Release of U.S. hostages delayed

United Press International

A pro-Iranian group said Thursday it would delay the promised release of one of three American hostages because Washington had not followed the group's demand that a key State Department official be dispatched to Syria.

The Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine had said Wednesday that it intended to free one of its captives within 48 hours provided that U.S. Assistant Secretary of State John Kelly arrived in Syria before the end of the deadline.

Bush: An American ambassador will not be deployed to Syria

"Concerning the release of an American hostage, preparations were set to be finalized, but the failure of Kelly to cooperate stumbled the process," the organization said in a hand-written statement delivered to the An-Nahar newspaper in Beirut.

"We have decided to delay the release until the situation is clarified," it said.

Secretary of State James Baker had said in Washington Wednesday that Kelly was traveling in Europe and that "the Middle East is not on his agenda."

President Bush, at a news conference in Key Largo, Fla. with French President Francois Mitterand, was asked why he had not sent the ambassador.

Bush said, "The answer is we have a perfectly capable accredited diplomat on the scene in Syria to work toward the release if it comes to that."

"The second answer is the United States does not knuckle under to demands. ... I think the U.S. position is clear: we do not meet demands."

The president admitted candidly at one point "that I can't think of anything I can say that would contribute to release of the hostages."

"We've been disappointed before, hopes raised, only to have them dashed by excessive speculation," Bush said.

Mitterand, whose country has had far more success in gaining release of French nationals, maintained the situations were "under different conditions."

"France is not in any way setting herself up as a sort of model that other people should follow," the French president said. "Because we know the United States' problem with hostages is an extremely difficult situation ... doing all that it is their duty to do without making any specific concessions in order to achieve the release of their hostages."

The Jihad statement Thursday was accompanied by a Polaroid photograph of U.S. hostage Robert Polhill, 55, looking grim-faced and defeated.

The group had attached a photograph of Polhill's American col-

NORML parades for hemp plant

By Chris Walka and Darren Richardson Staff Writers

Advocates for the reform of marijuana laws voiced support for legalization of the hemp plant Thursday during an afternoon rally in the Free Forum Area, which culminated in a parade of about 50 people marching down South Illinois Avenue to the Federal Building, 250 W. Cherry St.

The Carbondale rally, dubbed Hemp Day 1990, was a local stop on this year's national Hemp Tour. The event represented an effort to spread information about beneficial uses of the hemp plant. Speakers from the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws focused on hemp as an industrial product—not as a drug—and said the plant could be used for paper production, clothing and medicinal uses, such as the treatment of glaucoma.

"Hemp used to be used in paper production until the turn of the century," Maryann Ryan, graduate student in biology and secretary of NORML, said, "It's ridiculous to be cutting down trees that take years to grow when a hemp crop could be harvested about every four months."

She said that the Constitution was printed on hemp, and that the quality

Hartigan presents recycling plan to Unity Point School children

By Lisa Miller Staff Writer

Grade school students from Unity Point Elementary School learned the three Rs from Democratic candidate for governor Neil Hartigan Thursday.

Hartigan's three Rs—recycling, reduction and reuse—are different from the old Rs—reading, writing and arithmetic.

Hartigan took the 6th graders on a tour of the University's coal characterization lab to get his environmental message across.

He said Illinois needs an energy policy that spells out the its environmental needs and ways to pay for them.

"Illinois' environment has hit the critical state," Hartigan said. "It's time to make the tough decisions. We can either recycle now or have citizens fighting against landfills and incinerators in their communities well into the next century."

Hartigan is proposing a plan to recycle 25 percent of all material by 1994 and 50 percent by 1998.

In addition to recycling, Hartigan said Illinois needs to mobilize its current research into coal desulfurization.

"We Illinoisans are the victim of the clean air bill," Hartigan said. "Although the measures in the bill will clean up the environment, it will force many Illinois coal miners out of jobs."

Hartigan said Illinois has very high sulfur coal and many collegies and universities in the state need money to speed up their research into removing the sulfur from the coal, making it environmentally sound.

"The coal laboratories at SIU are some of the most important in the state," Hartigan said, noting that Southern Illinois coal had the highest content of sulfur in the state.

Jack Crelling, professor in geology and leader of the lab the students visited, said removing sulfur from coal was a very expensive process.

He said the sulfur can be removed from the coal chemically with scrubbers, or burned out in a fluidized combustor or removed directly from the coal before it is burned.

"We know how to get the sulfur out of the coal," Crelling said. "The real research needs to be done on how to get it out as efficiently and as cheaply as possible."

Other research conducted at the University in conjunction with the University of Illinois developed a system of desulfurizing coal through the use of ethanol.

The system, which compresses

Burris wants creation of new agency

Daily Egyptian wire services

Illinois Comptroller Roland Burris, the Democratic candidate for attorney general, announced his proposal Thursday for an environmental "super agency" that would streamline the process of cleaning the state.

Meanwhile, Burris' Republican rival, Du Page County State's Attorney Jim Ryan, held his own news conference to unveil his proposals for combatting domestic violence.

Student Center McDonald's under fire

By Richard Hund Staff Writer

Members of the Mid-America Peace Project will question a Student Center official for the second time in a week on the use of plastic foam products in the McDonald's to be built in the Student Center.

MAPP members, meeting Monday with Student Center Director John Corker, already presented their requests last Monday asking for more student input into food contract decisions as well as the restaurant's use of non-plastic foam products.

John McHale, MAPP's president, said Corker seems more committed to seeking student opinions on this topic.

"He recognized that students

MAPP to address issue for second time were concerned without (him) consulting their voice on this," he said.

Corker said he still is collecting information from McDonald's to form a better solution next Monday to MAPP's concerns.

Corker said although the recommendation to contact McDonald's was made quickly, a survey of about 250 students entering the Student Center during a building customer count on March 21 found students overwhelmingly wanted a fast food service.

A separate class project phone survey by six students also found 90 percent of students wanted a franchise, he said.

"I think overwhelmingly the need for more franchise is what the students want," Corker said.

He also said a double concern exists that McDonald's would do three times more business than H.B. Quick's currently does, which could cause three times more potential for environmental problems.

"They're speaking philosophically versus practically," Corker said, adding that environmental problems would not be solved through less business.

"The solution isn't to slow down traffic," he said. "We're trying to maximize food service hours." Hours for the restaurant would extend to 10 or 11 p.m., he said.

McHale said a big concern lies with the McDonald's use of plastic foam. He said two processes are used in making plastic foam: one uses chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) and the other uses hydrochlorofluorocarbons (HCFCs), which McDonald's now employs.

Although this process does less damage to the ozone layer, McHale said the product is not biodegradable and contributes to global warming.

"(McDonald's is) cleaning up their image before cleaning up their act," McHale said.

He said McDonald's has begun to institute the use of paper products in the Northwest, which he would like to see in Southern Illinois and across the United

Key word in 1990 NFL draft: Juniors

Kansas City Star

From redshirt junior Jeff George to real junior Keith McCants to Southern California's Junior Seau, the story of the 1990 NFL draft is "junior."

When the NFL changed its eligibility rules for the draft, 38 underclassmen scrambled to declare they were pros. And NFL scouts scattered across the country to seek information.

After two months, the juniors are playing to generally mixed reviews. The top juniors — such as George, McCants, Seau,

Colts acquire Falcons' No. 1 pick

Houston quarterback Andre Ware and linebacker Lamar Lathon, running backs Emmitt Smith of Florida and Rodney Hampton of Georgia, Pittsburgh defensive end Marc Spindler and USC safety Mark Carrier — are probably first-round picks.

At least three of the top 10 picks in the draft, which will begin on Sunday and continue Monday, are likely to be juniors. The influx of talented juniors has made this one of the strongest drafts in history through the first three rounds.

"The biggest story of this draft is the junior class," said Ernie Accorsi, executive vice president of the Cleveland Browns, who do not have a pick until the 46th of the draft. "From a talent pool it helps a team like us that doesn't have a first-round pick. It's almost thrust us into the first round as far as the caliber of athlete available. We've calculated, conservatively, that through the junior process we've moved up 12 to 14 spots."

The addition of the underclassmen to the draft hasn't come without the inherent problems of every gold strike. For the most part, these players will be younger and not as emotionally or physically prepared to step into professional football. Several of the players have played just one season, and the shortened time in which they could be scouted makes evaluation difficult.

"One of the first things you have to ask: Is this kid mature enough to step into the NFL?" said Tom Heckert, director of college scouting for the Miami Dolphins. "Some of these kids are only 20 years old, and we have to take that into consideration."

Kansas City president/general manager Carl Peterson thinks a team that drafts a junior often will be taking on a development project.

"With the vast majority of them what you are going to get is a fine raw talent, but it's going to take a

The men's track team might adhere to the philosophy that the 'second time is always a charm' Saturday at the Tyson Invitational in Fayetteville, Ark.

The Salukis recorded nine season-best times last weekend at the Hot Springs Invitational, which also was in Arkansas. The field of competition will include Illinois State, Mississippi, Oklahoma State and Arkansas.

"We had a good overall showing in Arkansas last week," coach Bill Cornell said, "and we're hoping to have an even better one this weekend. The competition there has something to do with our runners competing well."

Guy Sikora, Garrett Hines and Marlon Gallimore are scheduled to compete in the 100-meter dash preliminaries to set the field for the final race later in the day. Sikora may be a favorite in the event because he is coming off a season-best time of 10.93.

Long regarded as one of the Midwest's most prestigious track meets, the Kansas Relays will include top athletes from 55 of the nation's colleges and universities. The women's track team will be represented by 22 qualifiers who will participate Friday and Saturday in Lawrence, Kan.

"I think this will really be an outstanding meet," coach Don DeNoon said. "When you have a field that includes Big Eight schools like Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, Kansas State and Big Ten schools like Iowa and Michigan, you've got a good level of competition."

DeNoon expects a strong performance from his sprint medley relay team. Crystalla Constantinou and Nocolia Moore will open with 100-meter sprints, Theresa Lyles will run the 200-meter portion and Gateway Conference Track and Field Athlete-of-the-Week Angie Nunn will anchor the 400-meter leg of the 800-meter race.

"We should win the sprint medley relay," DeNoon said. "I do expect Nebraska to be strong, but

Cubs' personnel up middle strongest in Major Leagues

NEW YORK (UPI) — Anyone who thinks the Cubs were lucky to win the National League East last year should examine Chicago's personnel up the middle. Same goes for those who say the Mets will outclass the division.

Look what New York offers from home plate through center field.

With shortstop Shawn Dunston, second baseman Ryne Sandberg, center fielder Jerome Walton and a trio of catchers playing the middle, the Cubs can match virtually every backbone in the majors.

Even Oakland's quartet of Terry Steinbach, Dave Henderson, Walt Weiss and Lance Blankenship barely matches what the Cubs own in an area considered one measure of a team's quality.

Kansas City is too old, with 42-year-old Bob Boone behind the plate and 39-year-old Frank White at second. The Yankees bring some speed and punch, especially with second baseman Steve Sax and center fielder Roberto Kelly. Boston added Tony Pena behind the plate, with Ellis Burks in center, Marty Barrett at second and Jody Reed at short.

In St. Louis, catcher Todd Zeile looks like a candidate for NL Rookie of the Year, joining veterans Ozzie Smith, Jose Oquendo and Willie McGee to improve the Cards' middle.

Joe Carter's presence in center completes a San Diego interior that includes Benito Santiago behind the plate, Roberto Alomar at second and Garry Templeton at short. Cincinnati offers Barry Larkin at short and Eric Davis in center, with second baseman Ron Oester and catcher Joe Oliver not in their class.

As for the Mets, second baseman Gregg Jefferies could make enough errors to remove some of the edge that comes with great pitching. Center fielder Keith Miller is not even average at that position and catcher Barry Lyons has shown no aptitude for throwing out runners.

Not one of these middles can blend youth, talent and track records the way the Cubs can. Sandberg, the senior man at 29, this year set the major league record for most consecutive errorless games by an infielder. A one-time MVP, Sandberg can deliver 25-30 homers a year. He took a .285 lifetime average into 1990.

Dunston will never be the league's best shortstop but, at 27, he has become a professional. Walton, 24, won the NL Rookie of the Year Award last year and could play center for the next decade.

Behind the plate, however, is where the Cubs zoom past many clubs. In an era where quality catchers seem more rare than 400 hitters, Chicago owns three.

Even if Damon Berryhill fails to recover from shoulder surgery, then Joe Girardi (25) and Rick Wrona (26) give the Cubs a combo that has been tested through a pennant race.

Smith pleased with progress of football team during spring

SIU-C Sports Information

Saluki head football coach Bob Smith gives his team high marks for its performance in the spring season.

"This is an exceptional group," Smith said. "The attitude on our squad has been tremendous all spring. Every member of this team is moving in the right direction and has been working to improve. The fact that they have been successful makes me feel good about the 1990 season."

Smith and his assistants will direct a 50-65 play controlled scrimmage starting at 11 a.m. Saturday primarily to allow some players final opportunities to show off their advancement.

"Saturday's session will allow us to get everyone on film and provide us with material for evaluation purposes," Smith said. "Fans need to keep one thing in mind, however. We're trading film of Saturday's scrimmage with Northern Iowa, which means we'll be staying fairly vanilla on both sides of the ball."

The Salukis will not show much in the scrimmage because the team plays Northern Iowa in its season opener Sept. 1 in Cedar Falls.

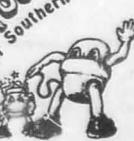

Smith still has a decision to make in deciding on his quarterback.

"Fortunately we have three proven quarterbacks in Freddie Gibson, Scott Gabbert and Brian Downey," Smith said. "Each of them have their specific strengths and any one of them can handle the job. We'll probably choose to redshirt either Gabbert or Downey, who are both juniors, so that we'll have one of them still around for the 1992 season."

All of SIU-C's quarterbacks will be in red jerseys Saturday and are untouchables as far as defenders are concerned, Smith said.

"There's just no point in hitting them," Smith said. "We'll get into that next fall."

Nepal's king swears in new government, prime minister

Daily Egyptian wire services
KATHMANDU, Nepal — Nepal's experiment with multiparty democratic government formally began Thursday on an enthusiastic and emotional note. Krishna Prasad Bhattarai, 66, was sworn as prime minister by King Birendra, beginning a new chapter in the Himalayan country that had been the last monarchy in the world. The new government pledged its allegiance to the king, who will have his constitutional powers revoked, but will be retained as a figurehead under a new democratic constitution.

Thatcher faults firms for Iraqi gun parts

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher accused two British firms Thursday of failing to alert the government of their plans to supply parts for a giant artillery cannon to be built for Iraq. Thatcher told the House of Commons that Walter Somers Ltd. and Sheffield Forgemasters did not accurately report their work for Iraq to the Department of Trade and Industry in applications for export licenses.

Committee OKs Democrat-cut defense budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Budget Committee voted along party lines Thursday to approve a $1.2 trillion fiscal year 1991 budget blueprint after rebellious Democrats forced deeper defense cuts than their Democratic leaders had proposed. The Democratic-sponsored budget plan, which the full House is expected to debate next week, could set up a major defense spending confrontation with President Bush, who proposed far more modest defense cuts than congressional Democrats want.

Low census return rate will cost $130 million

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — The failure of millions of Americans to return 1990 census forms by hand could cost taxpayers $130 million, Census Director Barbara Bryant said Thursday. She told a House subcommittee the return rate on census forms delivered to about 100 million households has been only 63 percent—well below the 70 percent expected. None of the $130 million would be needed, she said, if the 1990 mail return rate had reached the 75 percent level of the 1980 census.

Encouraging signs found for AIDS vaccine

WEST HAVEN, Conn. Researchers removed white blood cells from people who received an experimental AIDS vaccine made and injected them into mice engineered to contain a human immune system. The mice were then injected with the AIDS virus, but the immunized white blood cells apparently enabled the animals to fend off infection.

Bill toughening alcohol penalties sent to House

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Parents or merchants who give alcohol to their children or other teenagers could go to prison for up to three years under legislation sent to the full Illinois House Thursday. The House Judiciary II Committee advanced the measure sponsored by Rep. Jerry Weller, R-Morris, by an 11-1 vote despite objections that it would turn many parents into criminals. "I guarantee you that every parent in this room would be a felon under this bill," said John Theis of the Illinois State Bar Association.

Medieval Studies topic of Michigan conference

By Anne Ryman
Staff Writer

A University professor will cope with the pressures of finals week by sailing into medieval times.

John Dotson, assistant professor of history, will present 'The Genoese Ship in Art and Measurement,' at the annual International Congress of Medieval Studies at Western Michigan University. It is the largest medieval conference in the United States.

John Dotson

Dotson became interested in ships in college when studying about late merchants. Ships were one of the tools of the trade of medieval merchants. While studying about freight rates during medieval times he began to wonder what the ships were like.

The problem with studying them is there are no surviving medieval ships.

A gap exists between the 8th century and the 16th century history of ships, especially in the Mediterranean Sea because a ship worm that eats wood lives in warm water, Dotson said. In Northern Europe, however, the water is cold and wrecks are preserved. This is where many of the Viking ships have been found.

Dotson believes many 13th and 14th century ships will never be found because they have disintegrated. The ship worm thrives in these warm temperatures and has destroyed any remains. He said there has been a lot of searching but none have been found yet.

All that remains of the ships are the amphorae, which are large clay jugs once filled with grain, nuts or wine.

In the later middle ages wooden barrels and sacks were used instead and these disintegrated along with the sunken ships also.

Another problem with studying ships is that medieval builders did not use blueprints. They built the ships using their eyes and not dimensions. There were, however, a few instances when ships were chartered by the 13th century crusaders. The crusaders would specify certain minimum measurements for the ships.

For example, some people used the ships to transport horses so they had to be sure the ship was built to accommodate this, Dotson said. It is from these surviving charters that many of the measurement information comes, Dotson said.

The problem with writing from these documents, said Dotson, is that they were never intended to be plans for reconstruction. Medieval people were not concerned with measurements.

He has been able to take some of the measurements and reconstructed them. The ship Dotson is studying was used by the French king Louis IX. It was a sailing vessel 107 feet long, 30 feet wide and a crew of 60 men.

Dotson has written several articles about medieval ships and intends this to be his last one.

Food to be distributed today

By Michelle R. Walker
Staff Writer

Southern Illinois Food Bank of Carbondale will distribute 18,000 pounds of food at 1 p.m. today to certified agencies in the area.

The food will not be distributed to individuals, but to specific agencies with specific goals, said Faye Joyner-Keene, coordinator of S. I. Food Bank.

Joyner-Keene said the organizations include churches and the Good Samaritan House, 701 S.

Marion, in Carbondale. Ultimately, the food will go to disadvantaged people and people in emergency situations.

This is the food bank's first distribution as an official food bank.

"We are very happy," Joyner-Keene, said "It has taken a lot of leg work and brain work to get this going."

Joyner-Keene said the S. I. Food Bank is not a food pantry but a main distributor to food pantries. She said the food bank will be the main distributing agent to six counties in Southern Illinois, including Jackson, Washington, Randolph, Perry, Franklin and Williamson.

"We are very pleased to get this off the ground. It took an accumulation of three years of planning," said Rich Knowlton, community relations manager for St. Louis area food banks.

"This means that agencies will not have to travel as far for food resources," Knowlton said.

S. I. Food Bank will rely mainly on the St. Louis Food Bank for food until it can acquire some local suppliers to support it.

Opinion & Commentary

Earth Day activities should be extended

SINCE 1970, one day of every year has been dedicated to preserving the home of millions of plants and animals. Earth Day, created by former Wisconsin Sen. Gaylord Nelson, will be recognized Sunday.

BUT what will happen a month from Sunday? Will millions of people throughout the world be as conscious of the finite resources next month as they are this week?

Chances are slim that those who ban together for Earth Day will be as eager next month or even next week to volunteer a Saturday morning to a local environment group.

MOST LIKELY, some of those who promote outdoor education or distribute trees to Earth Day celebrators will be busy with other projects shortly after the fact.

When the hype of Earth Day gives way to apathetic attitudes, don't worry. Earth Day 1991 is just around the corner of that landfill to your left.

TO THOSE WHOSE interest in protecting the environment holds up after Earth Day, we owe you. You'll extend the time that most of us can go on forgetting about the environment and its fragile boundaries.

The response to Earth Week activities at the University is a good sign. The fact that members of the University community have extended Earth Day is a result of overwhelming acceptance.

POLLUTION CONTROL on campus restarted its recycling program in February, and University departments have been cooperating. A good sign.

Carbondale publishes its monthly newsletter on recycled paper. Another good sign.

WHAT DO WE HAVE to worry about with all these good signs? Nothing, if we don't lose sight of our end goal.

What is our end goal? Realistically, we never can complete our quest for changing accepted but harmful practices.

THINK OF EARTH as having smoked for a few hundred years but deciding to quit because it was getting up in years and good health became a top priority. Its parts—rivers, oceans and forests—will be injured years after its decision to stop smoking took effect, but it will be much better off for the fight.

PREDICTIONS for this year hold that 60 million in the United States will observe Earth Day. Worldwide, maybe 200 million folks in 140 countries will join in.

Environmental officials have directed their attentions to children this Earth Day. Meek or not, the officials reason, children will inherit the earth and the messes others have created.

EACH OF US IS FREE to pitch in and make Earth Day count. And if Earth Day slips by forgotten by some, they are free to ban together to create another Earth Day.

And while we should think globally and act locally as many environmentalists profess, we also should celebrate Earth Day Every Day.

Quotable Quotes

"I guarantee you that every parent in this room would be a felon under this bill."—John Weller, R-Morris, discussing a bill that would send parents or merchants to jail if caught distributing alcohol to minors.

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, viewpoints and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors only. Unsigned editorials represent a consensus of the Daily Egyptian Board, whose members are the student editor-in-chief, the editorial page editor, the associate editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a School of Journalism faculty member.

Letters to the editor must be submitted directly to the editorial page editor, Room 1247, Communications Building. Letters should be typewritten and double spaced. All letters are subject to editing and will be limited to 500 words. Letters fewer than 250 words will be given preference for publication. Students must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-academic staff by position and department.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Letters

It's everyone's responsibility to protect the earth's environmental resources

I would like to address this letter to anyone who is concerned. We have a problem. Our world is deteriorating before our eyes and it's our own fault. Earth is dying due to the destruction to the land, water and the air we breathe.

I have tried talking to friends (and you know who you are) about these issues. They either don't want to talk about it or they give me a weird look. You may not care, but I do. And I know there has to be others who feel the same. What people don't realize is that the generation before us has made a mess, and we are continuing their mistakes. It's time to clean up together.

Not as blacks, whites, foreigners, the young or old, but as one. When and if Earth goes, it will not discriminate.

We as college students and future leaders can help by changing our style of living just a little bit. Girls, try not to use hair sprays with spray nozzles due to the aerosol in them. It's destroying the ozone layer. Buy the kind that has a pump, or try not using it at all. (I know, it's asking a lot—even to me for I like hair-spray—but try).

Switch from using or buying styrofoam products to cardboard. Recycle all aluminum cans. There are recycling plants in existence that will give you money in return for them. And most of all, help protest against those who are tearing up our forests and polluting our water with oil spills and waste. They must be stopped.

By reading this letter, I hope you realize that what is happening is not about politics or racial differences anymore. It's much more serious than that. Don't get me wrong, I'm not saying those issues aren't important for I have my own views on both.

And to sum them up briefly, politics, money and power are luxuries that come and go.

We need to focus more on the survival of the world. Get over racial differences—these are the 90's, and we have come a long way.

My point is that to beat what is happening we must work together as one. We have been given this beautiful planet to live on, the only one that has suitable conditions for life. It's up to us to make a difference. Think of the children—of your children. Would you want them to grow up in a world doomed for catastrophe? I don't. —Debbie Pugh, senior, psychology.

Health-conscious University students: Ban McDonald's from Student Center

The reasons for not having a McDonald's in the Student Center are as varied as they are clear. Let us begin with the most obvious: the nearest fast-food chain restaurant to campus happens to be McDonald's and is a life-threatening five-minute walk from the Student Center. Those who enjoy the high-fat diet of a Big Mac and fries could surely stand the exercise.

Second, McDonald's has, in the past, cut down scores of acres of rain forests to raise their 100 percent American beef. They also continue to package much of their food in plastic foam containers. McDonald's executives say they are starting to recycle the containers to make trays and other plastic goods.

What happens to the trays when they are no longer usable? And how many trays will they need in the future?

Last, McDonald's menu is geared toward heart surgeons, because they are the ones who will benefit from those who continue eating at McDonald's. As a vegetarian, I prefer restaurants with variety.

At least H.B. Quicks offers a vegetarian sandwich. (No, I don't eat fish, and McDonald's fries contain beef tallow.)

It would have been nice if someone had asked me and other students with opinions if we had any objections to McDonald's and, if so, what restaurant we would prefer. But I'm sure those in charge couldn't see through the dollar signs.

I hope other students will voice their opinions for or against McDonald's. If you're not sure what directions to take, I suggest consulting a MAPP.—Britt Parrott, senior, philosophy.

Homophobes can't cope with reality

Dear Mr. Wilson (DE April 18): For a graduate student, especially in a field where you must defend the defenseless (unless you're planning on using it to manipulate others), you are very well-informed.

Where do you get off believing that your values and beliefs are so sacred?

I'm not referring to this TWWIGS baloney because, who knows? Maybe these historical people were p.y. Who cares? Apparently, there's no evidence that they were heterosexual.

When you speak of abominations, I believe you mean speaking from one's own behalf when attacked, in this case on a daily basis, by people who have a definite problem with self-esteem. It's homophobes like you who ridicule those who are different but don't think the oppressed should have any right to defend themselves.

And why does it matter if you go down in history being thought of as gay?

You'll be dead anyway (and who told you you'll be famous enough that very many people will remember or even care) and won't have to defend yourself against a multitude of ignorant and arrogant mainstream heterosexuals who will only accept change and difference according to their guidelines.

Though I am not gay, people like you make me want to puke because your prejudices extend beyond the realm of homosexuality into other realms of the oppressed.—L.S. Bienemann, graduate student, sociology.

Mother Earth

To save or not to save

Just as thousands of people and organizations have been planning to celebrate Earth Day for months, the first Earth Day didn't just happen.

The 1970 Earth Day was the brainchild of Wisconsin Sen. Gaylord Nelson, according to a July 1970 Audubon article, when he proposed that a day be set aside to consider the environment and educate the public on various environmental issues—the big issue of the day was that 60 percent of the nation's air pollution came from automobile emissions—through "teach-ins" at campuses, as well as other centers across the country.

TIME magazine reported on April 27, 1970 that about 1,500 colleges and 10,000 schools were involved in the Earth Day, which one California organizer was reported to have called "not a big pep rally and it is not a day of protest."

The number of participants in Earth Day couldn't be counted, but the Audubon article, written by Steve Cotton, a former Newsweek staff member and press director for Environmental Action, coordinated Earth Day, estimated that as many as 20 million people across the planet did something to celebrate the day.

ACCORDING to various reports in periodicals of the day, participation in the first Earth Day ranged from peaceful action, such as cleaning up a ditch, to rare, radical actions that violated laws. The Audubon article said a 26-year-old man was arrested for protesting thermal pollution of Florida's Biscayne Bay by the Florida Power and Light Company. The man had presented himself at the company's office with a cart full of decaying fish topped with dead octopus, a violation of a local sanitary code.

FOR THE MOST part, though, the activism was legal and involved politicians, musicians and authors according to Audubon. Rock concert held in honor of the planet were popular attractions at college campuses while New Yorkers gathered in a park to hear author Kurt Vonnegut say, "If we don't get our president's attention, this planet may die soon...I'm sorry he's a lawyer; I wish to God he was a biologist."

MUCH OF WHAT anger there was, according to various reports, was directed at big business, who was blamed for much pollution, and the lack of governmental concern.

Rep. Richard Ottinger, D-New York, as reported in Audubon, published a newsletter which was distributed on college campuses that claimed the "political pollution" of promises by officials which were simply avoided issues could undermine the efforts of citizens to change environmental policy.

"When you find Nixon, Rockefeller and Reagan on your side, you know you're in trouble," he said.

(Richard M. Nixon was the president, John D. Rockefeller III was governor of New York and Ronald W. Reagan was the governor of California.)

ACCORDING to the Daily Egyptian in 1970, Earth Day 1970 was a peaceful one in Carbondale. Many educational and promotional activities much like those scheduled for this coming Earth Day were held.

Though many issues were discussed, the main concern in Carbondale at the time was the five pounds of garbage each person generated in the city each day. There were two trucks to haul the garbage away and, subsequently, a healthy rat population.

AN ESTIMATED 3,000 to 5,000 rats inhabited the area along the railroad tracks between Grand Avenue and Main Street. The SIU-C Student Government was so concerned that a "Serve the People" campaign to combat the rat problem had been undertaken and was being funded by the City of Carbondale.

Twenty years ago on the first Earth Day, Pogo, created by Walt Kelly, was one of the first voices to speak.

Earth Day to commemorate progress made in last 20 years

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

The global activity called Earth Day 1990 is hard to define because of the multitude of bases it concerns. But, one local environmental activist said the 20th Earth Day is an "awakening" of the American conscientious about the environment.

"It's both a celebration of the progress that has been made in the past 20 years and a reminder of how far we have left to go," said Bob Pauls, secretary-treasurer of the Shawnee Earth Day 1990 Committee.

Pauls also owns Parameters, a Carbondale-based firm that provides consultation on local environmental concerns.

Though the focus of Earth Day remains basically the same as the first one in 1970, Pauls said he can see a difference in the way environmentalists approach problems.

"Today," Pauls said, "environmentalists appreciate the complexity of the environment."

Pauls said activists in the first Earth Day — he was a student at a private university in Minnesota at the time — were looking for black and white answers to environmental problems.

He said the committee isn't concerned with any one environmental issue, but, rather, was formed as a steering committee for local Earth Day 1990 activities by various groups represented in the committee.

John McHale, a graduate student in communication, said though there are many issues to be addressed, incineration of wastes in the Mississippi and Ohio valleys and timber harvest in the Shawnee National Forest

Earth Day 1990 a fad, a Birch director says

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

Despite the popularity of Earth Day, the movement to care for the environment is not without opposition.

John McManus, director of public relations for the John Birch Society, Inc., said in a recent telephone interview that not only are environmentalists attempting to limit personal freedom and national sovereignty, they act on misinformation concerning environmental theories yet proven.

The Daughters of the American Revolution came out in opposition of the movement before Earth Day 1970, accusing environmentalists of being subversives.

The society was founded as an anti-communist watchdog group in 1958 and named in honor of John Birch, a baptist missionary turned soldier who was killed by the Chinese communists a few days after the end of W.W.II. McManus wouldn't be any more specific than to say the society has "several tens of thousands of members."

He said the motto of the society is "Less government, more responsibility, and, with the God's help, a better world."

McManus indicated he thought that the environmental movement was a fad being attended to by irresponsible people, especially politicians, and create a situation where a government, which is already too big, can get bigger.

"They're moving too fast, too far too irresponsibly," he said.

The speed with which the movement is growing creates a situation whereby the government, namely the politicians in the government, can use the momentum to their own advantage.

"There's far more danger in the environmental movement from the politics of it than from the science of it," McManus said.

McManus cited a press release from the organization that quoted Sen. Timothy Worth, D-Colorado, who also is the Earth Day 1990 director, as saying "We've got to ride the global warming issue. Even if the theory is wrong, we will be doing the right thing in terms of economic and environmental policy."

The main point of displeasure with the society, McManus said, is the issue of global warming. He said experts he had spoken with claim the earth is not getting any warmer and that concern about global warming is simply hype.

He cited an article in the October 1989 issue of Discover magazine that quoted one of the nation's most noted climatologists, Stephen Schneider, as saying that

Carbondale Clean and Green plan scheduled to begin this weekend

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

It's time for spring cleaning and Carbondale Clean and Green is starting with the city of Carbondale.

Between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday groups and individuals can pick up their area assignments for Spring Clean Up 1990 at Turley Park.

Jeanne Foster, coordinator of Carbondale Clean and Green, said that about all of Carbondale will be covered, but certain areas will be concentrated on.

The code enforcement office has made a list of places that need to be focused on and if a certain group wants to clear up a certain area they can, Foster said.

"I'm hoping for an equal number this year," Foster said, speaking of the more than 500 volunteers that participated last year. Volunteers covered more than 600 acres and brought in over seven tons of trash.

Foster said she hopes people will want to help the community as well as have fun at Springfest this weekend. Several fraternities have already volunteered, she said.

Transportation to the clean-up sites will be provided by the National Guard for those needing it. Prizes will be given to the individual and group bringing in the most trash, Foster said.

The deadline for weigh in to win the prize will be at 1 p.m. at Turley Park, she said.

The winning group will be awarded pizzas and the individual volunteer will be given a $50 savings bond, she said.

For the first 300 participants, T-shirts with the Clean and Green logo will be given away.

Briefs

THE SOCIETY of Professional Journalists will meet at 3 p.m. today in the Press Club, Communications 1246. All members should attend to help make plans for Journalism week.

THE CANTERBURY Fellowship will meet at 6 p.m. Sunday at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, 402 W. Mill for a free supper.

'Last Temptation' at SIU-C

The Martin Scorsese film, "The Last Temptation of Christ," will be shown for the first time at the University Sunday at 2 p.m. and 5 p.m., and again Monday at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium.

It is free and open to the public. It is co-sponsored by Student Programming Council Video and the Hellenic Student Association.

A debate will follow at 8 p.m. on Sunday. The SIU-C debate team and different Carbondale discussion groups will participate.

The movie, which sparked controversy over its depiction of Jesus Christ, was not shown in local theaters.

Gregory Georgatos, president of the Hellenic Student Association, said the group is not presenting the movie to provoke controversy but because it has never been shown to a mass audience in Carbondale.

of hemp paper is comparable to—if not better than—paper used today.

Ryan said she was pleased with attendance at the rally and estimated more than 400 people stopped to listen and read literature about the plant. Tables were set up to sell T-shirts, buttons and such books as "The Emperor Wears No Clothes: The Authoritative Historical Record of the Cannabis Plant, Hemp Prohibition and Marijuana Can Still Save the World" by Jack Herr.

"A lot of this information comes from our own government," Ryan said. "It's just not publicized."

"One of the main things people need to understand about NORML is that we're talking about marijuana and marijuana alone. I don't think it's a good idea to legalize cocaine and harder drugs. It's better to start with something relatively harmless," Ryan said.

She said SIU-C NORML leaders specifically requested no law breaking activities, such as smoking marijuana at the rally. As far as she knew, none took place, and Carbondale and University police made no arrests.

Ryan cited statistics released by the U.S. Government Bureau of Mortality Statistics that said more than 200,000 people die from tobacco-related causes annually and 18,000 to 130,000 from alcohol-related causes.

The government figure for deaths related to marijuana—including overdoses—was zero.

The parade began about 4:30 p.m., Jeff Hartnett, graduate student in computer science and SIU-C NORML member, said.

Carrying signs such as "Stop the Greed, Plant the Seed," the marchers started in the Free Forum Area and proceeded down Lincoln Drive in front of Woody Hall. After crossing Mill Street, the marchers proceeded up South Illinois Avenue.

After arriving at the Federal Building, the marchers chanted slogans such as, "We want freedom, we want grass, DEA can kiss our ---."

The acronym DEA stands for the Drug Enforcement Agency. The agency is one of many federal law enforcement agencies now waging the war on drugs.

About 15 demonstrators paraded around the Federal Building, practicing an impromptu self-proclaimed exorcism of the building modeled in part after the Vietnam-era "razing of the Pentagon" in which protesters sought to remove war-causing "evil" influences from the military braintrust.

Wedding Days

GUIDE TO PLANNING YOUR PERFECT WEDDING

6-12 MONTHS Before the Wedding

- Determine your budget and the kind of wedding (informal, formal, etc.) you want; then decide where the ceremony will be.
- Visit your clergy together in order to select a service and set the date.
- Choose the reception site for the wedding. Editor's note: with so many weddings taking place on weekends, the most popular resources are often booked far in advance. Make your reservation as soon as possible.
- Shop for your wedding dress, headpiece and accessories.
- Consult a men's formal-wear specialist with your fiancé.
- Invite all attendants to be in your bridal party, and arrange to get together with them to choose their gowns.
- Draw up an invitation list; have your fiancé draw up his.
- Research and select the photographer and florist.
- Choose the band or ensemble as well, and plan your wedding reception music.
- Finally, enroll your choices with the Bridal Gift Registry of your favorite store.

1 MONTH Before the Wedding

- Start by making an appointment with your beauty salon to have your hair styled as you would like to wear it on your wedding day; remember to bring your headpiece.
- Make a date to have the final fittings on your wedding gown and your bridesmaids' dresses as well.
- Plan how you will handle wedding day transportation, traffic and parking.
- Work out the most convenient accommodations for all of your out-of-town guests and inform them of the arrangements.
- At this point, invitations should be stamped and ready to drop in the mail.
- If you would like a formal wedding portrait taken, this is the time to do it.
- You may also consider planning a bridesmaids' luncheon for an intimate celebration just before the wedding.
- During this period, remember to record each gift as you receive it and write a prompt thank-you note.
- Make a household "check" for any home furnishings that are still needed.

4 MONTHS Before the Wedding

- Begin by ordering your wedding invitations, personal stationery and notepaper.
- Discuss possible honeymoon destinations with your fiancé.
- Have mothers select their dresses. Your mother has the privilege of first choice. The groom's mother chooses a dress that is complementary in color and degree of formality.
- See your doctor for a physical exam; set a date for a blood test, if needed in your state.

2 WEEKS Before the Wedding

- Send your wedding announcement to the newspaper.
- Draw up a seating plan for the reception, and make cards for the bride's table.
- Go over your personal aouscau for any last-minute needs.
- If you plan to change your name (and are changing your address), arrange to do so on Social Security, driver's license, credit cards, bank account, etc.
- Finally begin making plans to move all of your belongings to your new home.

2 MONTHS Before the Wedding

- Start addressing your wedding invitations.
- Choose gifts for all of your wedding attendants.
- Buy your wedding rings and order engraving, if desired.

PARIS (AP) - A French designer has created a wedding dress valued at $7.3 million, requiring a squad of guards at its modeling in Paris.

Designed and made by Paris couturiere Helene Gainsville for her 1990 bridal collection, the lace gown is embroidered with 723 white diamonds.

French jeweler Alexandre Reza of Place Vendome selected the jewels for the dress, which took more than 3,000 hours to create.

league, Jesse Turner, to its statement released Wednesday.

The two former professors at Beirut University College were abducted along with American teacher Alann Steen on Jan. 24, 1987.

The group did not say in its communique Thursday that it was delaying the release indefinitely and stressed that Kelly should now be sent to Syria. It also asked that Syria's Chief of Intelligence in Lebanon, Brig. Ghazi Kanaan, be sent to Beirut to "settle the issue" after Kelly arrived in Damascus.

Observers said the captors were implying they were not seeking to embroil Kelly in the detailed mechanics of the release.

President Bush, at a Thursday afternoon news conference with French President Francois Mitterand in Key Largo, Fla., replied to a reporter's question by saying he had not heard of the latest communique from the Jihad group but reiterated that U.S. policy was not to negotiate with terrorists or hostage takers.

Anthony Young, associate dean of research in the College of Agriculture, said the process is relatively inexpensive, but right now the process is slow and new research needs to be started to speed up the process.

with Ambassador Kelly, but I think the U.S. position is clear, we do not meet demands," Bush said. "We've been disappointed before, hopes raised only to have them dashed by excessive speculation.

"I would add that we are not talking to the hostage holders," he said. "I would further add that we are grateful to Syria for trying to play a constructive role in what is going on."

Bush said he couldn't "think of anything" that he could say that would help the situation.

Syria had backed up the Jihad group's original statement by announcing Thursday that preparations were under way for the release of a Western hostage on Friday.

The United States had reacted to the announcement by dispatching a hostage reception team to Wiesbaden, West Germany and by sending back to Damascus the U.S. Ambassador to Syria, Edward Djerjian, who had been attending a meeting with Kelly in Bonn, West Germany.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said Thursday the State Department had sent the reception team to Wiesbaden, "where they have the medical facilities to receive any hostage that might be released."

In a Damascus Radio broadcast Thursday, Syria said preparations for the hostage release "is the strong evidence that the U.S.-Syrian relations have now become more important and serious than ever before."

It also said Syria played "an important role" in previous hostage releases.

Bike race will keep city police busy rerouting traffic, parking

By Chris Walka
Staff Writer

Sunday's mini-road race may be a high-speed spectacle for those people participating or watching, but the re-routing of traffic for the race is a major headache for Carbondale Police.

The Prima Vera Stage Race, which will take place from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday, is sponsored by the SIU Bike Racing Team, Joseph R. we, vice president of the club, said. Each heat of the race will have 50 participants, he said.

Rowe anticipated about 200 participants to be in the contest.

The race course is slated to use Poplar, Mill, W. Freeman and Rawlings streets. Carbondale residents using these streets or parking their vehicles in the area are encouraged to find alternatives before the race, Art Wright, Public information officer for Carbondale Police said.

According to an information packet, barricades will be posted at any intersection, alley, private drive or parking lot exit that may allow vehicle access to the route. Additionally, barricades will be posted at:

■ West Mill Street, west of South Thompson. A sign indicating no traffic on West Mill will be posted.

■ West Mill Street at South Poplar Street. The barricade will be erected at the east side of the intersection to prohibit west bound traffic and at the south side of the intersection to prohibit north bound traffic from campus.

■ West Mill Street at South Forest Street on the west side of the intersection prohibiting east bound traffic. Barricades will be posted on the south side of the intersection, prohibiting north bound traffic from campus.

■ South Poplar Street north of the West Freeman Street intersection prohibiting south bound traffic on South Poplar Street. Traffic flow from West Freeman Street east of Poplar Street, will be allowed to exit onto Poplar Street, provided the traffic is going in a northerly direction.

■ South Forest Street, south of the entrance to the west side of the parking lot of the Carbondale Towers, 820 W. Mill St.

■ On-street parking also will be prohibited on South Poplar Street, south of West Freeman and on South Rawlings, south of West Freeman. Cars caught parking here will be ticketed and towed.

■ Drivers attempting to leave, or enter, the 700 to 800 blocks of West Freeman Street will be allowed to disregard the one-way street signs, but only for the duration of the race.

Wright said the race may be an inconvenience for citizens living in the area. Wright said of special concern were a segment of elderly people living in the area.

If emergency vehicles need access to one of the areas affected by the race, the race will be stopped, Wright said.

Organizers of the race initially explored the possibility of the racers competing on streets around campus, but the request was turned down by the administration, Wright said.

Rowe said Clarence "Doc" Dougherty, vice president for campus services, turned down the request because no campus street could be blocked off for the duration of the race.

Dougherty said he originally rejected the proposal entirely, but later reconsidered, offering to examine the possibility of the race being held Sunday. The organizers did not re-contact Dougherty about the offer, Dougherty said.

Dougherty expressed concern about other activities occurring on campus, and the possibility of a professor not being able to get to get on campus to work due to street being blocked off.

Requests to the field commander of the police department for the race to be held on city streets were also denied, but permission for the race was finally garnered from the city manager's office, Wright said.

Speaker outlines prominent environment threats

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

Reduce. Reuse. Recycle.

That's what it is going to take to protect the global environment in the future, Peter Burtchell of the Cousteau Society told a packed Ballroom D Wednesday night.

Burtchell said every single individual can make a difference in the environment with little effort.

"As a goal of Earth Day 20, if we all did just one small thing for the environment, then maybe do something else next year, we'd see a dramatic improvement," he said.

Burtchell outlined the three most prominent threats to the environment using slides taken on various Cousteau expeditions of the last 10 years as examples of his points.

Those points, he explained, are habitat destruction, exploitation of natural resources and pollution.

"Our earth planet is threatened as it has never been threatened in its 5 million years of existence," he said.

He outlined problems of the island nation of Haiti, in the Caribbean. Haiti, which has one of the highest population densities in the world, has a dangerously damaged ecosystem.

"Haiti is an ecosystem on the verge of collapse and an ecosystem on the verge of collapse is a society on the verge of chaos," he said.

Burtchell said Haiti's major problem is that the citizens are cutting wood for cooking fires faster than the forests can regenerate. Rains come and erode the fragile soil.

The runoff settles in the coastal reefs and chokes the ecosystem there, destroying fish populations, which could be used as a source of food.

He said Haiti is 90 percent deforested and is an "island desert."

Burtchell said destruction of this nature not only affects human populations but destroys the homes of many other living things—a rainforest can have 1,500 flowering plants, not to mention the non-flowing plants and animals—upsetting the balance of nature, including the humans.

What happens in one part of the world affects the entire earth, Burtchell said, because the earth is a water planet. There are not seven seas, but on global ocean that all comes together in Antarctica, he said.

This also applies to pollution, which is the introduction of waste into the environment faster than the environment can absorb it, he said, because contaminants eventually disperse via the earth's water.

"No matter where we dump our wastes," he said, "they end up on our plates."

Burtchell praised the efforts being made in Southern Illinois to protect the environment, saying different tactics used by different groups have made differences in environmental policy of government and business.

"We can no longer point our finger at big business because they are now cleaning up their act," he said.

As an example of pressure by environmentalists across the nation, Burtchell cited the recent announcement by oil giant Conoco that all new oil tankers will be double-hulled models.

There has been much speculation by experts that the Prince William Sound oil spill of a little more than a year ago could have been avoided in the Exxon Valdez had a double hull.

He called Exxon's cleanup a "valiant effort," blaming the slow reaction and unfinished cleanup on poor technology.

He said Exxon employees were paid $16.95 an hour to wipe rocks with paper towels.

"That is the state of technology in oil spill cleanup," Burtchell.

Burtchell, who has been with the Cousteau Society since August 1989, spent 12 years a National Park ranger working in Yosemite National Park and the Everglades National Park.

"Everybody has to decide what they want to do about the environment," Burtchell said. "We all have the same goal, we're just taking different paths."

Carbondale landscape waste management receives grant

Money to be used to purchase waste collection vehicle

By Nora Lentley
Staff Writer

Carbondale's landscape waste management program gained the support it needed Wednesday when the city was awarded a $56,700 grant.

While attending an Illinois Municipal League Board meeting in Springfield Mayor Neil Dillard accepted the grant from the director of the Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

The grant will be used to buy a landscape waste collection vehicle, a large disc chipper, a portable disc chipper and a log splitter. The grant fulfills the full amount requested, Tom Redmond, city planner, said.

"We were pleased (with the grant) and optimistic that we had a good shot at it," he said. Out of 88 eligible applications 32 were given grants, Redmond said.

City Manager Steve Hoffner

said he was pleased with the grant and felt it would help the city implement a top-notch program.

The main reason for the program is to help prevent the overfilling of landfills; 20 percent of landfills are made up of landscape waste, Redmond said.

"When it can be used, it doesn't make sense to bury it underground," he said.

Beginning July 1 the city will collect landscape waste, such as leaves, grass and brush from residential properties. The program will educate residents in methods of handling the materials through mulching, composting and other land-care techniques.

The city's program coincides with the state law prohibiting disposal of landscape waste in landfills. In the first few months, collection will be on a call-in basis because the city doesn't anticipate a large demand, Redmond said.

During the fall and spring—times when there will be a larger demand—collection will be weekly, occurring on the same day as regular garbage pick up, he said. Residents will be required to put landscape waste in clear or translucent bags so the collector can check that leaves and grass aren't mixed with brush, Redmond said.

The city is requesting that more area stores carry the clear garbage bags, he said. Collection of the waste will be funded by money raised from the purchase of stickers that must be placed on the bags. The stickers will cost 60 cents and will be available at city hall, he said. Local stores are being asked to carry the stickers.

The vacuum truck service will also be used for loose leaf collection on a call-in basis during the fall for a fee of $10.50 each time.

The leaves and grass collected will be processed at composting centers licensed by the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency and some will be used for land application at the city farm, Redmond said.

are his primary concerns. McHale, who called Earth Day an "embodied expression of concern," is the president of the Mid-America Peace Project, spokesman for the Student Environmental Center and active with Earth First!

"He praised the efforts of Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carterville, to establish wilderness areas in Southern Illinois. Though the process isn't going as quickly as some would like, he said, he is confident.

"We will see wilderness, and it will be through his efforts," he said.

The ultimate goal, McHale said, is to create interest in the environment among the student population, calling the campus a "training ground to promote progress" in environmental protection.

"If we can get students to say 'Yes, I am an environmentalist,' that's going to affect their decisions in later life," McHale said.

Those students will be the leaders in the future, McHale said, and the ideas gained by being a student environmentalist will promote environmentally sound decisions of tomorrow's business people and elected officials.

Global pollutants may change face of earth

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has made huge strides in cleaning up the environment since the first Earth Day in 1970, but those achievements are dwarfed by looming global pollution problems that could change the face of the planet.

Thanks in large part to the revolution in environmental consciousness triggered by the Earth Day celebration of 20 years ago, America has made indisputable progress in clearing smoggy air, reviving dying rivers and lakes and restoring and protecting forests, natural areas and animals.

Those advances stem from landmark environmental laws passed by Congress in direct response to the mass environmental movement born on April 22, 1970, when 20 million Americans took to the streets to demand a greener country.

In the months following that outpouring of concern, President Richard Nixon issued an executive order creating the Environmental Protection Agency and lawmakers enacted a new clean air law that for the first time set limits on car and industrial emissions and established national air quality standards.

Over the next decade, Congress wrote 27 major environmental statutes, including the Clean Water Act of 1972, the Endangered Species Act of 1973, the Safe Drinking Water Act of 1974, the Toxic Substances Control Act of 1976, the Surface Mining and Reclamation Act of 1977 and the Superfund toxic waste cleanup law of 1980.

To be sure, the nation still faces daunting pollution problems. More than 100 cities have smog levels exceeding federal health limits; industry spews out an estimated 2.7 billion pounds of cancer-causing air emissions per year; the Great Lakes have dozens of toxic "hot spots" with bottom sediments.

scientists should consider stretching the truth "to get some broad-based support, to capture the public's imagination..."

McManus said the Schneider quote is an example of the corruption in the environmental movement in which a few individuals would like to gain power over the mass of Americans.

ing on Burris' super agency proposal, questioned the comptroller's ability to handle the legal aspects of environmental issues.

"He's never spent one day in a prosecutor's office," Ryan said.

Burris revealed his proposals just two days after current Attorney General Neil Hartigan, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, proposed his own 11-point program for cleaning up the state and conserving resources.

The new "super agency," the Department of Environmental Affairs, would combine the activities of 10 state agencies and departments currently involved in the environment and avoid duplicated efforts, remove bottlenecks, decrease bureaucracy, reduce costs and increase efficiency.

According to Burris, three state agencies, the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, Pollution Control Board and the Department of Nuclear Safety, devote all of their activities to environmental matters.

Seven agencies, the Department of Energy and Natural Resources, Department of Public Health, Emergency Services and Disaster Agency, Department of Agriculture, Department of Conservation, Department of Mines and Minerals and the Department of Labor devote varying amounts of resources to environmental issues.

He said the proposed super agency would take over the environmental issues from each of the existing agencies. The agency also should have the authority to issue citations for all environmental violations, he added.

Pledging that he will be "Illinois' environmental attorney general," if elected, Burris said the present environmental framework is failing to meet challenges posed by federal mandates and "troops of a public that has become increasingly aware of environmental problems."

"We're simply not getting the job done," he said. "The need for change is urgent," he said, adding that most states operate with a single environmental agency.

Burris also called for:
■ Creating an Office of Environmental Defender, which would represent the public in a variety of environmental issues.

■ Beefing up of units that respond to environmental accidents.

■ Enabling concerned citizens and environmental groups to appeal decisions on pollution control facilities.

■ Giving the "super agency" authority to order specific remedies to control toxic air pollutants.

■ Preparing a list of toxic air pollutants by 1992 so they can be regulated.

■ Raising the penalty for violations to $25,000 per day from the current $10,000.

■ Requiring all units of government to use recycled paper.

■ Creation of a "Blue Ribbon Panel" consisting of the state's leading environmentalists, concerned business people and citizens. The panel would offer recommendations on the responsibilities of the proposed super agency.

"Protecting the environment is protecting the future of Illinois," Burris said.

At his own news conference, Ryan called domestic violence one of the most seriously underreported crimes in Illinois and called for the establishment of a Domestic Violence Coordinating Council, a mandatory arrest statute, a Victims Resource Center, a crime victims hotline and a statewide action plan to combat the problem.

Award-winning play scheduled for Shryock

By Jeanne Bickler
Entertainment Editor

A little bit of Broadway will come to Carbondale Saturday night when the Tony award-winning play "Dreamgirls" hits the Shryock stage.

"Dreamgirls" is the story of a black female singing group, The Dreams, fashioned after the Supremes. It traces the band's rise to stardom from the bars of Harlem to national fame.

Along the way the rhythm-and-blues trio encounters obstacles that come with its increasing popularity. The man who makes himself the manager of The Dreams, decides one of the girls must go to give the band a sleek new look.

"Dreamgirls," written by the late Michael Bennett of "A Chorus Line," gives the audience a behind-the-scenes look at show-business.

Like "A Chorus Line," "Dreamgirls" lets the audience see what goes on backstage with sets that revolve, showing the contrast between the glamorous stage appearances and grim realities of the trade.

"Dreamgirls" also is a plunge into the recording business of the 1960s. The score includes soulful rhythm-and-blues songs to soft pop songs as the band charges.

Bennett's original direction and choreography make "Dreamgirls" a movie musical on the stage. The play is presented by Daedalus Productions of New York City. It starts at 8 p.m. Saturday at Shryock Auditorium. Tickets are $13 and $15.

Rose spokeswoman: 'Significant' development expected in tax case

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A spokeswoman for Pete Rose said Thursday she expects a "significant" development Friday in the former baseball star's tax evasion case.

A radio station reported that Rose will plead guilty to not reporting income from baseball card and sports memorabilia shows.

Rose has been under investigation the past year by a federal grand jury that has been trying to determine if Rose failed to report some of his income to the Internal Revenue Service.

"We expect something significant to happen tomorrow regarding Pete's tax case," said Rose spokeswoman Barb Pinzka. "Since it involves a confidential legal proceeding, it would be inappropriate to discuss it further at this time."

For the past several months, attorneys for Rose have been trying to work out a settlement with federal prosecutors.

Announcement of a development in the case indicates an agreement may have been worked out.

Cincinnati radio station WKRC reported that Rose is to plead guilty Friday to not reporting money made on sales of baseball memorabilia and from baseball card shows. No source was cited for the report.

Official says sale of Stars may be soon

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Minnesota North Stars General Manager Jack Ferreira says he expects owners George and Gordon Gund to reach an agreement to sell the club in time for the NHL Board of Governors to approve it at their meeting next month.

Ferreira has been involved in negotiations between the Gundts and two potential buyers, former Hartford Whalers minority owner Howard Baldwin and Compuware Corp. executive Peter Karmanos.

Ferreira said Wednesday he expects an agreement to be reached with one of the bidders in time for the sale to be considered at the NHL governors.

"Probably that first week in May, at the Board of Governors meeting, it's going to be approved," Ferreira said. "The actual change of ownership probably won't happen until after the draft (June 16 in Vancouver)."

Ferreira also said if the team is sold, he expects assistant general manager Dean Lombardi and the entire scouting staff to leave with him and join the expansion team the Gundts hope to purchase and establish in California. He said he did not know whether Coach Pierre Page, his assistants or other staff members would stay.

Amnesty offered for person who heisted football

MOUNT CARMEL (UPI) — Authorities are offering amnesty to anyone who returns a treasured football stolen from Mount Carmel High School on March 1, Police Chief Dan DeWitt said Thursday.

The football, stolen from a display case at the school, was signed by members of the school's 1981 Class 3-A state championship team. DeWitt said there would be no questions asked if the ball is returned by Friday at 4 p.m.

"A kid may have taken it as a prank," DeWitt said. "We have some reason to believe the ball may not be in the area. We don't want to scare anybody into destroying the ball."

DeWitt said a reward would be offered if the ball is not returned.

By George, Atlanta swings deal with Indianapolis Colts

Daily Egyptian wire services

The Indianapolis Colts acquired the first pick in Sunday's NFL draft from the Atlanta Falcons, the agent for projected No. 1 choice Jeff George said Thursday.

Leigh Steinberg, attorney for the Illinois quarterback, said the pick had been traded to the Colts. Atlanta announced earlier this week it would select George with the top choice.

"We took a trip to Atlanta last weekend and explored Atlanta and sized up the situation," Steinberg said. "Now five days later we find ourselves negotiating with the Colts."

Steinberg spoke by telephone from the airport in Indianapolis. He flew in from California and was headed to the Colts' offices to begin negotiations with General Manager Jim Irsay.

NFL sources said the Colts will give up Pro Bowl tackle Chris Hinton, receiver Andre Rison and their No. 1 pick in the 1991 draft. Indianapolis also will give up a

"I think that (playing in Indiana) makes Jeff all the more valuable to the Colts. He's local and has box-office appeal."

—Leigh Steinberg

fifth-round pick this year.

In exchange, the Falcons will give up their No. 1 pick — George — and their fourth-round choice this year.

George, a classic drop-back passer, entered the draft after finishing his junior year at Illinois. He is a native of Indiana.

"I think that makes Jeff all the more valuable to the Colts," Steinberg said. "He's local and has box-office appeal."

Steinberg said he expected George to sign a contract larger than the one Troy Aikman signed last year with the Dallas Cowboys. That contract was $11 million over six years.

Earlier in the day, Irsay said the Colts had come to an agreement on what they would give up to get George. Irsay said if the Colts cannot work out the details by Friday the deal is off. But there is a possibility that the Colts can sign George by Sunday.

The deal is hardly a shocker because it was widely known that Indianapolis and the New England Patriots were trying hard to swap for George. Atlanta will have the first pick in the draft because the Dallas Cowboys forfeited their opening-round spot by taking quarterback Steve Waish in the supplemental draft last year.

The deal would be a good one for the Falcons because it would give their talented quarterback, Chris Miller, needed protection on the front line as well as one of the best young wide receivers in the league.

we should definitely be the favorite."

The Saluki sprint team will be represented in the 100-meter dash with Lyles, Constantinou and Moore competing. Lyles and Constantinou have qualified for the 200-meter dash. The 800-meter hopefuls for the Dawgs are SFaurac Winfield and Danielle Sciano, while Michelle Sciano and Amy Bollinger have qualified for the 400-meter hurdles.

In addition, Lecann Conway, Amie Padgett, Cathy Brown and Tracy Guerin will comprise the Salukis distance team. Conway will compete at 3000-meters, Padgett at 5,000-meters and Brown and Guerin are entered in the 10,000-meter run.

DeNoon expects solid performances in the field events. Michele Williams and Nacolia Moore have qualified in the long jump and triple jump. Beverly Klett will be high jumping for the Salukis.

Shot putter Jennifer Bozue will be competing for the first time since her personal and team season-best throw of 44 4 3/4 at the Eastern Illinois Invitational. She'll be joined in the shot put by Cheryl Evers, who has a personal outdoor season-best throw of 43-8. The tandem of Bozue and Evers have qualified for the dis-year of intense coaching in the NFL before they can step in and do some things," Peterson said. "There will probably be one or two or three who can step in immediately and do some things like Barry Sanders. But they are not all going to be drafted by the Detroit Lions, and they are not all Barry Sanders. I didn't see one Barry Sanders this year."

Some of them were not even players at their colleges. Tommy Woodward, a defensive back who the NFL lists as having played at Murray State, was never on that roster.

What the juniors have done, however, is push some of the seniors down in the draft. Dolphins coach Don Shula said he expects several underclassmen to be selected before his club picks ninth. George, McCants and Jean probably all will go before the Dolphins pick.

"That same trend is going to continue through the first round and into the second round and will keep pushing good players back," Shula said.

That is the real impact that the juniors have made in the draft. The evaluation of most personnel departments in the league, including the Chiefs', is that the depth of the draft is not in prototype players in the first five or six picks as it was last year with Troy Aikman, Tony Manerich, Sanders, Derrick Thomas, Deion Sanders and Broderrick Thomas. The quality this year is the depth through three rounds.

"Even with the influx of juniors — there were 22 invited to the Indy II (a workout in Indianapolis for juniors) — there were 12 of them in that range who I would consider a high draft pick, a first-, second- or third-round (pick)," Peterson said. "From what I have been able to see in regards to the draft is that I think the quality of the draft is basically at the back end of the first round, the second round and parts of the third round."

"I would like to think that we will get a high-quality football player with our second round, and he will be fairly comparable to our first pick."

Gooden again masters Cubs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Howard Johnson doubled home two runs in the fifth inning Thursday and Dwight Gooden extended his mastery over Chicago, helping the New York Mets salvage the finale of a three-game series with a 4-1 victory over the Cubs.

Johnson lined a shot into the right-field corner, snapping a 1-1 tie and making a winner of Gooden, 1-2. John Franco hurled two innings for his third save. Mike Harkey, 1-1, took the loss. Gooden, with a 19-3 career record against the Cubs, went seven innings, allowing four hits while walking two and striking out seven.

With one out and the score tied in the fifth, Gregg Jefferies singled and Keith Miller walked, setting up Johnson for his ninth and 10th RBI of the season. Paul Assenmacher relieved and prevented any further scoring.

The Mets made it 4-1 in the eighth when Strawberry scored on a wild pitch.

formance because of his season-best time of 47.71. Pegues and John Stinson will run in the preliminary races for the Dawgs.

The Salukis are scheduled to show off their speed in two relay events. The 4 x 100-meter relay team will feature Guy Sikora, Donnell Williams, Ed Williams and Garrett Hines followed by the team of Bernard Henry, John Stinson, Donnell Williams and Eric Pegues in the 4 x 400-meter relay event.

In addition, Eric Bomball and Karl Koplin will compete in two field events. Bomball is set to throw the discus and shot put, while Koplin will participate in the shot put and the javelin event. Garrett Hines and Leonard Vance will try to take the Dawgs to new distances in the long jump.
