people and injured 600 others.

Doreen Doney, a1991 SIUC graduate with degrees in psychology and physiology, moved to a suburb of Oklahoma City in 1991. She said after the explosion occurred, shock and denial was what most people felt, and it was not until much later that people realized the enormity of

"But in a year's time, I have had the opportunity to view the people directly affected by the bombing," she said. "The survivors have suffered all types of financial hardships, but the toll is emotional."

She said the fact that a year has gone by has not helped to heal the emotional wounds.

The first anniversary of the bombing just intensifies the pain," she said. "There's lots of talk and media attention that opens up the wound even more."

She said people in Oklahoma are kept up-to-date on people injured in the explosion through constant media attention. Two children who survived the explosion are mentioned almost every day in the media, she said.

'We hear about them all the she said. "Watching them heal helps the community.

Although the remains of the federal building were removed, the buildings surrounding the site of the explosion still have windows blown out and look as if they belong in a

High voter turnout catches election officials off-guard

Erika Kohoutek, USG election commissioner, said the commission printed ballots based on last year's total of 1,490 voters. She said because there were 2,089 voters, out of a possible 18,844 this year, the election commission had problems ing up with the need for ballots at all polling voting, but that was a good problem."

Troy Alim, USG president-elect, said he was disappointed that the election commission was not prepared for the number of voters.

Alim said the election commission was asking too much of students to return to the polls at a ter time because ballots could be restocked.

Alim said another problem with the election was that a USG referendum allowing students to vote for or against University student fee increases was not available to voters until noon.

There are oversights and things that happen in every election, but the problem with the referendum was that most people didn't have an expla-nation about why it wasn't available," he said.

The referendum explained an Illinois Board of Higher Education regulation that suggests SIUC and other state universities' student fees not exceed 3 percent of the total cost of " bucation. If the University ignores the 3-percen whit, it will face monetary ce monetary penalties.

Because SIUC is budgeted to exceed that limit by .68 percent next year, students were asked if they supported the fee increase above the 3-per-cent limit, USG officials said.

Of the students who did get to vote on the ref-erendum, 822 were against raising student fees and 421 were in support of the University raising Kohoutek said the referendum ballots were late in arriving at the polls because the Election Commission did not know about the addition until Tuesday night,

CLINTON ENDS JAPANESE VISIT ON HIGH NOTE —
TOKYO—President Clinton concluded a three-day summit Thursday celbrating U.S.-Japanese friendship and strengthening security ties, then

WASHINGTON—Republican Party leaders, concerned that voters in only a bandful of states decided their party's presidential nomination, Thursday began a process that could lead to stretching out the primary season in future campaign years. Jim Nicholson, the Colorado national committeeman and bead of a task force on primaries and caucuses appointed by GOP national Chairman Haley Barbour, said the organizational meeting of his panel found unanimous agreement that the compressed calendar of 1996 primaries meant "there were not enough people involved in picking the nominee for the most important job on the planet." Nicholson said that for all practical purposes, the contest won by Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole (Kan.) was over on March 2, when Republicans in only six small states had had the opportunity to vote for a full field of aspirants.

SCIENTISTS DISCOVER TRIASSIC INSECT FOSSILS — WASHINGTON—A stone quarry straddling the border between Virginia and North Carolina has yielded some of the world's most impressive insect fossils from the Triassic period more than 200 million years ago, a time when dinosaurs were coming into their prime. The shimmering silver imprints of flies, beetles and other insects — perfectly preserved in a finely grained, charcoal gray shale — show in astonishing detail the insects' mouthparts, head hairs and even the fine fringe found on some species' wings. Scientists said the collection, which includes some of the oldest knywn examples of several major insect errours, reveals for the first oldest known examples of several major insect groups, reveals for the first time a bustling aquatic ecology that flourished during the Triassic period around the shores of a large lake near Danville, Va.

Singer/songwriter James Durst will supply the guitar and the magic tonight at Cousin Andy's Coffeehouse, 402

There is life represented in the guitar that comes through in a relaxing way, Durst said. The music needs a sacred place to be played, away from the smoke and the extra

"It is essential that a community provide a nucleus to bring people together," he said. "Venues such as Cousin Andy's are absolutely essential for the music lover and musician to commune together."

Durst's music has a folk sound that focuses on the pos itive aspects of life. He deals with environmental issues by concentrating on the wonder of nature and its beauty.

Durst has performed in more than 30 countries since 1965. He has appeared with such musicians as Leo Kottke, Pete Seeger and Tom Paxton. The 1994 release of "Wish I Were Here and Other Journeys of the Heart" is his first solo effort since 1982's "Planetary Citizen." From the moment he was born, Durst said he has felt the Does art portray women in society?

Speaker covers what pieces like the Mona Lisa say about female roles

By Melissa Jakubowski DE Assistant Features Editor

The painting of "Mona Lisa" is a symbol of a man's representation of women in art, an art history professor told a packed University Museum Auditorium on Thursday.

Clara Pascoe, an art history professor at the University of Pittsburgh, lectured on the por-trayal of women in the paintings of male artists with a slide presentation. The presentation was sponsored by the Student Programming Council.

Pascoe said male artists typically painted women as objects. She said men concentrated mostly on women's figures in their paintings.

Men's artistic portrayal of women shifted as society changed, she

She said the detailed concentration on the face of Mona Lisa is in accordance with men's ideas of women as objects of beauty. Pascoe said the monotonous facial expression represents the humble role women had in society.

Pascoe said the primary function of the early sculptures and paint-ings of Greek goddesses were for religious reasons. But the stress on their bodies gave them a sensual aspect separating them from other religious portravals.

"From the early Greek paintings to the Impressionist age, the crotic imagery was intended for a male audience," she said. "There was a connection between the artist and his audience."

Pascoe said art has never had an impact on history, but it is a reflection of the time. She said the way women were perceived in art has changed with the shifting attitudes toward women throughout

"Men portrayed women in the way they were accepted in society," she said. "Early 18th-century paintings depicted women as mother-ly roles or as servants. Not until the feminist movement in France in 1880 did women begin to take less erotic roles. Pascoe said most people perceive art differently, but she wanted the audience to take note of how the roles of women have changed

"I want this to at least be food for thought," she said, "During the time of the Impressionists, women were locked out of the sensual world their male counterparts created. The female impressionists had to pick different subjects than men.

"Not until the feminist movement did art finally be created by women about women.

Illinois House passes education funding bill

The passage of an elementary and high school funding bill by the Illinois House is being called a beginning for education reform, a state official says. However, opponents of the bill say it would be less than helpful for education, 'dding,' State Rep. USG election's gave students a good show, not much else

IS THE GLASS HALF FULL OR HALF EMPTY?

Reflecting back on this year's Undergraduate Student Government election that came to an end Wednesday, it is hard to tell if the glass ever contained anything other than voter disgust.

This was an election marred by numerous problems. Some of them include accusations between the candidates and the Election Commission, the discovery of election rules that made no sense — keeping viable candidates from being a part of the process — and an election commission that failed to get out a student fee referendum ballot until the middle of the day - after more than 800 students had already voted.

Incredibly, even with this circus for an election, more students voted - 2,089 - this year than at any time in the last five years, with the exception of 1993 when 3,000 students turned out to vote.

But now is the time for USG to remedy its election process, while the short-falls of this election are fresh in its collective Election laws that have not changed significantly since their adoption in the 1980s need to be reviewed. Students could have had three student trustee candidates to choose from Wednesday, but a requirement calling for 200 valid signatures to be obtained to run in the election knocked Troy Arnoldi out of the race, even though he was running as a write-in-candidate and had 195 valid signatures.

IN ONE OF THE BIGGEST EXAMPLES OF miscommunication, this year's election commission did not get student fee referendum ballots out to polling stations until shortly after noon.

The USG Election Commission said the referendum was not submitted to it by the USG, and the commission did not know the referendum was to be on a ballot.

This is particularly hard to accept considering one of the commission members is a USG senator and the Daily Egyptian recently ran front-page stories and editorials on this subject.

And now the Board of Trustees will not hear from more than 800 students when the USG presents the referendum at the board meeting May 9.

This election process must be run better. The election commission will be presenting recommendations to USG and the Graduate and Professional Student Council for amending the election bylaws.

Hopefully, these recommendations will be brought up for consideration quickly, before time has an opportunity to blur the rough edges this year's election revealed.

And perhaps next year the glass will appear half empty, which will be an improvement compared to what students saw this year.

Fetus' rights do not outweigh mother's

In his letter in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian, Larry J. Mitchell mentioned that abortion's legality should hinge on the humanity of the fetus. At some undeniable magic point in its development, the fetus becomes a human being and thus has rights to life, liberty, etc.

But Mr. Mitchell has forgotten an important part of the equation. The pregnant woman involved in every abortion decision also is a human being. Like it or not, her rig and liberty existed prior to the conception of the baby involved, whether the baby is human at conception or not. By my reasoning, the pregnant woman's rights include the right not to be a host for another human being, even a human baby. To say this one instance of involuntary servitude is enforce-able under equal protection the laws is iriational. It is more useful to say that full-term pregnancy and live birth is the moral and preferred course of action that is unenforceable by law, but desired by our culture. Some virtues are simply not enforceable, a lesson lost on most Americans.

Rainbow's End a good asset for University

I would like to compliment the good deed that Rainbow's Twomarinke to companion the good need that rainnow's End sire providing for the University community. For those of you who don't know what Rainbow's End is, or what services frigovides, let me fill you in. Rainbow's End is a preschool or campus. It provides day care services for SIUC students and faculty members. They provide excellent care and programs for the children. What I like most about the cities is that they provide culturally diverse learning pro-grains for the children. This is a good idea because the University population also is diverse. The center also pro-vides learning experiences for people in the College of Education. One example of this would be the student workers who are employed there. These workers are usually education majors; and by working there they are gaining experience. They also give tours to University classes. All in all, Rainbow's End is a good asset to the University.

Did U.S. concern for Bosnia justify Iran arms pipeline?

For four long years the war in Bosnia defied Big Power fiddling, arm-twisting and diplo-matic initiatives, finally collapsing last fall because the combatants simply ran out of gas the Americans and Europeans been able to foresee that outcome, some considerable missteps-might not have been made, including the Clinton administration's decision to wink at Iranian arms shipments to the Muslim-led Bosnian government despite a U.N. arms embargo.

That administration decision achieved a result many in Washington had long and openly thought fair and positive, giving the outgunned Bosnians a fighting chance against superior Bosnian Serbian forces. But the fact was that hardly anyone knew of the plan, certainly not in detail. The CIA, for instance, and responsible congressional committees were in the dark.

A Los Angeles Times report Friday was the first public disclosure that the White House and State Department told Croatian President Franjo Tudjman in 1994 that the United States would not raise an objection to an Iranian arms pipeline through Croatia to Bosnia, with the Croatians taking a cut. With the Iranian weapons came Iranian trainers

Yes, the White House decision helped level the field in the Bosnian war, but surely the administration should have been more sensitive to the Iranian factor. Iran-Contra is not even in the history books yet. The Clinton administration, like its predecessors, has pursued a policy of containing Iranian influence beyond the Persian Gulf. Why then did the administration choose to tacitly endorse Iran's shipment of arms? Weren't there some other options at that time, including putting the question of the U.N. arms embargo back on the table? (It was partially lifted in December, after the Americanengineered accord brought a cease-fire and an uneasy peace to Bosnia.)

Fallout from the disclosures has begun and President Clinton is feeling the pressure in an election year. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., his presumed the details of the Times report 'disturbing news" and asked pertinent Scnate committees to investigate. Speaker Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., followed suit.

The White House circled its wagons, declaring that the secret policy followed the letter of the law in adherence to the U.N. embargo. The embargo was central to diplomacy in the brutal fighting that began in 1991 among the broken shards of the former Yugoslavia. The idea was to give no fighting force and advantage, not the Serbs, the Croatians or the Bosnians. But the Serbs already had the might of the former Yugoslav army and the industrial power to make the armaments it needed. The Croatians had built a powerful military as well. Bosnia had next to nothing and, as the most multiethnic of the former Yugoslav republics, it was primed for civil explosion; clearly it was disadvantaged the most by an arms embargo.

The proceding editorial appeared in Sunday's Los Angeles Times.

Caricature of Saluki dawg soon to be seen on buses

By Mary Beth Arimond Daily Egyptian Reporter

Demetris Koumides was surprised to win $300 for winning a contest for his design that will be placed on the sides of the Saluki Express buses.

Koumides, a senior in design from Nicosia, Cyprus, said he never expected the victory because his design, which is a caricature of a Saluki Dawg with his tongue hanging out, received a poor grade in a general education course.

He said his instructor from GEC 205. Innovation for the Contemporary Environment, entered all the designs created in class to the "Embellish the Bus Contest."

Koumides said he was honored for his design April 8 at a Mass Transit Advisory Board meeting. He said the board, which is comprised of representatives from Undergraduate Student Government, Graduate and Professional Student Council, the School of Art and Design, the City of Carbondale and Student Affairs, discussed how they were going to use the design, which was picked out of more than 500 entries.

He said the board will implement the design on the buses this summer.

Koumides said while he was creating the design for his class, he decided to make it represent SIUC and the Saluki Express Mass Transit design would be cheap and inexpensive for the University," he said, "It would draw attention to the public when the bus drives at a fast pace."

'He said it also was a fresh look for the Saluki Dawg.

"I've always seen the Saluki Dawg designed as a real-life dog." he said "Instead, I think Saluki Dawgs are supposed to be fun and humorous."

Scan Borman, transportation clerk for Saluki Express, said the board wanted to dress up the buses.

"They thought that students would bring in good ideas to make the buses more appealing, and that's why the board went ahead to have this competition," he said.

He said the competition was open to all students in the fall to try to make the Mass Transit System distinctive and attractive enough to ride.

Adam Kantrovich, a graduate student in agriculture education from Des Plaines and the chair of Mass Transit Advisory Board, said the board was not looking for anything specific.

"We were trying to find an image that would represent SIUC and Saluki Express," he said. "We didn't want our identity to be similar with the athletic department because they have their own version of a Saluki Dawg. Instead, we wanted to find our own representation."

He said the board also was trying to find a design that would not be too flashy, and one that everyone could identify with the Saluki Express. He said Koumides' design stood out from the other entries because it was simple, classic and something that looked inviting.

He said all the entries were unique, but Koumides' design had a fun-loving character that was attractive to the public.

Kantrovich said on Wednesday, GPSC voted to not change the image on the Saluki Express unless it receives income from advertising.

"The vote ensures the students that no student fees will go directly to add changes to the bus," he said.

Officials advocate four-lane highway

By Tammy Taylor Daily Egyptian Reporter

Although studies show that a fourlane highway connecting Carbondale to St. Louis is not financially feasible, state representatives say the highway would bring economic growth to Southwestern Illinois.

Rep. Terry Deering, D-DuBois, said a four-lane highway connecting Carbondale to St. Louis is needed to improve access to and from the region's businesses. Several out-of-state businesses, which have looked into relocating in Southwestern Illinois, have asked about interstate access, he said.

Deering said he believes Southwestern Illinois has been bypassed by businesses seeking expansion because the area lacks an interstate highway system.

interstate highway system.

Deering said the recent shutdown of Sparta Printing, that eliminated approximately 850 union jobs, and the continued closing of coal mines are some of the reasons a new highway is needed. He said Southern and Southwestern Illinois are economically depressed, and building a highway could initiate economic growth.

way could initiate economic grown.

"A new four-lane highway would provide the necessary link to the prosperous St. Louis area," Deering earld

He said Northeastern Illinois has low unemployment rates and is outpacing the country in job creation. He said this is happening because state government is not interested in helping to bring private sector jobs to Southwestern Illinois.

Bill Kirk, a program planning engineer for the Illinois Department of Transportation, said a study in October 1995 looked at the feasibility of building a toll read connecting Carbondale to St. Louis. He said the study showed the number of vehicles traveling on the highway would not be significant enough to justify the construction of a four-lane toll highway.

The study showed that traffic on the highway would range from 7,100 to 9,300 vehicles per day. The maximum toll charged for driving the entire length of the highway would be about $7 for cars and $15 to $18 for trucks, he said.

"In order to make a four-lane toll

"In order to make a four-lane toll road feasible, at least 50,000 cars would have to travel the highway a day." Kirk said.

day," Kirk said.
Deering said his office is preparing the proposal for a four-lane highway, not a toll road. He said he is hoping to build support from colleagues in the Illinois House of Representatives and in the state Senate.

Rep. Mike Bost, R-Murphysboro, said he would support Deering's efforts to build a four-lane highway. He said a new highway would bring economic growth to the region.

"If IDOT had taken the money

"If IDOT had taken the money they have spent on feasibility studies over the past 40 years, the highway would have been built already," Bost said

Barb Brown, Senate candidate for the 58th District, said the issue of a four-lane highway has been discussed in the past. She said a new highway would give a rural area like Carbondale access to larger business

"The places where industry is located and economies are prospering are the areas with an avenue to transport goods," she said.

Mysteries still shroud Oklahoma bombing case

The Washington Post

OKLAHOMA CITY-In the frantic days following the bombing of a federal building here — even after the FBI had two prime suspects in custody — dozens of wit-nesses continued to insist that another man was involved. John Doe No. 2 was seen driving the yellow truck allegedly used in the blast and even emerging from the vehicle just moments before it exploded.

But a massive manhunt for this mystery man with olive-skin and a baseball cap turned up nothing. And today, the government admits it still has no idea who John Doe No. 2 is, or whether he even exists.

This is just one of the many mysteries and unanswered que tions that swirl around the April 19, 1995, bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, in which 168 people were killed in the worst case of mass murder in U.S. history.

Timothy James McVcigh, 27, and Terry Lynn Nichols, 41, await trial on 11 counts of conspiracy and murder in Denver, where a judge moved the case after decid-ing the two men could not get a fair ing the two men could not get a fair trial in Oklahoma. A court date has not yet been set. With no consistent eyewitnesses from the scene and no confessions, the enigmas loom large. Among them: Was a second truck involved in the bombing and if so, who drove it? If Nichols was part of the conspiracy, why do two friends, who have turned state's evidence, say Nichols wanted out of the conspiracy months before the bomb ing? If the two orchestrated a robbery to finance their plot, as the government alleges, then why is the case officially unsolved and no robber identified?

Government sources acknowledge that unresolved questions could create doubt in the minds of a death-penalty case jury, when the case eventually comes to trial later this year or early next year. But after interviewing thousands of witnesses, combing through reams of telephone records and sifting tons of debris from the wreckage, the government believes it has a powerful circumstantial case against the suspects.

Among the government's more compelling evidence is McVeigh's fingerprint on a receipt found in Nichols's house for fertilizer used in the bomb, witnesses who can identify McVeigh as the man who rented the truck used in the explosion, and phone records showing intensive contact between the two men in the days leading up to the blast. Still, as the O.J. Simpson trial and acquittal memorably demonstrated, mounting a circum-stantial case with no eyewitnesses to the crime can be tricky in today's criminal courtroon

McVeigh's lawyer Stephen Jones has already served noticed that he intends to east doubt on the government's case by introducing countless other potential suspects, from international terrorists to American white supremacists. He even suggested a possible defense that could spare McVeigh the death penalty: if he were involved at all, he would only have been an minor player in a larger conspiracy.

How all this will play out before a jury is far from clear. "In order to prove a case, you have to tell a story and the story has to fit togeth-cr," said Washington, D.C., criminal lawyer Victoria Toensing.

Area businesses, groups and indi-viduals will gather Saturday for the Annual Carbondale Clean-Up Day when they will help pick up trash around the city.

Peggy Melone, the executive director of Carbondale Clean and Green, Inc., 1212 W. Main St., said the purpose of the Annual Clean-Up Day is to keep Carbondale beautiful and litter-free.

"Every year, we target areas with a lot of trash," she said.

Carbondale Clean and Green is a non-profit organization certified by It offers programs on solid waste management along with other environmental programs.

Melone said the people who volunteer to pick up trash bring in a lot of recycleables as well.

"Last year, we picked up five tons of trash and recycleables," she said. "We recycle all of the glass, aluminum and tin that we can."

Melone said this project has been bringing people from the area together for eight years.
"I really like doing this because it brings together the University, area businesses and individuals all work-ing for one thing."

Melone said more than 500 volunteers have signed up to partici-

Bill Rongcy, a member of the Delta Chi fraternity, said his group has been involved with the Carbondale Clean-Up Day for five years.

"We do anything we can to better the community and respect the people of the community, and this gives us a chance to do both," he said.

Rongey said he bas seen an rongey said he has seen an increase in participation during the last five years, and he said he enjoys voluntering.

"It's a good $\frac{1}{2}$ because you're there with all your brothers and friends working for the same goal," he said.

The Clean-Up Day will coincide with Earth Day awareness campaigns aimed at promoting conser-vation and recycling.

NBC brings 'The Beast' to T

HOLLYWOOD-It took just four words from NBC executive Lindy DeKoven last year to send her colleagues sitting inside a corporate office leaping out of their chairs.

"I'm thinking 'Peter Benchley's "The Beast," " said DeKoven, NBC's senior vice president of miniscries and motion pictures for "Great!" exclaimed Vince Manze the network's senior vice president of advertising and promotion. "We love it!" exclaimed John Miller, executive vice president of advertising & promotion and event pro-

Then the two honchos calmed down and asked DeKoven, "What

When DeKoven explained that she was proposing a movie based on Benchley's best seller about a horrifying ocean creature that terrorizes a small seaside community, the ideas started flying from Manze and

Miller and others inside the office as they brainstormed on ways to turn "The Beast" into a major event of the 1995-96 season

Those ideas soon took shape in the outline for a multimillion-dollar promotional campaign: huge bill-boards in Times Square and on Sunset Boulevard.

An avalanche of commercials and teasers. Countless buses with placards of a bikini-clad swimmer unaware of the massive tentacles reaching out to grab her.

Giant tentacles wrapped around the "Today" show's Windows of the World studio in New York.

Higher corporate powers drew the ne at the latter notion. But all the other plans were quickly put in motion. executives at NBC and MCA Television Entertainment, the distributor of the four-hour miniscries that premieres next Sunday, say it is almost impossible to walk down the street or to watch NBC and not see ads for "The Beast.

Both NBC and MCA are keeping their fingers crossed that the movie will be a blockbuster.

Elsewhere in the TV industry, however, the long-range planning and the aggressiveness of NBC's "Beast" campaign are seen as the latest examples of how the network itself has come on like a beast in the past two years, using its tentacles of savvy marketing, relentless promotion, smart programming and risktaking tactics to reclaim the prime-time ratings crown this season that it held through most of the 1980s but then lost in 1992.

With its invincible Thursday night slate, its surging Tuesday night lineup, lavish, heavily promoted projects such as the "Gulliver's Travels" miniseries, "surst" like the one-hour episode of "Friends" fol-lowing the Super Bowl and the latenight triumph of "The Tonight Show" leading the way, NBC has reversed itself just two years after languishing in third place among the major TV networks

Muslims kill 18 in Egypt; worst attack in years

Los Angeles Times

ROME-In the worst attack on foreigners in four years of Islamic revolt in Egypt, Muslim extremists screaming "God is Great!" opened fire Thursday on a crowd of elderly Greek religious pilgrims outside a Cairo botel.

Eighteen of the pilgrims died under the automatic-weapons fire, and another 16 and a Egyptian taxi driver were wounded in the early morning attack at the Europa Hotel less than a mile from the Great Pyramid, the government said. The killers escaped.

To analysts, the attack seemed a testimony to Islamic unrest within Egypt rather than a spillover from the explosive flux in Lebanon and Egyptian officials blamed the attack on Muslim fundamentalists who have made foreign tourists premium targets in their battle to replace the secular Egyptian gov-ernment with strict Islamic rule.

The attack came just after 7 a.m. Thursday on busy Pyramids Road. Dozens of religious pilgrims, many of them gray-haired men and women who spoke only Greek, were filing into buses outside the eight-story hotel after breakfast.

The group, which had arrived in Cairo after touring the Holy Land, was en route to Alexandria for an audience with Orthodox Patriarch Parthenios III.

Witness said four killers in black leather jackets and carrying automatic weapons spilled out of a minivan and, screaming and shooting, ran for the hotel. "God is " one witness heard the killers

North Korea to discuss medium-range missiles

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON-Senior U.S. and North Korean officials are scheduled to meet in Berlin on Saturday and Sunday to discuss long-standing U.S. concerns about North Korea's ballistic about Notin Notes's Sainstic missile program, including its exports of medium-range mis-siles to the Middle East, U.S. officials said Thursday. The talks are the opening stage of what the officials say could become formal U.S. negotiations with the communist regime aimed at shutting down the North Korean missile pro-gram, possibly in exchange for an eventual loosening of U.S. restrictions on trade and investment in North Korea.

The missile discussion is scheduled to take place four days after the United States and South Korea proposed joint negotiations with North Korea and China on a formal treaty to end the 1950-1953 Korean War and related measures to reduce military tensions on the Korea peninsula. In a statement th peninsula. In a statement that surprised some U.S. officials, North Korea indicated Thursday that it did not plan to reject the peace talks outright.

Washington considers North Korea's steadily improving missile arsenal one of its top security concerns because of the country's proximity to South Korea and Japan and its history of selling Scud-B rockets and other arms to Iran and Syria. The Scud-B and three, longer-range missiles now under development are capable of carrying nuclear, chemical and biological war-

Although the Clinton admin-istration first proposed talks on the missile issue last year, North Korea had rejected the idea until recently. The timetable had been rumored since February, but State Department spokesmen had repeatedly refused to con-firm it because of a North Korean request that it remain

With simulcasting, tracks still don't get picture

The 'Vashington Post

Ever since the advent of full-card simulcasting, horseplayers have complained about racetracks' television presentations. Of course, it was inevitable that tracks would need some trial and error to learn the optimal way to display betting information and show their races. But with so many tracks experimenting, the industry should have developed a consensus on the best way to put on Regrettably, that hasn't happened. The people in charge of racetrack video often seem n:ore infatuated with gimmickry than concerned about conveying information. Sometimes they do things that are preposterously stupid. And when one track does come up with a smart idea that customers like, other tracks invariably are slow to adopt it.

The most important part of a simulcast is, of course, the running of the race itself. In recent years, many U.S. tracks have chosen to employ a split screen-the top half of the screen giving a wide-angle view of the whole field, with the bottom showing a close-up of the leaders. The concept sounds better than it millions of dollars a day in simulcast wagering, but it's nearly impossible for bettors to tell what's going on in those races. The wide-angle camera shot is so wide that the horses might as well be ants. Sometimes the bottom of the screen shows only a lone

There would be no need for a split screen if every track showed its races as intelligently as the New York Racing Association does. Although its pan shot may be old-fashioned, it is adjusted according to the circum-stances of the race. If a six-horse field is racing in a tight pack, the horses will be shown close-up. If a speed-ster dashes off to a five-length lead, a wide-angle view shows as many horses as possible.

New York's race coverage is also smart enough to avoid one type of ers in Maryland (and elsewhere).

At Pimlico last week, a filly named Memory and Me was run Memory and Me was running away from her field en route to a 12-length victory; behind her was a tight battle for second and third places. An overwhelming percentage of the money wagered on the race was in the exact ta and twin-trifecta pools, and so the identity of the second-place finisher was crucial to most bettors. Yet the camera zoomed in for a tight shot of Memory and Me crossing the finish line-and ignored the action behind her. An arty close-up like this might be justifiable when Cigar is crossing the wire in the Breeders' Cup Classic,  cheap maiden claiming race. Tracks should try to show the outcome of exactas and trifectas.

Following the action in a televised race can be especially difficult in a simulcast environment, because there is often no audio accompanying the simulcast. A bettor needs to identify the horses according to the numbers on their saddlecloths, or else to see the numbers of the leaders displayed on the TV screen. Many tracks have helped viewers by adopting standardized saddlecloth colors: If a bettor catches a glimpse of a horse with a green saddlecloth making a big move, he knows it's No. 5. This is a good, sensible idea, but important tracks such as Aqueduct and Keeneland evidently feel it's too radical and persist in using saddlecloths that are all the same color.

Bettors need to make an effort to identify the leaders in a race, becan the numbers the tracks post on the television screen frequently bear no resemblance to reality. The other day I saw a race where Nos. 2, 1 and 6 led the field in the stretch, and the television screen read: 3-7-11. It's hard to believe that a multibillion-dollar industry can't hire people capable of pushing a button that corresponds to the number of a front-numer.

If watching a race is regularly exasperating for simulcast patrons, so too is the experience of trying to get essential betting information. When a bettor is trying to follow several tracks at once, he wants to be able to glance at a television screen and see immediately the horses' odds, plus probable payoffs in exactas, doubles, ctc. Racetracks need to keep this vital information on the screen as much as possible. But they all insist on extras that the customers don't wantnotably the talking heads who give selections that nobody pays attention to. Almost every track puts some useless shot on the screen. At Calder, with one minute to post time, odds may be removed from the screen in favor of a graphic that says the upcoming event is a six-furlong claiming race. Philadelphia Park sometimes delays showing the pay-offs after a race so it can give viewers a shot of trainers talking to their jock-

Friday, April 19, 1996

If television were merely a peripheral part of racetracks' operations, these shoddy presentations might at least be understandable. But simulcasting is now the heart of the racing business, and it's time that the industry starts doing it right

Sparky Anderson will be there when the Detroit Tigers move into Anaheim Stadium Priday night. The Tiger manager for 16 seasons before this one will make his debut as an

ESPN analyst.

He is certain to be asked about the fast start of his former first baseman, Cecil Fielder, who leads the American League in runs batted in and has nine home runs, two shy of the major league record for April. What Anderson will say is that the lumbering Fielder has never been a fast starter in cold weather and "this has vaulted him in position to reach 50 again. There's no telling now.

Sixty, perhaps?

"I won't be surprised at anything guys like Cecil, Albert Belle and Ken Griffey do in a full season with the smaller parks and bad pitching. Anderson said, warming up for his Bad pitching? Livelier baseballs? Perhaps.

Smaller parks, bigger and stronger athletes, a tighter strike zone?

Definitely.

Diluted pitching in an era of expansion? No question.

"We've seen this coming for five years or more," Anderson said.

"There just isn't enough pitching.

"You got guys hanging around, going from team to team, who should have discovered lens time. should have disappeared a long time ago. Except maybe for Atlanta and the Dodgers, nobody has more than a couple quality starters."

How to measure the ineffective

Consider that 21 of the 28 teams, concerned that they wouldn't have enough, opened the season with more than the usual 10 pitchers, and that a comparatively weak array of opening-day pitchers included Felipe Lira (9-13) of Detroit and Carlos

Reyes (4-9) of Oakland, Consider that the American League's 4.80 and 4.71 earned-run averages of the last two seasons were the highest in consecutive seasons and that the National League's, without the designated hitter, were 4.04, 4.21 and 4.19 for the last three seasons, the highest in that league for a three-year period.

The golfers will play 36 holes Monday and 18 Tuesday.

Southern has hosted only two women's golf conference championships in its history.

The first was played in Mt. Vernon in 1986, in which the Salukis won with a team score

In 1991 the host site was Jackson Country Club near Murphysboro, and the Salukis finished in fourth place scoring 1.020.

Last season the golfers finished 7th in Cedar Falls, Iowa with a total of 967.

SIUC women's golf coach Diane Daugherty said the University of Tulsa is an intimidating opponent, but she believes the Aces can be defeated.

We're of the opinion that miracles can happen, and there is nobody that is too good that they can't be beaten." Daugherty said.

Senior golfer Jennifer Prasse said playing at home allows the team to enter the tournament relaxed, since they have the fans behind them and they don't have to travel to another location.

"We get to sleep in our own beds, and we don't have to get in the van," Prasse said.

"We have friends who can watch us, and we're familiar with the course."

Prasse, who will be playing in her last collegiate conference meet, said she hopes to post some good scores

"It's real important to me this is the last tournament of my collegiate career," she said.

"Since we're hosting it, I really want to play well."

The golfers have been practic-ing on the golf course exactly the way it will be set for the champi-

"We've set up the golf course like it is going to be played, but the weather can obviously change that in a heartbeat," she said.

"Our only strategy is to play so we're very familiar with what's going on here.

Halfway through the MVC schedule, this season is shaping up in much the same fashion, as the Shockers currently lead the Valley with a 9-2 (.818) record, and the Salukis are close behind with a third-place 10-6 (.625) conference mark behind Southwest Missouri State's 10-5 record.

This weekend the Salukis travel to Wichita, Kan. to battle the Shockers in what could turn out to be the decisive four-game series of the conference season, and undoubtedly the Dawgs' biggest test of their ability to become a dominant club in the Valley.

The test will not be easy, as WSU is cur-rently ranked third in the nation by Collegiate Baseball, third by USA Today Baseball Weekly and sixth by Baseball America.

this year that have been ranked at one time or another, but this would be the highest ranked team we've played thus far.

"So at No. 3, I guess at least on paper that makes it better than 20th or 25th."

Also to Southern's advantage is its young pitching staff, which picked up the slack for an inconsistent rotation earlier this season.

Freshman Jason Frasor (3-2) and sophomore David Piazza (4-0) both picked up wins against Southwest Missouri State University last weekend, and figure to be the top-two hurlers in the rotation this weekend, follo by juniors Tory Hatten and Chris Schullian. Junior First baseman Aaron Jones is also an ace in the hole for the Salukis, as he was named the MVC's Player of the Week following the team's victory over Missouri.

In that week, Jones hit .524 with four extra-base hits and 10 runs batted in, and this season, Jones has batted .383 with six home runs and 44 RBIs.

While WSU possesses some of the top talent in the country — such as pitchers Ben Thomas (7-0, 1.77 ERA) and Braden Looper (1.32 ERA ,8 saves), and Travis Wycoff, whose .381 batting average is fourth in the MVC — Callahan said he is only expecting his team to play well, and hopes for the best.
"(The goal is) to play well," he said.

"Obviously, if we went in and won three out of four, that would be one hell of a week-

"Obviously winning is the ultimate goal, in anything you keep score in, whether it's play-ing Scrabble of baseball."
