Officials: Electing board bad move

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

The chancellor and the chairman of the Board of Trustees feel that electing board members rather than having them appointed by the governor would be a negative move.

A bill introduced into the Illinois House of Representatives by Rep. James McPike, D-Alton, seeks to have members of the board elected rather than appointed.

Harris Rowe, chairman of the Board of Trustees, said that having trustees elected "would clutter up the ballot."

"I don't think most people would know who the candidates for the board would be," he said.

"I think we have a very good board now and I would hate to lose them. If you get an elective board, you jeopardize both those principles. You're likely to get board members who have their own agendas."

—Lawrence Pettit

McPike said he was presented with a petition signed by 1,600 people who felt the trustees weren't responsive to them. The petitioners felt that "the people serving on the board are simply not responsive," he said.

McPike said that he doesn't know any of the board members or deal with the board, so he couldn't give a personal opinion on the board's responsiveness.

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said that if trustees were elected, "we would have no idea who we would get, for one thing."

"I think we have a very good board now and I would hate to lose them," he said "They don't represent any special interests. They're on there to represent the entire SIU. It's extremely important that a board act collectively.

"If you get an elective board, you jeopardize both those principles," Pettit said. "You're likely to get board members who have their own agendas. I'm saying that's likely, not that it's inevitable."

Pettit said that at the University of Illinois, where board members are elected, things seem to be working out well.

But the U of I alumni association nominates candidates, he said — a provision that isn't in McPike's bill. "All of us at the University would be taking a serious gamble to give up the board we now have and see what emerges out of the electoral process," Pettit said.

McPike said he feels the bill has little chance of passing. He has told that to the people who presented him with the petition, he added.

AIDS task force to prevent crisis

By Jacke Hampton
Staff Writer

The recently appointed AIDS task force will meet for the first time at 7 a.m. Friday in the Anthony Hall Balcony Room.

President John C. Guyon, in what he termed an attempt to act rather than react to a potential AIDS crisis, appointed the task force to coordinate the University's efforts to provide care, counseling, education and preventative measures.

"The question we ask ourselves is do we wait until the problem is here and then frantically look for ways of dealing with it or do we look at other places that are already dealing with the problem and learn from their mistakes," Colleen Norman, who worked with the task force in its infancy, said.

"The task force has been appointed to assess and evaluate the issues relating to AIDS on a college campus," Norman said. "It will serve also to provide coordination for the AIDS programs on campus."

Norman is currently seeking grants from the Health Service to deal with AIDS and other health issues.

Both Norman and Cathy Devera, coordinator of sexuality counseling for the Health Service's Wellness Center, said the task force will benefit by the knowledge gained in communities and campuses where the disease is more prevalent.

Dorms set to hold urgent blood drive

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Brush Towers will hold an emergency blood drive from noon to 5 p.m. Friday in the lobbies of Schneider and Mae Smith halls.

The blood drive is open to all University students, Vivian Ugent, coordinator of the Red Cross blood drive, said.

The drive has a goal of 200 pints of blood, she said.

"This drive is an emergency make-up," Ugent said. "We fell short of our goal earlier this month. The students were planning a drive for next week. But we can't wait because of unexpectedly high usage."

"More people will donate because there is a feeling of urgency," Ugent said.

The Schneider Hall Council expressed an interest in remedying the shortage, Ugent said.

Beth Joy, graduate student in higher education, said: "We knew there was a low turnout at the blood drive. We wanted to do something about the shortage."

"We promoted the (earlier) blood drive in the dorms," Joy said. "We posted fliers on bulletin boards and on the floors. But we still felt like a lot of people didn't know about the drive."

More than 100 people in both dorms have made commitments to donate, Teri Schaefer, coordinator of the Mae Smith drive, said.

Students from the residence halls also will fill volunteer positions, Ugent said.

"We are hoping some of the students who donated earlier will volunteer to help," she said. Volunteers are being asked to work for only two hours, Ugent said.

"The more convenient it is for people the more they will donate," Ugent said.

Domino's Pizza is donating 50 pizzas, she said. Each first-time donor also will receive a flashlight.

Iranians launch missile at U.S.-run oil installation

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — Iran fired a surface-to-surface missile into the Kuwaiti desert Wednesday, missing a U.S.-run oil installation, and pounded Iraqi targets after suffering heavy losses in clashes with U.S. and Iraqi forces. Oil tankers plied the gulf Wednesday despite reports of mines in the waterway and reported Iranian attacks on two tankers Tuesday. One skipper reported "deathly quiet" near the Strait of Hormuz, which Britain has warned its merchant mariners to avoid while tensions remain high.

Israel celebrates 40th anniversary amid riot

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israeli soldiers shot and killed a Palestinian man Wednesday in a riot that erupted in a Gaza Strip refugee camp despite harsh restrictions imposed to prevent violence during Israel's Independence Day celebrations. The West Bank and Gaza Strip, where 1.5 million Arabs live, were sealed off early Wednesday, Israel's Memorial Day for fallen soldiers, and are to remain closed until the end of festivities Thursday night marking the 40th anniversary of statehood, an army spokesman said.

Nicaraguan Cardinal threatens to leave talks

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo threatened Wednesday to halt his participation in peace talks between the government and U.S.-backed Contras because of "insults" against him by the Sandinista party. Radio Sandino, the official voice of the Sandinista National Liberation Front, in a broadcast Tuesday accused the Roman Catholic official of "being the intellectual director of the counter-revolution and therefore responsible for the crimes and assassinations of elderly people and children."

India wants to play role in Afghan settlement

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, asserting India has "vital stakes" in a stable Afghanistan, said Wednesday he has invited Afghan President Najibullah for talks on ensuring a strong government in Kabul following a Soviet withdrawal. Gandhi's announcement indicated India intends to play a more involved role in efforts to restore normalcy to a post-occupation Afghanistan.

White House urges Senate to OK INF treaty

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House warned the Senate Wednesday it must ratify the stalled INF treaty before President Reagan goes to the Moscow summit or jeopardize the chances of another weapons accord with the Soviets. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater also conceded chances of Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev signing a second treaty on reducing strategic arms are somewhat remote, but indicated the amount of progress made in the negotiations will likely be the highlight of the May 29-June 2 summit.

Inflation up at fastest rate in more than year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Inflation surged at the fastest rate in more than a year in March when consumer prices jumped 0.5 percent, with record price hikes for women's clothing and other apparel, the government said Wednesday. When figured on an annual basis, the March increase in the Consumer Price Index was 6.4 percent, according to the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics. Higher prices for food, beverages and transportation also contributed to accelerated inflation.

High Court upholds V.A. policy on alcoholism

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court voted 4-3 Wednesday to "phold a Veterans Administration policy defining alcoholism as "willful misconduct," rejecting a bid by two recovered alcoholics to win educational benefits under the GI Bill. The rule under attack, defining most forms of alcoholism as voluntary misconduct, was used to deny two former servicemen an extension of the 10-year deadline for using GI benefits.

AT-T rejects white supremacist proposal

DENVER (UPI) — Shareholders of American Telephone & Telegraph Wednesday overwhelmingly rejected a white supremacist group's proposal to abolish the company's affirmative action programs. But the stockholders also voted down, by an even larger margin, a resolution calling for advancement of more women and minorities in management. More than 525 million shareholders, or 91.4 percent, voted against the proposal to eliminate minority hiring practices.

Student awaits organ transplants

By Antoinette Hayes
Staff Writer

Shortness of breath and frequent fatigue are the main health problems that Dianne Levin, a heart and lung transplant candidate, now faces.

Levin, a third year law student from Desoto, is one of three Southern Illinoisians awaiting a heart and lung transplant.

She said students from the law school and graduate students in psychology have been extremely helpful by planning several fundraisers to help her with medical expenses. The group, which established the Dianne Levin Medical Fund, meets every Monday to plan fundraising events, she said.

A benefit for the fund, sponsored by the psychology department, will be held at 8 p.m. tonight at Jeremiah's restaurant and lounge.

Dan Thomsen, acting chairman of the group, said there will be live band music. Donations will be $3.

A bowling fundraiser is set for 9 p.m. Sunday at the Egyptian Sport Center. Donations will be $5.

During Springfest the group plans to raise money with a "jail," in which prominent members from the University and the community will be "held," Thomsen said. He said a person would have to "post bail" with a donation for the fund before they could be released.

Levin said the present fundraisers are to help pay for her initial evaluation.

"It cost $10,000 to have an evaluation," Levin said. "The transplant alone could cost $124,000 and medication could run about $600 a month." This does not include going to Barnes Hospital in St. Louis twice a week for treatment, she added.

Levin said she has not been placed on a waiting list for surgery, but is being monitored for any changes in her condition.

She is considered a good candidate for the transplant because her health has not deteriorated and she is still functioning well, she said.

But Levin said she doesn't know how long her condition will be stable. Eventually it will begin to get worse, she added.

"It could be a couple of week or a couple of months. You just don't know," she said.

Those wishing to give donations to the Dianne Levin Medical Fund can send them to the First National Bank and Trust in Carbondale or can contact Dan Thomsen at 536-2301.

Sigler's condition improves

The condition of lung-transplant recipient Robin Sigler improved and was upgraded from critical to serious Wednesday, Barnes Hospital spokesman John Miller said.

Sigler remains in an intensive care unit at the St. Louis hospital where the emergency surgery was performed Sunday morning, Miller said.

The lung replaced one Sigler received in November 1986. At that time she received two lungs and a heart.

The additional lung surgery Sunday was the third performed in the United States.

Sigler, 26, was admitted to the hospital Friday after she experienced breathing problems.

Sigler is a former SIUC graduate student who received a bachelors degree from the University in 1984.

Housing policy to be changed for sophomores

By Ben Bauman
Student writer and Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Sophomores no longer will have the opportunity to live in unapproved off-campus housing after the fall semester, the director of off-campus housing said.

For the past two years freshmen who have achieved a 3.0 grade point average during the fall semester were allowed to move into unapproved off-

But after fall semester, they no longer will be able to, Letha Rauback, director of off-campus housing, said.

Sophomores are normally required to live in University-approved housing, but this was one exception to the rule, she said.

"It was meant to free up a few extra spaces in residence halls," Catherine Hunter, assistant director of University Housing, said. "This is the last year we anticipate having to do that."

It also was an incentive for students to work for a high grade point average, Rauback said.

The opening of University Hall, a sophomore-approved off-campus housing facility on South Wall St., will relieve some of the overcrowding of on-campus housing, Rauback said.

University Housing still is offering fall contracts for campus housing, Hunter said. But campus housing is expected to be full this fall, she said.

Harvey Welch, vice president for student affairs, was responsible for the cancellation of the privilege. Welch said he made the decision because an exception often becomes a rule.

"The exception was never intended to be permanent," Rauback said.

Rauback said she received a list of people who are going to be sophomores in the fall and their grade point averages.

"At this point, 54 people have filled out request forms," Rauback added.

Last year 78 people took advantage of the exception.

Eligible students still have time to take advantage of the offer by filling out a request form at the off-campus housing office at Washington Square B, Rauback said.

Tax-hike campaign poorly organized

WE HATE TO say it, but we told you so. Day of Action II, despite the hype and high expectations, drew only about 15 SIU-C students to Springfield. One wonders what impression this apathetic, or more accurately, pathetic, showing will have on local legislators when it comes to voting on a tax increase.

Legislators generally are meant to represent the views of the majority of their constituents. In this case, it seems most local legislators would be inclined to vote against a tax increase, if Day of Action II is any indication of the level of local support for one.

But we don't believe support for a tax hike really is as low as Day of Action II indicates.

THE DISCREPANCY BETWEEN the number of people at Day of Action II and the presumed level of local favor for a tax hike indicates an ineffective campaign to involve SIU-C students and employees in the fight for an increase. Day of Action II has shown beyond any shadow of a doubt that 1960s-type protest marches and the like are not working.

This indicates that one of two things probably is true. Either the 1980s generation is so apathetic that no type of grassroots movement is possible, or the local organization of public support has been lacking — or more likely, misguided.

The major flaw with the SIU-C campaign for support has been the emphasis placed on Day of Action II. After a sorry showing at Day of Action I, local organizers should have realized a change in strategy was called for. In a way, they did learn from the failure of the first Day of Action.

MORE EMPHASIS WAS placed on encouraging supporters of a tax hike to write to or visit their legislators, pointing out that they plan to keep in mind each legislator's vote in the next election. Organizers also ran a voter-registration drive, recognizing that, if students don't vote, they won't be able to influence legislators.

All of these actions are logical ways to fight for a tax hike for higher education and campus organizers are to be praised for their efforts in this regard.

But the Day of Action II may prove to be the fatal flaw that brings about the failure of the cause. By placing such emphasis on a demonstration that was more or less doomed from the start, local organizers provided opponents to the tax hike a convenient opportunity to justify their opposition.

NOT ONLY WAS the basic idea of Day of Action II a bad one, but it also was scheduled on a most inopportune date. The same afternoon on which this state's young activists were meant to be parading around Springfield, SIU-C's conscientious students were to be in the polling booths.

Obviously, SIU-C organizers didn't have sole control over the scheduling of the protest. But one would think the leaders of the state's second most important university could have some influence on changing the date to avoid such a self-defeating scheduling conflict.

All in all, Day of Action II was, as expected, a waste of time. But supporters of a tax increase cannot allow this failure to discourage them. The fight for a much-needed tax hike is not over. In fact, it's just gearing up.

Letters

Birth control awareness needed

Believe it or not, unmarried males on the campus of SIU-C can get pregnant too! Well, at least they can make a big decision as to whether or not a pregnancy occurs.

Many times people say "she" is pregnant, yet fail to mention that it takes "two to tango." So, males, remember when you have sex with no provision for birth control, you may eventually cause a pregnancy. When a pregnancy occurs, people should say, "they" got pregnant, indicating there was a male involved.

Preventing unwanted births is often considered to be exclusively a female responsibility.

It is high time every male in this country faces the fact that it is our human and societal responsibility not to make an accidental child as the result of our personal pleasures. Rev. Jesse Jackson once said, "It doesn't take a man to make a baby, to takes a man to raise one."

Yes, I think we all agree that birth control can be a nuisance, especially in the heat of passion, but consider the alternatives. They include getting married while in school, paying child support, dropping out of school, or pumping gas all of your life.

One rule to remember concerning male responsibility for birth control is to never assume your partner is providing birth control unless you have a very communicative, trusting relationship. Use a condom, or better yet, take a cold shower.

Secondly, spread the word and never assume your friends are practicing birth control. Tell your friends who should be practicing birth control but aren't, and that you feel it is imperative they use it. Be gentle, and explain to them what you know about birth control.

Males, be responsible, and show concern for yourself, your girlfriends, your family, and ultimately, your potentially unwanted or unplanned baby. — Barry Hancock, graduate student, health education

Don't go Greek just to make new friends

Many freshmen get the impression that the quick and easy solution to making new friends at college is joining a fraternity or a sorority. I have nothing against fraternities and sororities, but I think that they tend to give many new students the idea that if they don't go Greek they'll be a geek.

I think joining an organization like that should not be allowed until a person's sophomore year, because by then students have gotten into the groove of things and they have enough friends so that they will not feel pressured into joining something just to make friends.

Many first year students are also not aware of the problems that come along with pledging. For instance, a lot of times people who are pledging tend to have a substantial decrease in their grade point average, as well as their bank accounts, because of all the pledging fees and the paraphernalia that pledges need to buy.

I think that it is the job of each fraternity and sorority to tell prospective pledges exactly what they are getting into. That includes the positive and negative aspects of pledging. — B. Dallas, freshman computer science.

Stupidity rules as group smokes by infant

The other day, while sitting in the Student Center, I saw something that really disturbed me. At a table nearby, a group of people was sitting, chatting, drinking coffee, and smoking. Nothing wrong with that I thought, but then I noticed that there was a baby, not more than 2 months old, laying by a small portable bed in the center of the table, and the smoke.

The adults at the table were puffing the smoke from their cigarettes directly into the face of this poor infant. What is wrong with you? I am a non-smoker and if I don't want to breath your smoke, I can get up and leave or go into the non-smoker's section, but this poor infant can't!

Would you open your baby's mouth and feed it cancer at "din-din" time? (or is it "smoke-smoke" time?) Needless to say, the baby was squinting and crying from the smoke, and I couldn't help but feel sorry for it. Your baby is smart enough to know the smoke is bad for it, why aren't you? — Scott Clark, senior, computer science.

Sensationalism may sell papers, but don't buy everything you read

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

CAVEMAN LOOKED LIKE ELVIS.

ADAM AND EVE FOUND IN ASIA......and she was a space alien, say shocked scientists.

EXCLUSIVE! FIRST PHOTO EVER OF VAMPIRE VICTIM.

These are just a few of the blockbuster headlines culled from the front pages of the Weekly World News, the best of the worst of the supermarket tabloids. And if you think those are the epitome of creativity, just read some of these leads:

"A UFO with the Confederate Stars and Bars on its belly swooped over a crowded ball park, broadcasting 'Dixie' before it vanished over the horizon!"

"Weirdo Welshman Dai Morgan would pass up a juicy steak any time for scrumptious mouthfuls of his favorite foods — slimy little worms and maggots."

"Shy little Shou-yu Yank was born a boy, but his peabrained parents made him wear dresses, play with dolls and masquerade as a girl every waking moment — to protect him from imaginary evil spirits."

Of course, papers like the Weekly World News are aberrations in the world of journalism. The headlines and stories they traffic in are so outrageously insane that they provoke laughter and tongue clucking even from the most glibbing of readers.

But the twisted brand of journalism practiced by the supermarket tabloids is not as far removed from journalistic tradition as most would like to believe. As late as the 1830s, hyperbole, distortion and outright fabrication of stories was standard practice at many of the country's largest newspapers. This form of "yellow journalism" survives today — albeit in a much subtler form — in such bastions of bombast as the New York Post.

The rise of sensationalistic journalism can be traced to the 1830s, with the birth of the penny press in New York City. The papers that constituted the penny press had the noble goal of informing and entertaining the common person cheaply.

The heyday of sensationalism came in the early 1890s, when publishing magnate William Randolph Hearst invaded New York City to do battle with another giant of journalism, Joseph Pulitzer.

The sensationalism spawned by the circulation wars came to a head in 1898, with the Spanish-American War. Tensions between Spain and the United States over the Spanish occupation of Cuba were at all-time high when the American battleship Maine exploded in Havana harbor.

Though the circumstances under which the Maine exploded were unclear at the time — and remain so to this day — the Journal trumpeted "DESTRUCTION OF THE WAR SHIP MAINE WAS THE WORK OF AN ENEMY." In a banner headline the same day, the World speculated "MAINE EXPLOSION CAUSED BY BOMB OR TORPEDO?"

When Hearst sent a reporter to cover the "war" in Cuba, the nonplused reporter allegedly telegraphed a message back to New York asking what war. Hearst is widely credited with responding, "You supply the stories, I'll supply the war."

The Journal and the World were among the largest newspapers of their time. Thus, sensationalism was the status quo. Today it is limited largely to the supermarket tabloids and dailies of ill-repute, many of them associated with Australian publisher Rupert Murdoch.

That's not to say today's mainstream press is free of sensationalism. For instance, the April 12, 1988, edition of the Weekly World News carried this headline: "Roly-poly pet owner barbecues her husband's parrot — for making fat jokes." Several days later, a story by United Press International carried news of the woman's sentencing on charges of extreme cruelty to animals.

One hopes that most of the people who pick up the Weekly World News and other papers of its ilk are doing so only out of a morbid sense of curiosity or to get a laugh. Unfortunately, this is not always the case.

For instance, I once met an elderly woman whose knowledge of international affairs was derived from the pages of The National Enquirer. She told me the Ruskies were going to take over the country "without firing a shot." I told her I always wondered where William F. Buckley got ideas for his columns.

Christian telethon prays off debts

By Darren Richardson
Staff Writer

"God help the poor," an old Scottish proverb says, "for the rich can help themselves."

Trinity Broadcast Network, headed by the Rev. Paul Crouch of Santa Ana, Calif., has added a new twist to this colloquial wisdom. Rich Christians have found a way to help themselves by praying poor contributors out of debt, a gimmick that netted more than $14 million Monday, the first day of a week-long Trinity "Praise-a-Thon."

The Praise-a-Thon really is nothing more than a raise-a-thon, a potpourri of ingenious fund-raising techniques that produce results even though their success defies reasonable explanation. Take, for example, one of Rev. Crouch's Monday night sermons, in which he told viewers, "We don't need your money, God doesn't need your money — but you need to give your money." This sort of logic could make Mr. Spock re-evaluate his entire Vulcan thought process.

One guest preacher told a story of an impoverished old woman who listened to Trinity broadcasts on her television, because the set was so old and there wasn't a station close enough for clear reception. She couldn't really afford it, but she scraped up something to give to TBN, and within a few months the woman had been "blessed with riches," according to the enthusiastic preacher.

"Amen!" Crouch exclaimed, and went on to comment that now she had enough money to buy a satellite dish. Soon after, Crouch had a sensational revelation. He seemed astounded at his sudden insight that "some people are so far in debt, what have they got to lose?"

The program had several "big moments" Monday night. The first came an hour into the broadcast when someone from Ohio called in with a $400,000 pledge to put them over the million mark for just one hour of effort. It didn't take a microscope to see the jubilation (it couldn't have been greed, could it?) on the faces of Crouch and his wife Jan, a silver-haired version of Tammy Faye Bakker who announced the contribution.

Another spine-tingling moment came when most of the cast joined hands to pray over slips with donation amounts written on them. The prayer was designed to "break the spirit of debt" in the contributors' lives and had its biblical basis in an Old Testament incident the preachers never quite satisfactorily explained.

But the ultimate highlight of the Praise-a-thon was the Crouchs' walk across the United States as they proclaimed the good news of contributions. An elevated shape of the good ol' U.S. of A., at least as big as most living rooms, complete with such landmarks as the Sears Tower, the Gateway Arch and the Statue of Liberty, adorned the elaborate stage set. What it lacked in absurdity, it made up for in gaudiness.

At one point, as he announced how much a TBN affiliate in Florida had raised, standing with his wife somewhere in the Gulf of Mexico, Crouch actually had the audacity to talk about where he was going to retire.

It would be a tough choice, he said, between Phoenix, Miami and a few more exotic locations rattled off with a little too much fluent familiarity.

Even in the wake of Jim Bakker's and Jimmy Swaggart's falls, there continues to be a high-dollar market for televangelism. Write it off as superstition, say that it's just more evidence of the crippling desperation of our age, or, if you must, look at it as the proper path to salvation. At any rate, something has gone terribly awry when rich Christians coax poor ones to give them money as God will lift their "spirits of debt."

Any evangelists worth their salt tote Bibles almost everywhere. Have any of them ever read the part where Jesus drives the money-changers from the Temple, or are they saving that for a crusade against "immoral" industries?

USO name change approved

By Susan Curtis
Staff Writer

The Undergraduate Student Organization changed its name to the Undergraduate Student Government at its meeting Wednesday night.

Students voted in favor of a name change on a referendum on the student ballot last Wednesday.

The name change was implemented to avoid confusion with the United Services Organization, a unit which entertains U.S. armed forces, and to include the word government in the name.

In other business the USG: —Ratified the results of the 1988 student elections in which Bill Hall and Larvester Gaither of the Alliance Party were elected president and vice president. The Alliance and Stand parties had 13 senators elected and the Phoenix Party had nine.

Students voted in favor of referendums to: pay a $15 per semester fee for a mass transit system; pay a $1 per semester refundable fee to support the Illinois Student Association; and have multiple polling places in student elections.

Darrell Johnson was named student trustee with 1,400 votes.

Dean: Schools need parent involvement

By Susan Curtis
Staff Writer

Students already have taken a number of positive steps in support of a tax increase, John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, told the Undergraduate Student Government Wednesday.

The student governments and the Illinois Student Association have worked hard on projects like Day of Action II, a student effort to lobby legislators for more money for higher education held last Wednesday, Jackson said.

Students need to get their parents involved by getting them to talk to or write their legislators, Jackson said.

"It's (the budget for higher education) going to get worse next year — and this year's budget is a bad one," Jackson said.

Last year students paid the price of not having a tax increase, he said, adding that it also will be more difficult to meet teaching demands without an increase.

The public has to be convinced because the legislators want to hear from the public, he said.

"It's uphill, it's a struggle, but if (a tax increase) can be done if we create the right political circumstances," Jackson said.

—Supported the Carbondale Clean-Up scheduled for Saturday.

—Seated Carole Hughes as a senator for the College of Science.

—Supported the campus-city mass transit system.

—Tabled a bill to amend the USG constitution to allow senators to be seated without having a 2.0 grade point average.

"In San Francisco and New York, AIDS is a reality," Norman said. "Here at SIU-C we still have time before the crisis hits. If nothing is done in preparation and we have our first AIDS case, it could create chaos because many people are afraid and do not know how it will affect them."

Devera and Norman have visited other universities and attended workshops to see how other schools are dealing with problems related to the AIDS crisis.

"We can learn a lot from them," Devera said. "There's no point in re-inventing what they have done."

The individuals who will serve on the Task Force represent a broad base of constituencies on campus. Norman said diversity in the task force was needed because the problem affects different groups in different ways.

"Administration, housing, students — all these groups will offer a different perspective," Norman said. "Housekeeping will have things they need to know that people working in other areas won't."

The Health Service already is processing a survey of students to determine the extent of their knowledge about AIDS and to develop baseline data about their sexual behavior. The detailed survey was mailed to a random sample of 1,250 students.

"We want to find out what the students know, what their attitudes and sexual practices are," Norman said.

Devera said that the survey should eliminate some of the guess work in assessing the students' needs.

"With the survey, the task force won't have to speculate on what the University community knows and does," she said. "This will help us to develop programs that deal with prevention and education. Policies will be developed for dealing with the medical, legal, racial and ethical issues related to the occurrence of AIDS on the campus."

There are a number of groups already working on the AIDS program. The Counseling Center of the Wellness Center has a People Living with AIDS support group. The Jackson County Health Department offers AIDS antibody testing and coordinates the Southern Illinois AIDS task force.

The Student Health Advocates are developing an AIDS workshop to present to students in the residence halls. The Wellness Center has established an AIDS resource library.

"There are several programs in place but a problem of this magnitude and complexity requires a coordinated effort," Devera said. "We want to stress prevention and education. It doesn't have to become a crisis before people change their lifestyles."

said, and his body was found near a "cruising" area for gay men.

"He went to the bar (II Hearts, Inc.) and occasionally to picnics, but he wasn't active in GLPU," Rich Backstrom, GLPU director, said.

Michael Botkin, GLPU Pride Line director, characterized Miley as "in the closet. I'm not sure if his parents knew (he was gay)."

Rocky Comfort Road runs perpendicular to Crab Orchard Road, a "cruising" place for gay men, Botkin said.

"From Crab Orchard Road, you can either go towards civilization on Route 13, or into nowhere on Rocky Comfort Road," Botkin said. "It indicates to me that he met somebody there (on Crab Orchard Road) and they took him along the road away from Carbondale."

Botkin said he did not think the murderer was a member of the gay community.

Woman faces sentencing for murder of her sister

By Dana DeBeaumont
Staff Writer

A Murphysboro woman convicted of armed violence and the murder of her sister last September will be sentenced at 9:30 a.m. today in the Murphysboro Courthouse.

Dianne Drakeford, 31, will be sentenced for armed violence against Ellouise Burton, a class X felony punishable with a minimum prison sentence of six years and a maximum of 30 years.

The sentencing originally was scheduled for Wednesday morning. But after hearing sentence pleas from both sides, Judge William Lewis said he needed time to review the evidence.

"I need to consider everything so that there are no hasty decisions," Lewis said.

Drakeford told the court, "I am very sorry. I love my kids and miss them more than anything. I want to teach them better than the way I came."

Drakeford said that she was an alcoholic and that she has been attending Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

"Maybe if I hadn't been drinking, it (the murder of Burton) might not have never happened," she said.

"Drinking is not everything in your life, but I hate that I had to hear it this way."

Drakeford said, crying, that she wished she had had someone to tell her the things she wants to teach her children.

Public defender Robert Van Derhoff asked the judge to dismiss Drakeford's armed violence conviction because, he said, armed violence took place as part of the second-degree murder and should not be considered a separate act.

It is a "conviction which cannot stand and ought not stand," Van Derhoff said.

But State's Attorney John Clemons said that the conviction arose from one act and that Drakeford must be sentenced on the greater offense, which is armed violence.

Second-degree murder is a class I felony, punishable with a minimum prison sentence of four years and a maximum sentence of 15 years, whereas armed violence is a class X felony.

Judge Lewis told the court that he had to be very cautious about dismissing convictions because "if it (the charge) came back for retrial, the state could be barred from retrying the charge."

He refused to dismiss the charge, saying: "Any time you use a weapon, it increases the penalty being involved. You can have aggravated battery without a weapon."

Drakeford stabbed Burton with a knife following an argument outside the Palms tavern on North Washington Street in Carbondale. Burton died the next morning at Memorial Hospital of complications related to the stab wound.

Drakeford is being held in the Jackson County Jail. After sentencing, she will be taken to the Dwight Correctional Center.

Drakeford's case is the first first-degree murder conviction sought by Clemons under a law, passed in 1987, that states second-degree murder is differentiated from first-degree murder through consideration of such mitigating circumstances as intent or malice.

Lewis said the Supreme Court needs to determine the definition of murder with mitigating circumstances.

Van Derhoff has said he will appeal the conviction because the statute is unconstitutional.

Dance program 'very minimal' after budget cuts hit department

By Dana Schulte
Staff Writer

Budget scissors have cut the dance program, leaving only general education classes and some beginning courses in the formerly accredited department.

"We have a very minimal dance program," Donna Wilson, assistant professor of physical education, said.

Last year, the major and minor in dance were cut and one faculty member was lost to the 2-percent plan, she said.

"There's less of everything," she said. Wilson is the only instructor left in the dance program.

"I am finishing and completing the majors that were already in progress," Wilson said. Two graduate students are left in the dance department.

Limited classes are a problem for beginning students, she said, because there are no classes to help them improve and advance.

"Beginning students who come in and audition for a performance and don't get it can't take classes to learn to get better," Wilson said. "In order to be in a production, students have to come with dance skills, because they won't be able to learn those skills on campus."

Gina Cesari, senior dance minor, said she considered a double major in dance and math education, but the dance major was cut before she made up her mind.

"A lot of dancers would've liked to have taken some of the courses even though they weren't majoring in dance," Cesari said.

Some of her minor classes also were cut, she added.

"I'm getting my minor without having to take all the classes I should — just to get me out of the way," Cesari said. "They waived my requirements. I'd rather have taken the classes and gotten the experience."

Productions also have been cut, because only one instructor and two graduate students are left in the department, Wilson said.

Before the budget cuts, the dance department had two instructors, three graduate students and five people directing and doing choreography, she said.

"We used to do more student concerts, but that was before I came," Wilson said. The department also had faculty concerts each year, she said.

Now the dance department presents concerts by the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theatre, a student organization, each semester. These are the only concerts the department offers.

"We don't have input from several people and I can only do so much," Wilson said.

The dance company has had problems finding places to perform because they used to perform in the Pulliam auditorium, but it is under renovation, Wilson said.

"We don't have a space to rehearse. We get one in here and there in the gym and recreation center," she said.

After renovation is completed, the Pulliam auditorium will be replaced with classrooms and a dance studio. "We will no longer have a performing space," Wilson said.

Last year, the dance department asked the theater department to incorporate dance into their productions, but the theater department wasn't interested, Wilson said.

"We did perform in McLeod (theater) last year, but this year we were told that they didn't have any money to guest us."

But the lack of places to perform won't stop the dance company, Wilson said.

"As long as they are interested in doing a performance, they will," she said.

Kathy Geis, teaching assistant and dance major, said the cuts have created some problems for her, but have had some positive aspects, too.

"I probably wouldn't have gotten my assistantship if they had all the faculty," she said. "The assistantship helped me get the things I wanted."

She said the dance department has been "bending over backwards" to see that she gets the things she needs.

"Everyone is just trying real hard to pull through," Geis said. "There are a lot of students here who really enjoy dancing and are making every effort to continue doing that."

Shuttle booster test a success

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (UPI) — A redesigned full-scale shuttle booster featuring unprecedented built-in defects was fired Wednesday in an apparently successful ground test.

The test marked the third of five major firings required before the first post-Challenger flight.

"It's a happy day for a lot of people," said Toyce Mitchell, a top NASA booster engineer. "We're pleased to have this test behind us."

Heralded by a wailing siren, the 126-foot rocket, loaded with 1.1 million pounds of solid propellant and anchored on its side in a massive test stand, roared to life at 11 a.m. MDT under a cloudy sky at Morton Thiokol Inc.'s rocket plant in the high Utah desert north of Salt Lake City.

"Five, four, three, two, one, fire!" called out Thiokol test

About 1,500 reporters, spectators and school children on hand for the test broke out in cheers and applause while a small herd of cattle near the firing stand "ran like hell" when the rocket roared to life.

conductor Roger Williams as the countdown hit zero.

With an instant explosion of fire and sound, a 600-foot tongue of incandescent flame shot out of the giant rocket's nozzle, shattering the desert calm with a crackling roar and creating a churning column of dirty brown exhaust visible for miles.

About 1,500 reporters, spectators and school children on hand for the test broke out in cheers and applause while a small herd of cattle near the firing stand "ran like hell" when the rocket roared to life, according to one observer.

The firing marked the third in a series of five full-scale booster tests that are required before the shuttle Discovery blasts off in August on the first post-Challenger flight.

It also marked the first time deliberate flaws were built into a full-size solid-fuel rocket to prove redesigned O-ring seals can tolerate the kinds of manufacturing problems that might escape normal quality control procedures.

"It's like finally winning the quarter finals in the NCAA (basketball tournament)," said Alan McDonald, a vice president with booster-maker Morton Thiokol Inc. "It's kind of a sudden death. We've got a victory here (but) we've got two more to go for the championship."

Both McDonald and Mitchell cautioned that detailed results of Wednesday's test will not be available for several days or more when engineers complete internal inspections before taking the giant rocket apart for an exhaustive analysis.

Southern Illinois dance troupe to perform 'expresso' at Quigley

By Dena Schulte
Staff Writer

The Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theatre will present "Dance Expresso" at 7 p.m. Friday in Quigley Auditorium.

"Dance Expresso" consists of five student-choreographed dance pieces with a combination of jazz and modern dance. Donna Wilson, assistant professor of physical education, said.

One dance piece, "Liquid Spirals," uses rolling, spinning and floating movements, inspired by the movements of balloons.

"Ying Yang" is a quick-paced jazz number which explores the facets of human nature.

Another piece, "Need You Tonight" is a quick jazz and modern dance routine.

"Sea Urchins Dancing Like Cranes" contrasts several movements with surprising results, Wilson said.

This is the dance theatre's second performance this year and it promises to be different, she said.

"This semester all the pieces are premieres," Wilson said.

"Most pieces are new; there are different dances."

Another difference in the concert this semester, Wilson said, is that it will be performed in Quigley. Previously, the concerts were held in Pulliam, but the building is being renovated.

About 30 students will perform in "Dance Expresso," she said.

Most of the students are undergraduates, she added. Some dance as an extracurricular activity while others receive credit for their performance, she said.

Buffet, party ends Africa Week

By Amy Gaubatz
Staff Writer

Africa Week, held to celebrate African cultures, will close Saturday with a buffet and dance party.

The week, sponsored by the African Student Association, is being held to "raise the consciousness of people and to learn first-hand about Africa from African Students." No No Makhudu, secretary of the association, said.

A presentation on African science and technology, will be given by Parfait Likibi, a graduate student in chemistry, at 7 p.m. Friday in the Student Center Video Lounge.

An African buffet, speech and awards ceremony will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday in Quigley Hall lounge.

Food from 20 African countries will be featured at the buffet. A speech about the relationships and relations between Afro-Americans and Africans will be given by Luke Tripp, African Student Association faculty adviser.

Certificates for distinguished service will be awarded to association members during the ceremony.

A dance party, featuring African music, will be held from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday at the Evergreen Terrace Area Office Activity Room.

Tickets for the buffet are $4 in advance or $5 at the door. For advanced tickets, call 528-3049. Tickets for the dance party are $1 and can be bought at the door.

Champaign-based band hits the top of request charts

By Dena Schulte
Staff Writer

After the release two weeks ago of their second album, "Hey Judester," the Champaign-based band Digits is holding strong at the top of the request charts at WDB radio.

"We got requests for it as soon as people knew it was coming out," Dale Gardner, WDB programming director, said.

Digits will be playing on April 28 at II Hearts, 213 E. Main St.

"Hey Judester" also is hitting the college national rock-pool chart, David Lamdis, Digits artist and spokesman, said. The album is at number 36 on the chart, Lamdis said.

About 3,000 copies of "Hey Judester" were pressed for release, about 2,000 more than were pressed for their first album, "Fizzjob," he said. The album is being put out by Touch and Go records of Chicago.

"Fizzjob was put out by us. We had no record company backing," Lamdis said. "We pressed 600 and they were bought up immediately." "Fizzjob" received good reviews, but didn't make the college rock chart because there were so few available, he added.

Later the three-man group was persuaded by a record distributor in California to press another 400 copies of "Fizzjob," Lamdis said.

"The first album was made to attract attention. It was an experiment to get people to hear us," he said.

Touch and Go decided to back "Hey Judester" after Steve Labini, the guitarist for Big Black took an interest in Digits and wanted to press the group's second album under his own label, Ruthless, Lamdis said.

Encouraged by the interest,

Digits called Touch and Go on a long shot, he said.

"They were told they (Touch and Go) were all booked up and wouldn't put out anything unless something really floored them," Lamdis said.

About three weeks later, Touch and Go decided to press "Hey Judester," he said.

"This album was done in about 24 hours," Lamdis said. "The first album was done in only 12."

The sound quality on "Hey Judester" is much better than on "Fizzjob." It also is more diverse, including some piano, he said.

But, "It's still a rock 'n' roll album," Lamdis added.

Gardner said most students know Digits because they have heard the band in concert.

Jagger sued by musician

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (UPI) — Rolling Stone Mick Jagger Wednesday defended the originality of his song "Just Another Night," which a little-known reggae musician claims was copied from a composition he wrote in 1979.

"My credibility is on the line," Jagger, 43, said angrily outside a federal courthouse where a jury is hearing a copyright infringement suit filed against the Stones' lead singer by Bronx reggae artist Patrick Alley.

Alley, 37, claims his earlier tune was the same as a song Jagger recorded on his 1985 album, "She's The Boss." He is suing Jagger and CBS Records for the estimated $6 million in profits from the album.

He testified earlier that he recorded his song in 1979 and later distributed it to radio stations. It sold just 28,000 copies.

During the trial Wednesday, Michael White, chairman of the music theory department at Manhattan's Julliard School, testified in Jagger's defense, pointing to differences in the transcripts of the two songs.

"Any two songs in the world will have similarities," White testified, prompting U.S. District Court Judge Gerard Goettel to ask about the effect of using the same drummer on both recordings.

"With the combination of words, beat and the same drummer on both recordings, can you find the similarity?" asked Goettel.

White replied that any similarity would be casual.

He disputed testimony from another Julliard music expert, who on Tuesday compared the songs' notes, rhythms and chord structures and said, "I think they are virtually identical."

"She's The Boss," which sold 2 million copies, was the first solo album by the Rolling Stones' lead singer.

Dukakis, Jackson call for focus on winning

By United Press International

Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, the undisputed Democratic front-runner, and Jesse Jackson urged their party Wednesday to rise above the political slings and arrows of the New York campaign and focus on recapturing the White House.

The candidates used the results of Tuesday's Empire State primary — Dukakis winning in a landslide, distantly followed by Jackson and Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee — to issue calls for unity as the long primary season nears an end.

Dukakis, who avoided the fractiousness of the two-week New York campaign to take the sizable victory — and the bulk of the 255 national convention delegates — returned to Boston Wednesday. At an afternoon news conference, he said his low-key style does not mean he lacks passion about people or issues.

"It may be a different way than Ronald Reagan or Lyndon Johnson, but it's the way that's worked for me," he said.

Jackson, the target of the heated rhetoric in New York, went to Philadelphia to open the week-long campaign before next Tuesday's Pennsylvania primary.

Before leaving for Philadelphia, Jackson congratulated Dukakis for running a positive campaign in New York in the midst of chaos.

Before leaving the Big Apple, he congratulated Dukakis "for running a very positive campaign in the midst of a lot of chaos and hysteria."

Gore, who found the endorsement of New York Mayor Edward Koch did him more harm than good statewide, scheduled a Thursday news conference in Washington, apparently either to withdraw or to suspend his campaign. Should he suspend his bid, he can keep the delegates he has won.

Koch, particularly in the last days before the voting, had attacked Jackson — but after the ballots were counted, the New York mayor called Dukakis and volunteered to be "a soldier in your army if you want me."

Koch said Dukakis replied, "'I want you,' so I've already enlisted."

Later, Koch acknowledged that he hurt Gore, himself and the feelings of a lot of Jackson supporters with his biting remarks — and he apologized.

"There is no question that a lot of people are angry with me," he said. "I recognize that I hurt feelings and I recognize that I could have done it better. I'm sorry if I unintentionally injured those feelings."

Vice President George Bush handily won New York's Republican primary and now needs only 157 delegates to gain the 1,139 needed to win the GOP nomination in New Orleans Aug. 15 to 18.

The latest delegate count by United Press International shows Dukakis pulling away from Jackson and now holds 914.15 delegates. Jackson has 770.20 and Gore has 405.55. Some Democratic delegates cast fractional votes.

To win the Democratic nomination at the national convention in Atlanta July 18 to 21, a candidate needs 2,081 delegates.

Pennsylvania is next on the calendar, followed May 3 with primaries in Ohio, Indiana and the District of Columbia. The grand prize is the last primary, in California, on June 7.

Victory in New York for the Massachusetts governor came without the help of his fellow governor, Mario Cuomo, who rejected months of entreaties to enter the race and then refused to endorse a candi-

Wednesday, Cuomo credited Dukakis for staying above the rancor that charged New York and later said he plans only to be a delegate in Atlanta — as a governor, he is automatically a delegate — and, "I'll do whatever the candidates ask me. I'm available."

Democrats pick last of super delegates

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democrats picked the last of their 644 potentially pivotal super delegates Wednesday and while most are uncommitted, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis now has the largest bloc — more than 100 convention votes.

The super delegates, who are free to support any candidate they want, could be a key in propelling Dukakis toward the Democratic presidential nomination especially after his convincing win in Tuesday's New York primary.

House Democrats completed the three-month super delegate selection process Wednesday, naming 207 members as automatic delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta July 18 to 21.

Most of the House delegates were tentatively picked last week and when the final list was released Wednesday, Dukakis had 29 House super delegates, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson had 17, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee had 10 and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois had 12.

On April 7, Simon suspended his presidential campaign, keeping his delegates.

The Senate finished picking its 43 super delegates Tuesday, and 13 are for Dukakis, seven for Gore and two for Simon. No senator has endorsed Jackson. Gore and Simon were picked as super delegates.

The United Press International count of delegates puts Dukakis as the overall leader with 914.15 votes, of which 104.65 — 11 percent — are super delegates. Jackson had 770.20 votes, including 39.2 super delegates.

To win the nomination, a candidate needs 2,081 votes. Some delegates cast fractional votes.

Gore has 405.55 votes, of which 11 percent, 46.5, are

The super delegates, who are free to choose any candidate they want, could by Dukakis' key to the Democratic presidential nomination.

super delegates. Gore finished a poor third in New York and has called a Thursday news conference to announce that he either is dropping out of the race or suspending his campaign. The latter option would allow Gore to keep the delegates he has won.

Simon has 183.5 delegates, of which 29.5 are super delegates.

"I think we are going to be somewhat more important in putting someone over the top," said Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, a super delegate. "It seems to me that number (the super delegates) may be the number needed."

In addition to the 251 super delegates from Congress, another 393 super delegates — Democratic governors, members of the Democratic National Committee and five former high-ranking elected officials — were appointed Jan. 15.

Candidates heavily courted those super delegates and among them, the vote count is Dukakis 62.65, Gore 29.55, Jackson 22.2, Simon 15.5 and 264.1 uncommitted.

Of the total, the 424 now-uncommitted super delegates could play a crucial role in deciding who gets the Democratic nomination if, after the primaries end June 7, no candidate has enough delegates to claim the prize.

While Dukakis won a solid victory in New York, some lawmakers said the victory would have little impact on super delegates.

Gore to give decision

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, who finished a distant third in New York's Democratic primary, conferred Wednesday with advisers Wednesday to determine whether to withdraw or suspend his White House bid.

The senator was scheduled to attend an Austin, Texas, fundraiser Wednesday night but he also set a news conference for today in Washington to announce his plans.

Aides said Gore, 40, was telephoning colleagues and supporters, and indications were that he likely would leave the race. A staff meeting was scheduled for Wednesday afternoon at Gore's campaign headquarters.

A Gore campaign worker said: "He said dress nice and bring your resume."

Richard Lodge, chairman of the Tennessee Democratic Party said Gore's campaign had "every chance to show off its candidate" but came up short. He said Tennessee Gov. Ned McWherter's advice to Gore to drop out was "laying the groundwork" for Gore's announcement today.

Gore conferred with Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., but the Heflin declined to say what advice he gave Gore in their 10-minute telephone chat.

The senator from Tennessee was undecided about his plans when he talked Sen. Harry Reid, D-Nev., Wednesday morning, aides in Reid's office said.

Alcohol abuse still debated

Scientists divided over its causes

By United Press International

Although alcoholism has been studied for centuries, scientists still are divided over whether it should be considered a disease and how much influence alcoholics have over their addiction.

"There's a real division in the scientific community," Dr. Morris Chafetz, president of the Health Education Foundation in Washington, D.C. and founding director of the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, said. "This question is so important because one of the things we're grappling with is, 'What part of our lives will personal responsibility play?'"

Among the evidence scientists cite in support of the argument that alcohol is a disease are studies that show alcoholism tends to run in families. Other studies also have found brains of alcoholics appear to have different biochemical reactions and brain wave activity compared to those who are not addicted to alcohol. This indicates that their bodies respond differently to alcohol.

But researchers on the other side argue that no gene has been identified as the cause of alcoholism and alcoholics can be found with no family history of the problem.

Similar arguments can be made for the physiological changes that have been found among alcoholics: Some alcoholics don't have them and they may simply reflect the results of chronic alcohol use.

Many researchers maintain more of a middle ground, saying alcoholism is probably the result of a variety of factors working in concert, including genetic predisposition and environmental influences.

The question of whether alcoholism is a disease and how much control alcoholics have over their drinking is important for developing the best ways to prevent and treat the addiction, researchers say.

Defining it as a disease also alleviates the stigma that has long been attached to alcoholism and increases the likelihood alcoholics will be able to get treatment, they say.

On the other side of the coin, some argue that calling alcoholism a disease frees alcoholics from having to take responsibility for their drinking.

Chafetz, while disagreeing that alcoholism fits the classical definition of a disease, nonetheless considers alcoholics as "sick" and in need of care.

"I don't think alcoholism is a disease," he said. "But I'm not saying they are not sick people. I think they use alcohol as a method to deal with pain in life, whether it is physical pain, psychological pain or sociological pain."

Study: Children held in hospitals too long, face possible dangers

BOSTON (UPI) — Children are kept in the hospital about 20 percent longer than necessary, increasing the cost of their care and the danger they will develop hospital-related complications, a new study concluded Wednesday.

In the first study of its kind, Dr. Kathi J. Kemper of the Yale University School of Medicine evaluated the records of children hospitalized at the University of Wisconsin Hospital in Madison from July 1982 to July 1983.

Of the 1,098 patient days evaluated, 21.4 percent were found to be unnecessary, Kemper reported in The New England Journal of Medicine.

"I conclude that there is a substantial rate of inappropriate hospital use in pediatrics," Kemper wrote.

The findings illustrate the need to increase insurance coverage for out-of-hospital expenses and to develop better services, such as outpatient treatment centers and day care, to reduce the amount of inappropriate hospital use by children, Kemper said.

Fifty-four percent of the inappropriate hospital days could have been eliminated had outpatient services been more available and better used, she said.

One-quarter of the inap-

The findings illustrate the need to increase insurance coverage for out-of-hospital expenses and to develop better services, such as outpatient treatment centers and day care, to reduce the amount of inappropriate hospital use by children.

propriate hospital days fell on the day of discharge. Of these patients, almost 20 percent had been cleared for discharge the day before, indicating they were waiting for transportation home.

"We could probably save a lot of the money we're spending on inpatient services right now. If somebody stays in the hospital an extra day because the parent can't pick up the child that day... the hospital is a very expensive baby sitter," she said in a telephone interview.

Kemper noted that the longer people stay in the hospital the greater the chances are that they will acquire an infection or experience some other type of complication.

"It's not only important for saving money. Hospitals are not the greatest place in the world to be. There are certain risks to being there," she said. Kemper said she was surprised that most of the inappropriate hospital days occurred during short hospitalizations. That finding indicates current cost-containment efforts would be ineffective.

Other researchers have found that hospitals often are used inappropriately. But Kemper said her study is the first to look only at children. Her findings are consistent with those produced by studies of adults, she said.

Kemper reviewed medical charts for all patients 18 or younger listed on the computerized hospital roster on every 10th day from July 3, 1982, to June 28, 1983. Hospitalization was considered unnecessary if the treatment that was received could have been provided outside the hospital.

Doctors: Don't crack neck

BOSTON (UPI) — Neck-cracking, an activity similar to knuckle-cracking but performed to ease discomfort, apparently can cause permanent nerve damage, doctors warned Wednesday.

Drs. Kevin R. Nelson and Phillip Tibbs of the University of Kentucky College of Medicine in Lexington said they treated a 20-year-old college student who apparently suffered damage to a shoulder nerve by cracking his neck.

The student apparently stretched a nerve to his right shoulder, causing him to experience permanent weakness in the muscles in that shoulder, the doctors wrote in a letter published in The New England Journal of Medicine.

Although the weakness is not seriously disabling, it does cause the student's shoulder blade on that side of his body to stick out somewhat and has left him with less dexterity and control, Tibbs said.

"He's still a healthy young man, but obviously has some limitations and weakness in his shoulder," Tibbs said in a telephone interview. "With swimming he would not have as much dexterity in the movement."

"The motivation for this activity is unclear, but participants relate a vague sense of discomfort in the neck that is relieved by forceful lateral flexion. Neck cracking may be related to the more common knuckle cracking."

People crack their necks by leaning their heads forward and twisting their necks, causing a popping sound at the base of their neck, Tibbs said.

IRS wins case with PTL, Bakker wants to pay debt

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Backers of disgraced PTL founder Jim Bakker let a bankruptcy judge know Wednesday they want him reinstated to the ministry he lost in a sex scandal, and the Internal Revenue Service won a new round in its bid to revoke PTL's tax-exempt status.

As about a dozen Bakker supporters waited for a bankruptcy court hearing to begin, the 4th U.S. District Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., ruled in favor of IRS efforts to revoke PTL's tax-exempt status and assess it $55 million in back taxes.

But PTL trustee David Clark said the appeals court decision will not necessarily be the last blow for PTL in its fight with the IRS.

"It's only a setback if the IRS takes action," he said as he entered the bankruptcy court for a hearing on PTL.

Clark's lawyer, R. Bradford Leggett, of Winston-Salem, N.C., said PTL's tax-exempt status is still intact but if it does lose the battle with the IRS, it will pursue other remedies.

"We are considering taking it to the Court of Claims in Washington," he said. "If (PTL) would retain certain features of tax exemption pending the action of the claims court. If the IRS revokes the tax exemption, our option would be to institute an action with the Court of Claims to retain most of the features we now enjoy."

Meanwhile, the Bakker supporters, wearing buttons that read "Welcome Back Jim and Tammy," filed quietly into an afternoon court session, waiting for the chance to make their cause known to U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Rufus Reynolds.

Deeply in debt — up to $125 million, according Reynolds — PTL has struggled to survive ever since Bakker was deposed last year in a sex scandal.

Bakker, in a letter to the judge Tuesday, offered to return to raise funds to pay off the debt that is siphoning off PTL's lifeblood.

There has been no word from Reynolds whether that is possible, but Bakker supporters — including his brother — said they attended the hearing to make their wishes known.

"We want the judge to know that only Jim can save PTL," said Norm Bakker. "We're going to be there."

"We have waited as many leaders have had a chance to do their best to run PTL," said Bakker.

Survey: American consumers prefer purchasing U.S. goods

NEW YORK (UPI) — Luxury cars, appliances and clothes tagged "Made in the USA" are more popular with American buyers than their European and Japanese-made counterparts, especially among Midwesterners, a survey released Wednesday showed.

The survey conducted by the Roper Organization for the weekly USA Weekend reported that a majority of Americans preferred products made at home in seven of 12 categories.

Overall, American-made home appliances were best-received with 86 percent of the respondents giving them top marks, and telephone equipment manufactured in the United States won a vote of confidence from 72 percent.

Sixty-one percent said they preferred moderate-priced clothes tagged with the label

"Made in the USA;" 55 percent wanted American-made luxury cars; and Yankee beer was tops with 50 percent.

American-made computers were favored over those from Japan — 52 percent of the respondents said they preferred American main-frame computers and 51 percent liked personal computers made at home.

SUI-C art student, Susan Kress, will show her thesis exhibits of her work in an exhibit at University Museum. The works of two other master's students also will be exhibited.

School of Art will present thesis exhibits at Museum

Three graduate students in the School of Art will present thesis exhibits of their work Thursday through April 28 at the University Museum in Faner Hall.

Exhibiting will be Susan Kress, Yih-Wen Kuo and Richard Kryczka.

Kress' work, "Stories," is a presentation of mixed media paintings and books, utilizing paint, wood, handmade paper, plastic and metal.

The exhibit will feature recent works of Kress' observations of contemporary life. Her work is a collage of relationships through color, patterns and repeated images and objects.

"Nothing is ever what it seems," Kress said. "Stories" is about the overwhelming amount of stimuli, subliminal and obvious, all around us that is largely ignored."

Kress currently has work being displayed in New York, Illinois, Indiana and Costa Rica. She plans to go to Mexico City this year as an artist-in-residence.

Kuo will exhibit ceramic works, which are a culmination of three years of study in the School of Art.

Kuo said that his "ceramic works are reminiscent of architectural structures and combine Eastern and contemporary aesthetics.

"Eastern influences are evident in the simplicity of the forms while contemporary tones show themselves through the use of Architectural devices," he said. "The two aesthetic elements, united by the unassuming glazes, give the forms a mysterious timelessness."

Kuo received merit awards for work exhibited at the Paducah Art Guild this year and at the 1987 Mid-States Art Show at the Evansville Museum of Arts and Sciences in Indiana.

Kryczka will exhibit drawings entitled "Greasy Spoons and Filthy Forks." The exhibit focuses on diners and small restaurants and illustrates the lifestyle of the lower-class, while at the same time glorifying the nostalgic bygone times when diners first opened and were frequented by more affluent groups.

Kryczka currently is teaching at the American Academy of Art in Chicago and continues to exhibit his work regionally and nationally.

A public reception for the artist will be held at 7 p.m. Friday at the museum. Museum hours are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Sunday. The exhibit is free to the public.

Hijackers free hostages then flee from site

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI) — The hijackers of a Kuwaiti jet who killed two people during a 16-day standoff were allowed to slip away Wednesday — possibly to Beirut — after releasing their remaining 31 hostages.

"We thank God that we are safe now and thank the Algerian government," said a hostage who gave his name as Ali, a Kuwaiti fireman among the waving captives who streamed down the steps of the Boeing 747 onto the runway about 6 a.m. Wednesday.

The Iraqi pilot, Capt. Subhi Younis, said all 31 on board — including three members of the Kuwaiti royal family — were freed after Algerian negotiators wore down the sky pirates on the 16th day of the terror odyssey that took the aircraft from Mashhad, Iran, to Larnaca, Cyprus, where two passengers were killed, and then to Algiers' Houari Boumediene Airport.

Before releasing the hostages, the hijackers issued a statement vowing not to give up their quest to win freedom for 17 terrorists jailed in Kuwait for bombing the U.S. and French embassies in 1983.

"We have a just cause. Our efforts will continue to release our brothers in Kuwait," they said.

A senior Kuwaiti official said Kuwait offered no concessions to the hijackers.

Kuwait sources close to a Kuwaiti delegation in Algiers said the sky pirates were "flown out to an undisclosed destination" aboard a special plane provided for under an Algerian guarantee of safe passage.

The hijackers, who com-

U.S. says hijacker is suspected of killing American in 1985

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The State Department said Wednesday it has indications that one of the Muslim hijackers of a Kuwait Airways jet was involved in the killing of a U.S. Navy seaman in the 1985 TWA hijacking.

Hassan Izz-al-din was identified as the suspect and is under an existing U.S. arrest warrant, department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley told reporters.

"We are looking for indications that the hijackers and murderers of two innocent air travelers (in the Kuwait Airways hijacking) will be prosecuted," said Oakley.

The hijackers of the Kuwaiti jet who killed two people during a 16-day standoff were allowed to slip away from Algeria Wednesday, possibly to Beirut, after releasing their remaining 31 hostages.

Oakley said the administration had no information about the arrangements under which the hijackers freed their hostages, but a senior Kuwaiti official said Kuwait did not release 17 jailed terrorists as the hijackers demanded.

Oakley at first conceded, "We don't know where the hijackers are" but then declined any specific details on whether the United States was aware of the hijackers' whereabouts.

"If the hijackers are freed, we will be very disappointed," she said. "We will not rest in our efforts to bring them to justice wherever they are."

Oakley said it is difficult to know the identities of the hijackers but "we're inclined to believe" they are members of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah or Party of God. She also said "we have some indications" that among them was Izz-al-din.

"He was directly involved in the murder of Robert Dean Stethem aboard TWA 847 and we want him brought to justice," she said. "As long as he is free there is a real and considerable risk that he will murder again, as he may have done in this case."

Oakley said the administration is "pleased and delighted" that the hostages have been freed but offered no direct expression of gratitude to Algeria, which helped negotiate the deal.

Secretary of State George Shultz, in Helsinki on his way to pre-summit meetings in Moscow, said, "We don't like to see hijackers and murderers go off free."

The administration is on guard for any increase in terrorist attacks in the wake of the military confrontation with Iran in the Persian Gulf on Monday.

"From our standpoint, these people are first hijackers and that is a violation of international agreements and conventions and second, clearly are murderers and so from the standpoint of the international community, we don't like to see hijackers and murderers go off free," he said.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said, "We welcome the freeing of the remaining hostages," but expressed concern the hijackers might go un punished.

"They apparently disappeared in the middle of the night," he said.

In Kuwait, hundreds of jubilant motorists jammed streets, honking horns and flashing "V" victory signs to celebrate the end of the ordeal.

Among the freed hostages were three members of the Kuwaiti royal family — Prince Fahled Al Sabah, 33; and his sisters, Princess Anwar, 20, and Princess Ebtesam, 23. Algerian and Kuwait officials whisked the three away to a hospital right after they stepped off the plane.

The other 21 hostages and seven crewmembers, mostly looking surprisingly unruffled except for the dark circles around their eyes, said they were kept in a darkened cabin for most of the drama including during the slaying of two Kuwaiti men at Larnaca, Cyprus.

"With the engines running at times and being within the cabin, it's hard to bear," Younis said. Younis said he was held in the mid-section of the airplane with the other hostages.

mandered Kuwait Airways Flight 422 enroute from Bangkok to Kuwait with 112 people on board April 5, came out of the jetliner at about the same time the hostages were released and were taken away by Algerian officials, the sources said.

The sources did not say where the gunmen were taken. But diplomatic sources said the most-likely destination was west Beirut, headquarters of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah (Party of God) Shiite Muslim militia. The hijackers were believed to be affiliated with Hezbollah.

The state-run Kuwait News Agency, KUNA, said Algerian Foreign Minister Ahmad Taleb Al-Ibrahimi boarded the plane late Tuesday and negotiated a safe passage to Lebanon or Iran for the nine hijackers if they released the remaining hostages.

In Helsinki, Finland, Secretary of State George Shultz said the United States government was not pleased to see the hijackers leave Algeria, the key party in bringing about the release of 52 American hostages held by Iran for 444 days after the U.S. Embassy was seized in November 1979.

Kuwait didn't yield to hijackers — official

KUWAIT (UPI) — Kuwait made no concessions to the hijackers of a Kuwait Airways Boeing 747 to persuade them to release all their hostages, ending 16 days of terror, a senior Kuwaiti official said Wednesday.

"Kuwait has not offered any concessions whatsoever to the hijackers," the official, who requested anonymity, told United Press International.

The official said the hijackers of the Kuwaiti jumbo jet had surrendered to the Algerian authorities in return for a pledge of safe passage to an unspecified destination.

The state-run Kuwait News Agency KUNA said Algerian Foreign Minister Ahmad Taleb Al-Ibrahimi met with the hijackers late Tuesday and negotiated a safe passage to Lebanon or Iran for the hijackers if they released all the remaining hostages.

KUNA, quoting informed sources in Algiers, said the hijackers left the plane Wednesday in two batches. "The first batch was five hijackers, the second four," indicating there were a total of nine hijackers.

News of the release of the remaining 31 hostages aboard the Boeing 747 was broadcast live from Algiers on state-run Kuwaiti radio and television. In Kuwait, hundreds of jubilant motorists jammed the sand-swept streets of Kuwait city, honking horns and flashing "V" victory signs to celebrate.

Tension had gripped the small oil-rich nation since the moment 16 days ago when the hijackers commandeered the jet during a non-stop flight from Thailand to Kuwait and forced it to make its first stop in an odyssey of terror at Iran's Mashhad airport.

The hijacking spanned the Mediterranean from Beirut to Cyprus then to Algeria. Two hostages were killed during the ordeal and more than 70 were released before the hijacking ended Wednesday without the air pirates achieving their demand for the release of 17 convicted terrorists jailed in Kuwait.

The tension in Kuwait eased as officials confirmed news that all the hostages had left the hijacked plane.

"The happy end of the hijacking is an expression of national unity," a senior Kuwaiti official said. "The Kuwaiti people stood as one man in achieving a noble goal ... rejecting the blackmail and terrorism of the hijackers."

"We are thrilled with joy that this plight has come to an end without giving in to the terrorists," the official said.

The Kuwaiti Cabinet expressed "deep gratitude" Wednesday to the government of Algeria for the leading role it played in ending the hijacking. The Council of Ministers also thanked the Palestine Liberation Organization, and its leader Yasser Arafat.

"The Council of Ministers stresses that this cowardly operation, along with a series of terrorist and criminal operations in our Arab world, comes with a scheme aimed at the security of the Arab nation," an official statement said.

Court employees get educational seminar

By John Mohler
Staff Writer

Cook County probation officers and court workers are participating in an educational seminar in the wilderness at Touch of Nature this week, coordinator Mike Morris said.

The seminar, which began Wednesday morning, is run by Touch of Nature's Underway Program. Participants will be taught techniques of stress management, group cooperation, group problem-solving and decision-making, Morris said.

The seminar will run through Friday afternoon.

"It will be a very full two-and-one-half days," he said.

The Underway Program is contracted by agencies to provide outdoor educational programs that combine wilderness activities with personal skills training, Morris said.

The program, which was established 10 years ago, has been contracted to train juvenile delinquents and probation officers, he said. "We can design a program to meet any needs."

"Probation officers are required to have continual educational training," Morris said. "We are contracted to provide that training."

The 10 participants in this week's seminar will participate in a variety of outdoor activities, including canoeing, rappelling, back-packing and rock climbing.

Morris said the participants also will complete obstacle courses that require both group and individual effort.

One of the courses is placed 30 to 50 feet above the ground in trees. The participants must traverse a system of ropes and cables to complete the course.

"It gets really scary," Morris said. But very few people are injured in the program, he added.

In addition to physical activities, the participants will complete courses in relaxation, deep-breathing and stretching.

"The workers will leave with enhanced self-confidence" and will work better as a cohesive unit," Morris said.

Texas to get private prisons

AUSTIN, Texas (UPD) — Gov. Bill Clements, saying Texas was "stepping toward a solution" to prison crowding, Wednesday signed contracts with a Florida company for the state's first privately built and operated prison facilities.

Charles Terrell, chairman of the Texas Board of Corrections, said the board also was close to signing an agreement with Corrections Corporation of America of Nashville for the construction of two additional 500-bed, pre-release centers in Venus and Cleveland.

"We thought we were going to be through today, but we're just not quite there yet," he said. "We don't anticipate that there will be a permanent problem, but we're not going to move before we're ready to move."

The agreement with Becon-Wackenhut Inc. of Coral Gables, Fla., calls for the construction of two, 500-bed, minimum-security, pre-release centers at Kyle and Bidgeport.

The units will be built and operated by the company for $34.79 per inmate per day — more than 10 percent less than what it would cost the state to do the job — with slight escalations over the next few years.

"This represents part of the largest private venture into prison construction, operation and management ever initiated by any state," Clements said. "Housing 1,000 prison inmates in these facilities will allow us to relieve the swelling inmate populations in county jails across Texas."

The governor said the 1,000 beds also will make room for violent offenders in higher security units, "thereby helping to guarantee that the violent criminals are, in fact, punished."

Final approval for the program came Tuesday when the state Board Review Board approved the sale of $50 million in tax-free bonds for privatization projects.

Study: Stressful situations linked to heart problems

BOSTON (UPI) — Stress caused by such tasks as public speaking and math tests can trigger heart-threatening symptoms in susceptible people, indicating stress reduction techniques may help them ward off heart attacks, researchers reported Wednesday.

In a new study involving 39 people with coronary artery disease, researchers at the Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles found that mentally stressful tasks triggered events believed to foreshadow heart attacks. These events are known as silent myocardial ischemia.

"There has always been this perception that there is some relationship between mental stress and how heart patients would do," said Dr. Alan Rozanski, who headed the study. "But the scientific evidence has been inconclusive."

When the heart disease patients in the study were asked to perform a series of mentally stressful tasks, 59 percent experienced silent myocardial ischemia, Rozanski said.

"The implication is that ischemic activity is caused by many factors, but mental stress appears to be an important factor," said Dr. Andrew P. Selwyn, an associate professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School.

"This is amenable to therapy — retraining people to take a different approach to their daytime stresses," said Selwyn, a cardiologist at the Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston.

At least 5 million Americans are estimated to suffer from coronary artery disease, which is a buildup of waxy substances inside arteries supplying blood to the heart.

The accumulation narrows arteries, increasing the chances the passageways will become blocked, cutting off blood to the heart and causing a heart attack — the nation's leading killer. Ischemia is a less severe reduction of blood flow, but can cause damage if prolonged.

Researchers had known heart disease patients were likely to experience ischemia, with or without pain, while exercising. The new findings, reported in The New England Journal of Medicine, may explain what had previously been considered "spontaneous" ischemia, and indicates heart disease patients may experience episodes of ischemia throughout the day without realizing it during periods of routine stress.

In the study, speaking in public was the task most likely to trigger ischemia. The other tasks were math and reading tests.

Mental stress probably causes ischemia by increasing the heart rate and blood pressure and possibly also by constricting blood vessels, Rozanski said.

"For hundreds of years there's been a suspicion that there's an association between stress and cardiac events, particularly heart attacks," said Dr. Myron Weisfeldt, director of cardiology at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md.

He said the paper shows if a person who has coronary heart disease is put under significant stress, changes in the function of their heart can be provoked.

Study finds schools unprepared for influx of immigrant children

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The nation's public schools were unprepared for the latest wave of immigration and are being overwhelmed by more than 2 million immigrant children, a two-year study released Wednesday said.

The report, based on research and public hearings by the National Coalition of Advocates for Students, recommended a raft of reforms, including better bilingual programs, a teaching force sensitized to the cultural differences of new students and an end to immigration policies that use schools to seek out illegal aliens.

"As the nation has learned from previous periods of great migration, young immigrants contribute great energy, cultural richness, strength and maturity to the schools," the report said.

They also bring new challenges, which U.S. schools, for the most part, are not meeting well."

The report, titled "New Voices" and financed primarily by the Ford Foundation, concluded that the public education system appeared "unprepared and overwhelmed."

The challenge for educators comes in the wake of one of the largest immigration waves in the country's history, which started in the late 1960s and resulted in an estimated 15 million legal immigrants, refugees and illegal aliens.

Immigrant school-aged children whose parents came primarily from Asia, Mexico, Central and South America and the Caribbean, number between 2.1 million and 2.7 million, said the report by the Boston-based research organization, a national coalition of 23 local and regional child advocacy organizations.

While those numbers represent about 6 percent of total public school enrollment, the percentages are radically greater in some cities, including Los Angeles, New York, San Francisco, Chicago, Miami, Washington, D.C., Houston, and the Dallas Ft. Worth area where heavy concentrations of immigrants have settled.

The challenge of educating immigrant children is complicated by a number of factors, the report said.

Differences in cultures and traditions often produce a variety of misunderstandings and conflicts in schools and communities. Many school-aged immigrants also suffer trauma caused by violence in their homelands

Group to poll children

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Harris polling organization and the educational magazine company Scholastic announced Wednesday they will poll the nation's school children regularly to learn their hopes and problems.

The first study, this spring, aims to determine what today's elementary and high school kids think, value and hope for. Other projects in the pipeline will check out kids' eating habits and their use of computers.

Polster Lou Harris said surveys will document accurately and perceptively just what today's school children are like.

"We want to know what are their hopes and aspirations, their habits, their problems, and their perspectives," he said. "In short, our mission is nothing less than to fully measure and then to report about young people of all school ages."

Parents liable for truants

OAK FOREST, Ill. (UPI) — Vice Principal Chuck Barth says Oak Forest High School's decision to take parents to court when their children cut classes is making for improved attendance.

The controversial ordinance, which took effect in March 1987, recently was used for the first time. As a result, a 16-year-old girl is going to school these days, perhaps for the simple reason that her father will be on the spot if she doesn't.

Barth testified against the girl and her father last week in the Markham Branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

The sophomore, described as a chronic truant, had skipped 40 school days before she and her father were taken to court.

"She had missed 40 entire days out of about 140 so far," Barth said. "She's failing everything. I tried several things: detention, in-school suspension, out of school suspension and a warning letter to parents."

The girl pleaded guilty, and Circuit Judge Thomas W. Sherard placed her under court supervision through June 20, shortly after the school year ends. Barth said the judge could have fined the father $500 and sentenced the girl to as much as 160 hours of community service.

Barth, the school's vice principal for discipline and attendance, served notice on other truants and their parents that this won't be the last time he makes use of the ordinance.

Freshman pitcher wins 2nd player of the week award

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

Freshman Traci Furlow has been named Gateway Player of the Week for the second time this season, but this hasn't changed her outlook as an up and coming pitcher on a staff of three.

"Ultimately everything we do is for the team," Furlow said. "I want us to win every game, and I don't care if it's Lisa Robinson or Lisa Peterson or me that's on the mound."

"You can't have any conflicts on the team, or it really hurts. I support both pitchers. I wish the best for them. I want to see them do their best. That's sincere," she added.

Furlow won three games last week, including a 4-3 decision over eighth-ranked Illinois State last Saturday. The Salukis won that one by scoring three runs in the third inning and stranding Redbird runners on third base in the third and fourth innings with crucial defensive plays.

Furlow points to that victory, which put her record at 7-3, as an indication of a wholesale team effort.

"The emphasis is always on the pitcher," Furlow said. "But everybody has a place in the game. That's the main thing, you can't do it without your teammates. That includes the people on the bench. You don't know what a boost it is to hear them cheering from the dugout."

This was the fourth time this season the Salukis have won the Gateway's top weekly honor. The other two players were Theresa Smugala and Shelly Gibbs.

Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said she hasn't made it an issue for the players to pursue the award. "If you play for the team, the rewards come by themselves," she said.

Furlow has a 1.21 earned run average and four of her victories are shutouts.

When she first came to SIUC, she did not know what to expect. "To be honest, I had no idea what I was getting into. I did know that I had to prove myself," she said.

"My first goal was to start a game. Now I've set a goal to be the No. 1 pitcher. It's what I'm working toward, but I'm not there yet."

Her ultimate objective for her college career is to be the leading pitcher in the conference. "I'm going to have to work my tail off to get that. Maybe I'm setting my standards high, but I don't want to settle for No. 2."

behind victory erased the memories of a 5-2 loss in the first game.

"Coach said 'People only remember the last thing you do.'" Gaebe said. "We'll have some momentum now. We need to play well against Creighton. It would have been harder if we had gotten swept."

The Salukis play the first-place Blue Jays this weekend at home.

Eastern Illinois out hit the Salukis, 15-5, in the first game. Panther pitcher Bill Taylor, who entered the game with a 6.17 ERA, held the Salukis to three hits in six innings. Murrie pitched the seventh to earn his second save of the season.

"We were flat," Jones said. "I was down all day and I'm sure they (players) were down all day. We were fortunate to split."

Hall and Gaebe led off the game with back-to-back doubles. After Dave Wrona drove in Gaebe to put the Salukis ahead, 2-0, Taylor settled down to retire 11-straight batters.

Saluki starter David Henley (1-2) was the losing pitcher. He allowed three runs on nine hits in 3-3 innings.

Chad Metten allowed two runs the rest of the way.

Intramural track meet set for Saturday at McAndrew

The intramural track and field meet sign up deadline is at 5 p.m. today. The meet will be held Saturday, April 23, at the newly refurbished McAndrew Stadium.

Participants can enter this corec meet either as individuals or as part of a team.

The intramural softball and ultimate Frisbee teams have advanced to the playoffs.

About 70 teams have advanced to the softball playoffs, graduate assistant Jackie Skrzyd said.

The games, played in the Arena fields, start at 5, 6 and 7 p.m. respectively, during the week and from noon to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

The championship matches will be on the 27th and 28 of April.

About 10 Ultimate Frisbee teams made it to the playoffs, which started Tuesday at the Grand Avenue playfields. The championship games will be held May 2.

Deadline Friday for faculty-staff golf

The reservation deadline for the May 6 Faculty-Staff Golf Outing at Crab Orchard Golf Course is 5 p.m. Friday.

After Friday's deadline, spouses of faculty and staff will have the opportunity to sign up for any remaining openings.

The outing will feature a

Top prep signs with baseball team

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

Mark Hokanson, a pitcher on the top rated high school in Illinois, signed a national letter of intent Wednesday to play for the Salukis.

Hokanson, a 6-foot-3, 180-pound right-hander, is 3-0 this season on a Providence Catholic team. The team is 12-0 and ranked number one in the state among AA schools.

Providence Catholic is in New Lenox, a southwest suburb of Chicago.

"He's kind of a sleeper in the fact that no one thought too much about him or saw him last year," Saluki coach Itchy Jones said. "He was getting better and better as (last) year went on. Now that he suddenly started to have success, people started to move in. We were in the front door first and made a commitment to him early."

Assistant coach Kirk Champion recruited Hokanson.

Jones expects Hokanson, who throws a fastball, slider and forkball, to help the team right away.

"He may not be the ace of the staff

(but) he's going to be like a Dale Meyer or a (Rick) Shipley and get a chance to pitch," Jones said.

Hokanson said the fact that the Salukis have six senior pitchers on this season's roster played a part in his decision to come to SIU-C.

Providence coach Jaime Garcia, who also is a pitching coach in the Chicago White Sox rookie league, said Hokanson is continuing to improve.

"Mark is just beginning to understand his ability," Garcia said. "His fastball, which is above average now, will continue to improve as Mark matures. I think he is going to be an outstanding college pitcher."

Last week, the Salukis signed Du Quoin native Tim Davis, a 5-foot-10, 170-pound junior college second baseman from John A. Logan.

In his four semesters, he has batted .409, .412, .398 and now is hitting .378.

"Davis is one of the best position players to come out of Southern Illinois in some time," John A. Logan coach Jerry Halsted said. "He runs well, has good strength and is just a good all-around athlete. I think he can step right in at SIU and start."

Salukis win 1 on Gaebe's triple

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

The baseball team woke up just in time to steal the second game with two outs in the bottom of the seventh and split with Eastern Illinois Wednesday at Abe Martin Field.

The Salukis had just three hits and trailed 4-2 with two outs and nobody on base in the seventh. Pinch-hitters Rick Damico singled, and Chuck Locke reached on an error. Joe Hall then loaded the bases with a swinging bunt down the third base line.

On a 0-1 pitch, Rick Gaebe brought all three runners home with a game-winning triple down the right-field line.

"I didn't drill it or anything," Gaebe said. "It just happened to find a hole."

The Salukis won in their last chance on a hit from a player who was on his last chance earlier in the season.

"Down South, (he) wasn't hitting the ball well," Coach Itchy Jones said. "Gaebe was within one day of being sat on the bench probably for the rest of the year. We talked to him about his hitting and showed him what he was doing wrong. Rick Gaebe made the adjustment."

"He hits the ball hard, not like he did last year," Jones said. "Gaebe's probably made the biggest difference to our ballclub this year."

Gaebe's heroics gave Dale Meyer (3-0) the win in relief. Meyer held the Panthers scoreless in two innings. Starter Rick Shipley and Dale Kisten each gave up two runs.

The Salukis scored their first run without the benefit of a hit. Chuck Verschoore was hit by a pitch to lead off the third. He stole second and went to third when the catcher's throw sailed into center field. Matt Giegling brought Verschoore home with a ground out to first.

In the fifth, Dale Meyer knocked in the Salukis' second run with a base hit to score Verschoore from second.

EIU pitcher Mike Murrie (1-4) took the loss after earning a save in the first game.

SIU-C is 25-14 and Eastern Illinois is 11-18.

Dave Wrona drove in Rick Gaebe in the first game against EIU to put the Salukis ahead, 2-

0. SIU-C lost the first game 5-2, but won the second thanks to a triple by Gaebe.

Missouri-St. Louis game rescheduled

Today's Saluki baseball game against Missouri-St. Louis has been postponed and rescheduled for 2 p.m. March 15 at Abe Martin Field.

"(Missouri-St. Louis) was getting arm weary and didn't have quite enough pitchers," Saluki coach Itchy Jones said. "They called up and said they wouldn't be very respectable. We thought if they had to make a change, we'd make a change."

"It's good because it gives us another game after finals and before the (Missouri Valley) tournament," he said.

The Louisville series, which was rained out April 1-2, is rescheduled as a doubleheader for 1 p.m. April 15 at Abe Martin Field.

The Missouri Valley Tournament starts May 19 at the home field of the regular season champion.

Three sign with women's golf team

By Steven Welsh
Staff Writer

The women's golf team has signed three high school recruits, including one standout from Southern Illinois.

Gina Giacone of Benton chose SIU-C over Missouri, Kentucky and Vanderbilt. She won Illinois High School Association Regional and Sectional titles this fall and placed 15th in the IHSA Girls State Tournament.

Giacone was class valedictorian at Benton High School with a perfect 5.0 grade point average. She has not decided on a major.

Giacone's uncle, Larry Giacone, played golf at SIU-C from 1972-76. Her parents also are SIU-C graduates.

The Salukis also signed Anne Childress of Noblesville, Ind. Childress is a three-time All-Conference pick and was Noblesville High's team MVP this year.

Childress has plenty of tournament experience. She played in the 1986 Women's Western Tournament, where she qualified for the Championship Flight and the 1987 PGA Junior National Championship. She also took first at the 1986 Noblesville Mayor's Cup and was the 1985 Indianapolis Juniors Girls Champion.

Another Indiana native signing with the team is Deborah Minton of Marion. Minton was an All-Conference pick the last two years for Marion High and was a runner-up for medalist honors in the 1986 State tournament. She was named team MVP in 1987.

Tennis team faces Racers today

The men's tennis team will try to extend its winning streak to nine dual matches in a row when it takes on the Murray State Racers at 2 p.m. today at the University Tennis Courts.

The Salukis, who have not competed since whipping the University of Evansville April 12, take a record of 15-12 into today's action. SIU-C beat the Racers in Murray, Ky., earlier this spring.

SIU-C has been successful at singles so far, but has had problems with its No. 1 doubles team, Mickey Maule and Fabiano Ramos.

"It's very important that they play better than they've been playing recently," Coach Dick LeFevre said.
