City primary

Railroad, convention center major issues of candidates

By JoDe Rimar and Catherine Edman
Staff Writers

Carbondale residents will reduce the five-way mayoral race to a dual confrontation Tuesday when they vote in the primary election to select a potential replacement for Carbondale Mayor Helen Westberg, who is retiring in April.

The five candidates for the job include a Carbondale businessman, two SIU-C students, a veteran council member and a community activist.

The victors in the primary will face off in the general election April 7.

Two common issues of the race include the city's plan for a downtown hotel-convention center and railroad relocation project.

Earl Czajkowski, 32, 514 S. Beveridge St., Apt. 1, a blind SIU-C student in business who has lived in Carbondale for 10 years, says along with implementing mass transit, the city should provide more programs for physically and mentally disabled persons.

Czajkowski is for the convention center and against railroad relocation, saying the money could be spent to provide programs.

Daniel G. De Fosse, 40, 156-2 Evergreen Terrace, is an SIU-C student in education. He has been politically active at SIU-C as an Undergraduate Student Organization representative and by helping to form the nontraditional student union.

One of the problems De Fosse sees in the city is the lack of leadership in the position of mayor. De Fosse says the mayor has "advocated the role of leadership to the city manager," who is appointed.

"The city manager does a good job, but because he is a bureaucrat, he doesn't respond (to the people)," De Fosse said.

De Fosse, who has accused the city of "selective enforcement" of R-1 zoning, says the present zoning system is unfair to blacks and students and believes the zoning ordinances should be changed.

Primary to narrow council field from 8 to 4

By JoDe Rimar and Catherine Edman

Eight candidates for Carbondale City Council will square off in the primary election Tuesday.

The candidates include Carbondale business owners and managers, city officials, University students and alumni. Two council positions are up for election and the primary will narrow the field of candidates to two candidates for each opening.

the council in 1985, was involved with the Undergraduate Student Organization at SIU-C.

Construction of a four-lane highway to St. Louis would help improve the Carbondale business industry, he said. He also would like to see economic development to secure permanent jobs for city residents. However, Madlener

North's secretary admits paper shredding

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lt. Col. Oliver North's secretary told investigators she and her boss shredded documents in his White House basement office just hours before the first search of his files for Iran-Contra evidence, sources said Sunday.

The disclosure, with concurrent reports that White House aides concocted a "chronology" of the Iran arms policy designed to shield President Reagan, has spurred independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh to consider seeking obstruction of justice charges against some administration officials, the sources familiar with the inquiry said.

Walsh has granted immunity from prosecution to Fawn Hall, North's personal secretary when he was a member of the National Security Council staff, and she recounted for investigators how on Nov. 21 they destroyed enough documents relating to the Iranian transactions to fill a file drawer, the sources said.

Later that day, Justice Department officials conducting a preliminary inquiry of covert U.S. arms sales to Iran went to North's office to begin reviewing his files at the direction of Attorney General Edwin Meese.

Four days later, Meese publicly revealed the scheme

Syrian troops enter Beirut to end 3 years of fighting

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — A 7,000-man Syrian peacekeeping force rumbled down from the mountains Sunday and punched into Moslem west Beirut in a first step toward ending three years of bloody chaos in the militia-ruled capital. Thousands of cheering Lebanese men, women and children lined the coast highway as the troops, perched on Soviet-made tanks and armored personnel carriers flying the red, white and black Syrian flag, slowly made their way to the edge of the embattled city.

Ordaining females divides Church of England

LONDON (UPI) — A Cabinet minister who is on the Church of England's governing body warned Sunday he will leave the church if it allows women to be ordained as priests — an issue that eventually could split the mother church of the worldwide Anglican movement. "I and my family view this (the ordination of women) with very great sadness because we would be driven out of the church," Agriculture Minister John Gummer said on British Broadcasting Corp. television.

Scientist says Soviets to test nukes in 2 days

MOSCOW (UPI) — An American scientist near the Soviet nuclear test site said Sunday that Moscow will break its 18-month-old nuclear test moratorium with an underground explosion in the next two days. John Berger, a seismologist from the University of California at Los Angeles, said Soviet officials ordered his research team to turn off test monitoring equipment in preparation for an underground nuclear explosion. "It will be tomorrow or the next day — we have a pool going," Berger said by telephone from Karkaralinsk.

Expert says FBI report done in shoddy way

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — An expert in international terrorism says an FBI report linking eight Arabs to an organization described as one of the "most ruthless" terrorist groups was prepared in a shoddy manner from secondary sources, it was reported today. The 45-page FBI report was cited by the FBI in unsuccessful deportation hearings against the eight Arabs. The report, obtained by the Los Angeles Times, apparently first was used last April when the Immigration and Naturalization Service successfully kept a Palestinian, Suleiman Shehadeh, from returning to his home in Long Beach, Calif.

ABM treaty used to limit arms concessions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan has used a new interpretation of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty to further limit U.S. concessions at the Geneva arms talks, administration officials said Sunday. Officials said Reagan has barred U.S. negotiators from considering any proposal that would prevent the United States from adhering to a more permissive interpretation of the pact, offered as legal justification for future progress of his "Star Wars" missile-defense program.

Sources expect Reagan to leave administration

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan "wasn't going to force someone out" but he will not try to hold on to White House chief of staff Donald Regan, and several people are being sounded out for the job, sources said Sunday. The sources said Regan went into a "blue funk" after the president told reporters: "I have always said that when the people that I've asked to come into government feel that they have to return to private life, that's their business and I will never try to talk them out of it."

Built-in flaws to test shuttle booster O-rings

BRIGHAM CITY, Utah (UPI) — The company that built the malfunctioning O-ring seals that caused the Challenger space shuttle disaster will hold the fourth in a series of tests Monday it hopes will prove the strength of a new generation of seals. Today's test will differ from previous tests because this time engineers from Morton Thiokol's Wasatch Operations will use a deliberately flawed joint of a booster rocket motor in a joint environment simulator.

Civil rights may be lost to prevent AIDS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Some civil rights may have to be sacrificed to combat AIDS because the disease "could well become one of the worst health problems in the history of the world," Health Secretary Otis Bowen suggested Sunday. Bowen said acquired immune deficiency syndrome is spreading incredibly fast, partly because of its long incubation period, which leads people to unwittingly pass the disease through sexual contact or shared drug needles.

Allowing Route 13 to bypass Carbondale would be the "worst thing that could happen" to Carbondale, De Fosse says. He says the plan would "kill" the businesses between Marion and Murphysboro.

Neil Dillard, 58, 500 S. Oakland Ave., has been on the City Council since 1981. Dillard is the assistant director of SIU-C's Economic Development Department and has held various positions at SIU-C in the past 25 years.

Dillard favors the city's downtown hotel-convention center, but believes the project should be reconsidered if the developer, Crystal Development Inc., of Boulder Colo., doesn't pull through.

Norvell N. Haynes, 57, 1215 N. Wall St., is an advocate of the ward-alderman system of government. Haynes, who filed a petition with the city demanding that the issue be added to the ballot as a referendum, says the City Council does not adequately represent the population of the community.

Haynes says he also would like to see SIU-C students stay in the community longer and says he will work to bring jobs to the city to encourage them to do so.

Mark Robinson, 27, 212 S. University Ave., is a 1982 advertising graduate from SIU-C. Robinson, who owns the Bike Surgeon, strongly opposes both the hotel-convention center project and the railroad relocation project or "big ditch." For Robinson, the convention center is an example that the city has lost touch with the people while the railroad relocation is a "horrible waste of money."

says that downtown development of existing businesses is more important than new construction, particularly the convention center, which he does not support.

KYLE ENGLERT, 22, 500 Skyline, graduated from SIU-C in 1986 with a degree in political science.

He would like to see the convention center built, but closer to University Mall, and only if the current developer stays with the project.

The railroad relocation project, receives no support from Englert, who calls it a "big waste of money."

Englert says the city should encourage people to do "more than just go to the bars," and think's working toward bringing in more recreational activities, such as an amusement park, or, since Chicago doesn't want it, the World's Fair.

RICHARD MORRIS, 45, 604 Skyline, is manager of the Illinois Department of Employment Services in Carbondale, or "Job Service," where he says he has become an expert in labor relations, administrative functions and budgeting. Morris has worked there since 1972.

Although he is against city investment in the convention center, he favors the program if it can be built with private funding. If the current developer doesn't come through, the city should examine other options, Morris said.

Working with SIU-C should be encouraged and Morris would like to see the city involved with the region, not limited to the community. Carbondale residents "know what's best" about a ward-alderman system, he says, and hopes because of Illinois Supreme Court rulings, Carbondale takes a "long hard look at the present system" of at-large elections. Some city government candidates contend that the current system discriminates against certain city groups.

JOHN GRIGAS, 22, 910 E. Park, No. 11, is an SIU-C student who has lived in Carbondale for two-and one-half years.

He sees the biggest issue concerning Carbondale as the loss of federal revenue sharing programs, and suggests the city find a solution by taxing alcohol. "It's been successful for other communities," Grigas said.

Grigas says he knows an alcohol tax is not popular, but the city is like a child, "decisions like these might be unpopular now, but will be better... in the long run."

He describes himself as more of an administrator than a politician, and "whether I win or not I'll still be here in two years."

VINCENT KELLY, 28, 505 S. Forest, graduated from SIU-C in 1984 with a degree in Mathematics and is a self-employed math tutor.

If elected to the council, his plans include supporting the highway to St. Louis and a bypass that would encourage using the bicentennial industrial park on Rte. 51.

The convention center is "a lot of water under the bridge," in Kelly's opinion and he favors it only if it doesn't cost the city more money. He agrees with other candidates that the city should drop the project if the current developer backs out.

He would like to see the city encourage code enforcement of landlords by raising landlord taxes, but forgiving landlords that keep up with city codes.

HARRIS RUBIN, 54, 1212 W. College, has a cautious wait-and-see attitude about the convention center. He does not support the railroad relocation because, he says, it is no longer necessary and will cause far more disruptions in its completion than it is worth.

While he favors the bypass north of the city he does not give his support to the east-west couple.

Maintaining city neighborhoods is important, he says, and is something the project would not do.

Rubin, a professor at the SIU School of Medicine and Rehabilitation Institute served as chairman for the city's human relations commission in 1969 and 1970.

CHRISTINE WRIGHT, 33, 1195 E. Walnut, has been a Carbondale resident since 1980 and serves on the Citizens Advisory Committee and the Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors.

She believes that economic development is the key to improving the quality of life for Carbondale residents. The city needs to attract a variety of big businesses, she said, that pay better wages and offer career opportunities—not just jobs.

Tax increases aren't in the political picture she paints, but increasing the tax base is. She would like to see business in Carbondale increase by 10 to 15 percent in the next 10 to 15 years.

The convention center idea should be pursued only if the city sticks with the current developer, she said, because "so much money has been pumped into the project already." Wright supports the Illinois 13 bypass because it will help maintain roads and eliminate traffic congestion in town. Carbondale still would get the business of travelers, she said, that other candidates argue would be cut down.

JOHN MILLS, 36, 608 N. Oakland, has been involved in city government for a decade. He has spent 10 years on the Liquor Advisory Board, five of those as chairman.

A convention center in Carbondale receives his full support for several reasons. Working at the Student Center scheduling events, he said he saw how many groups of people were turned away for lack of facilities. There would be many more people coming into the city with a convention center, he said, and business around the convention center would greatly improve.

Mills added that if the city turned the offer for investment this time, other investors will be less likely to invest in the future.

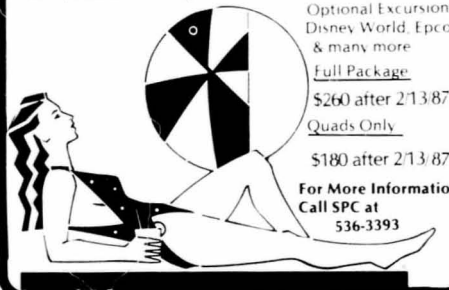

He doesn't see the railroad relocation project as an issue because the city is either going to get the money from the government or it isn't.

Some candidates support the idea of a ward-alderman system, but Mills says they are pressing the issue for the wrong reasons.

Dear Mr. Meister,

On behalf of the SIUC Committee on Health and Safety, IEA-NEA, I write to request information concerning the presence of asbestos on campus. Specifically, I request the following information.

1. A complete list of all buildings on campus in which asbestos in any form has been discovered; also, a complete description of where in these buildings the asbestos is located.
2. Data concerning the length of time that asbestos has been in the buildings.
3. The result of all studies, surveys, and tests concerning asbestos in campus buildings which have been conducted either by the University or by an outside consultant.

Because of the great concern which many employees have expressed over the potentially grave impact of asbestos on their health, I respectfully request that you provide the SIUC Committee on Health and Safety, IEA-NEA, with this information by Tuesday, February 24.

Sincerely yours,

Teflon keeps clean despite Iran snafu

THE IRAN ARMS scandal, like an ill-tempered in-law, has darkened the six-year honeymoon of the Reagan administration. Media critics and Democrats alike seem gleefully convinced that President Reagan's "teflon coating," which stayed clean through a recession, a deficit and dozens of staff embarrassments, has finally begun to peel.

But even as the credibility of the Reagan administration sinks, Reagan's popularity remains buoyant despite popular belief that the president is not helping to uncover all the facts about the case. Instead, Reagan's teflon coating is not only in fair shape, but acquired a new coat since the scandal broke in November of last year.

THE SHIELD that kept Reagan free of most of the early Iran debates was his prostate surgery. While North and Poindexter took the Fifth and possible secretary of state and chief of staff resignations loomed through the haze, the president did not directly address the affair until his Jan. 27 State of the Union address.

Testimonies from Poindexter and White House chief of staff Donald Regan agree that Reagan was aware of the arms deal long before his admission that the deal existed in November of 1986. A memorandum signed by Reagan in late 1985 indicates that Reagan had been alerted of efforts to ship arms to "moderate elements" in Tehran. In other words, Reagan approved an illegal activity and lied about it to both Congress and the American public until the cat was irrevocably out of the bag.

But both the media and top White House aides speak of Reagan's "recollecting" details of the affair, as if these details were answers to an obscure trivia question. Criticism of Reagan, particularly after his State of the Union address, focused on his health and memory lapses, rather than on his role in the Iran affair. As an example, a February 2, 1987, National Weekly Edition of The Washington Post contained four articles about the administration's involvement with Iran but only one article about Reagan, and this was about the "memory problems" of a man 76 years old.

SO WHILE REGAN, Meese, North and Poindexter struggle in the Iran mire, reeking of infamy, Reagan seems like an absent-minded innocent. While the new image of Reagan as a forgetful old man is not as flattering as the robust, wood-chopping president of yesterday, it resists being brushed with a full coat of Iranian muck.

And while the Gallup Poll reports that only 20 percent of the American public is watching the Iran story, Reagan's new domestic programs are playing well. His anti-drug campaign made a big enough splash on both lawmakers and the media to qualify as a success. His catastrophic-illness insurance plan, and another proposed plan to aid displaced workers, indicate a new "New Deal" direction that moves him closer to the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Reagan's release of his personal notes to Congress is the first real sign that he intends to "get to the bottom" of the Iran scandal. But if the notes reveal nothing (and Reagan does not want to incriminate himself), their release will only add to the armor protecting Reagan from Iran.

Healthy babies, not dollars, the real bottom line in midwifery debate

After reading the Feb. 13 editorial regarding the local midwifery issue, one question remained: Why did the DE not address a most crucial point? Were they not aware that a full-term baby boy died while in the care of our local lay-midwife, during an unsuccessful home birth? As an obstetric nurse for almost eight years at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale (and also having a stillborn son), I deeply felt the loss of this baby boy. It is because of my education and experience that giving birth in a safe, well-staffed, well-equipped institution is in the best interests of mother and baby. While cheerful rooms most certainly will never take the place of home, knowing that I am providing the best possible care for my child is comfort enough.

What all home-birth advocates do not seem to realize is that those of us who are trained in obstetrics, and work in a hospital setting, understand the point they are trying to make. Doctors and nurses work together with the expectant family to offer the best possible birth experience. We prefer to offer methods that provide the least amount of intervention, allowing Mother Nature to take her course within certain perimeters of safety. Yes, there is some intervention, but there are uncountable times when intervention has saved either mother or baby's life. This does not include the many instances when using even extremely sophisticated monitoring equipment, during a seemingly uncomplicated pregnancy and labor, that life-threatening problems do not occur until the time of birth. In these cases had the infants been born at home, they would have died for lack of immediate medical attention! Contrary to what the DE said, the "bottom line" is not cost—the bottom line is healthy babies and healthy moms. Most parents do not wish to settle for anything less than perfect.

As to the legal issue of midwifery, there are numerous schools of midwifery throughout the country, all providing excellent education and training for registered nurses who wish to become certified nurse-midwives. They practice within the framework of existing rules and regulations. However, the local midwife is a "lay" midwife, meaning she has no formal education in medicine, let alone special training in obstetrics. The current efforts to prohibit her from delivering babies centers around the fact that she is untrained and therefore unqualified to practice obstetrics. Assuming that someone such as this is able to provide adequate care or mother and baby borders on foolhardiness. Would parents ever be able to forgive themselves if something unfortunate happened as a result of their choice between an unskilled home delivery and a safe delivery attended by well-trained, friendly and caring people at a hospital or birthing center?—Elenie L. Smith, Carbondale.

An unneeded control

I wholeheartedly agree with position stated in the Feb. 19 DE editorial concerning public smoking. I know that smoke floating into my face while I am in elevators or restaurants is an annoyance for me. For this reason, I think it is essential that the public smoking bills be passed immediately. Also, have you ever noticed in restaurants how some people slurp their drinks really loud and make other obnoxious noises while they eat? Can't there be legislation passed about offensive public noises? If these people were subject to arrest they would think twice before being so crude.

What about elevators? I get really uncomfortable when packed into an elevator with a crowd of people I don't know. Can't there be a law stating how close someone can stand next to me without my permission?

My point is that we the public are asking the government to make too many simple decisions on how we are to live our lives. There is no reason for choices such as English proficiency, seat-belt laws, public smoking and the like to be placed in government hands. These are decisions that can be made by institutions and individuals.

If you don't like cigarette smoke in a restaurant, tell the manager. For example, rather than calling the police and my congressman when I am annoyed by people making disgusting noises in a restaurant, I tell them to be quiet.—Todd Gardner, journalism

Radon is a serious health threat at SIU-C and throughout S. Illinois

Recent national attention has been given to radon in the indoor environment because exposure to this gas is the principal source of radiation encountered by the general public. Estimates of the number of radon-associated lung cancers in the United States range from 10,000 to 20,000 per year. The Environmental Protection Agency is increasing its efforts in surveying radon concentrations in houses. A recent survey of radon in houses in Alexander, Pulaski, Union, Johnson, Massac, Pope and Hardin counties revealed that there is a one-in-four chance that a home could have an elevated level of radon gas.

Radon can enter homes from the soil and rocks beneath them. The amount that enters is mostly determined by geographical variations but other variables can affect the detectable concentrations (wind and ventilation, construction material, source of water). The EPA recommended level is 4 pCi/l of air and estimated that 12 percent of the nation's homes exceed that level.

The first report associating lung cancer with work in underground mines was made in 1913 and recognition of the relationship of this cancer to radioactivity in the mines was achieved in 1921. In the case of radon, at least four studies have had sufficient epidemiological follow-up to permit assessment of dose-response relationships and quantitative expression of risk: Swedish iron miners, U.S. uranium miners, Newfoundland fluorspar miners and Czechoslovakian uranium miners. In addition to these four groups, a lung cancer excess has been reported in other underground miners exposed to radon and radon daughters: British iron miners; Ontario uranium miners; and Swedish zinc miners. Oat cell cancer is the principal type associated with radon. Although an increased risk of bronchial cancer is now well documented in metal and fluorspar miners who have worked underground, little or no increase in lung cancer has been found among underground workers in coal mines having low levels of radon. Radon and its radioactive decay products are measured together in home surveys.

Coal is particularly interesting as a source of radon because of the enormous tonnage used annually. Fly ash from Midwestern bituminous coal has 4.3 to 7.8 pCi-g radon while that of eastern and western bituminous coal fly ash contains 3.7-12.9 pCi-g. The hazards from inhalation of such particles have not been studied.

The DE article on smokestack emissions stated that Illinois EPA data showed that our SIU-C smokestack has released an average of 859 tons of ash particles from its coal-burning boilers per year. EPA regulations limit ash and soot emissions to no more than 110 particles per year. Our power plant smokestack may some day meet the EPA standards. Isn't that nice? We will be able to reduce the radon released by SIU-C from 1,000,000,000 pCi per day to 120,000 pCi per day. A rate of 80 pCi-l in houses would equal four work-level months, the level set for adult male underground miners.

I think if I lived in the dorms near the SIU-C power plant smokestacks, I would call the Southern Seven Health Department and ask to have some radon monitoring service. Better yet, why not call "Doc" Dougherty, vice president for campus services, and have him arrange monitoring service for the entire campus. It might be wise for other students living in Carbondale to do likewise.—Aristotel Pappelis, botany.

Be thankful, you highly inebriated carrots, Carbondale is a great place to live

The other day I was contemplating how fortunate we are to live here in Carbondale, I mean really.

Aren't we provincials lucky to have someone like Michael Brant enlighten us as to the many inherent flaws of the movie "Platoon." When the entire universe sees it as the movie of the decade, a movie with—among other things—superb character development, we have Michael Brant to rescue us from this frightening delusion. Gee, thanks Mike. Long may your fatuous phosphorescence flame.

How can we possibly muster the audacity to complain about life in a town inundated with so many outrageous breathing-optional bars? Where else can you be doused with eau de R.J. Reynolds, meet strange and heretofore unknown creatures, and get cancer all in one night? Ah, come on now—where else? (By the way, is a $2 cover charge in Carbondale unscrupulous exploitation or am I just spoiled?)

Last Friday I was at the America Tap. This in itself would not merit notice had I not experienced a most fortuitous revelation. I realized, in one serendipitous moment, the reason why only 37 percent of the population of Carbondale. It is, of course, because the remaining 62.9 percent of the population is composed of males who are either striving to attain "Belcher of the Year" honors, or aspiring to deliver puerile, quasi-, semi-, para-seductive lines that would work only on a highly inebriated carrot.

Jeez, so many things in Carbondale to be thankful for—I can't wait until Spring Break.—Scott Parker, graduate student, clinical psychology.

Pop artist Warhol dies

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pop artist and fashion icon Andy Warhol died Sunday at New York University Hospital. He was 59.

Warhol was pronounced dead at 6:30 a.m. after suffering cardiac arrest about an hour earlier, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Private nurses on duty alerted doctors of the change in his condition about 5:30 a.m., but their efforts to revive him failed, the spokeswoman said.

Warhol had undergone gallbladder surgery at the hospital Saturday and was in stable condition following the operation, she said.

Born Andrew Warhola, one of three sons of Czechoslovakian immigrants living in Pittsburgh, Warhol worked as a fashion illustrator until his success with a Campbell soup can caused him to turn to pop art.

He also produced and filmed off-beat movies, including an eight-hour show based on a man asleep in bed.

One of his superstars, a woman named Valerie Solanos, almost ended his career when she shot Warhol at his office.

Skaggs brings the country home to appreciative fans

By Ellen Cook
Entertainment Editor

Ricky Skaggs claims that he's "just a country boy," but during his concert in the SIU Arena Saturday night, he showed audience members that he's a country boy who has a love for his fans and a talent for playing a variety of musical styles.

Concert Review

"We want to get everybody smiling," Skaggs told audience members, who responded with cheers and applause. Such warm reactions were common during the performance because audience members could feel that Skaggs was sincere in his attempts to please them.

Toward the beginning of the show, Skaggs asked security personnel to allow photographers, as long as his fans didn't "camp out in front of the stage." The request brought several amateur photographers.

It may have been hard for the photographers to catch Skaggs on film, however, because he kept moving across the stage as he played songs that ranged from old country classics to new crossover hits.

Skaggs played several 50s songs, including a rock 'n' roll song by the Everly Brothers and the country song, "I've Got an Angel on My Mind, That's Why I'm Walking," which was recorded by Perry Como. Skaggs said if the audience liked his renditions of the songs, he would include them on his new album.

The audience responded to the songs with almost as much enthusiasm as they did to Skaggs' own hits, which included "Country Boy" and "I'm Cryin' My Heart Out Over You."

All of Skaggs' selections featured good lyrics—even if some of them were overly sentimental—and he proved to be an excellent vocalist. But Skaggs sounded best when simply playing his guitar and fiddle. After Skaggs announced it was "bluegrass time," the audience was treated to two songs that featured Skaggs and his bandmates at their best.

And because of a special stage set up, it appeared that Skaggs was performing at the Opry. Skaggs was so close to the front-row audience members that he could have reached over and touched any one of them if he chose. But Skaggs' rapport with the audience was so good that he didn't seem like a celebrity after a while.

and the Carolinas.

A storm system over the Gulf Coast region spewed rain Sunday from Texas eastward, while a cold front around the Great Lakes brought light snow to the upper Midwest.

A band of thunderstorms in the South spread rain in the morning from Oklahoma and eastern Texas across the lower Mississippi and Tennessee valleys to Georgia, Florida

A tornado watch was posted for portions of the Florida panhandle.

Nearly an inch of rain fell in New Orleans, Meridian, Miss., picked up .38 of an inch and Biloxi, Miss., .72 inches.

The storm overnight produced marble-size hail at Huntsville in eastern Texas. Hail nearly an inch in diameter pelted areas near Jonesboro, La., and west of Monroe, La.

Council expected to replace social service group funds

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

In an effort to stabilize funding for social service organizations, the City Council tonight is expected to approve a funding method based on a cost index used to track changes in municipalities' operating costs.

The municipal cost index is a reference number cities can use to determine costs for services. The city will compute an annual percentage change in the MCI and increase or decrease funding for social service organizations by the same percentage.

But the city will establish a maximum increase of 5 percent and a maximum decrease of 2 percent.

Nearly $20,000 in federal revenue sharing funds had been granted to social service organizations before the federal government eliminated those funds in 1986. The city will replace those funds with money from its contingency fund.

The Youth Service Program of Jackson County is the only organization that has responded to the city's announcement that it may use this plan. According to a letter from the youth service to Don Monty, director of community development: "The plan is a good one and should be adopted by the City Council."

But the youth service did express concern about the number of programs being funded.

"It would be appropriate to set a limit on the agencies able to apply for those dollars. If the city were to consider applications from other agencies without the infusion of more money into the system, it would destabilize the system once again," the letter states.

The Attucks Community Board, another community organization, has asked the city for a rent waiver and the youth service program has requested $935 toward rent.

to divert profits from the arms deals to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels—and North was fired for his role in the operation.

Hall's attorney, Plato Cacheris, confirmed to United Press International that his client "does have immunity" and cooperated with investigators. He refused further comment on the report first published Sunday in The Washington Post.

Hall had been dating Arturo Cruz Jr., son of the Nicaraguan Contra leader, according to NSC sources, and her friends said Cruz "flashed around a lot of money." The Post reported earlier that North provided the senior Cruz $6,000 a month for nine months last year by dipping into secret foreign bank accounts.

Sources said Hall described the document shredding to investigators as routine—NSC files are purged periodically.

Gravity-defying tumblers excite Shryock audience

By Ellen Cook
Entertainment Editor

At the beginning of the Peking Acrobats' performance in Shryock Auditorium Friday night, audience members were told that what they were to see on stage requires years of practice and should not be tried at home.

At first, the warning seemed humorous: What rational person would try to balance dinnerware while riding a unicycle around the living room? But the acrobats performed their gravity-defying feats with such ease that the warning proved necessary. It seemed anyone could do them, and if an audience member were to try recreating the performance, broken bones surely would result.

Twenty-five acrobats performed juggling, tumbling and balancing acts that amazed children and adults alike. Although each of the acts was different, they had one thing in common—they didn't seem to be humanly possible.

One act featured a young woman who lay on her back while balancing six trays on her palms, feet, forehead and mouth. Each tray held a pyramid of full glasses. She twisted from her back to her stomach but never broke a glass or spilled a drop of the liquid.

Another act proved that juggling doesn't have to be performed with the hands. The performer lay on her back tossing umbrellas and fans between her feet. She opened and closed the props so easily that it seemed strange when she left the stage on her feet instead of her hands.

Other breath-taking acts involved two sisters who were flipped around the stage while balancing stacks of rice bowls on their heads, and two men who pedaled a bicycle on which nine female acrobats were balanced.

Each act was accompanied by traditional Chinese music, and the performance follows a tradition that dates back to the Ch'in Dynasty of 225 B.C.

The Peking Acrobats have carried an exceptional Chinese tradition forward to share with audiences throughout the world, but language should never prove a barrier. All audiences should enjoy the acrobats' blend of grace and precision.

Approval needed for exchange between SIU-C, Greek university

By Catherine Simpson
Staff Writer

After waiting nearly 10 years, Aristotle Pappelis is about to see his plans for a cultural and technological exchange with a Greek university come together.

An exchange program between SIU-C and the University of Thessaloniki in Greece is contingent upon the approval of the plan by SIU-C and the Greek university, said Pappelis, professor in botany.

The program began in order "to provide information about our technology to Greece and in return we will gain knowledge of their cultural programs, theater and drama; areas SIU is weak in," Pappelis said.

The plan for the program is that bases will be set up at each school for faculty, graduates students and undergraduate students, Pappelis said.

Constantinos Akritidis, dean of the School of Agriculture at the University of Thessaloniki, came to SIU-C in January to become familiar with the University and begin discussing the exchange proposal. SIU was "trying to find a way for him to see the extent to which this university can be of assistance to Greece," Pappelis said.

Greece initiated the program to aid in their regional development to attract businesses and industry.

The plan for regional development includes building new roads, water systems, schools and hospitals while preserving the wildlife and the tourism industry.

The Greek government attempted to attract scientists of Greek descent living outside Greece to return to consider "ways that they could help the country in becoming more competitive" in agriculture, industry and technology, Pappelis said.

The government also asked 300 multi-millionaires in Germany, the United States, Canada and other countries to invest in the country, but few responded. The reason for a lack of interest was the lack of regional development, Pappelis said.

When Pappelis, a Greek living outside Greece, learned of the program, he suggested having the University rather than an individual help in order to provide a wider range of knowledge, he said.

However, the program was disrupted when the current Socialist government was elected. The new government did not encourage the program, Pappelis said.

After realizing the importance of attracting industry to improve the economy, the government sought industry, but could not attract it because of the regional problems, Pappelis explained.

The development plan will cost the government $6 billion. The government of Greece obtained loans from other governments in Europe for the financing of the project, Pappelis said.

International buffet offers tasteful variety

By Tracy Bartoni
Staff Writer

The international buffet held Sunday at the Student Center appeared to be a big success with an estimated 600 people attending to sample a wide variety of international cuisine.

"We tried to do something different than was offered last year and to use recipes submitted by students rather than cookbooks," said William M. Egan, coordinator of the event and food and dining services director for the Marriott Corp., which operates food production for the Student Center.

The menu for the buffet offered a varied selection of dishes from 19 countries. It was put together by a committee of six people from the International Student Association, who solicited recipes from students at SIU-C.

Hungry diners could choose from the categories of soups and salads, entrees, vegetables, breads and desserts.

Some of the more unusual dishes offered were yogurt soup from Iran, salad with peanut sauce from Indonesia, Szechuan bang bang chicken from China, ratatouille from France, Bohari rice from Africa and gratin dauphinois from Monaco.

Desserts, one of the more popular categories, included Swiss fruit pie from Switzerland; flan, a custard dish with caramel, from Spain; sliced apples with almond paste from Sweden; and the traditional pecan pie from the United States.

Haddock rolls from Poland and skewered beef from Malaysia were the most popular entrees chosen, said Jack Brown, assistant catering manager from the Marriott Corp.

"People ate mostly the things they recognized," Brown said.

He said the people who prepared the food, Americans, tasted it and made sure it was the proper temperature before serving.

Not only did students participating in the event get the chance to sample some international food, those majoring in food and nutrition worked at the international buffet for credit.

Prof says crime prevention in U.S. too dependent on jail

By John Baldwin
Staff Writer

This country's method of crime prevention is too dependent on prisons and needs to use more efficiently probation, prevention and restitution, said Elmer Johnson, distinguished professor at the SIU-C Crime Study Center.

Johnson has traveled to several countries and examined their methods of crime prevention, and he compared many of America's crime prevention methods to other countries.

He also questioned harsh enforcement of the euthanasia laws.

"People who commit emotional crimes could be put back on the street immediately in many cases," he told a group of 11 people Friday.

He said these people usually commit crimes because they feel it will stop another's suffering and aren't violent.

Johnson said part of the problem with prisons is they are most effective against those people least likely to commit crimes—the middle class. He said the threat of prison isn't likely to prevent violent crimes.

Restitution would be much more effective than prison in preventing many types of crime, he said, but this wouldn't be possible for such crimes as murder in which restitution isn't feasible.

He said it is necessary to convince the public that the crime needs to be prevented.

He gave as an example a well-respected man in the community who causes an accident while driving drunk, killing another person.

He said a jury would be less likely to convict this man than a poor, less well-respected, person.

But Johnson said that if the public were convinced that driving drunk is a crime that needs to be prevented, then both men's chances of being convicted would be equal.

He said people in China are willing to confront a neighbor with an accusation about committing crime, while Americans consider that personal information better left to the police.

When asked about capital punishment, he said, "I don't think capital punishment either encourages or discourages crime."

Network developed for women

Women looking for a job or a path up the corporate ladder may want to grab their sack lunches and head for the Interfaith Center at 11:30 a.m. today.

"Women's Connection," a new program organized by Women's Services and University Affirmative Action, is designed to allow women to share resources and information about job openings and how to advance after one has a job.

"Men have a long history of networking," said Beth Firestein, coordinator. "We are trying to provide community and University women with the same opportunities."

Firestein said the program was proposed by Marian Davis of the University Affirmative Action office last fall, and since then the two women have worked to model this program after a network operating in Austin, Texas.

"The program in Austin has 12 satellite groups which make up the city's network," Firestein said. "Austin is a city of about 400,000 people and probably 500 women participate in the program."

While the Carbondale Women's Connection is expected to be smaller, Firestein said the program can be just as effective.

"The network system is very non-authoritarian," she said. "During the first meeting we will be looking to have women introduce themselves, and discuss what each expects from the program."

What happens at future monthly meetings will depend on the group, Firestein said.

One project, she said, might be to develop a directory of group members to encourage interaction outside of the meetings—strengthening a network of women assisting others in the job market.

Woman trackster sets new mark in fiercely competitive Illini meet

By Scott Freeman
Staff Writer

CHAMPAIGN—SIU-C's Carlson Blackman set a University of Illinois Armory track record Friday night at the Illini Classic as she won the 500-meter run with an NCAA qualifying time of 1:11.60. Only three NCAA cuts were made during the meet.

Blackman, an All-American from Barbados, stormed past the heat four field in the nonscored meet to nip Marita Payne of the Puma Track Club at the wire. Most of the meet events were timed heats without finals, so the best times out of the heats were the overall winners.

Blackman previously qualified for nationals in the 500-meter run this season, but making the NCAA cut twice on the indoor circuit will give her added confidence for the national meet, Saluki women's track coach Don DeNoon said.

The Saluki two-mile relay squad of Vivian Sinou, Lisa Judiscak, Rosanne Vincent and Dora Kyriacou set a school record of 9:26.65 on their way to a third-place finish behind Eastern Illinois and Illinois. The old SIU-C record was 9:39.00.

Carlson Blackman

Vivian Sinou

Kathy Raske

Lisa Judiscak

Hurdler Kathy Raske turned in a strong performance in the 60-meter hurdles, taking fifth overall against a field that saw two NCAA cuts. Raske's time of 8.96 seconds put her behind Rhonda Brady (unattached, 8.50, NCAA cut), Leticia Beverly (U of I, 8.54, NCAA cut), Angie Taylor (Illinois State, 8.60) and Victoria Fulcher (U of I, 8.73).

Raske also turned on the jets in the 300-yard dash and tied for third with Michigan's Dana McKiethen in 37.41 seconds. Saluki Darci Stinson took fifth in 37.45.

The mile relay team ran up against some strong competition in heat one of that race, as it matched up with Alabama, Illinois and Western Michigan. Southern finished third overall (3:51.36) thanks to strong performances in the third and fourth legs by Kyriacou and Blackman.

Blackman fired by Western Michigan's Michaela King on the back stretch to put Southern into third place, but the Salukis were still a half lap behind Alabama and Illinois, which finished 1-2.

Alabama flew its relay team to Champaign in hopes of qualifying for the NCAAs, and its four athletes wept after their 3:42.41 finish, which was 21 of a second off the national standard.

Other Salukis who placed were Sue Anderson in the high jump (fourth, 5-5) and Christianna Philippou in the long jump (fourth, 19-0 $\frac{1}{4}$ ).

Former Saluki basketball and track standout Conni Price easily won the shot put with a heave of 51-3 $\frac{1}{2}$  feet, well over three feet ahead of Sonya Paine of Michigan. Price is competing unattached out of Indianapolis.

Men runners break record set in 1960s

By Wally Foreman
Staff Writer

Craig Steele, Andy Pettigrew, Jobie Kelly and Bret Garrett set an SIU-C school record in the indoor two-mile relay with a time of 7:31.67 at the Illini Classic in Champaign Saturday.

Coach Bill Cornell said the old record has been around so long, he was on the relay team that set the former record in the early 1960s.

The split times for the runners were Steele at 1:57.24, Pettigrew at 1:51.77, Kelly at 1:52.35 and Garrett at 1:50.51.

Ron Harrer set another personal best in the 35-pound weight toss at 58-8 $\frac{3}{4}$ , and finished third in the event. Cornell said Harrer has made a big improvement in the event with five feet added to his throws this season.

Also setting a personal record at the non-scoring meet was Mike Michels in the pole vault with an effort of 16-3, which was good enough for a sixth-place finish.

Cornell noted that former-Saluki trackster Mike Elliott, who now runs for the Atlantic Coast Track Club, set a personal record and won the 880-meter race with a time of

Bret Garrett

Andy Pettigrew

Jobie Kelly

Ron Harrer

1:50.56.

Garrett finished sixth in the 880-meter race with a time of 1:58.49. Cornell said Garrett couldn't bounce back after running in the two-mile relay.

Larry Holloway placed first in the 60-meter high hurdles open invitational with a time of 7.75.

In the 3,000-meter race Andy Pettigrew took first with a time of 8:22.25 followed by teammates David Lamont in third place, 8:28.96, and Kent Leek in sixth with a time of 8:41.67.

James Duhart finished third with a time of 1:02.99 in the 500-meter race. Cornell said Duhart has "a little ways to go" before he can meet the NCAA qualifying time for that event.

In the 1,000 meters Kelly finished in fifth place with a time of 2:14.38.

Kevin Steele captured second place in the 440-meter race with a time of 50.37. Sheldon Knight was fifth in the 300-meter, 32.88, and Craig Steele finished sixth in the 880-meter, 1:56.53.

"We did what we set out to do," Cornell said, "and we are as ready for the Missouri Valley Conference Championships as we can be."

Cornell said his main concern is to make sure everybody stays healthy this week because the MVC Championships are Feb. 27-28.

Lack of concentration hurts women netters in first meet

By Wally Foreman
Staff Writer

The main ingredient that women's tennis coach Judy Auld noticed her team lacking at the Eastern Kentucky Invitational was mental toughness.

Although the Richmond, Ky., meet this weekend did not keep official team scores, Auld said the netters' first competition this season ended up as good tourney experience for her team.

Freshman Beth Boardman lived up to the No. 1 seed she received in the No. 3 singles by winning both of her matches after a first-round bye to take the championship in match three.

Boardman and Ellen Moellering, No. 1 doubles, captured the consolation doubles championship and finished with a record of 2-1. Auld said Boardman and Moellering lost a tough first match that could have gone either way to the eventual winners of the doubles championship.

"They (Boardman and Moellering) work well together and enjoy playing together," Auld said.

At the No. 1 singles position Moellering was 0-2 in some close matches, Auld said.

Dana Cherebetiu, No. 2 singles, finished with a 0-2 record.

Sue Steuby, No. 4 singles, had a good tourney and finished with a 1-2 record. "I was pleased with her play," Auld said.

Julie Burgess, No. 5 singles, finished with a 1-2 record. Auld said Burgess had a "fairly decent tourney and was hitting the ball well."

Maria Coch, who hasn't played since last spring, had an 0-2 record for the No. 6 singles in the tourney.

Auld said the No. 2 doubles team of Cherebetiu and Burgess, 0-2 for the tourney, have to come around in order for the team to do well. "They are not doing the basics right," Auld said, "and they are having difficulty playing together."

The No. 3 doubles team, Steuby and Coch, finished with a record of 1-2 for the tourney.

Auld said the team had a positive attitude after the tourney and were not discouraged, but need to start playing consistently. "We are ahead of schedule compared to other seasons and we have a couple weeks to prepare for our next match," Auld said.

Incumbent retains dog sled crown

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI)—"Fast" Eddy Streep of Fort Nelson, British Columbia, mused his team along the streets and back trails Sunday to win the three-day Fur Rendezvous world championship sled dog race in 4 hours, 21 minutes, 48 seconds.

Streep successfully defended his world sprint racing crown despite a final charge by Joee Redington, Manley, Alaska, whose final heat time of 1:21:04 was five seconds better than Streep's. Redington's total time was 4:23:14.

were throwing shots in from everywhere," Scott said.

The score indicated a close game rather than a close two minutes. The Salukis built a 15-point second-half margin with good zone defense and strong offensive efforts from Berghuis and Kattreh.

"I couldn't be more proud because it was our third toughest game this year. We re-gelled as a team," Scott said. "We were dull, really said. This is what we needed because we really couldn't enjoy our win over Illinois State."

The Salukis rose to 16-0 in the Gateway and 23-2 overall. Bradley fell into a three-way tie for third place at 9-7.

SIU beats NIU

Gymnasts tumble Huskies, find dual success at home

By M.J. Starshak
Staff Writer

SIU-C's gymnasts didn't wait for their first dual meet win to come to them—they went out and got it. The Salukis captured five of the six events to notch a 273.10-264.55 victory over Northern Illinois Friday night at the Arena.

"We should've been 276, but we made some mistakes," head coach Bill Meade said.

Pommel horse, which in the past had been a stumbling block for SIU-C's gymnasts, became a building block of momentum for Meade's squad. The athletes earned a 3.45-point lead after pommel horse, which was the second event.

"When you gain that much on one event, the meet is pretty much over," Meade said.

Preston Knauf, a senior from Glen Ellyn, scored 9.35 on pommel horse to nail a first for the Salukis. Knauf, who placed third in vaulting at NCAA competition last year, grabbed third in that event with a 9.30.

Fellow Saluki Phil Armand, in his first home meet appearance since last season, scored 9.15 in pommel horse to take third. Armand, of Carbondale, has missed much of the season because of a shoulder injury.

Meade said he was "pretty well pleased" with the performance of sophomore Tom Glielmi. An NIU transfer, Glielmi showed his former classmates what he can do in floor exercises by scoring a season-best 9.75 to win the event. He also placed second in vaulting with a 9.45.

"He showed he's been listening," Meade said. "He's come a long way on vault. He needs to get more (good) away scores, though."

Senior Mark Ulmer gave the strongest Saluki performance. He won the all-around competition with a score of 55.15. Ulmer, an All-American on still rings, scored 9.40 in that event as well as 9.45 on the horizontal bar to place first in both events.

Meade also cited Ulmer's performances on floor exercises (9.65) and pommel horse (8.50) as contributing factors to the Salukis' victory.

Scott Belanger, a freshman from Londonderry, N.H., aided the gymnasts' effort by competing in four of the six events and taking third place in horizontal bar with a score of 9.20.

Strong showings from senior David Bailey and sophomore Ray Quintavell also added fuel to the Saluki fire. Bailey nabbed second place on parallél bars with a 9.35 and Quintavell scored 9.25 on horizontal bar to grab a second place spot of his own.

The Salukis will take on the University of Iowa at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Arena. Meade's squad defeated the Hawkeyes 276.50-274.75 last season and the coach said he would like to continue to give the Hawkeyes this type of reception.

"We haven't been very hospitable to them in the past," Meade said. "I'd like to continue to treat them the same way."

Men hoopsters lose to Creighton despite 17-point comeback effort

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

A 17-point comeback effort by Rich Herrin's Salukis fell just short Saturday night in Omaha, Neb., as Creighton outlasted SIU-C 88-85.

With the loss, the Salukis drop to 4-8 and share fifth place with Drake and Creighton. The loss ended any hopes SIU-C had of playing host to a first-round Missouri Valley Conference postseason tournament game.

In what Herrin had labeled "our most important game of the season," the Salukis trailed from the outset. SIU-C pulled within three at 29-26 with seven minutes to go in the first half, but hit just three field goals after that. Meanwhile, the Bluejays outscored the Dogs 24-10 to take a 53-36 lead into the locker room.

The Salukis scored just three points, all on free throws, during the final 3:40 of the half. The Jays scored 14 during the same span, with Kenny Evans scoring seven in a row to start the streak.

The Bluejays maintained the halftime lead until three Saluki three-pointers pulled SIU-C to 58-49 with 16 minutes to go in the second half.

The Salukis continued to whittle at the lead, and took a 72-71 advantage on center Tim Richardson's rebound and bucket.

The Salukis expanded that lead to 79-73 with 5:19 left, but Creighton stormed back to knot the score at 79.

After an exchange of free throws tied the score at 80, Creighton's Todd Eisner hit two straight jumpers for an 84-81 Bluejay lead with just over a minute remaining.

After a pair of Evans free throws, SIU-C made it 86-85 on a three-pointer by Steve Middleton, but two more free throws by Gary Swain with 10 seconds left put Creighton up 88-85.

After a Saluki timeout, Doug Novsek missed a 30-footer at the buzzer that would've sent the game into overtime.

The Salukis nailed 11 three pointers in the game, but the effort wasn't enough to overcome 34 percent first half field goal shooting.

Playing their final home game, Creighton seniors Swain and Evans combined for 53 points and four-of-seven three-point shooting.

Men cagers' league finish hinges on upsetting Tulsa

By Steve Merritt
Staff Writer

Knowing a pair of victories would keep hopes of a first-round Missouri Valley Conference tournament game barely alive, the Salukis face league-leading Tulsa at 7:35 p.m. Monday.

Despite a disappointing loss to Creighton on Saturday night, an upset over Tulsa and a win Thursday night against Indiana State could keep the Salukis in the hunt.

To keep those slim hopes alive, Illinois State would have to drop its final contest of the year (versus Creighton) while Drake and Creighton would both have to lose one of two remaining games. That would put the Salukis in a tie with Illinois State, which in all probability, would win fifth-place after going through the complicated tie-breaking structure.

In SIU-C's first game with Tulsa Jan. 15 at the Arena, the Golden Hurricane coasted to a 10-point victory, 74-64.

The Salukis stayed close throughout the first half, despite 31-percent field goal shooting, but couldn't dent a 10-point lead held by Tulsa throughout the second half. The Salukis finished shooting with only 33 percent from the field.

Five Tulsa players hit double figures while only two Salukis were able to do so. Steve Middleton scored 21 points while Doug Novsek accounted for 23.

Tulsa is 12-0 at home this season. The last Saluki win at Tulsa came in the 1978-79 season.

Women cagers repel Braves' last-ditch press

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

PEORIA—The Bradley Braves literally went on the warpath during the last two minutes of the game Saturday against the 17th-ranked women's basketball Salukis.

Although SIU-C had the 68-65 win iced with two seconds left, the Braves' 5-5 senior guard Laurie Rogers hurried her body like a tag-team wrestler at the Salukis' 6-2 junior center Mary Berghuis, who had dished off the ball prior to the contact.

Rogers' tackle sent Berghuis crashing to the sideline in front of the Saluki bench. The Saluki players immediately leaped to the yard-high courtside of Robertson Memorial Fieldhouse to object. Words between the teams ensued, but Berghuis' ability to keep calm and tell everyone she was okay cooled the flaring tempers.

"I know it's part of the game. My teammates tell me that she came flying at me, but I understand so I'm not too upset," said Berghuis, who had also been victimized on a shady foul at the 10:20 mark of the second half. "I just tried not to let it get to me. They were playing rough and the officials were not calling it. I did not let (my temper) get away from me."

"I don't like to see (fouls like) that," Saluki coach Cindy Scott said. "But players get wrapped up in the game. I'm sure after (Rogers) did it she wished she hadn't."

After the foul was ruled intentional, Berghuis missed the first free throw to break her string of eight but made the second to become game-high scorer and give the Salukis their final point. A halfcourt sling-shot by BU's Michelle Braud did not come close as time expired.

Cozette Wallace started the game at power forward but was on the bench during the final 2:30 because a jump ball on an offensive rebound sent her to the floor with a twisted neck at the 2:30 mark.

"When my neck twisted, it scared me more than anything," the 6-1 senior and game-high rebounder said.

Scott said, "I thought the game got out of hand, but our kids kept their composure. I was extremely upset at how physical they (the officials) let it get. Our mistakes were caused by the aggressiveness."

Scott referred to turnovers to the Braves' fullcourt pressure, which cut the Salukis down from the 10-point lead they held with 1:45 left in the game.

Saluki leader Ann Kattreh said of the Braves' last-ditch press, "They tackled me. I was screaming in the official's face."

Bradley coach Lisa Boyer played a strategic shuffling game between rebounders and long-range shooters in the closing minutes, but left the Braves leading scorer, freshman forward Karin Nicholls, on the bench.

"I tried to get the three-point shooters in for that situation and I was wishing I went to it sooner," Boyer said. "I took Nicholls out because they were beating her defensively and she was tired."

Brave guard Nancy Zoros seemingly couldn't miss the three-pointer near the end. Every time the Salukis appeared to have the game under wraps with clutch free throws, the Braves came roaring back.

"Our kids did what we asked by going out from the zone to get on their shooters but they
