Reagan will negotiate on budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, saying he will "go the extra mile" to reach a budget compromise with Congress, indicated Tuesday that he would consider tax increases as part of a package to reduce deficits.

While remaining firmly opposed to changes in the individual and business tax cuts enacted last year, Reagan said he would not rule out other tax increases being promoted by congressional Republicans and Democrats during budget negotiations with the administration.

"It's my fervent plea and hope that from these meetings they will come a balanced, bipartisan package that will help to revitalize our economy," Reagan said. "I know of nothing that would be a greater boon for the economy right now."

Eisenberg is the voting record of congressmen to student-related issues and mobilize students to participate in the campaign for congressmen who have supported higher education.

The new national political action committee has been launched around campus," according to Stan Erwin, SIUC student trustee.

Both Debbie Brown, president of the SIUC Graduate Student Organization, and Todd Rogers, Undergraduate Student Organization president, said the new COPUS committee "is great." Brown said she hadn't heard about the PAC's formation and asked how to contact the national organization so she could learn more about it.

MIRIAM ROSENBERG, COPUS national director, also announced at a press conference in the U.S. Capitol that the committee's first activity will be a "SAVE '82" campaign — roughly an acronym for Students for the Aid Vote in the 1982 Election. "SAVE '82" will be a three-pronged effort to try to accomplish the overall objectives of our political action committee. We will conduct a major push this fall to register the student vote, inform students on the voting records of congressmen on student-related issues and mobilize students to participate in the campaign for congressmen who have supported higher education.

Rosenberg said COPUS represents 250 to 300 non-government-funded faculty members, aren't really batting over some fair maiden. They were practicing for the duel scene from "Romeo and Juliet," a part of "A Night of Shakespeare" on May 6 at McCleod Theater.

Council OKs West Park Plaza bond sale

By Rob Beemstreet

The Carbondale City Council Monday removed one of the final stumbling blocks to construction of the proposed West Park Plaza.

The council authorized issuing $3.45 million in industrial revenue bonds for the project, to be located west of Carbondale near the intersection of Illinois 13 and New Era Road.

The council approved the bond documents for the sale and authorized City Manager Carroll Fry and Mayor Hans Fischer to sign them when the final draft is completed.

Construction equipment is already on the property, and work can begin as soon as the ground becomes dry enough, said Jim Murtha, a representative of Knox and Co., co-developers of the project. The shuttered buildings should be complete in six to eight months, he added.

The shopping center will contain a Kroger food store, a Supervalu drugstore, and 14,000 square feet of space for smaller retail stores, on a 13-acre tract.

When the council initially committed itself in 1980 to issuing revenue bonds, a Kroger store had been included in the plans for the shopping center. Because of delays in negotiating with the Murdale Water District for relocation of a water line which runs through the front of the property, Kroger pulled out, and Kroger became a co-partner in the shopping center project.

The remand was agreed to by the water district earlier this month, permitting the developers to go ahead with the bond sale for the project.

The underwriting firms of Matthews and Wright and the Chicago Corporation will purchase the revenue bonds and sell them to other private investors. The sale should be completed in three to four weeks, Murtha said.

Council member Helen Westberg asked John Wonnick, special counsel for Eisenberg and Co., what would happen in case of a default on the bonds. Wonnick said Kroger would be liable, and would have to complete construction of the shopping center. Fry told the council Kroger would have to go bankrupt before it could default on the bonds.

An amendment to the Carbondale City Code passed by the council specified that the city will not be liable, as the issuer of the bonds, for completing the project.

Reagan appeals for restraint, more time in Falklands crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — With his secretary of state's peacekeeping mission at an impassioned stop and a Falkland Island appeal to Great Britain and Argentina on Tuesday to give the United States some time to avert a shooting exchange in their dispute over the Falkland Islands, President Reagan appealed for restraint.

He expressed the hope that American intervention would encourage a settlement proposed by Argentine President Jorge Videla and rejected a settlement proposed by Argentine President Jorge Videla.

It was the beginning of the third round of high-level diplomacy and American intervention in the Falklands crisis. The United States voted to send a special envoy to the United States, a move that would be a terrible thing to say, Reagan said.

But the OAS, President Reagan was quoted as saying, was 75¢ delayed any action on the economic and financial issues that面前 the United States.

In a misread of the event, "a shooting war in the South Atlantic," Reagan replied: "That would be a terrible thing to say in the midst of all the delicate negotiations."

Second trial for Parker begins

ROCKFORD (AP) — During the second round of hearings, prosecutor Michael Starkey, Cathy Robinett, and that Parker, 60, is accused of stealing $60,000 from the University of Illinois. Parker answered a series of telephone calls from women who were demanding money from the University of Illinois Foundation to a dormant fund. REAGAN from Page 1

Speaker said he told Reagan, "That's the first time I've heard you use the word 'negotiate.' Before, it was only 'dialogue.'" Sources say negotiators are working toward agreement on a package of spending cuts and surcharge on upper-income taxpayers. The main elements of a compromise under discussion include a 4 percent income tax surcharge on upper-income Americans, cuts in Reagan's record military buildup, and reduction in Social Security cost-of-living increases and a freeze on hundreds of domestic programs.

Any compromise would have to be approved by Reagan and O'Neill, but neither has committed himself to any of the proposed changes. Although officially maintaining the position that he was not involved in the negotiations, Reagan has been briefed on them regularly by White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III.
Falkland Islands crisis is threat to U.S. peace

If Great Britain and Argentina go to war over the Falkland Islands, it will not be an "admirable little war" as some people would like to think. If the war occurs, it will probably be a bloody, vicious little war that could eventually drag the United States into it.

America's best hopes for ending this crisis without making new enemies or going to war lie with Secretary of State Alexander Haig, Jr. Haig has several important assets in his position. First, he is impresive for the United States that his efforts to negotiate a peace between London and Buenos Aires are successful. Second, the fact is that war between Argentina and Great Britain would force America to choose between two allies. Great Britain has historically, since the First World War, been America's closest and firmest ally. Argentina has recently become a friend of the United States, to the chagrin of American marines willing to use any country, including right-wing dictatorships, as allies in its war on world communism.

Despite the fact that both countries are friends of America, it is clear that we will be obliged to support Great Britain in the event of hostilities. Our historical relationship with the United Kingdom, as well as our overriding interest in our European alliance, make this obvious.

Taking England's side in a fighting war against a South American country, however, would be extremely damaging to America's relationship with countries south of our border.

America is already perceived throughout much of this hemisphere as an imperialist aggressor, bent on imposing American ideas and influence on all countries in the region. Throughout the Caribbean, we are already seen as the international heavy, automatically suspecting anything things go wrong.

But war with Argentina is more than a breaker country in this hemisphere would only unite Central and South American countries in this conviction that America wants only our resources and markets, not our friendship. It would also provide invaluable propaganda ammunition for Fidel Castro and his allies in the region.

Indeed, this crisis could provide more than propaganda material for the Soviet Union. It could give them the chance to indicate their wish to be a major partner, a country willing to see a confrontation between the United States and the Soviet Union.

This is the greatest danger to the Falklands crisis, and one that Americans too often overlook.

If Britain imposes a blockade, as has been threatened, it will immediately halt the flow of Argentinean goods into the West. The Soviet Union and Argentine have important trade relations, involving Argentine grain and British coal. The Soviets would stand by while the British fleet kept Soviet ships from Argentine ports. The Soviets have perhaps the largest and most powerful single army in the world, and it is naive to think they would not use it to protect their trade interests.

If Britain uses their fleet, Great Britain would probably request American military aid. We would probably step in, requiring Soviet warships become involved.

Americans and Soviets face each other again, we are only a breath away from nuclear confrontation.

It would be just that easy for the Falklands crisis to become World War III.

America has the world's best interests, then, clearly rest with Britain's peace mission. And it is becoming clear that his efforts are reaching their final hour. By the end of the week, something will be announced, advance this. So, is the interests of the British fleet will be within striking distance of the Falklands.

If they get there, and there is no settlement, war is likely. If we go to war, the American can only hope it ends before we have to choose sides.

Israel radio announced participants. All proceeds will go to Sanaats faces perjury charges. Initiative petition needs more signatures. Trompeter said Tuesday. The signatures have been collected statewide, Trompeter said with the state and a city government, regardless of whether he has the time to usefully serve in both functions; a bill that would require a deposit with the sale of bottles ("the bottle bill"); and, for example, the proposition recently rejected by Missouri voters that would have allowed heavier trucks on their state highways.

IPRIG is working with the Coalition for Political Honesty, the Oak Park-based group which originated the petition-refendum proposal in Illinois, Trompeter said. If the amount of signatures needed for the petition are obtained, the referendum will be placed on the fall ballot, he said.

"First, we need a referendum on the whole idea of opening up the initiative process to the issues," Trompeter said. "If the referendum passes, the citizens would be able to propose any law by initiative, and pass it by referendum."

Former IDAS head faces perjury charges

By Jay Small Staff Writer

Vincent A. Toole, former Illinois Public Interest Research Group (IPIRG) administrative services director, will be tried in July on perjury charges. Circuit Court Judge Richard Richman ruled at a Monday arraignment.

Richman dismissed charges of official misconduct and two counts of obstruction of justice. But, he placed against Toole in a Feb. 18 indictment by a Jackson County grand jury.

The charges against Toole stemmed from allegations of job selling and lying to the grand jury. He pleaded not guilty to the remaining perjury charge. Richard White, Toole's attorney, said he had been given the counts against his client dismissed.

Richman said he would try the official misconduct charge based on White's argument that Toole was not acting as a private citizen, but a government official.

"I ruled he was not acting in an official capacity at the time of the offenses," Richman said Tuesday.

Richman dismissed the obstruction of justice charge because of a recent court decision concerning the falsifying of information to avoid apprehension. There was a recent Appellate Court decision to the effect that even if a person does not tell the truth about himself to an officer, it is not obstruction of justice," Richman said.

Toole had been accused of giving false information to authorities concerning alleged job selling at a Carbondale state garage.

Despite White's argument that there was "insufficient legal basis" for the perjury charge, Richman ordered Toole to stand trial on the charge July 14. Toole allegedly enct or reject such proposed laws that are not approved by the General Assembly and the governor.

Issues that might conceivably appear on a referendum, Trompeter said, are particulars of legislative ethics, such as "double-dipping" (for example, a state legislator being on the payroll of both state and a city government).

Parker puts edge back on new album

By Tom Travis
News Editor

Graham Parker has always been inventive, uncompromising and respectable. Never afraid to speak his mind, he rarely flinches, and almost always hits the mark.

Parker was touted as a breath of fresh air when he released his first album, "Howlin' Wind," in late 1975; a throwback to the earlier days of purist Parker got a major label debut with his second album, "Squeezing Out Sparks," but his backing band the Rumour. "The Up Escalator," found Parker forcing his performance, spitting out lyrics without his usual conviction, and it seemed he was merely fulfilling his contract. Needless to say, it was a critical and financial failure. "Another Grey Area," his latest release, is, at least, a partial comeback. Musically, it sounds like "The Up Escalator," but with a harder edge to it. It features the same swinging major chords, punctuating rhythms and haunting melodies, all enveloped around Parker's impassioned, gravelly vocals. But co-producer Jack Douglas has added the rocking that was missing from the Rumour, providing a solid backup for the singer. The album opens with "Temporary Beauty," Parker criticizing the made-up nature of many women. "You have to do your best to come up to par. From straight off the production line like a car, till everything you put on is a put on, and you don't know whose face you're gazing upon," he sings, and his feelings of disgust pour unencumbered out of the vinyl.

"Another Grey Area," is the place where Parker ends up after his companion decides to leave him — he is left hanging in limbo. Parker continues with his two favorite themes through the rest of the album — lost-love and having running battle with the inadequacies of society. Both portray him as the little guy who suffers at the hands of unfeeling women and a society best on self-destruction. "No More Excuses," "Big Fat Zero," and "Thankless Task" fit the latter category, while the rest of the album fits the former.

Graham Parker is a feeling, caring, concerned man who worries too much for his own good. He always tries to solve society's problems through his music, but he is so hopelessly bitter that he is only capable of ill-timed, antagonistic commentaries. "Another Grey Area" is another chapter in the Graham Parker story, one that yet in have a true triumph, with the possible exception of "Squeezing Out Sparks." Perhaps in the future Parker will mellow somewhat and find real happiness, but with the way society is going, he's got a lot of bitterness ahead of him. Halloween '79 captured in celluloid

By Laurie Landgraf
Entertainment Editor

Few students pass through SIU-C without at least hearing of the famous (or infamous) October celebration when pregnant numa, giant bongs and a fearsome assortment of beasts crowd Saturn Night Live characters clutter-up our downtown can-bittered South Illinois Avenue.

If you were among the 14,000 who participated in the SIU-C Halloween festivities in 1979, you might get a chance to see yourself in a short film if WIDB brings "Twas Brillig ... A Halloween Memory to the Student Video Lab on the 2nd floor of the Administration building.

The film, which contains the story of the Halloween celebration from the weekend before the morning after, will be shown at 4, 6:30 and 9:30 p.m. Admission is $1.

Former SIU-C film student Brian Colin and a 14-person film crew teamed up for the effort, shooting over 2,500 feet of color and black-and-white 16mm film, as well as more than 150 still photos.

More than 3½ years later, the footage has been assembled into a documentary by Colin, who now heads his own film production company in Flossmoor. Action ranges from interview performances with costumed merrymakers to a cinema verite look at some seamier aspects of the celebration.

The Public Broadcasting System has already bought the broadcast rights to the film in several markets, including John Anenberg, WIDB program director.

Also to be shown Sunday are "In Search of a Plot," "Mor- toe," "Train by Fury," "One Day in the Life of Oog" and "The Road to Basketydell," all films made by Colin.

Illegally parked bikes will cost owners money

Parking an unregistered bicycle in the wrong place on campus is soon going to be an expensive mistake.

Campus police have announced that bicycles will be impounded if they're found parked where they constitute a traffic hazard — such as close to light posts and fences alongside congested sidewalks or near busy buildings. SIU-C police and Saluki Patrol officers are set this week to start ticketing and impounding unregistered bikes that are parked improperly.

Owners will have to pay a $2 fine for operating an unregistered bicycle on campus, a $3 impoundment fee, and the $2 registration fee to get the bike back. Locks and chains will be cut, if necessary.

The improper parking fine for registered bicycles is $1 and goes to $5 if not paid within five days.

"So far, we've been lucky," said Lt. Marvin L. Brasswell, security officer in charge of the enforcement campaign. "I've never heard of anyone being seriously injured falling over an improperly parked bike, but it could happen any time, especially to a blind or handicapped person."

Forestry could possibly return to the Midwest say foresters

By Gordon Billingsley
School of Agriculture

Illinois and other parts of the Midwest, by heaping their agricultural attention on corn and soybeans, may be missing out on developing some of their greatest resources—trees.

And if it appears that the next five years will probably make or break the effort to change that order of things.

Leading foresters say changes in forestry, agriculture and economics all are pointing to a possible future in which trees are a major industry to the Midwest.

Robert Hann, who administers research for the U.S. Department of Agriculture in seven Midwest states, cites vanishing stands of old-growth timber in the West and increasing concern over farmland erosion as major factors pushing forestry toward the Midwest.

Economic factors such as increased transport done costs may also be forcing many timber companies and suppliers to consider wood sources closer to users and industries, he said.

Hann, director of the U.S. Forest Service's North Central Forest Experiment Station, spoke recently at the School of Agriculture.

"Forestry could be a dominant factor in the economy and society of the Midwest," Hann said.

"But as it stands now, years after the large forest concerns moved west with our growing nation, Midwest forest production does not match forest product use. Illis, for instance, ranks fourth in the nation in wood product use and 34th in production.

"But the old-growth timber of the West is running out, according to Hann, and timber companies are starting new to cut forests the second time around.

"Here in the Midwest, many previously wooded areas now in crops may be returned to trees. Erosion of crop land has, in effect, moved the soil of its "site"-tents in some areas, and trees will again be planted to restore the soil," said Hann.

Hann said there would be about five years to commit to developing these resources, but without a commitment, conditions would change and the timber industry would pass by.

George Weaver, chairman of the Department of Forestry, said Illinois' existing abundance of forest resources is often overlooked.

"About 11 percent of Illinois is in forests," Weaver said. "That is an area the size of the state of Massachusetts."

He also said that Illinois has about 34 million acres of wooded lands in private ownership. About 2.1 million acres of that is in small farmerholdings.

Increased management of such lots could improve Illinois' per-acre output of forest products by four to five times over current levels, Weaver said. Farmers must be shown that trees can be a profitable crop.

"Among the ways that we can make wood lots more attractive to timber buyers and loggers is increasing concern among farmers to manage their small lots as a group," Weaver said.

Science fiction movies deal with subject matter that tends to be out of the ordinary because it's too expensive for most film students. The problem is, too often, the student is not a director in cinema and photography, is permitted to make a science fiction film during the summer. It will be an hour long and will cost $10,000.

"The film," Cooley said, "was a major effort at interstellar colonization," in which people who travel on a colonized space ship to populate the new galaxy. He said it also deals with a personal relationship between a man on earth and a woman on the space ship who communicate via computer.

The idea for the relationship in the film came from Cooley's personal experience. He said, "I talked with a girl from Utah through a computer, and I even drove out there to see her." Cooley said he even knows of two people who later married after they first met by corresponding through a computer.

The special effects, Cooley said, will be accomplished through the use of in-camera techniques in order to avoid exorbitant lab costs.

One of those effects will involve matting, Cooley said, a technique in which the camera lens is covered. After the film is exposed through the partitioned lens, it can be exposed again after the part that was originally covered is concealed and the formerly matted part exposed.

A two-foot by two-foot rear-projection screen will be used as a background during some scenes filmed with objects, such as the spaceship. "If it's a poor man's optical printer," he said.

But Cooley concedes there can be problems with matting, especially when using a 16 millimeter film because the process can cause lines to show up on the film.

Man injured in bridge collapse files damage suit

CHICAGO (AP) — An Indiana Department of Highways inspector who was shot in East Chicago, Ind., bridge ramp collapse last week tied a $15 million damage suit Tuesday.

Frederick Torrijas, 22, of Michigan City, Ind., entered the suit in Circuit Court and named as defendants Midwest Steel Erection Co. Inc. of Chicago, Superior Construction Co. Inc. of Gary, Ind., and Figg and Muller Engineers Inc. of Indianapolis, Fla.

The suit charges them with negligence and wanton misconduct, and accuses them of improperly said immediately installing and maintaining the support scaffolding for the bridge.

action! Camera rolling for sci-fi flick

By Joe Walter
Staff Writer

To minimize the matred line problem, Cooley said he plans to use a front projection — the background image being projected from the front of the camera and a screen in the back. The projected image on the actors and objects is eliminated out through the use of supplemental lighting.

Cooley said he will shoot these scenes this summer while he is at home in Cincinnati, Ohio. Though Cooley already has just about all of the equipment he will use, he said he will also need actors — 30 for principle roles and 100 extras — for shooting in Cincinnati and Cariboudale this summer.

For his space ship, Cooley said he will use an 18 foot long model he constructed himself in Cincinnati. The model of the ship will be accomplished through the use of time-lapse cinematography.

Cooley will move his camera about the ship a couple of inches in one direction, expose a frame, and then repeat the process to create the illusion of motion.

The reason the model ship is so large is so that there will be an illusion of the ship's depth on the screen. Cooley said, if light hits a model that is too small, then the shadows of crevices and features of the ordinary will not be highlighted and will not appear at all to the audience.

Even though an 18-foot model may appear to be large, Cooley said Stanley Kubrick used a 54-foot long model for his ship "Discovery" in 2001, A Space Odyssey." He said he considers Kubrick to be a "model film-maker" and that he decided to become a moviemaker after seeing "2001."

Cooley said the techniques Kubrick utilized in "2001."

revitalized the way space ships were seen in science fiction films. Cooley said he picked up his first camera, a super 8, when he was 11 and made his first film when he was 13. In high school, he made an hour-long science fiction film that he now says had too many special effects. "You should only use special effects when they are relevant," he said.

MIAMI (AP) — A sweet tune drifts over the tropical breeze. But it is not a sweet song Vivian Montilus sings. The lyrics are about death.

She believes she will die herself in a plastic chair perched outside a detention camp bus turned with 50 equally glum women.

Suddenly, the notations of her audience, and flashes a dazzling smile that quickly turns downward into a frown.

"When will I get out of here?" she whispers.

This is the Krome Avenue refugee camp, a former Nike missile base that fronts the humid Florida Everglades 25 miles west of Miami.

It is home for Vivian Montilus and 500 others who fled their impoverished island months ago in search of a better life.

Behind her, the gates are locked and razor-sharp concertina wire tops two 10-foot fences that surround 15 1/2 acres of dirt and concrete.

The camp is the focus of bitter controversy: Civil rights activists and Haitian exiles call it an inhumane prison for people who have done nothing more than what millions of immigrants have done before them.

Reagan administration officials reply that the Haitians are held because strict guidelines are needed to keep the nation from being overwhelmed by refugees who strain social services and economic support.

Since last year, the government has been delaying undocumented aliens until questions of asylum and deportation are resolved — a process which can take years.

Recently, visiting officials were released into the South Florida community of an estimated 75,000 exiles.

New Faculty Senate officers named

The final results of Faculty Senate elections, held between March 22 and April 1, have been announced by the Election Committee.

The 1982-83 SIU-C Faculty Senate officers are: Herbert Donow, president, College of Liberal Arts; William Gregory, provost; Marshall School; and Susan Maitson, secretary, Library Affairs.

Faculty Senate members from the College of Liberal Arts are: George McCue, Thomas Mitchell, Haskell Nelson, David Ayre, Steven Hartman and Jon Muller; from Communications and Fine Arts: Marvin Kleinau, Carlisle Swindon and Timothy Chapman; from the College of Education: Joseph Harmo- nia, Lamb, John Moww, Marsha Anderson and Ronald Knowlton; from the Medical School: Donna Salvo, Elizabeth Davson-Saunders and Stuart McLaughlin; from the School of Technical Careers: Larry McDougle, Harry Soderstrom and Harriet Miller; from the College of Human Resources: Denny Hays and Thomas Brooks; from the College of Engineering and Technology: Sodat Sami; from the College of Business and Administration: Uma Sekaran; and from the School of Agriculture: Dwight McCurd.

The full-time faculty of Library Affairs and each of the degree-granting colleges and schools nominate about 50 and elect about 20 representatives to the Senate by a written secret ballot. All nominees are full-time faculty.

Voting faculty members are associated with the academic unit where most of their duties are performed.

freedom for about 2,500 Haitians at Krome and other federal facilities is being tried in U.S. District Court in Miami. The suit, filed by the Haitian Refugee Center Inc., attacks the policy of detaining Haitians indefinitely as discriminatory, cruel and in violation of judicial due process.

The government argues that the Haitians are here illegally and that they came here not for political persecution, but to find work as "economic refugees.

If there is a new exodus from Cuba like the 1980 boatlift that brought 120,000 Cubans here, then, too, they will be put in camps, officials promise.

For the refugees, it is an ironic end to a desperate journey for which they struggle to stay alive. Hundreds of thousands of years, they were packed into homemade wooden sailboats for a 500-mile voyage in which at least 60 Haitians are known to have drowned, with rumors of hundreds more.

"I see lots of barbed wire — that's what not Haitians came to America for and other Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., later said.

"Isn't the Fontainebleau Hilton," says Beverly Strickland, woman who remain to the Salvation Army. "We've lost our jobs, our freedom, our health and other officials insist it's not humane."

Krome camp director Cecilio Ruiz says the Haitians "have everything — they have sports, movies, television, television." In this place, there are scenes that amount to slavery.

-A married couple press fingers together at a wire mesh fence. The mesh is too small to allow them to hold hands. The camp is segregated by sex, and they are together only in Sunday church services.

-At eight telephones inside the men's two-story, concrete slab barracks, 24 men pool their quarters, and take turns calling their friends in Miami. The INS hasn't allowed incoming calls since December, when more than 10 Haitians scaled fences and disappeared into the Everglades while camp guards battled demonstrators from Miami who flushed the front gates. Officials believe the escapes had advance word of the "spontaneous" demonstration.

- Federal officials deny Haitian charges of guard brutality, and the Haitians here offer no incriminating reports. But, remember Sept. 3, when hundreds of men were refused return to their barracks were forcibly moved by riot-garbed guards who used tear gas.

To ease overcrowding here, the INS last fall began sending Haitians to other camps. The population here was once over 1,000.

The question most often asked visitors is the one from people who have been held for as long as 10 months: "When will we be free?"

There are many complaints about the food, catered three times a day by a Miami company. There are no cooking facilities.

In December, the INS announced that 600,000 would be located for camps. Improvements. Haitians provide some of the labor. The volunteers are paid $1 a day — "slave wages," Haitian advocates in Miami say.

Saluki Vegas Night hits financial jackpot

The School of Music and intercollegiate athletics may not have exactly hit the jackpot, but the participants had a good time at the Vegas Night — Saluki Style" held Sunday night at Cox Coe's in the Southern Illinois Bowl in Carbondale.

So far, the event has cleared more than $500, according to Jena Paratore, assistant to the vice president for student affairs and coordinator of the event. She estimated that $5,000 more will be added to that when all receipts come in.

The proceeds will be divided equally between men's and women's intercollegiate athletics and the School of Music.

About 400 to 600 people packed Cox Coe's for the four-hour event, Paratore said. A $10 ticket bought $5,000 to play money which could be spent at casino games or exchanged for various prizes. Entertainment was provided by groups from the School of Music.

Plans are to sponsor similar events in the future, Paratore said. "The only problem is finding a facility big enough."

Economist blames arms race for putting America 'to sleep'

CHICAGO (AP) — Because of its preoccupation with the arms race, the United States has "gone to sleep," in areas that made it a world leader, a prominent French economist said Tuesday.

Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber said at a news conference that "this country has become obsessed" with keeping pace with the Soviet Union's arms buildup. And the result, he warned, is that the United States has "become weaker and weaker."

"I am most assured that in the last 10 years America has been slowing down in areas of innovation, creativity and productivity — and that is America's strength," Servan-Schreiber said. "America has gone to sleep after thinking it dominated the world."

"It is now faced with a monumental challenge and will awaken, because it has all the best foundations of scientific knowledge."

Servan-Schreiber, the founder of "L'Express," a French news magazine, has written several books on economics and politics. About a year ago, his book, "The World Challenge," advanced a proposal that developed countries attack poverty throughout the world through the proliferation of computer technology.

In January he was named chairman of the new World Center for Human Resources to implement his theories.

Servan-Schreiber is about a "global" plan to expand the use of the personal computer to give every student in well-developed countries access to a computer as a learning resource, he said.

"This should be a national effort to educate the American mind," he said. "If there is one secret to the astounding success of the Japanese, it is in their passion for learning." He said the United States and Western Europe, suffering from a similar malaise, must react soon: "Doomsday" is fast approaching.

"We see our industrial world crumbling in large segments and we don't know how to rescue them," he said. "Traditional industry is being out-competed by new technologies that we have not yet mastered."

He blamed America's political, business, labor and social leadership for being "too conservative and satisfied with the way things have been going and hoping it will continue, but it won't."

He said the rest of the world ought to let the Soviet Union "face its own crisis" with an arms buildup. But the West should avoid trade blockades that hurt everyone but the Russians.

Servan-Schreiber also said he supports lending Poland default on its massive loans from the West and using credit as a weapon against "the irresponsible Russian military dictatorship."

Beg your pardon

It was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian that the Southern Singers performance Wednesday night would be conducted by music faculty member Robert Kingsbury.

Kingsbury listed as conductor on the program is an unspecified, and leading the group this semester is Acting Conductor Deborah L. Burris. Burris also conducts the vocal jazz quartet, "A Touch of Class."

Election ratification before S-Senate

A bill requesting ratification of the results of the recent student government elections will be submitted to the Student Senate at its meeting Wednesday.

The bill was written by Dave Williams, Undergraduate Student Government election commissioner. Williams will have a senator submit the bill. The Senate meets at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Renaissance Room.

The senate will also consider an amendment to create a landlord-tenant union. The amendment states that the three functions of the union would be "information dissemination, provision of a complaint service and lobbying for needed code changes."

The bill further states that the senate "has already allocated $500 towards the first edition of the Tenant Survival Manual, one of the major projects of the union."

Hockey club head held hostage

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — A young masked gunman held hostage a wealthy Edmonton oilman head of a multimillionaire Peter Pocklington's hockey team, as a hostage in his own home, it was reported, demanding a $1 million ransom and threatening to kill his 5-year-old female babysitter also taken captive with the bearded, 40-year-old National Hockey League owner, but were released unscathed four hours after the incident began at 16:30 a.m.

Four police negotiators were talking by telephone with the intruder, who was armed with a knife and was described by police as extremely dangerous. "As far as we are aware, Peter Pocklington is also unhurt," said city police spokesman Lance Beissw. Officers said the hostage in the man's house was bound and gagged.

After the gunman, wearing a ski mask, burst into the fashionable Pocklington home, the businessman's wife Evi escaped barefoot into the street, police reported. Initial reports incorrectly said she was released so he could obtain the ransom.

There was no public word from authorities on the amount of ransom demanded. But the Edmonton Journal newspaper said it might be being obtained from a bank, and quoted a police spokesman, as saying the gunman's demands were "essentially monetary and a way to get out of here."

Members of a police emergency force ringed the area of the Pocklington home, on the edge of the University of Alberta campus north of the downtown section of this western Canadian city.

Beissw said Mrs. Pocklington, the divorced businessman's second wife, was on the telephone with a friend when the intruder entered the house. When the line went dead, the friend telephoned police to tell them something was wrong at the Pocklington home.

Police said their negotiating efforts at first had difficulty making contact with the gunman, whom they described as in his 20s, because he knocked out telephone communications in the house. But the lines were re-established immediately, and they had him on the phone three hours after the incident began. An hour later they successfully negotiated the release of the woman and the girl, and released the businessman's wife, who was unharmed.

The similar process of the new birth control pill provoked immediate, and some of the money going to police and fire departments.

Further discussion of a city budget deficit for the 1985-86 fiscal year, a reduction from the $53 million deficit of the past year. The council approved a new one-year contract with the Construction Labourers International Union of North America for city police, the same as that given the city's non-union employees. The base salary will increase from $27.17 per hour to $28.66 per hour.

The firm of Laventhal and Horwath was appointed the annual audit of Carbondale's budget for the fiscal year ending April 30.

Equestrians finish season with ribbons

The SIU-C Equestrian Club finished the season with regional competition at Middle Tennessee State University and came away with an assortment of ribbons and honors.

One of the honors belonged to shepherd Susan Odem. She placed first and took the blue ribbon in the over-the-fences competition, which qualified her for national competition in June. In fact, on May 1, Odom also twice placed second in the Open Division.

mainstays of the Cougar pitching corps, according to Keaster.

St. Xavier suffered a serious personnel loss during its spring trip when honorable mention All-America catcher Carl Ferraro broke a finger. Keaster said the senior hasn't played since and probably won't see any action Wednesday.

Keaster, who doubles as basketball coach, said most of the baseball team's offensive production so far this season has been by third baseman Terry Baker; and sophomore shortstop Tom Newsome.

The Salukis, winners of their last three games, are all healthy and ready for the Cougars, according to Jones. Freshman catcher Steve Boyd, who pulled a hamstring last week against Kentucky, may catch Wednesday proving he feels well enough.

"If he's sore, we won't play him. We'll save him for the weekend," said Jones, referring to the Salukis' four-game set against Bradley slated for this weekend.

Junior Tim Cazafield and freshman Tom Johnson will get the starting pitching assignments for the Salukis Wednesday.

Cazafield, a left-hander from Jersey City, N.J., is 2-0 with a 5.75 ERA. Johnson pitched one-third of an inning Sunday against Bradley in relief of Jerry Halstead, the starting pitcher. Johnson was slated to start against the Salukis, fresh off Saluki pitching in this weekend's series. Jones said he's not just talking.

"Our pitchers have done a remarkable job. They're outstanding," he said. The Braves managed just eight runs off Saluki pitching in 27 innings over the weekend.

Jones called SIU-C's defense over the weekend "brilliant." The Salukis committed just two errors against the Braves. Jones thinks that if the

According to Coach Myke Ramsey, Odom will find nationals challenging and full of stiff competition.

"It's going to be pretty tough for her," Ramsey said. "She's going to be a lot more popular with the schools in the East. It's a varsity sport for many of the schools out there."

The competition over the weekend was supplied by MTSU, Tennessee, Western Kentucky, Murray State and Hiaassee College. They and SIU all belong to Region 6 of the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association.

Other SIU-C blue-ribbon winners include Kim Osborn, who took first place in the beginning Stock Seat (Western Style) riding competition; and Dana Williams, winner of the intermediate division.

After Williams' first-place finish in the Stock Seat competition, four of her teammates snagged second through fifth places. Wendy McIntosh took second; Liane Foster, third; Alan Blumberg, fourth; and Ante Aresi, captured fifth. SIU-C also won the sportsmanship award which is given to the team displaying the most sportsmanship during competition.

We'll save him for the weekend. "They're outstanding," he said. "If our offense perk up, we'll be exceptionally tough down the stretch."
Runners, joggers and walkers can get their exercise and help a good cause at the same time at a 10-mile walk-run which kicks off at 9:15 a.m. at SIUC's Student Recreation Center.

The walk-run, co-sponsored by the SIUC Roadrunners and Touch of Nature's Camp Olympia, begins at 10 a.m., and is open to all persons, including those in wheelchairs. Participants may register up until the start of the race, and should meet across the street from the Recreation Center before 9:15 a.m., Saturday.

Participants may pay an $8 fee or obtain at least that amount through pledges from sponsors prior to the event. The three people who raise the most pledge money will receive special awards. All participants will receive a T-shirt at the race.

Proceeds from the race will directly benefit handicapped children and adults in Southern Illinois as well as the rest of the state. Sponsorship signs and registration forms are available at the Student Programming Office in the Student Center, the Recreation Center and Bleyer's Sports Mart.

Both men and women participants will be classified according to age for the race. Age divisions are 19 and under, 20-29, 30-39, 40-49, 50-59 and over.

Water and first aid will be available at various check points throughout the 10-mile course, which will finish in front of Shryock Auditorium. Free first-aid service will be available at the finish for all participants.

A two-and-a-half mile Fun Run will also take place for interested participants. No fee is required unless a T-shirt is desired.

Camp Olympia, located near Little Grassy Lake, serves both the mentally and physically disabled during the summer. The Roadrunners are contributing their services to the walk-run in setting up the course and the water and first-aid booths.

Walk-run will benefit disabled.

At the No. 6 spot, Gabriel Coch lost to Barry Hyde, 6-4, 4-6 and 6-2.

The Salukis, whom LeFevre said have done quite well against "the longest schedule in the Midwest," now stand at 11-13, with five regular season games remaining. Hyde, the veteran coach is hoping his Salukis can close out the season over the .500 mark.

He said that can be done, especially since the Salukis will have a home court advantage in their next five contests. Starting Saturday, SIUC will play five matches within three days at the University Tennis Courts.

One home court advantage the Salukis won't have, however, is in the Missouri Valley Conference tournament, which was originally scheduled to be held at SIUC April 28-May 1. Because of the need to resurface the Saluki courts, which could not be completed by tournament time, MVC championship site had to be changed.

The new tournament site will be at Wichita State.

Blues' coach vows to stop Savard

ST. LOUIS (AP) — If Emile "Cat" Francis has doubts over his own team's power play, none exists in regard to that of the Chicago Black Hawks.

"Davis bawb is not going to wander all over the ice unmostrusted," Francis, the coach of the St. Louis Blues, said Tuesday. "If he does, we'll never get out of the series in it."

St. Louis, which during the regular season owned a 4-1-3 edge over Chicago, trails 3-1 in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarterfinal series resuming Thursday night.

Much of the Blues' distress can, of course, be attributed to the elusive Savard. In Game 4, against an injury-depleted St. Louis defense, he scored three goals — including one while the Black Hawks were at a player advantage.

"He was too tough to stop," said Blues defenseman Ed Kea. "He's a great skater, and he tied Tom Lysiak in street traffic for him."

St. Louis, in its attempts to contain Savard and the Chicago power play, hopes to have defenseman Jack Browndchilde back on the ice following a one-game absence.

But the outlook for three Hispanics and two-and-a-half Frenchmen is less promising. Right wing Wayne Babych has a knee injury, and defensemen Guy Lapointe and left wing Perry Turnbull each has an injured leg.

"To win the Stanley Cup, you've got to be both lucky and careful," Francis said. "As far back as when I was in the NHL, but that hasn't been too good."

If the Black Hawks triumph, it will be their first advance to the National Hockey League's semifinal playoff round since 1974, when they lost to the Boston Bruins.
