Although abstinence is the only guaranteed way to prevent sexually transmitted diseases or pregnancy, the birth control pill and condom remain the most popular form of protection for college students.

Condoms and pills top choice for... Playing it safe

Universities offer education before protection

KAREN BLATTER GOVERNMENT EDITOR

Although some universities preach abstinence to students as the only sure way to prevent sexually transmitted diseases or pregnancy, condoms and birth control seem to be the preventive measure students listen to.

Gus Bode

Gus says: Is this how you put this thing on?

Desiree Mills, sexuality education coordinator at SIUC, said the No. 1 idea the center tries to teach is abstinence, but it also stresses the importance of having birth control.

Abstinence is the No. 1 birth control. But we try to have a educated smart consumer.

DESIREE MILLS sexuality education coordinator at SIUC

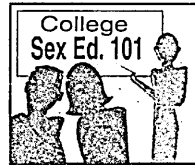

SIUC Pharmacy offers the cheapest prices on birth control pills in Carbondale. Mills said it tries to keep the costs down on all birth controls, including condoms, so students can save.

Along with selling condoms, there are various locations across campus that have places to pick up free condoms, including the Health Care Clinic.

Mills said before the clinic can offer a birth control prescription to a woman, they need to take part in a class. The Birth Control Option Class, that has been required for the last nine years, gives women the chance to learn about all the birth control options and what type of birth control pill would be best for them.

Mills said part of the class is to teach women they need to be responsible as well.

"Women sometimes expect men to take on all the responsibility," she said. "Women should take on more the responsibility and not rely on just the men."

At Northern Illinois University, Ruth McNew said the birth control education is handled directly from a video, and then students have the change to meet one-on-one with a physician.

All women are required to view the video before they can be prescribed birth control. McNew, coordinator for quality improvement, said the video helps some overcome some uncomfortable feelings about birth control and sexual issues.

"The class gives all of the options with the pros and cons of each," she said.

McNew said NIU Health Services has information posted around campus, as well as in the campus newspaper, to keep students aware of the necessity of birth control.

Like SIUC, NIU offers free condoms at a variety of locations and keeps the lowest costs for birth control pills. McNew said the pill is the most popular, followed by condoms.

P.L.U.S. Party's USG senators disqualified

Party campaign expenditures not turned in by deadline

GINNY SKALSKI DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In a dramatic twist of events, the P.L.U.S. Party senators were disqualified late Thursday afternoon from the Undergraduate Student Government election.

The P.L.U.S. Party did not meet a 4 p.m. deadline to turn in a list of campaign expenditures. According to USG election guidelines, itemized lists of party expenditures and contributions were due by 4 p.m. on Thursday, or the party would be disqualified.

Miller, who will file a grievance on behalf of the P.L.U.S. Party senators, said his party did not turn in the required information on time because his senators did not contribute any money to the campaign fund, only he and his running mate, Ted Clark, did.

"Since Ted and I lost the election, we did not feel like we needed to turn them in," Miller said.

Bill Archer of the Southern Party claimed victory as USG president Wednesday night with 279 votes more than P.L.U.S. Party candidate Chuck Miller, however several students running for the USG Senate under the P.L.U.S. Party were elected.

A total of 13 P.L.U.S. Party senators are disqualified. Miller informed the election commissioner, Mandy Jewell, that his senators did not contribute any funds to the campaign and thus should not have to turn in campaign expenditures because there were none for them.

According to the campaign guidelines, "candidates may choose not to combine with a party fund." Such candidates will be responsible to turn in an itemized list of expenditures."

Miller argues because none of the P.L.U.S. Party senators spent any money on fliers, T-shirts and any other campaign materials, there is no reason they should have to turn in a list of expenditures.

Jewell said even though Miller and Clark paid for all of the campaign materials, the senators had their names on everything, which would be considered an in kind contribution. According to election guidelines, in kind contributions must be reported.

"If [senators] didn't put any money toward their campaign and Chuck and Ted did, it was their responsibility to put it as an in kind contribution showing that somebody paid for," Jewell said.

Jewell said the election commission will review any grievance that Miller or his party members choose to file.

The senator candidates with the next largest amount of votes who were not elected will take the P.L.U.S. Party senators place.

Despite not being elected president, Miller said he was really proud of the campaign his party ran.

"I appreciate all the hard work the people put forth and we leave this election with something most people don't leave a campaign with and that is respect and integrity and for that the SIU P.L.U.S. Party carries a lot of pride," Miller said.

Housing increase to address deferred maintenance

Officials say raised prices will help deal with long list of projects

GEOFFREY RITTER DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Roof repairs, carpeting and window screens are just a few of the issues on University Housing officials' minds as they await a 6-percent increase to Housing rates that will take effect in fall of 2001, pending approval from the Board of Trustees.

"We have a deferred maintenance backlog, and that's what the money is for," said Director of Housing Ed Jones. "It's money we're using to catch up."

Jones said the increase, which represents about $123 per student for each semester, will help to address deferred maintenance issues beginning in fiscal year 2002. According to Jones, the residence halls are long overdue for maintenance work, and the deferred maintenance agenda is continuing to grow.

A Powerpoint presentation given by Housing officials to members of Undergraduate Student Government and the Residence Hall Association last month indicated that, while Housing should be spending about $6 million a year on deferred maintenance, they are only spending about $2.5 million to $3 million yearly. According to RHA President Carrie Milnor, the presentation had an affect on RHA members.

"A lot of people were surprised," said Milnor, a sophomore in physiology from Decatur. "It made them realize that there was a lot to be done, and that the increase would help."

A maintenance agenda provided by University Housing shows that almost $4 million in projects are slated for work in fiscal years 2001 and 2002. Included on the to-do list are painting projects, replacing air conditioning units and repairing and replacing roofs.

Glenn Stine, assistant director of Housing for facilities, said many of the problems SIUC has to deal with are reflected in other state universities. Many schools utilize older facilities for student housing, he said, and thus are forced to deal with many of the same maintenance problems. However, he said, the rate increase at SIUC will help to put University Housing back on track.

Projected Housing Increase for 2000-2001

"There are a lot of needs, most of the buildings are over 30 years old and most of the components are failing," Stine said. "It'll help, there's no doubt about that."

Giving paper a second chance

Southern Sustainability encourages the use of new recycled paper

JASON COKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

There is a need for recycling paper at SIUC to satisfy government requirements and to help keep the environment safe, according to Dave Paprocki, program coordinator for Southern Sustainability.

Paprocki is trying to get SIUC up to the federal government's guidelines for recycling. The government's goal is to have all public institutions and government offices nationwide use recycled paper with a post-consumer waste content of 30 percent.

Post-consumer waste (pcw) means the paper was previously used by people. Until recently, recycled paper has not been adequate enough for use in office equipment, like copier machines and typewriters, except at high costs. Technology, however, has changed that.

Government tests prove that at least one new brand, called Great White, is as effective as virgin paper in printers and copier machines, and it is competitively priced against the usual paper now being used on campus.

"It's a good environmental solution," Paprocki said. "We wish people would give it a try."

According to a campus survey conducted by Southern Sustainability, more than half of SIUC's departments would be willing to pay more for recycled paper. Thirty-eight percent listed the cost as the main reason for not buying recycled paper. But this is no longer a cause for concern since the price has decreased.

Already two colleges at SIUC have called the SIUC Purchasing Office inquiring about the 30-percent pcw paper, said purchasing officer Pat Cook. He said each office buys its own paper and his office just writes the contracts for them.

Cook said all colleges at SIUC use 20- to 25-percent pcw paper now, but the goal to bring that up to 30-percent pcw. Therefore, the challenge is not getting people to recycle, but getting people to recycle as much as they should.

According to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, Americans use more than 700 pounds of paper per person annually, twice what Europe uses per capita, which makes America the biggest paper consumer in the world.

In addition to this, the World Resources Institute states paper consumption increased 86 percent between 1961 and 1994, which totals an estimated 38 million acres of forest a year, or an area equivalent to the size of New England.

Frog population in decline

SIUC professor tries to solve riddle of global environmental crisis

JASON COKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The amphibian population of the world is in decline, and scientists are unable to find out why.

Karen Lips, assistant professor of zoology at SIUC, has been studying amphibian population for years and said it is in global decline.

One quarter of all amphibians are endangered and the decline began in the 1960s. She could offer no one reason for why the decline is so sudden, except to say that nearly one-fourth of all known animals are endangered and it is believed to be human related in most cases.

There have been five major decimations of life on Earth in the past. But, Lips said, all of these took thousands or even millions of years to occur. This latest phase of extinction is only a few decades old and it is completely global in affect. Also, the other five times were generally based on certain types of organisms, such as only killing marine life, or only affecting the dinosaurs.

Dinosaurs became extinct, it is now thought by scientists, because of a meteorite hitting the Earth. Lips said frogs survived that, and this is not a good sign for what has been going on lately.

These last 40 years have become the biggest and fastest age of extinction in Earth's history and the extinction is mostly non-specific in nature.

"It means we're doing bad things to our home," Lips said. "Humans are speeding things up."

However, the global problem in extinction does exclude certain types of organisms, such as people, cattle, soybeans, dogs and cockroaches, among very few others. Most species attached to the human population are thriving, Lips said.

In the United States, the main ecological damage was done many years ago. Environmentally speaking, America is standing still in the rate of new damage. Therefore, the rate of change is much faster in tropical areas.

When endangerment happens here, Lips said, we usually know the cause. For example, the Houston toad suddenly began to vanish in the last 20 years. No one disputes the reason, Lips said. It lives in only one locality and when Houston began to sprawl outward, the toad's habitats became the domain of people and as a result began to vanish.

Urban and industrial areas have seen similar things for centuries. What is different now is the wide range of extinction which has few direct links to people. Lips said this is evidence that what people do in one place affects people and the environment everywhere.

In the Tropics, Lips said, there are huge national forests where people are not allowed to enter. When she did a study in western Panama two years ago, she was the only person allowed in the whole jungle. Yet, frogs were dying there at an amazing rate, and she was there at the moment they were dying.

The problem with finding the reason for endangerment is because of the fact that amphibians decompose fast.

Lips said if you are not there when the frogs died, you lose all of your evidence as to what killed them. Therefore, it can only be determined if the population rose, dropped or stayed the same.

Thompson Woods needs volunteers

More work need to be done to protect the heart of SIUC

JASON COKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Trespasses by exotic plants and people, combined with neglect from the SIUC community, has left Thompson Woods facing a bleak future.

Bruce Francis, superintendent of grounds for the SIUC Physical Plant, said there will be a chance for students to prove their commitment to their University, community and the environment today.

The Habitat Restoration Project, a part of Earth Action Week 2000, is sponsoring a public effort for students to help clean up Thompson Woods.

A large turnout is expected, and since the winter is over, there is already a "little more revival" of activities in the woods, Francis said.

Phil Robertson, a professor in biology, said the biggest problems with Thompson Woods are the lack of active volunteers and not having enough support from the administration.

"There are not enough volunteers," Robertson said. "They are enthusiastic for a while, but they don't last long."

Thompson Woods, long the centerpiece of campus, is in an ongoing process of decay caused by the introduction to the region of vast quantities of exotic plants, pavement, people and nut-loving squirrels, said Paul Roth, professor of forestry.

Because of Thompson Woods' central location on a large, bustling campus, protection and maintenance is vital, Roth said.

Dead and dying trees litter the woods from one end to the other because of two main features — the extreme age of the trees and the Japanese honeysuckle,

10-year-old contest winner tours SIUC's campus

Abby Harms toured SIUC's campus Wednesday after winning an essay contest, writing that if she had a million dollars she would pay for her and her younger sister's tuition at SIUC. The "What I Would Do with a Million Dollars?" contest was part of the gifted program at Lincoln Elementary School in Springfield.

Harms won an uncirculated dollar bill, a certificate and an A- on the assignment. Her father, Henry Harms, brought her down to tour the campus. While here, Abby met interim Chancellor John Jackson, and Larry Dietz, vice chancellor for Student Affairs and enrollment management.

Abby said she has chosen SIUC from other schools because "it's better." She had not previously visited the campus, but described it as beautiful and big. Abby plans to major in environmental studies.

IOWA CITY, IOWA

Dental student charged with hate crime

Police have charged a black dental student at the University of Iowa with sending several racist e-mails to other minority students. Police said Tarsha Michelle Claiborne, 23, of Baton Rouge, La., confessed to sending the messages after she was arrested in her home shortly after midnight Thursday.

She is accused of using a computer inside the dental school to send warnings about imminent violence and a bombing. The e-mails prompted school officials to shut down the dental school Wednesday. The school reopened Thursday when no bomb was found. Authorities focused on Claiborne after a video camera recorded her leaving a laboratory from which the messages were sent. She is charged with felony counts of threats in violation of individual rights, related to the bomb threat, and with misdemeanor charges tied to three previous messages she allegedly sent in recent weeks.

Court records indicate that Claiborne was also charged with criminal trespass in the process of committing a hate crime for an April 4 incident in which someone left red noodles on another black student's doorstep. An attached note referred to a dead black man's brains. Two days later, a lab coat caught fire at the dental school, and e-mails asking, "Are you going to take us seriously now?" were sent to students.

About 1,000 people gathered at a rally last week to condemn the threats. The dental college enrolls 381 students. Of those, 49 or 12.8 percent, are minorities, school officials said. Of the 49, 13 are black.

Freaks, geeks and Love

DEVIN MILLER - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Kate O'Grady and Laura Berger portray Siamese Twins Iphigenia-and-Electra in the theatrical adaptation of the Katherine Dunn novel, "Geek Love."

New play examines nature of beauty

Director Elyse Pineau is a reverser of enthusiasm when discussing her latest project, a theatrical adaptation of the Katherine Dunn novel, "Geek Love," for the Kleinau Theatre. With her purple hat fixed firmly on her head, the eccentric and effusive associate professor in speech communication explains how she sees the play as an opportunity to explore beauty in contemporary America.

"It's a sharp social critique and it raises issues about what our society considers beautiful and how we use technology," Pineau said.

The surreal play follows the story of the Binewski couple who create their own set of sideshow "freaks" using psychedelic drugs during conception.

They then use these offspring for profit in a carnival freak show. Jennifer Tuder, a graduate student in speech communication from Keokuk, Iowa, plays the character Doc Phyllis and said the play deals frankly with many touchy issues.

"It's about how we view difference and it throws

TRAVIS MORSE
ACADEMIC AFFAIRS EDITOR

a new light on issues of beauty," Tuder said. "It's frank and disturbing but for a purpose."

The production has presented the cast and crew with many challenges including creating the characters' deformities through suggestion rather than make up effects.

"Whenever I direct material, I adapt, I consider how I am going to create those characters on stage and this play was full of fun staging challenges," Pineau said. "There was no make up and it had to be done through the actors' bodies."

As an actor, Tuder said dealing with a larger cast like the one for "Geek Love" proved challenging. "Working with a cast this large was hard because it was difficult for all of us to get together at the same time," Tuder said.

Tuder said she felt the play's themes are relatable to a college audience.

"I think college students can relate to wanting to be different or somebody else," Tuder said. For Pineau, however, it all comes down to humor, which she said is the play's strong point.

"It's a very dark comedy really," Pineau said. "It's tragic, but it has a cutting, seathing humor running through it."

Still CRAZY after all these years

"American Psycho" a chilling, effective satire

TRAVIS MORSE
ACADEMIC AFFAIRS EDITOR

By day, Patrick Bateman is a hot shot, Wall Street player surrounded by money and corporate excess sheltered in an ivory tower womb high above New York City. By night, he is a ruthless serial killer leaving countless female victims in his wake and slowly becoming more and more insane in the process. Bret Easton Ellis' 1992 novel "American Psycho" chronicled the exploits of this very unsavory character and caused a stir of controversy in the literary world.

Now, eight years later, we have director Mary Harron's adaptation of the Ellis text and despite its lurid title, "American Psycho" is a subtle and witty cinematic experience. More social satire than "slasher" flick, Harron's film manages to skewer male behavior and the moral vacuity of the greed-obsessed culture of the late '80s in one fatal slice.

Nathan Bale gives a superb performance as the deranged Bateman and we are able to watch in uncomfortable awe as he devolves from bad to worse. Bale is most known for, of all things, the lead in Steven Spielberg's underrated WWII epic, "Empire of the Sun." Here, he becomes evil incarnate with surprising grace and skill. Also effective is Reese Witherspoon as Bateman's snobbish wife. She is also able to turn an unappealing character into something to marvel at.

On the down side, "American Psycho" is a rather cold film. Those who require a main character who they can completely identify with, may find Bateman a repellent character with no redeeming values. I would agree if his insanity wasn't so darn compelling. Harron, as she did in "I Shot Andy Warhol," directs in a cool, rigorous style and it's well-suited to Ellis' impending doom narrative structure. She handles the mix of humor and macabre in the script with ease and her use of '80s pop songs borders on genius. In the film's best scene, Bateman slaughters one of his colleagues with an ax in a jealous rage while explaining the rich complexities of the Huey Lewis and the News album, "Forel," while "Hip to Be Square" is blasting in the background. This one scene combines '80s optimism and '90s dread in one funny, horrifying moment.

As it stands, "American Psycho" is a one note satire — continuously mining humor from its main character's mental deterioration. However, when the note is played this well, it's hard to complain too much. It's not a masterpiece like Oliver Stone's "Natural Born Killers," but it paints the scariest picture I've seen yet of Reagan-era America.

Carbondale bagelman reaches 18-year milestone

RHONDA SCIARRA
STUDENT AFFAIRS EDITOR

Winston Mezo was 18 years old when he took his first drink of alcohol, and it has been 18 years since he took his last.

He is known as Winston by the customers that flock to his bagel cart each night. The 56-year-old Carbondale icon and recovering alcoholic marked a milestone of 18 years of sobriety Monday.

Winston has been the Carbondale bagelman since 1983. He started working the bagel cart in the early 1980s, taking over the business from a friend. He can be found selling bagels from his cart located outside Gatsby's II Bar and Billiards, 610 S. Illinois Ave.

Besides the bagel business, Winston religiously attends Alcoholics Anonymous meetings, runs an A.A. hotline from his trailer and is a sponsor for several other recovering alcoholics.

"Alcoholism is a disease," Winston says. "We define alcoholism as a mental disorder with a physical allergy. Drinking is only a symptom of an underlying problem for alcoholics."

Winston became an A.A. sponsor for Carbondale resident Mathew Phillips in Winston's first year of sobriety; now, Winston is able to see his spouse celebrate 17 years of an alcohol-free lifestyle as he celebrates 18.

"He has been somebody to bounce things off of, and someone to grow with," Phillips says about Winston.

Winston grew up in a small town just north of Herrin. At age 18, Winston entered the Army. It was when he was stationed in Germany that he first experimented with alcohol.

"It was like magic. It was a cure-all."

Search to replace Guernsey closed

Forums to find a replacement for vice chancellor of Academic Affairs come to an end

CODELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

When Patricia Cummings wrapped up her speech at 4:45 p.m. on Thursday, the open forums for the candidates to replace Thomas Guernsey as provost and vice chancellor for Academic Affairs came to an end.

Cummings, a professor of romance languages at the University of Toledo, is one of three candidates in the running. The others being William Swart, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology at Old Dominion, and Margaret Winters, who is currently interim provost and vice chancellor for Academic Affairs. Before she was named a finalist, Winters was originally expected to fill the position until June 30 or until a new vice chancellor was named.

The three candidates, each spoke to an audience made up of mostly faculty, and addressed different issues that are concerns for the University: The most popular being the budget.

Cummings and Swart were a little less ready for some of the budget issues, where as Winters was a little more prepared. Roland Person, education and psychology librarian, is on the search committee to select the new vice chancellor. He said Winters had an advantage as far as the budget went because she knows the campus better and is the interim vice chancellor.

"It's obvious she would know more about the budget," Person said.

One moment Person found interesting was after Cummings addressed all of the questions, she involved the audience by asking them why she should want to come to SIUC. This inspired many answers from different members of faculty including great faculty, students and one even saying that because SIUC is such a beautiful campus.

At the forums, the audience was given evaluation sheets that asked the viewers' opinions of the candidate. The audience were asked if candidates had the necessary qualifications for the position, what special strengths they would bring, what drawbacks they had, and finally a place to check if they thought that candidate was right for the job.

Elaine Vitello, dean of the College of Applied Sciences and Arts, is the head of the search committee that will name the new vice chancellor and is expected to make a decision some time after Wednesday, when the evaluation sheets are returned.

THOMPSON WOODS

which has been engulfing Thompson Woods since the 1980s.

Thompson Woods is like a "oak-hickory stand," meaning those two species make up most of the trees there. Various hickories in the woods include red, mockernut and pignut. A sampling of oaks are southern red, northern red, white and black. Most of these trees are more than a century old, many living far longer than average.

A common feature of most of these trees is the dependence on an abundance of sunlight. Unlike various other types of woods, if too much shade exists in there, it will die. This is how the honeysuckle does its damage.

"This stand is literally falling apart," Roth said.

"These trees are not tolerant of shade. Eventually they'll drop off."

The Japanese honeysuckle is a vining plant that works with an urgency, swiftly climbing up the sides of trees, shading them and killing them. This honeysuckle is exotic to Southern Illinois, meaning it is not native to this region of the United States.

Also, for reasons no one can yet explain, the squirrel population in Carbondale is abnormally high. These peculiar rodents, Roth said, are eating up all the acorns and hickory nuts. Along with weevils—an insect that eats the heart out of acorns—squirrels are interrupting the future growth of Thompson Woods, he said.

As is so often the case, the natural crises in maintaining the environment now co-exists with the man-made dilemmas, Roth said.

"Protecting these woods is not an easy kind of program because this woods is not an isolated woods," Roth said.

Walking through Thompson Woods, one can see the paved paths and the foot paths created by students walking and riding bikes. These foot paths are compacting the dirt, making erosion easier and exposing roots. Exposed roots often lead to rot-root diseases that weaken the trees and can, with the other environmental problems, lead to death.

In a bigger forest, tiny dirt paths mean little. In Thompson Woods, these short foot paths can help degenerate sections piece by piece. Several new paths were not there even 3 year ago, Roth said.

Robertson said he partly blames the student-turnover at SIUC for the reason volunteerism can change as dramatically as it has in the last few years. Carbondale is a college community, and this makes consistency difficult, which is why the administration needs to step in more often, he said.

The administration is doing very little, primarily because of the lack of funding, he said.

Roth said he has another opinion for the constant lack of enthusiasm on campus. He said young people like to label themselves the "environmentally conscious generation," but too many will either give lip-service and temporary support to environmental causes.

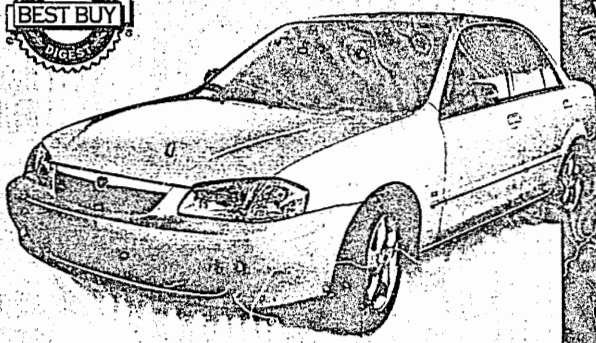

For example, he said many students openly say they are worried about ecological damage done by companies like General Motors and Exxon, yet despite the complaining, Thompson Woods is littered with trash and trampled unconsciously by large numbers of students.

"[Polluters] should lay out there and let people walk all over them and see how they like it, especially if they pretend to care about the environment," Roth said.

Hip hop concert takes place in Civic Center

B-Fly Entertainment to showcase eight aspiring acts

ANTONIO YOUNG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

While city officials are away from the Carbondale Civic Center this weekend, a concert will be taking place there, which will cater to true lovers of hip hop music, said Don Papillon, local artist and producer for B-Fly Entertainment.

The local hip hop-based entertainment company will be conducting its "5 Mics" hip hop show Saturday at the Civic Center, beginning at 7 p.m. As the third hip hop show in a five-part series, the event will showcase local talent, such as Papillon and Half-Dead, as well as other aspiring artists from Chicago and East St. Louis. An open mic session will conclude the show, followed by an after-set.

The show will feature various styles of hip hop, including hard-core/street, b-boy hip hop, dancehall and rapid-fire lyrics for a diverse audience, said Papillon.

"It's going to be mixed up. We have all kinds of flavors ... a little something for everybody," she said. "If you like rap, period, we coming with different styles from all different areas."

Established last September by Papillon and an SIU alumni member, B-Fly Entertainment was organized to provide hip hop events as alternatives to other traditional social events, Papillon said.

"Being in a college town, it seems as if fraternnities and sororities have the same type of events every semester," she said. "I saw there really wasn't an organization that was focusing on hip hop, so I explored the avenues and asked around to see if people would like to go to such an event."

Papillon said she received great responses and attracted large numbers of people to her first two concerts, last September and December, which caused for a move to the Civic Center where there will be seating for 500 people.

"When we had our very first show in the Student Center, there was seating for 200 people and it was standing room only," Papillon said. "People really seemed interested in having something like that again, so B-Fly Entertainment decided to keep doing them. So now we must accommodate."

Before conducting the previous "5 Mics" shows, B-Fly Entertainment released an EP consisting of five songs in the spring of 1998, selling more than 300 copies. The company plans to release Papillon's album called, "Evolution of a Butterfly," this summer.

After presenting its fifth "5 Mics" show, B-Fly Entertainment plans to take the show on the road to other universities, such as University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, Illinois State University and to historical black colleges throughout the South, Papillon said.

Rock band's lawsuit accuses three universities of abetting music

DAVID LINDQUIST
KNIGHTS-RIDDER NEWSPAPER

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Three universities' decisions to allow students to use the controversial Internet music software Napster have spawned a lawsuit from one of rock's biggest bands. Indiana and Yale universities and the University of Southern California have been named in a lawsuit filed this week by Metallica, the first high-profile act to sue Napster for its alleged role in music piracy on the World Wide Web. Computer users around the world have downloaded Napster.com's free software that allows the easy exchange of music compressed into files known as MP3s.

MP3s are not illegal, and have been hailed by low-profile musicians as a way to compete with corporate recording labels and radio stations. It's just as easy, however, for the public — largely college students at this point — to compress copyrighted music and offer it to anyone using Napster or a variety of other file-sharing programs.

Metallica's management claims there's not a single song from the band's 10-album catalog that isn't available for free download through Napster. In its lawsuit, the band accuses the company and the universities of facilitating continued copyright infringements.

Indiana University has become a prime candidate for inclusion in this action during the early weeks of 2000. On Feb. 12, the school blocked all access to Napster as MP3 downloads escalated to command 61 percent of IU's network capacity to transfer information. After outcry from students such as Students Against University Censorship founder Chad Paulson, the school's information technology office worked with Napster to reinstate access to the software and did so March 25.

More than 130 U.S. colleges have permanently blocked Napster. Metallica attorney Howard King said IU officials should have considered more than network capacity when lifting its ban.

Bill Peters

Bill Peters, a doctoral student in biochemistry and molecular biology, was elected next year's Graduate and Professional Student Council president at last week's GPSC meeting.

GPSC's new leadership

New president wants to increase awareness

ANDY MARIE TAVELLA
STUDENT COUNCIL REPORTER

Bill Peters wants graduate students to unite and work together to improve graduate student life.

A doctoral student in biochemistry and molecular biology, Peters was elected next year's Graduate and Professional Student Council president at last week's GPSC meeting.

Peters has spent the past year as GPSC's vice president for Administrative Affairs and as a research assistant in the School of Medicine. Peters has been associated with GPSC for about three years.

Peters said his main goal as president will be to bring graduate and professional students together as a body and to inform them on graduate student issues.

"I think that some of our influence on campus and if strong as it could be because we don't have the support of students," Peters said.

A major problem is that many graduate students are not aware of what they can do to improve the situation for graduate students, Peters said.

"I think part of the reason is that many people may not really understand who the GPSC is, that we exist, that they can become representatives, and that with their support some things can be changed," Peters said.

A large component to Peters' plan to improve graduate student awareness and involvement with GPSC is to better utilize the council's website.

GPSC's current website contains information about GPSC officers, meeting times, agenda and minutes.

Peters wants to expand the website to become an interactive resource for graduate students to learn about GPSC.

"Maybe we can get our comments in time with what's going on," Peters said.

Working on the website will not be easy, but Peters is confident next year's vice president for Administrative Affairs, David Wagner, can handle it.

"He has a tremendous amount of computer knowledge and that's what we need," Peters said.

Peters is also pleased with the election of Jon Haggman to the position of vice president for Graduate School Affairs. Haggman already has a lot of experience working with the graduate school, Peters said.

The history working in leadership roles will help him be a good president, Peters said.

After graduating from Chrenville College with degrees in Chemistry and Biology, Peters taught high school for two years.

Along with having been a teacher and a GPSC vice president, Peters also hopes to graduate in next May.

Janet Hurley, GPSC vice president for Graduate School Affairs, said her confidence in Peters' ability stems from the dedication he has shown to his research and to GPSC.

"He knows he will work hard for GPSC" without involving a personal agenda, Hurley said.

"He has the best interest of GPSC at heart," Hurley said.

"He said she is confident Peters will accomplish the goals he set out for."

"If he says something is going to happen, then it's going to happen," Hurley said.

Ed Cook, GPSC president, said Peters has the ability to keep GPSC on the right track.

"I think he's very aware of the direction we've had to take in the last couple of years," Cook said.

Peters would make a good president because he is open to all perspectives of a situation and would be able to represent the council objectively, Cook said.

"Bill is very willing to sit and listen to various people's points of view," Cook said.

Peters said if he was only interested in his own benefit, he probably would not even be on the council because the department he is in is well funded and he is in an excellent program.

"The reason I got involved with student government is to maintain our graduate school and to help it grow," Peters said.

Students looking to deal on the wheel

JULIE CHEN
UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS AT AUSTIN

AUSTIN — Vowels and consonants were free for the asking as more than 1,000 University of Texas students vied for a chance to qualify to become contestants on the CBS game show "Wheel of Fortune." Fortune staff arrived on campus Monday by means of a 32-foot-long "Wheel-Mobile" and spent four hours interviewing UT students in a mock show.

From the thousand, the staff intends to narrow down the participants to approximately 80 students. "The college shows are high-energy shows," said J. Dee, Promotions Director for the show. "So we look for students who have big energy, are animated, full of natural enthusiasm people who are able to keep that energy in front of a crowd."

They also want to make sure that students understand the rules of the game, Dee said. Two weeks from now, about 80 of the applicants will be contacted for call-backs, during which they must take a written puzzle test and solve as many puzzles as they can in 5 minutes.

There is no maximum cut-off for how many students may qualify, so the show will notify as many students who meet the criteria. Once selected, students are responsible for covering their traveling costs to wherever the show will be taped. "But students may win up to $60,000 or $70,000," Dee said. And the prizes are tailored to fit the college crowd, she said.

The show has a 27-year-old Prize Producer who coordinates what types of prizes will be awarded for each taping of the show. For Lee Garcia, an English and Asian Studies senior, the prizes are only secondary incentives. "Everyone wants to be famous once, why not me?"

The Wheel-Mobile visits about 30 cities and about 15 schools per year, stopping mostly in cities with affiliate stations. Given the fact that more than 1 million people call, write and e-mail the show each year asking to be a participant, the Wheel-Mobile greatly increases the odds for being chosen to play, Dee said.

and hopes to graduate in next May.

Janet Hurley, GPSC vice president for Graduate School Affairs, said her confidence in Peters' ability stems from the dedication he has shown to his research and to GPSC.

She knows he will work hard for GPSC without involving a personal agenda, Hurley said.

"He has the best interest of GPSC at heart," Hurley said.

She said she is confident Peters will accomplish the goals he sets out to do.

"If he says something is going to happen, then it's going to happen," Hurley said.

Ed Ford, GPSC president, said Peters has the ability to keep GPSC on the right track.

"I think he's very aware of the direction we've tried to take in the last couple of years," Ford said.

Peters would make a good president because he is open to all perspectives of a situation and would be able to represent the council objectively, Ford said.

"Bill is very willing to sit and listen to various peoples' points of view," Ford said.

Peters said if he was only interested in his own benefit, he probably would not even be on the council because the department he is in is well funded and he is in an excellent program.

"The reason to get involved with student government is to maintain our graduate school and to help it grow," Peters said.

Students looking to deal on the wheel

JULIE CHEN
UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS AT AUSTIN

AUSTIN — Vowels and consonants were free for the asking as more than 1,000 University of Texas students vied for a chance to qualify to become contestants on the CBS' game show "Wheel of Fortune." Fortune staff arrived on campus Monday by means of a 32-foot-long "Wheel-Mobile" and spent four hours interviewing UT students in a mock show.

From the thousand, the staff intends to narrow down the participants to approximately 80 students. "The college shows are high-energy shows," said Lee Dee, Promotions Director for the show. "So we look for students who have big energy[are] animated, full of natural enthusiasm people who are able to keep that energy in front of a crowd."

They also want to make sure that students understand the rules of the game, Dee said. Two weeks from now, about 80 of the applicants will be contacts for call-backs, during which they must take a written puzzle test and solve as many puzzles as they can in 5 minutes.

There is no maximum cut-off for how many students may qualify, so the show will notify as many students who meet the criteria. Once selected, students are responsible for covering their traveling costs to wherever the show will be taped. "But students may win up to $60,000 or $70,000," Dee said. And the prizes are tailored to fit the college crowd, she said.

The show has a 27-year-old Prize Producer who coordinates what types of prizes will be awarded for each taping of the show. For Lee Garcia, an English and Asian Studies senior, the prizes are only secondary incentives. "Everyone wants to be famous once, why not me?"

The Wheel-Mobile visits about 30 cities and about 15 schools per year stopping mostly in cities with affiliate stations. Given the fact that more than 1 million people call, write and e-mail the show each year asking to be a participant, the Wheel-Mobile greatly increases the odds for being chosen to play, Dee said.

Anita Hutton accompanies graduate student Shawn Trumbo on the piano during a rehearsal Tuesday afternoon in Altgeld Hall. Hutton, who volunteers her time to assist music students, was awarded the Lindell W. Sturgis Memorial Public Service award. The award is given out annually to honor a University employee who has demonstrated public service that is not job-related.

With her eyes fixed on the music in front of her, Anita Hutton's fingers dance across the keys of the old piano in Altgeld Hall, each staccatoed note and accent reflected in her face. Graduate student Shawn Trumbo gracefully joins in the melody, his trumpet echoing throughout the empty classroom.

After the final note is belted out, Hutton leans on the piano and agrees with Trumbo that their run-through had enough little flaws to warrant another try. Trumbo will soon be performing this piece for an upcoming music recital, and having each note fall into place is vital.

"She gives me some really good advice," Trumbo said of Hutton's assistance in accompanying his performances, which she has done since he was a freshman. "She's like my counselor sometimes."

Hutton, who has worked as the coordinator of recruitment and retention for the college of liberal arts for almost 4 years, spends quite a bit of her spare time playing piano with students like Trumbo. Working with up to 25 students at a time, each one preparing for an upcoming concert or recital, the school keeps Hutton booked. But she still makes time for a slew of other activities.

In fact, Hutton's extensive list of public service projects has recently brought her the praise of the Board of Trustees. At its April 13 meeting, Hutton was awarded the Lindell W. Sturgis Memorial Public Service Award, an award given out annually to honor a University employee who has demonstrated public service that is not job-related.

The award, which is accompanied by a cash prize of $500, is the only prize given directly by the board.

"I was flabbergasted," Hutton said of receiving the award. "It was very humbling."

While Hutton remains modest about her accomplishments, those whom she has interacted attest that she is a talented individual, and one who is generous with her time. Robert Weiss, director of the school of music and the one who nominated Hutton for the award, said she has a giving personality that makes her a strong asset to students in the school of music.

"She's very generous," Weiss said. "She's very easy to work with and she's always willing to help."

Hutton said music has always been a driving influence in her life. After beginning professional lessons in the 8th grade, Hutton went on to receive her undergraduate degree in music at the University of Idaho. In 1979, she came to SIUC to get her master's degree in music. She has played piano, organ, flute, sousaphone and french horn.

Proving there is 'no greater love'

Christian ministry groups prepare for Easter weekend

RHONDA SCIARRA
STUDENT AFFAIRS EDITOR

Imogene Sutton describes watching the sun rise over Bald Knob Hill on Easter morning as unbelievable. Each year since 1937, people have flocked to Bald Knob Hill for sunrise Easter service.

"You could see the sun the minute it started to come up," Sutton said. "That sun shining on the white cross was just beautiful — just absolutely beautiful."

This year, the 64th annual Bald Knob Cross Easter sunrise service will take place at 6:30 Sunday morning, along with several other area celebrations of the Easter holiday.

This week has also been deemed "No greater love week" by a group of Christian ministries at SIUC. Students within these ministries have spent the past week trying to share their message prior to the coming of Easter, as well as distributing food and candy.

"The purpose is to get people to think about what Jesus did for us on the cross," said Patrick Langan, a campus minister with InterVarsity Christian Fellowship. "We want people to know there really is no greater love than what Jesus has for us."

Patrina Lang, a sophomore in music vocal performance from Hazel Crest, said by distributing even a small Tootsie Roll pop, it lets people know someone is thinking of them this Easter.

"We're trying to show God's love in a practical way — in a way people can see it," she said.

The celebration at Bald Knob Hill, which is located west of Alto Pass (four miles off Illinois Route 127, will begin as early as 4 a.m. with breakfast.

Wayman Presley, a rural mail carrier, first conceived the idea of a cross atop the peak of Bald Knob. Presley and the Rev. William Lirley of Makanda further developed the notion in 1937. The Civilian Conservation Corps crafted a primitive cross from trees prior to the service, which was attended by about 250 people.

Presley's vision grew in 1944 when he purchased 187 acres on and surrounding the summit of Bald Knob. The next three years were spent traveling five states, seeking donors to repay the loan. By 1951, 116 donors had given $100 each. The group formed the Bald Knob Christian Foundation, a nonprofit group and began to raise money for a more permanent cross just uphill from three wooden crosses — which still remain today — erected by Lively and his Sunday school class in 1945.

In 1952, a 730 ton, 20-foot deep concrete base was poured where the cross would be erected, paid for with money raised by the foundation. The Bald Knob Cross of Peace was completed in 1963, and now stands 111 feet tall and 63 feet wide.

Nationwide teacher shortage

More than 1 million teachers projected to retire within the next five years

ANTONIO YOUNG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Among other states, Illinois lacks a good supply and demand data that indicates how many teachers will be retiring in the future and will need to be replaced, said John McIntyre, associate dean for the College of Education. Nevertheless, elementary and secondary school districts nationwide expect to face many teacher shortages and for various reasons, he said.

According to an article, referred to by McIntyre, titled "Teacher Shortage — Supply and Demand" by Shirley Weston, a 1993-94 survey said 4.2 percent of teachers and 2.7 percent of principals indicated they planned to leave their jobs within the next five years. The article can be found on the International Technology Education Association website at www.itea.org.

Another 10 percent of teachers and 15.5 percent of principals indicated they would remain in their jobs only until they received a better offer, and while a greater number of teachers and principals respectively remained undecided about their future plans, the website article said.

McIntyre said he was not sure if teacher shortages will increase the amounts of teacher salaries, but is in favor of an increase.

"There is still the perception that teachers only work nine months out of the year, but most of the time, a lot of them are working on projects for the next school year and not getting paid for it," McIntyre said. "So I hope [their salaries] do go up because it's going to make it harder and harder to recruit really good people. As a teacher, you really have to want to do it."

According to the website article, one factor contributing to the expected growth in teacher demand is the increasing student enrollment.

The total student enrollment, including both public and private schools, is expected to increase from 49.8 million in 1994 to 51.3 million by 2006. The increase will vary by region with enrollment in the West projected at a 21 percent increase, in the South by 10 percent, by four percent in the Northeast, and in the Midwest by 3 percent.

Another significant factor affecting the demand for teachers is the age of current teachers and principals. In 1994, there were large percentages of elementary and secondary school teachers who were between 50 and 55 years of age. The statistics indicate about 24 percent of elementary teachers and about 26 percent of secondary school teachers could be expected to retire in the next 12 to 15 years, said the website article.

McIntyre said students majoring in education and teachers seeking permanent positions, may benefit from teacher shortages.

"There are already people out there who have graduated that haven't been able to get jobs, so they're substituting or are teacher aides. Compared to past years, I think [their teaching opportunities] are going to look pretty bright," he said.

One woman: more than 50 years of service

Betty Lou Mitchell has been a community gem for half a century

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Betty Lou Mitchell is many things, but selfish is not one of them.

However, "busy" is a word that continues to pop up in conversations about a woman who has donated more than 50 years of her time and energy to SIUC and its community.

Mitchell

She never cheated anybody. She gave her all."

Mitchell has contributed much to SIUC and the community since her arrival at SIUC as a freshman. As an English major, Mitchell began working as an office assistant in the English Department in the fall of 1946.

There she developed new office procedures and record-keeping and filing systems. She completed her bachelors degree in 1949 and her master's in 1950. A year later, she joined SIUC's faculty as an instructor in the English Department.

Mitchell had surgery last fall to remove part of a brain tumor. Now terminally ill, Mitchell is unable to contribute to the community as much as she would like. But many think she has done more than her fair share of community service.

Martin remembers Mitchell as always busy, coming into the office as early as 7 a.m., daily.

"She worked too hard and didn't play enough," Martin said. "There was always work to do and she had to do her part, which was usually the lion's share. I've never heard anyone not respect her. She's made the world a better place."

Mitchell has been active in the community and the school until only recently. She retired from the English Department in 1997. In February, Mitchell and her husband Ellis received the Citizens of the Year Award from the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce.

Mitchell met her husband, Ellis, on campus when they were 19. Mitchell and her husband Ellis have three children, Sarah, Patrick and Tim as well as four grandchildren.

"Since I met her, she has constantly devoted her time to her family and the campus at the same time as other people were doing self-serving things," Ellis recalled. "She has always given 100 percent. She could not say no."

Because of her generosity, Mitchell's five-page resume lists multiple awards and services. According to interim Chancellor John Jackson, one of her more outstanding accomplishments was the Carbondale Public Library. What began as an inadequate building was transformed as she served four positions on the Building Committee for the library.

Joan Huffman has been friends with Mitchell since 1948. The two played bridge together and joined the same sorority.

"I liked her the first time I met her," recalls Huffman, who recently retired from the funeral home business. "I just consider her a longtime, dear personal friend," Huffman said. "She had no faults that I could see. I love her dearly and I always have."

Mitchell was chair of the President's Council Committee of the SIU Foundation, secretary of the Saluki Athletic Council, a member of numerous committees on the Athletic Advisory Council, chair of the Jackson County Humane Society and secretary of the Jackson County YMCA Board of Directors. She has even spent more than 20 years as a troop leader for Cub Scouts and Girl Scouts of America.

Mary Goss, a former academic advisor for SIUC, said Mitchell is the type of person who would do anything you asked, but did not want a big fuss made about it.

"Betty was always there when you needed her," Goss said. "She didn't expect you to load her with compliments. There hasn't been one bad thing said about her."

Good things seem abundant when reviewing the rest of Mitchell's accomplishments. She has written four books about Carbondale and SIUC. Mitchell has also received more than 12 awards for her services, including the 1986 Lindell W. Sturges Memorial Public Service Award, the highest honor granted to a citizen by the Board of Trustees.

Mitchell has also been involved in the greek system. Mitchell was an Alpha Gamma Delta, and advised the Beta Eta Chapter of Alpha Gamma Delta International Fraternity since 1952.

Nancy Hunter-Pei, director of Student Development, thinks of Mitchell as a mentor. Pei met Mitchell as an undergraduate, when Mitchell was the adviser to the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority.

"I've sort of grown up with Betty in a way, from a snot-nosed freshman to being a colleague of hers," Pei said. "For lots of young women on this campus she has been a mentor, a faculty member, a teacher, a mother. They talk about bleeding maroon — I think she is one of those folks."

Mitchell was honored at the Student Affairs Holiday Luncheon in 1997 at which Pei described Mitchell as instrumental in keeping the greek system organized.

"I don't know that our Alpha Gamma Delta chapter would have done as many great things, been as prestigious and would have won as many awards without Betty's influence," Pei said. "She's just full of energy and she cares about people, particularly this institution."

Interim Chancellor John Jackson has known Mitchell for more than 30 years. He and Mitchell lived in the same neighborhood and her children baby-sat his. Jackson describes Mitchell as energetic and dedicated with high standards for herself and her students. Impressed with all Mitchell has done for SIUC and the community, Jackson said Mitchell's power lies in her ability to balance the two worlds of home and work life.

"They don't always mix so easily," Jackson said. "It's like taking off one hat and putting on another. But she did it very competently. She's been a great citizen for Carbondale, the University and Southern Illinois for half a century."

Chicago janitors settle labor disputes

TERESA PUENTEANO &
STEPHEN FRANKLIN
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

CHICAGO -- Janitors who clean nearly all of downtown Chicago's commercial buildings agreed on a new union contract late Monday, ending a planned 24-hour strike.

Negotiations with thousands more janitors in the suburbs were stalled, however, setting the stage for a possible strike there on Tuesday. The one-day walkout by the 5,500 members of the Service Employees International Union, Local 1, was the first by janitors in nearly 50 years in Chicago.

It was called off around 10 p.m. Monday following a vote on the new contract by about 4,000 members following 12 hours of negotiations with the Building Owners and Managers Association, according to union spokesman Ken Munnz.

The contract provides for pay increases of 45 cents an hour in the first year of the contract, 35 cents in the second year, and 30 cents in the third. Those raises will be added to the janitors' present wages of $11.40 an hour. About 3 percent of union members work daytime shifts and they will work their normal Tuesday hours, Munnz said. The remainder begin work around 5 p.m., when most Loop office workers leave for the day.

Those janitors also will return to work at their regular starting time. Munnz said the downtown janitors' previous contract had provided no raise in the first year, 10 cents and hour in the second and 20 cents in the third.

"Our local has changed. We're much more together. The janitors are fed up... and they're in a fighting mood," Munnz said early Tuesday.

He said the vote was taken by a show of hands and was overwhelmingly in favor of the new contract. The outlook is much rockier in the suburbs, where the union and the Suburban Contractors Association, which represents cleaning companies that employ the janitors, appear far apart in their talks.

The union said its 4,500 members at suburban office buildings will stage an extended strike if contract talks on Tuesday show no progress.

"Our suburban people epitomize the working poor and they are really fed up," said Munnz.

Before the walkout started on Monday afternoon, more than 1,000 janitors gathered downtown for a rally, waving red and white signs, rooting whistles and chanting in English, Polish and Spanish. They stopped traffic along West Adams Street and later fanned out across the city picketing office buildings throughout the city's central business district.

"I like performing music because it's a way of expressing emotions without using words," Hutton said. "I enjoy playing a lot and I really like working with students."

In addition to offering her musical experience to students at the University, Hutton has branched out into the community. When the organist at First United Methodist Church in Carbondale was temporarily unable to fill the position, Hutton was asked to substitute. She still does the work to this day, and directs youth musicals and programs for the church as well.

"She has a great rapport with children," First United Methodist Church Pastor John Annable said. "She has a way of making them love to sing. Her love for music just rubs off on them."

While many of Hutton's activities revolve around music, she serves in many other roles as well. She works as a residence hall mentor, as well as serving as a volunteer lecturer in a class geared toward helping students on academic probation. She has also been active in the Women's Caucus, and has worked with Prisoner Volunteer Support at the prison in Marion.

In the end, Hutton said she was flattered by being presented with the award, but has some difficult work ahead of her. Right now, she spends much of her time cranking out her dissertation on curriculum and instruction, which she said will hopefully be completed in August 2001. Donating time and money to causes, as well as approaching everything with a sense of humor, she said, will keep her on track.

"It's what keeps you young, it's what keeps you thinking," Hutton said. "It's what keeps me sane or maintains my insanity, one of the two."

"This isn't a big league organization where we can dip down into our farm system for some help," Callahan said. "What we put out there is what we've got right now."

Because of its floundering pitching staff, SIU (15-21, 5-11 MVC) has its back against the wall entering a weekend series against Indiana State University at Abe Martin Field. The Salukis badly need a winning weekend to fight back into conference tournament picture.

Clearly, the Salukis have their share of problems. But moping is not the solution, Callahan said.

"I sense there are some guys that feel sorry for themselves," Callahan said. "There comes a certain point and time as an athlete where you've got to pick yourself up."

It will be a partially new cast of starting pitchers attempting to pick the Salukis up this weekend.

Billy Hardin will slide into the rotation in place of Victor Hockett, and will start the seven-inning game in Saturday's doubleheader. Callahan has not chosen a starter for Sunday's game, but it is expected that Josh Latimer, who has lost seven games in a row after winning his first three, will join Hockett in moving to the bullpen.

Callahan is frustrated with Hockett and Latimer, who are among several Saluki pitchers who had been successful at one time or another but are now undoubtedly hurting in the confidence department.

"As far as the mental side of things, I think that's a big key right now," Callahan said. "Good performances have been few and far between as of late."

Jake Alley, the only Saluki starter that has had more ups than downs this season, said he feels pressure to keep the staff glued together in light of his teammates' travails.

"Every time I go out there, I'm expected to win, and I've got to do that," Alley said. "I've got to set the tone."

One positive heading into the weekend is the way the Salukis are swinging the bats. Coming off a 17-run effort Wednesday, SIU figures to grab some wins this weekend if its pitching improves some.

Indiana State, fresh off a 2-1 win against Purdue University on Tuesday, comes to Carbondale just as desperate for victories as SIU.

Callahan knows the Sycamores (17-20-1, 5-11), who beat SIU 7-5 in California March 8, will not have a whole lot of sympathy for their beleaguered hosts.

"They're not going to come in here and feel sorry for anyone," Callahan said. "We've got to figure out a way to pick ourselves up."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Holloway becomes third Saluki to transfer

SIU women's basketball sophomore guard Kim Holloway has left the program for personal reasons, Saluki head coach Julie Beck said Tuesday.

Holloway becomes the third Saluki to leave the program, after freshmen Janina Lopez and LaToya Graves recent decisions to transfer.

"It's unfortunate that we are losing Kim," Beck said in a statement. "Her injuries really put the brakes on her basketball career."

Beck said Holloway is pursuing some schools closer to her home in Alabama. Holloway, who averaged 3.1 points a game as a sophomore, battled injuries throughout her Saluki career, but was SIU's starting point guard through 19 games last season. A wrist injury in January ended her season.

The defection further weakens SIU's already-thin pool of guards.

Men's tennis concludes conference schedule

The SIU men's tennis team will conclude the regular season schedule when it faces Wichita State University and Southwest Missouri State University this weekend.

The Salukis (5-12, 1-6) have been struggling the entire season, and have been hampered by injury problems of late.

Stremsterfer named Valley Pitcher of the Week

SIU junior pitcher Erin Stremsterfer was named Missouri Valley Conference Pitcher of the Week for the third time this season on Monday.

Stremsterfer tossed her second no-hitter of the season — a perfect game this time — last Wednesday in a 4-0 shutout of Western Kentucky University. For the week, the Manchester, Mo., native was 2-0, recording 15 strikeouts in 15 innings and allowing only one walk.

This marks the sixth time in nine weeks that a Saluki has been named a Valley Pitcher or Player of the Week.

Stetson softball has the right stuff

MARK BLYTHE
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

DE LAND, Fla. — It all starts with pitching, but there's so nothing else that makes the Stetson women's softball team special.

"I've coached teams with talent on it before," said Frank Griffin, who has coached the Hatters for four years and has won 306 games over a 11-year career. "I think this may be the best team I've ever coached. It's their chemistry; they seem to click on the field. They all seem to have the same common goals."

Stetson, which lost 33 games last season, has jumped out to a 31-14 record. It can thank pitching and solid defense for that.

"I love our pitchers," Griffin said. "Pitching isn't easy. You spend time doing something that is frustrating and keep doing it. It's 99 percent hard work."

Griffin should know. In 1988-89 he pitched for a traveling team in South Carolina that won a state title.

Senior Rhonda Kessler (17-6, 1.23 ERA) is the Hatters' top hurler. Her victory total places her in the top 20 in the nation. Kelli Lightner, a junior, isn't far behind. She's 13-8 with a 1.54 ERA. Lake Mary graduate Fannie Sowards, a freshman, hasn't pitched much but is expected to contribute more in the future.

"If batters would walk as hard as these pitchers, they'd all be hitting .400," Griffin said.

The offense is led by leadoff hitter Tiffany Tolleson, who ranks in the top 10 in the nation with her .469 batting average. Tolleson is a slap/bunt hitter who uses her speed to get on, and when she does she's stolen 51 bases in 54 attempts. Sabrina Isley, who bats second, has a .325 average and is a perfect 34-for-34 in stolen bases.

Saluki baseball's annual fish fry features autographed merchandise from a variety of stars

JAY SCHWAR
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

FISH FRY
* THE SALUKI BASEBALL FISH FRY & SPORTS MEMORABILIA AUCTION TAKES PLACE TONIGHT AT THE CARBONDALE CIVIC CENTER. DINNER IS SERVED BETWEEN 5 AND 8 P.M. AND THE AUCTION WILL FOLLOW IMMEDIATELY. TICKETS ARE $6 FOR ADULTS AND $3 FOR CHILDREN.

Authentic memorabilia from political luminaries Al Gore, George W. Bush, and Bill Bradley, along with sports celebrities such as Mark McGwire, Ken Griffey Jr., and Kurt Warner, will all be available under one roof in Carbondale tonight.

Sound a little bit fishy? It's not, unless you count the all-you-can-eat fish that highlights the Saluki baseball program's fourth annual Fish Fry & Sports Memorabilia Auction, which begins tonight at 5 p.m. at the Carbondale Civic Center.

The auction, which has gained momentum in each year of its existence, will feature a variety of items sure to draw interest from area collectors. Proceeds subsidize the SIU baseball team's budget.

"We'd like to think it's become a community event, where when people hear Good Friday, it's synonymous with the Saluki baseball fish dinner," SIU baseball head coach Dan Callahan said. "It's a lot of fun."

Callahan estimated between 750 and 1,000 plates were served at the event last year. Fish, potato salad, homemade desserts and a variety of other culinary delicacies will be on the menu for the dinner, which will be served after an afternoon game against Indiana State University.

Callahan said there are dozens of items available in the auction likely to draw plenty of attention.

"We have some items that are so unique. It's kind of nice to watch people walk around... a lot of the people that have come, come back because they enjoy it," Callahan said.

Tickets for the dinner and auction can be purchased at the door, and carry-out orders are available.

Women's tennis nets important weekend

Saluki road trip will determine ranking for conference tournament

ANDY EGENSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIU women's tennis team's seed for the MVC tournament will soon be decided.

The Salukis (12-4, 6-1) will be on the road this weekend to play Wichita State University today and Southwest Missouri State University Saturday to determine their fate for the conference tournament.

Southwest Missouri State leads the Missouri Valley Conference and the Shockers are in eighth place, but SIU coach Judy Auld is not taking either team for granted.

"I've said all along that there are six teams that can beat each other on any given day," Auld said. "I think the same way with Southwest, it's a whole new weekend and a whole new match."

This match will mark the first meeting of the season for the two teams. Auld gave her squad two days of rest this week to allow fresh legs for the late-season run.

"I'm an advocate that rest sometimes is more appropriate this time of year," Auld said. "I think getting rest right now is more crucial than hitting a tennis ball."

Depending on the outcome of the weekend's matches, SIU can go into the conference tournament anywhere from a one seed to a three seed.

"Southwest is really the team to beat," Auld said. "They are playing really, really good tennis. But I'm a firm believer that teams can peak too soon."

"It's not a do-or-die situation. It still comes down to another week at the conference tournament."

That is partially the reason why Auld has given her team days off in back-to-back weeks. She does not want her team to over-exert itself before the conference tournament or put chances for the NCAA Midwest Region Tournament into jeopardy.

"If they don't have the legs and the mental concentration, it does not make any difference how hard you've practiced," she said.

Tennis Note:

Auld has signed her final recruit for next season. Sarah Krimmaris, a high school senior from Moline, agreed that she will play tennis at SIU in the fall. She comes from a Saluki tradition, as her mother, Sue Briggs, played tennis at SIU.

Briggs is in the SIU Hall of Fame and graduated from the University in 1978.

Auld, in her 26th season at SIU, will now have a chance to coach both a mother and a daughter.

"The first-time I saw [Sarah], she was nine months old and bouncing on the bed," Auld said. "It's scary. It doesn't seem like I've been here that long."

It was the greatest thing since sliced bread," he says. But Winston says he quickly associated drinking with putting off things that needed to be done.

"For about 10 years it worked like charm," Winston says. "Then it was a vicious circle. I would drink to forget my problems, then I would wake up or come-to and they would still be there."

Winston attended SIUC from 1967 until 1971. After graduating with a degree in social work, he went on to work for local security companies and continued to drink almost every night.

In 1976, he married a girlfriend he had lived with, but in less than a year she left him. Winston says he distinctly remembers the night she walked out.

"I was laying on the kitchen floor, and I couldn't get up," he says. "I was so out of it that I didn't care about her, all I cared about was drinking."

In 1979, Winston attended his first A.A. meeting, but says he went to show other people he could get help and to keep those people "off his back." Because he was attending

A.A. meetings for reasons other than for himself, he says, he was not very successful. His bouts of sobriety were accompanied by occasional bouts of drinking.

It was on April 17, 1982, that things changed.

Winston had arrived back to Southern Illinois after working security for four months at an oil refinery in Port Arthur, Texas. He stayed sober while in Texas.

With some of the thousands of dollars he had made from that job, Winston bought a new motorcycle and took it for a drive that night along roads adjacent to Crab Orchard Lake. He began a drinking binge at the lake, and progressed to almost every bar on his way into Carbondale.

After getting into a fight inside Gatsby's, rear ending a car outside the bar and pulling a gun on the owner of the car, the police were called. They chased Winston as far as Cartersville, when Winston got into another accident. "He lay along side of the road bleeding before he was apprehended. He was then taken to the hospital and then to jail. It was that night that made Winston realize he could not live and still drink.

Winston says because he wanted to stop drinking for his own reasons, he was able to work through his alcoholism and the A.A. program. Throughout the next year, Winston credits the beginning of his bagel business and A.A. support with helping him through tough times.

"We'd stay at Denny's all night to keep from drinking," Winston says. "There is nothing more boring than a bunch of alcoholics sitting at Denny's and drinking coffee all night."

Now, Winston can be found with his bagel stand from about 9 at night to the early hours of the next morning, Tuesdays through Saturdays. He can also be found each night reminding wandering college students to "take it easy" and "keep safe."

"He makes sure that everyone is all right," says Ian Vertovec, a junior in cinema and photography from Elmhurst. "He is kind of like a surrogate grandfather to all the Stripgoers."

Winston says he does not mind serving lines of drunken college students after they end their nights because he knows their drinking is beyond his realm.

"It is like a spectator sport," Winston says. "I am on the outside looking in. I have about as much control over these kids as I do the sunset. All I can do is share my experiences."

Softball team lacks discipline at the plate

Lecture at practice proves prophetic for Saluki batters

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

At practice Wednesday, SIU assistant softball coach Buddy Foster lectured the Saluki hitters about being disciplined at the plate.

Ironically, it was a lack of discipline at the plate that plagued the Salukis in game two of a doubleheader against the University of Evansville Thursday at IAW Fields. SIU split the doubleheader, winning game one 2-1 and dropping game two, 1-0.

The Salukis (35-17, 5-7 Missouri Valley Conference) failed to push a run across in game two despite having runners in scoring position in both the fifth and sixth innings with only one out each time.

The SIU hitters proved to be their own worst enemy, as they swung at questionable pitches down the stretch, ultimately killing any chance to score.

"You have to stay focused [at the plate] and remember what you work on at practice and apply it in games," junior pitcher Erin Stremster said. "That's the reason we practice it and when we don't apply it in games, it's not going to work."

Stremster pitched a solid six innings allowing no earned runs and striking out seven, but suffered the loss, dropping her record to 11-6.

Sophomore left fielder Jenny Guenther and senior shortstop Janie Campbell led the Salukis' offense, each hitting 2-for-3 in game two.

In game one, Guenther came through in the clutch for SIU head coach Kerri Blaylock. With the game tied 1-1 in the seventh inning, Guenther singled in freshman pinch runner Kendra Moore to break the tie and win the game.

Senior pitcher Carisa Winters pitched a complete game, allowing one run — unearned — and seven hits, while striking out 10 to earn her 15th win of the season.

Junior center fielder Marta Vielhaus went 2-for-3 with an RBI, while senior Lori Greiner also provided a 2-for-3 effort.

Although SIU would have liked to sweep the Purple Aces (34-18-1, 8-6 MVC), spirits were still up following the game two loss. Blaylock was pleased to see her team battle Thursday and is not overly concerned by the setback.

"I think this conference is so hysterical to look at, the way people beat are beating the tar out of each other," Blaylock said. "Out of our 17 losses, 13 are by one run."

The Salukis underwent a minor funk earlier in the season where they were not playing sound ball, but they are aware Thursday's game two loss was not one in which they played poorly.

With six Valley contests left, the Salukis are confident about where they stand as a team.

"We know that we're climbing," Stremster said. "It's not as far in the pit as we were, so we'll be back."

Saluki skipper shakes up starting rotation as Salukis try to turn fortunes around against Indiana State

JAY SCHWAB
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Mounting a furious eight-run rally in the ninth inning, only to come up short and lose a half-game, is a pretty solid indication of a team that is in the midst of a rough season.

The SIU baseball team scored eight times in the ninth inning at Southeast Missouri State University Wednesday, after plating five runs in the eighth, yet still managed to lose, 19-17.

Of the seven Saluki pitchers who appeared in the game against the Indians, only Scott Lucht (4.76) has an ERA below 6.38. Because of the inept mound efforts, the Salukis squandered an offensive performance that included 18 hits and home runs by Andy Cenkush, Jeff Houston and Jason Rainey.

Even before the debacle in Cape Girardeau, it was no secret that SIU's pitching staff has been about as consistent as the weather.

Unfortunately for SIU, there are no magic potions to reverse the tide. SIU head coach Dan Callahan recognizes that the only way things are going to get any better is if his hitters dig down deep and find strength to regroup.
