Council approves mass transit study

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

A mass transit system study moved full speed ahead when the Carbondale City Council voted unanimously to appropriate funding for the study.

The council authorized the city administration to negotiate a contract with De Leuw, Cather and Company for a mass transit feasibility and implementation study.

The estimated total cost of the study is $67,530. However, the city received a grant from the Illinois Department of Transportation for $31,530, bringing the cost down for the city to $36,000, Linda Gladson, city planner, said.

Gladson said University President John C. Guyon notified the city that the University would be willing to pay for half the study through University funds.

"The selected firm will study the demographics and census of Carbondale to decide whether there is a need for a mass transit system," Gladson said.

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard said acquiring a mass transit system has been a "great interest to the city as well as the University for quite some time now."

Don Monty, director of Community Development, said the first five phases of the study, or the feasibility preliminary planning phases, would take about four to five months to complete.

"The sixth phase would be the actual implementation phase," Monty said. "This would include drawing up the bid specifications for vehicles and operators and other variables."

Monty said if the study showed there was a "justifiable need and demand for a mass transit system in Carbondale" the city would have to look into "funding available to implement the study."

Monty said the study would look at the University community as well as the city and take into account the students who lived in close proximity to the city, but not actually inside the city limits.

DeLeuw, Cather and Company was selected by a 13-member public relations advisory, designed to keep the mass transit project running smoothly, Gladson said.

93 organizations vie for SIU-C students

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

A whole gamut of organizations, from Hyatt Hotels and the Illinois State Police to the University of Missouri Graduate School came to the Student Center Monday to woo prospective University graduates on Career Day.

Of the 105 organizations originally signed up, 93 showed up, making the Career Day one of the most successful in the history of the fair, according to Michael Murray a University Placement Center counselor.

Murray said most of the companies were Mid-Western by location and several were participating for the first time.

"Mid-Western people have good work ethics," Murray said.

Nigel Poland, project manager with Hyatt Hotels, said the company sought engineering-management recruits for its 18-month training program.

"SIU is a good university. We are looking to enlarge our recruiting area," Poland said.

Hyatt recruited from Texas State University, Northern Iowa, Ferris State, and the University of Wisconsin.

Murray said the organizers expected about 4,000 students to attend the fair, which was geared toward college students, was open to the general public.

Patricia Bassett said the spring semester Career Day will focus on or firms offering internships, graduate assistance and part-time employment to students.

The May Company, a St. Louis based firm, and Caterpillar, Inc., based in Peoria, were awarded for their contribution to the fair and placement center.

Tony Chavez, counselor at the placement center, said the firms had hired a large amount of business and engineering students in the past and both companies had contributed to the automation of placement center as well as contributing money for computer hardware and software to the center.

Committee tries again to boost minimum wage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee, in a new effort to get around President Bush's objections, Tuesday approved a bill to raise the federal minimum wage to $4.25 an hour within two years and included a training wage for new employees.

Bush, who vetoed a minimum wage bill earlier this year, has said he will accept an increase of no more than $4.25 over three years. His aides have indicated Bush will oppose the new bill as well.

However, the bill is not expected to come up for a vote in the House for two or three weeks, giving both sides more time to negotiate on a possible compromise. The bill was approved by the House Education and Labor Committee on a voice vote.

The earlier bill would have raised the minimum wage from its current $3.35 an hour to $4.55 over three years. It also allowed employers to pay new workers a lower training wage for 60 days.

After Bush rejected the bill June 13, the House failed by 37 votes to override his veto. Since then Democrats and organized labor have been searching for an acceptable compromise.

Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, accused the administration of not being concerned about workers at the bottom of the economic ladder.

In a statement issued before the committee voted on the new bill,

Everyone at fault in vending machine problems

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

Problems with vending service on campus, even rotting apples, is as much the fault of the users as the operators of the service, the director of University Enterprises said.

In response to questions concerning rotten apples in four of the 12 cold food machines on campus Harry D. Wirth said the main problem was the Canteen Corp.

employees servicing the machines.

However, users should call Campus Machines at the number on the machines to report problems and immediate action will be taken, Wirth said.

"There is no way management can deal with a problem if they don't know about it," Wirth said. "People should tell us if they are having problems with the machines. We want to know."

Hea-Ran Ashraf, a food sanitation instructor in the department of animal industries, food and nutrition, said she didn't see a health risk in having rotten apples in the machines.

One apple had a small spot of mold, Ashraf said, that was very similar to common bread mold, which only poses a health risk if eaten. Ashraf said the mold, having airborne spores, could spread and contaminate other products in the machine.

Campus gets 911 service

SIU-C became the first public university in the state to adopt a 911 emergency system, University Security Director Bob Harris said.

Nelson R. Ferry, police public relations officer, said that in a true emergency, campus police can have a car at any location on campus within two minutes.

Harris said the 911 number should be dialed only to report life-threatening situations, such as traffic accidents, fires and other police emergencies.

Calls on the 911 system ring through a special phone with a distinct tone at the SIU-C Security headquarters.

"We'll grab it, and have help on the way in seconds," Harris said. "It's strictly a University system and any University phone you dial 911 from rings into our office."

"If it is a true emergency, we will hit the appropriate button on the radio for the fire, police or ambulance and call that agency and advise them what has happened," he said.

In mid-May, SIU-C Security went to a 711 system, which is still in effect. But Harris said his department didn't publicize it.

"Most of the people who live or work in an area of emergency services know the emergency number as 911," Harris said. "We didn't publicize the 711 system because

Refugee overflow causes Poland's embassy to close

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — West Germany ordered the temporary closure of its embassy in the Polish capital of Warsaw Tuesday, citing overcrowding by East Germans refugees seeking to immigrate to the West. A West German newspaper hinted at a possible airlift of the East Germans, but the Foreign Ministry declined comment on the report. Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher shut down the embassy after the number of East Germans holed up in the facility rose to more than 120, making it impossible for the staff to maintain normal working conditions, a government spokeswoman said.

Vietnam hints at possible return to Vietnam

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (UPI) — Vietnam will complete its withdrawal from Cambodia next week but could send in its troops again if the Hanoi-backed government falls to the resistance, the Defense Ministry said Tuesday. Brig. Gen. Nguyen Van Thai, spokesman for the Vietnamese Defense Ministry said the last 26,000 Vietnamese troops would leave Cambodia by Sept. 26, ending military involvement that began with border fighting in 1977 and cost Vietnam 55,000 dead and an equal number of seriously wounded. He said most Vietnamese units have already pulled back from the battlefield.

Spies help drug traffickers avoid capture

BOGOTÁ, Colombia (UPI) — The kingpins of Colombia's violent cocaine cartels have eluded capture because they have spies in the military and government, the nation's attorney general charged Tuesday, hours after two more bombs exploded in the capital. Attorney General Alfonso Gomez said authorities have staged numerous raids on the hideouts of drug traffickers only to find that their targets has fled by the times the troops arrived. "The only explanation is that the traffickers have been warned," Gomez said. "The infiltration of the drug traffickers of the police and military forces has prevented capture of cartel leaders."

Gorbachev closer to crushing opponents

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev won permission Tuesday to advance the date of a housecleaning Communist Party Congress in a move that will allow him an earlier opportunity to purge the party hierarchy of conservative opponents of his reforms. The 250-person committee then passed a resolution moving up the date of the next regular Party Congress, the 28th, by four months, from February 1991 to October 1990. Only a full 5,000-member congress can change the composition of the Central Committee, according to party rules. In effect, the congress is the instrument of a purge or major housecleaning of the party.

Rep. Martin hires advisers familiar with Bush campaign

CHICAGO (UPI) — Saying she wants "a clean, open and honest debate of the issues," U.S. Rep. Lynn Martin announced Tuesday she has hired some of the same people who helped shape the often acerbic campaign of President Bush. Martin, R-Ill., who is trying to unseat Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., has tapped Roger Ailes and Kathy Ardleigh of New York as media advisers and Robert Teeter of Ann Arbor, Mich., as a general strategist. Fran McNaught, a spokeswoman for Martin, said. Martin also has named Mark Schroeder, who ran the 1988 Illinois presidential primary campaign for Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan.

Candidate describes drug plan

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Republican Lieutenant Governor Jim Ryan announced the first phase of his anti-drug strategy Tuesday morning at the Williamson County Airport as part of a six-city campaign tour to promote his candidacy for attorney general.

Ryan said his four-part strategy includes crack legislation, a drug-free work place, mandatory drug fines for pushers and users and forfeiture of property used in relation to the commission of a drug offense.

The crack legislation would make delivery of seven grams or more of crack a Class X felony, which mandates a sentence of six to 30 years in prison. Delivery of less than seven grams but more than two grams would be a Class I felony with a mandated sentence of four to 15 years without probation.

The 43-year-old DuPage County state's attorney also proposed legislation that would create a "safe work place" by increasing penalties for both possession and delivery of cannabis and controlled substances.

Ryan businesses would be responsible for policing themselves.

The third aspect of Ryan's anti-drug strategy calls for mandatory fines for pushers and users.

The proposal mandates a fine of $500 per gram of any controlled substance possessed or sold and a $5 per gram fine for any cannabis violation.

A percentage of the fines would go into a newly created Illinois Prison Trust Fund. "We have to commit ourselves to more jails and prisons," he said.

"Some people look at this as a fiscal issue," Ryan said. "It's really a public safety issue."

In the fourth point of his strategy, Ryan calls for an amendment to the Illinois law that would expand the ability of state prosecutors to seek forfeitures in drug-related cases.

It would allow forfeitures for real estate acquired with proceeds from drug transactions and expand such forfeitures to any real estate used in relation with a drug transaction.

Along with a war on drugs, Ryan's political platform includes preservation of natural resources and protection of the environment, protection of consumer rights and combat of child abuse.

Ryan said his law enforcement background makes him a better candidate for the office of attorney general than his Democratic contender, Roland W. Burris.

"I think it's clear the most serious problem facing Illinois is the drug problems," he said. "I think we need this time someone from the ranks of law enforcement with a professional background in law enforcement."

LaRouche follower: Disaster imminent

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Mark Fairchild said the uproar over his democratic bid for governor is a matter of philosophy.

The Lyndon LaRouche follower spoke to a handful of University students Monday night at the Student Center Auditorium.

The University of Illinois graduate defeated George Sangmeister for the Democratic party's lieutenant governor nomination in 1986, a victory that forced former Sen. Adlai Steven to run on a third party ticket to avoid running with Sangmeister.

Fairchild told students that he has adopted his friend LaRouche's philosophy of self-government as a basis for political policies.

"I believe we are on the verge of a chain reaction collapse of our entire national financial and banking system," Fairchild said.

The proper policies, Sangmeister said, could avert that outcome.

As governor, Fairchild said he would work to reorganize the financial system by bringing the federal reserve program back under the control of Congress and issue cheap credit for infrastructure projects through local banks.

Fairchild said the LaRouche philosophy differs from his "enemy's philosophy" because LaRouche disagrees with the idea that the world is overpopulated and running out of natural resources.

"Economic progress means potential relative economic density," Fairchild said.

In his political platform, Fairchild said he also promotes cutting off financial support to "murderous communist" China, jailing bankers caught laundering drug money, bringing classic studies back into schools and eliminating farm "set-aside" programs.

Mark Fairchild

Fairchild said his political philosophy should appeal to the forgotten majority, such as farmers, industrial workers, scientists and engineers, and generally not to homosexuals and drug pushers.

LaRouche was convicted last January of scheming to defraud the Internal Revenue Service and deliberately defaulting on more than $30 million in loans from his supporters.

The former presidential candidate is being held in a minimum security prison.

Fairchild said the U.S. government is trying to kill LaRouche to suppress his political ideas and values by mistreating him in prison.

Also running for governor are Republican Secretary of State Jim Edgar and Democratic Attorney General Neil Hartigan.

Placement Center offers opportunity

WHEN YOU graduate from college what should one of your main priorities be? Win the lottery? Head out to the coast and hope to become a professional underwater basket weaver? Wrong two answers — although winning the lottery would be nice.

Your first priority should be to get a job. Yes, you are expected to work after four, five or six years of college. And one service here on campus for your benefit is the University Placement Center. This service offers a multitude of programs that puts you on the road to hopefully a six-figure paying job.

Recently, the University Placement Center offered a Career Day in the Student Center, which featured 93 corporations, graduate school programs and other businesses looking for recruits. The likes of the Hyatt Hotel, the Illinois State Police and the University of Missouri Graduate School showed up to take a gander at what SIU-C will have to offer at graduation.

THE CAREER Day offered a networking system that allowed students to interact with those who are "working in the real world" and talk about career options and opportunities. This type of service reminds those who are approaching graduation that the time is now to finish up the resume and get it sent out. Career Day also serves as a motivator. Often when students look to the future they do not see a bright one. Horror stories of jobless graduates fill the minds of those who decide to stay "just one more year." This Career Day tells students that there are companies out there that want bright, well-rounded students, and that in order to snag one of the better jobs you need to strive harder.

Career Day is a way to tell SIU-C students that their degree is worth something. Opportunities abound if students put forth the effort and take the chances that are given to interview and talk to employers about their resumes and potential.

Career Day is not the only chance that University students will have to advance their cause. Skill Development workshops are offered throughout the semester and may be scheduled for classes, campus organization or other groups with similar interests. The workshop subjects include interviewing, career options, resume writing, developing employer leads and internships.

ON-CAMPUS interviewing will be offered by a variety of companies, job-hunting trips also are organized throughout the year, and a weekly publication also is put out called "The Career Grapevine," which lists current job openings for different areas of interest.

There is one small hitch though — it costs money to be a member of the University Placement Center. Although Career Day was free, some other services are restricted to members only.

Members pay an initial fee of $25 and they receive help with their resumes and make a laser print of the resume. The members also will get their resumes printed and sent to potential employers. The Placement Center's staff looks out for possible leads for which an individual may be qualified and sends their resume to the employer.

Either way, whether you choose to pay for the extras of the service or not, the University Placement Center is a program that is waiting to help students find a job.

So next time you are sitting on the couch deciding if you want to stay just "one more year" think about the opportunities that await an intelligent student from SIU-C.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Student gets 'shut up' as an answer when questioning motive of police

It was a Friday night, last Friday, when I and seven of my friends were walking down Main Street carrying six packs of unopened beer. We had plans for that beer, we were planning to drink it when we arrived at the gathering of college students some blocks away. We were going to a party.

I was walking in the front of our merry troupe and as I started to cross a street about a block from the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, two Carbondale police cars, exhibiting police-like efficiency, pulled in front of me and stopped as I was about to cross the street.

As red and blue lights flashed, two officers got out of the cars and one of them asked to see our identification. Then he changed his mind, "Let me see the identification of everyone with beer." He said that because all of us weren't carrying beer.

I turned over my drivers license to one of the police officers as did everyone I was with except my roommate. He didn't bring his drivers license so the police officer who seemed to be running the bust called in my roommate's name to the National Registration of Living People, or some such organization.

As it turned out, my roommate did in fact exist and he was as old as he said he was. But as the first police officer was doing his research I decided to do something I considered harmless, or at least lawful; I said to the second police officer, "Excuse me, but what was your cause?"

I watch "LA Law" like everybody else, so I know a police officer is supposed to have "probable cause" for shaking you down, and I asked the question politely, not yet sure of my new status as street attorney.

Nevertheless, I don't think I could have gotten that police officer; much madder if I had stolen his gun and shot him in the foot.

"There are 20,000 college students in this town. That's my cause," he said.

Oh, I get it, guilt by association, I thought. No wait, that couldn't be it because it isn't illegal to be a college student. At this point, as you can imagine, I had to admit my confusion. I said that I didn't see how that was relevant and that got him even madder. He told me to "shut up" and implied that something bad was going to happen to me if I didn't.

Viewpoint

Once more I asked him a question to which he responded, "You're just like my wife, always have to get the last word in."

So that's it, I thought, he doesn't want me to speak. I wasn't about to take that sort of treatment so I said, "Sir, I will not hold my peace, but speak my mind freely though I be hanged at Jackson County Jail for my pains."

Actually I didn't say that, John Liburn said that in 1637 (except for the part about Jackson County Jail) when he was told to stop preaching to a London crowd.

Since the policeman had a night stick, a gun and a badge (meaning he could put me in jail) what I did say was "I apologize, I didn't mean to offend you." Notice I got the last word in.

After, I told my friends that I would have said the same thing Liburn said if I'd have thought of it at the time.

Soon the police were done with their police work and, still determined, I asked the other police officer the same question I asked the first.

He was a bit more responsive to my question and said something about a couple of us looking younger than 21 (two of us were under 21, but neither of them were carrying the beer), and then he accused me of being an honor student. He said that because my roommate had told him the reason we were walking down the street with beer (all of it unopened) was because we were going to a bring-your-own party for a history honor society.

I told him, yes, as far as the History department is concerned I guess I am an honor student.

Eventually the pleasant interchange between the Carbondale police force and ourselves was over and we continued on our way.

As I look back on the situation, it seems that the mistake I made with the police officers and the reason we were not able to carry on a civil conversation was the fact that I addressed the police officer directly and that I asked him why he was exercising his duties as a police officer. Apparently, the police officer was affronted by this. If he could have, he surely would have taken me in and charged me with questioning authority.

I'm not saying all Carbondale Police are as unreasonable as the one with whom I had my discussion with. As a reporter, I covered the police last semester, and the ones I met were friendly and reasonable fellows and ladies.

But in this case, I was not speaking to the police as professional to professional, but as police to police-victim. This public servant wasn't about to brook dissent from a member of the public.

I have no doubt that police often must deal with people who are less than polite to them, neither do I dispute that the police had a legitimate cause for checking the identification of several college-age people walking down the street with six packs of beer.

But it seems to me that police hold a position in our society, in our town, that carries along with it almost undue power, and crossing the line from exercise to abuse of that power should be guarded against with great vigilance.

While rude treatment by a Woody Hall bureaucrat, a government agent, and rude treatment from a police officer, another government agent, is inappropriate in both cases, the officer's rudeness carries with it an implicit threat. It comes from a person, public servant though he is, who is sanctioned to arrest and commit violence on other citizens. This sanction requires that police act with a restraint equal to their power.

Helms' proposal no reason to claim censorship of the arts, clouds issue

I read with interest the recent article and editorial regarding Sen. Jesse Helms proposal to restrict the types of art which the National Endowment for the Arts would be allowed to support.

I admit that I am not at all surprised at the panic of some supporters of the arts over this proposal but I think they have gone far afield in searching for reasons to object to the proposal. The immediate (one might almost say Pavlovian) response is that the proposal is censorship of the arts.

Let me first make clear my own position. I think the government should not support the arts at all. If art is valid, if it is important, if it is worthwhile it should be supported by those who care about it, by those who are interested in it and by those who feel it is significant.

For many years we have been contributors to the St. Louis Art Museum, the St. Louis Zoo, the Missouri Botanical Garden as well as numerous eleemosynary institutions. I think others ought to support the institutions and artists in whom they are interested and who seem to them to give valid expression to something good in the world.

Why should the government take my tax money and give it to someone whose work to me seems infantile or who denigrates what I see as worthwhile and important. Let those who like and appreciate that sort of art support it and let them not ask me to participate in something that appears to me at best meaningless and at worst odious.

If you wish to support an artist who stands up a plate of rusty steel and calls it art that is fine, go to it. Just don't ask me to provide my support to something I see as patently ridiculous.

Regarding the issue of censorship I think those who raise this issue have lost sight of some significant realities in our world. First of all they must know that any time government funding is involved there are strings attached to those funds.

Certainly anyone in the University community must know this. By the very nature of a representative government we understand that there must be rules and judgements made in the expenditure of those funds. (This seems to me an excellent reason why there should be no National Endowment for the Arts, because of this very necessity.)

Until utopia arrives this issue will remain. Deal with it however you wish but don't try to cloud the issue by crying censorship.

In the second place it is foolish on the face of it to say in effect that if one does not support something by contributing funds to it one is censoring that effort. I do not happen to like heavy metal music, I don't buy the records and I don't attend the concerts.

Does that make me guilty of censoring the development and artists of heavy metal? Such a view seems to me to be far afield from any normal understanding of censorship.

Why should it be different for the National Endowment for the Arts? Furthermore, does this mean that all those artists and artistic endeavors which are not supported by the National Endowment (and there are millions) are being censored.

Surely the most biased proponents of government support of the arts would not try to insist that every artist and every artistic endeavor should be given funds by the government to pursue their muse.

To all of you who are concerned about Sen. Helms' proposal I urge you to debate it and seek to persuade others to your view.

But, as the recently popular phrase expresses it, "Get real." Deal with the real issues of what should or should not be supported by the government.

Those of you who claim to be knowledgeable in the arts give it your wholehearted support and dig in your own pocket, no in mine, to support it. And please, please do not cloud the issue with red herring of censorship. — Robert R. Oleson, General Accounting Department.

Racism not just a South African woe

The recent massacre in South Africa, to my dismay, wasn't considered front page news by our Daily Egyptian staff, but what else is new?

While whites in South Africa were worried about what they would wear to Wednesday's elections, blacks were being shot at random by overzealous police units. F.W. de Klerk, who has been singing the praise of his party's victory, interpreted his party's narrow election victory as a mandate to act on a party platform based on giving blacks a voice in national affairs. If Wednesday's massacres were any indication of his new platform then that whole country is in trouble.

September 6 marked the day of needless killings by a lunatic government — to borrow a phrase used only for Kaddafi. Up to 29 people were killed that day, including a 13-year-old boy and a 67-year-old woman.

A witness said, "After the one of the policemen shot the 13-year-old boy in the head, he walked up to him and said to one of his colleagues, 'I feel like finishing him off...'"

Is this reform my fellow students and peers?

Until South Africa is freed of such terrorism, no black man will be truly free. You may think that what happens in South Africa has no bearing on your happiness, but I ask you to reconsider by looking at what happened in New York to Yusef Hawkins. Racism isn't a South African problem but an international one. Whatever happens throughout the world affects each and every one of us.

South Africa and its merciless government might not make the front page of our DE, but it will always be at the forefront of my mind. — Myron Hoskins, senior.

Student wants police apology, free game ticket

On Sept. 16, 1989, at halftime during the SIU football game, on the visitors side of the field, the students of SIU were throwing around a football in the stands that was supposedly taken from the football field by a unknown person.

This unknown person was identified as me, Brian Schroeder, by a female that told police in front of that she thought it was me.

I was then removed from the bleachers during the third quarter, which happened to be the quarter that 10 points were scored by the offense. It was also the quarter that a boom w. lowered on the quarterback by the defense.

I was taken by police escort to the SIU Police Station and was told to sit in the lobby. Approximately 10 minutes went by when I got out of my chair and ask the police officer what I was being charged with. His reply was nothing at this time.

So I asked the police officer to return me to the game. The officer said no because of the department policy.

I then left the police station and ran all the way back to the football game. I returned to my seat only to be greeted by a standing ovation by the section I was sitting in.

The point I am trying to make from this episode is that it is not the job of the SIU police to judge the case of the crime that was committed, that is the job of the courts.

I was found guilty by the SIU Police Department, I was removed from the football game that I paid to see and I was embarrassed. I was also dropped off at the police station only to have to run back to the game.

I feel that the SIU Police Department owes me an apology and a free game ticket for the next home football game. — Brian Schroeder, education training development.

Cable use a problem for Carbondale resident

As a current customer of TCI, I don't feel that I am getting what I am paying for. I am speaking for others as well as myself.

Carbondale already has very few channels and to think that one can pay for monthly cable service to alleviate this problem is very untrue. It seems every other day it's one thing after another.

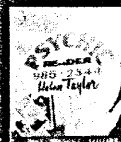

Installation takes forever, channels go out and the sound leaves. Why is that? It's like not having cable at all if you can't enjoy it and not spend most of the time reporting malfunctions. Isn't it funny how the sound is restored just as soon as "Yo!" goes off?

For those of you who contemplate getting cable, first remember the old saying "let the buyer beware" because you sure don't know what you're getting until you get it.

TCI, as a result of your poor service, you will probably see an increase in video movie rentals as a source of entertainment. TCI of Illinois, what is the problem? — Leslie L. Timms, senior, business education.

Ashraf's main concern is that serving food in the condition of the apples violates Illinois Department of Public Health regulations.

"This is obviously neglect on the part of the vendors," Ashraf said.

Stewart Gilmore, district manager for the Canteen Corp. in Carbondale, said he was unaware of a problem, but did say they have had problems in the past with apples this time of year.

Gilmore said Canteen gets apples from a distributor in Washington, and often the apples must be sorted through upon receipt and the bad ones thrown away. "Last year we got a case of 100 apples, and about 80 had to be thrown away," Gilmore said.

Why the rotten apples weren't removed during regular servicing of the machines — at least every other day — is neglect on the part of the employee, Gilmore said. He said action possibly is pending against the employee for other problems on the job.

Gilmore said complaints are called into University Enterprises, which administers service contracts, and then Canteen is called. An employee is then sent to remedy the problem.

Within an hour of interviewing Gilmore, the rotten apples were removed from the Communications Building machine.

Wirth said all calls are logged in an effort to keep track of what is going on with the machines so that service can be improved.

Wirth said the 30 to 50 calls per month usually concern machines having mechanical problems. He said very rarely is food quality a complaint.

we wanted to go to the 911 system."

Harris said Jackson County is proposing a 911 countywide system, which won't be in place for another 18 months.

Harris said the countywide system would not benefit the University.

"I see no benefit to us because if a person off campus used the 911 system, they would probably get Jackson County or the city, where ever the dispatch would be," he said. "As it is right now, if the city needs assistance from us, we have a direct line telephone. They pick it up and we assist them."

Harris said the reason the SIU-C is the first public state university to use the 911 system is because his department went to a new phone system.

He said the cost of the system was an extra $200 to $300.

Hawkins said the administration has been willing to negotiate on drugs, clean air, Contra funding and the federal budget, and is pushing for a cut in the capital gains tax "for the rich," but "will not even discuss a modest wage gain improving the plight of the minimum wage workers."

The federal minimum was not increased since 1981 and Hawkins said Congress "cannot permit this to continue." The minimum wage "is currently at its lowest level relative to the average wage in this country since 1949" and has lost about 31 percent of its purchasing power since 1981, he said.

The Democrats' new bill would allow a training wage for new employees who have less than 60 days prior employment. The rate would be $3.35 for the first year and then 85 percent ($3.61) of the regular minimum in 1991.

Police Blotter

A fatal car crash involving a Carbondale man occurred Monday evening at the intersection of Old Murphysboro Road and North Tower Road, Carbondale Police said.

Danny Watters, 27, of Rt. 4 in Carbondale was fatally wounded after his car collided with a truck driven by David R. Morrison, 27, of Mulkey Town, authorities said.

A Carbondale Police investigation revealed that Watters, who was traveling west on Old Murphysboro Road, turned in front of Morrison's oncoming truck, police said.

Watters was pronounced dead at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale.

Any one who says comedy is just funny business has never met Jack Thomas. Once a successful lawyer, Jack walked away from his thriving practice in Columbus, Ohio, to embark upon a very serious career in stand-up comedy. While Jack has performed with comedy dynamos such as Emo Phillips and Judy Tenuta, he works predominantly by himself—just a guy in a suit, alone on stage, facing the challenge of stand-up comedy, aptly described by trumpeter Al Hirt as "just you up there with your face hanging out." According to the critics, Jack shoots for a higher, more original form of comedy, with a common sense approach to more controversial issues. Whatever his style, you're "liable" to love this lawyer-turned-comedian!

Nitz claims she had no part in the killing of Miley

METROPOLIS (UPI)—Rita Nitz, accused of helping her ex-husband murder a 23-year-old Murphysboro man, said she had no part in the killing.

Nitz's husband, Richard, was found guilty last year of the April 1988 murder of Michael Miley, 23, and was sentenced to death.

Rita Nitz, 30, was the first witness Monday for the defense. She answered only two questions put to her by defense attorney Robert Drew.

The first question dealt with purchases made with the dead man's credit cards.

The second was very direct: "Did you participate in any way in the death of Michael Miley?" Nitz was asked. "No, I did not," she answered.

Under a three-hour cross examination by Williamson County State's Attorney Charles Garnati, Nitz insisted that Garnati call her by her legal name—Rita Brookmyer. She was divorced several months ago from Richard Nitz.

Nitz said on the day Miley disappeared April 6, 1988 she spent part of the day in Murphysboro doing laundry. Miley's body was found three days later in the trunk of a car.

Nitz said her husband was with her for part of the day, but she said he was not living with her in their mobile home at the time.

Nitz detailed how her husband awakened her early on April 7 about 2 a.m. or 3 a.m. and insisted she help him free his car, which he said was stuck in mud.

She said she drove into the country with him in her car and helped free the car.

Nitz said she noticed a wet spot on the ground near the car and thought it was oil. She testified her husband told her it was blood. She said she also noticed a pile of leaves a short distance away with what looked like a pair of blue jeans sticking out and it was at about that time her husband asked her if she had ever seen a dead body.

Garnati asked her if that made her suspicious.

"I thought it was another one of his scare tactics," she said.

She said her husband had talked before of having killed someone.

Throughout her testimony Nitz was unmoved and frequently said she could not recall certain events. She also appeared confused at times by Garnati's questions.

The prosecution contends Miley was shot in the head with a handgun owned by Rita Nitz that she allowed her husband to use.

Neither the weapon nor Miley's head have been found.

Honor camp escapees still on the run, search continues

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

Two inmates who escaped from the Menard Correctional Center honor farm late Monday were still at large Tuesday, Boniface Gross, prison superintendent, said.

At about 1 a.m. Monday, inmates Roger Morrison and Ricky Daniel Phelps overpowered a guard at the honor camp and stole his keys and fled in the guard's car, according to news reports.

"They are not believed to be armed and dangerous," Gross said.

Morrison and Phelps tied up the guard, who was not hurt. The guard freed himself shortly after and alerted other security personnel about the escape, reports said.

Chester Police spotted the vehicle shortly after the escape and gave chase. Morrison and Phelps stopped the car near a covered bridge on Mary's River between Chester and Steelville, where they ran into a wooded area.

"We have no reason to believe that the escapees are anywhere but the Steelville area," Gross said.

Steelville is about 31 miles northwest of Carbondale.

The search is centered in an area around Illinois Route 150 between Chester and Steelville.

Gross also said that Monday afternoon a white 1978 Chevrolet pick-up truck was stolen from the Bremen area, which is about six miles southwest of Steelville.

Gross said he didn't think there was a connection between the truck theft and the two escapees.

The honor farm where the two were being held is, according to

Gross, "a farm that is outside the compounds of the correctional center where the prisoners raise crops and cattle."

"The honor farm is a minimum security facility with no fences," he said.

Morrison was serving six years for burglary, and Phelps was serving seven years for burglary.

Gross described Morrison as a white male, 5 feet, 7 inches tall and weighing 140 pounds, with brown hair, brown eyes and a medium complexion. Tattooed on his upper left arm is a cross.

Gross described Phelps as a white male, 6 feet, 2 inches tall and weighing 185 pounds, with blond hair and brown eyes. He has a tattoo of a bull on his left forearm and a cobra on his right forearm.

Students get chance to study abroad in Australian program

By Curtis Winston
Staff Writer

The University wants to make a trade.

For one semester, some SIU-C students would go to study at Curtin University of Technology in Perth, Australia, while students from that university would come to SIU-C.

The International Programs and Services Study Abroad office will hold an information session for students interested in the semester in Australia at 3 p.m. today at 803 S. Oakland Ave.

Jonnie Negus, a senior in political science from Curtin who is spending this semester at SIU-C, said her work load here is about the same as it was in Australia.

"We do sort of a heavier load in high school," Negus said, explaining that many of the classes Americans take in a college general studies curriculum would be taken during high school.

"Once in college we don't have to take the core English courses," she said.

Jim Miller, a senior in aviation management who studied at Curtin last spring, said the Australian approach to education doesn't stress good grades.

"They don't put a lot of emphasis on GPAs. It's just earn a degree and get out," Miller said.

But Miller said he likes the American approach better because it stresses hands-on experience. In Australia, theories are taught, but with little or no demonstrations on how to apply them he said.

"At our University they teach you theories and how to apply them. It's much more pragmatic," he said.

Students in the exchange program also get to experience the differences in American and Australian social life.

"The Aussies are harder to crack," Miller said. "You have to know them for a long time before they will start relating to you... they aren't as superficial as some Americans."

But the Australians also are more "laid back" than their American counterparts, Miller

Jim Miller, right, senior in aviation management, with an emu at a wildlife park near Sydney, Australia last spring. He was participating in a Study Abroad exchange program with Curtin University of Technology in Perth.

said. While at Curtin, he lived in a house with other male students and participated in many of the same leisure activities that go on in Carbondale.

Mark O'Keefe, Study Abroad graduate assistant, said the program gives students "a really good opportunity to learn overseas and study outside of the classroom."

In Australian education, theories are taught, but with little or no demonstrations on how to apply them, Jim Miller, who studied at Curtin University of Technology, in Perth, Australia, said.

"I backpacked all over," he said.

Negus, who is living in Allen I, a residence hall on East Campus, said Australian dorm life is "totally different" from the SIU-C way.

"It's not as strict (in Australia)," Negus said. "There isn't any problem with alcohol like there is here."

One aspect of dorm life that Negus found consistent in both the United States and Australia is the food. "The food is about the same — pretty bad."

He said the exchange with Curtin works especially well because that university sends an equal number of its students to SIU-C to study.

"They teach things we don't have and we teach things they don't have," he said.

Five students from each university are allowed to participate in the exchange program each calendar year, sending two or three each semester.

For details on participating in the exchange, contact O'Keefe at 453-7670.

Prospective college students face tougher aid restrictions

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

Prospective college students should be on the lookout for Congressional proposals mandating military or civilian service in exchange for student financial aid, according to a United States Student Association newsletter.

"The government may ask students to pick up garbage, be a scholastic football coach or serve in the military to receive any type of aid," Julius Davis, vice president of USSA, said.

The movement towards this type of legislation began last year when the Nunn-McCurdy proposal was presented to Congress. The proposal stated that in order to receive student aid, students must serve in civilian or military positions for a minimum of two years.

Two years in a civilian service post would earn $20,000 in student aid and two years in a military post would earn $24,000 in student aid, Davis said.

USSA's main goal is to make education a priority with the government, Julianne Marley, USSA president, said.

"This program completely cuts out need-based aid, student loans and student grants," Davis said. "It ties student aid to service when aid should be based on need."

"There is a disturbing trend away from grants to loans. For example, in 1980, the government gave out 900,000 loans. This year they gave out 3.5 million loans," Davis said.

"This program completely cuts out need-based aid,"

—Julius Davis

As USSA sees it, one of the major problems with the program is its appeal to low- and middle-income classes into service, while those who don't need aid do not have to consider service to afford college, Davis said.

"If you are rich enough, you do not need to serve," Davis said. "Of course we're not saying community or military service is bad, but it can be done without the need for financial incentives," Davis said.

Another problem with the proposal is its expense, he said. The cost to implement the service programs would come out of the education budget, therefore allowing for even less money to be allocated to students, Davis said.

The proposal has been tabled for this year, Davis said, but could come up again next year in a modified form.

One example of a modified form is the Kennedy proposal, which is currently being discussed by Congress, he said. The Kennedy proposal is similar to the Nunn-McCurdy proposal, but does not take away need-based aid, Davis said.

"Basically, the problem is the government. They are saying 'don't count on us for education because we're here to help business,'" Davis said. "The federal government will give tax breaks to big companies before they'll invest in education."

Good Samaritan Ministries helps needy in community

By Dale Walker
Staff Writer

The Good Samaritan House, a shelter for homeless people, is just one of the services that Good Samaritan Ministries provides for persons or families who are in need of food, clothing, shelter or financial aid, the director of Good Samaritan House said.

The ministries is in the process of renovating a women's transitional house at 306 N. University Ave. At least five women and a full-time staff member will live there, Elsie Speck said.

The women will pay about 30 percent of their income for room and board at the two-story, four-bedroom house. The house will be ready for use this year, she said.

The ministries also provides men's transitional housing on the first floor of the Good Samaritan House, Speck said.

Besides assisting with food and lodging, the ministries help people in other ways, she said.

"We provided utilities assistance for about 150 families to the tune of about $12,000," Speck said.

The group also provides emergency transportation to travelers, she said.

The ministries began seven years ago, Speck said. At the outset, it consisted of the Carbondale Food Bank, 700 S. Oakland Ave. and the Good Samaritan House, which was then located in a few offices in the city hall but was moved to 701 S. Marion Ave. in December of 1983.

Good Samaritan House provides food and shelter for about 20 people, Speck said.

David Porter, a 1974 graduate of SIU-C with a degree in math and a former employee of Hewlett-Packard, is staying at the house.

"I was temporarily displaced from my home and I've been staying there for about three weeks," he said. "It's surprising to think that a person with a degree would need a place like Good Samaritan House," Porter said, but, "this (being homeless) can happen to people in almost every class."

"Our main source of funding (for these services) is grants, but the community has been supportive with donations," Speck said.

The ministries have received grants from the Illinois Department of Public Aid, Department of Housing and Urban Development, Federal Emergency Management Agency, Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, Carbondale Interchurch Council, United Way, Presbyterian Church and private donations.

SIU-C curriculum discussed

Faculty, students meet to talk about needed transformations

By Sean Hannigan
Staff Writer

Christina Brinkley-Carter, director of Black American Studies, passed around what she called a copy of a "nigger application" for employment to the group gathered to discuss curriculum transformation at SIU-C.

Carter said the racist gag was just one example of the reasons black students on campus feel that whites are hostile toward them.

The racist "nigger application" originated from Eastern Illinois University but was used as an example of the stereotypes black students must face every day.

About 40 faculty, staff and students gathered at the Wham Building Tuesday to discuss revisions in course curriculum throughout the campus.

Curriculum transformation would have faculty re-examine the way their classes are taught and make necessary changes. Women's studies is sponsoring a seminar throughout the semester to help faculty and get input from them.

Tuesday's discussion focused on overviewing the basics of curriculum transformation. Later sessions will cover teaching techniques and methods of restructuring courses and the material available to teachers.

One possible solution offered to stereotyping by race, class or gender is revising the way classes are taught by putting an emphasis on various perspectives, according to Kathryn B. Ward, women's studies coordinator.

"We are simply at a point of crisis," Brinkley-Carter said. She said the lack of inclusion of all perspectives, "is mainly going to affect whites, because it has already affected the minorities.

"We have education through omission," said Brinkley-Carter. Black Studies is working with Women's Studies to move beyond specific classes that cater to a gender or race perspective.

Carter said they would like to see all areas on campus include aspects of those specific classes.

"The graduates of a university need to know how to live, work and survive with diverse groups of people," Ward said.

Ward said curriculum changes should match a changing society. She cited predictions that in 10 years half the labor force will be female and by 2,030 whites will be a minority in the U. S.

"These goals are attainable. We have a lot of experts on curriculum transformation at this University," Ward said.

Illinois job conference for disabled only one for students in country

By Douglas Powell
Staff Writer

A job conference for college students with disabilities will be held Oct. 5 and 6 at Sangamon State University in Springfield, an Illinois Department of Rehabilitation Services spokesman said.

Tom Jones, the coordinator of the conference, said last year there were 39 recruiters and 96 students with disabilities in attendance.

"This conference is the only job conference in the nation for college students with disabilities," Jones said. "We get registrations from all over the central United States."

Lois Naegle, assistant coordinator of Disabled Student Services, said she was sent registration forms for the conference and students can pick them up at her office.

The conference is sponsored by the Illinois Department of Rehabilitation Services, Sangamon State University and the University of Illinois.

Registration for the conference ends Sept. 25.

Jones encouraged interested students to beat the deadline date and contact him at 217-333-4624.

Recital offered by prof

By Katherine Lydon
Staff Writer

A free organ recital will be presented by Marianne Webb, professor of music and University Organist, at 8 p.m. Friday in Shryock Auditorium.

The nationally known Webb will highlight Bach, Eben, Franck, Gigout, Saint-Saens, and Simonds in her presentation.

Webb said the concert will appeal to a wide audience because of the variety of pieces she will perform. Because her last two recitals presented one composer each, she said, "I'm looking forward to play this public appeal composition very much."

One of Webb's students, Mary Mathews, a junior majoring in music, said, "Miss Webb plays brilliantly with constant sensitivity. She's a true artist at the organ and fills her music with emotion and excitement. We're very fortunate to have one of the leading concert organists, organ instructors, and clinicians right here in Southern Illinois."

As first release, 'On the Edge' promising for new Chicago band

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Album Review

Among the new tapes released recently some new talent deserves attention.

AWOL, a quartet from Chicago, Ill., tries to make a foothold for itself in the hard commercial rock market. If their debut tape is any indication of their talent, these guys are definitely going somewhere.

AWOL's first single off their "On the Edge" tape, "Revolution," has been released locally and is working its way south, from Crystal Lake to Champaign, Danville and DeKalb. "Revolution" is a straightforward piece that really shows off the band's musical range. As an ensemble, these four have a good sound.

Although the tape lacks a ballad, cuts like "The Night's Still Young" and "In Your Arms Again" show the band's softer side. "The Edge" is more of a rocker in both music and lyrics and has a really driving guitar part. The closest AWOL comes to a bad track is "Outta Control," which just moves too fast and loses the tightness the band had displayed up to that point.

The band combines the best parts of White Lion's mood, John Waite's vocals, and Ronnie James Dio's guitar work. In places AWOL sounds like other bands, but the similarities aren't too stark and the result is a good one.

AWOL has real potential. "On the Edge" is a good debut release and if they keep rolling south, Carbondale may get a chance to hear a rising band as it begins to take off.

Michael Monroe, the former lead singer of the Scandinavian quintet Hanoi Rocks, who has released his first solo work, "Not Fakin' It," is a less promising artist.

Despite being hailed by his record label as "erotic and menacing," Monroe's tape lacks the energy found in other hard rockers.

Monroe's first cut, "Dead, Jail or Rock 'n' Roll," isn't much of an attention-grabber. His voice sounds like Bryan Adams' in "It's Only Love," but with a little more bite. The song wouldn't be so bad, but there is an annoying harmonica playing in the background that gets in the way of the guitar riffs, and the backing vocalist sound much better than Monroe.

"She's No Angel" stumbles between Aerosmith's humorous "Rag Doll" and the sly innuendos in a lot of AC/DC's lyrics. It basically falls flat. Also, there's a hyperactive, Little Richard-style piano playing throughout the song that seems so out-of-place it's distracting.

Monroe isn't all that bad. His tape just lacks the energy and intensity that other hard rockers have. He tries to be Billy Idol, but lacks the power and punch that Idol delivers. If he toned down his outlook a little, he could have a shot at adding a unique sound to the pop scene. As a lusty, rebellious rocker, he just doesn't deliver on this tape.

National Film Registry selections range from 'Star Wars' to 'Vertigo'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Movies reflecting American culture, from the stark showdown of good vs. evil in "High Noon" to the comic nightmare of nuclear war in "Dr. Strangelove," got the government's stamp of approval as "national treasures" Tuesday.

The first 25 films to be placed in the National Film Registry were announced by Librarian of Congress James Billington.

The National Film Registry was specified by the National Film Preservation Act, passed by Congress in 1988. Under the legislation, the librarian of Congress will name up to 25 "culturally, historically or aesthetically significant" films to the registry each year for three years.

"Make no mistake, this list of 25 films is not a list of the best 25 American films," said Billington. "Film critics and scholars could not agree on such a list, and the Library of Congress would not embark on any such futile exercise. This is not Academy Awards night."

Billington said, "This list ... should suggest to the American public the breadth of great American filmmaking. ... The films named today are important to America's culture and history."

The entire list, in alphabetical order, features: "The Best Years of Our Lives," "Casablanca," "Citizen Kane," "The Crowd,"

"Dr. Strangelove," "The General," "Gone With The Wind," "The Grapes of Wrath," "High Noon," "Intolerance," "The Learning Tree," "The Maltese Falcon," "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" and "Modern Times."

Also, "Nanook of the North," "On the Waterfront," "The Searchers," "Singin' in the Rain," "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "Some Like It Hot" and "Star Wars," "Sunrise," "Sunset Boulevard," "Vertigo" and "The Wizard of Oz."

The 25 films chosen were drawn from recommendations from the general public, the National Film Preservation Board and the librarian of Congress.

Wildlife refuge landfill sites for contaminants discussed

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

Landfill location and the length of the public comment were the main concerns of citizens attending a Monday hearing on the cleanup of soil at the Crab Orchard National Wildlife Refuge, which is contaminated with metals.

"The one-week extension is what I call a token gesture," Rene Cook, a member of the Regional Association of Concerned Environmentalists, said. "It insults the community."

The hearing, held at the Student Center, was part of a one-week extension of the public comment period the Environmental Protection Agency added because of public interest, Mary Logan, project manager, said. The period will end Sept. 23.

The controversy centers on the fact that the EPA has yet to choose a landfill site for storage of treated contaminants, which Logan said will be done under the strictest safety criteria.

Glen Smart, representing the Fish and Wildlife Service at the hearing, told those in attendance there is a 5-million gallon, concrete water storage facility on the refuge. Smart said the facility was built during World War II and has never been used.

The controversy centers on the fact that the EPA has yet to choose a landfill site.

Logan said although no decision had been made concerning the location of the landfill, she was confident there are acceptable sites on the refuge, including the water tanks.

Another main concern for citizens was the document outlining the EPA's proposed plan, which critics say is much too long for people to read and too difficult to understand in the time allotted.

"I thought all I had to do was read through the report and it would answer all of my questions and it doesn't," Karen Fitzmaurice, graduate student in hydro-geology at the University of Kentucky, said.

Fitzmaurice earned her bachelor's of science degree in geology from SIU-C.

The cleanup plan was released last month after a study identified 31 areas contaminated with metals, such as lead and cadmium, and polychlorinated biphenyls, which have been linked to cancer.

The plan proposes incineration of PCB-laden soil and then solidifying the ash and metal-laden earth using a concrete-like mixture. The blocks would then be placed in the landfill and monitored for 30 years.

The contamination of these areas took place from the 1940s to the 1960s while Sangamo Electric Co. was in operation on the refuge.

The cleanup is expected to cost almost $28 million. The metals part of the plan will cost an estimated $2.7 million.

The public comment period for PCB cleanup has been extended until Oct. 16. A hearing is scheduled for 7 p.m. Oct. 3 in the Student Center.

Radioactive waste increases

Illinois plant storing most fuel than any other plant in country

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Radioactive waste from U.S. nuclear power plants, weapons facilities and uranium mills has increased by 20 percent since 1980, but the government has made little progress on safe disposal methods, an anti-nuclear group charged Tuesday.

Chio was one of the key states named by Public Citizen, a group established by consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

Public Citizen said federal documents show the amount of radioactive waste awaiting permanent disposal nationwide has grown from 122 million cubic meters in 1980 to 146 million cubic meters by the end of 1988.

"This is enough to fill more than 14,000 miles of railroad hopper cars, stretching coast-to-coast almost five times over," the group said in a report titled "Nuclear Legacy: An Overview of the Places, Problems and Politics of Radioactive Waste in the United States.

The report said the total volume of waste is expected to grow another 7 percent to 155 million cubic meters by the year 2,000.

Uranium mill tailings — the least radioactive type of waste — account for 96 percent of the total volume of waste, the report said, while federal nuclear weapons facilities are responsible for 97 percent of the nation's most dangerous "high-level" wastes.

It said the amount of spent reactor fuel now being stored at nuclear plants has almost tripled from 1980 and that, by 1995, 33 commercial reactors will have filled up their temporary storage facilities.

The report said the Morris nuclear plant at Morris, Ill., was storing more fuel than any other nuclear plant in the country, with 260 cubic meters on site.

Other plants storing large amounts of fuel are Zion, located at Zion, Ill.; Cook, Bridgman, Mich.; Oconee, Seneca, S.C.; Surry, Gravel Neck, Va.; Millstone, Waterford, Conn.; Peach Bottom, Peach Bottom, Pa.; and Quad Cities, Cordova, Ill.

The report said the states with the greatest amount of radioactive waste — excluding mill tailings — within their borders are: South Carolina, 1.26 million cubic meters; Washington, 1.2 million; Tennessee, 457,135; Nevada, 352,140; Idaho, 350,410; Ohio, 308,537; New Mexico, 220,360; Kentucky, 146,451; Illinois, 89,425; and New York, 80,706.

The states with the biggest volume of high-level radioactive waste from commercial power plants and federal nuclear weapons plants are Washington, South Carolina and Idaho.

Despite the growing problem, Public Citizen said the government has made little progress in establishing permanent burial facilities.

Bush asks Congress to address environmental protection package

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — President Bush combined a call to Congress Tuesday to act promptly on his environmental protection package with an appeal to Americans to help wipe out "millions of small, diverse sources" of pollution in their own backyards.

Declaring that "every day that passes is another day that we're postponing progress," Bush urged quick action with the charge. "We have an opportunity to renew the environmental ethic in America and that's an opportunity we can't afford to miss."

Capping a two-day Western swing where he celebrated state centennials with ceremonial tree plantings in South Dakota and Montana on Monday and Tuesday in Washington state, Bush said under a startling blue sky, "I took this trip out West because I'm concerned — as I think we all are — about the future of the planet we share. You see, it won't be enough to restore our balance of trade if we throw off the balance of nature."

And with the call to action on the $14 billion to $19 billion environmental package he proposed June 12, Bush melded another pitch along the lines of his "thou-

"It won't be enough to restore our balance of trade if we throw off the balance of nature."

—George Bush

sand points of light" volunteerism concept, urging Americans to pitch in and help.

Pointing to the "millions of small, diverse sources (that) contribute to these problems — including the everyday behavior of people at work and at home," he said, "Today I'm asking all Americans to join in a renewed spirit of conservation, a commitment, to a more careful stewardship of the natural world."

Speaking Tuesday to the celebrants of Washington's 100th birthday at Riverside Park with House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash.,

at his side, he said, "When it comes to clean air, we need action on the legislation we've proposed — now. Every day that passes is another day that we're postponing progress on clean air."

"Now it is up to the Congress to pass this clean air legislation, and pass it this year," he declared before planting the third symbolic tree of his trip and heading back to Washington.

Although Foley, Bush's host for the ceremonies, was sporting a popular button featuring side-by-side photos of Bush and Foley, he said only hours earlier it was unlikely Congress would finish the sweeping rewrite of the Clean Air Act before early next year. And, Foley predicted, the bill would not be exactly as the president proposed.

For Bush, who stressed that his environmental cleanup plan "can co-exist" with economic realities and that marketplace pressures can help conservation efforts, the overnight trip afforded ideal settings to renew his push for the anti-pollution package that he showcased in late spring.

Hurricane hits Puerto Rico, headed for Bahamas, U.S.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (UPI) — Hurricane Hugo aimed its howling winds toward the vacation resorts of the Bahamas Tuesday, leaving at least 12 dead, more than 100 injured and thousands homeless in Puerto Rico and other West Indian islands.

Unconfirmed reports from ham radio operators and other sources indicated the death toll in the islands from the northern Caribbean's mightiest hurricane in a decade might rise to three dozen.

The deadly storm had weakened since Monday morning, when its maximum sustained winds were clocked at 140 mph near Puerto Rico, the National Hurricane Center near Miami reported. At noon Tuesday, top winds were 105 mph but the storm could regain strength over open, warm waters.

Forecasters said Hugo might hit somewhere on the U.S. East Coast in the next three or four days. A series of high and low-pressure systems were tugging the storm in different directions.

"There's a big battle going on between all those systems to determine exactly where Hugo will end up," hurricane center director Bob Sheets said.

Forecasters had plotted three potential paths — one that would bring Hugo ashore in central Florida, one taking it to North Carolina, and one curving it eastward into the open Atlantic.

Puerto Rico, reeling in Hugo's wake, struggled to prevent looting, re-establish island communications and assess damage.

"It was just howling — the howling just wouldn't stop," John Lawrence, a newlywed from Salt Lake City, Utah, said at the wind-battered Caribe Hilton in San Juan.

"That's what was scary.

"I thought I had seen it all with some of the blizzards we have in Utah but this was the craziest thing I've ever seen."

The storm's center was at latitude 22.2 north, longitude 68.5 west at noon — 175 miles east-northeast of Grand Turk Island in the Turks and Caicos chain off the southern Bahamas. It was moving northwest at 12 mph.

Hurricane warnings were downgraded to tropical storm warnings for the southern Bahamas and the Turks and Caicos. A hurricane watch was posted for the central Bahamas.

Forecasters said Hugo might hit somewhere on the U.S. East Coast in the next three or four days.

In Washington, the Pentagon said it was evacuating about 600 people — military and civilian — from the U.S. Naval Undersea Center at Andros Island in the Bahamas as a precaution. The center conducts research in anti-submarine warfare.

The British-administered Turks and Caicos were expected to be brushed but not struck head-on by Hugo. Skies were overcast and winds were picking up Tuesday morning.

Warnings were canceled for the Dominican Republic, where at least 1,000 families in its north-eastern sector poured into schools, hospitals and government buildings Monday night for shelter against Hugo's fierce winds. Hugo's eye passed some 100 miles to the north, sparing residents its full fury.

There were contradictory reports for the total death toll in the Caribbean. Aside from one storm-related death in Puerto Rico, six in Montserrat and five in Guadeloupe, there were reports of about two dozen unconfirmed deaths.

Others were reported missing on land and at sea.

In Puerto Rico, Civil Defense spokeswoman Liza Annette Rivera said there were no deaths resulting from the hurricane's passage Monday. Late Monday, Civil Defense spokesmen had reported four confirmed deaths.

The confirmed storm-related death in Puerto Rico occurred Saturday when a man was electrocuted when he tried to take down his television antenna in preparation for the storm's arrival, police said.

The National Weather Service in Kansas City, Mo., said it received unconfirmed reports of as many as 25 deaths in Puerto Rico and six families missing after their homes were swept down a river in the northeast town of Luquillo.

"In Guadeloupe, 12,000 people are left homeless, about 100 injured and five people dead," said Monique Quesada, political and economic officer of the U.S. Consulate General in nearby Martinique. She said 70 percent of the roads were "unusable" because of flooding.

In Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, state-owned television reported six people were confirmed dead by officials in Montserrat.

Deng: Chinese do not fear political, economic sanction

BEIJING (UPI) — Senior leader Deng Xiaoping Tuesday said foreign reaction to Beijing's June crackdown on the democracy movement was based on "lies and distortions" and warned China does not fear political and economic sanctions.

Deng's remarks came in a meeting with former Japanese foreign minister Masayoshi Ito, who is leading a Japanese parliamentary delegation that was ending a three-day trip to China. The trip is technically unofficial but is the first high-level Japanese visit since the crackdown.

It was the 85-year-old senior leader's second public appearance in four days. Deng was absent from public view for more than three months, sparking intense speculation about his health, but he reemerged Saturday to meet with a Chinese-American scientist.

Before that, Deng last was seen on June 9, less than a week after the military assault on Beijing to crush pro-democracy protesters.

In Cairo, Egypt, meanwhile, visiting Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen said Tuesday he briefed President Hosni Mubarak on China's political and economic situation "and emphasized to him that the situation has become stable and is being developed in a new direction."

Qian arrived Monday from Jordan for a three-day official visit before proceeding to Syria and Tunisia. A Chinese source said the tour was aimed at convincing officials China's situation is under control after the June crackdown.

Deng, in his first substantive public comments on sanctions that foreign nations imposed on China to protest the crackdown, attacked a statement criticizing Beijing issued by the the seven leading industrial democracies, including the United States and Japan, during their July summit. ^

"The meeting's resolution concerning China was based on lies and distortions and was too superficial," Deng told Ito, according to a dispatch by the official Xinhua news agency. He called the statement "unacceptable," saying it meddled in China's internal affairs.

The United States, European nations and Japan, along with international lending agencies, all have imposed billions of dollars in sanctions, including a suspension of military sales and the withholding of loans.

"China is not afraid of sanctions, which will rebound on those imposing them in the long run," Deng said.

Nun's compassion affects Mother Teresa's physician

CALCUTTA, India (UPI) — A telephone call one recent Saturday night sent George Lombardi on a trip from New York to Calcutta that allowed him to see firsthand the effects of Nobel laureate Mother Teresa's message of unlimited compassion.

A colleague had advised a philanthropist that Lombardi, an infectious disease specialist employed by the Cornell Medical Institute, was well qualified to assist Indian doctors tending the 79-year-old Roman Catholic nun. Mother Teresa was hospitalized with heart problems on Sept. 5.

"I was at home playing with my kids, and I got a phone call from one of Mother Teresa's benefactors," said the slim, unassuming doctor about the Sept. 9 call.

"There was a flurry of phone calls and then she asked me if I wanted to go to Calcutta. I said 'Do you really think this is necessary,' and she said, 'They are willing to have you.'"

But Lombardi's passport had expired, and a State Department duty officer decreed that a new

The doctor knew he was special when he had trouble getting a passport and the philanthropist cut through the red tape and had the man on a flight to Calcutta.

travel document could not be issued immediately because helping Mother Teresa was not a matter of U.S. national security, and nor was the nun related to Lombardi.

"I knew I was in special hands when I called this woman (the philanthropist) back and told her I had been stopped by a bureaucrat," he chuckled. "She said, 'Don't worry, just pack.'"

At 6 a.m. Sunday, an official issued him a passport.

An hour later, he was at the Indian Consulate, where virtually all the staff was assembled. One of them told Lombardi to "take care of the Mother because she is a god."

At 9:30 a.m., a visa stamped in his passport, Lombardi was aboard a Concorde headed for Calcutta to treat a woman many revere as divine.

"I really tried to keep that on the backburner," Lombardi said. "If you think of her like that, you would just be paralyzed. You just have to try to do what is medically correct."

The bespectacled, brown-haired doctor said he was deeply impressed by Mother Teresa, who knew everybody by their first name and, even though she was seriously ill, gave Lombardi presents to take back to his wife and children, and messages for others.

Mother Teresa also instructed the American to visit her charity homes, where nuns of her order care for those the world seems to have forgotten: orphans and lepers, the destitute and the dying.

U.S. to break arms deadlock

Defense alters position on mobile long-range nuclear missiles

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States will alter its position on mobile long-range nuclear missiles in an attempt to break an arms control deadlock with the Soviet Union, Secretary of State James Baker said Tuesday.

Baker, speaking to State Department reporters two days before his meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, reacted sharply to criticism from congressional Democrats that the Bush administration has failed to recognize sweeping changes in Russia.

Baker said he will inform Shevardnadze that the United States is dropping its ban on negotiating over mobile missiles as part of the strategic arms reduction talks, known as START.

The Soviets have deployed two kinds of long-range mobile missiles. The United States has none yet, but is considering adding them to its arsenal. The administration has asked Congress for authority to build the MX mobile missile.

Previously, the United States proposed a total ban on mobile long-range missiles, arguing that such a treaty would be impossible to verify. Because of the verification problems, the United States argued, Congress would probably never approve such a treaty.

Baker said he will inform the Soviets that the U.S. is dropping its ban over negotiating over missiles.

"To start the ball rolling this week, I'm announcing today that we'll lift our ban on (negotiating) mobile Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles, contingent on congressional funding of our ICBMs," Baker said.

Baker said the U.S. negotiators at the Geneva START talks have been instructed to work out ways of verifying limits on mobile ICBMs.

"If you judge us at the end of the day, next Sunday, hopefully you will agree that we have moved the process forward substantially across the full range of arms control agenda," Baker said. "Are there still some major issues left in START? You bet there are."

Baker said the administration is trying to encourage economic reform in the Soviet Union, but is refraining "from frantic measures" that could later prove to be mistakes.

Baker is to meet Shevardnadze in Washington Thursday and then the two men will fly to Jackson Hole, Wyo., for two days of talks ranging from arms control to environmental cooperation. They will discuss the possibility of a U.S.-Soviet summit, Baker said.

Baker said he hoped the Wyoming session would produce progress on a wide range of arms control issues, from conventional forces and chemical weapons to strategic weapons.

Baker took a swipe at Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, who criticized the administration for "timidity" during unprecedented changes in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

Teen student took hostages because of estranged father

MCKEE, Ky. (UPI) — A teenager who opened fire in a classroom at his high school and took 11 people hostage before surrendering was "a confused young man" who wanted to see his estranged father, police and family members said.

The gunman, identified by a relative as 17-year-old Dustin Pierce, released the hostages — a teacher and 10 fellow students — unharmed following a 9-hour standoff Monday before surrendering at 6:30 p.m., police said.

Police would not disclose the suspect's identity, but Hiram Parks, who said he was the boy's maternal grandfather, identified him as Pierce.

"He's never talked to his dad in his life as far as I know," Parks said. "He's a good kid. He just doesn't like his dad. He wants to shoot him."

Bob Stephens, the chief hostage negotiator, said the gunman never explained "why he wanted to talk to his father." State police arranged to have the man flown in to Lexington from Florida.

State Police Capt. John Lile said the boy's friends helped talk him into releasing his hostages, and the one who seemed to turn the tide was Chad Madden, 18, Pierce's cousin.

"Toward the end (Pierce) was looking for a way out," Stephens said. "He was tired. He had been up all night."

"We talked about bringing out the (last) two hostages and then we made a contract that he would come out and give himself up," Stephens said. "He was unbalanced. He was a confused young man. He was looking for someone to help him."

Police said the youth, armed with a shotgun and two high-powered pistols, entered Classroom 102 at Jackson County High School about 9:20 a.m., fired a shot into the ceiling and told the teacher, Brenda Clark, and her 10 students to remain calm and nothing would happen, police and witnesses said.

After shooting out a rear window of the classroom, the gunman exchanged a hostage, Brian Bond, for a police radio and a telephone, police spokesman John Thorpe said.

Between 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m., eight more hostages were freed in exchange for a pizza, cigarettes, soda pop and a videotape of a "Nightmare on Elm Street" horror film, Thorpe said. He said the gunman's chief demand was to see his estranged father.

Goetz released from prison

Subway vigilante serves one year for attack on four teen-agers

NEW YORK (UPI) — Bernhard Goetz, the electronics specialist who became a symbol for crime-weary Americans when he shot four youths aboard a subway, will leave jail after eight months Wednesday but will not take the standard subway ride to freedom, prison officials said.

Instead, Prisoner No. 78900316 will be picked up by private car after 11:01 p.m. Wednesday outside the Brooklyn House of Detention for Men, said Ruby Ryles, spokeswoman for the city Corrections Department.

"One option is to have an inmate delivered to the nearest subway," said Ryles, noting that is the typical route to freedom for ex-convicts.

"Mr. Goetz has notified us that he will be leaving by private car."

The bespectacled electronics expert takes with him $22 in earnings from repairing radios behind bars, all that is left after spending $27 at the jail commissary. He earned $49 at 50 cents an hour for three weeks in February at the Rikers Island radio shop.

Goetz, 41, spent the rest of his time polishing his chess skills in matches with cellmates, including child-killer Joel Steinberg and accused gunman Mordechai Levy of the Jewish Defense Organization.

His release comes nearly five years after he opened fire on four teen-agers who asked him for $5 aboard a moving subway train Dec. 22, 1984. He was sentenced to one year in jail for illegal gun possession but acquitted of four counts of attempted murder.

He served his time in an 18-cell protective unit for celebrity criminals, first at Rikers Island Hospital and then, when it was closed for renovations, in Brooklyn. His jailmates have included accused Bensonhurst racial killer Joseph Pama and convicted Howard Beach racial attacker Robert Riley.

Although Goetz got time off for good behavior, he spent an extra two weeks behind bars for refusing to return a disposable razor to a jail guard. Goetz said he had been getting dirty blades and was afraid he would get AIDS.

"His concern was if the razor was dirty, he would get AIDS. He wanted to keep the razor as evidence," Ryles said.

She said prison policy is to issue clean blades and to retrieve them each day after use.

After a final supper of pork chops, potatoes, collard greens, fruit and Kool-Aid, Goetz is eligible for release at 11:01 p.m. Tuesday.

Jackson asks New York students to work for calm, racial harmony

NEW YORK (UPI) — Jesse Jackson appealed for calm and racial harmony Tuesday at a racially mixed high school in a Brooklyn neighborhood torn apart by the killing of a black teen-ager by a white mob.

Jackson's address to the student body of Franklin D. Roosevelt High School in Bensonhurst frequently was interrupted by applause. At least one of the suspects in the killing of Yusuf Hawkins, 16, graduated from the school.

Jackson used the killing of Hawkins in making an allusion to the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

"Roll the stone away and declare a new hope, a new light, a new New York," he said. "We need you to light the candle of hope. We must improve the American dream."

Hawkins was slain Aug. 23 by a gang of white suspects who mistook him for friends of a neighborhood woman who had jilted one of the attackers to date blacks and Hispanics.

Jackson cited Hawkins' killing in decrying violence and also implored the students to stay away from drugs.

"We need you as soldiers in this war on drugs," he said. "You must be sane and sober and sensitive and give life a chance."

He never referred to Hawkins by name but did mention Maureen Smith, a biology teacher at the school whose bullet-riddled body was found in an abandoned car on Long Island last Saturday.

After leading a moment of silence in her memory, Jackson said: "Somehow, some way we are going to have to end this violence. The burden is on your backs."

Foreman vs. Cooney latest in over-the-hill boxing cards

By Tom Wheatley
St. Louis Post Dispatch

The news landed like a ton of recycled bricks.

Unless felled by a case of varicose veins, George Foreman plans to fight Gerry Cooney in early 1990.

Fifteen years ago, this would be legitimate news. Well, maybe not. In 1974, Foreman would have been 25 years old. Cooney would have been 18. No matter where you stop the fistic time machine for Cooney, The Great White Mope, it would not be his time. Except in the pocketbook.

Cooney got rich for two good-to-bad reasons:

He carries a big fist, and he is of the Caucasian persuasion.

In America, boxing has become a black man's game, rooted as the sport has been in urban poverty and despair. Cooney's fistic existence is enough to give a reverse version of affirmative action a bad name. He fights once every couple of years, loses, clutches his purse, retires in a glum funk, stays out of the sun, then restarts the cycle.

The middle-aged Foreman is a padded skeleton of his former devastating self. He is strong enough to flatten the pancakes he lines up. But the notion that Foreman could waddle after and catch an active pro like Mike Tyson is hilarious. That would be like an automated tarp catching Vince Coleman.

You say baseball's fastest human was run down by a glacier-like tarp? That the unthinkable did happen?

Precisely. And that's precisely the selling point behind boxing's latest Seniors Tour. As that fistic philosopher, Butch Lewis, says, Cooney's fistic existence is enough to give a reverse version of affirmative action a bad name. He fights once every couple years, loses, clutches his purse, retires in a glum funk, stays out of the sun, then restarts the cycle.

"Anybody can be KO'd. If you can be hit, you can go."

So in November, it will be Roberto Duran (age 38 and counting) against Sugar Ray Leonard (33 and holding).

And in mid-January, as a horrifying harbinger of the new decade, we must deal with Foreman (nearly 41) against Cooney (33 going on 93).

Leonard got the trend going this summer by giving Thomas Hearns (a babe of 30) a rematch after only an eight-year wait. Their ensuing draw was not one of boxing's greatest hits, except in the wallet.

Rather than deal with a staunch youngster like Michael Nunn, Leonard OK'd another moldy rematch, this time with the No Mas Kid.

Another aspect of this entire spectacle is the bloated, bald-headed Foreman, braying for a shot at Tyson.

It's all strange, even for boxing.

Fistic fans with a conscience, both of you, keep asking me if this Seniors Tour is right to do.

My answer is sure, as long as the old coots fight one another. That way no one gets hurt, unless somebody trips on his cane while squeezing through the ring ropes. What's frightening is what might happen to Foreman if Tyson ever gets hold of him.

Yes, Foreman towers over the thug-champion. But Foreman and Tony Mandarich and other large, would-be challengers should look closely. The trees may tower over a lumberjack, but don't bet against the guy with the chainsaw. And Tyson carries one in each fist.

Tomczak makes believers of team despite unconvinced Bears' fans

Former Buckeye
QB now 18-3
as NFL starter

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chicago Bears quarterback Mike Tomczak has made believers out of his coach and teammates despite his outside detractors.

Tomczak, the Bears' undisputed starter this season following the trade of Jim McMahon to San Diego, has led the team to a pair of impressive victories over Cincinnati and Minnesota to start the season.

His statistics have been anything but impressive this season — 20 of 50 for 301 yards with two touchdowns and three interceptions. His overall record as a starter, however, continues to shine, now standing at 18-3. And Coach Mike Ditka and his players are quick to back their quarterback, who wasn't even drafted after his career at Ohio State and spent much of the last four years as McMahon's quiet understudy.

"I don't care about stats. Stats are for idiots," Ditka said after a 38-7 victory over the Vikings last Sunday. "We got the job done. That's all I'm worried about."

But with the McMahon exile still in the mind of many fans as the season got under way, Tomczak was the target of the Soldier Field boo birds. His first two passes this season were intercepted easily, although the second was called back by a penalty.

"I don't think the players question him a bit. I think it's just a matter of the press questioning him," said close friend, business partner and veteran offensive guard Tom Thayer. "I think we have all the faith in the world in him."

"He's only improved over the last five years. He's never taken a backward step in his performances. I think it's a matter of allowing the fans to get belief in him so they talk positively about him as much as they do negatively."

Even Thayer admits that Tomczak, with his low-key approach and monotone style, is questioned by other players around the league on whether "he's a legitimate starter in the NFL."

"It's kind of nice to see Mike Tomczak in the huddle. If you can look at Mike Tomczak and look into his eyes, he has the belief and the confidence in himself that we're going to score and we're going to win the game," Thayer said.

'Ickey Shuffle' now the 'Ickey Limp,' Woods' sprain shakes up backfield

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The "Ickey Shuffle" has become the "Ickey Limp."

Ickey Woods, the Cincinnati Bengals' running back who calls his touchdown celebration dance the "Ickey Shuffle," is limping this week after suffering a severely sprained ankle.

"I'm hurting, man," Woods, on crutches with his left ankle heavily bandaged, said Tuesday. "It's sore. It hurts."

Woods sprained his ankle in the third quarter of last Sunday's win over the Pittsburgh Steelers and didn't return to the contest. It's not known when Woods will be able to play again. It could be as early as Monday night when the Bengals host the Cleveland Browns.

"It could be two or three weeks or he could recover in time for this game (Monday night)," said Bengals coach Sam Wyche. "You can see from the film of the play that he turned his ankle pretty badly. But, Ickey's healed pretty fast before. That's why we hesitate to make any long range predictions."

"What it comes down to is whether to play him now and risk further injury or sit out and wait until he's completely healed."

However, Wyche added that if Woods isn't able to practice later this week, he won't play against Cleveland.

Fellow running back Eric Ball said Woods isn't optimistic about getting ready for the Browns.

"He (Woods) thinks he might be out two or three weeks," said Ball. If Woods doesn't play Monday night, his fullback spot will be shared by Ball and Stanford Jennings.

Woods was the hit of the Bengals as a rookie last year because of his hard running and funny dancing. He rushed 1,066 yards in the regular season and 307 in three playoff games.

But Woods had a very poor exhibition season and Wyche constantly ripped him for lack of production and effort. Woods improved with the start of the regular season — rushing 94 yards in 29 carries — but still lacked some of the power running that made him so difficult to tackle last season.

In the first two regular season games, Woods was vastly overshadowed by fellow running back James Brooks, who rolled up 201 yards in 33 carries.

Tewksbury shuts out Expos

St. Louis inches closer to 1st-place Chicago Cubs

MONTREAL (UPI) — Tom Brunansky drove in two runs with a single and his 20th homer and Bob Tewksbury pitched a four-hitter Tuesday to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-0 victory over the Montreal Expos.

St. Louis moved within four games of first-place Chicago in the National League East.

Tewksbury, 1-0, walked two and struck out four in his fourth appearance since the Cardinals recalled him from Louisville Sept. 2. Mark Gardner, 0-2, was the loser.

Pedro Guerrero gave the Cardinals a 1-0 lead in the fourth by ripping his 17th home run. Gardner walked the next batter, Denny Walling, and Terry Pendleton followed with a single. Brunansky singled home Walling from second to give St. Louis a 2-0 lead.

With runners at first and third, Brunansky was caught in a rundown for an out, but Todd Zeile singled Pendleton home from third for St. Louis' third run.

St. Louis padded the lead to 4-0 in the sixth. Brunansky walked and Zeile singled him to third. Brunansky got caught in a rundown between third and home while Tewksbury was attempting to bunt. Brunansky was out but Zeile went to second and got to third on a wild pitch by Andy McGaffigan. Tewksbury singled up the middle to drive in Zeile.

Brunansky's homer in the eighth made the score 5-0.

The Expos threatened in the second. Tewksbury gave up a one-out double to Tim Wallach. One out later, Junior Naooa singled him to third. Jeff Hudson was intentionally walked to load the bases, but Gardner ended the inning by grounding into a fielder's choice.

Carter lifts Mets over Cubs

Dwight Gooden notches first career save

CHICAGO (UPI)— Gary Carter belted a three-run home run and Dwight Gooden earned his first major-league save Tuesday to lift the New York Mets to a 5-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The victory ended the Mets to end a three-game losing streak and move to within 5 1-2 games of the division-leading Cubs.

Bob Ojeda, 13-10, allowed one run and four hits in five-plus innings to pick his eighth win in his last nine decisions. He struck out one and did not walk a batter before giving way to Gooden who allowed one run on three hits in four innings to earn the save.

Steve Wilson, 5-4, took the loss, yielding five hits in 2-2-3 innings.

In the second, Howard Johnson led off with a double and Tim Teufel walked. Carter then followed with his first homer since April 23 and second of the year to give the Mets a 3-0 lead.

The Cubs cut it to 3-1 in the bottom half of the second when Andre Dawson led off with a double, advanced to third on Lloyd McClendon's flyball to center and scored on an ground out by Luis Salazar.

The Mets scored two more in the third. Keith Miller led off with his first homer of the season into the left-field seats to give New York a 4-1 advantage. Gregg Jefferies walked and took third on Teufel's single, chasing Wilson. Juan Samuel then greeted reliever Kevin Blankenship with an RBI single.

The Cubs put runners at first and second in the sixth against Ojeda but Gooden got Ryne Sandberg to hit into a double play and Andre Dawson to fly out to end the threat.

Chicago scored in the eighth when pinch hitter Dwight Smith tripped and scored on a sacrifice fly by Shawn Dunston.

Montreal's bright future dimmed during pathetic month of August

MONTREAL (UPI) — It was early August, and the Montreal Expos were admiring the view from atop the National League's East Division. They had 19 more wins than losses, enjoyed a three-game lead over their closest rival and clearly saw post-season baseball looming on the horizon.

Manager Buck Rodgers certainly shared that Expo confidence, but in the short term, he sensed something was wrong. There were a few storm clouds gathering on the horizon.

"We went into Pittsburgh (July 31) and we won three in a row," Rodgers said. "But we weren't executing like we had been, we were overcoming mistakes. I remember saying, 'Don't fall in love with these last few games we've won because we're not playing well.'"

"I felt we were heading for a little bit of a downside." Time proved Rodgers to be partially correct. The Expos went into a tailspin all right, but there was nothing trivial about it. They lost the final game in Pittsburgh, then went to New York and dropped three consecutive games to the Mets. After that it was off to Chicago's Wrigley Field, where the Cubs won three in a row to end the Expos' 41-day reign in first place.

A month later, three more losses at Wrigley snuffed out any flickering hopes the Expos might have held of climbing back on top. They are a hopeless seven games behind the Cubs, and have a puny 14 victories in their past 40 outings.

So what happened? Why has a team that many thought was bound for World Series glory won only a third of its games during the past six weeks?

It seems everyone has a theory, some dealing with the character of the players, others with the strategy of Rodgers.

Perhaps the real answer is stunningly simple: perhaps the 1989 Expos were just never good enough to win in the first place. Maybe they went through one of those streaks of incredible good fortune that usually catches up to a team.

In most pre-season analyses, the Expos were picked to finish second, third or fourth, shunned because of a perceived weakness up the middle: at catcher, second base, shortstop and centerfield. Sure enough, catcher Nelson Santovenia is hitting .256, second baseman Tom Foley is at .227, shortstop Spike Owen .232 and the centerfield platoon of Otis Nixon and Dave Martinez a combined .254.

Pre-season analysts also pointed out that the lack of left-handed clout would compromise Expo chances. Tim Raines, a switch-hitter who is batting .280 against right-handed pitching, and Martinez (.281) are the Expos' only potent offensive threats from that side of the plate. Perhaps that's why the team is 50-55 against righthanded starters.

"I just don't know what caused it," Rodgers said. "I can't answer it. I've talked to the coaches, talked to the general manager, tried to figure it out myself and so far we haven't come up with it. All the way through it I kept thinking that this team was going to go out and win six in a row or nine out of 10. I still feel that way."

So would anyone else who watched the Expos from mid-May through the end of July. The spirit of that team was captured in a game July 22 in Montreal against the Cincinnati Red. The Expos trailed by four runs heading into the bottom of the ninth inning, but they clobbered Red stopper John Franco and pulled the game out in dramatic fashion.

It was a team that seemed destined to win. And because they had five seasoned pitchers that many tabbed as the best starting staff in baseball, costly losing streaks seemed unlikely.

Freshman Leecann Conway runs at practice Monday afternoon outside McAndrew Stadium. Conway finished sixth out of 287 in a recent meet in Wisconsin.

Zimmer not the only competitor for NL Manager of the Year honors

By Steve Cameron
Kansas City Star and Times

Harry Caray would scream: "It might be, it could be."

But let's back up a second. One national baseball writer already has gone on record suggesting San Francisco's Roger Craig should be chosen National League manager of the year by acclamation.

Another agrees Craig will be so honored, with the grudging notation that the Cardinals' Whitey Herzog deserves it.

Still another press box expert states flat out that, no matter what happens down the stretch, Herzog has done the best job. As always.

All of which begs a question: Is Don Zimmer still in the league?

It was just the other day Zimmer's brash young Cubs led St. Louis by one-half game after blowing a 7-1 lead in an 11-8 loss.

It's been a great summer in Wrigley Field, and Zimmer has pushed a lot of magic buttons, said baseball's supposed wise men, but the party's over.

All the Cubs have done since then is launch themselves to a five-game lead over the Cardinals, their closest pursuers.

In the recent span, the Cubs have rallied to win a game in the 10th inning, end another on a bounced pickoff throw to first, used four pitchers to strike out 18 Cards and gotten a two-hitter from Mike Bielecki, who was shelled in three previous starts.

Can this be a team whose starting pitcher and catcher last Sunday both were in Class AA a year ago? A team whose bullpen stopper had just given up two homers in a morale-crushing loss?

"The more you're around this game," Zimmer said, "the less you understand it. Anyone who thinks he's got baseball figured out is crazy."

Zimmer, as he has been all year, was right in the middle of the dramatic turnaround.

He has juggled his young players with veterans Ryne Sandberg and Andre Dawson, then mixed in newcomers Luis Salazar and Marvel Wynne, obtained in a trade with San Diego.

Zimmer's most bizarre scheme came earlier this month in the third and final game of the St. Louis series. The teams had split, keeping the Cardinals only 1-1/2 games back as they were going into the series.

With no warning, Zimmer decided to hold back scheduled starter Greg Maddux and start left-hander Steve Wilson, who had pitched an inning of relief the day before.

They gave me a shot that would last about an hour and a half. So I was able to compete in just one of the three races."

Although she did eventually win the state title in the mile, Conway was unable to compete in the other two races.

"They told me the shot would just last an hour and a half and they were right," Conway said. "Once the half-mile race came around I was unable to walk again. But once again, it made me want it that much more."

It is qualities such as these that make Conway such a valuable asset to a team, DeNoon says.

"She is a gutsy athlete who has all of the qualities that one is searching for," DeNoon said. "I got a strong feeling after talking to different people that Leecann could have an impact here as soon as she stepped foot on campus. She is a collegiate-oriented athlete and worked really hard during the summer."

DeNoon wasn't the only coach impressed with Conway's credentials coming out of high school. Other schools such as Oklahoma, Nebraska and Kansas expressed interest in Conway.

"I wanted to go to a school where I could make a difference and reach my full potential as well," Conway said. "Coach DeNoon was an influence recruiting me and I appreciated that. I wanted to come here and earn the scholarship."

A secondary education major, Conway has no regrets about joining the Salukis.

"I love Southern Illinois people and all the athletic teams on campus," Conway said. "There is no other place I'd rather be. I have met a lot of people here. If I go to bed at night and haven't met a new person, it hasn't been a good day."

Already listed No. 9 in the three-mile run on the all-time list at SIUC, Conway admits visions of taking the top spot some day. The current mark is held by Vivian Sinou. Sinou's time of 16:52 was accomplished in 1986.

"It is not a definite goal, but you have to go for it," Conway said. "It would take a lot of hard work because that is really a fast time. Right now I just want the team to do well and have fun doing it."

Conway's 18:15 currently ranks her second in the Gateway Conference. Like most athletes she has goals of winning, but she goes about it in a happy-go-lucky way.

"I'm just happy all the time," Conway said. "When you are down, teammates can pick you right back up. The team is like a family to me now."

Despite her positive and outgoing attitude, DeNoon does not want to pressure Conway.

"Leecann has a lot of potential but we don't want to put too much pressure on her by expecting outstanding performances each time," DeNoon said. "We just want to be happy when they come."

"It would be a shame if we didn't get a pick-off or two against them," Davis said.

Safety Scott Barber, who made the game-saving tackle last week against Eastern Illinois, said the strong arm of Proctor will be on the minds of the defensive backs.

"We have to be on our toes and be ready to play," Barber said. "Hopefully, we'll pick a couple off."

The Salukis and Racers are only 120 miles apart and are scheduled to play each other for the next seven years.

King said the fans can relate better with MSU because of its proximity.

"This is going to be a good rivalry," King said.

The Saluki schedule won't get any easier in the weeks following the MSU game, but King isn't worrying about that now.

"Right now we can't see past Murray," King said. "We're just trying to get focused on the Racers."

After facing MSU the Salukis travel to eighth ranked Arkansas State Sept. 30 before facing Division I-A intrastate rival Northern Illinois University on Oct. 7.

The Salukis then return home to battle conference foes Illinois State University on Oct. 14, parents weekend, and fifth ranked Southwest Missouri State on Oct. 21.

Spikers edge Billikens in 'ugly win'

Salukis up record to 5-3 with win

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

The Saluki Spikers continued their dominance over the St. Louis University Billikens, beating them 16-14, 15-12, 11-15 and 15-5 Tuesday night at Davies Gymnasium. Although the Salukis had several outstanding players for the night, Coach Patti Hagemeyer said the win was an ugly one.

"We need to win and any win is a good win. This one was ugly. We worked an hour and a half out of two hours on defense yesterday in practice and you can't even tell."

—Patti Hagemeyer

"We need to win and any win is a good win. This one was ugly. Defense is the key. We worked an hour and a half out of two hours on passing yesterday in practice and you can't even tell."

The win improved the Salukis' record to 5-3.

The match-winning fourth game turned out to be a quick pound-fest for the Salukis. They took a quick 7-2 lead over the Billikens. Once the Salukis started up, they never looked back. SLU scored only three more points while the Spikers went on to finish the game at 15-5.

"I am very grateful for the win," Hagemeyer said. "In the last game they showed that they can play like a team."

In game one the Salukis came on strong and kept their composure after a couple of bad balls. Nina Brackins served up a storm with 8 total points in the game. Debbie Briscoe had five kills, one block assist and one solo block. The Salukis had a comfortable lead of 8-2 when the Billikens took charge and scored four quick points. The two teams had several long balls saw between the two teams with the scores tied 5 separate times.

At a crucial point, the Salukis broke the 12-12 tie and slipped into the game point position when their passing seemed to break down. The Billikens had some long serves and the Salukis ended up with the ball. The game finished up when Debbie Briscoe pounded out the game-ending kill for the Salukis.

Game two went much the same as the first, each side gained momentum and then cooled off just as they were getting started. SLU jumped out to a quick 5-1 lead over the Salukis. The Salukis slowly pulled up to a 9-9 tie when sophomore Kim Schall helped out the team with four straight service points. SLU took a time out to cool off and managed to get a sideout to bring the score up to 13-12 Billikens, before the Salukis took a time out. The crowd of more than 270 spectators was pumped up as the Spikers went on to serve two additional points to win the game 15-12.

Game three went to the Billikens as the Salukis let down on their defense. SLU put up a brick wall at the net.

Hagemeyer said that she was not happy with the intensity of the third game. "I think they were ready to play. It's not a question of whether the team is good, they are. They are just not confident yet," she said.

Saluki golfer awarded

By Kevin Simpson
Staff Writer

Senior Lisa Meritt was named Gateway Conference Golfer of the Week after firing a 36-hole career low and finishing third out of 108 golfers at the Illinois State Invitational Golf Tournament in Normal this weekend.

Meritt shot a 77 on Saturday and 78 on Sunday to notch her career tournament low score of 155 on the par-73 course. She paced the team to a fourth place finish, beating out Illinois State University on their home course.

Meritt said she puts more emphasis on team play than individual accomplishments.

"It's a great honor. It would have meant more if the team could have done better. Hopefully we can place higher in the future and bring home some trophies," she said.

"I just want to play the best I can and help the team as much as possible. It meant a lot beating ISU on their home golf course," Meritt said. "If everyone practices well and puts the effort forward, everything will fall into place."

As a junior, Meritt was the model of consistency for SIU-C. For the 1988-89 season, she was the team's low scorer in eight of

Murray QB poses challenge for Saluki defensive backs

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

Traveling to battle Division I-AA 15th ranked Murray State Saturday, the Salukis have to take a big test they hope to pass—because if history holds true, the Racers certainly will.

Last season Racer quarterback Michael Proctor visited McAndrew Stadium and threw for a career-high 351 yards in a 28-21 loss to the Salukis. Stanley King, Saluki defensive backs coach, is looking for more of the same.

Stopping Proctor "is going to present a challenge," King said. "He is a tremendous football player."

Proctor, known mostly for his passing abilities, can scramble and run the ball as well, King said.

"He is the most mobile quarterback we've seen so far," King said. "Our defensive front needs a lot to put on a great pass rush. If he (Proctor) can avoid the rush he has the ability to make the big play."

Defensive lineman Shannon Ferbrache said the defensive line will be busy on Saturday.

"We are going to have to wear our sneakers," Ferbrache said. "It's going to be a road race."

In order to beat MSU, the Saluki line will have to put pressure on Proctor and not allow him to leave the pocket, Ferbrache said.

"If you let him stand and throw they could score 50 points," Ferbrache said.

"We have to do two things to stop Proctor," Ferbrache said. "One is to beat their linemen and two is to catch him," Ferbrache said.

"It will be easier to beat their line," he said.

With MSU's tendency to throw the ball, the Saluki defensive backs are looking forward to the challenge.

Senior cornerback Willie Davis, who has taken part in two Saluki wins over the Racers, will be looking for his third interception of the season.

Freshman runner off to impressive beginning

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Lecann Conway's primary concern entering SIU-C as a freshman cross country runner was simply to make the traveling squad.

"I just wanted to make the top five and be on the traveling squad at least," Conway said. "I didn't think I would have an impact this early. I was just afraid of not making the top five."

The freshman from Overland Park, Kan. has made the top five and then some since arriving on the SIU-C campus. In the Midwest Collegiate held in Kenosha, Wis. Saturday, Conway was the fourth collegiate athlete to cross the finish line of a three-mile course with a time of 18:15. As a result of her performance at Wisconsin, Conway already is No. 9 on the SIU-C All-Time Cross Country List.

The Midwest Collegiate was composed of graduate students and current collegiate cross country runners. Conway finished sixth overall in the meet. There were 287 finishers at Wisconsin. SIU-C finished third out of the 27 teams competing there.

"Everyone that finished ahead of Lecann was a junior, senior or grad student," DeNoon said. "The next freshman to finish behind Lecann was 17th. It was quite an accomplishment for Lecann."

Conway wasted no time showing SIU-C what she was made of. In her very first collegiate competition, Conway was the overall winner with a time of 19:01 on Sept. 2 in a triangular meet at Charleston. Conway's time was :22 seconds ahead of the second-place runner and helped her team to a first place finish over second-place Murray State and Eastern Illinois.

The following week in a home triangular meet against Kansas and Purdue, Conway experienced what may have been her only disappointing moment since arriving on campus.

Conway finished sixth and was the top Saluki finisher, but her time slipped to 19:06.7.

"I didn't let down in that meet," Conway said. "I just felt more pressure to finish first again as I had in the first meet. I was afraid of letting my teammates down. When something like that happens, it just makes you want it that much more."

Conway is no stranger to adversity. During her senior year at Shawnee Mission South High School, Conway was ranked No. 1 going into the state cross country meet. Just a day before the state meet, Conway's foot was ran over.

"It was after my last high school cross country meet and I was about to get into the car," Conway said. "I guess they thought I was already in the car and started to drive off. I just started screaming because it hurt for one thing, but I also knew the state meet was just 24 hours away."

Despite a swollen and torn foot, Conway still competed in the state meet running barefoot in the mile race. Conway finished sixth and her team won the state championship.

"It made me tougher," Conway said. "People tried to talk me out of it but I wanted to end the season on a positive note. Our coach had never won a state title before and I just felt that I had to run."

Conway was not bitter at the turn of events.

"I was happy for the girl that did win it," Conway said. "I felt I had won my own race by overcoming such an obstacle. It made me want to come back that much more for track season."

Conway's tough luck wasn't over. The night before the state track meet, Conway jumped in her sleep and tore her tailbone on a sharp object connected to a pair of headphones. Conway was prepared to compete in the two-mile, mile and half-mile in the state meet before the accident. But once again, adversity did not stand in her way.

"I couldn't even walk after that happened," Conway said. "I went to the emergency room before the
