Property tax may increase by 21 percent

By Dean Alsman
Staff Writer

Jackson County Supervisor of Assessments William Massey says recent reports of a 27 percent increase in property tax for Jackson County are inaccurate.

The increase will amount to about 21 percent, Massey said, adding that the figure is correct for about 21 percent over last year.

The multiplier assigned to each county by the Illinois Department of Revenue to equalize the assessment rates among counties is 1.449:1, the County Supervisor said.

"I'm going to try to get that thing, tax multiplier lowered," Massey said. "The problem is that I checked through all the information. The Department used the multiplier and it's correct. But I'm still trying to find something wrong with it."

Massey will do his bargaining at a meeting March 2 in Springfield with the Revenue Department reviewing the multiplier.

However, Massey said, he expects the final multiplier to be equalized by state officials in about six weeks. (The meeting will be held in the same time.

He added that if a taxpayer feels he is being assessed for a property that is below the limit of 1.33 percent of his property value, the assessment can be appealed and assessed value before the Jackson County Board of Appeals.

Salary competition affecting faculty

Editor's note: This is the third in a series of articles examining faculty salaries and their effect on the College of Business. This week, we examine how increased faculty recruitment and retention in the private sector is having some direct effects on faculty recruitment and retention in the more mobile departments at SIU.

Salary competition between universities and professions in the private sector is having some direct effects on faculty recruitment and retention in the more mobile departments at SIU.

And the competition has increased in the past few years because of a continuing trend of faculty salary increases not meeting increases in the cost of living for several SIU-C deans and professors.

The general consensus among those interviewed was that the areas of aviation, maintenance, technology, computer science, mathematics, economics, and accounting in the private sector are the areas that are feeling the effects of salary competition.

"There is a lot of competition from the supply and demand for faculty members in that same area at other universities, or for trained professionals in the private sector."

Joe Schaefer, assistant professor of aviation technology at SIU, said the demand for aviation maintenance technicians in the private sector is having some direct effects on faculty recruitment by universities.

"They just aren't enough people to go around. The trend is that by 1985, the United States will be short 60,000 maintenance technicians, and we (SIU-C) don't come close in competing with airlines and manufacturers for salaries," he said.

Schafer said that his department has had to replace four or five people in the last two years, something that he said is "very unusual."

"We have great difficulty in those three areas in terms of offering competitive beginning salaries and at the same time recruiting qualified faculty," he said.

No major effects of competition in the engineering fields have been felt here yet, said Kenneth Tempelmeyer, dean of the School of Engineering and Technology, adding that engineering salaries are climbing nationwide.

"Nationwide, many faculty members are beginning teaching and migrating to government and industry. At SIU, we have lost one faculty member who went to another university at a higher salary since I came here in July," he said.

Tempelmeyer said universities "face a serious problem with high salaries on the outside and low ones on the inside," and he does not see a decline in this trend.

John Darling, dean of the College of Business and Administration, said loss of people to higher salaries is a "fact of life in the field of business."

"Faculty members in the field of business are extremely mobile and the same is true in the private sector. It's a tight market, with a tremendous demand-supply discrepancy," he said.

Darling said the 18 vacancies in the College of Business right now are not unusual because "we're always in a situation where we're recruiting people."

"We are offering competitive salaries in business but I do see a problem in the future if salary increases stay below the cost of living," he said.

Accountancy is also a competitive field, salary-wise, and Anthony Bas, chairman of the SIU department, said he has found difficulty in recruiting new faculty.

"The difficulty occurs when we want to hire an individual and we're not sure where he might fit in a certain pay range. Some other school might tag him at a higher amount, and then we lose out," he said.

Basi said there are currently four vacancies in the department.

Republican bidding for Simon's seat

Republican John T. Anderson of Marion called for a strong national defense program and an end to spiraling inflation rates as he announced his candidacy for U.S. Representative for the 24th District Wednesday at a press conference in Marion.

Anderson criticized incumbent Rep. Paul Simon, D-Carbondale, for his opposition to military spending. Anderson said he supports an increase in military spending because the United States could not withstand a military confrontation with the Soviet Union.

Calling himself a "doer and not a talker," Anderson called Simon a "career politician who doesn't really listen to the people of Southern Illinois."

Anderson said the voting record of a Congressional representative should reflect the views of his constituency, and Simon's has not been representative of the people of Southern Illinois.

SIU-C a contender for Phi Beta Kappa

By Chuck Hempstead  Staff Writer

SIU-C has an excellent opportunity to be granted a prestigious Phi Beta Kappa charter, according to Edward McComb, chairman of the Department of Speech Communication and coordinator of the charter application effort. Phi Beta Kappa, founded at the College of William and Mary in 1776, is the oldest and most coveted honorary recognition to be bestowed upon students of liberal arts and sciences.

"Our chances are excellent," McComb said of the application for charter which has been reported repeated four times since 1941. "I'm confident we've rectified earlier problems and the political climate has improved."

The problems with SIU-C's previous application, according to McComb, himself a Phi Beta Kappa member, were that SIU-C did not have a satisfactory honors program and that the application did not sufficiently document the accomplishments of students.

The political climate McComb referred to as a censure by the American Association of University Professors, was because of the University's director of academic programs, Douglas M. Allen, former assistant professor of philosophy, for allegedly using students to engage in war activities. The censure was lifted last spring.

McComb said, I think the materials we submitted this time are far better. We strive to reflect the quality of either the students or the programs available to those students."

On the basis of Phi Beta Kappa's preliminary report and the discussion of SIU-C's chances at a Phi Beta Kappa charter meeting last November, McComb is optimistic that SIU-C will join the select society. There are 225 chapters in the United States with an estimated 350,000 living members.

A report of about 200 pages will be submitted to the national organization detailing the purpose of the liberal arts curriculum, the organization of the program, the students and graduates, the staff, library and laboratories and the University's athletics policy and financial condition.

If November, Phi Beta Kappa committee will spend 2 days on campus randomly interviewing honor students, faculty, librarians and reviewing transcripts. A vote will be taken at the organization's national meeting in 1972 to determine the fate of SIU-C's charter application.

"The very best students in liberal arts and sciences deserve the recognition which comes with Phi Beta Kappa." McComb said. "The academic programs here are timetimed and hard to identify as a finer university."

For a student to be initiated into Phi Beta Kappa, he must be in the top 10 percent of the liberal arts students. McComb said that when SIU-C does not have a College of Liberal Arts, it has been determined which academic units will qualify.

The charter application did not sufficiently document the qualifications of the students and the programs available to those students."

City to enforce trash ordinance

By Mary Ann McNulty  Staff Writer

An ordinance requiring residents to place garbage in 20- to 30-gallon containers equipped with tight fitting, insect-proof covers will be more heavily enforced. Carbondale code enforcement officers have announced the action was prompted by an increased amount of litter around garbage cans in the city.

The ordinance was passed in 1970.

"We want to get everyone aware of the ordinance."

Yow said, "We want to work in such a way that students who are new to the community know of the ordinance." Assistant Street Superintendent Wayne Wheelsie said garbage crews occasionally have problems with plastic bags breaking while crews are collecting them but it's not a big problem.

"We make a stab at picking up items that are collectible if a bag breaks but we don't bring out the rakes or shovels." Wheelsie said. "We feel people are taking a risk by putting their garbage only in plastic bags and that they should be the ones to clean it up."

Voter registration in Jackson County is not increasing significantly in this election year despite tightly contested races in the Democratic and Republican primaries, Jackson County Clerk Robert Harrell says.

However, Harrell said potential voters seemed to be expanding their interests beyond single issues.

Though the turnout for some recent registration drives seemed large, Harrell said that the response is not unique before a primary. He said his office is handling only a slight increase in the number of people registering. He said the increase could be attributed to increased public interest in this year's local and national campaigns.

"The increase is not all that significant," Harrell said. "I think that it is a spirited primary contest between the

Reagan joins in Republican debate

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Ronald Reagan, the reluctant debater, confronted George Bush and the rest of the Republican presidential field Wednesday night in a campaign debate that produced a chorus of demands for increased defense spending.

Six of the seven GOP candidates agreed that the nation's military budget should be boosted to signal the Russians that the United States will tolerate further Soviet expansion.

All the debates except Reagan debated in Iowa on Jan. 5. At that point, Reagan was the man to beat. In the Jan. 21 Iowa GOP caucuses, Bush beat him. They now top billing in the polls in advance of New Hampshire's Feb. 28 primary election.

In the Des Moines debate, the candidates were relatively restrained, with few harsh words for each other. Reagan said he skipped that confrontation because he feared it would be divisive, following his Iowa defeat, Reagan said. "I was wrong."

U.S. mission to Iran delayed

By the Associated Press
Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on Wednesday delayed the departure of a special U.N. investigative commission to Iran until the weekend and said Iranian authorities want the commission members to talk to all of the approximately 56 American hostages in Tehran.

One of the five-ommission members said, meanwhile, there was a "gentlemen's agreement" that the hostages would be freed as a result of the mission. The timing of the release remained unclear, however.

Waldheim said that the Iranians had asked for "a little more time" to prepare for the inquiry, which the U.N. chief called a "fact-finding mission" to hear the grievances against the United States and American grievances over the hostage-taking.

Computer sales to Russia an "error"

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States made major "errors in judgment" by selling computers which the Soviets now use to help make Army trucks and other military equipment, a senior Defense Department official said Wednesday.

William J. Perry, the Pentagon's research chief, said government officials have known for three years that U.S.-supplied computers were used in the Kama River manufacturing plant to build trucks for the Soviet Army.

Some of the trucks are now known to have been used in the Soviet military move into Afghanistan.

"Many people in a number of administrations believed that the political benefits were the risks of technology transfers," Perry said.

President Bush has since ordered an investigation into the matter, Perry said.

Fire evacuates Schneider

A pan of grease left unattended on a burner in a Schneider Hall kitchenette was the cause of an evacuation there late Tuesday afternoon, according to University Police.

The fifth-floor fire was extinguished before Carbonaded firemen arrived but the building was evacuated in accordance with state law. Carbonaded Fire Chief Jim McGoughan said.

About 250 residents of the East Campus residence hall's two populations were in the building at the time, said Elaine Mitchell, Parish Toward Coordinator of Residence Life.

Mitchell said most residents were at dinner at the time of the fire. Schneider Hall was also evacuated last Sunday when a grease fire in a kitchenette on the 10th floor.

Carbonaded police reported the fire a television set and stereo equipment were burned from a residence on South Beverage Street Tuesday night.

Steven Surnick, 405 S. Beverage, estimated the value of the items at $1,000. Police said Surnick was sleeping in the basement of the residence when the burglary occurred. Police have no suspects.

Implications of racism ‘appalling’

Ms. Penner, with all the varied events transpiring in America and on SU’s Campus, I would like you to comment on the productivity of SU’s Black History Month. I note the appending of a black man to SU’s Board of Trustees (or that speech and their stance) worked harmoniously to make Schneider Hall with Gras a great success. With all the strife and strain in the world, an opinionated subjective rendition of what fights over the Student Center TV set is far from the direction necessary to inspire students toward excellence.

It was clever how you directed the reader’s attention to the fact that the incident was one of race. I quote you, “But when the argument turned into a fight, the issue of race clearly emerged. Many of the blacks in the lounge then supported the channel 12 (an all-black girl) and even joked that she really gave it to that white girl.” Now Ms. Penner, are you expecting the reading public to believe the white students did not ‘side’ with their white candidate? Sufficient it to say that reporting abilities seem a fusty bit—e’en for commentary. I would think that you would present both sides of the coin and then draw a conclusion.

To point out the existence of such tension is fine, and is greatly needed worldwide. But to contrive an article in such a way to implicitly point out a fault is wrong and merits grave discrimination of character in this instance yourself. I am somewhat naive to realize ‘placing fault’ is a technique designed to protect the ‘Beast,’ and I so merely note that Diana Penner, in all your efforts to raise students consciousness, maybe you should check out yourself.

Whitting away freedom

We were dismayed by an article in the Daily Egyptian Feb. 1. According to the Associated Press, President Carter plans to ask for the creation of a secret court to rule on intelligence agencies who can take covert actions—break into homes, offices, mail—against U.S. citizens. Our government is taking advantages from the Irian and Afghan crises to gain even greater control. This is not new. Throughout history, governments have used crises to justify greater and more repressive powers. The red scare of the ’30s and the McCarthy era of the ’50s are two good examples.

President Carter, his national security adviser, and 15 members of his administration are current or former members of the Trilateral Commission. The TIC exists to serve the interests of giant multi-national corporations, both in the United States, Japan and Western Europe. They oppose any actions that import quotas, unions or greater state control of corporations—minorities—which interfere with smooth profit making. Their strategy was described by David Rockefeller, North American Vice President of the World Bank, as “one of repression and violence administered if possible, through industrial government which provides police protection.”

In this case the “territorial government” is that of the University. With regards to Mike Fitzgerald’s letter [Feb. 11 DE]—experience has shown us that if you do not want a “snow emergency” declared and, therefore, no automobiles (or trains) allowed, just threaten the two people. They will happen. The event was declared for the Zibu, the day of the primary. Perhaps, Mr. Fitzgerald and his friends should retain their feelings make a way for the voting citzenry there who are keeping the people aren’t the majority, and the town’s locally-owned newspaper scrupulously reports the action, as well as the consequences of city government behavior.

Yet, to take the longer view, such antisocial behavior would be more sensibly directed at the people who are keeping him here. —The Carbondale City Council.

Self-Defense Club learns techniques of Hapkido

By Carrie McNeely
Staff Writer

"Char 'ya! Ham nah, bul set, san, intap, maeb, aplah, yull," the deep-voiced chant is heard from down the hall.

At first it might seem that the Recreation Building is holding a beginning Korean language class, but a closer look will reveal that the counting is coming from the martial arts room where the SIU Self-Defense Club is practicing the art of Hapkido.

The Rec Building is the club's regular Thursday evening meeting place. About 25 male and female students are present, most wearing the traditional starch-white Hapkido uniform, the doobok, as it is called.

Each club member works at perfecting the special techniques of Hapkido. Some appear confused as the instructor, Tim Montgomery, a first degree red belt, demonstrates a skilled flip; others look intrigued. Although most of the students are working with a partner, a few betters practice with great intensity in front of full-length mirrors.

Of all the martial arts, Hapkido is the most difficult to learn because it utilizes multiple techniques, said Kerry Wall, club president.

"The Korean martial art of Hapkido was influenced by the empty-hand techniques developed during the Chinese T'ang dynasty. These were integrated with the native Korean kicking art of Tae Kwon to produce the martial art T'ang soo," Wall said.

According to Wall, the Japanese jujitsu-ryu systems of "no holds barred," also influenced the development of Hapkido. These were fighting techniques which involved kneeing, kicking, striking and throwing, along with joint-locking techniques.

"In about 1919 a young Korean, Yong Iluh Choi, combined his knowledge of jujitsu with the ancient Korean styles and eventually the self-defense art of Hapkido emerged," Wall said.

The English language translation of Hapkido, Wall said means "the way of harmonized energy." Hapkido has become useful in self-defense situations of any degree since its inception as an art.

"In class we cover all basic karate fundamentals of the art, which include blocking, kicking and punching," Wall said.

"To master Hapkido one must first master the art of bending the body and making it flexible and limber," Wall said.

"Falling is also very important, one must learn how to fall hard without hurting themselves in the process," he added.

"Hapkido is the perfect art for people, both young and old, male and female, who need to learn how to protect themselves or who desire an all-around exercise program," Wall said.

Aside from learning the basic skills and general Korean principles, each club member begins by learning to self-defense techniques for use against a close-hold grab, and to techniques against a wrist-grab. Wall said.

"As you move up by levels, you learn more techniques. The club is set up for progressive learning of the skills," Wall said.

"We also concentrate heavily on actual self-defense situations." "Knowing how to protect yourself can mean anything from knowing how to fall, how to throw someone off of you or how to block, kick and punch if you have to fight," Wall explained.

The club is set up so that members can earn one rank a semester. The color of the belt worn on the doobok signifies the rank position of that person. Most of the participants are wearing the beginner's color of white.

White, yellow and orange belts are the colors signifying the beginning levels, with white as the lowest rank.

Green and blue are intermediate colors. Purple, brown and red designate the advanced ranks of Hapkido.

"The highest level to achieve before becoming a black belt is the fourth degree," Wall said. "The club and its instructors are connected with the Moo-Sul-Kwan organization, which means 'martial arts school.' In Korean, this association, not the club itself, is qualified to certify and promote club members to higher ranks," Wall said.

Keeping with the tradition of the art they practice, each member begins and ends every session by showing proper respect, to the art and to the instructor, by bowing, or kyung-ju.

If there’s one thing that’s guaranteed to develop from a William Friedkin film it is differences of opinion. His latest, the controversial "Cruising," proves conclusively that one man’s ceiling is another man’s floor.

Friedkin thrives on ambiguity. He fills complicated plots with abstract subtleties that may or may not be central to the story. Anyway, if I was seeing it right, "Cruising" is a dynamic film.

What some reviewers saw as a film loaded with loud, unanswered questions. What was undercover policeman Steve Burns’ ultimate reaction to the sadomasochistic homosexual underworld he was assigned to work within? They said the answer wasn’t there.

Friedkin directed and wrote this film adaptation of a Gerald Walker novel. The film has been the focus of a great deal of protesting from gay people throughout the country. Wrapped within the complicated character study is an engraving detective story delivered in a more delicate style than Friedkin’s earlier "The French Connection."

Burns is enlisted by Captain Edison (Paul Sorvino) to infiltrate the gay community and find the man who has been killing and mutilating 80% and 90% bar patrons. Burns is chosen because he bears a resemblance to the other victims.

Now the “Cruising” I saw answered that question. And it answered it with style.

Al Pacino stars as Burns, a policeman assigned to find a killer in the bizarre surroundings of New York’s "S and M" gay scene. Pacino turns in his finest performance since "The Godfather II." managing to admirably show to the audience the wrenching changes that are happening to him internally.

The central theme of the movie is those internal changes. The movie is made successful by the quiet, intricate, believable manner with which those changes are revealed. ve. Respect, Wall said, is always shown to the instructor because he has rank.

"We practice the pure Korean martial art and tradition dictates that you respect the belt because it signifies rank and skill," he added.

"Each member learns the Korean words that apply to what is taught in practice. As a group, we count in Korean and use the correct terminology for every kick, punch and stance," he said.

Using the language of the art, Wall added, keeps the spirit of the club going strong.

Although it has been active for several years, the club has just recently been recognized by the Recreation Center Council as a student organization.

"This is the first time the club has had this kind of outcome. We've been active before, but the degree of interest that has been shown this year didn't exist," Wall said.

The club began when a few interested students met each week to practice Hapkido. Today, the club roster holds over 40 members, and more are added each semester.

"Anyone can learn and perfect the techniques of Hapkido. The art is a frame of mind, which combines confidence and the will to learn and apply themselves can accomplish the skills of Hapkido," Wall said.

"People have been doing it for centuries," he added.

As the season comes to an end, the group gathers around the mats to observe one of the more spectacular techniques of Hapkido, board breaking. Left up to the intermediate and advanced levels, board breaking is a skill which the instructors take great pride in demonstrating.

Despite it's ability to draw gasps of disbelief from the audience, board breaking, according to Wall, is a concept that is misconceived by many people.

"Board breaking is not an end in itself. The purpose is not in dramatics, but in dynamics," said Wall. Wall, a lifelong practitioner of board breaking by toughening up his knuckles on a brick wall.

"Proper balance, form, power and speed are all necessary. It takes a lot of mental concentration," he added.

"The ability to break a board or a brick," he explained, "is a measure of strength. It is a test to see how much power your body can generate."

"There is no doubt that the Self-Defense Club members take great pride in perfecting the ancient art of Hapkido. The intense impact with which they flip bodies to the ground best characterizes the seriousness of the art."

"Keeping with traditional Korean customs, the group ends each session by assembling in performance line, bowing in stunned silence and shouting "Ho Shin," which means self-respect."

"Self-confidence and self-discipline sum up the jist of how Wall, who practices board breaking, said. Wall practices board breaking upon impact."

"It is a test of computer skills at building three-inch-thick paper structures and balsa bridges, which in turn will be tested for compressive strength. Paper airplanes will be judged by design and performance in conjunction with accuracy in flight," Johnson said.

"I'll simulate the real computer games, involving investment of $1,000 in commodities to see who will realize the greatest financial gains, will be held."
SPC members view different acts

By Andrew Zinner
Snail Writer

Ten Student Programming Council members, along with some administrative personnel, attended a week-long convention last week to view acts of all kinds, from magicians to rock 'n' roll bands. SPC programming members were able to view movies, mime groups and bands, as well as go to educational seminars along with booking acts, to "set up a face-to-face meeting with agents all over the country," according to Bruce Zimmerman, University Programming Coordinator.

The national convention of the National Entertainment Campus Activities Association, which was held in Washington, D.C. this year, was attended by representatives of 80 colleges and 700 business agencies. Zimmerman said that the convention was important because it covered all phases of SPC, from video to the coffeehouse series. He also pointed out the importance of learning how other schools do their booking, and also said that small organizations can help new booking agencies who are interested in SPC.

"This is a major convention that is 12 years old, and attendance is essential," Zimmerman said.

He emphasized that the entertainment business is based on trust and the development of personal relationships between the business agencies and the schools.

"The students here really haven't paid what they should for some of the shows at Shyrock, because of the negotiating process that goes on," Zimmerman stressed.

filicatic best when portraying the eccentric and bizarre.

While things are developing, we're given a glimpse of how Burns is settling into his role. The movies are very important: they're magnificent in effectively portraying these reactions. The changes are more anticipated than revealed. This gives the film a real sense of importance. Friedkin doesn't explain what's happening, it has to be picked up as things unfold. We find Burns having psychological problems and a fall-out with his girlfriend (Karen Allen). Also, he takes a4'and (just) interest in his homosexual neighbor (Don Scardino). These psychological vignettes continue through the film, but take a backseat as Burns bears down on the killer.

The actual detective work takes place in a matter of50 hours. Still it is a fascinating aspect of the film. Friedkin employs the same suspense techniques he used in "The French Connection" and sets a torrid pace.

The film doesn't slow down when the killer is found and this is what leads to the equanimity of ending. But that's Friedkin's technique and for me at least, it works. The ending of "Cruising" may be its best part.

As for those questions, the answers all fall into place with a little bit of work on the viewer's part. What was Burns' reaction to that world? What was its effect on his own sexuality? Why does he want to come beyond the film? They're answered, though may not be pleasantly. "Cruising" may not be the same film to everyone, but in my mind Friedkin succeeded in what he was trying to accomplish. "Cruising" is a dynamic and important film.

Soviet expert cites possible motives behind Afghan invasion

By Andrew Zinner

Moscow—Moscow won't be the only Soviet capital to fight, as some have speculated, because the Soviets will go to greater lengths to wipe out the rebel resistance, and will not rest until it is necessary, said a Soviet affairs specialist.

Besides, the current resistance, which has accounted for a great deal of Soviet work and casualties, will end without the Soviet winter, which will finish the job. The Soviets, however, will engage in minor fighting, and will not resort to using all their forces if necessary, said a Soviet affairs specialist.

Health Service use down, no fee increase necessary

By Cindy Humphress
Staff Writer

The study states medical fee will not be increased next year, because use of the Health Service has declined by 28 percent since 1974, and medical costs have risen by 18 to 24 percent, but, "I don't see students parking more than usual, until at least June of 1982."

"If present on-campus enrollment and Health Service utilization trends remain constant it may be possible to go into 1983 and 1984 without a fee increase," he said. The largest part of the medical fee $23.50 is used to maintain on-campus out-patient services at the Health Service.

Another report of the last five years show that use of the Health Service peaked in 1976, with a total of 70,474 visits. Since then, there has been a steady decline in use of the Health Service. Fiscal year 1979 ended with a total of 38,967 visits. McVay said the opening of the Recreation Building and the recent national interest in positive health behaviors like regular exercise and weight maintenance are contributing factors, but he said the Student Wellness Resource Center's patient activation program is the main cause of the decline in Health Service use.

The patient activation program evolved from the student health program's greater concentration on the prevention aspect of health care, he said, and through the correction implementation of programs of self-care for minor illnesses.

In the fall semester of 1979, the program's self-care resource room in the Health Service received 160 visits, and its educational activities--dorm raps, class presentations and outreach seminars--attracted 472 participants.

The activation program was collected with education programs on sexuality, lifestyle and alcohol under the title of Student Wellness Resource Center in 1978.

The Wellness Center receives 83 of the student medical fee, which last received an increase in summer 1978. In 1966, the medical fee for a full-time student was $1.50 per quarter, and remained at that level until 1975. The services available for that fee included on-campus infirmary, ambulance and walk-in, after-hours emergency services based at the Health Service, which was run with about three-quarters of the present staff.

No off-campus services were provided by the fee. McVay said, "and there was an array of minimal charges tacked onto most on-campus services prior to the expansion in 1973."

"In the summer of that year," he said, "a phasing in began of a more total health program, which eliminated duplication of the emergency room and ambulance services with Carbondale Memorial Hospital."

In the fall of 1974, the out-of-the-area and death benefits, as well as specialty care, were added to the program, he said. This was at a time when state funding of the health program began to dwindle.

In keeping with these changes, the medical fee for a full-time student rose to $7 per quarter in winter of 1975, and to the $11.50 per quarter converted to $17 per semester. "Also in the semester system and the $11.50 per quarter converted to $17 per semester. "Also in 1974," McVay said, "part of the Student Welfare Recreation Fund fee, which was originally initiated to help pay for the by-then-completed Recreation Building, was reallocated to the medical fee."

"The student didn't pay any more money," he said, "but it just went to a different place."

In the fall of 1975, the fee was increased to $11.50 per quarter, and remained at this level until 1976. The fees for 1976 were increased to $11.50 per quarter, and remained at this level until 1977.

"McVay said that a Student Government committee studied the health program in 1978 and decided to drop the death benefit and add the Emergency Dental Program and a $1 fee for every emergency room visit. These changes accompanied the medical fee's increase to the present-day $45."

About 40 percent of visits to the Health Service are made by 10 percent of the student population, McVay said. Roughly, that means about 2,000 students are visiting Health Service 30,000 times a year.

"If someone comes to the Health Service nine times in the fall semester with a bad cold, we need to find and remedy the causes," McVay said, "because a student can't get an education if he's too sick to go to class."

"We're trying to help students stay healthy," he said, "but if they do get sick, we hope they won't hide it."

Ask a Peace Corps volunteer why he teaches business marketing techniques to vegetable farmers in Costa Rica. Ask a WISTA volunteer why she organizes the rural poor in Arkansas in set-up food co-op. Carter uses wood in White House

WASHINGTON (AP) - Jimmy Carter and his White House staff are burning more wood than ever this winter, as the president has made an effort to dramatize alternative energy sources. But they don't even approach the combustion record of Richard M. Nixon and his crew.

The General Servs. Admin. expects to supply about 10 cords of wood during the current heating season for use in stoves and fireplaces in the east-wing and west-wing White House offices occupied by Carter, wife Rosalyn and their aides.

That's double last year's consumption. But it's still a far cry from the 50 cords burned one winter by Nixon and his staff.

Chief usher Rex Scouten estimated this season's wood consumption in the White House living quarters at about four cords-about par for recent years.

The president is the chief personal wood burner in the family quarters, lighting fires regularly in a new stove set into an old fireplace in his second-floor study.

Otherwise, Scouten said.

Assistant agriculture dean earns administrator award

By Joan L. Baker

Student Writer

William J. Smolen, assistant dean for instruction in the SUU's School of Agriculture, has been named the first recipient of the university administration's annual recognition award, given to university administrators who "give time and invaluable service to students and faculty, and who exhibit personal qualities that are admired by their peers." Smolen said he was surprised by the announcement of his winning the award and he said he feels honored.

"It wasn't what I had expected," Smolen said. "I'll try to do better to the honor." As dean of instruction, Smolen said he sees his position as an important role in the supervision of student work and as a link to the students on campus through his work in academic advising.

"He has worked extensively with Career Planning and Placement with college graduates seeking employment, as well as working on a number of University committees," Swinburne said. "He has also done admirable work for Alpha Gamma Rho, the agriculture fraternity.

New TV station to air in Southern Illinois

MOUNT VERNON (AP) — A new television station could be on the air in Southern Illinois in a matter of weeks, a spokesman for the Federal Communications Commission has said.

FCC broadcast attorney Joseph Belisle said "things look much brighter for you people if you want a TV station. I don't think we're talking about two months, I mean, if the existing application is approved, it'll be up and running by the middle of next year." Belisle also said the FCC ruled late last year that the license should have been reviewed by the full commission, not just staff.

``The approval of SBBG was withdrawn last Friday, with company spokesmen noting that delays had been costly. At the time the FCC was still discussing whether it was prepared to make a decision on the application,'" Belisle said. "The matter was waiting for the FCC to make its decision and we'll keep them informed." Belisle also said that the FCC was still deciding whether it was qualified to operate the station.

The future of Channel 16 has been unclear since the PTC held up a grant to the Southern Illinois Broadcasting Corp. which sought to make the channel a satellite of KOLN-TV, Channel 30, in St. Louis. The PTC said, the station would not accept the grant unless it could be received by the FCC. The PTC also said, the station would not be allowed to operate without the FCC's approval.

A Salem-based citizens group has fought the FCC on the grounds they wanted an independent station in the area. The application of William Varecha, owner of Pyramid Broadcast Corp., was approved by the FCC in 1976.

Varecha said last Monday, "I'm the only applicant remaining now, and we are waiting for the FCC to act on our application." Varecha also said the station would eventually be converted to a commercial station, not just staff.

The approval of SBBG was withdrawn last Friday, with company spokesmen noting that delays had been costly. At the time the FCC was still discussing whether it was prepared to make a decision on the application. The FCC will be required to consider whether it was qualified to operate the station.

``The beauty of the whole operation is that we can poll the residents of the area, but this is in the Appalithan region, and it's not in the Illinois coal-field. We added that besides gas, we will be able to use other coal,'" Varecha said. "We are trying to do something that is not produced from coal.'"
Scott’s defense tries to show substantial nontaxable income

CHICAGO (AP) — The defense in Attorney General William J. Scott's tax-evasion trial attempted Wednesday to show that he received substantial amounts of money nontaxable sources.

In building its case Wednesday, Scott's attorneys presented three witnesses in federal court who testified he had given the attorney general hundreds of dollars with no strings attached.

In his closing statement, Herbert MarshaU, assistant attorney general under Scott, said he helped collect cash gifts from office employees on Christmas as well as Scott's birthdays between 1972 and 1975.

Herzog testified that Scott's employees raised roughly $1,900 each year from 1975 through 1975, including about $400 a year personally given. He said that when employees passed the hat for Scott at a 1972 Christmas party, about $300 was raised, $30 of which he shipped in himself. Herzog said he often helped count the contributions, and that they were placed in a bank vault before being turned over to Scott.

Herzog said he had no written records of these gifts. He also said that from 1972 until early 1976, when he was a first assistant to Scott, he often lunches with the attorney general and picked up the tab.

The state has contended that Scott often traveled with Scott on business and that he usually was reimbursed for his expenses. Scott added that he had received contributions other than state law. Scott also could request reimbursement but denied this.

Scott's defense attorney Sullivan advised the jury Tuesday that when he was a student of law in general, after all, he was my student, said Herzog.

In his one and only statement before the jury, Sullivan said that in the Gacy trial, he was a student of law in general, after all, he was my student.

In his final statement Wednesday, Sullivan said that in the Gacy trial, he was a student of law in general, after all, he was my student.

Final witness called

CHICAGO (AP) — The state called its final witness Wednesday before resting its case against John W. Gacy Jr., who is accused of committing more murders than anyone in this country's history.

In days of testimony, 90 witnesses have been called by the prosecution, which contends that the killings of 33 young men and boys were planned and premeditated.

Defense attorneys, however, maintain that Gacy was so motivated by an overwhelming and uncontrollable primitive drive and therefore is guilty by reason of insanity.

Recalled as the last witness Wednesday was Lawrence Fink of the Cook County sheriff's office, who explained on the confession of Gacy made Dec. 30, 1978, the day before his arrest.

Fink said Gacy told investigators that on six occasions he stored several bodies in his bed and that he was thinking of putting others in his attic because his crawl space had become filled.

Fink was fixing a respirator to 14th of July in the Des Plaines River, Fink said.

The remains of 28 men were dug up from the crawl space under Gacy's modest ranch-style house last winter. Another skeleton was discovered under part of an asphalt driveway, another garage tool shed and one more under flooring of a room addition.

Finder said that Gacy, 37, told interrogators that his killings were less frequent late in 1978 because he was working so hard and was too tired to go cruising in his car for young male prostitutes.

Gacy told investigators that his crawl space had become filled by March 1978 and that before he was arrested, he was planning to have the whole area covered with cement, the witness said.

“A man who was, a police officer, put 14 bodies in a crawl space last winter. One of them is mine. I know it,” Fink said.

The prosecution contends that Scott's birthday present for state in Gacy trial was a 1978 Pontiac Firebird, a model that Scott often drove for personal use. The prosecution also contends that Scott's nontaxable income was at least $100,000 for state in Gacy trial.

Scott's income was at least $100,000 for state in Gacy trial.

Good jogging shoe worth the money

Editor's note: If you have questions you'd like to see answered, please dress them up in your health. Send your questions to: Your Health, St. Louis Post-Dispatch Source Center, Kessel Hall.

Q. I've been jogging for about two months and it's time to replace my worn-out sneaker with some jogging shoes. Each time I look in the store, the two things I see are me and my feet. First, the price is so high; and second, every manufacturer has a different story about which shoe is best. What do you recommend? need?

A. I've had my sympathy regarding the price of jogging shoes. The cost of the good ones seems to be increasing faster than the number of people who are jogging. However, good shoes do make a difference. They are more comfortable, last longer, and reduce the chance of injuries. Some helpful hints on selecting jogging shoes may save some money. First, keep in mind there is no perfect running shoe. Your best bet is to compare shoes in stores that specialize in athletic equipment. Try on both shoes, since foot and shoe sizes vary. Check for ankle and arch support, heel cushioning, and tread patterns. Finally, beware of fancy colors and pay claims.

Q. Every place I look there seems to be some 'guaranteed' way to lose weight. Although I'm not really overweight, I have gained size 34. How can I tell which is the best diet? How must I know how can I lose the weight I've put on?

A. There does seem to be a ton of information about weight loss around these days. Some of it is accurate, but some of it is pure BS. Check the source of information to see if it comes from a reputable agency or person. Beware of any program that promises quick weight loss. Scale weight in gradual process, losing it requires time, effort and most important, self control. There's no magic formula. Here are some general tips to help you:

- Reduce and limit your between meal snacking. If you're starving, try some fruit or vegetables instead of reaching for something from the vending machines. As the saying goes, "A moment on the lips: a lifetime on the hips."
- Motivate yourself by making a list of benefits of losing weight and post it in your mirror. Support from your friends and family can be very helpful in helping you.
- Avoid alcohol, candy, cigarettes, cream dressing, fat, and pastries and fruit juice. Finally, begin a gradual exercise program that you'll do regularly. See you at the Rec Building and good luck!

features Korean art

CHICAGO (AP) — Some 35 intricate gold pieces, including crowns and girdles on display for the first time in the Western world and rare Koryo celadon porcelains highlight "5,000 Years of Korean Art," an important exhibition at the Art Institute of Chicago. The exhibition, which includes 264 objects in all, is sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities, as well as a host of cultural institutions and businesses. It was organized by Yve D'Arcy, director and chief curator of the Asian Art Museum and Susi Choi, director of the National Museum of Korea.

The show made its debut in this country at the Asian Art Museum in San Francisco before traveling to the Seattle Art Museum.

The judge noted that Graves was admitted to Stenard's hospital on Feb. 2, 1970, with swelling, shortness of breath and chest pains. He died the next morning of a pulmonary embolism, the judge said.

According to Foreman's ruling, the physician contracted handling the case "was clearly unable to make a simple diagnosis of the classic symptoms on the night of admission and that a person of appropriate skill would have sent this man to a full-service hospital."

The physician stated "a case like Graves' indicated that a high level of skill and judgement is required at Menard at the night-time hours."

The Graham's history of chronic asthma for which treatment was "revised and carried out, for the most part, by unlicensed, untrained, and supervised medical technicans and inmates."

Graham suffered attacks on June 14 and 15, 1970, and was given a drug when only a mechanical ventilator would have saved him, the order said. Instead, he was transferred to the segregation unit and died within hours.

WASHINGTON'S home sparks thoughts of first president

By Hugh A. Mulligan
AP Special Correspondent
MOUNT VERNON, Va. (AP) - Sitting in one of those big armchairs in George Washington's front porch and enjoying the view of the broad Potomac, the visitor is surrounded by the memories of the Father of Our Country was also the father of " Gone with the Wind" style architecture. George Washington, who retired here after the Revolution to serve two terms as president and toward the end, riding his horse and that a "piazza." Washington died in his bed of what his physician, James Craik, diagnosed as "inflammatory quinsy" on Dec. 14, 1799, after catching a chill from his daily horseback ride two days before in a snowstorm. A dedicated conservationist, Washington probably never cut down the cherry tree inflected in his own yard. He liked nothing better than to sit here looking at the river, although history does give him much chance. Most of the time he was away, fighting the British, pvi'siding over the Constitutional Convention, serving two terms as president in New York and Philadelphia, and, toward the end, riding his horse 15 miles to check with a trained surgeon's eye on the progress of the Trenton hospital, then called the Federal City, rising across the river. Still, this lovely manor, lovingly maintained by the Mount Vernon Ladies Association of the Union, better expresses the towering personality of our first president than the Washington Monument or the city named after him.

The house and grounds and the fruit trees he planted, the books in the library he rarely got around to reading, his grandfather's rag doll at the foot of the cradle, the unique "riding hat"—just a dining room chair on a flattened wagon-for rides in the countryside, all remind us that this was the home of a private citizen, neither a professional soldier nor a professional politician, who left it to go public whenever duty called. The man one of his officers, Gen. Henry "Light Horse Harry" Lee, summed up for all time as "first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen," had only one other ambition in life. George Washington, as he often told people, wanted more than anything else to be "the first farmer in the country." Washington died in his bed of what his physician, James Craik, diagnosed as "inflammatory quinsy" on Dec. 14, 1799, after catching a chill from his daily horseback ride two days before in a snowstorm. A dedicated conservationist, Washington probably never cut down the cherry tree inflected in

Firefighters turn down deal to break impasse

CHICAGO (AP) — Leaders of the striking firefighters' union rejected Wednesday a Circuit Court judge's proposal to end the week-long walkout if he would order Mayor Jane Byrne to resume contract talks.

In an interview, President of the Chicago Fire Fighters Union, told Judge John Hechinger that the executive board voted unanimously not to order members back to work. But union attorneys quickly presented a counter-proposal, saying the union leaders would order members back to their stations if Mrs. Byrne would agree to the terms of their proposal.

Those conditions were that the city should accept the proposal it would hire referendum judges to determine the general membership for a vote.

Attorneys for the city were instructed to carry the union offer to Mrs. Byrne and Hechinger then recessed the hearing until 5:30 p.m. telling both sides to report to his chambers one hour beforehand. The latest skirmish occurred as the judge again put off the city's request to enforce his back-to-work order. Also left unanswered was the question of whether the union's leaders would be held in contempt for failing to obey the order and for refusing to pay fines of $1,000 for each day of the strike.

HEW gives birth to new agency

WASHINGTON (AP) - One day this spring, the new U.S. Department of Education will burst forth fully grown, like Athena sprung from the head of Zeus. It will be armed with a $14 billion budget, about 130 programs and 17,000 employees, all gathered from a half-dozen other departments.

Labor pains are being felt at the agency's birth. Education and Welfare - the "Zeus" of this creation - which is now in charge, is panicking that one manager says is "taking off your top." Across the street at the old U.S. Office of Education, nucleus of the new department, bureaucrats are being batted about like shuttlecocks and nearly everyone is playing musical desks.

The labor also is going on at Buzard's Point in a remote bousing along the Potomac River, considered Washington's answer to Siberia.

There, consultants and in-house experts on more than a dozen task forces are scrambling to finish recommendations to Secretary of Education Shirley M. Hufstedler on how to organize her programs.

Congress provided for a 180-day transition before the new department can open its doors and fly its flag. The Army's Institute of TerraVex is working on designs of the massive logo, a symbol of an official seal, and the National Endowment for the Arts is hiking with ideas for a logo and other trappings to distinguish the 13th Cabinet office.

President Carter nominated the Secretary of Education this week as part of the U.S. Cabinet. The Senate confirmed her on Nov. 30 and she was sworn in Dec. 6.

K-Day - 100 days from the swearing-in - is June 3, but Mrs. Hufstedler says she is aiming for a start-up in April or early May.

Insiders say the pace of the transition has picked up after a slow, almost limping start.

"Transitions by the nature of transition are not neat. Everything doesn't fall into place magically," said Pat Gutowly, a top official on the Office of Management and Budget. He helped draft the Education Department bill and shepherds it through Congress.

Several key figures in the transition also helped create the Department of Energy in 1977, including C. William Fischer, who will be Education's assistant secretary for policy and budget.

The Energy experience was a sobering one for federal reorganization specialists. Energy was patched together from a hodgepodge of disparate agencies, and its rules and gas allocation formulas have been controversial.

"It weighs very heavily on us," said Howard Messer, OMB's assistant director for management improvement. Two other projects Messer had hand in the Environmental Protection Agency and the Congressional Budget Office - enjoy good bureaucratic reputations.

Power outage causes casinos money problems

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Slot machines went berserk and spit out dozens of dollars this morning when the glittering lights of this 24-hour-a-day gambling town went out for three hours.

An electrical short that halted power to almost all of northern Nevada early Monday caused the slot machines at the Hyatt Lake Tahoe Resort Hotel and Casino to dump money and pull the reels even if there was power, according to a police radio report.

But a pit boss at the casino denied the report. He said some machines "dropped some extra dollars" when the lights went out, but the casino was not evacuated.

When the ringing bells and glittering lights of the slot machines stopped at about 4 a.m., most of the large gambling palaces switched quickly to emergency generators.

But at the Sahara Reno, where the slots weren't on the emergency generator, security officials said most of the people standing before machines waited patiently for the power to return.

And at the Comstock Hotel Casino across the street, slot manager Dennis Overbay said his operation was without power for two hours.

Gym coach rejuvenates recruiting efforts

By Ed Dougherty

"I'm going to recruit more kids than have been in the Freshmen class," Madison Coach Bill Meade joked. This is typical of the rejuvenated attitude Meade has toward recruiting for next year. He points out that he has realized that he wasn't putting enough effort into recruiting.

Meade said he got into the recruiting year I thought I'd have to change. It's not that the freshmen we have aren't good enough, but there weren't enough of them. I'm getting good vibes from kids in Worthington, Ohio. He is a 20-plus all arounder who is in a junior Olympic program that helps train gymnasts.

Another prospective gymnast Meade has is from New Mexico. He is a friend of the gymnast from Ohio, and Meade said they would mind competing on the same team.

Freshman Nance shoots for Saluki cage records

New Mexico State Monday, Nance pulled down six rebounds and two assists. He also made one of them on his favorite shot—the slam dunk.

"I'm still not dunking," Nance said. "I like the idea of driving past another player and dunking on him, and looking at the little bit of disgrace in his eyes.

"Besides," he added, "it's a pretty sure shot. Not many dunk tries fall out.

In high school, Nance dunked more than 60 times in less than two seasons. But he has never been an athlete from third grade on. "I've never really enjoyed basketball," he said.

Eric Heiden wins third gold medal

By The Associated Press

Skating with pure power and awesome ability, Eric Heiden has emerged as the unquestioned individual star of the 1980 Winter Olympics, an ice and snow festival that is becoming a modern showcase of brilliance for the 21-year-old from Madison, Wis.

Heiden claimed his third gold medal in as many races and stayed on target for an unprecedented sweep. He felt after his third speed skating sweep, shattering another Olympic mark in winning the 1,500-meter test Tuesday.

And while Heiden dominates headlines as few athletes ever have, these Olympics also are developing as the Get Even Games—one more chance for champions to claim the gold medals that have eluded them until now.

It was also super skier Ingemar Stenmark's turn for vindication Tuesday, and the Swedish star came through, capturing the men's giant slalom with a stunning run down Whiteface Mountain that propelled him from third place to gold medal. He is now waiting four years to claim.

Late-blooming tanker Samples gains more than just victories

By Dave Kane

Most standout college athletes are standouts in high school as well. They’re quickly snatched up by the most prestigious college recruiters and proceed to live up to expectations on the field. In the arena, or sometimes in the pool. Saluki swimmer Bob Samples has been a mainstay freshman for Coach Bob Steeie for the past four years. In his final season, "Samps" has the nation’s top time in the 50 freestyle (19.3 seconds), and has qualified for the NCAA championships in the 50 free and 100 free.

But Samples wasn’t always at the top of the heap. If there was a book of "Swim’s Fairy Tales," he could take the part of the ugly duckling who rapidly turned into a swan.

As a freshman, my high school (Thor…Last Fractional South in Lansing) was nowhere," Samples said. "And my times looked like nothing."

Samples was considering track as the way to go. At Fractional South, he was a shot-putter and discus man and ran the 400. Arriving at SIU, he intended to swim for the Salukis in the winter and join Lew Hartung’s track team in the spring. But once the duck took to water, he never got out again.

"I really surprised everyone my freshman year," Samples said. "I made NCAA times and pretty much shocked everybody. I just came on faster than expected."

So track took a back seat to swimming and was finally ruled out last spring when Samples intended to become a decathlete for Hartung but tore a leg muscle. Now he’s a Saluki co-captain, along with diver Gary Masty. In his senior year, he looks back on four years of winning not only races but valued acquaintances as well.

"Being elected as co-captain really was something for me," Samples said. "But I think the friends I’ve made are even more important. Pat Looby who is sitting out this season to work toward the Olympics, and I write a lot just to see how each other is doing."

"I really think the best part of it is the friendships," he continued. "It’s once-in-a-lifetime experience. You can never be as close as you can be with these 20 other guys on the team. And as captain, you receive your friend’s respect, so that’s pretty rewarding, too."

Being a sprinter, Samples spends a very short time in the water during meets, but his competitive spirit remains through a philosophy acquired from another close friend—former Saluki Greg Porter. Porter has adhered to a Christian philosophy which includes a determined faith. According to Samples, the faith has rubbed off not only on him but also other team members.

Wrestlers face Mizzou in regular-season finale

By Dave Kane
Staff Writer

The Saluki wrestlers, 4-9 this season, will face the unenviable task of traveling to Columbia Mo., Thursday night to battle 13th-ranked Missouri. The Tigers are 12-3 in dual meets and are dominated by something Saluki Coach Lynn Long should be acquainted with—"lack of talent."

"I’m satisfied with our progress," Tiger Coach Bob Kopkonky said. "We’ve a young team with a lot of freshmen and sophomores. We’re not too bad and we have some pretty good kids."

"Pretty good" is right. The Tigers look solid in almost every weight class while SIU will be looking to its lower weights for most of its support. Missouri’s Chris Whelan holds a 34-1 mark at 126 pounds, while Wes Roper at 150 lb. is 27-4. Brad Moorely, 190 pounds, is 18-4.

Coming off a tough three-day road trip, SIU definitely will be without legal underdog at Columbia. The two teams saw each other only once earlier in the season at the St. Louis Open. Kopkonky was impressed with SIU.

The meet at Missouri will close out SIU’s regular season. Long is looking forward to the NCAA regionals in Las Vegas Feb. 29-Mar. 1 as a chance to see several of his wrestlers advance to the NCAA championships in Corvallis, Ore., Mar. 15-17.

Dempsey signs 20 letters of intent
By Scott Stahmer
Sports Editor
Twenty senior high school football players have been signed to national letters of intent to attend SIU, Saluki football head Coach Roy Dempsey announced Wednesday.

Those who signed are: Greg Anderson, 6-3, 200-pound defensive end from Youngstown, Ohio. Rich Blackman, 6-3, 220-pound fullback from Chicago; Gary Carter, 6-1, 218-pound defensive end from East Alton; Bob Cayson, 5-9, 165-pound running back from Warren, Ohio; and Javell Higgins, 5-10, 160-pound wide receiver from St. Louis. Also, Darrell Jones, 5-10, 170-pound wide receiver from St. Louis; Louis Lockett, 6-1, 220-pound defensive tackle from East St. Louis; Tom Nash, 6-4, 240-pound offensive tackle from Chicago; Alton Thomas, 5-10, 170-pound defensive back from East St. Louis; Bruce Turner, 6-4, 260-pound offensive tackle from Chicago; and Curtis Walls, 6-1, 188-pound backfield from St. Louis.

Also, Richard Williams, 6-2, 195-pound quarterback from Champaign, Ill.; Andy Wilson, 6-5, 215-pound offensive tackle from Chicago; Tony Adams, 6-4, 175-pound wide end from Elgin; Fabray Collins, 6-1, 195-pound linebacker from Chicago, and Derrick Taylor, 5-10, 130-pound running back from Chicago.

Six of Dempsey's signees are defensive linemen, four of those being tackles. The coach, who is in his first year as Saluki head coach, signed four running backs, two wide receivers, four defensive linemen, offensive tackles and three linebackers.

Dempsey did his heaviest recruiting work in the secondary, as nine players signed are from there. Five signees are from the Chicago area, and four are from St. Louis.

Earlier, Dempsey signed four letter of intent recipients. They are Roger Gill, 6-7, 230-pound offensive tackle from Carbondale; John等等...
