Carbondale social aid groups face growing service cutbacks

By Bill Turley
Staff Writer

Many social service agencies in Carbondale anticipate providing fewer services because of funding cuts from government sources.

The basic outlook for future funding is "grim," according to Susan Krege, executive director of the Jackson County 208 Board, the agency that distributes county taxes to local mental health facilities.

Krege said recent changes in legislation and funding have moved the emphasis away from social services.

Dean Greenberg, program director of Synergy, a non-profit agency that provides emergency services and counseling, agreed, saying that the spending of federal government block grants to the states is centered on having good roads over providing social services.

Greenberg said his agency is losing about two-thirds of its budget, which is about $10,000 out of this year’s operating budget of $70,000. He said in order to make up the deficit, Synergy will be holding a fund-raising effort in Carbondale. Synergy may have to charge a fee for their services, a first for the agency. He said, "we won't turn anybody down" because they don't have the money to pay for the services.

At Hill House, a Carbondale drug rehabilitation service, Director Gary Gathy said a 37 percent decrease in the budget has threatened the organization's ability to continue providing services.

"We have to plan on those cuts are real. But it is important not to give up on the legislative process yet." Graham plans to continue writing to legislators asking them not to cut block grants, which could indirectly affect service funding.

Tim Weber, head of AEON, a non-profit counseling center, said, "The whole thing is happening so fast it’s impossible to keep up with it. The whole concept is side to the right is distracting."

AEON's emphasis is on prevention, Weber said. "Prevention is no longer a priority.Treating somebody after they have a problem is a waste."

"Criminal justice had the hope of rehabilitation with some excellent programs; under (President Jimmy) Carter New it is in order and more people are sent to jail," Weber said.

Much of his agency's money comes from the state government, according to Weber. Government spending will be cut in the next budget. The result is fewer services, he said.

"I defy the governor to come down here and point to the people who can't be treated. I think it is unfair that I have to do this," Weber said.

"A lot of people are going to lose their jobs because of this," Weber said.

The number of criminal offenses against the Carbondale social aid funding for the Carbondale campus, including rape, assault and battery, decreased 41 percent in 1980 and was the lowest since 1970, according to SIU-C Security's annual report.

In addition, SIU-C Security reported a 3 percent increase in crimes against a vehicle and a 2 percent increase in total on-campus criminal activity.

In contrast, the national average of 1980 FBI statistics show a 13 percent increase in violent crimes, a 3 percent decrease in property crime, 1 percent increase in aggravated assault, and a 9 percent increase in crimes against property, such as burglary and auto theft.

SIU-C police reported 82 crimes against people in 1980 as compared to 143 similar crimes in 1979. Figures included one rape, two attempted rapes, one aggravated battery, five aggravated assaults, and a 9 percent increase in property crime.

"We have seen a decrease in our caseloads," said Virgil Trummer, director of the University’s Rainbow Resources Center. "But we're still there and available as a resource for students and other people who need help."
Washington (AP) — The nation’s economy grew at a robust 6.5 percent annual rate in the first quarter, a bigger jump in nearly three years, the government reported Monday. But the Reagan administration quickly contended the good news is no reason to dump the president’s economic recovery plans.

At the White House, where officials have been talking of an economy in dire straits, Secretary of the Treasury James알. Baker said “a nice start” for the year.

But he argued that the brisk growth should not “overshadow” the fact that inflation and unemployment show little sign of near-term improvement.

The near-term outlook suggests that we will not be able to duplicate the first quarter’s performance,” said Weidenbaum, president of the Century Foundation, a liberal think tank.

The first-quarter Commerce report showed a 6.3 percent annual growth rate for “real” gross national product — the value of all American goods and services after discounting for inflation.

The growth rate, helped along by strong consumer spending, showed the biggest quarterly gain since the 9 percent recorded in the second quarter of 1978.

Real GNP had risen 3.8 percent in the final three months of last year as the national economy recovered from the spring recession. A 9.9 percent drop in the second quarter dragged down the overall 1980 growth figure to a negative 0.2 percent, the first annual decline since 1975.

The first-quarter figures for this year seemed to show the recovery picking up speed, but

The recent upturn suggests that the recovery is gaining steam, said budget director David Stockman, who announced that Commerce’s GNP implicit price deflator, which is used to subtract inflation factors from surface GNP totals, “is obviously not a reflection of the inflation rate.”

The GNP deflator, which fell to 7.8 percent from 10.7 percent in the fourth quarter of 1980, puts less weight on oil prices than do some other inflation measures, reflecting the fact that Americans are spending less than they once did. Other measures, including the consumer price index, gauge overall price increases as if consumption were at 1917 levels.

The new quarterly growth figures should not cause Congress to feel the Reagan economic plan is not needed, Stockman said.

Another black youth found dead

ATLANTA (AP) — The naked body of a black person at least 15 years old was discovered Monday on the banks of the Chattahoochee River, but authorities said they were unable to determine immediately whether the body was male or female.

“We kind of think it’s a male, but we don’t know for sure,” Fulton County Police Chief Clinton Chaun said after the body had been removed to the Fulton County medical examiner’s office.

The discovery Monday marks the seventh time since late November that the body of a young black has been found in or near an area river.

FBI investigating Love allegations

CHICAGO (AP) — The FBI and police officials are investigating allegations by School Superintendent Ruth B. Love that electronic eavesdropping devices were found in her office and car.

Meanwhile, Edward Burke, a Chicago alderman, said Monday that he was “very skeptical” of the report of the alleged bugging incident and said it “does not ring true.”

Miss Love, who took over the superintendent’s job in March, disclosed Saturday that electronic listening devices were found in her office, an adjacent conference room and on her car telephone.

4 U.S. sailors freed from detention

Havana, Cuba (AP) — A Cuban patrol vessel seized four U.S. sailors Sunday when their recreation boats strayed into Cuban waters near the U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo on Cuba’s southern coast, but American diplomats gained their release Monday afternoon, officials reported.

State Department spokesman David Nall announced in Washington that the sailors were released at 2 p.m. in Havana and turned over to Wayne Smith, head of the U.S. Interests Section. Nall said they would be flown to the United States on Tuesday.

Violence escalates in N. Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Three legislators for the Irish Republican Army visited a weakened hunger striker Bobby Sands’ bed Monday to protest from angry Protestants a council meeting with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher on hunger strikes before it is too late.

In Londonderry, Northern Ireland’s second-largest city, a young man was shot and Catholic policemen barricaded troops and police with stones and bottles Monday in a sixth day of violence that has escalated as Sands’ condition declined. Police said five cars were hijacked and a bus was set on fire in different parts of the area.

Catholic leaders in Londonderry appealed for calm Monday night as sporadic outbreaks of stone and gasoline-bomb-throwing continued, and police braced for more trouble.

In Belfast, police reported stone-throwing youths earlier in the day. Similar outbreaks in three Catholic districts and several vehicles were burned. Police said three homemade bombs and a revolver were seized.

John O’Connell, a physician who said he tried to persuade Sands to end his 31-day hunger strike, said the 27-year-old Irish Republican Army guerrilla appeared to be within five or six days of death.
New ISSC qualification bills killed in legislative committee

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

Two bills which would have stepped up qualifications for Illinois State Scholarships have died in the General Assembly in the last month.

But at appropriations hearings for next year's ISSC budget begin this week, a House bill to increase the amount of awards to students with children is scheduled for committee consideration.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Woods Bowman, D-Du Quoin District, is scheduled for committee hearings Wednesday. And as were the earlier bills, it is opposed by the ISSC.

The earlier bills would have required award recipients to work for the University without pay and to maintain at least a 2.0 grade point average.

The ISSC opposed the bill because the bill setting grade point averages, HB 46, because it felt grades should be monitored by individual institutions. The other bill, SJR 8, was criticized by the commission as being "inefficient." Sue Lee, ISSC legislative liaison, said Monday that the commission opposes the recent bill because the ISSC won't be able to afford increasing next year's awards for students with children.

Paratore named Swinburne aide

By Randy Roguski
Staff Writer

Jean Paratore, coordinator of intramural recreation, was named Monday as assistant to Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs.

Paratore was selected by Swinburne from among five final candidates whom he interviewed during the last two weeks. She will begin the job May 1 at a salary of about $29,000.

Paratore said she was "surprised and excited" about her new job. She will replace Tom Busch, who became assistant to President Albert Somit on April 1.

"I had a feeling that I was being considered seriously," Paratore said. "It's going to be different."

Paratore has coordinated intramural recreation since 1977, after coming to the University in 1974 as coordinator of women's intramurals. She is studying at SIUC for a doctorate in higher education.

An instructor of physical education, Paratore said her background in athletics may have helped win the job as Swinburne's assistant. Swinburne is considering intercollegiate athletics on May 1.

"He had a very difficult choice to make. My background may have had something to do with it," Paratore said.

Paratore's duties as assistant will include advising the Graduate Student Council and Students' Affairs. parrot, next years recommended budget for the ISSC is $91.3 million, $34 million less than the commission had requested. Legislators will begin looking at Gov. James R. Thompson's recommendation Tuesday in the House Appropriations Committee.

The House Higher Education Committee voted 9-4 on April 1 against HB 46. Leoons attributes the bill's failure to successful lobbying efforts by the ISSC.

We never even testified. We had a good idea it wasn't going to pass," she said. See ISSC page 16

Nine have applied for financial VP post

By Mike Anton
Staff Writer

As of late Monday, nine persons have applied for the position of vice president for financial affairs. John Darling, chairman of the search committee, said.

The deadline for applications was Monday. Darling, dean of the College of Business and Administration, declined to release the names of the applicants, all from within the University. However, he speculated that the field would be narrowed down to three or five candidates when the committee meets Wednesday.

Darling said that he's a committee decision, not mine." Darling said, when asked if nine candidates was enough. "We would seem to have an adequate number to choose from.

The search committee will make its recommendations to Somit, who will make the final selection, Darling said.

Fundamentalism's origins

In a March 28, 1981, editorial, Robert T.高雄, Illinois, University of Fundamentalism did not begin to become a force for good in the world until after the Second World War. But what a force it became! A vast organization was seen as a vital weapon in the battle against atheism and communism.

Fundamentalism did not begin to become a force for good in the world until after the Second World War. It was seen as a vital weapon in the battle against atheism and communism. The first major step in this direction was taken when the Fundamentalists, led by the Reverend Charles Stanley, began to organize the National Council of Young Americans (NCYA) in 1925.

According to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a major donor to the NCYA, this was the beginning of the modern fundamentalist movement. He described the NCYA as a "group of wealthy, educated, and influential people who were determined to save the world from atheism and communism."

According to Rockefeller, the NCYA was formed to counter the growing influence of the "New Thought" movement, which was gaining momentum in the United States. The NCYA's goal was to "revert the nation to its Christian roots and values."

The NCYA quickly became a powerful force, and its leaders were able to influence public opinion and policy. They were able to get funding for their organizations from wealthy donors, and they were able to get their message out to the public through the media.

One of the key events in the development of the fundamentalist movement was the famous "Hollywood Ten" trial, in which ten filmmakers were tried for contempt of Congress for refusing to testify against theCommunist Party of the United States. The trial began in 1950 and lasted for several months. It was a key moment in the development of the anti-communist movement, and it helped to bring the fundamentalist movement into the mainstream of American politics.

In the years that followed, the fundamentalist movement continued to grow in influence. It became a major force in the Republican Party, and it helped to shape the course of American foreign policy. It was a key player in the Cold War, and it helped to shape the course of American foreign policy for decades to come.

The fundamentalist movement continues to this day, although it has become less influential in recent years. It remains a force to be reckoned with, however, and it is likely to continue to play a role in American politics for years to come.

SPC Springfest will feature classic movies, mud wrestling

By Rod Smith
Entertainment Editor

Live music ranging from reggae to rock, movies both classic and crummy, arts and crafts, contests and an all-female mud wrestling team comprise Springfest '81—the annual weekend of inexpensive fun in the sun sponsored by the Student Programming Council.

Beginning Friday afternoon and continuing through Sunday, activities will be held in the Student Center and on the Old Main Mall in front of Shryock Auditorium. Events will be shifted to the Arena in case of rain.

"We're just trying to put on an excellent party," said Kevin McElrath, festival chairman. "Through the years, Springfest has lost energy but we want to make this year's blowout." McElrath said the SPC is trying to recreate the carnival atmosphere of side shows and exhibits.

Highlighting the festival Saturday night is an exhibition by the Chicago Knockers mud wrestling team at 6 p.m. followed by a concert by the one Love Reggae Band at 7:30 p.m. Both events are free and will be held in front of Shryock Auditorium.

The Knockers, a female troupe with nicknames such as "Snake Lady," "Baby Face Killer," and "Little Miss Vixen," will hold matches against each other in a pool of mud. The One Love band includes former members of Bob Marley's Wailers.

Saturday's activities begin at 10 a.m. with canoe races on Campus Lake. Exhibits, contests, food specials and other ongoing entertainment will continue until 6 p.m. in a carnival at the Old Main Mall.

Live music on the steps of Shryock Auditorium begins at noon with the Voices of Inspiration, a 16-person gospel vocal and instrumental group. Rockabilly band Shakespeare's Riot, plays at 1 p.m. followed by rock 'n' roll from Kaitie and the Smokers at 2:30 p.m. and a 4 p.m. performance by the ska band Riff Raff. The Arabian Nights Belly Dancers and the Society for Creative Anachronism (a group that recreates medieval sword battles) will perform during band changes.

City-owned bank plan to face community protest

MINOT, N.D. (AP) — Voters in this prairie community of 13,000 will decide Tuesday whether they want to be the proprietors of the only city-owned bank in the United States.

Backers of the City Bank of Minot — branch of a political science professor, a campus minister and a labor leader — say profits would mean better services for Minot without higher taxes.

But local bankers and business owners say the bank is a pure socialist enterprise — an impossible plan.

The proposal may not be so outlandish for North Dakotans, who have a state-owned bank in Fessenden. Fritz Elmdorf, a spokesman for the American Bankers Association in Washington, said the only other similar bank in the nation is in Fairbanks, Alaska.

The Minot Chamber of Commerce, which supports the bank, says Minot lacks the economic base to support such a bank. It notes the city now has three banks, four savings and loans, and eight credit unions.

“Minot bankers and businessmen don’t believe it,” said Thorndal. “First of all there aren’t going to be any profits,” said James Maragos, president of the Minot Chamber of Commerce, because Minot lacks the economic base to support such a bank.

Thorndal noted that the city now has three banks, four savings and loans, and eight credit unions. He added: “This is a college professor’s idea that is not practical, and not needed.”

Falklands struggling to remain British

By Richard Boudreaux
Associated Press Writer

PORT STANLEY, Falkland Islands (AP) — Antarctic gales are driving the grass to grow. Wrecks of 116 sailing ships litter the harbors and unlikely seagulls and shopping carts peep in the bags and burn it to white ash in the wind.

Still the 3,113 settlers, spread over 200 islands with 629,000 sheep, lead a comfortable life. If hard-earned, coexistence with the Argentines. Now, at seven years, the harsh South Atlantic climate seems the most manageable of outside forces.

More threatening to islanders is the need to remain, and want to remain, as political and economic allies in the British community of nations 3,000 miles away. The military government there is pressing a historic claim to the Falklands to extend its search of offshore oil and strengthen other claims in Antarctica.

Equally unsettling is Britain's willingness to give up the Falklands, one of its last colonies. While pledging to respect the wishes of the islanders, British officials have used the Falklands to come to terms with Argentina.

A Falkland family said that in this day and age, after Afghanistan, that a democracy like ours can be preserved only by a foreign dictatorship where private property is forsaken and disappear off the face of the earth." said islander Valma Malcolm. "We want nothing to do with Argentina."

This view of the military majority has been under attack since February when two military council members in the Falklands' legislative council took part in British-Argentines talks for the first time.

Council member Adrian Suck said Argentina offered an exchange for sovereignty, to respect the Falkland's democratic institutions and British customs while pouring in enough aid to make the islands the most penniless region of Argentina.

There was also an implied threat that Argentina may cut off the islands' only air service and fuel, which it had promised to restore after a decade at subsidized prices.

To some, it's time for a bargain. The sheep-raising economy, which depends on London wool prices, is in a slump. The treasury has a deficit of more than $1 million, and taxes are higher than in Britain.

"Britain no longer wants to support an empire and we cannot carry on alone," said Syd Miller, a former sheep farmer. "We want to preserve our British identity, culture and our standard of living. The only way is to guarantee that is to accept Argentine sovereignty on our terms, of course.

Talks on an idea suggested by Britain under which Argentina would be given sovereignty but Britain would lease the islands for 99 years, an arrangement similar to that for Hong Kong.

The islands' council rejected the idea in January and proposed a freeze in the dispute. Argentina rejected the freeze. The issue in this fall's council elections is whether to propose a lease-back plan to Argentina or pull out of the talks.

Miller favors the lease plan, but his family, whose history parallels that of the islands, is divided. His wife advocates independence. Two sons are on his side, but a third, council member Tim Miller, backs the idea of leased sovereignty.

Syd Miller's grandfather, a Danish sailor, was shipwrecked here in the 19th century. He married into the British community that arrived after 1852 when the Argentines, who say they inherited a Spanish claim, were ousted.

Tim Miller says he might have left the islands had it not been for a reform that enabled him to become the family's first landowner.

The reform — which Miller says he hopes can revitalize the islands, was made under local government pressure. Until last year, the British-owned Falkland Islands were occupied by a member of the British army. The reform calls for the land to be sold or shared out.

The idea of the lease-back plan was to attract fishing oil exploration and tourism.

WASHINGTON — It was the best place to be in the whole wide world.

A baby was born near Sesame Street and Bugg Bunny from the funniest show in his red, white and blue hat and Snider Woman in her amazing red costume.

And you could talk to all of them and get their autographs and pictures.

There were lots of balloons and bands. There was a stage, where many of the characters from the show had a balloon in his, flew away..." said one child's lament.

There were hundreds of colored balloons and there were six or seven helium canisters lined up so the man could keep making more balloons to replace the ones they got away.

There was a long line for the main event: using a spoon to roll a colored egg across a lawn. "Everybody pick up the spoon and roll the egg," said the man in the costume giving instructions.

But everybody knows how to roll an Easter egg without a teacher. Rolling Easter eggs is how the annual event started in 1875 when President Rutherford B. Hayes played host.

And if you didn't like waiting in line, there were plenty of other things to do.

There was a stage, where "Tattoo" from Fantasy Island was master of ceremonies and singers and dancers from Broadway in New York performed.

There were clowns and more real-life, make believe characters than you could count. Bug Bug Bunny, Yogi Bear and Quack McGraw, just to name a few.

There was musical entertainment by the U.S. Marine Band in their red jackets, and later by the Marine Drum and Bugle Corps and the Army and Navy bands. There was a different kind of music, too, from a calliope making sounds like you hear at a merry-go-round.

There was a special exhibit of painted wooden eggs, one done at foreign embassies, by a cartoonist decorated by American artists.

There was also a special treat, a "twittered" Easter Egg hunt where some of the eggs were signed by famous people—like President Reagan himself.

Reagan was upstairs in his living quarters, but an aide said he had no plans to attend the party.

Exiled Cuban felons discuss prison problem

Editor's note: Fidel Castro offered Cuba's prison inmates freedom last year if they would take the "Freedom Flight" to America. As of today, the hard core of these confessed criminals is being held in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta. WPC Special Correspondent Peter Arnett visited cells and interviewed inmates.

By Peter Arnett
WPC Special Correspondent

ATLANTA (AP) - They came expecting freedom or a death sentence. But neither was waiting, and they have been told they can't stay. Now, amid violence and legal skirmishing, nearly 1,800 confessed murderers and felons impatiently wait in their cells for officials to make the next move.

"Whenever the rumor gets around that we're shipping them home, they get very unsettled," said William Noonan, deputy warden of the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary, home to these unwelcome Cubans.

Two killings occurred on a day this reporter visited, a "not unusual happening," said Noonan.

The prisoners came to the United States a year ago after President Fidel Castro swept Cuba's prison doors to let criminals who wished to leave the Caribbean island join the "Freedom Flight." About 19,000 inmates made the 90-mile trip to Florida. At least two of them died en route, and the U.S. government suspended the program.

Several days after the killings, in a race to keep Castro's promise, the government approved a final group of Cuban prisoners for sponsorship on a day trip to Atlanta prison.

A group of immigration officers were to be flown into Atlanta and were asked to make a decision. These officers were released because their crimes were viewed as political. But nearly 1,800 other inmates who had been given the green light were incarcerated, most of them, inside the thick stone walls of the Atlanta prison.

CUBA HAS REFUSED to discuss the return of any prisoners.

"Who gets out and who stays in?" E.M. Treminski, director of immigration processing at the Atlanta prison, asked.

"Some we never want to see on the streets," he said. "But then, there are others we feel should be on the street. It will probably be a matter of judgment. It's a continuing dilemma."

The Cuban prisoners have confessions to murder or attempted murder. Others have admitted to refinery robberies.

But as the near-certainty of deportation rulings become apparent, many of the inmates are racing to make sure they will get out. There is help from public defenders and civil rights groups.

One of these is Hector Zulueta Menocal, 24. "I was never a delinquent," he insisted in an interview explaining that he had received a 14-year sentence in Cuba for stealing two pairs of pants and two shirts that "I truly needed for my family."

Zulueta has been sponsored by relatives but has not been granted parole.

ANOTHER MAN SERVED 10 years in a Cuban prison for a 1950 murder. He had been free for 20 years, but has spent the past 10 months in the Atlanta prison.

"We have approved this man for sponsorship because he has a relative in New York," said Robert McCarthy of the U.S. Catholic Conference, the only sponsoring agency at the prison. "But the authorities will not let him go."

Program director, Gerry Wynne, said the Cuban "humanitarian priority "is getting the Cubans out of the Atlanta slammer." But no one is being freed simply because he is being held in jail.

"We won't touch the serious cases," Wynne said.

Deciding between the "good" and "bad" Cubans is a major problem for U.S. officials, who must decide whether they should be permitted to go out into American society while awaiting deportation. Virtually all those confessing to crimes of "oral rapine" are routinely receiving deportation orders, but enforcing the orders could take years.

"WE HAVE NO PAPERS from all Cuba on these people, only their confessions," said Treminski, the prison's top immigration officer. "The seriousness of a crime is much like beauty. It's in the eye of the beholder."

To behold the Cubans in the Atlanta "slammer" is to enter a sordid world of iron bars, clanging steel doors, shouted orders and crowded cells. The 80-year-old prison, built with rock from Georgia's Stone Mountain, was scheduled to close soon because it is outdated. The installation has now been almost entirely devoted to the Cubans and will remain open indefinitely.

The prisoners in "A" block are living eight to a cell, twice the number intended when the jail was built. The Atlanta Legal Aid Society has filed complaints including "persistent and unheard medical conditions and ill treatment by guards."

"There may be bad people there, but there are also good people and they should be protected," said Legal Aid lawyer Myron Kramer.

ASKED TO COMMENT on the charges, deputy warden Noonan responded. "You've seen the cells, you've seen the files. We're crowded."

"I strongly believe that our policy is to do what we can to return them to the country of their birth."

In an interview, inmate Zulueta said that while he personally had no complaints, "the others who do complain have reason." Particularly feared, he said, was not solitary confinement, the only part of the prison off-limits to visiting reporters.

Noonan said the worst disciplinary cases were held there. Prison officials said their biggest initial problem was vast cultural differences. "The Cubans beat each other up over their clothes, for example, but we are not soft and expect them to obey the rules."

In an interview, inmate Zulueta said that while he personally had no complaints, "the others that do complain have reason." Partly feared, he said, was not solitary confinement, the only part of the prison off-limits to visiting reporters.

Noonan responded. "First, there are the disciplinary cases. Second, there's this" - Noonan gestured to a Rorschach test. "As in any prison."

THE FIRST GROUP of Cuban prisoners in Atlanta flushed the toilets for drinking water because they had never seen them before.

"And many of our first years back home, for their first meals because they thought it might be their last. Food had to be seen," said Noonan. "We have to work with them and help them to adjust to American society."

Noonan said the most common crimes were assault, murder and rape. Others that committed theft, but "they had to be about 10,000 of us." They're not soft and easily handled."

"We've had cases where they fought over their clothes. The Cubans just use their controls."

Noonan said the worst disciplinary cases were held there. Prison officials said their biggest initial problem was vast cultural differences. "The Cubans beat each other over their clothes, for example, but we are not soft and expect them to obey the rules."

"ALL PRISONERS have such incidents. They're all cooped up, they take it out on each other's backs," Noonan said. But he and other American officials said the Cuban macho image leads to more stabbings than normal.

Of greater concern are "hot tools" that can bring escape. Jail officials always measure the handwoven blades to make sure a prisoner didn't take a piece for his own. Two Americans have been freed in this way.

For recreation, first-run movies such as "Dressed to Kill" are shown regularly.

If earning a diploma is tedious, you should try typesetting one

By Brenda Wilgenbusch
Staff Writer

As graduation time nears, a typesetter at SIC's Printing Services carefully places the metal slugs, in several print styles, for all of the names in a gallery. These galleys will be photoengraved on a letterpress and diplomas will be printed. Each of the names must be handset one at a time. Although hand setting type may sound slow, it is the only way diplomas can be done. Harold Braswell, superintendent for the Printing and Duplicating Services, said that the diplomas must be handset and the only way to do this is letterpress.

However, Printing-Duplicating Services prints much more than diplomas. Braswell said, "We print everything for the University except special forms and hardbound books." Everything includes telephone directories, sports programs, brochures and rubber stamps. He said that's right, rubber stamps.

"We get a lot of calls from people who want to know how they can get rubber stamps," Braswell said. Printing Services has been making rubber stamps for many years, he said, but few people are aware of their complete services.

Braswell said that they have several departments including art and design, hot metal, typesetting, photocomposition and a complete camera department.

They also do both letterpress and offset printing and have a complete bindery, a stripping department, and in the duplicating division. Braswell said they have all the services needed, including a mailing service. Printing Services also have information on labeling machines, he said.

About six jobs a week are handled and hundreds of forms are printed each year for the Univeristy. Braswell said, "We're a job shop and every job is a custom job, since each job is different." Costs for printing services vary, depending on many factors as paper quality, colors and type desired. Braswell said. He explained that all jobs are billed to University department accounts and require a printing duplication request form. He said that a typoletteship explaining what the client desires is requested.

If artwork is needed, Braswell continued, an artist will design several pieces from which the customer can choose. He added that most SIL materials have basically the same format and do not require art design. If photos are desired, the client may bring them in, he said.

After this braswell continued, they give the photos to the camera department and the customer is given a "Van Dyke"—printers slang used to describe the photograph print or proof, the superintendent explained. If the proof is correct then it goes to press and is delivered as a finished product, he said.

"How long all of this takes, Braswell said, also depends on what is needed for the brochure. If the brochure is camera-ready, or ready to be photographed, then it is quicker and cheaper for the client, Braswell said.

Coalition to support coal legislation

SPRINGFIELD (AP) - A coalition of environmentalists, public interest groups and mine workers announced support Monday for legislation aimed at promoting Illinois coal use through existing state and programs to projects using Illinois coal.

Rep. Douglas N. Kane, D-Springfield, the bill's sponsor, said the 176 bills and programs were designed to help businesses build pollution control equipment needed to meet air quality standards.

Kane said that much of the money from the use of nuclear and oil-fired power plants when it should have been spent for pollution control devices that would enable the companies to burn high-sulfur Illinois coal.

He said some of the same companies are buying much of their coal from western states while "benefitting from the generosity of the Illinois taxpayer."

Kane's bills would place new restrictions on the state's Coal Development and Bond Act and the Environmental Facilities Financing Authority.

Kane said that 42 percent of the environmental financing bond money allocated so far has gone to utility companies and some firms have invested the funds in a total of 10 oil-fired plant projects. If passed, the bills would restrict the use of new bonds to projects in which Illinois coal is the primary power source.

Washington internships are available

By Norma G. Whitis
Staff Writer

Mary Lee Montague, senior in public relations, and Kenneth Elmore, senior in political science, are in Washington, D.C., participating in the Washington Internship for Learning Alternatives internship program.

Montague has been placed with Cari Byor and Associates, an international public relations agency which includes among its clients Kodak, General Electric, and Kodak. Elmore has been placed with the Community Organization, formerly titled the Washington Internship Program, which is related to the Office of Economic Organization.

WCLA is a not-for-profit, educational agency based in Washington, D.C. It develops individual placement, supervision, evaluation, academic seminars, housing, assemblies with guest speakers and other support services for students from colleges and universities throughout the country. According to Jewell A. Byor, dean of general academic programs and SIU-C WCLA campus liaison, internships are available in congressional offices, executive agencies, judicial agencies and public interest organizations. Internships dealing with other areas of interest, such as the arts, business, communications, consumer affairs, environment, journalism and labor, also are available, she said. Qualified students in any major are eligible to participate in the internship program.

Ultimate Frisbee tournament to be part of Springfest

By Rodney Sauer
Staff Writer

The SIU-C Frisbee Club will hold an ultimate frisbee tournament on Sunday, at the football practice field east of the Arena. The tournament has been named the Southern Ultimate Jam and will be held as part of the annual Springfest.

Although the number of teams which will participate is still undetermined, Bill Byrne, president of the Frisbee Club, said that the teams will be of top quality. Ultimate frisbee is played on a football-type field with seven players, according to Byrne. The object, he said, is to pass the disc down field and complete a pass in the opponent's end zone. Physical contact is kept to a minimum to avoid injuries, he explained.

There are 30 members in the SIU club which is sanctioned by the International Frisbee Association. Byrne said club dues are $1 a year, most of which are used for travel expenses.

The lack of area competition is the club's biggest handicap, Byrne said. He said he would like to see SIU-C field two or three teams and a sound proposition he believes because the club has a good following to help interest grow.

The club has just returned home placing first place in the first annual Ultimate Frisbee State Tournament held in Normal. The club won four games and lost none in the six-team tournament.
'Company' secretary testifies that she flew cash out of U.S.

ALTON (AP) -- Marvin J. Zylstra's secretary testified Monday she made at least six trips to the Cayman Islands to deliver a computer and $200,000 in cash each time.

Karen Nagel testified she was hired by the accused aircraft broker for the nation's largest drug-smuggling ring to manage money and meet several members of the 'Company,' including well-known so-called president Richard Dial Thorp who was still a large shareholder.

Nagel, the only defendant to come to trial among 13 named in a 42-count indictment, faces up to 20 years in prison each of the victims, a committee member.

In 1979, the prosecution confirmed some $200,000 cash was flown out of the country.

Most expenses.

'Company' is a group of individuals with a common goal, that goal being the smuggling of marijuana into this country,' Miss Nagel told the federal jury bearing racketeering, conspiracy and drug possession charges against Zylstra.

Zylstra is the only defendant to come to trial among 13 named in the indictment. Five have pleaded guilty while five others are still at large.

Prosecutors say the 'Company' made at least 50 flights to Colombia and brought back 155 tons of marijuana valued at $20 million between 1976 and 1980.

Nagel, who was not charged but was subpoenaed to testify, told jurors she first met Thorp when he dropped by Zylstra's home during her job interview.

'My understanding was that I worked for Marvin, but if Lee [an alias for Thorp] told me to do something, I'd also do that,' she said.

The 'Company' registered aircr aft through Custom Air Limited, Inc., a Fort Lauderdale, Florida, company owned by Zylstra, said Nagel.

'Mr. Zylstra took his direction from Thorp,' she said. 'He brokered aircraft and provided the 'Company' with aircraft. It was normal procedure to register 'Company' aircraft with Custom Air.'

Some 'Company' planes were also registered to a Caribbean corporation known as Aedas Medic. Nagel said agreements between Nicaragua and the United States make it easy for large aircraft to fly back and forth between the two countries.

Nagel said she flew to Atlanta with Zylstra after authorities intercepted a marijuana shipment in February 1981. She said the meeting was attended by Thorp and Earl Zerbe, the ring's chief who has pleaded guilty.

At Thorp's direction, she testified, the drug smuggling ring bought back the confiscated airplane.

Nagel identified correspondence she had typed in which Zylstra told a Georgia district attorney that he had sold the plane before it was discovered by authorities.

-committee offers help to victims of sexual assault

By Deborah Goldstein

Nudist Writer

Victims of rape or sexual assault typically may feel alone and afraid in Carbondale, but they need not feel that way help is available from the Rape Action Committee. The committee supports women who have experienced any kind of violent crime.

The Rape Action Committee gives victims and those close to them emotional and psychological support. The committee informs victims about hospital, police and court procedures, and works closely with victims who decide to go through the legal prosecution process.

'Our primary focus is helping the victim deal with what has happened,' said a Rape Action Committee spokesperson.

The 24-hour-a-day service is affiliated with the Women's Center at 80 N. Freeman. The staff is composed of volunteers who range from 23 to 55 years of age. A male staff member is available to counsel men who are husbands or boyfriends of the victims.

The committee evolved out of the Women's Center in 1972. In 1979, the committee received approximately 2,000 calls from rape and assault victims. Within the last year, it received over 50 calls, according to the committee spokesperson.

'People don't call the police, but they keep us hopping,' the spokesperson said. Most calls concern actual rape, but some are for rape attempts.

The Women's Center helps the committee financially by paying telephone and some gas expenses. But the volunteers usually provide their own cars and gas payment.

Three staff positions usually open every year. Newspaper advertisements indicate when the applications for volunteers are available.

Volunteers must go through an extensive three-hour training period before becoming a staff member.
Brady gets over drug reaction; remains 'alert,' doctor says

WASHINGTON - AP - White House press secretary James S. Brady broke out in a rash and ran a high fever last weekend in an apparent reaction to drugs taken to ward off seizures during his recovery from a bullet wound in the brain.

By Monday, his temperature was back near normal and he was "regaining alertness and in good spirits," a White House statement said.

Brady was never in danger over the weekend, said Dr. Bernard O'Leary, dean of clinical affairs at George Washington University Hospital.

"I don't view it as a setback to his recovery," O'Leary said. "This is a significant occurrence but I don't think it's going to slow Jim's overall recovery and he should come through it just fine.

Without disclosing the extent of Brady's temperature, O'Leary said doctors generally would consider a high temperature to be in the range of 101 to 106 degrees Fahrenheit.

Normal temperature is considered to be 98.6 degrees.

Brady's temperature began rising Friday evening and peaked the next night, O'Leary said. Contrary to what the White House reported last week, Brady, 46, had remained on two medications.

One of them was Dilantin to ward off seizures or convulsions that sometimes accompany a head wound such as he suffered in the attempted assassination of President Reagan March 30.

The other was Alkudent, an antihypertensive drug taken for high blood pressure.

"Anti-seizure medication is well known to have complications," O'Leary said. Before concluding that his medication was to blame, doctors took culture and specimen smears, made a spinal tap and began administering a broad spectrum of antibiotics. However, there was no evidence of infection was found, and it was concluded the drugs were at fault.

Effects of kidney diseases discussed at symposium

By Colleen Moore

Staff Writer

The life adjustments of kidney disease victims as they fight to survive was discussed at a two-day symposium last week at Quincy Hall.

A dialysis machine, which cleans out a person's blood, or a kidney transplant are the main ways to survive for a person with a kidney malfunction.

Brenda M. Hall, director of the psychosocial section of the National Cooperative Dialysis Study, said if treatment isn't received, "the option for the person is to die.

Typical treatments on a dialysis machine take 3 to 5 hours daily and treatment may be received every other day.

Maher said, "It is the hope of a transplant that maintains many of the individuals," he said.

Maher said, "Every other day the person is slowly becoming uremic again.

Uremia is a toxic condition that results from the failure of the kidney to eliminate waste. A person's body swells until the waste products are eliminated from the blood.

The average cost per year of using a dialysis machine at a treatment center is $20,000. Maher said. However, many get help from the government, which will sometimes pay up to 80 percent of the costs.

When one suffers from kidney malfunction, Maher said, "every sphere of life is impaired.

A marked decrease in sex drive is apparent, he said, "Impotence is reported in about 90 to 95 percent of the males, failure of orgasm is reported in 40 percent of the females," he said.

Maher said those who have kidney malfunction have a high divorce, unemployment and suicide rate.

House moving in Carbondale almost common this spring

By Tammy Gormley

What's unusual is the number of people moving here from Almond Street to Poplar Street. And the number of people moving is unusual.

There are four houses being moved in Carbondale this spring, and in the last two years, according to Wayne Wheeler, Carbondale city superintendent.

The most recent example occurred last Tuesday.

Passersby looked on inquisitively, one saying, "There's a house in the middle of the street," as they observed a house on a trailer moving from 107 Almond St. to 905 S. Poplar St. Tuesday morning.

The one-story house that was located behind Carbondale Savings and Loan Association was lifted from its previous address and began its journey of four blocks down Poplar street at 9 a.m. Two and a half hours later the house reached its destination.

The house was recently bought by Don Bryant when he learned that it was going to be destroyed to build a parking lot for Carbondale Savings and Loan. Bryant, a Carbondale landlord, has moved eight or ten houses in the past. Quite a bit goes into moving a house and, "one took two months planning," Bryant said.

In order to move the house, Bryant had to hire moving contractors, telephone linemen and the Carbondale Public Works Department to supervise the move.

The move was contracted to John Vander Trucking of Herrin. The money paid out with the construction company for any injuries to the moving crew to passersby, according to Lindel Horn, contractor crew man.

Moving the one-story house was a pretty easy task compared to two- and three-story houses, despite the close squeeze between two telephone poles on the corner of Poplar and Walnut street, said Beth McClure, GTE head lineman.

The public works department was on hand to assist in the transporting of the house through the city. They pulled street signs and lights from the house's path.

Woman 'constructs' all-female crew

CHICAGO (AP) - Pat Porter says her all-female contracting firm — with skilled carpenters, painters, plumbers, paupers, electricians, bricklayers, truckers and roofers — does much better work than men.

In fact, she once had 11 men working for her Sunbow Contractors Inc. — including her brother — and fired them all.

"I'm really not interested in hiring men," she said recently as she headed a work crew at a hotel. "I fired my brother because he was leaving the job early and didn't like to take orders from women."

"The men took no pride in their work and were lax," said Ms. Porter, a 22-year-old divorcée with three children and a degree in managerial psychology. "Four of them were canned because they hung four big doors backwards and it cost me $500 to rectify the mistake. There were fired for popping pills."

"I've found that men looking for work tend to fib about what they can and cannot do. Ninety-five percent of women tell me it is and show a great willingness to learn."

This can't be said for the men she fired. They pull street signs and lights from the house's path.

Lady netters lose three of four meets
by Scott Mahmer
Sports Editor
Even though the women's tennis team lost seven of its last nine dual matches, including three of four last weekend, Coach Judy 'Alld is encouraged by her team's 12-9 record.
"I looked over our schedule before the season and thought we could go 14-7," Alld said. "But overall, I was pleased I had the confidence in our team and the level of our competition. Hopefully, the girls can learn from the matches they have to push themselves against better teams."
The Salukis closed their dual-season match by losing matches at Iowa, 7-2, and Drake, 7-2, Friday, and falling Iowa State, 6-3, Saturday. SI-C won its final meet of the year, 3-4, over Nebraska.
"We were in every match," Alld said. "If that with a few breaks, things could have gone our way. Iowa State was a team I definitely felt we should have won a over.
"We bounced back against Nebraska, and there were some high spots. I think we can go into the Stephens Invitational the Salukis' last meet of the season with confidence."
If any Salukis gained confidence from the weekend's results, it was Becky Ingram. The sophomore from Godfrey showed signs of breaking out of a slump by winning two of four matches at No. 3 singles.
Mona ElChison at No. 6 singles. Jeannie Jones in the No. 2 singles slot and the doubles team of Stacy Sherman and Debbie Martin also went 2-0.
"Mona lost two three-set matches and the one against Iowa State, she won, 60, 60," Alld said. "If she keeps her concentration going the entire match, she's a tough player."
Jeanie started playing some good tennis again. She said her match against Iowa State was the first match she'd played in a long time."
"Other Salukis had less success. Lisa Warren at No. 1 singles, Debbie Martin at No. 3 singles and the doubles team of Warrem and Jones and ElChison and Tammy Kurtz all had 1-3 records. Sherman was a disappointing 0-4 at No. 4 singles.
"Stacy plays a real good game. Alld said. "She just lacks confidence. Once she gets that, she'll be OK as a singles player."

Cardinals blister Cubs, 6-1
ST LOUIS (AP) - Keith Hernandez drilled three doubles, drove in one run and scored two others, as the St. Louis Cardinals cut Chicago 6-1 Monday for the Cubs' seventh straight loss.
Winner Bob Forsch, 11-1, pitched the first five innings and allowed only two hits. After stiffness forced Forsch from the game, Jim Kaat and Bruce Sutter finished up with flawless relief. Sutter, who was acquired from Chicago last winter, got his third save.
In the eighth, doubles by Hernandez and Keith Hernandez made it 3-1 and Tommy Herr's bases-loaded triple drove in three more Cards runs.

Seko diver Rich Theobald finished fifth with 345 points in one-meter diving at the USA Diving Championships held last week in Columbus, Ohio.
Theobald, a senior, was also a semifinalist in the three-meter competition, placing 16th with 318 points.
Greg Louganis, a former Olympian and a senior at the University of Miami, won the one-meter diving with a score of 275. Randy Adkison, the NCAA champion, placed one point ahead of Theobald to finish fourth.
According to Seko Diving Coach Dennis Golden, Seko provided an excellent finish to the best year ever for Seko diving.
"Theobald had an all-time best performance in one-meter competition," Golden said, "but he could have performed better in the three-meter. He is one of the nation's best in one-meter diving."

Seko qualified for the meet on the basis of a sixth-place finish in the NCAA Championships at Austin, Texas, March 26-28.
Theobald's performance in the USA Diving Championships qualifies him to compete in the Outdoor Diving Championships that will be held during the third week of August at Mission Viejo, Calif.
White Sox president pushes theatrical flair

By Randy Minkoff

IHs Sports Writer

CHICAGO—White Sox President Eddie Einhorn earned a name in professional sports as a man who could promote a major theme in the sports world. Einhorn, as the owner of the Chicago Cubs, created a sensation with his提议 for a "major league" baseball game in Chicago. This idea, which was never realized, captured the imagination of baseball enthusiasts throughout the country.

Einhorn's latest idea is a theatrical version of the "Raging Bull" movie. The idea is to stage a theatrical version of the movie "Raging Bull" in Chicago. Einhorn believes that this would be a great opportunity to promote the city of Chicago and its rich history of theatrical productions.

The idea is to have a theatrical version of the movie "Raging Bull" performed in Chicago, with all the major actors from the original movie. Einhorn believes that this would be a great way to attract tourists to Chicago and promote the city's theatrical heritage.

Einhorn's idea has been met with mixed reactions. Some believe that it is a great way to promote the city, while others feel that it is a waste of time and money. Einhorn remains committed to his idea and plans to continue to promote it. He believes that this is an opportunity to make Chicago a leader in the world of theatrical productions.

Men's Volleyball Club wins own tournament

By Diane DeWolf

Student Writer

The SIU-C Men's Volleyball Club continued its winning streak over the weekend as it won the SIU Spring Invitational Tournament. The tournament was held Saturday at the SIU Recreation Center, and featured teams from Eastern Illinois University, the University of Tennessee-Martin, and the Illinois Valley Regional. SIU-C came on strong as it defeated UT Martin 15-8, 15-3 in the first match.

The second match, between the Illinois Valley Regional, saw the Redbirds win 15-12, 15-11. The third game was a thriller, with SIU-C eventually winning 15-14. The final match was between SIU-C and Tennessee, which was won by SIU-C 15-13, 15-10. Vanek left the Red Sox with little still fear, it remains to be seen whether the veteran catcher will be able to haunt his former team during the regular season.

The Final Conflict: Reliever Kevin Barsby or starter Lamar Johnson. The Red Sox are a team that is capable of scoring runs, and Johnson is expected to be a key performer for SIU-C this season.

The Sox's biggest problem this season is their pitching, which has been inconsistent. However, they have a solid defense, which could be a deciding factor in the outcome of the season.

Vanek thinks his team will make a good showing for SIU-C. "The quality of play will be unpredictable," Vanek said. "How well we do will depend on the pool we are in."
