Greek system lobbies to discontinue Select 2000

Task force formed to study initiative's effect on a greek system struggling to get out from under its thumb

KAREN BLATTER
ACADEMIC AFFAIRS EDITOR

Select 2000 had weakened the unity in SIUC's greek system until greek leaders got together to stand up against the program recently, according to a greek leader.

Tony Blood, president of Inter-Greek Council, said Select 2000 has lowered the passion of the greek system for members, but the greeks' ability to fight the program has brought them back together.

"This is going to change some feelings among greeks," he said. "It'll improve the morale."

In the past months, greek leaders have met with campus administrators to discuss the influence and results of the 2-year-old initiative.

Because of the greeks expressing their concerns, a task force with Tom Guernsey, interim provost des-

The initiative states that within the greek system the culture needs to be changed. Greeks need to be a guide in collegian behavior and have a value-based emphasis.

JAY SCHWAB
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC President Ted Sanders is forced to play the waiting game, after making a strong appeal in front of the House Appropriations Committee to bolster the University's state funding level late last week.

Sanders and SIUC Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger, joined by SIUC-Edwardsville Chancellor David Werner, trekked to Springfield April 15 intent upon persuading the committee to restore money axed in previous rounds of the budgeting process.

The committee will make its budget recommendation April 29, at which time the process will move to the House floor for consideration.

The University's lobbying efforts at the House hearing were spearheaded by Sanders, who argued that the General Assembly should uphold the higher education budget determined by Gov. George Ryan in February.

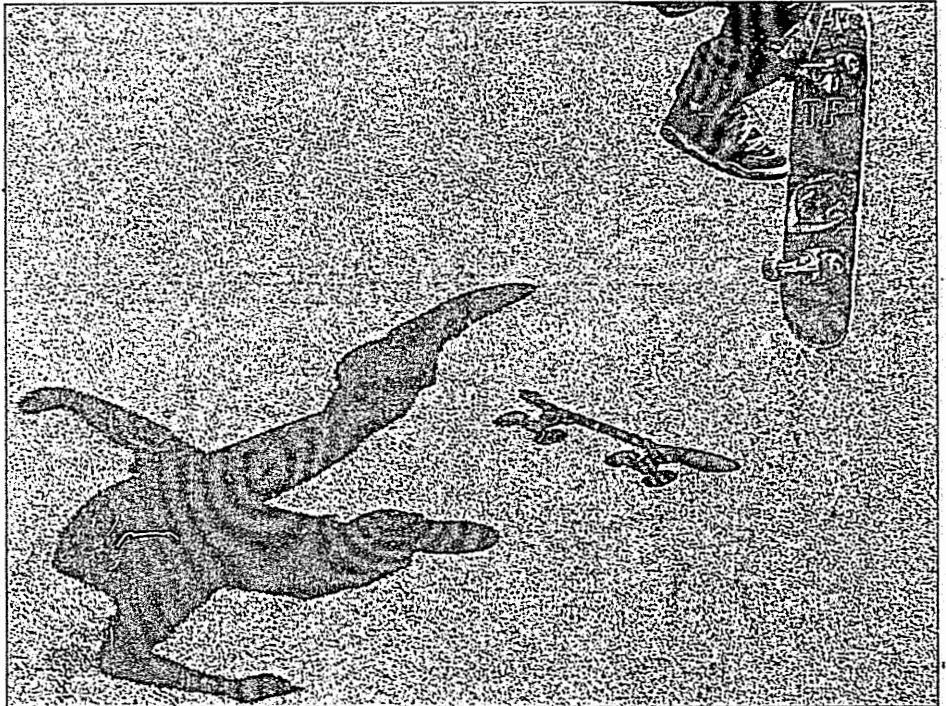

"I straight-forwardly asked the House to restore [the budget] to the governor's number," Sanders said. "That was our message."

Ryan recommended a $137-million boost for higher education funding in Fiscal Year 2000. However, the governor's budget trimmed the Illinois Board of Higher Education's original FY 2000 recommendation from a 7.5-percent general fund increase to a 6.2-percent increase.

The reduction required the IBHE to retool its allocations to state universities. About 27 percent of SIUC's additional funding for FY 2000 — the largest percentage of any school — was paid, totaling about $3.5 million.

Providing a second critical blow to the University, the Senate Appropriations Committee recommended no funding for several SIUC programs. The areas affected by the Senate's decision include teaching excellence in mathematics and science, the Aquaculture Research and Demonstration Center, soybean research, the Public Policy Institute and technology enhancements.

Although reluctant to prognosticate what form the final budget will take, Sanders said he believes the House committee was open

Campaigns become dirty on eve of USG elections

DAN CRAFT
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Negative campaign literature and threats of legal action shattered the once-peaceful tone of Undergraduate Student Government campaigning Tuesday as Millennium Party Presidential candidate Joe Sanchez made plans to file a lawsuit.

Sanchez alleges libel and slander against Select Party opponent Sean Henry and SIUC student Jayma Richrath.

The lawsuit, Sanchez said, stems from negative fliers distributed across campus Tuesday. The fliers included supposed statements by Sanchez and running mates Ted Clark and Tony Williams' degrading other students and suggesting racial slurs.

The Millennium candidates deny having made any of the statements.

Henry and his running mate Brian Atchison maintain they are in no way responsible for the fliers.

"If he wants to file a lawsuit, that's fine. He's just wasting his time," Henry said.

Sanchez said he knows people who witnessed the distribution but declined to identify his sources for legal reasons.

Sanchez's attorney, Steven

Stern of Stern and Devitt, Ltd. of Chicago, said he is researching the possibility of filing a libel and slander action against Henry.

"We plan to hold the campaign of his opponent responsible," Stern said.

He indicated that he would seek reimbursements for Sanchez's campaign costs and damages to his reputation.

Stern added that a suit also might be filed against whomever posted the fliers. Stern had no information as to who that party might be but said legal actions could be taken to identify the person or persons involved.

Sanchez said the suit also is being filed on behalf of Clark and Williams.

Richrath has admitted to placing anti-Sanchez literature outside the Lesar Law School Thursday but says she was unaware of the fliers posted Tuesday.

The Thursday posters did not promote any party but encouraged students not to vote for Sanchez.

"Vote No to Sanchez," those posters stated.

The fliers posted Tuesday are the focus of Sanchez's legal actions. Stern said quotes on the posters portray Sanchez as racist and are fabricated.

"I know nothing about the posters today," Richrath said.

Richrath also denied any ties with Henry and the Select Party.

Vulgar language used in attack on SIUC student

University police are searching for a man who reportedly entered a woman's on-campus residence and made sexual remarks early Saturday morning. A 19-year-old woman told police Monday morning that around 3 a.m. Saturday a man she did not know came into her room at Allen Hall shouting vulgar comments in what police are calling a random incident. The suspect eventually fled the residence hall when the woman yelled at him to leave, police said. It was unclear whether alcohol played a part in the incident, but police said the woman was not intoxicated. Police have not identified anyone in this incident and said there were no other witnesses. SIU Police Lt. Todd Sigler said the case is being investigated based on interviews with the victim. He could not specify on charges a suspect might face.

The Finance Committee of USG has been meeting with RSOs to determine the funding levels for each organization next year. The senate must approve the funding allotments recommended by the Finance Committee. A question-and-answer session also will be sponsored before the proposed levels are voted on so the Finance Committee can respond to any concerns of RSOs. USG will meet tonight at 7 in Ballroom B of the Student Center.

Students stage sit-in to support custodians

Students at Fairfield University staged a sit-in Thursday and Friday that ended only when university officials assured them they would review issues tied to custodial workers' efforts to unionize. About 40 students calling themselves members of an activist group named Concerned University Community marched into the campus administration building April 15, demanding that Fairfield's president sign an agreement that would allow the campus' janitorial workers to unionize by May 1. Students also said they were pushing for custodians to have better working conditions and health benefits and higher wages than the average $7 an hour they're now making.

SIUC home of two rare women

Only 25 women enrolled nationwide in four-year auto program

KELLY E. HERTLEIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Kelly DeSimone spends up to four hours a day, five days a week, huddled beneath the hood of a car or studying the internal workings of a vehicle. DeSimone is one of only 25 women in the United States enrolled in a four-year automotive program. "People are usually a little taken back by my major," she said. "But most are just curious to know how and why I was interested in automobiles." DeSimone said she has always had an interest in the automotive field. Because of previous experience, she was not nervous or intimidated by the low percentage of women in the industry.

"I took two years of automotive classes in high school and only one other female was with me at the time, so I was already used to the idea of being outnumbered," DeSimone said. "And really it has never been a problem here." The rapid growth in the enrollment of women into four-year universities has prompted automotive department directors across the country to wonder why attracting female students into their programs is such a struggle. Aside from SIUC, only three other universities, in the nation, offer a four-year degree in automotive technologies: Ferris State University, Pittsburgh State University and Weber State University. Women comprise fewer than 3 percent of the student population within the automotive field program. SIUC falls below this percentage. There are currently just 25 female automotive students in the United States, two of which are from SIUC, four from Ferris State University, seven from Pittsburgh State University and 12 from Weber State University. SIUC will be graduating 35 automotive students in May. The fall enrollment roster includes no prospective female students. Jack Greer, acting chairperson and assistant professor for automotive technologies, said few people realize the full realm of potentials an automotive degree may have to offer. He said it is possible that the stigma of a gas pump attendant has deterred women from seeking automotive opportunities. "There are several types of jobs one can get with an automotive degree, that people just don't think about," Greer said. "A lot of our four-year graduates go to corporate positions, most of which are closely related to engineering jobs. This is a male-dominated field, but people should realize it is not just changing oil at Amoco." Greg Key, program coordinator for automotive services at Ferris State University in Big Rapids, Mich., said the women students in automotive technologies tend to strive harder to succeed — and do. "Many of our female students have jobs before they leave our University," he said. "They can have a job in place as early as December. Most, if not all, of the women will graduate, and it would be safe to say that they are probably the higher average of our students." Pittsburgh State University will not be graduating any female automotive students in May, but Automotive Technologies Coordinator and professor Ken Gordon said seven female students of the 210 enrolled will be returning in the fall. Despite the existence of the university's new $30-million technologies building, Gordon said recruiting techniques in attracting women to the program

SIUC acquires new recycling trailers

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC students, faculty and staff who do not have recycling bins or trailers in their neighborhoods will now be able to use five new trailers on campus. A recycling trailer includes 10 separate bins, making it easier to separate recyclable items. Marian Brown, associate director of SIUC's plant and service operations, said the five additional recycling trailers are on order. The bins will be paid by a grant received from the Illinois' Department of Commerce and Community Affairs. Brown said every year the Department of Commerce offers a round of recycling grants. SIUC applied for the grant last year and the University received the grant to furnish the bins for residence halls. Brown said they simply applied for another grant this year. The other five recycling trailers have been purchased through Travel Service on campus.

Referendums will mean nothing unless you vote

It just wouldn't be a good Undergraduate Student Government election without some controversy and promises of legal recourse would it? Even if candidates are being defamed on the airwaves or in print and flashbacks of "I am not a crook" are echoing in your brain, there are still two other reasons to mob the polls today.

In addition to selecting your next outstanding student body representative, a trip to the polls gives you a shot at shooting down Select 2000 and a voice to speak on the technology fee issue.

Realistically, the only surprise involved with the Select 2000 referendum will be if students vote in support of the initiative. The students, greeks in particular, have been saying all along that it was unfair for the program to be implemented without any student input, so now we have that chance with this referendum to the USG election ballot.

It cannot be disputed that Select 2000 has not won the hearts of the greek system. Whether or not any greek organization has died because of it, depends on from who you get your information. Select 2000 has at times been a scapegoat and at other times a source of genuine concern.

The program has its faults in restrictions from basic adult rights and its promises in service contribution and academia.

So it's been good and bad, but now it's time to eliminate the bad. Realistically, the referendum will probably get a resounding "no" vote from the students, but it's only a non-binding contribution, meaning the administration will look at it but they don't have to change anything because of it.

The flaws in implementation and the program itself are worthy of some sort of reworking. The University probably isn't really out to get rid of our greek system, but Select 2000 is turning away a lot of potential members. Not having a greek system is bad for recruitment and retention, as it would be the loss of part of traditional college life. In short, the DAILY EGYPTIAN supports at least a negotiating of the workings of our pilot initiative. To have this done, students must come out in large numbers and vote on the referendum so the administration takes notice.

The other reason to invade the polling booths is the technology fee referendum appearing on the student trustee ballot. In order for us to be competitive with other universities and improve our technology on campus, the University says we'll have to pay $25 per semester extra.

If you want up-to-date hardware and software and the ability to use modern technology in your classes, you're going to have to pay for it. If it's worth an extra $50 a year to you then you're ready for a yes vote on the referendum, if not then vote no.

To us the fee seems reasonable. Fifty dollars is not a lot to pay for the convenience of modern technology including Internet access, software upgrades and better computer lab accessibility. As long as the fee can make us competitive and comparable to what other schools offer, and the money implementation carries an accountable paper trail so we can see what the new fee money is actually accomplishing, we support it.

Let's cut get to the heart of the matter. As students, we need to swarm the polling places today. There's no registration process — all you need is your student ID and an opinion.

There's a lot of drama swirling around the USG elections that could be a turnoff to voters, but there's a student trustee election and two important referendums needing student input besides the USG election.

Don't let the whirlwind of the campaigns make you apathetic to the process. Instead, take the time to make a difference in the future of your University and vote.

Bow down to the god of eternal soft blue light

We often take faith in the very things that are created with flaws. We look to government, to education and most of all to technology. We put faith in the fact that our cars will start in the morning and deliver us from our homes. We put faith in the fact that at any time of day we can pick up a telephone and rest assured that we will find a voice speaking to us over the vastness of sky and land. And we find our salvation in the fact that TV will do our breathing and living for us.

We begin to trust in what our televisions say to us each night simply because with the touch of a button we know that it will groan and crackle its way to life right before our eyes. To reach out and touch a box that at first has a bleak, lifeless appearance and then delight in its change to such a carnival of lights, colors and animation.

We see moving images that not only can speak to us but seem to almost feel for us. They want us to be happy, then sad. They want us laughing, squirming, uncomfortable and then relieved and happy once more. But they are doing all these things for us. Their sole intent is for us and us alone. They seem to care so entirely for our sentiments that where else would we put our faith but in something where a genuine concern for our well-being seems so apparent. We have found a god in this technology. It is a god that yields instant gratification and a variety of selection. It is a god that encourages us to doubt ourselves and question whether we are satisfied with any choice we make.

From Hell to Breakfast

Carolyn Skaggs

From Hell to Breakfast appears Wednesdays. Carolyn is a senior in visual communications and journalism. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

The news on TV lets us know what's going on in every part of the world. So much that we feel no need to leave our armchairs and sofas because our culture will be brought to us at 5 p.m., 6 p.m. and again at 11 p.m. The reports are made to seem so removed from our lives. The anchors could be speaking of a crisis in a state only a few miles away and yet it feels so much further. Even when reporting on local issues they might as well be reporting from a distant sun, for if we were not directly involved then it is of no consequence.

We see warm, reassuring faces on the screen that tell us it's OK to suffer from athlete's foot or cold/flu but that we need to find help if we are inconvenient. They tell us how to think, how to react, how to choose our emotions. And at the same time they place no qualifications on who we are, what we have done or where we have been. It is a god that is so unconditional he allows us to be frivolous and uncaring with our emotions and wants. We want to see good overcome evil — change the station. We want to see beautiful women and well-groomed men — push a button. We own up to nothing and no one. We are encouraged to be ill-mannered and impatient. If there is no immediate then there is no worth.

Technology: an SIUC necessity

On April 14, USG voted to support the proposal for a $25 per semester technology fee and to encourage the student body at SIUC to do the same today during the USG/student trustee elections. Similar fees have been successful at universities across the nation and allowed student input into the allocation process. I would like to take this opportunity to highlight the positives of this proposal and the cost-benefit it will provide to all students at this University.

Guest Column

Jackie Smith

Jackie is the USG president. Her opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

In the aftermath of the controversial athletic fee, we find ourselves questioning the validity of any request by the administration to pay more money. This scrutiny is important to ensure the fairness in fee collection and allocation. However, it does not warrant the attitude that any fee or increase is negative and will not provide enhancement to the quality of our education. The fact is we are now being given a great opportunity to support a fee that will directly increase the value of our degrees and prove that as students we recognize standards in higher education.

The proposed technology fee will be charged on a student's bursar account based on the number of credit hours an individual is enrolled.

The fee will bring in approximately $900,000 of revenue per year. This money will go toward items designated as student computing needs that include adding e-mail stations and ports across campus, improved off-campus and on-campus connections, more open labs, upgrading equipment and more. Suggestions for determining the student technology needs will come annually from a committee composed of majority student representatives.

This process ensures that student input will be obtained. Obviously, this fee is not expected to and will not cover all of our technology costs. The rest of the funds will come from initiatives committed to by the chancellor and already underway, such as requests for more state funding and grants, reallocation of internal funding and corporate partnerships.

I urge all students to seriously consider the positive aspects of this proposal and analyze the cost-benefit that will result from the implementation of a technology fee. SIUC is gravely behind other universities in the level of technology provided to students and this fee will bring us one step closer to closing that gap.

Remember that a potential employer does not care if we got the cheapest education possible, but they will be concerned by our ability to operate the same tools used in the working world. Please go out to the polls today and show everyone that SIUC students care about the quality of their education and want to compete with our peer institutions.

Veggie meal encourages new attitude toward food

KENDRA THORSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Twelve-year-old Brianna Murtha-Zee stuffed her face Sunday with stir-fry, scalloped potatoes, salad and Satya's Sunday Bread. The meal, which consisted of 80 percent organic foods, was satisfying to the group, most of whom returned to the buffet line for seconds.

"I really like animals a lot, and I don't like to think of them dead on my plate."

— BRIANNA MURTHA-ZEE
12-YEAR-OLD VEGETARIAN

"Rethinking our Relationship with Food," the vegetarian dinner intended to portray the benefits of becoming a vegetarian, was given in commemoration of Earth Week.

More than 25 people from different walks of life gathered Sunday at the Interfaith Center, 913 S. Illinois Ave., to support the environment and promote the benefits of eating a meatless diet.

Murtha-Zee, a sixth-grader from Unity Point Grade School from Makanda, does not eat red meat.

"I really like animals a lot, and I don't like to think of them dead on my plate," Murtha-Zee said.

Faye Anderson, who is not a full-fledged vegetarian but eats a limited amount of meat, first became interested in vegetarianism after learning about world hunger and the environment.

According to statistics given by Anderson, an SIUC biology lecturer, 828 million people do not have enough to eat.

Most countries with serious hunger problems are net exporters of food but focus on relieving their debts rather than feeding their people.

"I think an interest in vegetarianism illustrates our rethinking our personal relationships with food," Anderson said. "It is time for Americans to examine the constraints of meat."

Anderson, who believes in the philosophy "we are what we eat," said it is healthy for Americans to analyze their food choices.

"The way that we eat is so closely related with the earth," she said. "The facts and theories are coming into full force."

Anderson encouraged people to reduce their meat consumption by 25 percent. This, she said, would show concern for the earth and affect the behavior and well-being of an individual.

"You will find a new love for cooking and eating," she said. "It will give you a new relationship with food."

According to Anderson, cattle can consume up to 2,500 gallons of water, the amount an American uses in a month.

"Given the diet we have now, we will not have the water supply to support our system," she said.

Vanessa Chrisman, a senior in food and nutrition from Carbondale, is a vegan — the exclusion of all meats and dairy products from the diet.

A vegetarian from birth because of her upbringing, Chrisman always has been proud of her choices and tries to spread the word.

"I have always been excited to show people my weird lunches at school," she said. "Sometimes people ask me what I eat and why."

"Most people are curious, but what I say doesn't matter because they are set on their meat."

Chrisman believes historical vegetarians such as Plato have been great role models for her. Veganism has helped Chrisman in developing an interest in her education and spiritual healing.

"I would have made the choice to become a vegetarian without my parents' teaching," Chrisman said. "I am intertwined in spiritual issues, and it seems like a lot of intelligent and intellectual people were vegetarians."

"I think that is saying something."

are extremely difficult.

"We normally run less than 5 percent of female students," he said.

"We tend to give scholarships to women students more often if we know they are interested in automotive. It helps encourage them to get involved."

Gordon said the male students are fairly accepting of their female counterparts and that, like any department, there are positive and negative results.

"The girls are just like the men here," he said. "It's about the same in terms of performance and academics. Like the men, there are some good and some bad female students."

Weber State University educates the largest percent of female automotive students. Rick DeMoss, program leader in automotive technology, credits the university for taking great steps in female recruitment.

"We give some special provisions to women who are interested in the field," DeMoss said.

"We try to make sure they get all the information they need and because of this we really have had good success with the women at this point. They are doing well in our program and enrollment continues to rise."

DeSimone said she has had few problems in being a minority in the classroom.

Her efforts and hard work prove to her male peers that she is fully competent in the field.

Despite DeSimone's ease into the classroom and labs, DeMoss said there is still a negative bias within the automotive industry, and women tend to strive harder to gain acceptance.

"There is still some bias in the business anywhere you go," DeMoss said. "So [women] need to be more determined in some places, but the campus is pretty much a playing field."

"I don't know if they necessarily have to work harder, but they do as a pressure from being the minority. The women are good students and give it that little extra."

DON'T LEAVE THIS SUMMER WITHOUT IT!!!

The longer you keep it to yourself, the harder it is to make it go away.

Often when a woman is raped, she tries to push it out of her mind, thinking it will just go away. Although, it only makes all the bad feelings worse.

What does help is talking about it. To a friend, a family member. Or a counselor from a rape treatment center. You can find one in the Yellow Pages under "rape."

There is a way out of the silence.

Because rape shouldn't have to last a lifetime.

to his message. Furthermore, the president said he has made his case to a number of lawmakers during the Assembly's recent two-week break.

"I made the rounds among legislators during the recess and found people receptive," Sanders said.

Meanwhile, House Appropriations Committee Chairwoman Wyyetter Younger, D-East St. Louis, said the committee has not made any decisions yet, but the group did pay particular attention to cuts that have been made to agriculture research.

"Southern Illinois is greatly rural — programs such as soybean research are very important there," Younger said. "The committee will look very hard at agriculture."

Younger, who also labeled technology funding "a priority," said Sanders and company made their case competently.

"The president and chancellors satisfactorily explained the procedures they are using to keep costs down," she said.

"We're in the process of making a detailed analysis of each of those cuts."

Although SIU officials hope the House will consider a more lucrative funding package for the University, there are some bright spots for SIU in the current budget proposal.

The Senate Appropriations Committee added money to SIU's deferred maintenance request and allotted ample funding for faculty salary increases and the library.

However, SIU legislative liaison Garrett Deakin said the Senate committee's commitment to the University was lukewarm.

"They did a wonderful job, then they stopped," Deakin said.

Deakin remains optimistic that the recent hearing could spark a more SIU-friendly budget.

"We had a very fair hearing — we were able to go through the impact of the Senate's actions," Deakin said. "We may have amendments that act favorably upon our request."

Elaine Hyden, vice president for budget and planning services, agreed that the committee appeared receptive to SIU's case.

"They seemed sympathetic to helping us restore some of those dollars or having the budget reconstructed to have some of our programs covered," Hyden said.

Final budget approval from the General Assembly is not expected until May.

"When I saw the recycling trailers at a conference last year, I thought they would work well at SIUC because they would make recycling easier and more convenient," Brown said. "And they have."

There is a recycling trailer at the Physical Plant, which is the main drop-off for people who do not have access to recycling bins in their neighborhoods.

Brown said one of the reasons why she wanted a drop-off on campus was because she did not have a place to take her recyclables, and she thought others would be having the same problems.

"Jackson County and the City of Carbondale aren't collecting as wide of a variety as we are," she said. "I wanted people to know that they could recycle on campus."

Some of the items that can be recycled are:

- aluminum
- tin or steel cans
- clear and colored glass
- newspaper
- mixed paper (white typing and computer paper)
- plastics (bearing No. 1 and No. 2 recycling symbols)

Audilee Warner, recycling coordinator for the program, said members of the Recycling Program are trying to utilize the trailers more and make sure everyone knows they are on campus.

"I'm working on the new locations," Warner said. "I take care of anything that comes up. If anybody has a need, or problem, or question that's where I come in."

The five recycling trailers have been divided among various locations, including Southern Hills, Evergreen Terrace and the Physical Plant.

One is in circulation at the residence halls.

Brown eventually wants to have four trailers at Evergreen Terrace, three at Southern Hills, one at the Physical Plant, one at a Touch of Nature and one for collection.

Warner said many people are unaware of the items that the recycling trailers accept, but things are starting to look better.

"Everything is going really good so far," Warner said. "We hope it will pick up."

She claims no party affiliation in the election.

"I feel like not voting at all," she said. She said she might now support the Select Party "because they don't have Joe Sanchez."

Richrath said the Select Party had no influence on Thursday's posters.

"(The Select party) did not do them. They did not prod me to do them. I did it," Richrath said.

She said she is unsure why Sanchez would file a lawsuit against her.

"I can't believe that," she said. "I'm just stunned. I've got to find out who to talk to about this."

Sanchez said he has removed most of the offensive fliers and hopes students are not influenced by them.

"I've been running a clean campaign since day one," Sanchez said. "I hope people don't believe stuff like this."

Sanchez did not think the posters would hurt voter turnout in general.

Henry said the posters might actually increase the turnout.

"People might get more interested in what's going on," Henry said.

Sanchez thinks Richrath harbors a personal vendetta against him and used that as motivation to distribute the fliers.

"She has a chip on her shoulder," Sanchez said.

He said he and Richrath have had differences in the past, when they worked together for SIUC's Public Relations Student Society of America.

Richrath denied having a personal motivation.

"This isn't a personal vendetta," she said. "I don't feel he is a leader at all. I'm not attacking anything but his leadership qualities."

Henry said that the literature could have come from anyone.

USG Election Commissioner Kris Bein said no grievances have been filed regarding the matter. Unless Richrath is affiliated with a party, Bein said, the election commission has no jurisdiction concerning the matter.

USG Chief of Staff Connie Howard said Richrath might face disciplinary action from the University Judicial Board for defacing school property by placing the unapproved fliers Thursday.

Richrath was apologetic for any infractions she might have committed.

"I admitted to it and I apologize for causing any problems," Richrath said.

She was apprehensive about the possibility of legal action.

"It makes me nervous, I guess you could say that," Richrath said. "Because I don't want to go through with a lawsuit. I think it's kind of silly."

"I would walk up to him, take a picture with him and say, 'I'm sorry if I hurt your campaign, but I exercised my right to free speech.'"

Atchison expressed regrets about the turn taken by the campaigning.

"This is something I didn't want to have happen," he said. "It's gotten a little out of hand."

Willis Reynolds, a senatorial candidate with Another Party, agreed with Atchison.

"I find it sad that things have to get this ugly," Reynolds said.

Another Party has no presidential candidates.

Sanchez said he would attribute blame to the posters if he were to lose the election.

Henry also is accused of removing posters from residence halls and mailboxes of the Inter-Greek Council. Student activist Rob Taylor claims Henry told him that "the fliers have been successfully removed."

Henry said he does not recall mentioning such an occurrence to Taylor and has no knowledge of any fliers in the IGC office.

Both parties expressed regret that the campaigns have become personal in nature and said they would campaign cleanly on Election Day.

and involvement in the community.

Goals of Select 2000 are to have substance-free housing, promote healthy living and to form fraternities that focus on fraternal ideas and values.

In fall 1997, SIUC took on the pilot program fully.

The alcohol policy of Select 2000 was slowly implemented, each semester taking away alcohol from a different situation.

By fall 1998, Select 2000's alcohol policy was fully implemented. The policy now eliminated all greek members from consuming alcohol in their residence, even if over the age of 21.

Much of the concern surrounding Select 2000 at SIUC is the way it was implemented. Unlike the other three pilot schools, greeks and other students did not have input into starting the program on campus.

In September 1997, USG and Interfraternity Council tried to eliminate the Select 2000 program based on several reasons.

The main reason was that students, the four greek councils and USG were not consulted by SIUC administrators before the program was implemented.

Although the resolution was passed, no results from the administration came about.

Also in 1997, greeks tried to create their own program called

"The Challenge" to make regulations that were more personalized to SIUC.

But nothing ever came about for the proposed program.

Since Select 2000 has become policy at the University, four fraternities have had their charters taken away, two of which were directly from the University. Yet, the University claims that none of the removed charters are directly related to Select 2000.

In spring 1998, Delta Chi Fraternity had its charter pulled after an alcohol violation. And in fall 1998, Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity violated the hazing policy.

Numbers for service hours in fall 1998 are higher than they have been in years, increasing more than 200 percent compared to fall 1997 and spring 1998 combined.

Currently...

The most recent battles against Select 2000 is an Undergraduate Student Government referendum on today's USG election ballot and meetings with Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger.

The referendum is non-binding but gives students a chance to say whether or not they want to keep Select 2000 part of the University.

Regardless of the results of the student vote, the decision to remove Select 2000 is done by University administration.

Blood said the results are unpredictable.

"Since it is non-binding the results are up in the air," he said. "I can't tell what the impact might be."

Guernsey, who will be the head of the task force, said he could not predict what the impact of a yes or no vote would mean to the administration.

One of the reasons why the vote will not have much of an impact is because University officials have become aware of the greeks' unhappiness since the referendum was approved to be on the ballot.

In early March, 24 greek leaders met with Argersinger to express their unhappiness and dissatisfaction with Select 2000.

Leaders presented the chancellor with a petition signed by 71 percent of greek members stating they did not like the program.

Not all greeks were able to sign the petition because there was not enough time for all members to gain access to it.

At the time, greek leaders brought the issues of how Select 2000 has affected chapters financially though decreased membership, low morale of members and the way the program was implemented.

The results of this meeting was Argersinger appointed Guernsey to further look into Select 2000 and come up with a solution.

After this meeting, greeks said they felt this was the first time they had been listened to since pre-Select 2000 semesters.

Another complaint greek leaders have had is the amount of paper work that has to be done.

By April 1 of each year, each chapter must complete a 17-page form of a nine-goal checklist with 50 questions. The questions range from 'academic achievement to community service.'

These questions are reasonable, but the time it would take members to fill out the forms is lengthy.

Matt Arnold, president of Alpha Tau Omega, said it took him about a day of working on the form to completely fill it out.

"It is really close to what we have to fill out for our nationals," he said. "You just have to do it and it takes time to make your chapter look good."

This year the evaluation forms have all been done on computer disk which made the process easier than last year.

Looking forward...

A small-member task force will be established by the end of this semester to assess the results of the two-year pilot program of Select 2000.

This task force will help the SIUC greek system and administration talk about the problems and possible solutions to the program.

Guernsey has been appointed by the chancellor to work with greek leaders and administrators and hear all sides of Select 2000.

"The task force will look into and at Select 2000," Guernsey said. "It is a pilot and it is time to look at it as well as have a conversation."

Greek students, non-greek students, faculty and SIUC administrators will make up the 12 to 13-member group. Guernsey said the group will be large enough to be representative, yet small enough to be productive.

A date for a definite decision about the outcome of Select 2000 or any changes that may be made is not set, according to Guernsey.

Blood said meeting with Guernsey has raised his hopes in changing Select 2000.

"Things are getting better and we are making things happen," he said. "The ball is rolling and things are looking brighter."

Blood hopes the task force will be able to work through the summer semester and have updated plans in effect for the fall semester.

As Guernsey starts to look into the Select 2000 program, he admits he has not had much contact with the greek system because of his position as dean of the SIU School of Law.

The School of Law does not have much to do with the social fraternity and sorority system, but Guernsey understands the need for a "conversation."

"I am really an outsider on the issue," he said. "I have not formed an opinion one way or the other."

Overall, greeks are happy with the response they have received from the University so far.

Arnold, who was elected as Interfraternity Council president for 1999-2000, said the task force is a step in the right direction.

"We are moving forward having Chancellor Argersinger and Tom Guernsey," he said. "They are aware of the situation, but there are still a lot of loose ends."

Gus says: Buy, sell, & trade your baseball cards, beanie babies, comic books, records, CD's, Star Trek memorabilia, and other cool stuff in the new "collectibles" category.

Golfers prepare for MVC tournament

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
 SPORTS REPORTER

SIUC golfer Phillip Moss is peaking just in time to help the Salukis rise above the Valley.

With the Missouri Valley Conference tournament just days away, Moss turned in his best performance of the spring season. He shot a three-round total of 227 Monday, which tied him with teammate Kory Neisen for 15th place in the Ohio Collegiate Classic in Arcanum, Ohio.

William Lowry of Youngstown State University won medalist honors with a score of 214.

"This was sort of a confidence booster for me," said Moss, a senior from Breesse. "I haven't been performing really well this season."

Moss' game was so hot, not even the frigid temperatures could cool him off. The first two days were highlighted with 40-50 degree weather and freezing rain before finally improving on the final day.

"I was getting ready to putt and I saw little pieces of ice falling on the ground," Moss said. "It went on for about three to four minutes and I had to wait 30-40 seconds before it melted."

Once temperatures improved, Moss recovered to shoot rounds 73 and 77 on a 72-par course.

"At one point, (Moss) was two under par," SIUC coach Leroy Newton said. "He bogeyed a couple of holes at the end to prevent an outstanding score."

Other Saluki individual finishers included: junior Justin Long (27th), senior Craig Castrale (40th) and senior Ryan Browning (51st).

As a team, the Salukis finished eighth out of 12 teams in an unexpected highly-competitive field. They shot a 918, 10 points behind MVC rival the University of Evansville, which finished sixth.

Western Kentucky University (897), Youngstown State University (899) and Bowling Green State University (900) finished 1-2-3, respectively.

"When I scheduled it, I thought it would be a pretty weak field," Newton said. "But when we were looking at some of [the other team's] results in other tournaments, a couple had beaten Illinois and Purdue. We knew when we teed off that we'd have to shoot pretty good."

Next up for the Salukis is the MVC tourney, which takes place Monday in Wichita, Kan., and runs through Wednesday. Wichita State University is the early favorite to win.

"We're not intimidated by anybody," Newton said. "If we can get a good score in early, I think we can be right there at the end."

performance.

Rempescher pitched five innings, giving up only three hits and walking none while striking out five.

Saluki head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer was pleased with Rempescher's performance, which gave junior pitcher Carisa Winters (12-8) a day off.

"It helps us when Tracy can come in and give us some innings," Brechtelsbauer said. "It gives (Carisa) a little bit of a break."

Another surprising bright spot for the Salukis (32-14, 7-1) was sophomore shortstop Amanda Rexroat, who was playing in place of junior shortstop Jamie Campbell, who sat out with the flu.

Rexroat hit her first collegiate home run in the fourth inning and went 2-for-3 in the game with one RBI.

"Amanda got the start at shortstop and came through beautifully in that second game offensively," Brechtelsbauer said.

In game one, sophomore pitcher Erin Stremsterfer provided herself with run support in the first inning, hitting her sixth home run of the season.

Stremsterfer (15-6) also hurt the Billikens on the mound, pitching her seventh shutout of the season while striking out a career high 14 — only two off the school record set last season (March 27) by Winters against the University of Northern Iowa.

"I didn't even know that it was that many strikeouts, so I wish (assistant coach) Kerri (Blaylock) would have told me that I was two away from the record and then I think I may have tried a little harder," Stremsterfer said.

Although Stremsterfer was dominant again on the mound and at the plate — extending her career-high hitting streak to 15 in game two with a single — the rest of the Salukis came out a little too "flat" for Brechtelsbauer in game one.

"What we didn't do is come out fired up," Brechtelsbauer said. "We were a little bit flat in that first game. Erin did a great job in the pitching part of it, and then she gave us our first run to get us started, but we just never got with it offensively."

The Salukis managed only five hits off freshman Billiken pitcher Jennifer Riva (0-17).

But the Salukis cannot sit and enjoy their current five-game winning streak.

They travel to Edwardsville today for a major non-conference test against No. 23 University of Missouri.

"They've got a great program," Brechtelsbauer said. "They're hitting the ball well, they've got good pitching, and it's always a struggle. Two years ago we swept them, last year they swept us, so who knows what we're going to do."

GOLF

Women take fourth

The SIUC women's golf team finished fourth at the Missouri Valley Conference Championships in Peoria Monday and Tuesday.

Bradley University won the Championships with a three-round score of 952, followed by Wichita State University (965) and the University of Northern Iowa (967). The Salukis finished with a team score of 981.

Freshman Alison Hiller was the top Saluki finisher in a fifth-place tie with a three round score of 239.

Other top Saluki finishers were Junior Andrea Walker in 11th (243), and sophomore Liz Uthoff in 20th (249).

Hiller was named to the MVC all-conference team for her performance.

Softball team extends its winning streak to five games after sweep of St. Louis

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

It was only a matter of time before the SIUC softball team completed the sweep of a doubleheader against Saint Louis University, but apparently junior second baseman Lori Greiner had little time to waste.

| | |
|-----------|--------|
| Billikens | 0 0 |
| Salukis | 3 10 |

Already up 7-0 in the bottom of the fifth inning, Greiner smashed a three-run homer, her sixth on the year, to end the game early because of the eight-run rule and complete the sweep of a doubleheader 3-0, 10-0 against SLU (4-40) Tuesday at IAW Fields.

UPCOMING

Greiner was 2-for-4 with three RBI's in game two to give junior hurler Tracy Rempescher (5-0) plenty of support in her shutout.

Dawgs find themselves in familiar territory

Baseball team's losing skid now runs up to nine games

MIKE BJORKLUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Gathered in center field for about 30 minutes, SIUC baseball coach Dan Callahan conducted a "heart-to-heart" conversation with his players courtesy of a 9-3 drubbing by Murray State University Wednesday afternoon at Abe Martin Field.

But rather than discussing pleasantries with the 21-16 Salukis, Callahan used the meeting to look for solutions for his team's nine-game losing streak.

"I wanted some answers," Callahan said. "I wanted to know what they had to say. From a coaching standpoint there are some things we haven't addressed. Whether it's practice organization, whether it's chewing butt if we have to, then let us know. This has gotten to the point that it is miserable. Hell, I don't even sleep anymore."

Callahan's lack of sleep is not without warrant. Getting swept by Wichita State University last weekend, the Salukis found a way to fall to even lower levels against the Thoroughbreds.

Allowing MSU to score six runs in the second inning, senior Donnie Chester (0-1) and the Salukis dug themselves another hole too deep to get out. Chester allowed six runs (two earned) on six hits in his two innings pitched.

Freshman Pat Hon and senior Dave Condon then came in, allowing only three runs combined to finish the ballgame for the slumping Salukis.

The Salukis had chances to battle back into the game similar to the chances they had against the Shockers, but the result would be the same.

In the sixth inning the Salukis loaded the bases with no outs, only to score one run in the inning.

The run, however, did not come in the form of a hit by a Saluki batter, rather by a wild pitch from MSU starter John David Poynor (3-1) scoring junior Steve Ruggeri.

The Salukis only managed six hits on the afternoon.

"You like to think you have a better chance to come out and beat somebody playing [MSU] than you would a team like Wichita which just swept you. I think we came out uninspired and lackadaisical," Callahan said.

The Salukis will not have time to recover from this disaster because they return to action 3 p.m. today at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

The only other runs the Salukis would score in the game came in the ninth inning.

After junior catcher Jason Spannagel reached on an error by MSU first baseman Dan Loyd, Jeff Stanek connected on a single to center field, which set up Ben Arbeiter's pinch-hit double to left field, scoring both Spannagel and Stanek.

On defense, the Salukis were not any better. The Salukis were charged with four more errors, totaling 71 for the season.

MSU coach Mike Thieke understands losing streaks quite well after losing five straight games before last weekend. Thieke realizes what went wrong for his club.

"Both clubs are going through the same situation," Thieke said. "SIU has had success early, and we have had success early."

"I don't think either team is starting to do things different than they did early. But you have to start doing the things you did good early, and not the things that you haven't done."

Saluki reliever Pat Hon, a freshman from Crossville, displays his pitching form finesse during the Salukis' 9-3 loss against Murray State Tuesday at Abe Martin Field.
