Checkers employee's case dropped

By Erick Enriquez
Police Writer

A former Checkers employee charged with the death of an SIUC student had his case dismissed Monday in the Jackson County Courthouse because of a lack of medical evidence.

Jackson County Judge David Watt granted a motion filed by Illinois State's Attorney Chuck Grace asking that the case against Edmu. Bart be dismissed.

Bart, 22, of Aurora, was charged with two counts of involuntary manslaughter, aggravated battery in a public place, battery and reckless conduct in the Feb. 5 death of SIUC student Jose Waight.

State's attorney—evidence has implications

By Chris Jan Kennerly
City Writer

Illinois State's Attorney Chuck Grace says medical evidence used in the dismissal of charges against a Checker's employee Monday could affect the other three related cases.

Edmund C. Bart, 22, of Aurora, was charged with involuntary manslaughter, aggravated battery in a public place, battery and reckless conduct in the February 5 death of SIUC student Jose Waight.

Grace said after being denied a continuance in the case about a week ago, he had concerns about the existing evidence.

"The reason that I asked for a continuance is that I am in the beginning of a transition from this office to another, and I have not had an opportunity to prepare the case," he said.

The reason he asked for a dismissal, or nolle prosequi, was response," Lockwood said. "It doesn't happen 10 minutes after you lose contact with someone."

Lockwood said Waight was handcuffed for some time before anyone noticed he had been asphyxiated.

"Eddie Bart did not hold Waight to be handcuffed," Lockwood said. "In effect, he (Bart) just pushed him (Waight) out of the bar."

"He pushed Bart out, tried to hold him, could not hold him, got slammed against the wall, other people got control of Waight and Bart had no contact."

The state could re-instate the charges, but it still needs evidence to support it, Lockwood said.

SIUE singles out 4 in president search

By Shawna Donovan
Administration Writer

A committee has narrowed its search for a new SIUE president to four candidates, and one will be chosen by November. University officials say.

The four candidates, all from the external community, will be visiting the Edwardsville campus this month and the first week of October before the search committee selects a list of finalists for submission to the SIUC Chancellor James Brown by mid-October.

The search began last spring after SIUE President Earl Lazerson announced he will retire Dec. 31 after 14 years of service. Lazerson, who announced his retirement plans in January, has been president since 1980. He said he plans to take a year off and possibly return to SIUE as a mathematics professor.

The criteria for the position state the candidate must display a commitment to higher education on the graduate and undergraduate levels in a multicultural setting and be dedicated to academic excellence in teaching, research, public service, diversity and equal employment opportunities.

The new president will assume responsibilities Jan. 1.

Chancellor Brown said all candidates are qualified for the position.

"I am very pleased with the good work the committee has done," Brown said. "We have a healthy pool of candidates."

The candidates are Richard A. Crofts, vice president for academic affairs from Mankato State University, Mankato, Minn.; G. Warren Smith, II, president, Southeastern Louisiana University, Hammond, La.; Nancy Belk, provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs, Louisiana State University in Shreveport, La.; and Richard S. Meyers, president, Western Oregon State College, Monmouth, Ore.

Brown assembled a nine-member search committee, comprised of the SIUE Foundation Board of Directors, administrators, alumni, civil service staff, faculty and students.

Committee chairman John B. Miesel said an evaluation form and candidates' vital statistics will be available at each candidate meeting.

"A series of open meetings with staff, students and faculty will be held during the candidates' campus visit," Miesel said. "The candidates will arrive one at a time for a two-day tour of SIUE each week until Oct. 5."

"We are looking forward to interviewing each candidate and finding the new president," he said.

accidental after almost five and a half hours of testimony, but a grand jury indicted the six men days later.

Last month the pathologist said his review of the autopsy results indicated that anyone in contact with Waight before he was on his feet talking, fighting and throwing people around would not be held responsible for his death, Brocton Lockwood, Bart's attorney, said.

The cant, a log precut into a square shape, primarily is either cotton wood or willow. The object is to chop the log in half with the fastest time. The Forestry Club was having time trials Monday afternoon for the teams for the Annual Midwest Forestry Conclave Oct. 23 in Minnesota. Left, Jim Tressouhnick, a senior in forestry from Carbondale, practices near the Poultry Center for the one-man bucksaw contest. The type of log being used in this competition is a 12 by 12 inch cant. The wood used is red oak. The cutter is timed on how long it takes to cut completely through the log.

Illinois in high water; flood burden could grow

By Emily Priddy
Politics Writer

The burden of cleaning up and rebuilding flood-damaged areas may be heavier for Illinois than other states if the Federal Emergency Management Agency requirements stand, Gov. Jim Edgar says.

Al Grosboll, a spokesman for Edgar, said FEMA usually promises each disaster-stricken community a minimum reimbursement of 75 percent of all costs incurred by the disaster.

However, Grosboll said FEMA promised 90-percent reimbursement to states whose public damage expenditures total more than $64 per capita.

Edgar criticized the formula, saying it was unfair to Illinois and other heavily populated states that would have trouble meeting the threshold.

"Under that formula, Illinois communities devastated by flooding will receive only 75 percent reimbursement while communities directly across the river in Missouri will receive 90 percent...I am astounded that the FEMA policy discriminates against Illinois communities," Edgar said in a letter to President Bill Clinton.

Grosboll said of the nine flooded states, Missouri is the only one to meet FEMA's current threshold. None of the FEMA funding has been distributed yet.

Grosboll said it is impossible to estimate when or how much money each state will receive until the flood waters completely recede so damage can be assessed.

Golfers swinging success at classic

By Grant Deady
Sports Writer

For the second straight year, the SIUC women's golf team returned from the Tennessee Tech/Vandy Classic with the tournament championship in hand.

The Saluki fabulous five that brought the title back to Carbondale were Lieschen Eller, Molly Hudgins, Carrie Hall, Dana Rasmus and Laura Stefanich.

On Saturday, the five SIUC golfers combined for a 317 which turned out to be a tournament best in the 15 team field. Their 323 on Sunday brought their two day team total to 640 and put the championship out of reach.

Vanderbilt came in a distant second with a

Eller leads women to second consecutive title

659 while Georgia State(661) Western Kentucky(667) and Samford(665) rounded off the tourney's top five.

Saluki junior Lieschen Eller walked away with the classic's individual championship and her first ever tournament win. Eller shot a career best 155 including a career best 74 on Saturday.

The individual title didn't come easy to Eller since Marla Bunning of Georgia State also turned in a 155 and forced a playoff with the Saluki standout.

Bunning bogied the playoff hole while Eller made par to secure her championship performance.

After the round, Eller said she still hasn't played her best golf yet.

"I didn't play very well on Sunday, but still won, Eller said. "I felt good when I birdied my last hole and it gave me a lift."

Eller, who boasts a 79.4 stroke average, said she was surprised to hear that a playoff round was in order.

"I thought I had won the tournament and going into the playoff round I wasn't nervous," she said. "I felt confident and knew I had to hit the shots to win."

Red-shirt freshman Molly Hudgins, a former walk-on, shocked the competition again by stroking a career best 159 to steal five points overall.

Hudgins said that her individual performance felt even better knowing that it helped the team retain the title.

"I'll take a 159 anytime," Hudgins said. "I just wanted the team to win, but never expected to do so well individually."

Laura Stefanich also gave SIUC a strong showing with a pair of 81's, which was good enough for eighth place.

Teammates Carrie Hall(164) and Dana Rasmus(168) rounded off the Saluki competitors.

Eller said that successfully defending the title was a great team accomplishment.

"Winning the tourney for the second year in a row was awesome," she said. "We all hung in there and a 640 is a good solid score."

The SIUC women will have a week to savor their big win before they invade Tenn. again for the Memphis State Intercollegiate Tournament Oct. 3-5.

Sixth-place finish cools hot-hitting softball team

By Kevin Bergquist
Sports Writer

After drubbing opponents at a 64-13 pace while winning six of its first seven games, the SIUC softball team's bats cooled off over the weekend.

SIUC (8-5) was shut out twice and tallied only four runs in four losses against two wins as it finished sixth at the Bradley/ICC Invitational over the weekend.

SIUC started things off on a strong note by pounding Trinity, 8-0, on Saturday.

Freshman Buffy Blust (1-0) pitched a one-hitter to record her first collegiate win.

The Salukis used a five-run third inning to secure the win for Blust, who got help at the plate from Laurie Wilson (2-for-3, 2 RBI) and Maura Hasenstab (1-3, 2 RBI).

SIUC pitching coach Gary Buckles said Blust pitched strong in the five-inning win.

"They only got two or three out of the infield, so she pitched a beautiful ballgame," Buckles said. "She is a real competitor."

In the second game of the day, the Salukis were shut out by Bradley, 3-0.

Freshman Jamie Schutteck (2-2) took the loss, as the SIUC bats managed only two hits.

SIUC got on the scoreboard in their final game Saturday, but lost, 3-1, to South Suburban College.

The Salukis notched their run in the bottom of the sixth, but SSC pushed three runs across in the top of the seventh to seal the deal.

Senior Tania Meier (4-1) took the loss for SIUC.

The Saluki bats went cold for the third straight game Sunday as SIUC was blanked by Illinois Central College, 1-0.

Schutteck (2-3) allowed four Cougar hits, but got only two-hit support again.

Schutteck got plenty of run support in the Salukis' next game, as SIUC smacked Lewis, 12-1.

Schutteck (3-3) allowed only three hits after coming out of the bullpen when Meier went out after taking a line drive off her leg.

Senior Jenny Klotz led the bat revival, as she went 2-3 with a triple and three RBI. Hasenstab also plated three runs.

Schutteck (4-4) took her third loss of the tournament in SIUC's finale Sunday, dropping a 6-3 decision to a split squad from Illinois State.

It was the fourth time Schutteck saw action in the six-game invitational.

"She is always ready to pitch, and is one of those players that want the ball," Buckles said.

Netters fall but show improvement

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

The SIUC women's tennis team failed to get many victories this past weekend, but head coach Judy Auld said got what she wanted.

"What I was really looking for was some improvement by the end of the weekend," Auld said. "And I definitely saw that."

The lady netters began their busy weekend with a 6-3 dual-match loss to the University of Evansville. SIUC freshman Melisa Saitta broke into the college ranks with a 6-3, 3-6, 6-3 victory over Jennifer Understahl.

Leesa Joseph, playing No. 3 singles, was the other winner for the Salukis, taking a 6-4, 6-3 decision from Robin Royster.

The Dawgs lost two of three doubles, but did manage to win the top match-up.

Leesa Joseph and Liz Gardner took the No. 1 doubles honors by virtue of a 6-1, 7-5 win over Understahl and Amy Binder.

Scott said the Salukis did not play very well in doubles, but is not concerned with setting a line-up in stone.

"There will be a lot of changes in the spring," Auld said. "Unless I see two people who really start clicking. Right now I'm trying a lot of different combinations to get people some experience."

Auld said she would have liked to get the victory at Evansville before jumping into the weekend tournament at Indiana.

"I think we were the better team, but the better team doesn't always win on any given day," Auld said. "We were a little tight and Evansville was very scrappy. So we just took the loss and went from there."

The top-flight competition took its toll on the young Salukis, as Joseph and Gardner posted SIUC's best record, 2-2.

Saitta, who looked good in a victory at Evansville, went 0-4 at the tournament.

"She was in and out of the match mentally," Auld said. "She did not seem as aggressive as she was at Evansville."

Jenny Rubin went 1-3, but Auld said it was one of the better 1-3's she has seen.

"Jenny has worked very hard to develop her game and she had a good weekend," Auld said. "It's nice to see her play well because it shows her hard work is paying off."

The three doubles teams SIUC sent into action combined for a 1-3 record.

Auld said she thinks the fall season can help her young team mature into a winner.

"The fall season is nice because I don't think a lot of incoming freshmen have any idea what college tennis is about," she said. "So this gives them a chance to adjust not only to tennis, but to being a college student."

Scheibal tops for ironmen for SIUC at golf tournament

By Grant Deady
Sports Writer

Sam Scheibal stole the spotlight for the SIUC men's golf team again last weekend, unfortunately though, he had no teammates to share it with.

Scheibal clubbed his way to a second place finish in the 69-golfer field that took part in the Murray State/McDonald's Intercollegiate golf tournament. The par 71 Miller Golf Course in Murray, Kentucky was the site for all the action in the 54 hole, 13 team contest.

SIUC turned in a team total of 916 which was good for seventh place overall. Wright State, on a away with the championship by shooting an 890, with Murray State and Eastern Kentucky grabbing second and third.

Kevin Jones of Wright State turned in a 214 and took home the blue ribbon while his teammate Gabe Knight tied with Scheibal for second with both golfers turning in 223 totals.

Scheibal opened the tournament with a 77 and then came back with a 70 and a 78.

Andy Woods headed a pack of Dawgs by finishing 37th with a 232 while teammates Chris Pytell and Quinn McClare were a stroke behind and tied for 38th.

Jason Stillely rounded off the SIUC competitors with a 234, which tied him for 40th with two other golfers.

Next weekend, the Salukis head for the links in Counce, Tenn. to compete in the Tri-State classic.

RACIAL ISSUES SPARK VIOLENCE IN BRITAIN — Police arrested 27 people Sunday during a violent confrontation between opponents and supporters of the far-right British National Party, which won a local election in East London last week. Dozens of members of the British National Party clashed with hundreds of protesters carrying banners of the Anti-Nazi League after the rightists gathered in a working-class district to pass out leaflets. Many of the protesters were Asians, targets of BNP propaganda during the election campaign for a council seat.

SAUDI ARABIA UNSURE OF PEACE ALLIANCES — In Saudi Arabia, the future of Jerusalem, which contains one of Islam's holiest sites, is a much greater concern to the population than Palestinian self-rule. So until that issue is resolved, presumably still years away, Riyadh may have a difficult time justifying normal ties with Israel. An immediate decision facing Saudi Arabia is how much to contribute to the economic development of Gaza and the West Bank once the PLO takes over. With anti-Palestinian sentiment still running high in Saudi Arabia because of Yasser Arafat's tilt to Iraq during the Persian Gulf War, this will not be a popular move.

HUMAN-RIGHTS LEADER RELEASED FROM JAIL — The man who has become the foremost symbol of the human-rights struggle in China said Monday he has no regrets about the pro-democracy beliefs that sent him to prison for more than 14 years. Speaking to reporters for the first time since he was released from jail six days ago, Wei Jingsheng said he believes he did nothing wrong and has not changed his political views. "I still plan to fight for the cause of democracy. Exactly how is something I have not figured out," he said during a 30-minute interview at his father's home here.

TOWN RACES TO REBUILD BEFORE WINTER — Just how tough is the Washington job market? The Federal Communications Commission recently announced it was hiring 60 attorneys. The non-supervisory jobs pay $33,623 to $62,293 a year. Don't bother applying. The FCC already has more than 1,200 applications. The same deluge occurred when the agency opened up 24 secretarial positions (514 applications) and 18 new supervisory jobs (approximately 600 applications). With layoffs and hiring freezes all the rage in the public and private sector, Michele Cooke, chief of the FCC's personnel department, offers a simple explanation for the application overload: "We're the only game in town."

GE RESHAPES MEDICAL MACHINES, CUTS COST — Bobby Bowen, head of research and development, believes that cutting costs, reshaping General Electric Co.'s high-priced machines into cheaper models more hospitals can afford and expanding sales abroad is the only way to survive. Medical technology, from the magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) machines GE makes to the blood-pressure monitors and surgical knives of its competitors, was among the fastest-growing sectors of the economy in the 1980s with $40 billion in revenue and a U.S. work force of 270,000 people. It added jobs in the United States and dominated global markets.

Vietnamese students maintain optimism

By Sean L. N. Hao
International Writer

SIUC student Khoi Dinh was 13 years old when his family was forced to flee Saigon for political reasons in 1983.

Dinh, a senior in electrical engineering, said his father decided to leave Vietnam after spending five years in a communist-run reeducation for serving in the South Vietnamese air force during the war.

"We left from the beach at night, traveling by canoe to a larger ship," he said. "At the time, I wasn't too worried, but it was scary for my parents, who left with nothing and didn't know what to expect."

Lifting 18-year embargo could ease relations

Dinh said the 43 people traveling on the boat were lucky and reached the land of a neighboring country after a week at sea.

"We reached Malaysia right about the time we ran out of food and water," he said.

Facing grim economic conditions and political persecution in Vietnam, they braved the ocean for days or often weeks, taking little more than the clothes on their backs.

Hundreds of thousands of boat people have fled Vietnam since the signing of accords ending U. S.

involvement in the region after the war.

After this third escape attempt and a five month application process for U. S. citizenship, the Dings became naturalized U. S. citizens.

The tide of boat people has ebbed in recent years as Vietnam tries to gain acceptance into world affairs.

Vietnam has taken strides towards resolving the status of soldiers still missing from the war.

Last week, six members of the House Trade panel returned from Vietnam to urge President Bill Clinton to lift the economic sanctions in hopes of resolving the MIA POW issue.

But SIUC Vietnamese immigrants say lifting the 18-year trade embargo with Vietnam and establishing political relations will benefit both countries.

Chat Chau, a Vietnamese immigrant in industrial technology, said the United States should speed up its normalizing relations with Vietnam.

"The economy in Vietnam is in bad shape," he said. "The United States should take advantage of this good location for Asian-trade, expanding the economic base of both countries.

"Vietnam makes a good alternative to Hong Kong, which is returning to China's rule in '97," Chau said.

Chan Trinh, a Vietnamese immigrant student in physics, said normalizing relations with Vietnam would be good news for both sides.

"The highways and other parts of the country's infrastructure are not in good condition," he said. "There are many American companies that could find work there."

Chan and his brother escaped from Vietnam in 1981 for freedom and economic reasons, he said.

Housing fund, future of cable on city agenda

By Christian Kennerty
City Writer

The City Council will discuss tonight whether Carbondale should regulate cable, and if the council should apply for $233,000 in housing improvement funds.

City Attorney Mike Wepsiec said he will present the council with a report on the benefits and drawbacks of city regulation, and two exhibits summarizing the implications of the Federal Communication Commission's regulations.

He said he will bring the council up to speed on what would be required of the city if they decide to regulate cable locally.

Some of the major questions outlined in the report are:

- Does the City desire to act as a rate regulator?
- If so, what type of mechanism does it desire to implement the regulatory structure imposed by the FCC?
- What role can the Cable Commission, as an advisory body, play?
- If the city certifies regulating rates, should they attempt to negotiate with TCI as other franchising authorities have done with other cable companies?

Wepsiec said the Carbondale Cable Television Commission, which has not yet made a recommendation to the council on whether to regulate, will meet Oct. 13.

Another topic for discussion concerns the city's application for federal funds to help low-income residents in need of home improvement assistance.

Don Monty, management research and analysis manager for Carbondale, said the city will vote on whether to authorize the grant application to Illinois' Community Development Assistance Program.

"Overall, the application is for about $233,000, and the city would provide about $26,500 in matching money and services," Monty said.

"We would simultaneously apply for Illinois Housing and Development Authority for $60,000 which could be used for the community assistance development money," he said.

If the grant money is made available to the city, residents who meet the eligibility requirements can apply for home improvement assistance.

"The money probably wouldn't be available until early spring," he said.

"At that time people would submit an application showing what needs to be done to their homes."

The council will meet at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers, 607 E. College Street.

30,000 expected at outdoors event

By John Rezanka
Environmental Writer

Thousands of local outdoors enthusiasts will flock to John A. Logan College this weekend to participate in Southern Illinois' National Hunting and Fishing Day celebration.

About 30,000 people are expected to attend, making it the biggest National Hunting and Fishing Day event in the nation, Ron Allen, a spokesman for the Illinois Department of Conservation, said.

It is an excellent educational opportunity for youngsters who want to learn about hunting and fishing, Allen said. The event also offers a lot of information and activities for more experienced hunters and fishers.

Activities for youngsters will include a kids fishing pond, a BB gun shooting range, an archery range, a trap shooting range and a tomahawk throwing range, he said.

Adults will compete in archery and shooting competitions as well as the Winchester World Class Calling Series — a trio of duck calling, goose calling and turkey calling contests, Allen said.

Winners of the calling contests will receive $1,000, prizes and a chance to participate in the world championships.

Activities at a new sportsman's stage will include demonstrations of archery deer hunting, turkey hunting, crappie fishing, deer processing, deer calling and black powder shooting, he said.

Also new to the event is the Hawg Trough, a 5,000-gallon aquarium used for fishing demonstrations, Allen said. Spectators can watch expert anglers 3 times a day as they entice strikes from gamefish swimming in the tank.

Other improvements include a larger hunting dog demonstration area with beagles, coon dogs, retrievers and other field dogs and the Little Egypt 3D Archery Classic, he said.

Displays will include a wildlife art show highlighting the works of renowned wildlife artists, and an artistic taxidermy show.

In addition, about 100 exhibitors selling products ranging from boats, to recreational vehicles to dog food will display their new product lines.

The nice thing about the event is that it is totally free, Allen said.

Flood victims get help from students

By Katie Morrison
Health Writer

In central Illinois, a small farming community sits under the Mississippi flood waters, waiting for the level to drop.

Many of the houses still standing will have to be torn down, while hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of farm equipment is scattered about soaked fields.

Survivors must endure snakes, dead fish, swarms of disease-carrying mosquitoes and overcrowded living conditions have become a way of life — so has the horrible stench in the air.

There is a great need for clean-up work, and a volunteer group of SIUC students took the time this weekend to help out.

"One night, the residents told us they saw this big, black cloud and thought a storm was rolling in, but it was a swarm of mosquitoes," team member Todd Hillman, a senior in psychology from Decatur, said.

"They don't need cleaning supplies," team member Craig Adams said. "One survivor said they need bulldozers, kerosene and a match."

SIUC psychologist John F. Snyder and the Go-Out Team traveled to Warsaw, a town about 100 miles west of Springfield on the river, to help flood victims from last Thursday to Sunday.

The team, of graduate assistants and psychology students helped the flood survivors by sorting food and canned goods, tearing up the water damaged floor of a feed factory, sealing a

AIDS drama reveals reality of disease

By Bill Kugelberg

"And the Band Played On," a movie that can currently be seen on HBO, is far from an uplifting film; it chronicles the history of AIDS.

The movie is a factual look at how U.S. officials handle a fatal disease they know very little about.

But the disease is not the dressing part of the movie — that privilege belongs to the way government, health agencies and the press deal with an epidemic they refuse to acknowledge until it is too late.

"And the Band Played On" is an excellent, timely movie about what happened when AIDS began to surface as an epidemic in the world. Even though the film's content is disturbing, it is relieving to know that some people are not afraid to deal with real-life experiences of victims of the disease.

Actor Matthew Modine, best known for his roles in "Vision Quest," "Gross Anatomy" and "Wind," portrays Dr. Don Francis, a doctor obsessed with finding out why gay men are dying.

With the help of the Center for Disease Control and other resources, Modine and his colleagues realize that discovering AIDS was the easy part, but getting support from the Reagan administration is the real obstacle.

A word we feared.
An epidemic we denied.

Environmental cuts spell funding fiasco

A 50 PERCENT CUT IN KEEP ILLINOIS BEAUTIFUL grants, which are distributed by Lt. Gov. Bob Kustra's office, for '93-'94 signal the possibility of reduced environmental efforts in Carbondale and throughout the state.

Last year about $100,000 was allocated to various environmental groups, including Carbondale Clean and Green. This year only $50,000 was made available, and predictions for next year's funding indicate no money will be offered through the program.

The increased emphasis on environmental awareness supported by the Clinton administration, Gov. Jim Edgar's office and conferences like the one in Rio de Janeiro last year have thrust environmental concerns into the spotlight. Yet the funding needed to implement and continue cleanup and recycling efforts is decreasing in this state.

THIS IS A CONTRADICTION. PREACHING environmental consciousness, but failing to make the necessary resources available does little to further the cause. This scenario is not all that far removed from one that occurred on a national level—former President George Bush's unwillingness to commit the United States to the environmental agreement proposed during the conference in Rio.

The move toward increased environmental efforts has been demonstrated across the United States in recent years, with companies including: McDonald's, Wal-Mart and Valvoline recycling everything from plastic and cardboard to oil and metals.

Andrea Stader, coordinator for Carbondale Clean and Green, said information gained through random sample surveys indicates recycling efforts and litter control have increased dramatically since efforts began in the Carbondale area in 1987.

WHILE THE EFFECTS OF THE DECREASES IN Keep Illinois Beautiful funding will not be fully felt until next year, the possibility of only one more year of consistent environmental efforts across the state should not be ignored.

Stader said how much funding Clean and Green will receive will not be made available until the end of September, but if little or no funding is available, the result will be limited environmental programs for Carbondale.

If these decreases are indicative of future funding for environmental programs, the United States will not only continue to trail many other nations in concern for the environment, but also will fall further behind the pack. Simply talking about a problem will not make it go away: Past experiences with tasks of this magnitude should make this easy to see.

THE UNITED STATES HAS LONG PROCLAIMED itself the world's leader in the protection of human rights, fair trade and concerns for the welfare of citizens beginning with the Declaration of Independence. But over time this nation has proven itself better at inventing ideas than at their actual application. The environmental concerns facing the world today are nothing new, yet they are important ones.

The time to recognize the dangers resulting from environmental abuse has passed: The time to increase efforts to prevent further deterioration is now.

Even the most concerned environmentalists will confess their efforts are fruitless unless combined with the environmental actions of others, namely those people responsible for providing the necessary funding to make mere proposals a reality.

Unfair squeeze on college press puts students in 'strange position'

The Washington Post

Precisely why the full weight of politically correct lunacy has fallen upon the University of Pennsylvania is for anthropologists of Philadelphia behavior to determine at some future date. One might expect that the honor would have been seized by some more flamboyant Ivy League institution; instead it has become the exclusive property of poor drab old Penn.

The latest chapter in Penn's sorry and silly story came to a close last week when university officials decided not to take disciplinary action against nine black students whose response to articles they found distasteful in the student newspaper had been to "confiscate" all 14,000 copies of its April 15 press run. "Mistakes by students must be seen more as opportunities for education," a faculty officer said last week, "than as occasions for punishment."

A matter that has received relatively little attention in this whole affair is the strange position of the college press and the ways in which this affects those who run higher education and those who run and write for its student newspapers. College newspapers labor under an assumption among members of the administration, the faculty and the student body that they are not entitled to the same freedoms of speech that the professional press enjoys.

College papers sometimes are wholly independent entities supported by advertising and subscriptions; they may carry the names of the universities, but they are otherwise autonomous. In many instances they are supported to some extent by student fees, which in combination with advertising revenues make it possible to distribute them without charge. At some colleges, student newspapers are extensions of journalism schools or departments.

In all of these situations there is potential for conflict, for the simple reason the newspapers are under the management of students — who even now, in the eyes of some administrators and faculty, enjoy something less than absolute rights and privileges. It would come as no surprise to anyone familiar with the collegiate press if an unspoken assumption behind the University of Pennsylvania's complacency toward the "confiscation" of the Daily Pennsylvanian was that as a student newspaper it is less fully protected by the First Amendment than is, say, The Philadelphia Inquirer. If a university declines to discipline students for a transparent violation of the free-speech rights of the college paper's editors and writers, then it follows that the university assumes such rights either do not exist or are severely compromised by their status as student.

The plain fact of the matter is that college administrations for the most part do not like college newspapers. The relationship between a dean or provost and an editor or reporter is a small-scale image of that between the president of the United States and the press: mutually suspicious and adversarial. College administrators don't like to have their diversity and hate-speech policies challenged by college editors any more than presidents like to have their budgetary proposals challenged by columnists and editorialists.

College administrators, by contrast to presidents, have rather greater power to cow and frustrate student journalists, power that some of them are not reluctant to exercise. That seems to be what administrators at Penn are up to. The Daily Pennsylvanian has had the gall to publish columns by a young journalist who dislikes; what he regards as special treatment of blacks in admissions and other university procedures. In declining to punish the students who retaliated against these opinions by "confiscating" the newspaper, the administration has sent a very clear signal that it would not be unhappy to see the Daily Pennsylvanian taught a lesson.

The best way to learn is often by error; the publication for all to read of a carelessly reported story or column can be more instructive to the person unfortunate enough to commit it than a whole semester's worth of lectures in journalism class.

Readers will do well to bear in mind that diversity of opinion is as much a part of the American fabric as diversity of populace. If what they learn in college is that the proper response to opinion they dislike is suppression of it, they will leave college singularly ill-equipped for life in a world where the noisy expression of unpleasant opinion is omnipresent and inescapable. What they should be learning is that the most effective response to opinion they don't like is better informed and better articulated opinion of their own; but to teach them this would be to treat them as adults — and that, in the prevailing temper of American higher education, is just about inconceivable.

However, it already is apparent that Illinois cannot meet the minimum requirement, Grosboll said. Grosboll said he believes funding should be more equitable, since all the affected areas have been hit hard and will need all the assistance they can get. "If the overall flood is that catastrophic, then everybody ought to get assistance," Grosboll said. Members of the Illinois Congressional Delegation participated in a letter-writing campaign to convince Clinton to adjust the FEMA cost-share formula, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, said. # White House prepares to disclose health plan

WASHINGTON—Hillary Rodham Clinton directed an unusual bipartisan, bicameral briefing Monday on Capitol Hill for more than 300 legislators, single-handedly walking them through a more detailed explanation of the White House's health care plan than President Clinton is expected to present Wednesday night.

Meanwhile, at the White House, officials said the president was not expected to announce specifics of the new tax in his program—a tax on cigarettes and alcohol—by the time he stands before a joint session of Congress that evening.

"It's a hot political issue and it's a sensitive issue for many members of Congress," said White House health care spokesman Kevin Anderson. The president will hold more talks with members of Congress before including recommendations on how much each "sin" should be taxed in the legislative proposal he plans to give Congress in October, he said.

Surrounded by an entourage of Cabinet officials, the first lady presented a nearly two-hour briefing that, along with two seminars to be held for members of Congress Monday, was the center of a whirlwind of activity meant to prime the public for the presidential address.

At a White House meeting with physicians, former Surgeon General C. Everett Koop endorsed the administration's plan and agreed to lead a series of meetings for doctors around the country. Koop said Clinton had "accomplished more in health care reform in the past four months than all of his living predecessors put together," by taking on the "enormous task" of tackling the issue.

"My mother was afraid to leave, thinking the whole family may be caught trying to escape," he said. "My father and two sisters decided to stay behind with her.

"Improved relations would make it easier to travel back and forth," Chan, who has not returned to Vietnam since escaping, said.

Dinh said it is time to forget the past and move forward with relations.

"Even though it was a long bitter war, it's time to forgive and move forward," he said. "It will be politically and economically good for both countries."

Trinh said even if the trade embargo were lifted, it would take time for Vietnam to rebuild its infrastructure and other conditions within the country.

"But it would open the way for businesses to move in and for Vietnam to borrow money," he said.

As conditions within Vietnam improve, the flow of immigrants will begin to reverse, said Dinh.

Dinh said his parents are considering moving back to Vietnam in hope of resuming family ties.

"My parents love the United States but no matter how long they stay here there will always be cultural differences," he said.

Dinh said he plans to remain in the United States.

"It's different for the younger generation," he said. "We grew up here, were educated here, and want to stay here."

Trinh said his parents also plan on returning to Vietnam when they retire but he will probably remain in the United States.

from the flood is below the threshold needed for the state to receive more than 75 percent in federal cost sharing," the delegation said in its letter to Clinton.

The delegation said Illinois' per capita figure is $97.30 if only disaster counties are used in the FEMA formula.

That figure translates to a cost of $265.71 per household in the flooded areas.

U.S. Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleville, also criticized the formula.

"This plan is inherently unfair to a large state like Illinois, where unlike Iowa the flood affected only a small number of counties. The flood victims in my district are just as deserving of the same aid as those in other areas of the Midwest, and should not be penalized just because we live in a larger state," Costello said.

The delegation emphasized the importance of flood funding for its constituents.

"Disaster has clearly hit this region. Our flood-affected constituents are relying on their government to help them recover. The present policy is unfair to Illinois, and we urge you to use a more equitable formula for determining the federal share of recovery costs," the delegation said in its letter to Clinton.

because the testimony presented did not substantiate the medical evidence, he said.

The medical evidence presented showed that Waight died from "asphyxiation caused by manual assault to the neck," but Grace said the state's case cannot prove this.

"We don't have one witness who says they saw any one of these guys manually choking him around the neck," he said. "There is a conflict between the medical evidence relative to what eyewitnesses saw."

The insufficient medical evidence in Bart's case has implications for the remaining cases, he said. "The same medical evidence relates to all five," he said. "If that's all the medical evidence we have, it is going to affect the rest of them as to what we can prove in the rest of the cases."

But, Grace said because of his decision to dismiss, the state has the right to re-instate the charges against Bart in the future without creating problems of double jeopardy.

On campus, several student leaders are concerned with the implications of Monday's verdict.

Susan Hall, president of Graduate and Professional Student Council, said she is unsure what the verdict means in relation to the other cases.

"I'm definitely concerned that justice be served in these cases. I hope that sufficient evidence will be presented in the other trials to bring a conviction," she said. "Obviously a man died at the hands of other people, and I hope whoever is responsible for his death is convicted."

Kevin Green, president of the SIUC Black Affairs Council, said he is frustrated with the way the state has dealt with the case.

"I think the whole thing has taken too long, and there is no excuse for this case going without any answers," he said. "Chuck Grace has had nine months to handle this."

Green said he is waiting for the situation to develop before making further decisions.

"Once I find out more information, if I have to get the students involved, I will take action," he said.

Undergraduate Student Government president Mike Spiwak said he shares many of the same concerns with other student leaders.

"All I know is what I saw on the news today, and I am just curious about how this decision will affect the others," he said.

The trial dates for the five other men are Crawford and Hicks — Sept. 28; Wojcik and Judd — Oct. 18; and Lewis — Nov. 1.

Larry Bowman, executive director of the Williamson County Tourism Bureau, said the event draws people into Southern Illinois from several sister states including Kentucky, Missouri and Indiana.

Most people could spend a whole day at the event and still not see everything, he said. It is a fun and educational event, especially for families.

Jim Cameron, an outdoor recreation planner for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service at Crab Orchard, said the popularity of the event has grown over the past four years, along with the variety and number of activities.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service helps organize the event, Cameron said.

Volunteers from the refuge supervise the kids fishing area, operate trams that transport hunters to shooting ranges and host exhibits.

An endangered species exhibit will highlight the life of the eastern timber wolf, a nocturnal animal show will provide spectators with a first hand look at the critters that roam the refuge at night and a reptile show will display snakes, lizards and other cold-blooded creatures that slither across Southern Illinois.

The Southern Illinois National Hunting and Fishing Day celebration will be Sept. 25 and 26 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Man dies attempting to visit Caan

Los Angeles Times

A 25-year-old man, reportedly lost his footing and tumbled to his death outside an apartment where actor James Caan was staying, homicide investigators said Monday.

Mark Alan Schwartz of West Hollywood, Calif., accidentally fell about 4 a.m. Saturday as he tried to climb into the eight-floor apartment balcony of a friend from an adjacent fire escape, police said.

Caan said in an interview that he slept through the entire incident.

Police said Schwartz arrived at the apartment building—located in an upscale neighborhood on Los Angeles' westside—in a taxi cab and discovered he didn't have the money for the fare. Schwartz apparently knocked in an attempt to wake Caan, police said, but he was unsuccessful. Then he climbed out on the fire escape.

"It appears to be accidental," said Officer Rigo Romero. "Based on the circumstances, Mr. Schwartz lost his footing and fell to his death."

Investigators said the unit belongs to a mutual friend, who was not home at the time, of Caan and Schwartz. Caan told police Schwartz was a casual acquaintance who had visited briefly during the early evening hours Friday.

Caan told police he did not see Schwartz again and was unaware that he had attempted to get into the apartment until after his death.

Best known for his role as a mobster in the 1972 film "The Godfather," Caan was questioned by Los Angeles police Saturday as a witness to what authorities initially described as a possible murder.

Book teaches computer literacy using easy to understand format

By Bill Kugelberg
Entertainment Editor

With the growing popularity of Macintosh computers in the United States, "The Back Pocket Mac Book" is a welcome addition to users' libraries.

Written by Tom Cuthbertson, a former staff writer for Santa Cruz Operations, a San Francisco software company, the book explains the ins-and-outs of Macintosh computers.

From the first chapter, which deals with "Plugging In and Starting Up," to the last chapter, "How Do I Get Outta Here," the pocket guide is an invaluable tool in using a Macintosh computer.

The book also includes a chapter on how to keep the Mac user happy and the Mac unit smiling, by doing things such as not moving the Mac unit while it is on.

This book lists steps everyday users will want to remember. It even tells how to retrieve something out of trash that has already been emptied.

Unlike many how-to computer manuals, "The Back Pocket Mac Book" is easy to understand, using language even a first-time Mac user will be able to follow. Even if a word is not understandable, the book's 26-page glossary will solve that problem.

The book does not deal with stationary Macs only, but advice on how to get the best usage from the portable powerbooks also is included.

The "Back Pocket Mac Book" is an excellent reference book that should be sitting beside every Macintosh computer. The book sells for $8.95 and is available at local bookstores. It also can be ordered through Ten Speed Press at 1-800-841-2665.

Senators believe benefit cutbacks would save cash

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—A group headed by former senators Warren B. Rudman, R-N.H., and Paul E. Tsongas, D-Mass., Monday unveiled a tough deficit-reduction plan that would achieve huge savings by scaling back Social Security and Medicare benefits for middle- and upper-income families.

The long-term proposal is aimed at stoking a national debate over entitlement programs, which critics complain have evolved from a social and economic safety net for the poor and elderly to a patchwork of costly subsidies for wealthier individuals.

The Clinton administration and members of Congress are exploring a number of ways to control entitlements, such as imposing caps on government spending for Medicare and Medicaid or postponing cost of living adjustments of some benefits.

While some entitlements—such as Medicaid, food stamps and Aid to Families With Dependent Children—are targeted for the poor, Congress traditionally has resisted proposals to "means test" Social Security and Medicare, which are among the fastest growing segments of the budget.

The budget plan and report issued Monday by the Concord Coalition, which advocates a balanced budget by the turn of the century, asserted that reducing entitlements to middle- and higher-income people is fair and represents "the only realistic way to get control of the deficit."

The plan, designed to achieve $251 billion more in deficit reduction than the anti-deficit package approved by Congress last month, would peg the level of Social Security payments, the value of Medicare coverage, farm payments, unemployment benefits and certain veterans benefits to income.

Families earning more than $40,000 a year would be subject to a sliding-scale, across-the-board means test designed to gradually reduce their benefits in proportion to their overall income. The wealthiest families would receive no more than 15 percent of their original benefits under the plan.

the flood survivors by sorting food and canned goods, tearing up the water damaged floor of a feed factory, sealing a resident's house and serving food. The team worked 12-hour days, they said.

While the town itself was not badly damaged, the rural farming area was submerged under water, team member Andy Needling, a senior in psychology from Murphysboro, said.

However, when the team was taken to the flood areas, there was a much different picture.

Hillman said he could not believe there still was so much flooding. Seventy families were displaced from the flood, Hillman said. The stench was described as a "big toilet" by Joanne Cook, pastor of the United Methodist Church of Central Illinois. The church hosted the team during their stay.

Team members said they were surprised by the spirit of the survivors. The best part of the trip was meeting the people, they said.

"They are strong, proud people," McGettrick said. "It was like a healing process for them to talk about it and say they survived it."

One group of survivors were called the "paper people."

"These are people who lost everything in the flood and the only thing they have left is a paper mortgage at the bank," McGettrick said.

"We could stay for six months and still not get all that needs to be done done," Ata Karim, a graduate assistant in psychology from Pakistan, said.

"The flood is far from over," Hillman said. "It's not just a foot of water — it's 15 to 20 feet."

There still is a need for volunteers, Hillman said. Many areas still are submerged in Warsaw.

The team had a great experience and was in high spirits, Snyder said.

'NYPD Blue' runs tonight

Los Angeles Times

After months of hand-wringing and fist-waving that has turned it into the most controversial television drama in years, "NYPD Blue" finally arrives on ABC Tuesday night.

But don't call Aunt Martha in Dallas, Texas, or Uncle Frank in Syracuse, N.Y., to ask them what they thought of the premiere. They won't be able to watch it.

According to ABC, at least 30 of its 225 affiliated stations, most of them in smaller markets, have decided not to air the gritty police series because of the unprecedented use of nudity and raw language in a mainstream network prime-time entertainment program.

Still more affiliates may join that list. ABC officials said Monday that they will not have an accurate count of stations that preempted the episode until Wednesday. ABC spokesmen maintained that all of the program's commercial slots are sold out. They said the ads were sold for "considerably higher" than the $115,000-per-30-second spot.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

Please Be Sure To Check Your Classified Advertisement For Errors On The First Day Of Publication

The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect insertion. Advertisers are responsible for checking their advertisements for errors on the first day they appear. Errors not the fault of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted.

All classified advertising must be processed before 12:00 Noon to appear in the next day's publication. Anything processed after 12:00 Noon will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising must be paid in advance except for those accounts with established credit. A 29¢ charge will be added to billed classified advertising. A service charge of $7.50 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellation of a classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund under $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing.

All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected, or cancelled at any time.

The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit an advertisement.

A sample of all mail-order items must be submitted and approved prior to deadline for publication.

No ads will be mis-classified.
