- '91 enrollment down for SIUC
  - By Natalie Boehme
  - Staff Writer
  - Freshmen and sophomores are becoming scarcer around campus, according to spring enrollment figures.
  - Compared to spring 1990 figures, on-campus freshman enrollment of students decreased by 899 and sophomore enrollment decreased by 298 for the spring 1991 semester.
  - On-campus spring enrollment totals 20,367 students, a drop of 203 from the same period a year ago. The 1 percent decrease is the first drop in spring enrollment since 1986.
  - The Office of Admissions and Records compares enrollment by semester at the same time of the year instead of back-to-back semesters.
  - Fall and spring semesters always vary from one another, said Barney K. Browning, director for admissions and records.
  - Browning said the drop from 1990, in which there are fewer entry-level college age students. The SIUC administration has seen enrollment drop from 8 percent from 1989.

  - Enemy casualties could be twice allies.
    - U.S. bombing is one of the issues that could be expected to increase as many as 15 Iraqi bunkers inside Iraq.
    - Unfortunately, about 600 Iraqi soldiers surrendered to the four choppers that had been sent back to help pick up the POWs.
    - The incident related to military briefings was one of at least five skirmishes between coalition and enemy forces that resulted in the American killed in action, seven were wounded and at least 33 Iraqi and 23 artillery pieces destroyed. So far, a total of 20 Americans have been killed, 29 were listed as missing and nine have been identified as prisoners of war.

  - A ground war in the Persian Gulf may come very soon because of deteriorating weather conditions in the Middle East.
  - David Bongard, military researcher for the Historic Evaluation Research Organization and Trevor N. Dupay Associates state U.S. casualties could range from a loss of 1,200 to a high of 3,500.
  - Bongard, of HERO and TND Associates and co-author of "If War Comes, How to Defeat Saddam Hussein," said Iraq would lose three to four times as many troops as the U.N. Coalition forces, of which the United States could be expected to have twice as many casualties as the other Allied nations.
  - "Allied casualties will run about half of American losses," Bongard said.
  - Estimates vary depending on the type of attack used by the forces, but Bongard said he couldn’t foresee the Coalition Forces losing a ground war.
  - "We could mop up the Iraqi troops in Kuwait in two or three weeks," he said.
  - The question then would be whether to send troops into Iraq to pursue the issue, he said.
  - Coalition troops move on Baghdad, the war could be drawn out longer, Bongard said.

- Energy policy to downplay conservation
  - WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush acknowledged there would be "critics in every corner," proposed a national energy strategy Wednesday that favors increasing oil drilling, nuclear power and alternative fuels while avoiding major new conservation requirements.
  - The key elements of the long-awaited plan include opening up new oil fields in Alaska and off the U.S. coastline, speeding federal licensing of nuclear power plants, deregulating natural gas and oil pipelines, and expanding use of cleaner-burning alternative fuels by cars.
  - Bush's blueprint also contained numerous energy policy to downplay conservation measures.

Athletics investigating alleged racial slurs incident

By Eric Bugger and Cyndi Oberle
Staff Writer

The SIUC athletics department is conducting an investigation into alleged racial slurs directed at Drake basketball coach Roddy Washington when his team played in the Arena. SIUC was one of three schools alleged to have targeted racial slurs at Washington. The remarks at SIUC were allegedly made by Arena fans Jan. 26 when Drake lost 82-62 to the Salukis.

SIUC Athletics Director Jim Hanrath went against Bradley Feb. 7. Washington's characterization was one of three schools makes a combination of things happen," SIUC coach Rich Herrin said. "Some of the things fans yell are fine, but some of it is probably out of place. I think if it is meant to be abusive, there is no place for it in this game of sports." Creighton coach Tony Barone has traveled with his team all over the country this season and he notices a growing trend in fan abuse.

"It is a sensitive issue that needs to be addressed," Barone said. "We're always talking about sportsmanship on the court. I think the fans around the country should start taking a lesson in sportsmanship in terms of the way they treat people. I think fans can be enthusiastic without being abusive."

Illinois State coach Bob Bender said a racial slur during the first half. It was sad that he had to leave the game with Washington's team because of an injury. Bender was not aware of the allegations. Herrin said the SIUC would not tolerate any abuse of teams in any of the Valley areas.

The Valley administrators will handle any problems that turn up, English said.

Saluki women need win to stay in race

Northern Iowa comes to Arena tonight to take on 16-7 SIUC

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team's plan for its four remaining Gateway Conference games is simple. Win every one of them.

That's basically what the Salukis have to do if they want to repeat as conference champions. Because losses last week to Illinois State and Creighton last week, SIUC is one game behind Southwest Missouri State.

We be back-to-back losses dropped the 'Salukis to 11-3 in the Gateway and 6-7 overall. The final game will be at SIUC in a winner-take-all game, against Southwest on March 4.

The look better for the squad tonight. It takes a medium University. UNI is now 6-7 in the Gateway and 16-7 at the Arena. The Par was easy for the Salukis, better earlier meeting this season. SIUC, pummelled UNI 74-65 at the Salukis had their best shooting day of the season, hitting 62 percent from the field. They shot at UNI could 16 points a game.

With the pressure of having to win the remainder of its slate, Head Coach Cindy Scott said she is trying to keep her team relaxed and trying to stress the fundamentals.

"The big thing is we want to regroup confidence after the two losses," Scott said. "We're trying to keep it upbeat in practice and relax. We've got to keep getting better. We need to go back to playing to our potential and concentrate on the fundamentals.

Women's track challenge ISU at first for conference

By Cyndi Oberle
Staff Writer

The SIUC women's track and field team is vying for first place against Illinois State this weekend at the conference championships. The Salukis travel to Cedar Falls, Iowa, Friday night to defend their second place Gateway Conference title. If they are successful, it could be their fourth indoor conference title in five years. In a recent Gateway Conference poll, SIUC was ranked second while Illinois State took the lead. Western Illinois State was close behind third.

"It may look like an insurmountable lead on their (ISU's) part, but we are not going to lose the meet based on paper statistics," women's track and field coach Don DeNooen said. "They are going to have to rise to their best performances to beat us." DeNooen said about conference meets coaches should always be aware of the unexpected because any team could win the championship.

"Last year at conference, we had people score from us who we did not even expect it from," DeNooen said. "I feel we have the potential of a lot of people rising to the occasion and having their season's best performance.

Hochertz trying to tackle NFL dream

By Paul Pabst
Staff Writer

In the movie "Wall Street," Charlie Sheen's character said, "Life all comes down to a few moments. and this is one of them." Salukis senior football player Marty Hochertz just had one of them.

Earlier in February, the 6-foot, 250-pound Hochertz put his skills on display for scouts from every NFL team at the three-day NFL Combine Workouts in Indianapolis. In the film, "combines," as most players call them, are a showcase for more than 350 prospects. It's the chance for the best to show why they are the best and for the unknowns to make names for themselves.

Marty Hochertz

"I found out I was invited just three days after Christmas," Hochertz said. "That was a pretty nice present. I had told an agent who told me to keep an eye on the mail for the letter and that got me thinking about it, but I didn't know for sure.

One thing Hochertz did know for sure was that he was going to combine. After seeing the 40-yard dash, trying to bench press 225 pounds as many times as he could and doing agility drills. When he returned to school, Hochertz knew he was in shape and ready. When he began to prepare, sprinting and practicing with 225 pounds, usually four times a week.

"He (Hochertz) was excited to go," SIUC head coach Ken Summers said. "But he was kind of quiet, not bragging or anything. The combine isn't a do-or-die thing." Hochertz get his first taste of the NFL dream.

French official: Deadline set for starting allied ground war

PAA-7 (UPI) — The allies have given Iraqi President Saddam Hussein until Thursday evening to declare an unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait, French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas was quoted as saying Wednesday. Dumas said his comments before the Security Council. Jean Lecanuet, president of the French Senate Foreign Affairs committee, said Dumas indicated to his committee that if Iraq made such a declaration "the road would be open to a cease-fire," but "otherwise weapons would be called to decide the debate."

Germany budgets $7 million in aid to allies

BONN, Germany (UPI) — Germany’s first budget since unification last October will amount to more than $355 billion, including more than $7 billion for the Persian Gulf war, Bonn officials said Wednesday. Finance Minister Theo Waigel presented the 1991 budget proposal to the cabinet Wednesday but did not include changes on how much would be raised in planned tax hikes. "Tax increases here have not dissuaded so far," government spokesman Dietrich Vogel said. "But there was agreement on the total budget and on the individual budgets."

Shevardnadze heads foreign policy group

MOSCOW (UPI) — Eduard Shevardnadze made his first public appearance Wednesday since he resigned as foreign minister, re-emerging as the heir to a new non-governmental foreign policy association. "We will not uplift any instances of departure from new political thinking," Shevardnadze said, but it is unclear what influence the new non-governmental body will have on policy. Shevardnadze, who resigned as foreign minister Dec. 20, said "the threat of dictatorship and civil war remain real if the processes of denazification continue." state

Edgar encourages teachers to train scientists for Illinois

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Illinois schools and businesses must do more to identify and encourage students with scientific aptitude to avoid a "brain drain" as its most talented college graduates move out of state. Gov. Jim Edgar said Wednesday in a Founders Day address at Illinois Wesleyan University in Bloomington, Edgar said the state and nation face a 675,000-person shortfall of people trained in the sciences. Illinois high school and junior high teachers must identify those students early in their academic lives and provide enriched programs for them, he said.

Alcohol spill causes no damage—biologist

KNOXVILLE (UPI) — A state biologist said Wednesday a spill of denatured alcohol into a west-central Illinois creek has not caused any damage to fish or organisms in the water. Ken Russell of the state Department of Conservation’s Fisheries Division inspected Whiskey Creek and said he smelled alcohol but saw no damage or the "sheen" that was spotted by officials immediately after the spill on Sunday. A tanker truck crashed into Interstate 74 near Knoxville on Sunday morning, rupturing the tank and spilling 7,400 gallons of denatured alcohol.

Corrections/Clarifications

The proposed housing rate increase being considered by the Board of Trustees is $112 a year or $56 a semester. The 4-percent increase will cover salary increases, inflation and various projects including a cable system. Air conditioning and heating projects at Evergreen Terrace are not being funded through student dollars. The amount being added to the Evergreen Terrace will add the electricity bill to the individual rent so residents can control their rent through energy conservation. This information was unclear in the Feb. 14 Daily Egyptian.

City to finalize plans for improving square

...downtown: Carbondale could get a face-lift.
The Carbondale City Council will reconvene at 5:30 tonight to discuss improvements on the Town Square, a downtown block that includes some of the oldest buildings in the city.

Tom Redmond, downtown coordinator, said renovation plans for the square originated about two years ago, but designing did not begin until August 1990.
The Town Square is bordered by Jackson Street on the north, Washington Street on the east, Monroe Street on the south and Ilios Avenue on the west.
On it stands the Old Freight Building, built in 1854 by Daniel Brush, the founder of Carbondale. It was built for the arrival of the first train in the city on July 4, 1854.
The council will hear and discuss the findings of an archeological investigation on the building, prepared by American Resources Group, LTD, of Carbondale.
The freight building will be made into an open-air pavilion, Redmond said.

Scientists shift solar panels on overheating space probe

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The Magellan space probe’s two solar panels were repositioned Wednesday to keep hot reflected sunlight off the Venus radar mapper in an ongoing effort to keep the craft from overheating.
The spacecraft recently was ordered to shorten the time spent photographing Venus each orbit with a cloud-piercing radar system to keep critical batteries out of direct sunlight. The change was made after engineers noticed temperatures in the battery compartment were approaching design limits.
But officials at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory said Wednesday the spacecraft was still running hot and that additional measures were necessary.
"We are still in a situation where we are shortening our mapping swath by 10 minutes each orbit," said Magellan engineer Steve Walt. "We’re doing one thing at a time. The solar panels...are reflecting part of the sunlight back onto the equipment bay and adding another source of heat.
"We changed the angle of the solar panels so we get less reflection off the solar panels. That reflection now goes out into space. The price we pay for that is that we are now collecting a little less power."

Tuna tangle

Fish imports embargoed to protect dolphins from nets

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A federal appeals court Wednesday ordered California’s coast to Ensenada, the only port of entry for拴ed tuna, to bar the importation of tuna caught by Mexico’s fleet because it uses nets that kill dolphins in excess of U.S. limits.
The embargo, hotly contested by Mexico and the U.S. Commerce Department, is expected to remain in effect for at least a year while commerce officials collect data on the Mexican fleet’s efforts to reduce the dolphin killing.
The court decision was a "tremendous victory," said Joshua Floum, attorney for Earth Island Institute, which sought to lift a stay imposed on the embargo last year by a federal judge.
"This means all yellowfin tuna is embargoed from Mexico," Floum said. "It sends the correct signal to Mexico that it must cease the slaughter of dolphins."

He said the decision comes as the Mexican fleet will not be able to meet the limit until well into next year.
The dolphin, an air-breathing mammal, swims above schools of tuna. Tuna fishermen have used groups of dolphins as a marker for tuna and set nets over the dolphins.
Large numbers of the dolphins would often drown when they became tangled in the nets or were crushed when the nets were mechanically hauled about the fishing vessels.
The American fleet has shifted largely to dolphin-safe fishing methods and the number of dolphins killed is roughly 13,000 annually, according to Floum.
The Mexican fleet kills an estimated 100,000 dolphins a year.
Drug testing needed to make skies safer

THE SUPREME COURT upheld a federal policy last week to make sure the only "human" flying done by commercial airline pilots is in the air.

About 538,000 airline industry workers, including pilots, cabin crews and air traffic controllers, are subject to random, unannounced urinalysis testing.

But the policy is something some airline workers would like to see grounded.

UNION REPRESENTATIVES contend the 1988 Federal Aviation Administration drug-testing program is unfair because it violates Fourth Amendment protection against unreasonable search and seizure.

But flying a passenger plane while under the influence of some drug is a violation of professional competency.

In 1990, three pilots were convicted of flying operating a 91-passenger Boeing 727 while intoxicated. Had it not been for a customer who happened to see the pilots chugging down beer and mixed drinks hours before the flight, the incident would have gone unreported.

FAA STANDARDS designate that a pilot is not to drink within eight hours of flying or with a blood-alcohol level of .04 or higher. If the FAA feels these standards are important enough to establish, it should be willing to strictly enforce them.

And if pilots value what they do, they should be willing to be subjected to random drug testing.

Constitutional rights concerning the workplace are important to the American culture. But working together to make air travel as safe as possible is important to the safety of thousands who fly the friendly skies everyday.

Attack on International Festival unjustified, factually inaccurate

This letter is in reply to Mr. Bamberger's letter that was published Feb. 14.

I would have been personally pleased to get the opportunity to hear a few unpleasant things about International Festival 1991, but unfortunately none of the accusations were true.

As far as staging the International Festival was concerned, I think there was not a better time to stage this event as it proved that even in a time of war, the international community can interact with each other despite their differences.

My feelings aside, top U.S. dignitaries have praised the International Student Council (ISC) for organizing the festival. These dignitaries include First Lady Barbara Bush, Vice President Dan Quayle and Sire Paul Simon to name only a few.

The letters received from those leading individuals were full of appreciation for the festival and how it promoted global awareness. The letters did not condemn ISC for holding this event.

The International Spouses Group is a part of the International Friends Club and International Friends of the festival.

If you did not know about their presence at the festival, there certainly is a communication problem at your end and not at ISC's.

In your letter you said that ISC and the other international and national bodies didn't give a damn.

How many times have you called or made an effort to know what the ISC is doing?

If you don't want to help in organizing activities you have no right to be a part of them.

As a piece of advice for the next time, before you point the finger at someone, it is better to look at your own deeds first.

Indeed, it was a very cheap trick to gain publicity for yourself.—Shaukat S. Khan, undergraduate, economics and marketing.

U.S. foreign policy arbitrarily decides which nations have right to freedom

Freedom is the life and blood of America. Freedom to vote, freedom to speak your mind, freedom to burn the symbols of your freedom, freedom to judge others, to impose our will on others, to feel pity for the poor and hungry worlds surrounding ourselves with the conveniences of a modern society. We are not against the war itself.

I believe the invasion of Kuwait was wrong, and that Saddam Hussein is a dangerous man.

I am in complete support of our troops. Those men and women are the only true heroes of this country.

To go and fight in a place so far away from home takes an amount of courage that I'm not sure I have.

But, as a nation, I think it is time we took a serious look at our foreign policy.

We cannot continue to arbitrarily decide who deserves freedom and who doesn't. Freedom for the Kuwaitis but not for the Palestinians, or the black South Africans who have suffered under Apartheid since time out of mind.

Are we arbitrarily giving away freedom, or selling it to the highest bidder?

I suppose this is a question that historians will answer when the war is nothing but a dusty memory in the minds of the American public.

There will come a day, though, when we can no longer afford to judge others and someone else will decide whether or not we deserve our freedom.—Doug Long, sophomore, economics.

Equal representation needed in city

Regarding your articles on city government in your Feb. 15. issue, I have a couple of comments.

I was accepted in the Community Development Department in 1987, and I have been a full-time student since the Fall 1989 semester in that department.

Also, the last time discussion was going on in Carbondale regarding government realignments, the idea I heard that seemed most acceptable was a hybrid that would have representatives elected both from wards and at large, with the mayor's spot also being an at-large position.

There was some debate about whether state statutes required a minimum number of wards to be established, and if a home rule city like Carbondale would be exempt from those rules.

My feeling now is that four ward representatives, two at-large representatives and the mayor could be a workable system if this city decided to change its structure.—Keith Taskurn, city council member, graduate, community development.

Bongard is co-author of the book, "If They Come Before It's Too Late, How to Defeat Saddam Hussein."

The sandstorm season, from March 21 to April 15, is so severe travel is difficult, Bongard said.

Hard core desert travelers would have to wait at least three to four weeks.

The sand would hinder air operations, causing the U.N. Coalition, such as higher consumer prices to somewhat clear the desert summer heat, Bongard said. "If we can wait until the third or fourth week of April, but troops wouldn't be in Baghdad until late June," said Bongard.

During the summer months temperatures can reach 120 degrees in the daytime and average well over 100 degrees, Bongard said. Although the continued bombing of Iraq's positions has been successful, Bongard said a ground war may be necessary to actually defeat Iraqi troops out of Kuwait.

Bongard said the minefields along the Saudi Arabia-Kuwait border will be a major factor in any ground movement.

Allied forces will have to leapfrog over the mines, exposing themselves to anti-aircraft fire or be blown out of the minefields, Bongard said.

Iseenberg said the minefields along the Saudi Arabia-Kuwait border will be a major factor in any ground movement.

"That would be playing into Iraq's strongest suit," he said. "We could (launch a ground offensive across the border) and we would win, but it would be slow and costly.

"A ground movement going straight across the border also would give Iraqi troops a path to withdraw back into their country," Bongard said.

"If they come before it's too late, how to defeat Saddam Hussein," Bongard said. "They deny the enemy access and slow them down. It is going slow down a ground movement until we fix Iraq's rules.

"And if any mines are left over from World War II, he said.

Bongard, however, said he doesn't foresee Coalition troops invading across the Saudi-Kuwaiti border.

"That would be playing into Iraq's strongest suit," he said. "We could (launch a ground offensive across the border) and we would win, but it would be slow and costly.

"A ground movement going straight across the border also would give Iraqi troops a path to withdraw back into their country," Bongard said.

He added that most colleges will add the number and size of needed classes.

Freshman enrollment began to decrease in spring 1993 when it dropped by 269 students from the previous year. The spring 1999 semester was the first decrease in freshman enrollment in the last three years.

Chemical weapons are still a big threat, but Martin Calhoun, a consultant for the Center for Defense Information, said they wouldn't cause many deaths.

"I really don't see any lasting military advantage (from using chemical weapons)," Calhoun said.

Although freshman and sophomore numbers dropped, the decrease was cushioned with an increase of 8.5 juniors and 2.5 seniors. On-campus graduate students decreased by 26 students.

Total enrollment for spring 1999 for both on- and off-campus is 23,367, a 2.4 percent decrease from spring 1999.

Off-campus programs, primarily on military bases across the country, are classes run by SUIC that are not located at any campus facilities.

"Off-campus enrollment also is down, bringing by 290 from 1990.

Browning said the decrease in enrollment is directly related to student withdrawals for Operation Desert Storm.

Parking lots and provisions for dramatic lighting also are part of the improvements.

Other improvements, such as reseeding, lighting, pavers and walls, already have been made to part of the Town Square.

The improvements to the Town Square could cost about $442,000 with an additional cost of between $185,000 and $270,000 for restoration to the depot, Redmond said. Funds must be taken before a more accurate estimate can be made.

If the council approves the plans, construction will begin in May.

Improvements to the old square include:

- a new ground floor
- a new lighting system
- a new sidewalk

incentives for industry and consumers to reduce energy and oil consumption, but Bush said he wanted to avoid any "unsound and extreme" proposals to force greater conservation, such as higher federal fuel economy standards for cars.

He said new efficiency requirements would increase cost for both industry and consumers, cutting economic growth and new jobs.

"We are not going to have an energy strategy that assigns the status quo to the American worker," Bush told energy industry executives, top lawmakers and reporters gathered at the White House.

We are going to continue to grow and we can do it soundly and that's what this strategy proposes," Bush said.

In World War I, the most extensive use of chemical weapons, 1.3 million casualties were caused by mustard gas, Calhoun said.

More women balancing careers with family life

By Rennie Walker
Staff Writer

The rules in the game for working women are changing, said three SUU faculty members at a panel discussion Tuesday night.

As women gain the demands of a career along with the roles of wife and mother, something is going to give, said Ela Phillips, Lacey, professor of the School of Medicine.

Lacey said many women have chosen to pursue all three roles in the 20th century, but as the 21st century begins, women will increasingly focus on one role to the exclusion of the others.

More women are choosing to work and no, have children, or to have children and work as a single mother, she said.

Ann Phillips, professor of zoology, said there have been changes in traditional male and female roles, but work at home is not divided equally.

She also said men are more apt to keep their home and mother roles separate, while women are concerned with both mother roles around the clock, even on the job.

The panel member, Rebecca Fines Fournier, assistant dean of the College of Business and Administration, said she not only has a husband, but is also married to her career.

Fournier has not decided whether or not to have children. Fournier’s salary exceeds her husband’s.

To get ahead, women must be flexible and make sacrifices, she said.

"You will not move up as far or as fast if you have more than one commitment," she said. "We can compete. We don’t know what we can do because we haven’t tried everything yet."

Phillips said action must be taken to meet the challenge of the changing roles.

"We must chip away at the stereotypes of women,... said, while removing the cloth that covered a small aquarium with two small animals inside.

While most women in the room squirmed at the thought of a male teacher, Phillips said it is time to stop teaching girls to fear "little critters that share the earth with us."

"We cannot be equal until we teach our girls not to scream and act like fufheads," she said.

If a woman wants to be a teacher, she is not limited to the classroom, she said. Women can also teach by becoming a medical doctor, she said.

The discussion was moderated by Harriet Wilton Barlow, associate director of the Office of Student Development. She was supported by the American Association of University Women, Assembly of Black African-American Women and the School of Social Work.

Anabolic Steroids: A Dangerous Game

Steroids are receiving more and more national attention as their abuse has spread to epidemic proportions both for performance and appearance reasons. Participants will learn more about the physical and psychological effects that make steroids dangerous and difficult to give up.

Russian play to take stage at Shryock for one showing

By Tracy Sargeant

The hit Broadway play "My Big Fat Greek Wedding" will be performed for one showing in Russian by an 811-voice cast, will be one performance.

The upper class wants to have lunch "get the dirt" on famous movie star family, he is taken away by the quick and witty Tracy. "When Tracy first meets Mike, he turns the table on him to get information about him," Janik said. "By the time she leaves last room, he doesn't know what hit him.

The "Philadelphia Story" runs tonight, Friday and Saturday, March 1-3. Curtain time is 8 p.m. for all shows except for the 2 p.m. Sunday matinee.

Senior soprano to sing about love

By Annette Holder

Love will be in the air tonight as senior Amy Banks gives a music recital at 8 tonight in the Old Baptist Foundation Recital Hall.

Most of the recital's material is about the love topic, Banks said. This has a special significance for her because she is getting married in August.

Banks, a soprano, will be accompanied by pianist Mary Matthew. The program will include music by Franz Joseph Haydn, Vincenzo Bellini, Robert Schumann, Gabriel Fauré and Leonard Bernstein.

"The Schumann music has soaring melodies which are beautiful. His music is filled with life and love," Banks said.

Banks said she is interested in doing Bernstein's music because he died last fall. She described Bernstein's "I Hate Music," which she will sing several songs from, as children's pieces that show the strong will of a little girl.

Bernstein was a composer who wrote exciting rhythm characteristic of 20th century music.

Paula Nox, graduate student in opera, describes the set of five Bernstein songs chosen by Banks as cute and funny. She says the songs will make people laugh or smile.
Soldiers find Saudi roads riskier than rockets

NORTHERN SAUDI ARABIA (UPI) — The single leading killer of U.S. servicemen so far in the gulf is the Saudi desert, including long-range artillery, or even the nightmare of so-called "friendly fire."

Far more low-tech and closer to earth, it's a daily threat with which all Americans are intimately familiar: the Saudi highways.

Just like their civilian counterparts, the dirt roads that cut throughout northern Saudi Arabia are both a deadly and an essential part of everyday life. The roads run from one horizon to the next, marked by Spartan borders of foo-high plowed dirt and an occasional cardboard marker on a wooden post.

They tie together now upon row of bunkered military camps that dot the dry dusty landscape like huge ant hills. There's no time in the rush of war for pavement. There are few road signs, and no thought of street lights, lane markers or police.

Conversely running their hourlong routes is an army of highly energetic and anxious young men rushing to fill their camps with food, tents, machinery and weapons.

At least one result is predictable. After some six months of operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, 117 servicemen had died as of Tuesday.

Accidents accounted for 88 of these, and of those 33 were vehicular.

"It tells me that the guys need to slow down," said Navy Master Chief Jack Mitchell, 45, who heads up a team of construction workers of the famed Seabees who work from scratch to build and maintain the roads and almost all of the other infrastructure that forms the ground level of a modern war machine.

The Seabees, whose nickname comes from the initials for Construction Battalion, are among the least glamorous of America's fighting men and women, many of them older people who worked in construction in civilian life.

Panel: Racism serious problem on campuses

By Omonpee O. Whitley

Minority scholars said in a teleconference Wednesday ignorance still exists within insitutions of higher learning.

Panelists and callers agreed that racism within an institution, particularly an institution of learning, is the worst type of racism and has caused an unhealthy learning atmosphere for people of color at most universities.

Panelists, student audience members and callers from across the country said a lack of cultural diversity among faculty and administrators has been a contributing factor to the growing problem of racism on campuses.

The teleconference also included pre-taped interviews with students, faculty and administrators from Harvard University, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and the University of California at Berkeley.

Panelists cited increased education about people of color as a possible means of eliminating racism from college campuses. The panelists agreed that mandating African-American studies or studies focusing on the heritages of other people of color would invoke a more in-depth understanding between students of different cultural backgrounds.

Harriet E. Wilson Barlow, associate director of Student Development, said the teleconference depicted the issue of racism in a realistic light.

"There were a lot of provocative questions that were raised," Barlow said, "particularly when we talk about the inclusion and exclusion of African-American Studies in the college curriculum."

Richard Hayes, Student Life coordinator, said he was disappointed at the low 'turnout of SIUC students, faculty and administrators, particularly their who would be "leading the discussion on campus racism here at SIUC."

He also said beneath the facade of racial unity, racism still exists on SIUC's campus.

Hayes said SIUC's racism problem is extremely low-key and certain people or groups have intentionally kept racism problems concealed.

"There are certain people and certain groups who purposely keep them quiet," he said, "because if the truth were told, these people or groups would be embarrassed."

Panelists concluded by saying that the responsibility of combating racism on college campuses should be shared by students, faculty and administrators.

Panelist Howard J. Ehrlich said the greatest responsibility for reform lies with administrators to develop a system in which administrators are treated equally.

Ehrlich said this system can then be applied to all facets of the university.

Allies hope Iraqis will surrender from low morale

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — In the wake of a bloody assualt, allied military officials hope low morale among Iraqi troops caused by incessant air and artillery bombardment and reportedly abysmal conditions will force surrender of entire units.

But allied commanders have become more cautious about accepting Iraqi line-crossers following incidences of “fake surrenders.”

Hundreds of Iraqi soldiers have been captured during combat or have defected behind minefields, “execution squads” pardoning the frontlines to look for deserters, and possible retaliation against their families to give themselves up to coalition forces.

A U.S. military official said between 450 and 500 surrendered during an engagement with allied forces Wednesday afternoon.

Allied military officials have said many of the POWs already in their custody speak of low morale due to intensified allied bombing, food shortages and a lack of proper facilities among Iraqi frontlines.

“I think they are suffering horrendous casualties,” said a senior military source. “And not just killed, but wounded, and I think the medical system is terrible. So, you get a Civil War-type situation, even if you get wounded you die. I would not want to be an Iraqi soldier.”

Another military source said certain Iraqi units “subjected to coalition air attacks are growing weary and there are lots of AWOLs among desertions out of those units. That’s one good sign of collapse.”

There are units that are attracted to the point where those that are left, if they could make it through their own minefields, or if they were not for fear of what would happen to their families, would probably desert en masse, he said.

However, a number of incidents in which Iraqi troops have faked captures and commanders are suspicious of any would-be deserters.

U.S. military officials say they have camps that can accommodate more than 100,000 Iraqi POWs.

the professional treatment when he arrived to find a room, and a high-tech wardrobe, such as shirts, sweatsuits and shorts were waiting for him. The clothes he received are far better quality than those of his defensive line and his number (47) in his going for 30. At this point and all the others were just numbers.

One of the most interesting things 104-yard dash. Hochertz, who has a personal best of 4.77 seconds, ran a 4.87 when his number came up. "I was a tenth off my best," Hochertz said. "The turf seemed a little slow and most of the guys I talked to said their times weren't that good. So that made me feel a little better."

He added that when the 40-yard dash trial started, it is a bit like a competition, but as it went on guys began to check on each other to do better.

A lot of the guys I met were real nice and I think would be a good time," Hochertz said. "Seeing all those future pros was great.

But after a while, soon Hochertz realized the NFL is a business and the combinations are like a game of talent.

Part of the combine includes orthopedic exam for each player. The player would go through six stations that tested parts of the body and checked the player's past injuries.

Hochertz said if a player had a bad knee, the doctor would announce it to everyone and soon a boney of NFL team physicians would be over "prodding and poking" at the player, as he described it.

"It was really like a cattle auction," Hochertz said. "Seeing who was prime and who wasn't.

The business part didn't end there. There were other usual supply of parasites at the camp, agents hanging around the hotel lobby to try in latch on to a meal ticket, Hochertz said he experienced this first hand.

"Thursday at 10:30 at an agent called my room who had heard my name," Hochertz said. "Those guys are looking to find a gold mine. If you don't hear from them before the combine, they really don't care about you 'I'd see them just hanging around the lobby.'"

The only business at hand for Hochertz was to do his best to get noticed and make an impression that will last up to the NFL draft.

More than 330 players will be taken in the draft, almost all of that number will come from the 40-plus that attended the combine. While the odds seem good, Hochertz said he isn't going to put all his cards in the NFL Smith.

"(Hochertz) went and gave it his best shot," teammate Jim Rung said. "He was probably a little nervous, but he seemed relaxed before going. He knows that football isn't everything."

Hochertz does know this and unlike many of the draftees, he will be graduating in May with a degree in consumer economics.

Although the NFL is a incredible goal to strive for, you can't make it, something one of the other players said to him did stick in his mind.

"A guy who will definitely be drafted high said to me, 'We're all in the same place now,' that is something that really hit me," Hochertz said.

Whether he will be the NFL or the working world, Hochertz has impressed his impression on SIUC athletics. For him, the dream is still alive. But if he never straps on the pads again, Hochertz said his NFL Combine Camp experience will be his most treasured sports memory.

"This was the highlight of my football career," he said. "To be chosen out of so many great athletes is something I'll never forget."

rise up to the competition.

"I think if we keep a positive attitude, then will be able to stop us," Gabler said. "We are all starting to have peak performances at the same time, and if we come together, it will be a great meet for us.

Even though SIUC is a young team, there's a certain underclassmen, it will have to rely on its sophomores to carry it through.

"We are a very young team when you look at the roster for next year," Davis said. "We have a lot of depth in every event and that gives us a shot at winning the conference championship. Overall, we should be able to take second place at the meet."

Assistant coach Patty Davis thinks the team will be able to get beyond its inexperience in the face of tough competition.

"I think the team will do real well," Davis said. "Despite the team's youth, they are mature athletes and respond well under pressure. We showed that at Purdue when we had 24 personal bests. Under fierce competition, I think they will pull through."
