Power fails on east side of campus

By Dylan Fenley
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Greg Bjorkquist had a rather unpleasant surprise waiting for him when he returned to his dorm room from classes Thursday following a power failure the night before.

"All my books in my bag got wet because the fridge defrosted, and all the food spoiled and leaked all over the floor," Bjorkquist, a sophomore in physical education from Glenview who lives in Schneider Hall, said.

Residents of student housing on the east side of campus found themselves in the dark Thursday morning because of a power failure that left most of Brush Towers and University Park without electricity.

And University officials said the blackout is a symptom of serious problems with the campus' power grid — problems which could leave 75 percent of the University without power if a solution is not found soon.

Scott Pike, superintendent of maintenance and construction, said the power outage, which occurred at about 5:30 a.m. Thursday, affected Mae Smith Hall and Schneider Hall in Brush Towers and Neely Hall, Allen I, II, and III Halls and Grinnell Cafeteria in University Park as well as the Blue Barracks and the Student Recreation Center.

The power was restored at 4:45 p.m. Thursday.

The exact cause of the power outage is unknown, but Pike said Physical Plant officials have narrowed the problem to main electrical feeder located on the east side of campus.

Leslie Renee said she was surprised to wake up Thursday morning and find her fourth floor room in Neely Hall without power.

"I was trying to wake up in time to eat breakfast before class," Renee, a sophomore on public relations from Chicago, said. "I wouldn't have been able to make it if class hadn't been canceled."

Renee was lucky that her 8 a.m. class was canceled because power was out at the Blue Barracks where the class was supposed to meet.

James Tweedy, vice chancellor for administration, said Thursday's blackout is a symptom of serious problems with the campus' power grid that University officials have been concerned about for years. He said the University has been trying for two years to get funding for necessary repairs to the power grid, but the General Assembly has been unwilling to approve funding.

"It's not just a matter of finding the money," Tweedy said. "It's a matter of getting bids and hiring a consultant firm to do the design work and hiring a contractor to do the work."

Tweedy said there are five feeders on campus which seriously need to be replaced — feeders 10,

CAPTURING PERFECTION

River Region Evening Edition nominated for Emmy

By Zack Pierceall
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A newscast from WSIU's nightly news program has been nominated for a St. Louis Area Emmy because of its near-perfect production values, the show's producer says.

The Feb. 19 newscast of Channel 8's "River Region Evening Edition" has been nominated for the Emmy by the North American Television and Advertising Society after being submitted by Rich Kuenneke, the show's news producer.

Kuenneke said he submitted that particular broadcast because it was one of the show's best broadcasts.

"I submitted this episode because technically, it was almost perfect, he said. "There are many different roles on the show. Sometimes they come together, and sometimes they crash and burn. This one soared."

Ken Keller, associate professor of radio-television, said "River Region Evening Edition," which is aired at 5:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, is a news program that focuses on events and people in Southern Illinois.

He said the program uses a format similar to newscasts on local television stations, with students working as two general news anchors, a weather anchor and a sports anchor.

Keller said the program, which is seen by people in four states, is a training ground for students majoring in radio-television.

"The show is a mainstay of our program," he said. "I think this nomination is great. Of course, awards aren't the most important thing in terms of the final product."

Amy Rutledge, a senior in radio-television from Schaumburg, and Becky Rhode, a 1996 radio-television graduate from Cape Girardeau, Mo., have been nominated for their roles in the production of the program.

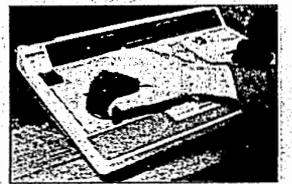

Rutledge, who is now executive producer for the "River Region Evening Edition," said she is excited about being nominated.

"This whole thing is just a real big surprise," she said. "I didn't even know anything had been sent in."

"We have a really great program, and this nomination makes the whole school look good."

Rhode, who has since moved on to news production at KFVS Channel 12,

Law student denied re-admission

Student receives letter from school, appeals to courts for reinstatement.

By Julie Rendleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIU Law School officials denied a student re-admission to the school Thursday after an attempt to resolve a matter about his admission application, the student says.

Kristopher K. Kilgore, a second year law student from Rancho Palos Verdes, Calif., was forced out of the School of Law this summer after questions about his admissions application and an alleged warrant for his arrest surfaced.

Kilgore said he received a statement from the School of Law Thursday stating the reasons he did not get reinstated.

"I have not had a chance to look over the documents yet, so I don't know the reasons," Kilgore said. "My lawyer said there were holes in the statement."

Kilgore said Thomas Guernsey, dean of the school, made the decision not to reinstate Kilgore even though Guernsey did not attend a closed hearing Sept. 11 in an attempt to resolve the matter. "I do not understand why they didn't do this sooner before I spent

Bob Dole's wife to visit Student Center Monday

Elizabeth Dole, wife of Republican presidential nominee Bob Dole, is scheduled to stop at the SIUC Student Center Monday morning for breakfast with students.

Elizabeth Dole, who will be at the Student Center Ballrooms at 8 a.m., will rally students and the University community as part of her husband's campaign trail through the Midwest.

She will address the crowd in an "Oprah style," Dole officials said; she plans to walk around and talk to the audience instead of standing behind a podium.

However, officials are not confirming that Dole will visit the Hanford house, 502 W. Walnut St. — the house her grandfather, a former Carbondale resident, built.

Dole campaign officials arrived in Carbondale late Wednesday night to prepare for the visit and will continue preparation through the weekend, Doug Rogers, a Dole/Kemp '96 official, said.

Rogers, along with local Republicans, will coordinate Elizabeth Dole's visit.

After her visit, she will travel to Paducah, Ky. and Louisville, Ky. at noon. She will rejoin her husband on Sunday in Lake County for a rally and fundraiser.

Andy Volpert, College Republican president, said the organization also is busy preparing for the visit.

In 1992, Hillary Rodham Clinton rallied students at SIUC during the presidential campaign.

Exploring cultural roots...

Cookout, flag ceremony unites international students

By Traavis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Under the shadow of 22 national flags waving in the wind, international students at Ambassador Hall celebrated their cultural roots with one of America's favorite pastimes — barbecuing.

The smell of hamburgers cooking and the sound of ice sloshing in plastic cups filled the air Wednesday as international students came together for a cookout and a flag ceremony.

Flags were raised on 11 poles with two flags on each pole outside of the off-campus dorm, 600 W. Freeman St.

The flag ceremony was the first chance for some of the 80 international residents at Ambassador Hall to represent their country by having their flag raised. As the name of each country was called during the ceremony, students representing that nation brought their flag out to be raised.

Some of the flags included the South Korean flag, the Japanese flag, the flag of Thailand, the Malaysian flag and the Swedish flag.

Matt Maier, owner of Ambassador Hall and organizer of the event, said even though the event was a way for students to get together to honor their countries, it also was a way for them to feel at home in America. He said the food was basic hamburgers and hot dogs that everybody loves to eat.

"Most of the students have been here two or three years, and they always like the usual foods like hamburgers, hot dogs, iced tea and potato salad," Maier said.

"It was kind of funny. We had some girls arrive here from Japan, and the first thing they wanted was pizza."

Experiencing other international cultures, including the American culture, was what made the ceremony a success. Sarah Mwrrigi, a senior in music from Kenya, said.

Mwrrigi said the American-style barbecue resembled cookouts from her home country. She said it was interesting to compare the two different cultures.

"Historically, we always prepared our food as a barbecue in Kenya," Mwrrigi said. "There really is not much difference from what people do here in America than what we do there. The only real difference is the meat because we cook goat meat as well as beef."

For Asian students like Khong Wei Tay, a junior in-food and nutrition dietetics from Malaysia, the cookout was different from his homeland because American barbecues are done outside.

"We have barbecues in Malaysia, but they are done indoors," Wei Tay said. "There is a big table, and everybody sits together."

"The differences in the traditions and the customs from country to country was what the flag ceremony and picnic was all about, Maier said.

One appeal should be eliminated from judicial proceedings

IT IS BETTER FOR A GUILTY PERSON TO GO free than to punish someone for a crime he or she did not commit. This is a good ethical standard to follow in the pursuit of justice. It also is the reason we have due process in our court system.

Giving people accused of wrongdoing an adequate chance to prove their innocence is absolutely necessary to prevent the worst injustice of all — punishing a person who does not deserve it.

EXTREME CARE MUST BE TAKEN IN THE design of such a process, however, to prevent it from becoming a tool the guilty can use to prevent justice from being served.

This is the attitude SIUC administrators must take into their discussions about changing the University's student conduct code.

STALKING INCIDENTS ON CAMPUS HAVE spurred the administration to form a committee that will discuss how the code should be changed.

Examining the code for areas that need changes is necessary because it has not been changed since 1986. Times change and the campus community does also. The code should reflect these changes. What good are rules that are designed for the campus situation 10 years ago?

IT IS DISTURBING TO HEAR OF STUDENTS who have been found guilty of serious offenses that continue to remain at SIUC because the appeals process can take a long time. When this happens it puts law-abiding students in danger.

The way the code is set up now allows students that have been found guilty by a panel of students, staff and faculty to appeal to the director of Student Development who may or may not decide the appeal is valid enough to be granted. If it is granted, the director can overturn a student's guilty ruling or uphold it and change the sanctions against the student. The director also can completely uphold the previous ruling.

IF THE LATTER OCCURS, THE STUDENT CAN appeal to the vice chancellor of Student Affairs who has the same options as the director in hearing the appeal. If the vice chancellor upholds the guilty ruling, yet another appeal can be made to the SIUC Chancellor in the same manner. But even if the Chancellor agrees with the ruling, the appeals are not yet exhausted. The accused can still appeal to the SIU Board of Trustees.

It is unlikely that any appeal will be overturned at this stage given the fact that others have found the ruling to be valid. But how many appeals are necessary to ensure guilt? One of these steps should be taken out to make the process less drawn out. An accused student can stay in school, even if he or she has been found guilty of a serious offense by drawing out the appeals process. Removing one step will not prevent wrongly-accused students from proving their innocence. It will prevent guilty students from prolonging their punishment.

Balance is the key here. Let's remove one appeal step to obtain it.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reader says God/Jesus same

Editor's note: Due to an error, Lynn Mowry's letter was run incorrectly in Thursday's paper. The Daily Egyptian regrets the error and apologizes for any inconvenience. We are re-printing the letter in its entirety with the correction in bold type.

In response to the article of 9/12/96 concerning Jack Crumbly's search for God through his rejection of Christianity, I believe he did not recognize the true Living God.

He said that when he and his wife went to church that the minister would talk so much about Jesus instead of God, period. But that is the whole point Jack — that Jesus Christ is God.

I find it sad that your church did not make this crystal clear. Nevertheless, it is stated in the Holy Bible. It is the holy Scriptures that make you wise to accept God's salvation by trusting in Jesus Christ.

The entire Bible was given to us by inspiration from God and is useful to teach us what is true (II Tim 3:15-16 TLB). Before anything else existed, there was Christ with God. He has always been alive and is himself, God (John 1:1 TLB). Whoever transgresses and does not abide in the doctrine of Christ does not have God. He who abides in the doctrine of Christ has both the Father and the Son (II John 9 NKJV).

You see, for me, not any god will do - only the Living God. Jesus says through his word "I am the way, the truth and the life: no man comes unto the Father but by me," (John 14:6 KJV).

The only way/path to the Father is through his Son who was resurrected and is alive today providing Eternal Life for those who believe. Relationship/loving fellowship with Christ is essential and preferable for me over a religion based on the rules and writings of a deceased prophet. Christ is alive, and he is Love Eternal.

Racism not limited to one group

Here is yet another opinion on the black/white race issue. This subject has been a burden on my mind for some time now.

While growing up, I always was taught that skin color was irrelevant and that whites were no better than blacks and vice versa. I personally try to have no prejudices against the black race as a whole. Because of this, I feel that I owe blacks nothing for the stupidity of some of my ancestors.

I am a white person, but I am also an individual and feel that I should be judged as such. I am deeply ashamed that the ancestors of my race saw fit to oppress blacks, and I feel that this is a huge scar on the history of my race. However, this doesn't mean that I accept responsibility for something I did not take part in.

I try to treat blacks as equals and obviously expect the same respect from them. I feel that today there are probably at least as many racist blacks as there are racist whites. This is only speculation.

Yes, I do feel that blacks can be racist. I feel that a black person blaming me for the actions of my race - both in the past and present - is just as racist as I would be in saying that most blacks abuse drugs - a common misconception held by some racist whites.

I am not oppressed, but I can feel racism all the time. As a fan of rap music, it upsets me, when some of the black artists I admire refer to my entire race as "white devils" or "crookers."

It also upsets me that there are all-black organizations that ban whites from membership solely because they are white. Is this not racism? I agree with black advancement, but I know that all-white organizations are not so widely accepted.

I'm not claiming that blacks have not faced struggles and oppression. However, I refuse to take responsibility. This letter won't change any minds, but I only ask one thing: Don't call me white.

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board.

Letters to the editor must be submitted in person to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. # Profs should inspire students

It has been said that pomography is difficult to describe, but 'You'll know it when you see it.' If that statement is correct, then it seems that pomography and good teaching have at least one thing in common. You'll know it when you see it.

I am speaking of good teaching of course, and I've seen it at SIU, although it is more infrequent than it should be. While my department is particularly blessed with golden-tongued pedagogues, and most departments have at least one or two of these passionate teachers, the majority of teachers here are just adequate.

Teaching is not an easy thing to do. It involves not only mastering a body of knowledge but also developing the ability to captivate students' interest and inspire them. Contrary to the platitudes espoused by education departments, a person cannot be 'taught.' Rather, an individual 'learns.'

This distinction is very important because while the former assumes a passive educational experience, the latter assumes a pro-active experience. 'Doing' involves thought and effort while 'being done to' involves no effort at all.

People learn because they are curious about something or are inspired by someone and not because teachers 'teach' them. Motivated students aren't a problem for teachers because they are self-initiated.

The typical student, however, requires the very best a teacher can offer to initiate an interest in learning. But all too often, teachers don't offer their best, and students' curiosities are never piqued. This sort of teacher/student relationship results in teachers trying to 'teach' instead of inspire and students 'learning' simply for testing purposes and not for personal satisfaction.

THE LAST WORD

-by jeff howard

I have experienced a course where just such a student/teacher relationship exists. The professor is the most uninspiring, boorish dolt ever to step foot behind a lecture hall lectern. His idea of a lecture consists of placing outlines of terms and concepts on an overhead projector and reading them verbatim in a wooden, emotionless voice for the entire mandatory period. But mandatory attendance is a good thing for the professor, because he would be flipping outlines for an empty house were it not required that students be in class. Is this an example of a teacher inspiring students?

This professor shouldn't be allowed near students because every time he is, he runs the risk of turning them off the subject of his course and his field of study in general. Once disgusted, students will associate his style of teaching with the entire field. It doesn't take a statistical analysis to know if a teacher is doing a good job or not. It is apparent, after sitting through 10 minutes of this guy's lecture, that he should be locked away in a lab somewhere, sticking probes up rats' anuses and not molesting young minds by turning them off to his field.

The problem with evaluating the effectiveness of teachers is that 'measuring it' is not quantifiable. However, if attendance is a good measure of student interest and student interest is a good measure of teaching effectiveness, then student attendance can be used to evaluate teaching effectiveness.

Assuming that the professor doesn't teach directly from a text and discusses material in the lecture that will appear on tests or will be needed to write papers, sufficient incentive will exist for students to attend class without attendance being required. If student attendance is high, then the professor is probably doing a good job and would receive a high score. But if attendance is low, given the incentive to attend class, then he is probably doing a poor job and would receive a low score.

This plan is simplistic. I realize, but it seems better than the current system that allows a person to flip overheads instead of inspiring students.

Hey folks, I was only joking

-by James Lyon

Alan and I began writing 'Two Cents' as a way to write about little annoying things in our everyday lives with a little bit of humor. However, I would like to drift from that for today.

I, myself, am a pretty cynical fellow, not to mention that I'm suffering from a deep sense of depression that sets in every now and again. So for me, humor is a great escape from the mundane and meaningless. Without it, I seriously doubt I would have made it this far.

With that said, something has really been bothering me lately. I have received a few letters from people complaining about how I had mouthed a certain Army commercial. Some people thought I was talking ill about the Army, when in fact I was talking about the commercial.

This article is not a response to that. I am simply using it as an example to get my point across, and the point is that people have become way too serious lately.

When exactly did we all lose the ability to laugh at ourselves? When did satire become a lost art, and why wasn't I told about it? If it isn't one thing, it is another.

A cartoon may tick one person off; a humorous remark may tick someone else off.

That is the way it is, and that is the way it always will be. You can't please everybody. Frankly, I don't want to.

But lately it seems that everyone is forgetting what humor is. My God, are we all turning into Vulcans, or has all of this political correctness garbage, clouded our good-humored judgment?

We can all start living like Orwell's 1984ians, but is that what we really want?

Personally, I say screw it. The rest of the world can fall apart, and I will be there laughing as it does.

There are certain things you can't fix, so you might as well laugh at them. If anyone else out there feels the same, come find me. I'll be the one at the bar drinking a beer or two — or 10.

You can join me if you like. The invitation is open. So come, my children of the grain. You and I shall tap a keg and laugh at ourselves.

And as everyone else falls deeper into their illusions, we will be drowning our sorrows and laughing at the world's mistaken philosophies.

People might call us crazy, but who cares. How sane can a person be when they have forgotten how to laugh?

Tribe works to reclaim home

Los Angeles Times

SOMES BAR, Calif.—Not far from the place they call the center of the world, nine Karuk men in deer-skin skirts and feathered woodpecker-scalp headdresses perform the sacred Jump Dance, reviving a ritual lost for nearly a century.

Waving ornamental baskets in the air, they stomp their feet and chant in unison on a hill above the Klamath River, the spot where their ancestors staged the religious ceremony for thousands of years.

"This is a war dance against evil," a medicine man solemnly tells 50 tribe members who stand barefoot, watching in silence. "How to live is within this dance."

For the Karuks, who once were numerous enough to populate a 40-mile stretch of the Klamath near the Oregon border, the resurrection of the Jump Dance symbolizes their renewal as a people. Up until the late 1970s, the Karuks had little land and few resources.

Scattered throughout Northern California and Southern Oregon, their language and customs were on the verge of disappearing.

Sparked by a tribal reorganization in 1990, the Karuks have embarked on a wide-ranging effort to rebuild their tribe, bringing back ancient customs, reviving their language and establishing enterprises that create jobs for their people. They also have begun to reacquire ancestral lands lost long ago — including one sacred parcel that authorities recently seized from an alleged marijuana grower.

Karuk tribal planner Crow Munk puts it simply: "This is the rebirth of a nation." The Karuks, located in the Klamath Mountains far from any major population center, are revitalizing their tribe through economic development programs that include constructing houses for tribe members, operating health centers, opening a building supply store and fashioning furniture from hardwoods gathered in the forests.

Under the leadership of tribal chairman Alvis Johnson, the Karuk government began hiring outsiders with management expertise as well as local tribal members, expanding from a staff of three to about 80 employees.

"We have hired some outstanding people to help make it work," said Johnson.

Small crowd greets pope in France

Los Angeles Times

TOURS, France—It was another red carpet in the morning rain and it must have seemed long.

With the president of France inching protectively alongside, Karol Wojtyla limped gamely down it. An aide held a white umbrella. People held their breath.

There was a gift of flowers from two children, national anthems, review of an honor guard, pleasantries with government officials, fraternal greetings to bishops in black robes and purple caps.

It went like clockwork. Sighs of relief.

Thus on a dank autumn Thursday in Western France did ailing Pope John Paul II launch the 75th foreign trip of his extraordinary reign.

The pope was hurrying but still on the job.

John Paul even shunned his cane, which, like back-up medical aid, now is an integral feature of the papal retinue.

A major theme underlying the pope's four-day visit here is international concern for his health.

expressed similar feelings.

"I was really surprised, and I'm honored to be nominated," Rhode said. "I never really expected to be nominated because this is a professional award. It's nice to know all the hard work is being recognized."

Cathy Spaulding, of the North American Television and Advertising Society, said the videos were sent out to NATAS members in other television markets.

The tapes were then reviewed and given scores by panels of six to eight peer judges. The entry with the most points in each category is the winner of that category.

Spaulding said WSU's nomination is in the Student Production category. She said other nominees in this category are entries from the University of Missouri at Columbia and SIU's Edwardsville campus.

Spaulding said the envelopes containing the names of the winners will not be revealed until the black-tie dinner ceremony Oct. 5 in St. Louis.

to the main campus.

Twecly said if feeders 1 and 2 fail, about 75 percent of the academic buildings on campus would be left without power, and the University would be forced to shut down.

Feeder number 12, which is responsible for Thursday's power outage, will cost $1.1 million to replace. Ted Sanders, SIU President, said, "We don't have a million dollars to fix that problem." Sanders said, "If we don't have power, we're not going to run a University."

Pike said physical plant officials had not yet determined whether the feeder would need to be replaced.

all this money," Kilgore said.

School of Law officials said they could not comment on the matter because it falls under a student's academic record protected by law.

Court records state that Kilgore received a letter Aug. 26 from Guemsey stating that his admission to the Law School was rescinded immediately.

The letter stated that Kilgore was kicked out for allegedly not disclosing previous convictions on his law school application and for violating probation for a 1991 conviction that caused a warrant for his arrest.

Chuck Danner, a third-year law student and president of Phi Alpha Delta from Peoria, has said he does not believe there is a warrant out on Kilgore.

"If there is a warrant out for his arrest, why haven't they arrested him yet?" he said.

Alfred Sanders Jr., Kilgore's lawyer, said in an earlier interview with the Daily Egyptian that the closed hearing Sept. 11 was to get Kilgore reinstated and to settle the dispute over whether Kilgore has a warrant out for his arrest.

Kilgore had stated in a letter that he was innocent of all allegations that prevented him from being in the school.

"However, the fact remains that I have had two convictions both of which were revealed on my application," Kilgore said. "I have made no attempt to conceal any personal information requested of me."

Kilgore said a preliminary injunction hearing is scheduled for Sept. 30 against the School of Law to try to get him reinstated. Earlier in the semester, Kilgore said he filed for a restraining order to be reinstated, but it was denied by Jackson County Judge David Watt Jr.

Kilgore said he does not understand why he was kicked out after being in the School of Law for a year and hopes this does not happen to other law students.

The Secret of Why You Like Country Music
(Even If You Don't Realize It)

The secret is simple: Country music is simple. The bass beat is not subtle, not intimidating. Country music about forces your feet to dance. And the lyrics are straight forward too, unlike the rock song I just heard that referred either to the existential meaning of life or beauty with a chicken. The country song writer is up front. He likes Montana. He doesn't like hippies. His wife is sleeping around and he's hummed.

Country music puts you at ease. Thus it's easier to socialize. Rock music may give you the ability for free individual rhythmic expression, but country music allows you to press the flesh - especially with the slow "Mother Hugging" ballads.

New senators elected, five seats left to be filled

By Christopher Miller
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Sam Vallicelli did not expect at the beginning of the semester he would be an Undergraduate Student Government senator.

Vallicelli, a senior in radio-television from Elmburst, is one of seven students appointed by the USG Senate Wednesday night to fill empty senatorial seats.

"I am excited to be given an opportunity to represent undergraduate students living in Carbondale's west side," Vallicelli said as he was sworn in.

Vallicelli, along with the other new senators, have reduced the number of vacant senate seats from 12 to five.

The new senators are Anthony Buic, east side; Timothy Heggemeier, east side; Connie Howard, west side; Autumn Kimble, west side; Samuel Vallicelli, west side; Joyce Newby, Thompson Point; and Paul Ruez, University Park.

The seats became vacant when some senators moved out of their district, failed to maintain a 2.0 grade point average or changed their major to a college different from the one they were elected to represent.

The five remaining vacant seats are Brush Towers, Southern Hills, College of Applied Sciences and Arts, School of Social Work and Academic Affairs.

David Penny, USG chief of staff, said anyone interested in becoming a senator should contact the USG office on the third floor of the Student Center.

USG also seated its six-member Internal Affairs Committee, which is responsible for the rules that govern the operations of the senate.

Alim said much of USG's business takes place in these committees.

"This is the heart and soul of the organization from a senate standpoint," he said.

The senate tabled a resolution to make senator participation mandatory in its volunteer-USG Community Leadership Program.

Senators Mike Klein, College of Agriculture, and Sara McGee,

College of Liberal Arts, said time was needed to review the resolution and make changes because mandatory volunteerism is not volunteerism.

Before the meeting, State Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, urged SIUC student leaders to get involved with educational issues at the state level. Bost, who is running for reelection in the 115th district, said he would favor a trip by student leaders to Springfield to meet with members of the Higher Education Committee.

New psychology head to focus on excellence

By William Hatfield

like to continue that practice." He said this democratic decision making was part of the reason he was chosen as chairman.

"I don't like having power, and I think that was an important qualification," Vaux said. "The faculty did not want someone who is power hungry."

Vaux said although the University is under pressure to increase enrollment, the Psychology Department is not suffering from declining enrollment.

"Our enrollment is up about 114 percent, so we are still ahead of the game," Vaux said. "But we do have to be concerned about retaining our best students."

Vaux said he has a good working

The new chair of the Psychology Department says he does not need to focus on enrollment but instead wants to concentrate on maintaining the department's excellence.

Alan Vaux, who was named the psychology chair July 1, said he is interested in continuing and improving the standards of psychology programs.

"My goal is that psychology undergraduate majors will be among the most literate, numerate and articulate undergraduates on campus," Vaux said. "I also want to maintain the outstanding graduate program that we have."

Vaux said he will work to develop and implement procedures for assigning duties, allocating resources and maintaining the democratic format of the department.

"In this department, we have practiced democratic decision making for important issues," Vaux said. "I'd relationship with the faculty of his department.

"We have a very productive faculty and are one of the most efficient departments on campus," he said.

Vaux became chairman when James McHose stepped down after 17 years. Vaux was chosen after a departmental vote followed by approval of John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

Jackson said Vaux is an outstanding choice because he chaired the Psychology Department Planning Committee, a long-term planning committee that created a blueprint for the future of the Psychology Department.

"It's already a fine department and through Vaux, we will be continuing a tradition of excellence," Jackson said. "However, we are always interested in improvement, and I think he is interested in doing that."

Vaux said as a result of the planning committee, a number of courses were updated. Also, he said the class sizes of 400 level courses were decreased.

Vaux was born in Dublin, Ireland, and obtained a bachelor's degree and a Ph.D. in psychology in Ireland at Trinity College. He also attended the University of California in Irvine where he obtained a master's degree and a Ph.D. in social ecology.

Vaux is the former director of SIUC Applied Research Consultants, a research facility for training doctoral students in applied experimental psychology. He said the facility does research work for large corporations as well as for the SIUC campus.

Vaux has authored a book and more than 50 articles and chapters in the field of community psychology. He also teaches psychology courses about violence and abnormal behavior.

Jose Soto, a psychology graduate student from Chicago, said Vaux's classes were unique because he cut out the "psycho babble" and made the class real.

"I think Dr. Vaux will make a great chairperson because he is just so impressive in his capacity of knowledge," Soto said.

HIV resistance more common in whites

Newsday

BALTIMORE—Genetic resistance to HIV infection is relatively common in people of Caucasian descent and virtually nonexistent in people of African descent, the National Cancer Institute's Dr. Steven O'Brien has announced.

Based on a study of more than 1,900 American men and women who have been in AIDS-related studies for more than a decade and who have been exposed to the human immunodeficiency virus repeatedly without becoming infected or who are HIV-positive but after years of infection haven't progressed to AIDS. O'Brien made another finding: There is a state of partial genetic protection that slows the course of illness.

The Caucasian people who have this gene are far less likely to progress rapidly to AIDS after infection and they live AIDS-free lives an average of two years longer than infected individuals who don't carry the gene.

O'Brien's findings are so strong — the statistical evidence so powerful — that the odds that this genetic protective effect is a matter of coincidence or other factors are 1 in 40 million. In the statistical world of biology that constitutes virtual certainly, O'Brien's findings were announced last week in Baltimore at the annual meeting of the Institute of Human Virology. Startling as his findings may seem, they are merely one piece of a constellation of revelations that during the past six months has turned AIDS research topsy-turvy.

"It's been exhilarating, the pace of discovery," Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the NIH's National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases in Bethesda, Md., told his assembled colleagues. "But it also gives me a migraine headache because of the difficulty of keeping up."

Senator stresses student education for near future

By Tracy Taylor
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Educated Latino students are important in the process of crossing the bridge into the 21st century, an Illinois State Senator said on campus Wednesday.

As part of National Hispanic Month, Sen. Miguel Del Valle, D-Chicago, spoke to more than 20 people in the Video Lounge in the Student Center.

"There is a need in the job market for trained, skilled, African Americans and Hispanics," he said. "There is a need for bilingual, bicultural engineers, computer science majors and education majors."

Del Valle attended the Democratic National Convention in August where President Bill Clinton spoke about building a bridge to the 21st century to cope with technological advancements.

Del Valle said as the economy changes and as demands of the job market change, there will be expanded opportunities for Latino students.

"Some people in the private sector are thinking they need individuals, which come trained because it is good for business, and it helps their business grow and expand in markets overseas," he said.

Del Valle said Hispanics need to pursue higher education because diversity in the workforce will benefit the economy.

"It's good for our economy. It's good for the United States, and it's good for our country and the well-being of the country because that bridge to the 21st century has to be crossed," he said. "It has to be crossed by individuals of all ethnic backgrounds because that is what will benefit our country."

Del Valle said that although the opportunities are expanding for Hispanic students, the workforce of tomorrow may not have a place for all people because of technological advancement.

"A lot of people, no matter where they come from — black, white, Hispanic — are feeling a bit uneasy about the future," he said. "They see the rapidly advancing technology. Individuals are being replaced by robots and computers."

Del Valle said the loss of jobs America is experiencing is not sporadic or short term.

"We're experiencing long-term structural unemployment, and many of those who cast the angry vote know that and are afraid of being part of that," he said. "They know that they may be just a paycheck away from being told, 'Sorry, we're downsizing.'"

Del Valle said that retention rates of Hispanics in schools has to increase in order to cross the bridge into the 21st century.

"We have to, as Hispanics, catch up and keep up with advancing technology," he said. "Otherwise, in the 21st century we will not be able to answer many jobs because we will not have the technical skills tomorrow will require."

Del Valle said students are important in the crossing of the bridge. He said he is disappointed that Latino enrollment has declined at SIUC.

In 1995, there were 513 Latino students, representing 2.3 percent of the total student population.

"There are more Latino students out there today that can qualify than we've had in the past, so there is really no reason why the numbers should go down," he said.

Because the declining enrollment of Hispanic students is apparent, some students said the senator's visit was important.

Ilvia Pacheco, a graduate student in medicine from Puerto Rico, attended the speech and said she was aware of the declining enrollment just by walking around campus and seeing the lack of Latino students.

"Having a senator on campus helps us understand the issues, and it makes us very lucky to have the senator here to address the issues for us," she said.

Julie Flores, a graduate student in higher education from Norridge, said the senator made sense because education is the key to getting into the job market.

"I feel that if you have the education, you should get the job," she said.

Mooncake Festival celebrates old legend

By Sheila Stowers
Daily Egyptian Reporter

A talented archer, his beautiful wife and an elixir of immortality are all part of the folklore of the Chinese Mooncake Festival, which is celebrated every year on the fifteenth day of the eighth lunar month.

The Chinese Student Association, representing students from mainland China, will have its Mooncake Festival Saturday. The Republic of China Student Association and the Singapore Student Association will be co-sponsoring a Mooncake Festival on Sept. 27.

The legend of the Mooncake Festival, which occurs during the Chinese harvest moon, goes back to around 2000 B.C. when an expert archer named Hou Yih was an officer in the emperor's court. According to the legend, 10 suns appeared in the sky one day, and the emperor ordered Hou Yih to shoot the extra nine suns out of the sky.

In honor of the archer's task, the Goddess of Western Heaven commissioned him to build her a palace the color of jade. As a reward, she gave Hou Yih a pill containing an elixir of immortality, but she warned him not to take it until he had prayed and fasted for a year. Hou Yih hid the pill until he was ready to take it.

Hou Yih's wife, Chang-O, who was exquisitely beautiful, found the pill and swallowed it. As punishment, she was banished to the moon. According to the legend, her beauty is more radiant on the day of the Mooncake Festival than any other time of year.

The Mooncake Festival is celebrated in September in solar years and on Aug. 15 during lunar years.

During this festival, mooncakes, which are small pastries, are traditionally given to friends and relatives.

Yew Chun Khe, the president of the Chinese Student Association, said this year his organization's Mooncake Festival will feature the telling of the mooncake legend followed by a pop quiz on the story. His group's festival also will feature a demonstration of Tai Chi, a traditional Chinese form of martial arts. Prizes will be given to the best dressed man and woman.

The Chinese Student Association will have its festival at 6 p.m. Saturday at the Baptist Student Ministry Center, 825 W. Mill St. Tickets are $6 for members and $8 for the general public and are available by calling Yew Chun Khe at 549-4269.

The Republic of China Student Association and the Singapore Student Association will have their festival Sept. 27 from 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. on the second floor of the Student Center in Ballrooms C and D.

Tickets are $9 for members and $10 for the general public and are being sold in the Student Center Hall of Fame from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. through Sept. 24.

Society hosts 'greatest living Beethoven pianist'

By La'Keisha R. Gray
Daily Egyptian Reporter

An SIUC music organization is taking the opportunity to honor "the greatest Beethoven pianist of our time" for his contributions to the school, a professor says.

Donald P. Beattie, founder of the Beethoven Society for Pianists, said Stephan Moller, a Beethoven pianist from Vienna, Austria, stands out from other guest artists as a major contributor to the society, the school and the University.

Moller is completing his eight-concert performance this semester at Shyrook Auditorium. Afterwards, he will be awarded the first Beethoven Society Great Artist Award for a decade of contributions to the University.

Beattie said Moller has accomplished a great feat by completing all of Beethoven's sonatas in a short period of time.

"Very rarely can an artist perform 32 sonatas in eight recitals," Beattie said. "It's history making."

The Beethoven Society for Pianists at SIUC hosts music festivals every year and summer camp programs. Beattie said this year, the society is presenting the first Beethoven Great Artist Award.

Beattie said Moller is recognized internationally for his performances of Ludwig van Beethoven's piano sonatas. Moller's first visit to SIUC was in 1986 after he won the Beethoven International Piano Competition in Vienna, Austria. He has since returned to SIUC six times.

"Moller can offer our students the highest level of musicianship... It's one of the highlights of the year for our school."

Robert Weiss, director of the School of Music, said no other artist visits as frequently as Moller.

"Moller can offer our students the highest level of musicianship," Weiss said.

Beattie said the festivals hosted by the society are educational for the teachers and young pianists because the students are able to meet artists, such as Moller, and some stay in touch.

"It's wonderful for recruitment and retention, and it is one of the highlights of the year for our school," Beattie said.

Moller's final performance of this series of piano sonatas will be at 8 p.m. Saturday at Shyrook Auditorium, where he will be presented a plaque and letters of appreciation.

"It's time he's recognized," Weiss said.

Weiss said the School of Music hopes Moller will continue to visit SIUC.

"We definitely don't want this to be the end," he said.

More private employers increase drug testing

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The sign taped to the front window of the Home Depot in suburban Alexandria, Va., delivers a warning to job-seekers. "We test all applicants for illegal drugs," the placard reads in bold orange letters. "If you use drugs, don't bother to apply."

Home Depot tests every one of its more than 90,000 employees nationwide for drug use — from its CEO down to the clerk who helps customers select nails and lumber — before they are hired or promoted. Prospective employees who test positive for illegal substances are turned away; employees who test positive are fired.

Ten years ago, that kind of systematic testing was virtually unheard-of in the private sector. Today, experts say, it is the norm.

The number of major U.S. corporations that use drug testing has risen 277 percent since widespread testing began in 1987, according to a nationwide survey. Most of the boom occurred from 1988 to 1993, as federal regulations mandated testing for a growing list of professions, but the ranks of employees being tested continue to grow.

Drug-testing experts estimate that one-third of all new U.S. hires will be screened this year, more than ever before. If on-the-job screening is included, as many as 30 million U.S. workers are subject to testing annually.

And with public concern growing about rising illegal drug use among young people, testing is likely to become even more common.

"The number of people being tested has exponentially increased," said Eric Greenberg, director of management studies for the American Management Association, which represents 9,000 companies that employ 25 percent of the U.S. work force and has been studying on-the-job drug testing since 1987. "What was once very, very rare has become routine. It's now a normal corporate procedure."

Federal regulations mandate testing of about 8.5 million workers, including many who work for government contractors or in jobs where safety is an issue.

Many corporate officials say required drug testing helps them attract better applicants and cuts down on workplace accidents, workers compensation claims and sick days.

Although the nation's largest corporations led the drug-screening charge — 98 percent of Fortune 200 companies use drug tests to screen potential employees — smaller companies have jumped on the bandwagon to avoid attracting drug users who already were screened out by the competition, experts say.

"If you don't test, then you get the people we reject," said Home Depot Employee Service Coordinator Layne Thome, who also lectures about screening employees.

From the start, drug testing has faced significant opposition from civil liberties groups. The American Civil Liberties Union denounces the process as a waste of time and a violation of privacy rights. But a national poll conducted last year by Gallup and the Institute for a Drug Free Workplace showed growing support for screening out illegal drug users.

In the survey of 1,006 white- and blue-collar workers, 38 percent said they believe drug testing is a necessity, up from 26 percent in 1989.

The volleyball Salukis return home this weekend for a pair of Missouri Valley Conference matches following a 10-game road trip. The weekend schedule features SIUC's first home matches of the season.

The spikers square off tonight against the Shockers of Wichita State University and then return to action against Southwest Missouri State University Saturday night.

"We're excited to finally be on our home court," middle blocker Marlo Moreland said. "Our intensity is high, so we're going to play well."

Coach Sonya Locke's spikers are one of four teams in the Valley sporting a 1-1 league record. The Shockers are winless in conference action at 0-2, while SMSU is identical with SIUC at 1-1.

Both matches begin at 7 p.m.

Other Saluki weekend sports events follow:

Hackers head south to UTM Tri-State Classic Sunday

The SIUC men's golf team heads Sunday to the Tri-State Classic, hosted by the University of Tennessee Martin.

Golf is a game where more is bad, and the Salukis have had some trouble in the past few weeks, finishing 12 of 12 teams in the first tournament of the year and finishing eight out of nine in last week's Northern Iowa Invitational.

SIUC Golf Coach Leroy Newton said the eighth place finish is not as bad as it sounds because the team showed they can play the game by shooting a team 305 for the day at Northern Iowa.

Newton said he expects to improve upon the Northern Iowa score during Sunday's outing with the toughest competition coming from Southeast Missouri State, Western Kentucky and Tennessee Martin.

Salukis meet Fighting Irish, Cornhuskers at invitational

The softball Salukis will take part in their second tournament of the fall season today when the team travels to Western Illinois University to participate in the State Farm National Invitational Tournament.

The tournament is divided into four pools of five teams each. SIUC is grouped with fellow Missouri Valley Conference rival Drake University, the University of Nebraska, Notre Dame University and Ball State University.

The Salukis will square off against the Fighting Irish and Ball State today and then will battle the Cornhuskers and Drake Saturday. The teams with the best records will advance to the championship round Sunday.

Harriers seek revenge against Fighting Illini for loss

The SIUC men's cross country team is seeking revenge on the University of Illinois during Saturday's home dual meet. The U of I beat the Salukis in Champaign, 21-38 last season.

Coach Bill Cornell said the meet will be a close one because of the traditionally big rivalry between the two schools.

The meet starts at 10 a.m. Saturday. The course starts south of SIUC Arena, near Abe Martin Field.

Women's cross country team faces limited competition

The SIUC women's cross country team heads south to Nashville Saturday for the 15-team Vandy Classic. Coach Don DeNoon said the meet poses only one threat to the undefeated Salukis.

"The only school I look to challenge us will be Vanderbilt University," he said. "I think the meet will be a dual meet between the two schools."

The meet start time is 9:15 a.m. Saturday at Nashville's Percy Warner Park.

Women's tennis team begins season at IU tournament

Tennis Coach Judy Auld will take her team to its first battle of the fall season in the Indiana University Tournament in Bloomington, Ind., Saturday.

Auld said her team is ready to go. "I think they are ready," Auld said. "I think they are sick of looking at each other and playing against each other."

Auld said she expects tough competition from the eight-team field with the toughest matches coming from Miami-OHio, Western Michigan and the host, Indiana University, a perennial powerhouse in women's tennis.

"They are really strong year after year," she said.

Auld said she is putting improvement at the top of her list this season and wants it to begin Saturday.

Football legend to speak at Holiday Inn Sunday

Football legend Gale Sayers will speak at the Carbondale Holiday Inn Sunday at 7 p.m. Sunday for the Tuscan Masonic Lodge 44. Sayers played six seasons in the NFL for the Chicago Bears, was an All-American tailback for the Kansas Jayhawks and served as athletic director at SIUC from 1976 to 1981. Sayers gained induction into the NFL Hall of Fame in 1977, making him the youngest player in history to be inducted.

Sayers will speak for reclaiming neighborhoods through the use of economics, academics and love.

Tickets for the event are $25, and proceeds will go toward scholarships for area high school students and to restore the Tuscan Masonic Lodge 44 building.

Dawgs, Shakers to hold rally at University Mall Friday

SIUC football Coach Shawn Watson, punter Mark Gagliano and defensive tackle Daryl Holland will join the Saluki Shakers at University Mall Friday, but they will not be shopping. They all will take part in the second pep rally of the season from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. for Saturday's home game against Winston-Salem State University.

Team captains Damon Jones (tight end), Coe Bonner (running back), Tommy Anderson (linebacker) and Cedric Kenner (defensive back) will also join the rally. Free posters and mini footballs will be given out and may even be autographed by one of the Saluki players or Shakers.

Illinois State, while WSSU takes on Fayetteville State University.

"We have got one more week before we go into the conference, and we need to put the polish on the assignments, the fundamentals and techniques," Watson said. "We're looking forward to getting things squared away for this weekend, as well as the remainder of the conference season coming up next week."

With one conference game out of the way, Blount shares Watson's sentiments toward Saturday's contest and said it will serve mentally to prepare his team for the bulk of its upcoming conference season.

"Anytime we play a Division I-AA team, it's a great test for our team," Mount said. "It will help us in getting ready for conference play and help us develop as a team."

In addition, Saturday's game will measure how both teams can respond after coming off losses.

Southern enters Saturday's contest hoping to regain some of the edge it lost in a 48-38 road loss to Murray State Sept. 14.

"I expect us to continue what we started and to improve," Watson said. "I don't care who the opponent is. We have to improve."

WSSU rolls into McAndrew Stadium with two straight losses to North Carolina A&T State University, 31-7, and to conference foe Elizabeth State University, 14-11.

Blount said his team is eager and up to the task of taking on the Salukis.

"We've got a team that is going to play hard for four quarters and get after it," he said. "I think it's going to be a very good football game. We've prepared ourselves the best we can to compete against SIUC."

WSSU is SIUC's second Division II opponent since its season-opening win against UCA Aug. 31.

Like Central Arkansas, Watson said the Rams will be a good test for the Salukis, who have won seven of their last eight home games.

"It will be a good test for us," Watson said. "Winston-Salem is a very skilled football team. They are going to bring in a team that's got very good speed."

No matter if its a Division I or II team that steps into McAndrew Stadium Saturday, Saluki defensive lineman Salman Nazir said a win is the most important thing.

"I think winning Saturday is very important," Nazir said. "It doesn't matter how much you win by, just as long as you win and play good so you have more confidence going into the conference season."

Saturday afternoon's kickoff is at 1:30 p.m.

keeps her consistent.

"Molly is an extremely hard worker," Daugherty said. "She is a good leader who has played four good rounds of golf so far."

Holding down the second spot for the team is Stacy Skillman, a junior in recreation from Shelbyville, Ind.

Daugherty also has looked to Skillman for leadership and consistency for the team.

"Stacy is the longest hitter we have on the team," she said. "She had two strong rounds at Illinois State University and played pretty good in Michigan. We look to her for some leadership."

Jami Zimmerman, a sophomore in physiology from Pittsfield, has been the third score counted for the Salukis. Zimmerman, who is in her second season with the team, has gained some valuable experience, which Daugherty said has allowed her to play with more confidence this season.

Zimmerman said the Lady Falcon Invitational is important to the team.

"We can be among the best at the invitational," she said. "We have a lot of goals for the team. We want to make a good showing."

Junior Jamie Smith and freshman Andrea Walker have been vying for the fourth scoring spot on the team. Smith, a biology/pre-med major from Springfield, has had some troubles so far this season but is making a comeback, Daugherty said.

"Jami has struggled with a little swing mechanics, but she has a lot of heart," she said. "She came back in Michigan and is capable of lower scores than she has been scoring."

Walker, an art major from Cedar Lake, Ind., has been important to the team as well, even though this is her first year of collegiate competition.

"Andrea has a lot of tournament experience," Daugherty said. "She is tournament wise and doesn't play like a freshman. She has been playing very well."

"We have the chance to place well and possibly win. We are looking forward to this weekend."

The tournament will take place Saturday and Sunday in Bowling Green, Ohio.

FOOTBALL

Salukis to face Rams for first time

By Michael DeFord
 DE Sports Editor

Were it not for the pigskin, the football Salukis and the Winston-Salem State Rams would share few similarities. SIUC has never officially met the Rams, but that all changes Saturday when the two make their introductions at McAndrew Stadium.

The Salukis have met two other teams at home this season but perhaps none more opposite of itself than the Rams.

The Gateway Conference Salukis are Division I-AA, while the Intercollegiate Athletic Association Rams are Division II. The Rams are 1-2 on the season, whereas the Salukis are 2-1.

SIUC registers its third home game of the season Saturday, while the Rams wrap up a four-game road trip.

Saluki Coach Shawn Watson, now in his third season as Saluki head coach, sports an 8-17 record. Facing Watson on the opposite side of the field is Rams Coach Kermit Blount, who is in his fourth season as the Rams head coach and owns a 17-15-3 record.

However, all opposite comparisons will be cast aside Saturday when the two battle to make the first meeting a memorable one.

But both coaches know that Saturday's game has more than just a win hanging in the balance.

It will also measure what needs to be tended to prior to the conference season, which begins Sept. 28 for both teams.

GOLF

Women golfers expect to win invitational

By Donna Colter
 Daily Egyptian Reporter

With one of the traditionally stronger programs in the tournament, the SIUC women's golf team predicts it will be the favorite in this weekend's Lady Falcon Invitational. Coach Diane Daugherty says, "We feel this is a tournament we can win." Daugherty said, "Our goal is to go into the tournament with the pressure of winning and come out of the tournament a winner."

The tournament will feature a field of 18 Midwest teams, including the University of Cincinnati and the University of Toledo — two schools SIUC has beat in the past.

The tournament will only consist of two rounds instead of the traditional three.

The Saluki team finished eighth in the 14-team Wolverine Invitational Sunday — a finish that disappointed Daugherty.

"We try to have four players hang in strong and to let only two have a bad day," she said. "We had four players who had bad days and had to count two high 80s."

In golf, six players travel with the team and play a tournament, but only the lowest four scores are counted toward the team total.

Senior Molly Hudgins, a finance major from Carbon-Jale, said this weekend's tournament will help the team prepare for the spring season.

"We are going into this meet as a favored team, which isn't a position we put ourselves in often," Hudgins said. "We will have a lot of pressure going into the Missouri Valley Conference meet this spring. This will help us prepare for that pressure."

"This meet will tell us how we will fulfill our expectations and goals."

Daugherty said the team boasts five strong players, four of whom are returning lettermen. She said the returning lettermen give the team a strong nucleus and some leadership.

Hudgins has been playing in the No. 1 spot for the team so far this season. She finished eleventh in the Wolverine Invitational with a 15-over-par 161.

Daugherty said Hudgins' work ethic
