was game day, but the weather was not cooperating and the rain came pouring down. A few of the floats had to be removed from the noon-time parade because of the weather, but most of the activities continued as scheduled. The varsity-alumni field hockey game was turned into an impromptu basketball game and some of the other events were moved indoors.

Turner said the parade toured the campus, which at that time was limited to the Old Main Mall, Woody Hall, Anthony Hall, Parkinson Laboratory, Old Main, where Faner Hall now stands, a few outlying buildings, and part of the town.

"We went downtown and around the main sections of town, as I remember, coming back to campus past Old Main and back to the (McAndrew) stadium," she said.

The rain threatened to interrupt the football game several times, but the game finally came to a muddy, if disappointing, conclusion. After a fourth-quarter rally failed, the Maroons were defeated by the Leathernecks, 13-7.

Saturday night was the climax of the entire weekend. The Egyptian noted "the girls picked up their formals to keep them out of the mud and ran into the gym for the big dance."

"Everybody went to the dance. It didn't matter if you had a date or not. Just to see everybody, to be there, was the thrill," Turner said.

At 11 o'clock, Turner was crowned the 1948 Homecoming Queen by football captain John Corn. She was given a dozen roses and a crown Richard Kohler, instructor in the industrial education, had created especially for the event.

"It was really lovely. The Orren Tucker Orchestra played and we all had such a good time," she said.

The second section of the Egyptian's homecoming supplement summed it all up.

"...It's all over now, but the 1948 homecoming will be remembered as one of the best, even though it was one of the dampest."

'Organized' Alumni Band to perform

By Tony Mancuso
Staff Writer

Alumni band members may be disappointed if they show up expecting to play at the Homecoming Game and are turned away.

"I'm sure there are going to be some unhappy people on Saturday," Dan Phillips, assistant band director, said.

Phillips said the Alumni Band Group sent out registration forms in July to all alumni possible, but that many members could not be contacted. The people wishing to play were required to return the form, along with a $25 entrance fee, by Sept. 30.

Phillips said the fee was used to pay for the first ever Alumni Band Newsletter.

"We hope the band will eventually become a fund-raising organization, but right now we are just hoping to collect the entrance fee so we can pay for the newsletter," Phillips said.

"Unfortunately we don't know how many people would have signed up if they could have been contacted. We could only send forms to those students attending the university since 1965 and of those 134 no longer have an address on record where they can be reached," Phillips said.

He said students who graduated last year were also excluded from the mailing list because it takes Woody Hall six months to send the list of names to the SIU-C Alumni Association.

"We know there are a lot of people who would like to play. We will make every effort to fit latecomers in, but we cannot guarantee them a spot to march," Phillips said. "The reason it will be hard to fit them in is that we have pre-arranged a tentative chart of where everyone is supposed to march."

He said this is the first year the alumni band, which has existed for 76 years, has been so organized.

Salukis gear up for game against top-ranked Bears

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

First-year head coach Bob Smith came to SIU-C from the University of Illinois, where he said homecoming was originated. Throughout college football, homecoming weekend is a big football tradition, he said.

Parents, alumni and the student body all play a significant part in the homecoming game, Smith said.

"Playing before our alumni will add a little extra incentive for our players," Smith said. "We hope, more than anything, that our student body will be there to encourage the Salukis to play well."

Smith said the last two teams the Salukis faced on the road were well supported by their student body and he would like to see the same at SIU-C.

"At Arkansas State and Northern Illinois their fans helped them pull out victories," Smith said. Both ASU and NIU managed last second wins against the Salukis. ASU won 28-23 and NIU topped the Dawgs 29-24.

The Salukis will take on the Southwest Missouri State Bears at 1:30 p.m. at McAndrew Stadium Saturday for Smith's first homecoming opponent at the University.

Smith said he would like to make the homecoming game the best game of the year for the Salukis.

"We will try and put our best foot forward," Smith said. "And we might as well do it against the best. It will be an extra challenge with a little added emotion and preparation."

The Bears are one of the top ranked teams in Division I-AA and the best team in the Gateway Conference, Smith said.

The Bears will visit McAndrew with a record of 6-1, 4-0 in conference play, and Smith says they will "be licking their chops" looking at the Salukis record of 1-6, 1-2.

The Salukis will face yet another wishbone offense when the Bears hit town but

Smith is looking for the defense to rise to the occasion.

The defensive unit of the Salukis has had trouble in the past with the run-oriented offense. Both ASU and NIU ran the potent set.

Against ASU, the Saluki defense allowed 416 yards on the ground, while allowing 308 against NIU.

"They (SMSU) have a tremendous team and we are going to line up and play hard against them," Smith said.

Smith said playing the Bears will be another step toward the team's goal of competing better each week.

Since the season-opening 41-3 loss to Nevada-Reno, the Salukis have been able to move closer to their goal.

"We will try to put our best foot forward. And we might as well do it against the best."

—Bob Smith

The Salukis fell to Western Illinois 14-7 the following week in a game played during the course of two days because of extreme lightning and rain Sept. 9. Play was postponed after the Salukis took a quick 7-0 early in the first quarter before the foul weather moved in.

The following week the Salukis recorded their first win of the season at home in an emotional 20-17 victory over conference foe Eastern Illinois. The defense held the Panthers in check for most of the game allowing defensive back Scott Barber to preserve the victory when he tackled EIU's holder after a fumbled snap prevented the Panthers from making a game-tying field goal.

For the next three weeks the Dawgs expect

Nader blasts car companies for blocking laws for safety

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Large corporations have too much power in the political process, but grassroots efforts by citizens groups can make a difference, consumer advocate Ralph Nader said Wednesday.

Nader, co-author with William Taylor of "The Big Boys: Power and Position in American Business," made his remarks during a lecture at Graham Chapel on the campus of Washington University.

Nader cited auto safety as an example of how corporations can influence the lawmaking process in Washington, D.C.

Although automobile accidents are the fourth-leading cause of death in the United States and the first-leading cause of death among college-age people, Nader said, the auto companies do all they can to keep Congress from passing laws requiring them to install safety features in automobiles.

"Corporations have no business buying politicians," he said.

Nader said the recent passage of Proposition 103 in California, however, proved that grassroots efforts on the part of consumers can make a difference.

"Unless the public's expectations of the auto industries rises, we won't get any results," he said. "We can't wait for the companies to take it upon themselves to do anything."

Automotive safety is better today than it was in the 1960s and 1970s, Nader said.

"We went through a period of automotive pornography a couple of decades ago," he said. "Safety was sacrificed for luxury and style."

"Corporations have no business buying politicians."

—Ralph Nader

The automobile companies "hype" the public toward style and image, and sell the cars on that basis instead of selling cars on their safety merits, Nader said. Companies get around installing safety features in their cars because there is more of a demand for style than safety, he said.

"Consumers expect corporate power to produce a strong economy without ruining the environment or exploiting the consumer," Nader said. "But the power of corporations to abuse their power has increased."

"When we have a recession, safety standards are ignored to save money," he said. "(The corporations) get subsidies and bailouts. Environmental codes are violated. If the government steps in, they threaten to move to another country and set up shop there."

Nader said government more and more is expected to bail out large corporations and mismanaged financial institutions. As an example, Nader cited the bailouts of Chrysler and the savings and loan industry, which recently cost $156 billion.

"However, the money to prosecute those responsible for the mess has not yet been appropriated," he said. "But if you're a small business, you still have the freedom to go bankrupt."

Nader blames the Reagan era for the American attitude towards materialism and wealth.

"This decade has been unreal in the sense that it has been a trademark of selfishness," he said.

Newspaper distributes condoms to university

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI) — The student newspaper at Rutgers University distributed 17,000 condoms in its editions Wednesday as part of the paper's weeklong series on AIDS.

The condoms, donated by Safetex Corp. of Lyndhurst, were taped to an informational sheet provided by the school's health service and inserted into the copies of the Daily Targum, said Kelly Whiteside, the newspaper's editor-in-chief.

"The whole idea is to raise the consciousness of Rutgers students and educate them about AIDS," she said. "When the condom falls into their laps, they might think twice and read the stories."

The series of 15 articles have already laid out a detailed history of the fatal virus, the effects on an AIDS patient and the medical progression of the disease.

Wednesday's main story focused on preventing the spread of the virus and on the people who try to educate the Rutgers community about AIDS.

Scheduled to run later in the week are stories on the legal and ethical problems brought on by AIDS.

MPs guilty of stealing F-16 jet engines

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Two military security policemen pleaded guilty Wednesday in Utah federal court to stealing three F-16 jet engines worth $8 million from northern Utah's Hill Air Force Base.

The plea agreements call for the Air Force to discharge Airman 1st Class Brian David Roth, 22, Chesterland, Ohio, and Senior Airman Danny J. Stroud, 24, Newton, Kan., within 30 days.

In addition to the July 3 theft of the jet fighter engines, Roth pleaded guilty to four other counts of stealing military property, including $40,000 worth of aviation equipment and a half dozen bullet-proof vests.

In exchange, prosecutors said 17 additional counts of theft dating back to October 1987 against Roth will be dismissed at his Dec. 12 sentencing before U.S. District Judge David Sam.

Stroud, who had faced an additional count of helping Roth steal 16 computers worth more than $64,000 from the base four months ago, agreed to cooperate in the continuing investigation, including testifying before a federal grand jury and any trials.

Each charge carries a maximum penalty of up to 10 years in prison and a $250,000 fine, Sam said.

Stroud's 22-year-old wife, Kimberly, is scheduled to stand trial beginning Oct. 23 for allegedly aiding her husband and Roth in the theft of the engines that were immediately recovered.

The trio was arrested after the jet engines were sold for $300,000 to undercover FBI agents operating a military surplus store in Roy, Utah. Federal agents said they paid only a $10,000 deposit.

The FBI said the engine theft culminated a 2 1/2-year undercover operation investigating thefts from military bases in the West and Southwest.

U.S. Attorney for Utah Dee Benson said more than 100 people, 45 of whom worked at Hill, were involved in the thefts from the base about 35 miles north of Salt Lake

East German leader pressured to resign post

BERLIN (UPI) — Hard-line East German communist leader Eric. Honecker resigned Wednesday in the face of widespread demands for reforms and the exodus of nearly 60,000 citizens to freedom in the West.

Honecker was replaced by his hand-picked successor and another hard-liner, Egon Krenz, who nonetheless promised a "turning point" in the country's policies including easing travel restrictions and more press freedom.

But opposition officials and young people who gathered at an East Berlin church known as the center of pro-democracy protests said they expected only superficial reform from the man known best as Honecker's protégé.

There were reports Honecker was pressured to step down by reform-minded members of the communist party, and two other hard-line Politburo members were fired Wednesday by the Central Committee of the Socialist Unity Party of Germany, the East German communists' formal name.

A party statement announcing the developments did not say who would replace Information Secretary Joachim Hermann, 61, and Economic Secretary Guenter Mittag, 63.

Shortly after the Central Committee announced the switch at a special session, East German television quoted Krenz as saying he would enforce a declaration issued earlier by the Politburo calling for more liberties, including increased freedom to travel and a freer media.

"With today's session we shall introduce a turning point, in particular, we shall regain the political and ideological initiative," the government-run station quoted Krenz as saying.

The earlier party statement said Honecker, 77, asked the Central Committee to relieve him of his duties as party leader and head of government and replace him with Krenz, 52, the Politburo member in charge of security.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, who was rebuffed when he quietly urged Honecker to allow some reforms, sent a message congratulating Krenz on his selection. The Soviet news agency Tass said Gorbachev was convinced the new leader was "sensitive to the demands of the time" and could "find solutions to the complicated problems the country has encountered."

Hundreds of people gathered after the announcement at East Berlin's Ghetsemane Protestant Church, a meeting point for pro-democracy demonstrations, and said they expected little change from the new leader.

Barbel Bohley, a founder of the illegal New Forum pro-democracy movement, said she hoped Krenz would "make great efforts" to overcome public mistrust that arose because he ordered a crackdown on opponents in late 1987 and endorsed the Chinese crackdown on pro-democracy protests this year.

Honecker has been suffering from a gall-bladder ailment and recently had surgery that caused speculation he was suffering from cancer. "Because of my illness and after surgery, my health does not allow me to put in the strength and energy which the destiny of our party and people require today and in the future," Honecker told an extraordinary Central Committee meeting called after 10 days of protests and calls from some leading communists for reforms.

Soviet president recognizes new leader of East Germany

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev congratulated Egon Krenz on his selection Wednesday as head of the East German Communist Party but did not mention the resignation of Erich Honecker in a message sent to East Berlin.

Honecker, the 77-year-old hard-line East German leader, resigned and two Politburo members were fired earlier in the day amid increasing demands for Soviet-style reforms and a growing rift in the country's Communist Party.

"Soviet Communists highly appreciate fraternal ties with the (Communist) Party of East Germany," Gorbachev told Krenz. "The Soviet people are aware of the importance of interaction between the Soviet Union and the German Democratic Republic for the stability of the situation in Europe and for the cause of socialism and peace."

The official Tass news agency reported the leadership change in a brief dispatch from East Berlin and the evening "Vremya" television news program broadcast a more extensive report, showing a large photograph of a youthful-looking Krenz and providing details of his background.

The Tass and television reports did not include any editorial comment.

Krenz, 52, is also a hard-liner. Honecker was believed to have been grooming him for the leadership post for several years, but there was widespread speculation Wednesday that Honecker had been pressured to resign.

Honecker's attitude toward USSR fuels discontent among citizens

By United Press International

Erich Honecker, East Germany's head of state and Communist Party leader since 1971 and, before that, the man who secretly prepared the construction of the Berlin Wall, was long Moscow's most trusted satellite ruler.

But in the past few years, the hard-line leader did little to hide his dislike of the Soviet Union's reformist policies, and his attitude fueled widespread discontent and a massive exodus of East German citizens to the West.

He ruled his country along virtually neo-Stalinist lines, maintaining a strict, centrally planned economy and running one of the tightest dictatorships in the East Bloc.

As secretary of state in charge of state security, he carefully and secretly planned the Aug. 13, 1961, building of the 102-mile wall that cut Berlin in two.

A gregarious man who enjoys a drink and a joke, Honecker has been suffering for several years from an acute gall bladder ailment. Illness forced him to leave a key Warsaw Pact meeting ahead of schedule in July 1989.

Born Aug. 25, 1912, in Neunkirchen in what is today West Germany, Honecker was the third of six children of a coal miner, an official in the Communist Party of the economically depressed mining area.

He was a communist by conviction all his life. At the age of 10, he was the little drummer boy in the brass band of a communist children's organization in nearby Wierbelskirchen.

He eventually became such a promising functionary that he was chosen in 1930 for a year's course at the school for young communists in Moscow.

"My father explained to me in his simple way why the rich are rich and why the poor are poor," he wrote in his memoirs, "From My Life," published in 1980.

He lived his life according to this early education and, as a leading West Germany that culminated in the building of the wall.

Hand-picked by Ulbricht to be his successor, Honecker took over as head of state in 1971, continuing Ulbricht's policy of building up East Germany as a separate state.

He staunchly opposed any kind of unification between the two Germanys.

His policies led to a further cooling of relations with the Bonn government. But his September 1987 visit to West Germany, the first by an East German head of state, led to a slow détente. There was no commitment, however, to bringing down the Berlin Wall.

He was considered a master at gaining support for his aims in the Politburo, but his caution and fear of taking risks made him an inflexible man.

"If you speak very freely, you can make a lot of mistakes," he once said.

He allowed no opposition, cracking down on intellectuals who opposed him and expelling many of them, harshly criticizing Poland and Hungary for straying from orthodox communism.

In 1988 and 1989, his government banned a number of Soviet publications deemed too liberal.

Despite what Honecker considered his country's generous consumer policy and economic successes, East Germany has watched nearly 60,000 of its residents flee to freedom in the West in the past several months.

"My father explained to me in his simple way why the rich are rich and why the poor are poor."

communist in the early years of Nazi rule, was sentenced to 10 years in prison in 1937 for "planning high treason."

He escaped from the Brandenburg-Goerden prison near Berlin eight years later, but was returned after six weeks. He remained jailed until he was freed by the Red Army on April 27, 1945.

A protégé of East Germany's first head of state, Walter Ulbricht, Honecker was soon named secretary for youth in the new East German Communist Party's Central Committee.

He quickly rose through the ranks and he became a full Politburo member in 1958 when he was appointed secretary for state security and began a campaign for the strict segregation of East and

San Francisco's commuters stay away from city

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The 1.2 million commuters who every workday triple the city's population mostly stayed away Wednesday, heeding official pleas to leave the town open for emergency workers.

The city was virtually out of business. Large corporations were closed. Renowned restaurants were empty and the storied cable cars were still. Electricity slowly was restored as people tried to cope with the aftermath of the worst earthquake in 83 years.

Most commuters apparently heeded a plea by emergency officials for people to stay away from the stricken city.

Streets were deserted in the normally bustling financial district except for dozens of maintenance workers sweeping up the mountains of broken glass.

Federal and state employees not involved in rescue or rebuilding efforts were given the day off. All major office buildings and businesses appeared closed, as did restaurants.

Erwin Blood Bank, the city's main blood center near downtown, was packed Wednesday with dozens of donors.

People walking through downtown, still without power at mid-morning, wore wary but friendly smiles.

"Let's face it, it was inevitable, and we still chose to live here," said Ronald Golden, an attorney.

Golden said he lived in the Marina District, the hardest hit area of the city. His apartment building was relatively unscathed, but hundreds of his neighbors had to flee when buildings collapsed and fires destroyed a four-block area.

"I'm not moving, I like it here," Golden said.

Officials at the Steinhart Aquarium in Golden Gate Park said the massive glass tanks holding everything from sharks to goldfish survived the quake intact.

Police, fire and utility workers were assigned to 12-hour shifts. About 10,000 Army and Navy troops stationed in the Bay Area were ordered to report to their posts.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. said it was restoring electrical power slowly, neighborhood by neighborhood. No power was turned on until the possibility of gas leaks was eliminated.

"We want to avoid the possibility of another 1906 (fire)," a spokesman said.

Tuesday's 6.9 Richter scale tremor was the worst to hit the city since the 1906 quake and resulting fire that leveled much of the city.

Up to 1.2 million commuters flooded into San Francisco each business day, but traffic was light Wednesday with many routes into the city were still closed.

Aftershock rocks area Wednesday

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI) — The epicenter of an earthquake that virtually shut down San Francisco 60 miles to the north shook again early Wednesday with an aftershock that measured 4.5 on the Richter scale.

Two people were killed and a third was presumed killed Tuesday in Santa Cruz, about 10 miles southwest of the epicenter, three were killed in San Jose and one each in the smaller communities of Capitola and Watsonville.

Wednesday's aftershock, measuring 4.5 on the Richter scale, hit Santa Cruz at 3:25 a.m. There was no immediate word of additional damage or injuries.

Electricity and gas service were cut off throughout Santa Cruz County and residents were warned to boil their water for fear supplies may have been contaminated by broken sewer lines.

Tom Dickershaid of Santa Cruz said his family was trying to cope in the aftermath of the quake.

"We ate all our frozen food last night and like most Californians, I've got a hot tub," he said. "We filled it last week but we haven't put the chemicals in so that's our water supply. "Whenever anything else in my life has gone wrong, I always had the planet to cling to but what do you do when the planet's shaking?"

Two of those killed in the seaside community were crushed in the collapse of a number of stores at the historic Pacific Garden Mall in downtown. Officials said they feared additional victims were buried under the massive piles of brick and glass.

Rescuers employed dogs to help find bodies but by midnight Tuesday, only one woman had been pulled out alive.

Additionally, a 23-year-old coffee store employee was presumed dead after being buried beneath several feet of rubble.

Other fatalities in Santa Cruz County included a man who died on the way to a hospital after he was injured in the collapse of a Watsonville bakery and a man who died in Capitola when his car hit a horse on the highway. Also reported was the death of a man at a convalescent home from a heart attack possibly related to the stress of the quake.

Resident knew epicenter of quake was in hamlet before professionals

BONNY DOON, Calif., (SHNS) — The geese and the chickens and the horses all knew. So did Eloise Smith.

She was the first person to identify this tiny hamlet nine miles north of Santa Cruz as the epicenter of Tuesday's massive earthquake.

"We were sitting on the back deck," Smith said Wednesday, gesturing out the French doors of her rustic house in the coastal mountains.

"My sister had just arrived from North Carolina. We just dashed outdoors because I always believe in doing that during earthquakes."

That's when she realized it, hours before the National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., and other experts pinpointed her village as the epicenter.

"Our redwood grove was shaking as if a wind was blowing like I'd never seen. I could hear the mountains rumble all around, just like a circle. And I could feel the rumbling radiating out. I said to my husband, 'This is the epicenter.' He laughed at me, but the experts say I was right."

Most reports have identified the much larger town of Davenport (population 200), located on the beach three miles west at the bottom of the hill, as the quake's point of origin. That's because Bonny Doon, population somewhere under 100, is so small it's not on any maps. Nevertheless, it's in the precise spot identified by the seismographs.

"She said it with absolute assurance," said Smith's husband, Page, a historian who has just completed an eight-volume history of the United States. "I thought it was a ridiculous idea. But the whole place shook. The chickens began to run. The geese honked. The horses whinnied. And boy, did the redwoods shake! It seemed a bizarre notion, but I guess she was right."

Cleon Hayes, Mrs. Smith's sister, never doubted her word.

Just in from her home in Southern Pines, N.C., Hayes said she had only just finished cleaning up her beach house, which was damaged by Hurricane Hugo. "I go from disaster to disaster," she said.

Knowing she was at the epicenter was hardly a comfort to Smith. "I was terrified," she said. "You don't know if that's it or if the redwoods will fall or how long it will go on. You don't know if the ground will open up."

But to look at Bonny Doon on Wednesday, you would never guess that it had just been at the heart of a destructive maelstrom.

The chickens were clucking, the geese were softly honking and the horses were grazing. A few boulders cluttered the narrow road up from the beach, but damage to houses appeared minimal.

"Nothing happened to my place," said Sam Agnew, a night custodian at the University of California's Santa Cruz campus. "My wife stood in the doorway with the baby and just waited until it ended. She wondered why the cows and geese were so loud."

Senate ready to defeat flag desecration proposal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vietnam War veterans Sens. John Kerry, D-Mass., and Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said Wednesday they will vote against a constitutional amendment to outlaw flag desecration and the Senate appeared ready to defeat the controversial proposal.

Kerry and Harkin, both liberals, made their decisions in brief speeches as the Senate headed for a showdown vote early Thursday with every indication that supporters of the amendment were short of the two-thirds vote needed for passage.

Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell and Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, both said the amendment would be beaten. Even Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a strong supporter, conceded "it doesn't look too good now."

Kerry won the Bronze star for heroism in combat and later founded the Vietnam Veterans Against the War. Harkin ferried jets in and out of Vietnam.

Both men cited their Vietnam experiences in reaching their decision.

At the same time, Mitchell bitterly criticized President Bush for inflaming the flag issue.

Mitchell said support for the amendment eroded because it is an "unnecessary proposal" and blamed Bush for forcing the issue.

"The most eloquent statement of individual liberties and the right of American citizens to be free of government control is in the Bill of Rights," Mitchell said. "It has never been amended or tampered with."

"Now it is tragic that the president of the United States, the person who has the singular responsibility for the welfare of the entire country, is leading this effort. ... It is unwise and inappropriate and it is most unfortunate that the president is using the power of his office in a way that seeks to force a choice on the American people when it is unnecessary," Mitchell said.

"We should leave the Constitution alone. Americans love and revere the flag and the Constitution," Mitchell said. "They need not have to choose."

The proposed amendment states, "The Congress and the states shall have the power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States."

The preamble declares that "physical desecration" includes, but is not limited to, burning, mutilating, defacing, defiling or trampling on the flag or "displaying the flag in a contemptuous manner."

The amendment movement was sparked in June when the Supreme Court ruled that burning the flag is a constitutionally protected form of free speech and protest.

Senate looks at pay restoration for North

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Legal scholars, Navy lawyers and congressional officials advised a Senate committee Wednesday on whether Iran-Contra convict Oliver North's military retirement pay should be restored.

Despite 90 minutes of legal discussions, Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph Biden, D-Del., said the issue may well boil down to partisan wrangling on the Senate floor next month.

The Senate was maneuvered into a Nov. 3 vote by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who threatened last month to bring the Senate to a halt with a move to tack a restoration of North's benefits on an unrelated bill.

North was convicted of three felonies, including document shredding, in May, and was sentenced in July to three years of probation, 1,200 hours of community service and fined $150,000 for his role in the secret Iran arms sales and covert aid to the Contra rebels.

The legal question revolves around whether North, as a retired Marine Corps officer subject to recall to active status, holds an "office" of the United States. The paper-shredding statute requires forfeiture of office and disqualification from holding office. A retired civilian similarly convicted would hold no office to forfeit.

The money, while viewed by many as a pension, is considered retirement pay by the military because retired officers are subject to recall. Basically, they are kept on the payroll with reduced responsibilities and obligations.

North retired from the Marines before his trial, and the Navy concluded he was entitled to $23,064 a year but sought the opinion of the General Accounting Office, an arm of Congress that deals with pay and entitlement questions. The step was taken to protect Navy disbursing officers from liability for improperly writing checks to North.

The pay was suspended when North was sentenced and the GAO concurred. On Wednesday, the GAO said that even in retired status North, as a convicted felon, could not be recalled to active duty because of the ban on holding any office.

Letting him keep his retirement pay, it concluded, would require separating the pay from the issue of the responsibilities and obligations for which he gets it.

U.S. household income rises, sets all-time high

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The number of poor Americans — 31.9 million — was virtually unchanged in 1988, but per capita income rose a sharp 1.7 percent to an all-time high of $13,120, the government said Wednesday.

The Census Bureau's annual report on poverty and income statistics for the last year of the Reagan administration found that despite the continuing economic recovery from the 1982 recession, little headway is being made in the effort to end poverty.

"Both the number of poor and (the) poverty rate have declined since 1983, the recent peak in these figures, but both remain above their 1978 levels, the recent low point," the report said.

The Census figures also showed a widening gap between the rich and the poor, with the wealthiest fifth of all families receiving 44 percent of the national family income, the largest share ever recorded, while the poorest 20 percent of families received only 4.6 percent of the national income, the lowest proportion since 1954.

The bureau said the poverty threshold — the amount of money needed to raise the incomes of poor families out of poverty — was $12,092 in 1988.

Private analysts also found the income and poverty statistics disappointing in the light of the six year economic recovery, the longest surge in the post-World War II period.

"The data provides disturbing new evidence of the unevenness of the recovery — and the extent to which its economic benefits are disproportionately going to those at the top of the income spectrum and missing many at the bottom," said Robert Greenstein, director of the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

Household income includes a variety of living arrangements, including unrelated individuals.

Per capita income — all the income of the nation by the total population — was $13,120, an all time high in inflation-adjusted terms, and has risen steadily since 1982.

But the figure is deceptive — the per capita figure for whites was $13,900, while for blacks it was $8,270 and for Hispanics, $7,960.

On poverty, the bureau said that overall about 53 percent of poor families were maintained by single women; for poor black families, 75.6 percent were maintained by women with no spouse present, while for whites the comparable figure was 43.5 percent.

Half of the nation's poor in 1988 were either children under 18 (39.5 percent) or those over age 65 (10.9 percent). The rate of children in poverty showed some improvement, dropping from 20.5 percent in 1987 to 19.7 in 1988, but did not change significantly for the elderly, the report said.

to continue working hard and be patient. I have been happy with the work ethic."

Scott said team confidence could help this season.

"Confidence and motivation can go a long way," Scott said. "The team was close to winning conference last season and they may think they have something to prove. They are up on their toes already and that's a healthy attitude to have."

Scott has the task of replacing four seniors, including three starters. The Salukis lost center Cathy Kampwerth (11.9 points per game, 7.0 rebounds) and forward Dana Fitzpatrick (10.4, 5.0), who were both second-team All-Gateway Conference honorees last season. The Salukis also lost Tonda Seals (8.4, 2.5) and Deanna Sanders (5.6, 1.2) in the backcourt.

The Salukis return two starters in junior forward Amy Rakers (10.5, 8.4) and sophomore point guard Colleen Heimstead (3.9, 2.4).

"It is much too early to talk about a starting five," Scott said. "I have been impressed with Anita Scott and Rougeau. They have picked things up quickly."

Cross Country teams visit 'Dixie' for tuneup

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

In a tuneup for the upcoming conference championships, the Saluki men and women's cross country teams compete in the Ole Miss Invitational in Oxford, Miss.

The Invitational in Oxford, Miss. will be the last meet for both squads before the conference championships.

Coach Bill Cornell's men's team will receive competition from Ole Miss, Mississippi, West Georgia and Samford. The Salukis won the Invitational last season.

"We're probably favored to win it," Cornell said. "Mississippi State could also be a tough team."

The Salukis last ran October 7 in the Indiana State Invitational. SIU-C won the meet with 22 points, outdistancing Southern Indiana (52), Indiana State (58), Purdue (122) and Danville Area Community College (128).

SIU-C took the top four positions in the 10,000-meter race in Terre Haute. Freshman Gerallt Owen paced the Salukis with a time of 31:22. Sophomores Vaughan Harry and Mark Stuart finished second and third with times of 31:40.8 and 31:43.5 respectively, while senior Paul Burkinshaw rounded out the top four with a time of 31:47.6.

"We had a good, solid training week," Cornell said. "This is a good meet prior to conference championships and it is a relaxed atmosphere. But they still have to run."

Prior to the season, Cornell said his team was balanced and could have a different No. 1 runner each week. Owen, Harry and Stuart all have shared the No. 1 spot for the Salukis this season. Cornell also is happy with the development throughout the rest of his lineup.

"Burkinshaw is a solid fourth man," Cornell said. "I think he could be up with the other three if he'd dig a little deeper. Mike Kershaw is a solid No. 5 man and David Beauchem is coming around. Everything's looking good."

Cornell said he will take eight runners Friday. The Mississippi Valley Conference Championships will be held in Peoria Oct. 28. Only seven runners can compete for each team in the conference meet.

While Cornell will take each of his top runners Friday, SIU-C women's coach Don DeNoon will leave some of his top runners behind.

DeNoon said juniors Rosanne Vincent and Dona Griffin, along with freshman Leeann Conway, have the week off. DeNoon said he isn't sure if freshman Dawn Barefoot will go.

"I am resting some of our kids and giving the others a chance to run," DeNoon said. "It will give them a chance to perform in different roles. Amie Padgett will be our top runner going into this meet and we'll see how she performs in that role."

SIU-C's competition includes Mississippi, Mississippi State, Murray State and Samford.

Mississippi State should provide the strongest competition, DeNoon said.

"They are strong and running well," DeNoon said. "We can compete with them but I don't know if we can beat them. We should do well against the rest."

With the Gateway Conference Championship in Peoria Oct. 28, DeNoon is resting some of his top runners in preparation and wants to see other team members in different roles.

"I want to continue their encouragement and see if they can show leadership roles in team situations," DeNoon said. "We haven't totally identified our No. 7 runner yet. It could be Leslie Tynes or Laura Batsie."

Lakers' owner considers buying Padres

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Los Angeles Lakers owner Jerry Buss was considering a bid for the San Diego Padres, which were unexpectedly placed on the market by owner Joan Kroc, The San Diego Union said Wednesday.

Kroc stunned the city late Tuesday when she issued a statement announcing that she was ready to sell the club she inherited from her late husband.

"I am in the market for a baseball team," Buss told the newspaper. "I probably will make a call and throw my hat in the ring."

Buss was one of the early names to surface as possible buyers for the team, which The Union said could fetch as much as $100 million.

Kroc nearly sold the team to Seattle Mariners owner George Argyros in 1987 for a reported $50 million.

Kroc said she would not sell the Padres to anyone who wanted to move the team to another city. The team's lease at San Diego Jack Murphy Stadium runs to March 31, 2000.

Wedemeier said the type of offense the team runs does not play a part in the responsibility of the kicker.

"As long as we get in field goal position its my job (to score)," Wedemeier said. "Whether its a wishbone team or a passing attack team, it really doesn't matter."

Smith admits the team is basically without a kicking coach and lets the kickers practice on their own.

Wedemeier said he and the other Saluki kickers, Bookout and senior Jeff Lonnon, coach themselves during practice each day.

"We evaluate each other," Wedemeier said. "If someone is not doing well that day, we'll try and tell them what they are doing wrong."

"I don't think (the coaches) really care if we have a coach or not as long as we perform," Wedemeier said.

"Even though we don't have a coach, the kickers have a competition within ourselves," Wedemeier said. "We'll kick between 30-40 balls to pass the time."

Kicking each week has helped build confidence in Wedemeier but he said he still must remain competitive.

"You have to keep your position, that's the important thing," Wedemeier said. "It's like any other position — you slack off, someone else will come in and take your place. If I slack off I know (Bookout) or (Lonnon) will come in and take my place."

Wedemeier said he doesn't have any superstitions before attempting a kick but does have a ritual with holder and quarterback Scott Gabbert.

"Before any extra point or field goal, I always shake Gabbert's hand," Wedemeier said. "It's a tradition, I guess, between he and I. It's like 'you make a good hold and I'll make a good kick.'"

Wedemeier said it's important to have the same person holding on a regular basis.

"(Gabbert) knows how I like the ball," Wedemeier said. "We have never had one blocked. We have our timing down."

"Before any extra point or field goal, I always shake Gabbert's hand. It's a tradition."

—Steve Wedemeier

Smith said Wedemeier has performed well in all his kicking duties.

"He has done a great job with the kickoff and when he's been called upon to kick the field goal," Smith said.

"He's done a good job kicking the ball at least to the 5-yard line and most of the time to the goal line or into the end zone all year," Smith said.

"He's very level headed," Smith said. "He never seems to let a little breeze bother him or anything. He just seems to go about his business."

NCAA wants tougher rules

Council proposes stiffer penalties for drug users

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Proposals for year-round random drug testing and tougher penalties for users were unanimously endorsed by the NCAA Council, which concluded three days of meetings Wednesday.

The council, which set the legislative agenda for the 1990 NCAA Convention in January, also supported proposals on Proposition 42 academic requirements but delayed recommendations on freshmen eligibility and reducing athletic schedules.

"The council supports tougher individual sanctions — longer suspensions or ineligibility periods for students involved in drugs," said NCAA president Albert Witte, a law professor and faculty representative from the University of Arkansas. "For performance-enhancing drugs, a second positive would probably result in permanent banishment."

Richard Schultz, NCAA executive director, said potential legal problems with year-round testing were discussed.

"We've had very few legal challenges to our drug policy," he said. "I told the council that it's probably going to begin another round but we feel we're on solid legal ground doing that."

The council denied a petition from basketball player Chris Mills, who sought to overturn a one-year delay on eligibility after leaving Kentucky for Arizona. The council ruled Mills was like any other transfer student despite Kentucky's probationary status.

The council also supported a plan to help athletes suspended under Proposition 42 academic regulations attend schools of their choice.

Phoenix center jailed for drunk driving charge

PHOENIX, Ariz. (UPI) — Derek Kennard, the starting center for the Phoenix Cardinals, was arrested and jailed early Wednesday for his second alleged drunken driving incident in recent weeks.

Sgt. Allan Schmidt of the state Department of Public Safety said Kennard, a pro since 1984, was arrested for driving under the influence of alcohol after an accident on a Phoenix-area freeway. Schmidt said Kennard's car hit a guard rail and then bounced across the freeway, hitting another guard rail. Kennard suffered a minor cut on his forehead, but was saved from a more serious injury by an airbag, Schmidt said.

Kennard was cited Sept. 12 for an alcohol-related driving offense. That case still is pending.

Vincent: No games before Tuesday

Commissioner says Series may be delayed longer

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Baseball Commissioner Fay Vincent announced Wednesday the World Series, interrupted by the most disastrous earthquake since 1905, will not resume until Tuesday at the very earliest.

"It is very clear to Major League Baseball that our issue, is a modest one in light of this great tragedy," Vincent said at a late afternoon news conference announced in a room lit only by candles and television lights.

Vincent said he conferred with San Francisco Police and officials told him there are still a number of dead and the search goes on for more victims.

"We are not going to be able to play baseball in either of these two communities before Tuesday," Vincent said of San Francisco and Oakland. "There will be no World Series games before Tuesday. We presently expect Games 3, 4 and 5 to be played at Candlestick Park."

Vincent said structural repairs are being made at Candlestick Park.

"If we are going to put 62,000 people in there, I want to have total confidence to put them in safely."

John Lind, stadium manager for Candlestick Park, said, "Repairing the stadium is not the city's No. 1 priority."

"Our No. 1 focus is housing and continued safety for our citizens."

Vincent said cancelling the World Series "is a major step. We don't want to do it, given the decent and prudent ways available, by waiting a few days. We will not play while the community is in the early stages of recovery. We don't want to be conducting baseball while the hunt for victims is going on."

The commissioner added that the Series could experience further delays if it is determined later that the Bay Area would not be ready to host the games.

"I'm not saying we are absolutely certain we will be able to play Tuesday because the city government has not given us permission. It is our hope and expectation to play in Candlestick on Tuesday."

Present at Wednesday's meeting were representatives of both the San Francisco Giants and Oakland Athletics, the Major League Baseball Players Association and ABC Television, which is broadcasting the series.

More than 24 hours after the earthquake struck, power still had not been restored to all areas of the city. The St. Francis Hotel, where the announcement was made, was among those areas left without electricity.

Lind said he also would meet immediately with officials of the NFL's San Francisco 49ers to discuss the status of Sunday's game against the New England Patriots.

Lind said the focus "is on housing for our residents and public safety. We brought architects into the site on the same night it happened. We had 17 structural engineers and two architects totally exploring the stadium. They found no major damage. There is minor repair and cleanup."

Some people were seen hauling away huge pieces of concrete, but Lind said they were part of steps and were precast, which led to their breaking away, but were incidental to the support of the stadium.

"We will replace those steps which were damaged and repair them," Lind said. "Then after the Series is done, we will come in and put them back the way they were."

Athletics owner Walter Haas praised the decision as "the most workable one."

Tomczak to start against Cleveland

LAKE FOREST (UPI)—Mike Tomczak will start at quarterback Monday night against the Cleveland Browns despite speculation backup Jim Harbaugh might get the nod.

The announcement by Coach Mike Ditka, who on Monday pledged to make personnel changes after the team's second straight loss, came after the Wednesday morning workout, at which cornerback Vestee Jackson was a no-show. Jackson was benched by Ditka after getting burned for a pair of Warren Moon touchdown bombs in Sunday's 33-28 loss to the Houston Oilers.

"We have not talked to him," Ditka said about the veteran Jackson. "We can't find him. He's not here. He's not at home. We can't talk to him until we talk to him."

Ditka announced Monday that third-year pro Lorenzo Lynch would start in place of Jackson.

Tomczak, who has started every game this season, threw four interceptions against the Oilers, two of which he was trying to throw away.

Panthers could be trouble for spikers

Northern Iowa could spell big trouble this weekend for the Saluki volleyball team as the spikers take a road trip west into the nation's Corn Belt. This is the first conference road game for the Salukis and the match falls in the middle of the Panthers' homecoming festivities.

After defeating conference rivals Western Illinois and Bradley last weekend, the Salukis advanced their conference record to 2-0 and now sport a 11-6 record for the season.

Saluki volleyball coach Patti Hagemeyer said the win over Western was a big boost for the team. "We have had good practices this week. They have played a little better physically since the wins. Western was a strong win for us," she said.

The Panthers also are 2-0 in conference action after beating Southwest Missouri State and Wichita State and are 14-3 overall. Northern Iowa traditionally has placed high in conference play and finished last year with a 23-17 record.

Even though the Salukis came on strong last week, Hagemeyer said their outside blocking was far from perfect. The Panthers have very good outside hitters and the Salukis worked on blocking in practice this week. But, Hagemeyer said, she won't know if the blocking will work during the game until they see the Panthers.

"Northern Iowa has been traditionally a much stronger team," Hagemeyer said. "They are a team that has very good outside hitters. I guess we are just going to have to wait and see."

Panthers' coach Iragde Ahraib-Fard said his team is ready to bear down and prepare for the challenge of Gateway Conference action. "The team is very balanced between experience and talent. We are ready for this weekend," he said.

Hagemeyer said the Panthers should be a good test of her team. "I expect it to be a tough weekend," Hagemeyer said. "It's just a matter of how hard my team wants to work to be successful."

The Saluki next home game is Oct. 27 against No. 1 ranked Illinois State, followed by the Indiana State Sycamores Oct. 28.

Women's basketball stresses fundamentals

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

The first week of practice involves a lot of teaching, Saluki women's basketball coach Cindy Scott said.

"Right now we are working on fundamentals," Scott said. "Our main objective is getting the basis of our defensive system taught. We have worked a little on offense as well."

Defense has become a hallmark for Scott-coached teams, beginning her 13th season at the SIU-C helm. The Salukis were ranked No. 7 nationally in scoring defense last season, allowing foes only 57.5 points per game to lead the Gateway in that category. Scott's squad also topped the Gateway in field goal percentage defense, yielding only .393 accuracy from the floor.

The Salukis add five recruits this season — a junior college transfer and four freshmen.

New Saluki players this season include Cheryl Weis, a 6-2 junior center transferring from Read Lake Community College, Kelly Furth, a 6-2 freshman center from Springfield; Angie Rougeau, a 5-10 freshman forward from Memphis, Tenn.; Anita Scott, a 5-7 point guard from St. Louis and freshman Tiffany Bolden from Kansas City, Kan. who will be ineligible this season because of Proposition 48, which deals with athletic scores on college entrance exams.

With a team comprised of new and young players, Scott thinks teaching this week could be even more important than usual.

"There is a lot of teaching to be done," Scott said. "The quicker our players pick it up the better off we'll be. We want to make progress. It also gives me a chance to better assess our individual talent and see how each player can help."

Only two seniors return for the Salukis — 5-11 forward Deanna Kibelkis and 5-8 guard Eileen Richardson.

"The older players have done a great job helping out the younger kids," Scott said. "I just want them

Smith gets kicker he wanted even though recruiting failed

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

When head coach Bob Smith was coaching at Southeast Missouri State, he recruited Saluki kicker Steve Wedemeier, only to lose him to SIU-C. Now that the two have been reunited, Wedemeier has made a point of kicking for the Dawgs.

When the season began, Wedemeier was second behind sophomore John Bookout, who had been the starting kicker during the 1988 season. But Wedemeier took over against Eastern Illinois early in the season.

"With the new coach, the kickers had to start from scratch," Wedemeier said. "You had to prove yourself to the coach. When (Smith) came here, he already had an idea of how I kicked. So I think that went in my favor."

Wedemeier said he chose SIU-C because he wanted to play baseball and football. He since has given up baseball because of his studies.

"It was hard keeping up with my studies and trying to play two sports," the junior finance major said. "It was a hard decision to make (between the two sports)."

Wedemeier said he chose football because he thought he had a better chance of playing after coming in as a freshman and kicking in his first game.

Smith said the kicker plays a significant role in the Saluki offense.

"The kicker's accuracy is something we depend on," Smith said.

"And of course you always depend on the kickoff. We want to put (the opponent) as deeply in the hole as we can."

So far this season Wedemeier has attempted nine field goals, making six for 66 percent.

Five of his field goals have come from between the 30-39 range and one has come from the 20-29 area.

With his six field goals and nine extra points, Wedemeier has scored about 25 percent of the team's total points for the season. He leads the Salukis with 27 of the team's 105 total points.

"We will take the three points more often than a team that is more powerful," Smith said.

Class of '39 pays tribute to former University president

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

"Make no little plans; they have no magic to stir men's blood. Make big plans: aim high in hope and work. Remember that our children and grandchildren are going to do things that stagger us." — Unknown.

That quote was carried around in the wallet of former University President Roscoe Pulliam. It was remembered by Alice (Paterson) Williams, of the University class of 1934 and Pulliam's administrative assistant, who says she believes the former president lived by those words.

Williams' thoughts and recollections are just part of a booklet prepared by the class of 1939 as a tribute to its president, which will be celebrated Homecoming weekend.

Pulliam, who used to give weekly lectures to the student body of Southern Illinois State Normal University — as SIU-C was called then, was in the fourth year of his presidency in 1939 and he considered that year's graduating class "his class." L. Clark Davis, emeritus professor and co-chairman of the class of 1939 reunion, said.

"At least once a week, (Pulliam) spoke to all the students in Shryock Auditorium," Davis said. "He would walk about the campus and he was known to all the students."

Certainly a respect for the University president existed in those days that isn't as apparent now — but the campus was much smaller then too, Davis said. Even so, SISNU was one of the best known and respected teachers' college in the state, he said.

"The school was much smaller then, with about 1,850 students or so ... the president was much more accessible," Davis said. "The editor of the Egyptian could just walk in to his office and talk with him."

Not to say that SIU-C President John C. Guyon isn't accessible, but "there are some barriers," said Davis, who once held the office of director of students affairs, which was the forerunner of the vice president for student affairs office.

One 1940 alumnus recalls: Pulliam "seemed remote and almost imperial as he presided over the weekly chapel programs," writes Benjamin H. Baldwin, who is a professor emeritus at the Medill School of Journalism.

"As the students themselves became involved in the ongoing mission of the school, we found he was not remote. It merely seemed that he was too busy to shake hands and call students by first names," Baldwin states. "As time passed he did begin to shake hands. He did know our names. And we realized that he was anything but remote and imperial."

"I think probably now there's that similar respect for the deans (as there was for President Pulliam), Davis said, explaining that college deans have the potential to interact with students in ways that the president in this day can't.

By the time Pulliam died in March, 1944, the old teachers' college known as Southern Illinois State Normal University had become Southern Illinois University. Shortly

Salukis gear up for game against top-ranked Bears

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

First-year head coach Bob Smith came to SIU-C from the University of Illinois, where he said homecoming was originated. Throughout college football, homecoming weekend is a big football tradition, he said.

Parents, alumni and the student body all play a significant part in the homecoming game, Smith said.

"Playing before our alumni will add a little extra incentive for our players," Smith said. "We hope, more than anything, that our student body will be there to encourage the Salukis to play well."

Smith said the last two teams the Salukis faced on the road were well supported by their student body and he would like to see the same at SIU-C.

"At Arkansas State and Northern Illinois their fans helped them pull out victories," Smith said. Both ASU and NIU managed last second wins against the Salukis. ASU won 28-23 and NIU topped the Dawgs 29-24.

The Salukis will take on the Southwest Missouri State Bears at 1:30 p.m. at McAndrew Stadium Saturday for Smith's first homecoming opponent at the University.

Smith said he would like to make the homecoming game the best game of the year for the Salukis.

"We will try and put our best foot forward," Smith said. "And we might as well do it against the best. It will be an extra challenge with a little added emotion and preparation."

The Bears are one of the top ranked teams in Division I-AA and the best team in the Gateway Conference, Smith said.

The Bears will visit McAndrew with a record of 6-1, 4-0 in conference play, and Smith says they will "be licking their chops" looking at the Salukis record of 1-6, 1-2.

The Salukis will face yet another wishbone offense when the Bears hit town but

Smith is looking for the defense to rise to the occasion.

The defensive unit of the Salukis has had trouble in the past with the run-oriented offense. Both ASU and NIU ran the potent set.

Against ASU, the Saluki defense allowed 416 yards on the ground, while allowing 308 against NIU.

"They (SMSU) have a tremendous team and we are going to line up and play hard against them," Smith said.

Smith said playing the Bears will be another step toward the team's goal of competing better each week.

Since the season-opening 41-3 loss to Nevada-Reno, the Salukis have been able to move closer to their goal.

"We will try to put our best foot forward. And we might as well do it against the best."

—Bob Smith

The Salukis fell to Western Illinois 14-7 the following week in a game played during the course of two days because of extreme lightning and rain Sept. 9. Play was postponed after the Salukis took a quick 7-0 early in the first quarter before the foul weather moved in.

The following week the Salukis recorded their first win of the season at home in an emotional 20-17 victory over conference foe Eastern Illinois. The defense held the Panthers in check for most of the game allowing defensive back Scott Barber to preserve the victory when he tackled EIU's holder after a fumbled snap prevented the Panthers from making a game-tying field goal.

For the next three weeks the Dawgs faced
