U.N. debates global drug initiative

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The General Assembly began a debate Tuesday on global cooperation to combat illegal drug trafficking, with the United States pledging to fight domestic drug users whose habits finance terrorist actions by cartels.

Describing the war against drugs in the United States as "our most critical challenge,"

Secretary of State James Baker urged the 159-member General Assembly to adopt a "Global Program of Action" to rid the world of illegal narcotics.

But Baker also said the program should commit everyone to "concrete activities" that will involve U.N. agencies and be backed by "complementary efforts at the national and regional levels."

"There is no country here so proud or so great as to be able to rid itself of drugs without the help of other nations," he said.

Baker said drug use in the United States dropped 37 percent in a three-year period beginning in 1985 and cocaine use was cut in half during the same period. "But we have a long way to go,"

he said.

"American users aid and abet the drug cartels which in turn foment and exploit regional and global instability. When Americans feed their habits and enrich the cartels, it's like they're giving succor to terrorists," Baker said.

The secretary of state also said the Bush administration is unequivocally determined to reduce demand for drugs in the United States.

Colombian Foreign Minister Julio Londono, who opened the four-day U.N. debate aimed at securing a global action program, said the recent summit attended by Bush and the heads of state of

Curt Kohring, president of the Partnership for Disability Issues, said his organization agreed that the city should not adopt higher standards than already mandated by state laws except when "federal, state and local funds are used to assist the establishment of and Bed and Breakfast Inns in any way."

"If public money is to be used to assist a specific enterprise then that enterprise should be required to serve all the public," Kohring said.

The Carbondale City Council voted unanimously to adopt an ordinance allowing the creation of Bed and Breakfast Inns in the city, but owners will not be required to provide elevators or ramps at the inns.

The state Bed and Breakfast Act said that a bed and breakfast establishment constitutes a residence with no more than five rooms.

Pittston pact ratified; miners could return to job

LEBANON, Va. (UPI) — The United Mine Workers Tuesday announced the end of a costly 10-month-long strike against the Pittston Coal Group, and officials predicted miners could be back on the job as early as Thursday night.

Officials on both sides of the protracted dispute hailed the agreement, which was ratified during a vote Monday. Nearly 2,000 miners at Pittston's mines in Virginia, West Virginia and Kentucky voted on the pact, with 1,247 voting in favor and 734 against.

"It's a victory," said Freeman Artrip of Cleveland of the strike that attracted worldwide attention and spawned a flurry of wildcat strikes across the nation. "We're really thrilled about it, although we have some mixed emotions about the contract. But who wouldn't be glad to see a settlement?"

"It was either do or die the way we saw it," said Subby Holbrook of Clintwood. "It was either pack up or stand and fight."

Labor Secretary Elizabeth Dole, who brought in federal mediator William Usery to speed an end to the dispute, was buoyed by the news. Speaking from the AFL-CIO convention in Bal Harbour, Fla., she said the endorsement of the new pact shows the rank-and-file's confidence in the leadership of the UMW.

Virginia Gov. Douglas Wilder, who as lieutenant governor offered to mediate the strike between the union and Virginia's largest coal producer, said he was pleased "that the people of the Southwest can go back to work."

"Like all Virginians, I am pleased to see the labor dispute between Pittston Coal Group and the United Mine Workers come to an end," said Wilder. "For many families in Virginia, both within and outside the coalfields, the strike has proven a hardship."

Pittston Coal Group president Michael Odom described the ratification as "fantastic news" and said the first union workers could be back on the job by Thursday night. He was unsure when mines would be back to full production, impossible to check every night," said City Manager Steve Hoffer.

Carbondale Police Chief Ed Hogan said police officers began noticing a problem with overoccupancy two weeks ago when officers checking for underage drinkers couldn't enter several bars because of the number of people crowding the bars.

"The numbers were far in excess of the limitations," Hogan said.

According to a report, police observed crowding problems at four bars.

Frankie's, 204 W. College St., American Tap, 518 S. Illinois Ave., Sidetracks, West College Street, and T-Birds, 111 N. Washington St., were named in the report as being overoccupied two weekends ago, Hogan said.

Frankie's and American Tap received tickets last weekend for violating capacity limits. The citations were the first Carbondale has issued in the last six months.

Hogan said in the future if enough personnel is available, then police will check the crowds

Bush heaps praise on Czechoslovak leader

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush welcomed Czechoslovak President Vaclav Havel to the White House Tuesday, hailing the opposition playwright's stunning rise to power and promising the United States "will be part of your nation's democratic rebirth."

After a meeting in the Oval Office and lunch, Bush heaped praise on the first of the new Democratic leaders in Eastern Europe to visit the White House and formally opened the way for Czechoslovakia's readmission to the international financial community.

Presenting Havel with a lithograph drawing of a democratic predecessor, Tomas Masaryk, a founder and first president of Czechoslovakia, Bush announced the formal waiver of trade restrictions for Czechoslovakia and said, "Your life has been one of miraculous transformations." Hailing him as "one of the heroes of the 'Revolution of '89," Bush noted that in the past year Havel has traveled "the most miraculous journey of all, from prison to the presidency."

The 53-year-old playwright, in turn, said briefly he was "very moved" by Bush's words and called the talks "very important negotiations."

"We had very warm, very open, very friendly discussions," Havel said as he left the White House. "I am very glad I had the opportunity to be here."

Havel, his nation's most frequently jailed dissident, is serving as a transitional president until after June 8 elections that are all but certain to lead to a non-communist government.

He last visited the United States 22 years ago to attend the premiere of one of his plays off Broadway. He addresses a joint session of Congress on

Salukis prepare for Conference meet

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

Taking a 1-9-1 record into the 8th Annual Gateway Conference meet Feb. 22-24 at the Recreation Center doesn't worry the SIU-C women's swimming team.

All year they have competed against some of the best competition in the country and being a young team (one junior and no seniors), their poor record doesn't accurately indicate their ability.

"In our situation we are trying a couple of things," Ingram said.

"One is that we are trying to raise the level of our women's program to the highest possible level and to do this we try to face the best competition that we can."

This year, as in the past, the Salukis did not swim against conference opponents. They swam against swimming powerhouses like Florida, Vanderbilt, Nebraska and Kansas, just to name a few. Ingram, along with most of his swimmers, is confident that they will benefit in the long run from such a tough schedule.

"We are used to being behind in most of our races, but this weekend we should be ahead and that is going to be a real mental edge," freshman swimmer Kristin Harvey said.

SIU-C goes into the conference meet picked by the Gateway coaches to place second behind last year's winner Illinois State.

"Illinois State is a good team, but I think we are mentally tougher," sophomore swimmer Julie Hosier said. "We swam against tougher teams all year and I think we have more depth than they do."

Along with the Gateway Conference meet will be the Midwest Invitational. Northern Illinois and Chicago will compete along with Illinois State, Western Illinois, Eastern Illinois, Northern Iowa and SIU-C.

Swimming in their home pool should prove to be a big plus for the Salukis.

"The fact that you are familiar with the environment. You know how slick the walls are, how the blocks feel, the clarity of the markings on the bottom of the pool and so forth. It is a definite advantage," Ingram said.

"The home crowd is a big advantage. There will be a lot of parents here from all the schools, so for us to have a home crowd advantage we will rely on the college students and the community coming out and supporting our group. The meet is going to be so close, I think the crowd could really help us pull out a victory."

Action begins at the Recreation Center at 11 a.m. Thursday and will continue at 7 p.m. that night. The competition will run through Saturday at the same times each day.

Weightlifting club open to everyone

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

When people think of the weightlifting club many find themselves a little intimidated.

They picture a room full of hulking bodies sitting around comparing biceps. But this isn't the case.

"We're definitely not here to intimidate anyone," weightlifting club president John Allemand said. "We enjoy lifting weights and that's why we get together. We welcome anybody. We really need more members."

The club is comprised of all sorts of people. There are a few bodybuilders, powerlifters and people who just workout to get in shape or look better.

Meetings are held one Wednesday of each month in the conference room in the Recreation Center. The times and dates are posted in the Recreation Center "free" weightroom.

"We have meetings and discuss how the weight room can be improved and we try to emphasize those points to the administration here at the Rec Center," Allemand said.

To join the club, all anyone has to do is attend a meeting and then decide if they wish to become a member. There is a $5 fee to join the club.

The club also conducts powerlifting and bodybuilding seminars. These are designed to help people train properly, Allemand said.

Competitions oriented around weightlifting are also sponsored by the weightlifting club. In the fall of 1989 it held the first drug-free powerlifting meet at SIU-C. This spring it will sponsor the Mr. and Ms. SIU competition on April 20. This is open to anyone in any

Saluki men still control their own destiny in conference title chase

The Salukis may be down, but they're not out by a long shot.

SIU-C suffered a 79-72 upset to Wichita State Monday, but the Salukis still control their own destiny in the Missouri Valley Conference race.

The Salukis have three regular-season Valley games remaining — all at the Arena. If the Dawgs win all three games, the worst they could do is tie for the league title. Not bad for a team that was a preseason pick for third place.

Three teams are still in contention for the title. Illinois State is first at 8-3, followed by Creighton at 8-4. The Dawgs are holding down third place with a 7-4 record.

How did the Salukis respond to being picked third in the Valley? Well, the two teams picked to finish ahead of them — Creighton and Tulsa — are a combined 0-4 against the Dawgs this season.

Going down the stretch, the Salukis hold the trump card.

The Salukis are 9-1 at the Arena and should have some of the best crowds of the season backing them for the remaining three games.

Although not invincible at home, as a 75-72 loss to St. Louis earlier this season would prove, the Salukis are a better team at the Arena.

Illinois State travels to

From the Press Box
Kevin Simpson

Carbondale for a Feb. 24 game at the Arena giving the Salukis a chance to even things up in the loss column between the two teams.

Although an outright Valley title may be doubtful, a tie with either Creighton or Illinois State (or both) means the Salukis will receive the top seed in the Valley tournament and the best shot of advancing to the tournament championship game.

In the event of a tie, records in head-to-head competition are compared, with the higher seed going to the team that has won the most games against the other. If the two teams split during the regular season, then the records of the tying teams will be compared to the lower seeds in descending order.

Although the Salukis could be invited to the NCAA tournament on the strength of their record, a win in the MVC tournament championship game is an automatic bid into the tourney.

Playing on the road in the Valley translates into playing a tougher team than the overall record indicates. A home court advantage can turn a mediocre team into a good team. A good team on the road is a great team at home and so on.

Did the Salukis choke? No. On the contrary, it only shows they are fallible. Even though the Salukis are 12-5 on the road overall, they have won only three of seven road games against Valley opponents. So why can the Salukis win road games against top-caliber teams (Creighton and St. Louis for example) and fail against the not-so-tough teams?

Head coach Rich Herrin said the overall balance in the league can lead to upsets of the top teams.

"Anybody can get upset on any given night," Herrin said. "We put ourselves in a position that we're up on top and teams are going to shoot for us."

It seems to be a trend in the Valley this year:

As the conference season winds down, those teams that are out of the race set their sights on acting as a spoiler, as is evident with Creighton losing to Drake and SIU-C losing to Wichita on the

Rakers questionable for Thursday's game

By Greg Scott
Staff Writer

Although Amy Rakers' condition improved Tuesday, the Saluki women's basketball team will likely be without their All-American candidate when they play Wichita State Thursday.

Rakers, 6-3 junior forward, was hospitalized Saturday night after complaining of severe headaches and neck pains following the Salukis' 72-60 loss to Eastern Illinois.

Rakers, suffering from flu-like symptoms, was ordered to complete bed rest Monday. She showed improvement Tuesday, but Saluki Coach Cindy Scott said she still is doubtful for Thursday's game.

"Amy is doing much better and she is going to be okay," Scott said. "But her chances of playing Thursday are iffy."

Rakers attended the Saluki practice Tuesday; but did not participate.

Rakers is averaging 20.5 points and 10.6 rebounds per game. She leads the Gateway Conference in scoring, rebounding and field goal percentage.

Scott said junior forward Cyd Mitchell will replace Rakers in the starting lineup. Mitchell will be receiving her first start of the season.

After seeing limited action off the bench earlier in the season, Mitchell has received more playing time lately. Mitchell didn't score against Eastern Saturday, but she grabbed 3 rebounds and dished out 2 assists in 8 minutes of action.

Scott said playing without Rakers will be a test for the Salukis.

"Good teams handle adversity," Scott said. "If we're tough, we'll be alright."

The Salukis lose Rakers at a time when they are battling for a Gateway Conference postseason

Yugoslavia sends military to strife-stricken province

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (UPI) — The Yugoslavian government sent more tanks and troops to Serbia's southern Kosovo province Tuesday in an effort to put an end to violent clashes between authorities and the region's ethnic Albanians, who have been demanding greater autonomy. One ethnic Albanian was killed and 10 others wounded in clashes with riot police in Titova Mitrovica, north of Pristina. Five policemen were wounded by stones thrown by the demonstrators, officials said.

Pro-democracy protestors killed in Katmandu

KATMANDU, Nepal (UPI) — Three people were killed and seven wounded Tuesday when police fired into a crowd of pro-democracy demonstrators in a Nepalese village, raising the official number of people killed in the kingdom's democratic movement to 10. The opposition, however, countered the government figure and said 22 people have died in three days of protests called to demand that Nepal end a 29-year ban of political parties and institute greater freedoms.

Government troops recapture Cambodian town

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — About 2,500 government troops equipped with Soviet-built tanks recaptured the western Cambodian town of Svay Chek in heavy fighting with resistance forces Tuesday on the eve of peace talks between rival Cambodian leaders, Thai military sources said. The long-awaited government counter-offensive began before dawn on Tuesday with heavy artillery, five Soviet-built T-54 tanks and about 2,500 troops thrown into battle.

Modrow opposed to membership in NATO

WEST BERLIN, (UPI) — East German Premier Hans Modrow told parliament Tuesday he opposes NATO membership for a unified Germany. In a speech to the Volkskammer or People's Chamber in East Berlin that followed his talks in Bonn last week with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, the Communist head of the caretaker East German government advocated the demilitarization of the unified country.

Soviet Parliament warns against unrest

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Parliament warned Tuesday against unrest during pro-democracy rallies planned for this weekend and ordered law-enforcement agencies to take all necessary steps to maintain order. Organizers who planned the massive demonstration held in Moscow Feb. 4 plan to put millions of people on the streets in the nation's main cities this Sunday to keep up pressure for ending single party Communist rule.

Settlement reached in civil liability case

JENNINGTON, Vt. (UPI) — A 92-year-old widow initially held financially liable for a relative's motor vehicle accident will be able to keep her life's savings under a settlement reached Tuesday in a closely watched civil liability case. "I did, I did win," Luella Wilson told reporters who swarmed to her home following the announcement. "Any man with common sense would know I didn't owe that money," she said, sipping a celebratory shot of Southern Comfort. Wilson was slapped with a $950,000 judgment after a car driven by her great-nephew plunged off a bridge, leaving one of his passengers, Mark Vince, unable to walk.

State

State has less money because of slump

SPRINGFIELD, (UPI) — The state's budget coffers have $82 million less than originally estimated because of an economic downturn, an early indication that Illinois will have a lean budget year in 1991, officials said Tuesday. The Illinois Economic and Fiscal Commission has revised its fiscal 1990 revenue estimate downward by $82 million largely because of a 10 percent decline in corporate income tax receipts. State legislators said the news will have an impact on next year's state budget.

University students scrambling to win 'egg drop'

'Mind Games' open to all students and community members

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

David slew Goliath. Jesse Owens outran Hitler's supermen.

Make room in the Underdog Hall of Fame for Richard Archer and his freshman level art and design class.

For the third straight year, Archer's design students will crash Friday's Engineering Mind Games competition and attempt to topple the self-proclaimed kings of the mountain, the engineering students.

"My freshmen have finished very well in the past and that doesn't tend to make the engineering people very happy," Archer said.

The Mind Games, also known as the Pentathlon competition, are held each February by students in the College of Engineering as part of Engineering Week.

Something of a misnomer, the Pentathlon consists of nine, not five, separate events, each designed to test students' creativity and problem-solving skills.

Participation in Friday's Pentathlon is open to all students and community members interested in inventing weird and unusual apparatuses. The first prize winner will receive a trophy and a $50 gift certificate from the University Bookstore.

The "over easy egg drop," in which contestants must construct a special container for an egg and then drop it from a 4-story building without breaking the egg, is one of the Pentathlon's more notorious events.

Other engineering competitions include the "mousetrap marathon," for which contestants must build and navigate a vehicle powered only by the spring from a regular household mousetrap, and the "Bridge Over No Man's Gorge" competition, which involves the construction of a bridge out of plastic straws to withstand great loads.

Contestants also may enter the "house of cards" and the "paper airplane" competitions.

One of the more notorious events is the "over-easy egg drop," where contestants design a container to protect an egg that is dropped off a building.

As for the rivalry between the engineering majors and Archer's design students, Archer said the competition is a healthy one.

"I think it's fun," he said. "I mean, we're only dropping eggs off a building here."

"Anything to make students work hard for you is worth it," Archer added. "The most important thing is to get people out there and get them thinking."

"My students put out a lot more for an Engineering Week project than they would just for me," Archer said.

Still, the trademarks of a feud persist.

"I had to go through these cat and mouse games to get copies of the rules for this year's games," Archer said.

Linda Helstern, publicity specialist for the College of Engineering, agreed that Archer did pay visits to the Engineering and Technology Building.

"In fact, he might spend a greater portion of his day in the engineering building," Helstern said. "None of our faculty were staking the halls, looking for a winner (winning invention)."

"Go look up your old copies of the D.E.," Archer said. "Check out last year's Mind Games story and it'll say, 'First place winner, major unknown. Second place, major unknown. Third place winner, engineering major.' And right, those first two winners were art and design people."

"Art and design students changed the complexion of the games," Archer said.

"We came in three years ago in our blue jeans. And all the engineering students were wearing ties. Well, they took a look at us and said, 'Who are all these scruffy people?'"

"They don't seem to hold the art and design students in very high esteem," Archer added. "And it's that bias of hard science over soft science. But we hold our own."

Archer said his design students' domination of the Engineering Mind Games met with retaliation at the Cardboard Boat Regatta up until a couple of years ago.

"(The engineering students) came out to the Regatta, which we sponsor, and they beat us at our own game for awhile," Archer said.

For the past two years, however, the engineering team has lost the regatta to Du Quoin High School, Archer said.

As part of the engineering competition in 1988, John Wisely dropped an egg from the Technology Building while first graders from Winkler grade school looked on.

"Du Quoin trounced 'em the last two years," he said. "And there were some unhappy campers over that."

"I think last year, the engineers spent somewhere in the neighborhood of $1,200 to $1,700 to build their cardboard boat. Guess how much Du Quoin spent... $49.50.

And they beat the engineers by 13 seconds, so it wasn't even close," he added.

Helstern said that for Friday's Pentathlon, 160 Southern Illinois high school students and 80 elementary school students have confirmed reservations to participate in the Engineering Mind Games events.

NCAA: Academics come before athletics

THREE CHEERS TO the NCAA! Revisions to its regulations completed during its last convention in Dallas mended some gaping holes in college athletics. Temporarily.

Action at the 84th Annual NCAA Convention to incorporate more meaning in the student half of student-athlete is welcome and long overdue.

Steps in reducing time demands on these students include cutting practice days and slicing off games from regular season schedules. Football drills in summer 1991 will be reduced by five days. Basketball players will start two weeks later, too, with the 1991 season beginning Nov. 1.

So athletes will have a few days extra to study. That's good. What's not so good is the concern these changes have caused coaches and administration.

MEN'S BASKETBALL COACH Rich Herrin believes the shortened season will be no more advantageous, and probably a little less. Perhaps he's been away from the books too long. An extra two weeks during midterms is to some a godsend.

Erasing three games from the already full 28-game basketball schedule may mean a cut in pay. Athletic Director Jim Hart said that if all three games cut were home games, the University might stand to lose about $60,000.

Sadly, pursuit of dollars has drawn universities to abuse rules and stress athletic ends of students. A bill for $60,000 can be considered well-spent if it means better grades, less stress and healthier student-athletes. Besides, the new regulation would begin with the 1992-93 season, which leaves at least one full year to contemplate substitutes. And with Hart's success at fund raising, his concern about loss of revenue appears unfounded.

DELEGATES TO THE convention also relaxed standards of the highly controversial Proposition 42, possibly creating room for new abuses.

Scheduled to begin this year, Proposition 42 would have denied athletic scholarships to students who did not meet minimal college entrance exam scores and grade point average requirements.

Under the new changes, students who meet at least one of the requirements will be eligible for need-based aid. Does this mean that athletes with poor grades will be awarded need-based aid first and needy students with good grades last? After all, and considering NCAA's track record with regulations, there's no guarantee that the criteria will stick.

ANOTHER CONCERN ADDRESSED at the NCAA convention was that of drug testing. Do we or don't we? Although the Commission says we do, NCAA says we sort of can...but not really.

Aside from the controversy surrounding an individual's right to privacy, the testing program is ill-fated. Although drug testing was approved for all divisions, the NCAA has said that it doesn't have enough money to test everyone; Division I football players will be tested exclusively for the next two years. That's it — no one else.

The next question is: How did the NCAA decide that Division I football players should be tested before everyone else?

AT ANY RATE, IT'S CLEAR that delegates to the next NCAA convention have their work cut out. Treating student-athletes equally might be good for starters — whether their sport is football, basketball or fencing. That is, whether it makes money or spends money.

And, no, the norm here is not the norm everywhere. The University's gymnastics squad was more renowned than the football team, yet the gymnastics squad was hung out to dry. And the football team continues to lose money. Maybe the NCAA could come out with continuance standards at its next convention.

You're always Mom's little baby

By Mark Patinkin
Providence Journal

I arrived for a week-long visit with my parents. I arrived as an adult, and parent, with a family of my own. I arrived as a 37-year-old man.

Soon, as always happens on these visits, I was 12 again.

My mother greeted me at the door. She paused and immediately looked at my face.

"You're not feeling well, are you?" she said.

"I feel fine," I said.

"Don't tell me you're fine, young man. Have you been sleeping enough?"

"Ma, I'm not a young man anymore."

"I remember you in diapers." She turned to my wife. "He's not feeling well, is he?"

"Well, he's still got a stomach thing every now and then."

"C'mon," I said. "My stomach's fine."

"You're stomach's not fine," said my mother. "It's been bothering you, hasn't it?"

"It's fine."

"You should see somebody about it."

"I've seen somebody."

"You should see somebody else. I'll get you the name of a doctor from Boston. You really have to take care of yourself."

"I take care of myself. And I don't need to see any doctors."

"How much do you weigh? You look like you've lost weight."

"I'm down a few. About 155, maybe 160."

"You should be 170, shouldn't you? Harold, talk to your son. He's not eating enough."

My father was on the couch, unwrapping a cigar.

"Listen to your mother," he said. "She's a wonderful woman."

I asked my dad how he was liking retirement.

"I read four newspapers a day," he said. "I take out the garbage. That's it. Never been happier."

"Sit down," said my mother. "I'm making you something to eat right now."

A few minutes later, she brought out a tuna fish sandwich.

Like most men my age, I would be in big trouble if my wife made me a sandwich and I announced I wanted something else. But this was different. This was my mother.

"I don't want tuna fish," I said. "You got any turkey?"

She rushed back in the kitchen. "I'd be happy to make you a turkey sandwich."

My wife looked at me and shook her head. "You'd better enjoy it now," she said.

My mother brought out the sandwich, along with more sandwiches for everyone.

"Then I tried an old technique that no longer works around modern wives, but still works around mothers: the old indirect request."

"Hey," I said. "Is there any Coke in the house?"

"Stay right there," said my mother. "I'll get you one."

She brought it a moment later. After a few minutes, I tried it again.

"And do we have any fruit?" She brought a bowl big enough for the whole table.

Instead of spooning some onto my plate, I began to spear pieces right out of the bowl.

Again, that would not go over well in my own home. Here, well, this was my mother.

She pushed the bowl closer to me. "Take more cantaloupe pieces," she said. "They're good for you."

It pretty much went that way the whole week.

Each morning, when I wanted breakfast, I'd simply say: "Are there any English muffins?" They'd be in front of me in four minutes. At night, watching a video, I'd try something similar. "Do we have any popcorn?" I'd ask. That only took three minutes. I don't think I had to go in the kitchen once all week.

Finally, it was time to leave. My mother sent me on my way with the names of several doctors and orders to eat more.

We got back home that night. We unpacked, then sat down in the living room to read. Out of habit, I looked at my wife.

"Is there any Coke in the house?" I said.

She did not look up from her magazine. "You'll find it in the kitchen," she said.

I was 37 again.

Skirmishes ignite over farm legislation

Kansas City Star

Clayton Yeutter, agriculture secretary, is out making the rounds for support of the Bush administration's farm spending plan for next fiscal year.

But he doesn't offer specifics about the proposed $1.5 billion in cuts in commodity programs.

Those cuts would translate into less money in subsidy programs for farmers, so it is no wonder that farm-state lawmakers have reacted from hesitancy to downright opposition to the proposal.

Government spending for farm programs is not the big troublemaker in the federal budget crisis that critics would have the public believe.

However, it is clear that there has to be some critique of these programs occasionally to ke-things from getting out of hand.

And there has to be a balance of interests between those of market orientation who want to wipe out all farm support programs across the board and those who think that this is the way it always has been, and so should continue to be.

Yeutter has proposed eliminating the federal crop insurance program which doesn't work because Congress keeps overriding it.

Every time there is a drought or other disaster, Congress kicks in extra payments to hard-hit farmers.

That makes little reason for farmers to buy crop insurance. A permanent disaster payment program might work better, at less cost to taxpayers.

On the plus side of the department's proposals are plans to give farmers more planting flexibility so that they can switch crops and still qualify for assistance.

Also, Yeutter has called for broadening and extending the conservation reserve, into which farmers commit to keep land free from production for 10 years as a soil-saving effort.

Less appealing is a call for limits on loans under the Farmers Home Administration, which could penalize farmers who borrow under this lender of last resort.

None of these proposals translates into a big change in current agriculture policy for the 1990 Food Security Act, which will replace the 1985 farm bill. But the skirmishes have begun.

Letters

Bible considered old folklore, not fact

Michael, how can you tell newcomers of the Bible to look at the New Testament first, when what seems to be the most important question is found in the beginning:

Where did we come from? Nearly everyone recognizes the beginning of Genesis that goes "In the beginning..." Here, there are already problems on the first two pages. It just so happens that there are two creations, one right after the other and both contradicting each others order of creation!

The first narrative begins with the creation of light on the first day, leading up to the sixth day where man and woman are created lastly. Right after the paragraph about the blessing of the seventh day, the writers begin with another creation story! But this time, man (Adam) is created from the dust of the Earth first, before anything else (except dust of course).

Notice that here, man is created first whereas in the previous story, man is created last. Which are you to believe?

Is this enough? I did not think so. So tell me, where did Cain, Adam and Eve's first son, get his wife from? I don't know either, but the other week this guy named Chris came up to me and introduced himself. I noticed he carried a well paged Bible and so I knew he must be a good person to ask this question to. He thought about it awhile as I decided to ride off to my next class and then all of the sudden he comes running around the corner of Faner to catch up with me just to say: "From Abel's Daughter! From Abel's Daughter!"

That was good, I never thought of this, so I looked it up. If you don't remember, Cain killed his younger brother Abel the paragraph before Cain himself even had a wife. Abel never had a daughter in the first place.

Still not enough? O.K., how is it that Noah's Ark, being 150 yards long, 25 yards wide and 15 yards tall hold all the kinds of animals on Earth? There are alone some 44,000 species of vertebrates today extant. I don't see how they all could fit in something that isn't even as long as two football fields.

I also wonder why the many species of termites didn't eat the ark. And if the world flooded, then what happened to all the fresh water fishes? They certainly must have died from saltwater invading their pristine waters, or did Noah's ark have a huge goldfish bowl in it, holding every kind of freshwater fish found throughout the world, and marveled in comparison the greatest aquariums of today.

Remember that the Earth has plants too, did Noah collect arctic willows and lichen?

I just don't see how some people can follow this book of folklore as fact. After all, it was written before the English language.—James Miller, junior, zoology.

Helmet laws result of 'would-be dictators' views

I am sick and tired of listening to people (mostly non-motorcyclists) advocate helmet laws. In the Feb. 15 edition of the DE, the DE board cited two reasons for its support of a helmet law in Illinois.

The first and most obvious reason is that helmets save lives. I agree with this, but that does not mean that mandatory helmet laws are the best solution. I believe that increased education and stricter licensing standards are the best route. A motorcycle rider safety course should be required for anyone seeking a motorcycle license. This would help to ensure that riders have more of the necessary collision avoidance and basic riding skills essential to staying alive in traffic. A safety course would also ensure that all motorcycle riders know the value of safety equipment and practices and could therefore make informed decisions on their own.

The other reason the DE board gives for its support of helmet laws is that all taxpayers bear the burden of paying for medical care for unhelmeted riders injured in accidents.

Unfortunately for the DE Board, this claim has no substance and has not been backed up by statistics or facts.

Considering that over half of all motorcycle accidents are caused by the driver of another vehicle, it seems to me that the best course of action would be to properly train drivers and implement stricter testing standards for licensing.

I realize that helmets save lives. Regardless of this, I sometimes choose to ride without a helmet simply because I enjoy it.

I would appreciate all of you would-be dictators keeping your noses out of my freedom and pleasure.—Robert Weibler, architect.

Rain no excuse to ditch alternate transportation

Your front-page photo of a rain-soaked bicycle was captioned "should have drove" (Feb. 16). Disregarding your folksy grammar, I was disturbed because rain should not daunt bicyclists. Everybody knows that when it rains parking on campus is an incredible pain in the neck. Then more than ever, we should encourage alternative means of transportation.

If SIU had more covered areas for bike parking then bicyclists could travel between the showers. On really gross days, people should have emergency carpool plans - a neighbor with a similar schedule.

The solution to SIU's perennial parking problem is not more parking lots.

It is a many pronged attack that includes encouraging bicycling, walking, carpooling and public transportation.

Captions that make motoring the only option send the wrong message—Sarah Heyer, graduate student, education.

Riding helmetless indescribable feeling, but risky

Riding a motorcycle without a helmet is an indescribable feeling of freedom and most riders say you haven't lived until you feel the wind in your hair.

Also, a majority agree that it is worth the risk, as stupid as that sounds. It is very hard to explain why we ride without a helmet, but why do you smoke, drink, get high or just get plain stupid sometimes.

Riding without a helmet is just one of life's risky decisions we all have to make.

I think I speak for most risk-taking, idiotic, helmetless motorcyclists when I say to you, the concerned:

Until you have your opportunity to look down at me in my casket and say "I told you so," leave me alone.—George Meredith Jr., senior, finance.

Perrier recall strikes terror in hearts of socialites

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Chic fetes on both chic coasts were disrupted by the Great Perrier Recall. The yuppie drink of choice was found to be contaminated with benzene — a most plebian, not to mention dangerous, substance. Hostesses, such as Sally Quinn, found themselves in a dither. Should they lie and tell their guests they were sipping Saratoga water? "I think the answer is yes," said Ms. Quinn.

It was bad enough that one cultural icon of the '80s was going down the drain. But then the news came that Donald and Ivana Trump, the Ken and Barbie of the acquisitive set, are getting a divorce. The self-effacing Mr. Trump explained that Mrs. Trump's "arrogance" was getting out of hand; he feared, he said, that she was turning into another Leona Helmsley. On the other side of the divide, Mrs. Trump's lawyers expressed outrage at Mr. Trump's stinginess. How did he think he could get away with a measly $20 million settlement?

The only good news on the status symbol front came from Aspen, whose citizens upheld the right — or more accurately, the privilege — of buying fur coats. Unfortunately, though, the winners probably could not toast their victory with Perrier.

The Perrier crisis, the Trump divorce and even the Drexel Burnham Lambert bankruptcy may contain a lesson for the rich and famous and their wannabes. They reveal the shallowness of the '80s first and only commandment: thou shalt have money for all to see. Money may buy tiny bottles of water but not health; money may buy real estate and designer dresses but not love and happiness, and money may buy junk bonds but not social wealth. In 1990, the bubble has burst.

As long as Carbondale permits underage drinkers on premises of liquor establishments, overoccupancy problems will continue, he said.

Carbondale city code requires all public establishments to adhere to their legal capacity limits, determined by a formula in the Basic National Building Codes, which Carbondale has adopted.

A bar found guilty for violating its legal occupancy limit could be fined $10 to $500.

City Council member John Mills said the law doesn't seem to address the problem with overoccupancy.

"I'm not sure the law is dealing that well with reality. The burden is put on the owner, but the students are running the doors," Mills said. "People want to go where people are. There's not really an answer."

Councilman Richard Morris, however, said the responsibility for controlling the number of patrons rests on the bar owners.

"It's the city's responsibility to enforce that," he said. "But, I don't think the city is responsible for having staff stationed in the businesses to keep them within their capacities."

Councilmen John Yow and Keith Tuxhorn said neither the Carbondale Liquor Commission nor the City Council has received any reports about problems with overoccupancy in the bars.

"Personally speaking, I've seen big crowds down there. I guess I've been naive enough to assume (the managers) were observing the limits," Tuxhorn said.

three Andean nations offered new prospects that the drug war has shifted to consumer nations.

Londono also proposed establishing a U.N. working group for a "faithful analysis" of problems of drug consumption.

"There has been a global recognition of problems related to consumption, which is a determining factor in the fight against drugs," Londono said. "The determined struggle on the part of some countries to fight the supply of drugs will serve no purpose if no action is taken to discourage consumption. The recent Cartagena meeting offered signs of this hope."

Bush met last Thursday with Presidents Alan Garcia of Peru, Virgilio Barco of Colombia and Jaime Paz Zamora of Bolivia to draw up measures against the drug cartels and help coca growers find substitute crops.

Londono said the United Nations should draft legislation to protect judges handling drug cases, provide rehabilitation programs and educate young addicts.

Ray Burke, the minister of justice from Ireland, speaking on behalf of the 12-nation European Community, said drug trafficking and its social and economic ramification threatened to destabilize democratic governments.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar called on the scores of foreign ministers and interior or justice ministers attending the U.N. special session to agree on strategies for a "clear-cut" global program of action against the traffic of illicit drugs.

homes. In order to accommodate wheelchair users, expensive elevators and lifts would have to be installed.

"The city has been very observant of handicapped accessibility and all of the city buildings are accessible for wheelchair users," Dillard said.

City Manager Steve Hoffer said the city had no plans to finance a Bed and Breakfast Inn, but if the city did so it would try to make it accessible to all community members.

The council also voted unanimously to not charge any licensing fees on the inns.

Dillard said the council may want to consider putting a licensing fee on the inns in the future, but no constraints should be put on the inns at present.

Additional council action included implementing a landscape waste management and curbside recycling program.

To comply with the new state laws, the city must implement a program to provide that landscape waste, which includes leaves, grass clippings and woody material, may not be mixed with other materials intended for landfills.

The city staff proposed a plan to require all residents to separate landscape materials from other trash by identifying landscape bags with stickers.

Director of Community Development Don Monty said there would be a size requirements on the bags going to compost facilities.

The $175,570 project must be ready for implementation by July 1 to comply with state laws.

Wednesday before heading to New York.

Bush, acting on the recommendation of Secretary of State James Baker who visited Prague two weeks ago, took the occasion to announce that he had notified Congress of his formal waiver of the Jackson-Vanik trade restrictions that will lower tariffs on Czechoslovakian products.

"Mr. President, you have not asked for American aid, economic aid, and you've made it clear that democratic Czechoslovakia wants the opportunity to do business on an equal footing," he said in announcing his action.

Raymond Seitz, assistant secretary of state for Europe and Canadian affairs, said later that in addition to granting Czechoslovakia most-favored-nation trading status, Bush also informed Havel the United States would support letting his country participate in other U.S. and international lending institutions.

although he predicted most workers would be back by early next week.

About 30 mines, mostly in Virginia, were affected by the strike.

The Pittston won concessions to operate its mines around the clock but miners won on the issues of pensions and health benefits. Odom said the agreement will "open up markets that were previously closed to us because of cost constraints."

Odom, who chastised the union frequently during the strike for alleged violent acts, also acknowledged that it will take time to heal bad feelings generated by the walkout.

Odom said he plans to ask Usery and others to work with both sides in establishing a new post-strike relationship.

"A lot of times when two tough kids on the block have a fight, they end up becoming best friends when it is over," said Odom. Asked what advice he would give to other companies in similar situations, he said, "Put yourself in the other person's shoes, look at their needs, and be innovative."

"I think three years from now they (UMW) will be stronger" as a result of this contract, he said.

ROGER KABLER

Wednesday February 21 9:00 pm

Student Center Big Muddy Room
Admission: $2.00

Roger Kabler is a comedy whirlwind. His uncanny celebrity impressions coupled with an offbeat, bizarre style has quickly made him into being one of the most talked about new comedy performers on the New York scene to date. He has appeared on Comic Strip live on Fox Television. The New York Post says "easily the best new act of the year." No stranger to show business, Roger began his career in the theatre, with over thirty plays to his credit. He recently switched gears to embark on a journey into the strange world of stand-up comedy. Stopping along the way to film the title role in the feature film "LAUGHING MAN" & the comedy pilot "HAT FACTORY," which both aired in the spring of '89. You can catch his frenetic & highly inventive brand of humor at CAROLINES, STAND UP NEW YORK, CATCH A RISING STAR & THE COMIC STRIP.

Reading workshop Saturday features prominent writers

By Jerianne Kimmel
Staff Writer

David Melton, author and illustrator, and novelist J. Richard Russo, associate professor of English at SIU-C, will lead a reading workshop on campus Saturday.

Melton, author of 18 books, several of which he also illustrated, has taught children how to write and illustrate their own books through his "Written and Illustrated By" workshops in the past. Melton will present a similar workshop tailored for adults Saturday.

Russo, whose novels include "The Risk Pool" and "Mohawk," will read from his work and hold a question-and-answer session afterward.

The sessions by Melton and Russo are part of the Southern Illinois Reading Council's spring workshop on "Writing as a Part of the Overall Reading Program."

The program is open to the public and will appeal to anyone interested in children, said Joyce Guyon, president-elect of the council, which serves all of Southern Illinois.

"We think parents, reading specialists, reading teachers, classroom teachers, administrators and anyone else interested and concerned about reading will enjoy the program," Guyon said.

The sessions will include tips for helping beginning readers as well as advice for college-level students in all areas of reading and writing, Guyon said.

The program will begin at 8 a.m. in the Student Center's Fourth Floor Video Lounge and will end at about 3 p.m. Participants will be free to come and go as they wish, but must pay the $5.50 registration fee, which includes a continental breakfast and lunch.

Melton works as the creative coordinator at Landmark Editions, a publishing company in Kansas City, Mo. Melton helps stories by children and young adults see print. Melton said he thinks kids need a chance to be creative.

"You don't know where that best book will come from," Melton said.

The books by young authors compete in reviews with adult work, Melton said.

Melton said he searches for subjects that demand a unique approach and that each of his works has a distinct personality.

"I discover the personality in each book and develop that personality," Melton said. "I never try to use one overall style. I think that's why I've been published in so many different genres."

Russo's "The Risk Pool" was nominated for the Pulitzer Prize for fiction and is a Book-of-the-Month Club and Quality Paperback Book Club selection. It recently won the Society of Midland Authors' Award for adult fiction.

Russo has taken a year-long leave of absence from teaching to work on another novel.

Both authors will sell and autograph their books at the workshop.

Advance registration for the workshop must be made by Thursday. Anyone can register by sending their name, address, telephone number and a check, payable to the Southern Illinois Reading Council, to Guyon at R.R. 4, Carbondale, Ill. Interested persons can call Guyon for details at 893-2311 during the day or at 549-4094 during the evening.

The workshop is presented by the Southern Illinois Reading Council in conjunction with and co-sponsored by the Egyptian Educational Service Center #18, the Clinical Center of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, and the Literacy Council of Southern Illinois.

GPSC resolution targets extension of Student Health Advisory Board

By Richard Hund
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council will discuss a resolution that the Student Health Advisory Board become a year-round committee at the council's 7 p.m. meeting today.

The committee, currently operating nine months a year, should expand because "important student Health Service decisions can be made in the summer without student input," GPSC president Charles Ramsey said.

The resolution states that "policy decisions with lasting impact" have been made in previous summer semesters with "minimal student input." The resolution also states that other student constituency boards exist on a year-round basis. "Students should have a voice in the decision-making process throughout the year," Ramsey said.

GPSC also will ratify election commissioners to work GPSC and Student Trustee elections. Election dates will be decided according to the GPSC constitution.

Glass, plastic recycling rates could jump with new system

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

Illinois' glass and plastic recycling rates could get a boost because of a new system that separates recyclable containers by color.

The Illinois Department of Energy and Natural Resources released the results of a research project on a new system that mechanically separates the containers.

The system uses an optical sensor system and diverting device that is capable of distinguishing between clear and color containers without the removal of labels or caps.

Karen Witter, ENR director, said the new system saves time and labor for recycling centers and minimizes the manual labor requirements for sorting and processing containers to make them market-ready.

The University of Illinois' Department of Mechanical and Industrial Engineering conducted the research on the project through a grant awarded to it by the ENR. The money came from revenues generated through a surcharge on materials disposed in Illinois landfills.

Witter said the successful research may lead to an almost 50-percent reduction in processing costs for recyclable glass containers.

"The information gained from the Clear/Color Container Sorting System project is an indication that our solid waste management program is innovative and feasible," Witter said.

Tim Warren, head of ENR's solid waste program, said the device achieved an exceptionally high separation success rate, while developing impressive container-handling capacities for both glass and plastic containers.

Warren said the research conducted by the U of I was only the first phase of the overall project. ENR will fund the development of the second phase, the installation and operation at recycling centers in Illinois.

Study reveals student awareness of pressing environmental issues

By Phil Pearson
Staff Writer

America's college students take environmental issues seriously, a recently released survey revealed.

The survey, commissioned by the National Wildlife Federation, found that 94 percent of the students in the survey were willing to pay more to purchase environmentally safe products and packaging.

Conducted by Hughes Research Corp. of Rockville, Md., the telephone survey tested the opinions of 500 students between 17 and 24 years of age. Brian Reger, senior project director at Hughes, said 11 schools with 3,000 or fewer students, 28 schools with 3,000 to 15,000 students and 11 schools with more than 15,000 students were chosen for the survey last fall. Ten students from each school were chosen at random from the school's telephone directory, he said.

No SIU students were surveyed.

Reger claims the survey is accurate within plus or minus 5 percent with a 95 percent level of confidence.

Among other student responses in the survey:

- 75 percent believe recycling of cans, bottles and newspapers should be required by law.

- Air pollution was considered the most urgent environmental problem with 23 percent of the students responding while 20 percent felt ozone depletion was of the utmost concern.

- 66 percent of the students felt that industry is more concerned with the environment than five years ago, but 76 percent of the students are way ahead of most of America.

"We think that students are more concerned than the general public," he said.

This hypothesis, Reger said, simply comes from experience with a variety of polls and surveys he has been involved in.

One thing Reger said he found interesting is that 60 percent of the students felt that the responsibility of protecting the environment belongs to "all of us" with only 24 percent placing responsibility of the federal government.

Former stage actor to perform at Comedy Cellar

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

If you were expecting to see Denis Leary at tonight's Comedy Cellar, you are in for an unexpected, but pleasant surprise.

Leary had to cancel his appearance because he signed a deal to film a television pilot program for CBS. Taking his place will be Roger Kabler, a young stand-up comedian who does impressions of famous people.

Jason Soloman, president of Pull Circle Management and Kabler's agent said Kabler started doing comedy about two years ago. Kabler has previously acted in more than 40 plays and stage productions.

"He was a frustrated, out-of-work actor who turned to comedy," Soloman said. "He has really come a long way. Last year he was billed as the best new act of 1989 by the New York Times."

Kabler's list of credits don't stop there. Soloman said Kabler has been a featured performer on MTV's Remote Control, filmed two comedy pilot programs —

"Laughing Man" and "Hat Factory," performed on many cable comedy shows, and auditioned for a spot on Saturday Night Live.

"(Kabler is) sort of like an underground Rich Little," Soloman said. "He does lots of impressions, a social comic." Soloman said one of Kabler's routines pokes fun at the Oscar awards.

Kabler will appear at the Comedy Cellar at 9 p.m. tonight in the Big Muddy Room, Student Center. Admission is $2.

Band from Michigan leaves home to perform first out-of-state tour

By Jeanne Bickler
Entertainment Editor

The Mick Furlo Band was granted a furlough from its home state of Michigan to perform live in Carbondale tonight.

This will mark the band's first extensive out-of-state tour. Judging by the awards the band has received, Michigan will miss the Mick Furlo Band in its absence.

In 1988 the band received an award labeling it the best band in the Bay Area, a multi-city region in Michigan of more than a half million people. In addition to this award, the lead vocalist and bass player took second place as best male vocalist and best bass player, respectively.

ents. He is the lead vocalist, keyboardist and rhythm guitarist for the band.

Bassist Rick Brown is considered one of Michigan's most talented bassists, as rated by Review Magazine.

Lead guitarist Steve McComb and drummer Doug O'Conner round out the band's full sound.

The band's first album "Invisible to You" enjoyed much local success in Michigan. The first track off the album, "Let It Rain," sounds a little like the early efforts of the popular English band, the Cure.

The band also plays non-traditional cover songs and takes its playlist from such artists as U2, R.E.M., Living Colour and Los Lobos.

The Mick Furlo Band will perform live at 9 p.m. tonight at Gatsby's.

Grammy Awards expected to offer no big surprises

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences has swelled its ranks with thousands of young members, including rappers and heavy metal rockers, but Grammy Award winners continue to reflect the organization's conservative nature.

When the 32nd annual Grammy Awards are handed out Wednesday night, there are expected to be few, if any, real surprises. Those nominated in the four major pop categories are all commercial successes, most of whom also have won critical acclaim.

Since it was established in 1958, the academy has gradually enlisted new, young members, growing from 5,000 in 1985 to 8,000 today and ensuring that innovative rock artists get nominated in major categories.

Almost every year, performers on the cutting edge fail to win a majority of the academy's votes.

UCLA Bruins aren't meeting 'Wizard of Westwood' legacy

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Fifteen seasons since John Wooden retired, the rollercoaster UCLA has been riding shows no signs of settling down.

Whenever the Bruins appear to be reaching toward the Top 20 consistency their fans should reasonably expect, the program falters.

It happened again this month, and it might cost the Bruins an NCAA berth.

Three weeks ago, UCLA was 14-3 and had the edge in the Pacific-10 after knocking off Oregon State. The Bruins now are 16-7 and all but out of the league race heading into a two-game trip to Oregon and a rematch with the Beavers. They have lost four of their last six overall, and four of their five within the Pac-10 to fall to 9-5 and fourth place.

"I thought this game would be a big factor in the league race," Bruins Coach Jim Harrick said of the Oregon State rematch on Saturday. "But the most important thing for us now is to start playing well again. We're just fighting for our lives right now."

AFTER LOSING in 25-year-old Pauley Pavilion for the first time ever to both California and Stanford last week, the Bruins suddenly and unexpectedly find themselves clawing for a spot in the NCAA Tournament.

The Pac-10 doesn't have a good track record in recent NCAA playoffs, so there is doubt whether the league can expect the four or five spots common to the more powerful conferences.

After losing in 25-year-old Pauley Pavilion for the first time ever to both California and Stanford last week, the Bruins suddenly find themselves clawing for an NCAA tournament berth.

Oregon State and Arizona, the Pac-10 leaders, are certainly safe, and California has moved past UCLA in the league standings and probably the computer rankings. The Bears, who haven't been in the tournament since finishing second in 1960 — one year after they won the national title — have won five games in a row and play three of their last four at home, starting with an attention-getter against Arizona Wednesday.

OTHER THREATS to UCLA are Oregon, which can tie the Bruins for fourth when they play Thursday, and Stanford, which swept UCLA this year and plays three of its last four at home, where the Cardinal's only loss this season was a one-point decision against Oregon State.

An NIT trip would be no consolation for UCLA, which got to the second round of the big show a year ago and recruited a solid freshman class to go with four returning starters. Those factors, combined with the team's success through January, caused many to suggest that, while UCLA wasn't ready for another string of championships, it was finally ready to take up regular residence in the list of contenders.

But within the last month, the Bruins have lost their shooting touch. They shot 39 percent at Arizona, 41 versus California and 40.7 against Stanford in the last three games.

THEIR OFFENSE is so stagnant and predictable they struggle to get good shots, much less make them, and Harrick's inability to find adjustments has been increasingly noted.

"When things aren't going well, we've got to execute better," said Harrick, in his second year as the sixth coach since Wooden. "And the second half of the league is the toughest time to execute because everybody knows how to play you."

UCLA's offense also has been slowed by an injury to senior forward Trevor Wilson, who fell and sprained his right wrist at Southern Cal in a loss that started the team slump. Wilson re-injured the wrist Sunday against Stanford, though he continued to play after a brief icing.

NEVER A good outside shooter, Wilson isn't making his inside shots as easily, and he's been under 50 percent from the foul line since the injury.

Even with those problems, Wilson remains a first option at crunch time. But he didn't deliver against Stanford, missing a driving shot with seven seconds left, then one of two free throws with four seconds to go in what was a one-point loss.

"We've got to get Trevor back (playing well)," said Harrick. "You don't want to depend on one player so much, but it seems like the way he goes, so goes our team."

Right now, the direction for both Wilson and the Bruins is an up-and-down, unpredictable one, something even long-time UCLA fans ought to be getting used to after 15 years.

Drake basketball coach resigns; assistant fired

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI)—Drake basketball head coach Tom Abatemarco resigned Tuesday and the university fired assistant coach Tom Butler for misconduct in the wake of an internal probe into NCAA rules violations.

Drake President Michael Ferrari said the investigation instigated by complaints from players found that Butler had written term papers for at least two members of the Drake basketball team during the fall and that Butler had tried to influence a witness in the investigation.

The three-member Drake panel also found Butler refused to cooperate in the probe.

Ferrari said the report found Abatemarco, a former assistant at North Carolina State and head coach at Lamar, had no personal knowledge of the NCAA rules violations but concluded he failed to monitor his program and the actions of coaches.

The internal probe also substantiated allegations Abatemarco used language and conduct that were demeaning to members of the Bulldog team, coaches and trainers, Ferrari said.

Abatemarco was reassigned to new duties within the athletic department two weeks ago when the entire basketball team threatened to boycott games unless Abatemarco was removed.

Assistant coach Eddie Fields, an Oklahoma player and former Harlem Globetrotter, has served as interim coach.

Ferrari said Fields will continue as interim coach for now. Drake has gone 1-3 since he took the helm.

way affiliated with SIU. On April 21 the club will sponsor a bench pressing competition. This is open to everyone.

"Our main goal is to make all of our competitions here at SIU drug-free," weightlifting club advisor Dominic Cittadino said. "We proved to everyone that we could run a drug-tested meet this past fall so we intend to try to continue this."

Cittadino hopes to see the Mr. and Ms. SIU meet be drug-free in 1991.

Allemand mentioned one of the benefits he has gotten from being in the club was meeting new people who shared common interests.

"The club provides a great way to meet and talk to people who have been lifting for a while and know something about lifting," he said. "They can help you set up a program or improve an existing program. They can answer questions about lifting techniques and which exercises work which muscles."

"Most importantly we try to have fun. We are serious about what we are doing, but we always try to remember to have a good time."

The weightlifting club was founded in 1973 by Roger Poppen, who was a world renown Olympic weightlifter. Poppen is a professor in SIU-C's rehabilitation department.

Poppen is still involved with weightlifting. He is presently competing in the Masters program.

road in the same evening. Illinois State lost to Valley doormat Indiana State to open its league season.

All told, SIU-C, Creighton and Illinois State have suffered 10 of their 11 conference losses on the road.

The Salukis learn from their mistakes and have rebounded from every loss this season with a win.

The Salukis started out their Valley season 0-2 with losses to Illinois State and Drake and looked as though they might tumble out of the starting gate. But the Dawgs bounced back and overcame adversity by winning their next four Valley games, six straight overall, before losing a close game, 80-77, on the road to Bradley.

In the Valley tournament, there is not a home-court advantage for any of the teams with the exception of Illinois State, who hosts the tourney in Normal. The home court advantage might not always be a factor as the host last season, Wichita State, fell in the first round of the tournament.

What is the difference between this year's team and last year's team that won 20 games and failed in its quest for an NCAA bid? The 1988-89 Salukis were content with a winning season, something the Salukis had only seen once in the previous 10 years. This year, the Salukis have vowed not to fall short of anything short of the conference crown and a NCAA tournament bid.

This year's Salukis are mentally and physically stronger and even though they can't win every game, now is when they must play their best basketball to accomplish the things they've set their sights on.

The players have been talking about winning the Valley crown since before the season opening tipoff against Chicago State — now they have to back that talk with three straight wins for the crown and three more in the conference tourney for an NCAA bid.

tournament bid. The Salukis are two-and-a-half games behind league-leading Southwest Missouri (13-2) and one game behind second-place Illinois State (11-3). The top 4 regular season finishers advance to the conference tournament.

Cyd Mitchell

The Salukis have four Gateway games remaining on their schedule. After playing Wichita State Thursday, the Salukis battle the first-place Bears at the Arena Saturday.

SIU-C ends the regular season at Illinois State Feb. 28 and at Indiana State Mar. 2.
