Israeli tanks crash U.N. barricades

KAFRA, Lebanon (UPI) — Israeli tanks drove out of Israel's buffer zone and into Lebanon proper Thursday, crashing through U.N. barricades and fighting what Lebanese military sources described as fierce daylong battles with Muslim militiamen.

Israeli shelling reached the edges of the Syrian army-controlled Bekaa Valley in the east and Lebanese army positions in the south, the military sources said, threatening to draw Syria into the fighting.

After a day of violence, the Israeli force withdrew after sundown from the villages of Yater and Kafra, southeast of the port city of Tyre. Muslim security reported late Thursday. But sporadic artillery bombardment continued, they said. The sources said violence largely subsided into intermittent gunfire exchanges at night.

Israel described the assault as a "limited" operation targeting missile bases from which the Iranian-backed Hezbollah has launched attacks on Israel's self-declared "security zone" in southern Lebanon and on northern regions of the Jewish state. It also blamed the U.N. for not stopping the attacks.

The offensive capped six days of bloodletting that included an Israeli air strike in Lebanon that killed Hezbollah's leader, Sheikh Seyyed Abbas Musawi, and continuing rocket and artillery exchanges between Israeli forces and Muslim guerrillas along the Lebanon-Israel border.

At least 10 combatants on both sides were killed in Thursday's fighting, and at least 34 people, including civilians and U.N.

peacekeepers opposing the Israeli offensive, were wounded, according to statements by various groups. These reports could not be independently verified.

About 30 Israeli vehicles, including tanks and armored personnel carriers, rolled into the inland villages of Rashaf and Srobbin, as well as Yater and

Advisory group gives approval for implant use

BETHESDA, Md. (UPI) - Women whose breasts are disfigured by cancer, trauma or inherited defects should be allowed to use silicone gel-filled breast implants, but access to the devices should be limited because of safety concerns, an FDA advisory panel recommended Thursday.

While the committee rejected both a total ban or universal availability, it voted 9-0 that unanswered questions about possible harmful reactions to the devices were sufficient to restrict their use until further studies are completed.

If the FDA adopts the panel's recommendation, only women who enrolled in approved research programs would be allowed to get them. The number of women who could have the implants for breast enlargement would be limited to only enough patients to study safety of the devices.

Those who undergo mastectomies or otherwise require reconstruction would have wider access but still would have to be observed over time so that safety data could be collected.

A final decision remains up to FDA Commissioner David Kessler, who said he will act before late April. About 80 percent of the 1 million women who have silicone gel-filled implants have them for augmentation.

Officials of the four companies seeking FDA approval of their devices had mixed reactions.

Senate candidate calls for change

Braun vows to bring fresh ideas to arena dominated by 'boys'

By Todd Welvaert
Politics Writer

A Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate challenged Illinois voters Thursday to send a signal that they are ready for a change.

Carol Moseley Braun vowed to break up what she calls the "millionaire boys' club" that has dominated the U.S. Senate and to give Illinois a "healthy dose of democracy."

She addressed a crowd of about 35 people at a reception Thursday afternoon at the SIU law school.

"The days of the robber barons and the millionaire boys' club are over," Braun said. "It's time for a change and I am ready to make a difference."

Braun criticized U.S. Sen. Alan Dixon's voting record, saying he has voted to support the president 72 percent of the time.

"The people of this state are ready to move away from the failed policies of the past and move to a new future with promise for our young people," Braun said. "We cannot stand by idly and watch our communities continue to decline."

"With the kind of economic disarray that we are now facing, we cannot watch education continue to be underfunded or watch the standards of life in our community decline even further," she said. "We have a choice in this election. We can either continue with the policies which have given us this recession or we can make a change."

Braun said the true challenge of this senatorial campaign will be getting her name

Proposed restructuring may save state police more than $10 million

By Scott Wuerz
Police Writer

Illinois State Police could begin taking steps as early as September to merge its Du Quoin headquarters with a facility in Ullin, a proposed move that is part of more than $10 million in savings from restructuring the organization.

The plan, which represents the organization's first structural renovation since 1977, was presented to Gov. James Edgar in a 19-page report by Illinois State Police Director Terrance Gainer.

Under the proposed terms, existing regional police headquarters in Du Quoin would be merged with the facility in Ullin.

Goals of the proposal include streamlining the structure of the agency, eliminating a significant number of administrative and mid-management positions and restructuring the agency in a way that will not cut administration and management but decrease operations either.

Saluki women top Sycamores 73-59

By Norma Wilke
Sports Writer

The SIUC women's basketball team notched another Gateway win against Indiana State Thursday by a score of 73-59.

SIUC, 11-2 in conference and 17-5 overall, are a game behind 12-1 Southwest Missouri State, which is 20-2 overall. Indiana State dropped to 7-7 in the conference and 11-11 overall putting them further behind Illinois State, which is 9-5 after a win over Eastern Thursday.

After a basket by Indiana State guard Amy Walker in the first half, the Salukis led off a 14-point run with a basket by freshman forward Rocky Ransom.

The Sycamores did not score again until five minutes into the half. The Salukis had a 19-point lead at one time, but ISU was able to narrow the margin to nine making it 36-27 at halftime.

Saluki head coach Cindy Scott said the Salukis had tremendous defense intensity for the first 10 minutes. "We made a statement, but then we let off a little and relaxed," Scott said.

ISU led off the second half with a basket by Tonya Hamilton, but the Salukis regained their intensity and countered with two buckets by junior point guard Anita Scott and one by junior center Kelly Firth.

The Salukis dominated for the next 10 minutes and opened up a lead of 23. A last effort by ISU narrowed the margin to 14, but it was not enough.

The Salukis were able to contain the Gateway's No. 2 scorer, forward Angie Eichhorst, to 6 points in the first half. She ended the game with 16. ISU coach Kay Riek said Eichhorst puts a lot of pressure on herself.

"Angie sometimes forces some shots that aren't her best shots," Riek said. "In the second half she came back in the second half and adjusted her shot and started making better shot selection."

Firth had 17 points and eight rebounds for SIUC. Anita Scott had 14, senior guard Karie Reckler had 11 and junior forward Angie Rougeau had 10. Forward Nicole Frye had 12 and Walker had 11 for ISU.

The Sycamores played the game without point guard Hazel Olden, ISU's second leading scorer. Olden sprained her ankle in pregame warm-ups.

Scott said losing Olden affected ISU a lot.

"It was unfortunate for her and her teammates," Scott said. "It would be like us losing Anita Scott."

SIUC next plays against Illinois State at 5 p.m. Saturday at the Arena.

Tulsa swirls into Arena to fight men

By James T. Rendulich
Sports Writer

SIUC's men's basketball team will step on the Arena court Saturday night against Tulsa in a game head coach Rich Herrin said is the most important right.

The Dawgs are guarding a slim 1 1/2 game lead in the Missouri Valley Conference over Southwest Missouri and Illinois, which are both 9-4 in the conference. Indiana State and Tulsa are two games out.

Tulsa is 8-4 in the conference and 11-10 overall. Going into Thursday's game against Wichita, the Hurricane has won nine of its last 16 games but has lost three of the last five.

Tulsa has assembled a 4-1 Valley road record this season despite being 43-48 since the 1980-81 season. It is the team's best road start since its 4-0 start in the 1984-85 season.

Leading Tulsa's offensive charge will be junior point guard Mark Morse, who, despite standing only 5-7, has averaged a team high 15.5 points a game and is second in rebounds with 3.6 a game.

U.S. teams ready for biggest day at Olympics

ALBERTVILLE, France (UPI) — On the eve of what could be the most important day of the Winter Olympics for the United States, a fast improving ski racer from an unlikely location showed the Americans how it is done.

New Zealand, never known as a winter sports powerhouse, won its first medal in the history of the Winter Games Thursday in the person of Annelise Coberger—who claimed a silver in the slalom and passed an American cohort to do it.

New Zealand wins first medal in history of Winter Games

"I'm happy for New Zealand," said Coberger, a rising star on the World Cup skiing circuit. "I'm just one person, but I'm happy for an entire country."

Coberger had only the eighth fastest first run in the slalom race, but rallied to win the silver behind Austrian Petra Kronberger in one of five medal events on Thursday's schedule. American Julie Parisien had the fastest first run, but faded to fourth during the second trip down the hill.

The other two victories early Thursday came from Yevgeniy Redkin of the Unified Team in the men's 20-kilometer biathlon and Holland's Bart Veldkamp in the grueling 10,000-meter speedskating race.

The first Olympic medals ever in short track speedskating were to be awarded Thursday night.

For the Americans, however, the big day is Friday—where medal hopes will be determined on the bobsled run, at the hockey rink and at the Albertville Ice Hall.

Kristi Yamaguchi and Nancy Kerrigan, America's gold and bronze medalists from last year's world championships, will go into the climactic night of figure skating 1-2 ahead of France's Surya Bonaly and Japan's Midori Ito.

Their duel will make up one of the most anticipated attractions at the Games.

"I've got seven triples planned for my program," Yamaguchi said. "The program will stay the same as planned. You can't make changes just because you are ahead."

No less anticipated, however, will be Friday's meeting at the hockey arena between the unbeaten United States squad and the old Soviet Union team which, no matter that it has a new name, still has its familiar skills.

Colorado is ranked sixth regionally and UNLV is ranked 10th. The Salukis lost to Wichita State in the fall 5-4.

Coach Judy Auld said the tournament gave the players tough competition and let them see what they needed to work on in practice. She said she expects competition to be tougher this weekend.

"We should have three hard matches this weekend because all of the teams are strong," Auld said. "The Colorado match is important in that it will warm us up and help prepare for the conference match. It will also make our mental game stronger."

"We hope to come home with a couple of wins, but the important thing is to come out healthy and mentally strong."

AFTER A WEEK off, the SIUC men's tennis team will travel south to play at the Vanderbilt Invitational.

SIUC will travel to Nashville to play Mobile College at 10 a.m. and Alabama-Birmingham at 4 p.m. Saturday. The Salukis will play Middle Tennessee at 12:30 p.m. and Vanderbilt at 4 p.m. Sunday.

The Salukis, who are 1-2 in dual matches, lost to Miami of Ohio in its opening match of the season and beat Western Michigan in its second match. SIUC then lost to 1991 Big 10 champion Ohio State.

Mr. Recycle helps teach residents to conserve

By Teri Lynn Carlock
City Writer

During the Lights Fantastic Parade last December in Carbondale, a life-size tin man s'ouched on the Clean and Green float.

"Oh, who's that man sitting up there?" a little boy in the crowd asked his friend. "Don't you know? That's Mr. Recycle," his friend said.

Eugenia Becker overheard the boys' conversation and smiled to herself. Her recycling mission in Carbondale was taking effect.

Becker, coordinator of Carbondale Clean and Green, came to Carbondale in December 1989 when her husband, Michael, accepted the position of director in the SIUC Chancellor's Office.

Becker's companion, Mr. Recycle, was made by Resource Reclamation of Murphysboro, a non-profit corporation that started the earliest recycling efforts in the area.

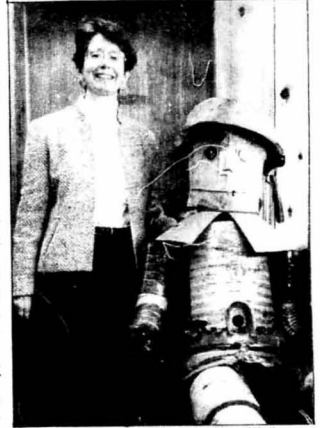

"Mr. Recycle is our mascot," Becker said. "He's totally recycled—a commitment to recycling—reduce, reuse, recycle."

Resource Reclamation went out of business in the late 1980s and gave a grant to Clean and Green to help it carry on the organization in Carbondale.

Becker had taught economics in Connecticut for 19 years. She also went into economic development work which involved revitalizing inner city areas.

Because Becker was unable to find an economic development position when she came to Carbondale, she looked at an alternative.

"Instead of recycling cities I got into recycling old trash," she said. "I took the job at Clean and Green in August of 1990."

Her duties as coordinator involve developing programs to promote litter control, recycling and beautification of the city.

She also answers questions citizens have about recycling and recruits people to pick up litter.

Gathering information and speaking to civic, school and youth groups about recycling also takes up a lot of her time, Becker said.

"There is a high degree of enthusiasm among young people," she said. "People are concerned about recycling and want to do it."

'Put not your trust' in primary pundits

THE GRANITE STATE HAS HAD ITS DAY. With Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin's favorite-son candidacy all but nullifying the importance of the caucuses there, New Hampshire became the media's State of the Hour, a media crystal ball into which pundits supposedly could gaze and come up with the magic name—first it was front-runner Bill Clinton, then pack-leader Paul Tsongas, and so on.

Put not your trust in pundits, to paraphrase Shakespeare. Taking one candidate with one primary victory and declaring him the great white hope of his party is like naming one of a handful of thoroughbreds the winner seconds into the race.

THE RATIONALE BEHIND NEW HAMPSHIRE- watching is longstanding: No candidate in the last 40 years has taken the presidency without first winning the majority of the party in New Hampshire.

That fact was bantered around tirelessly by newsgatherers across the U.S.A. before the primary took wing. Every major newspaper had its own polls and surveys on the race. Print pollsters and TV talking heads harped relentlessly on New Hampshire's intrinsic value to the 1992 campaign. Media analysts put so much spin on the story that finally the American voter was left dizzy, wondering what all the New Hampshire fuss was about.

FOLLOWING THE MEDIA'S LOGIC and ignoring the 48 state primaries and caucuses yet to come—including the crucial multistate Super Tuesday primary—either Tsongas will usurp Bush in November or Bush will hold on to the Oval Office until 1996.

The starting point of the "New Hampshire logic" was 1952, when incumbent president Harry S. Truman pulled out of the race following a successful New Hampshire challenge by fellow Democrat Estes Kefauver. A similar primary challenge by Eugene McCarthy convinced Lyndon Johnson to withdraw in 1968.

HENCE, THE POWER OF THE PRIMARY. In the sound-bite 1990s the media need front-runners to keep the game interesting, to keep readers turning pages and viewers tuning in. In the process, each candidate has a chance to be king for a day, and the ones with the best chances are those who best court the press.

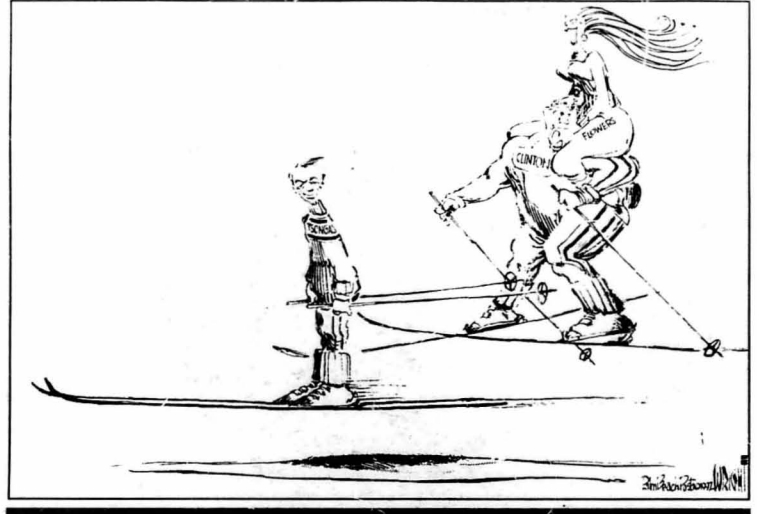

The front-runner mentality ignores regional needs and the shifting landscape of U.S. politics, where one challenger can stand on the mountain's summit while another gets swallowed by a crevice. New Hampshire is not the South, or California, or Southern Illinois, and a candidate who gets a strong response on the East Coast can find himself on thin ice in other states.

PAUL TSONGAS MAY BE MASTER of the game today, but the southern states of Super Tuesday are Clinton territory, and the game has only just begun.

Letters to the Editor

'The good old days' not quite so glorious

I wish to comment on the letter in the DE about the "doom of Valentine's Day." I'm sick of people who say things aren't the way they use to be.

People talk with a sense of nostalgia about a time when everything and everyone was pure and clean. They say now there is too much sex and violence on television. They say everyone is sexually depraved and there is no morality. And look at the news. Our world is falling apart.

Personally I think the world is moving in the right direction. This crap I hear about ozone layer is beginning to get on my nerves.

The hole in the ozone was discovered decades ago before CFCs were invented. But then someone figures out CFCs destroy ozone and now everyone thinks this ozone hole was caused by irresponsibility.

Come on, people. Granted, we have problems, but do not tell me yesteryear was so nice and clean.

I blame technology for giving people such a bad view of things. We have the ability to hear about every major event in the world within hours.

Now, take the sum of every terribly bad event that occurs on this planet and give it to someone all at once, what do you think will happen?

I'm not saying we don't have problems. I'm just tired of people comparing yesterday to a Disney movie, and today to something Clive Barker would make.

If people had sex back then, you just didn't hear about it. Now people are more willing and mature talking about it.

So to the people out there from Neverneverland, welcome to reality.

Things here aren't hidden. Bad things happened then and will happen now. The only difference is today you will hear about it a lot more.—Ken Evanchik, junior, computer science.

Policy unfair; students know what they need

I am writing to support Evan Taylor concerning the Athletic Department forcing athletes to attend a study-table.

It is easy to understand the concern many have over exploitation of athletes. In evaluating this policy, one should ask whether or not one would like it applied to them.

Athletes are different in speed and strength, not in capacity for irresponsibility. Few of us want to be made to do something, even under the suspicious rationale that "it's for their own good." I would like to decide exactly what that is.—Dennis D. Conner, senior, mining and electrical engineering.

'Hick' mentality not restricted to south U.S.

Mr. Giesler, I thank you for your warning on hick-ism, but what is wrong with listening to Randy Travis and dancing the two-step, even in Chicago?

You propose to form an organization to contain hick-ism, composed solely of students who live north of Peoria.

Well, Tom, it seems to me that you would have to go a little farther north than Peoria to get away from hick-ism. Try the Canada/U.S. border.

Also, if you intend to teach us good ol' boys proper English, you should start using it yourself.

Whassamattayou!
Or are you so used to your New York accent that you cannot say "ya all"?—Tom Mitbo, junior, education.

Education overlooks investment

The problem with today's education system is nobody teaches about money-making investments. Most people are scared about investing because they know little about it.

Unless a student is a business major, chances are they will graduate without knowing a thing about the stock market, mutual funds, IRA accounts, etc.

However, imagine if SIUC had a general education class dealing with money management. A type of economics class, but without all the stuff that no one cares about. Who cares about economics unless it teaches us about how money works?

Students in the Survival of Man course have heard Dr. Gaffney talk about the rule of 70, but unfortunately it probably went in one ear and out the other.

It is well past the time for student to learn secure ways to make it financially. After all, we are considered to be the future of this country.

Students who find this letter interesting and want to learn more are encouraged to start their own petition. The purpose of the petition will be to influence the University administration to initiate a general education course to teach us how money works and ways to manage the money we will earn in the future.

My objective is to initiate a course that teaches us how to open the Wall Street Journal and comprehend every word and figure, instead of looking at it like it's written in Chinese.—Karl Forgeron, freshman, pre-dentistry.

Trade tilt: U.S.-Japan commerce gap grows; state boosts exports

By Sherri L. Wilcox
Special Assignment Writer

Despite an expanding trade rift between the United States and Japan, Illinois has reversed the trend with a boost in state exports to Japan.

Illinois, ranked first nationally in exports to Japan, increased its exports to the country by 13 percent from 1989 to 1990.

Nationwide, U.S. export dollars to Japan have plunged 39 percent.

In 1990, Japan spent about $700 million on Illinois machinery and more than $300 million on food and chemical products from the state.

THE MIDWEST LURES Japanese business owners because of the quality of labor, the large consumer market and the excellent transportation network in the area, said Yoichi Nemoto, an economist at the Japanese Consulate in Chicago.

Akira Takayama, SIUC professor of economics, said high export success with Japan by Illinois is based on the desire of both parties to trade.

"First of all, there is mutual interest on both sides to trade," he said. "Second, there is a strong effort by the state of Illinois to increase its exports."

WHILE ILLINOIS IS increasing its exports, great disparity still exists in the trade figures as a whole, said Dave Stricklin, a spokesman for U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Carverville.

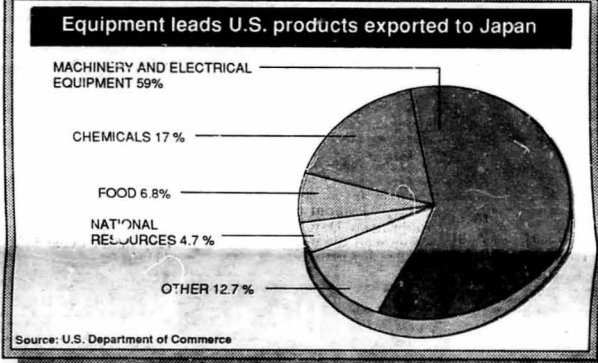

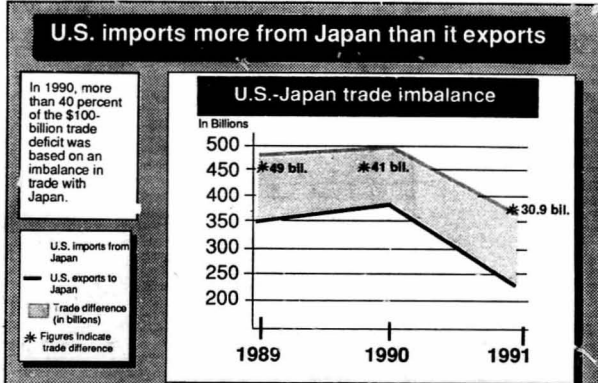

Although no records are kept showing the import dollars from Japan into Illinois, Stricklin said the trade deficit on a national level is enough to concern each state.

In 1990, more than 40 percent of the $100-billion trade deficit was based on imbalances in trade with Japan, according to U.S. Department of Commerce figures.

By October 1991, this number had risen dramatically to more than 65 percent, nearly $30 billion.

THIS WIDENING TRADE gap is because of unfair competition on the part of the Japanese, with more open markets in the United States, Stricklin said.

The United States wants to work with Japan to even out the deficit over the next five years, he said.

"When we can compete on a level playing field, then we'll know how consumers feel about our products," Stricklin said.

"Then, if our products are viewed as inferior and not as good quality, that will be our problem and we'll have to deal with it," he said.

In addition to increases in exports, Illinois leads the Midwest in Japanese direct investment, the ownership of companies within the states, with 610 Japanese-owned facilities.

ELEVEN PERCENT OF Illinois foreign-owned companies are located downstate and in suburban St. Louis.

Whether or not increased Illinois investment by foreign firms truly is beneficial to the state spurs disagreement among many economists and U.S. workers.

While Japanese companies employ U.S. workers, some believe the companies are taking their profits outside Illinois, even outside the country.

According to a 1992 survey on foreign investment in Illinois, the belief that profits made in the United States are taken back to Japan is a myth.

THE SURVEY SHOWS foreign-owned companies, 35 percent of which are Japanese, have increased their capital investment by 15 percent this year, more than three times that of domestic-owned companies.

Of the work force employed by foreign investors in the state, 52 percent are employed in manufacturing.

Outside the Chicago area, 90 percent of the work force is in manufacturing.

Larry West, SIUC economics instructor, said that while these companies are providing jobs for U.S. workers, the loss is based in the technological advancement of the United States.

"ECONOMICALLY IT'S A boom," he said. "People are working, spending, saving—but there is foreign ownership."

As Japanese direct investment increases in the United States, the country is turning into a sort of "subsidiary" of Japan, West said.

"A lot of the profit from companies based here is going back to Japan to fund their research and development—not ours," he said.

Another consideration is "U.S. patriotism, West said.

"THE QUESTION IS, do we want Japan owning our companies? It goes back to American ideals," he said.

"The fact is, the average Joe doesn't really care who is paying him as long as he gets his paycheck."

Takayama said Japanese wealth is an important factor in its success.

"Japan is in a good position because it has a lot of money to spend," said Takayama. "There are things Japan needs from the United States, and they know how to get it."

THE UNITED STATES NEEDS to increase its national savings if it wants to sharpen its competitive edge, Takayama said.

Clash between producers

By Sherri L. Wilcox
Special Assignment Writer

The U.S.-Japanese trade conflict is not a war between U.S. consumers and Japanese consumers, but a war between producers, said a Japanese SIUC student.

It is private Japanese investors rather than the Japanese government who control the trade between the countries, said Atsushi Yamazaki, a graduate student in sociology from Iwaki, Fukushima, Japan.

This claim comes after rising anti-Japanese sentiment has resulted in a wave of economic patriotism throughout the United States.

CRIES OF "BUY AMERICAN" are being heard loud and clear across the United States, and many organizations are encouraging people to purchase U.S. products.

Monsanto, a chemical company in St. Louis, is giving $1,000 to each of its employees who buy a vehicle made in North America.

The United Auto Workers in Wayne, Mich., took a stand earlier this month, when members pushed all foreign cars parked at the local Ford plant to a back parking lot.

Recent growth in U.S. resentment of the Japanese is not surprising, said Nabahun Ghose, president of the International Student Council at SIUC.

"When economic conditions are bad and unemployment is high, people look for someone to blame," he said.

DESPITE THE ANGER AMONG middle-class U.S. citizens, especially blue-collar workers, over loss of jobs and company profits to Japanese corporations, Japanese students at SIUC claim the attitude among U.S. students is much less critical.

Yamazaki said he experiences no resentment from the U.S. students he has met.

He said to understand Japanese attitudes about work ethic, U.S. workers need to understand how business operates in Japan.

Despite anti-monopoly government regulation, monopolies still exist in Japan, he said.

Business in Japan is set up with only a few major corporations, and a hierarchy of smaller companies under them that work as "exclusive subcontractors," he said.

The lower levels depend on the big corporations to survive, so they will not turn down requests by corporate leaders for work, regardless of the amount of payment offered to them.

"That's why Japan has so many workaholics," he said. "Everywhere they go it is the same, there's no better offer."

This business framework is the basis of high levels of seniority among Japanese workers, Yamazaki said.

"Large Japanese companies are like ships without lifeboats," he said. "We have to stay on the ship to save our lives."

The Japanese people are thankful to the United States for what has been done over the years to help the Japanese rebuild their nation to the strength it has today, Yamazaki said.

"FROM MACARTHUR TO BUSH," we are thankful," he said. "By pushing us to revalue the yen, we now can buy much more for our money."

"Thank you for inspiring democracy," he said. "The more the United States pressures Japan, the better we will do."

Yamazaki said he thinks most of the resentment between U.S. workers and the Japanese is due to a lack of understanding of culture.

He said U.S. workers should not get angry at Japanese sentiments such as those expressed last month by Japanese politician Yoshio Sakurachi.

Sakurachi described the U.S. work force as lazy and illiterate.

"JAPANESE VALUES ARE different than American values," Yamazaki said. "Japanese philosophy says that working very hard is the key to survival."

"From a Japanese point of view, America is lazy. But from an American point of view, Japanese workers are nuts."

Area to get federal aid for economic recovery

By Christy M. Gutowski
General Assignment Writer

The U.S. Department of Commerce has designated the Southern Five Regional Planning Commission as an economic development district.

The regional planning commission assists in providing public facility and housing grants, business startups and expansions, land use, development and zoning efforts in Alexander, Pulaski, Massac, Johnson and Union counties.

The commission will work more closely with the Economic Development Administration on economic and planning issues, including public works projects.

The FDA is the primary factor that assists in long-range economic development of areas with severe unemployment and low family income. Unemployment figures in these five counties continued to be higher than state and national averages through the month of December, according to the Illinois Department of Employment Security.

Unemployment rates rose considerably in the five counties, with the highest increase occurring in Massac county, where unemployment figures went from 8.7 percent in December 1990 to 16 percent in the same month of 1991.

The recognition is based on approval of the Overall Economic Development Program, submitted by Southern Five to the U.S. Department of Commerce.

Southern Five is supported, in part, by planning grants from the federal government to carry out coordinated and effective economic development strategies.

Sgt. Charles Schwarting, spokesman for the state police, said the current structure is obsolete.

"Many of the current state police facilities were established before the interstate highway system," he said. "As a result they're based in places that once were hubs of high-way transportation, but now are out of the way."

The number of state police divisions will be cut from six to four, and the 40 existing district and zone commands and the Division of Criminal Investigations will be absorbed into 15 full-service districts, merging current commands with ones in more desirable locations, Schwarting said.

The savings would include $4.3 million in capital development funds, $498,700 in personnel reduction and $206,000 in operating costs statewide, he said.

Capt. William Powers, police spokesman from Du Quoin, said the move to Ullin would result in freeing six additional officers for local patrol duty.

Kafra, Lebanese military sources said.

The Israelis smashed through checkpoints in these villages manned by the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon, or UNIFIL, and engaged in fierce fighting with militiamen of the fundamentalist Islamic Hezbollah and Syrian-backed Aml movement, the Lebanese military sources said.

Witnesses said the Israeli force controlled Rashaf and later mounted helicopter gunship attacks on Kafra.

They said Israeli helicopters and artillery from inside the border zone were shelling the villages heavily.

Hand-to-hand fighting was reported in the struggle for control of Yater.

Israeli artillery inside Israel's security zone shelled the villages of Meidoun and Abu Rashed, at the southern edge of the Bekaa Valley, where Syria maintains a 35,000-strong military contingent, the Lebanese sources said.

These sources said Lebanese army positions in Kaykay at al-Jsir, in southern Lebanon, also came under heavy shelling, and one Lebanese soldier was wounded.

Lebanese army units returned fire, the sources said.

Israel's reported attacks on the Lebanese emplacements and near Syrian positions could draw the formidable Syrian military into the hostilities.

in the public light.

"The poll results have been very positive for us," she said. "While we don't have millions of dollars to saturate the airwaves, I think the people are not so easily fooled any more."

Braun is running against 12-year incumbent Dixon, D-Belleville, self-proclaimed multi-millionaire Albert Hofeld for the Democratic nomination in the March 17 Illinois primary.

"They (voters) are looking for substance not the glitz," she said. "It's the old 'where's the beef' question. They want to know where are you on the issues, what do you really have to offer and what is your track record. They want to see the substance."

Braun also criticized Sen. Paul Simon, D-Makanda, for appearing on a recent commercial endorsing Dixon.

"It demonstrates how the old-boys network protects itself," Braun said. "And he's no doubt had to respond to the collegiality of that situation and I am disappointed by that. The time to wait has passed and Sen. Simon, when he goes to the voting booth will do what he normally does and vote right."

Braun said Dixon, D-Belleville, has voted against the party line and canceled Simon's vote 50 percent of the time in 1990.

Braun defended her claim of being the most qualified candidate, citing her 10 years in the Illinois House of Representatives and her current job as the Cook County Recorder of Deeds.

"We are running an old fashioned back-to-basics campaign throughout this state," Braun said.

"We are talking about the issues, talking about my credentials, talking about the fact that I am the most qualified candidate for this job," she said.

The three candidates will meet in a March 7 debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

"We can go forward and put together the pieces that will bring people together on behalf of making government work better," Braun said.

"And this will actively serve the interest of wage earners and the middle class who are the support for this country," she said.

Dow Corning official said the panel's decision was a "vindication" of the company's position that its products were not harmful.

But Robert Rylee, chairman of health care business for the implant maker, said the FDA's final ruling could prompt a pullout from the business.

"That's the kind of thing we'll have to look at whether it is appropriate to stay in or convey the technology to a smaller company," he said.

"What's been done is a vindication of the things Dow Corning has been saying."

and board, which would push the annual cost to more than $3,000.

The rejection is a recommendation to the Board of Trustees, which will vote on the increase March 12.

While the cost of living in the residence halls is increasing, the services are lacking, USG President Jack Sullivan said.

"We don't accept the current level of housing quality, let alone an increase in costs just to maintain status quo," he said. "There is nothing to be gained from the increase."

Associate Vice President for Student Affairs Lawrence Juhlin said the housing increase is meant to cover projected costs, not increase services.

Low freshman enrollment this year resulted in a large drop in occupancy rates, creating a $600,000 loss in revenue.

Among the projected costs, salary increases of 4.5 percent are budgeted for fiscal year '93, along with funds for a possible fiscal year '92 mid-year salary increase of 2.5 percent.

Juhlin said USG's justifications for opposition must go beyond not wanting another increase because of tuition increases and reductions in financial aid.

"USG is making a statement of protest against the increase, but it doesn't carry much weight unless there's reasons behind it," Juhlin said. "The Board of Trustees has a judiciary obligation to bond holders to operate housing in a way to pay them back. They are the ones who put their names on the line."

Director of Housing Ed Jones said USG is acting from a lack of information.

"We held meetings with the Residence Hall Association starting in October, but we couldn't even get any of the senators to attend," he said.

The Senate heard from housing officials at the Feb. 5 meeting on reasons behind the proposed increase, but none translated into an increase in services, Sullivan said.

"Students are getting tired of forking out little dollars every year for cost of living increases and salary increases," he said. "We're going to do our best to keep this increase from happening—it's not going to stop with a little piece of paper."

Dads to join Saluki Shakers in basketball halftime show

By Kristi Rominger
Entertainment Editor

Jim Piper is a bit nervous about the halftime show Saturday night at the SIUC Arena.

His daughter, Kathy, is a Saluki Shaker who will perform between halves.

But Piper is not worried about his daughter's performance—he is worried about his own dance technique.

Saluki Shakers and their fathers will shake down the house '50s style this Saturday during halftime of the men's basketball game against Tulsa.

Piper, principal of Elverado High School, said he is sure the fathers are excited about the event, but he may be a bit nervous when it comes time to perform.

Piper said he knows that one of the dads teaches dancing. "He should be in pretty good shape," he said.

"I'm one of the fathers who has danced very little," Piper said. "And we are being put on the spot Saturday night—it should be a real experience."

Dawn Wilson, member of the Shake; squat and a senior in speech communication from Granite City said it should be a lot of fun to watch.

Wilson's dad has taught dance before, but he is nervous about this performance, she said.

"He has performed dance," she said, "but never in front of that many people."

The idea to do some sort of dance with their fathers came up during football season, Wilson said. Shaker Captain Julie Conti organized the event for this weekend and choreographed the dance.

Saluki Shaker Coach Donna Piper said Conti has tried to make the dance easy because many of the dads are not dancers.

The fathers are coming to SIUC Saturday to practice in the morning and afternoon, she said.

There are 16 women on the squad, and 13 fathers are coming to perform. Athletic Director Jim Hart and two Booster Club members will fill in for the absent fathers.

TB cases rising; elderly citizens face higher risk

By Trumier Camphor
General Assignment Writer

The number of tuberculosis cases reported among the elderly in Southern Illinois may increase because of the recent spread of TB cases in Illinois and 13 other states, health officials said.

For more than 20 years, the number of TB cases reported in Illinois declined, dropping from 3,328 in 1965 to 1,079 in 1979. In 1988, however, the number of cases started to increase each year, according to the Illinois Department of Public Health. In 1991, nearly 1,200 cases were reported.

The increased number of TB cases have been noted primarily among foreign-born immigrants, people infected with the HIV virus and minorities.

But Mona Morgan, TB coordinator for the health department, said a large number of elderly people living in Southern Illinois may be infected with the TB bacteria.

"In the downstate areas, we are finding a lot of TB infection among the elderly, but this doesn't mean that they necessarily have the disease," Morgan said.

"Most elderly people today lived through the 1930s and 1940s when TB infection levels were high and TB had a stigma attached to it so they were never tested," Morgan said. "They may be infected and not even know it."

Morgan covers 68 counties in Illinois including the Southern Illinois counties of Jackson, Williamson and Jefferson.

Morgan said almost every nursing home will have a TB case and she is not even sure that these numbers are accurate.

"It really doesn't get diagnosed like it should," she said.

Morgan said nine of 10 people who carry the TB bacteria in their body never have problems with it.

"TB is spread through droplets dispersed in the air by coughing," Morgan said.

"Close, prolonged contact is required to transmit the disease. There are 10 to 15 million people who get infected annually, but that doesn't mean that they will develop the disease," she said.

TB is not active until it is diagnosed and it can develop at anytime, Morgan said.

Elizabeth James, staff nurse at the SIUC Health Service, said an infected person experiencing active TB can have a variety of symptoms but not necessarily at the same time.

TB symptoms include chronic cough, weakness, feeling tired all the time, unexpected weight loss, loss of appetite or spitting up blood, James said.

Becker said her family recycles everything that can be recycled. "But everything that we are doing the average family can do—it's just a matter of finding out what to do," she said.

Crowing up in an environmentally-oriented family has interested her in helping clean up the planet, Becker said.

"I was born and grew up in Oregon—a beautiful state," she said. "My family went mountain climbing, hiking and camping."

Becker said she comes from a family whose tradition is not to waste. Her mother saves and re-uses plastic bags, and Becker said she remembers the time a friend missed the point her mother was trying to make by saving bags.

"A friend of my mother's gave her an assortment of plastic bags so she wouldn't have to reuse them," she said. "It absolutely appalled my mother—I never asked her what she did with those bags, but she probably gave them away."

Becker and her husband have two daughters, Gwen and Katie, and one son, Sean. Gwen and Sean live away from home. Katie, a freshman majoring in architecture at SIUC, helps out with Clean and Green, Becker said.

"She helped me pick up old phone books, pick up exhibits for presentations and takes part in Spring cleanup," she said.

The Becker's also have had an influence upon Katie's friends.

"A friend of Katie's became accustomed to our recycling, and when she went back home to Chicago over Christmas she started her family recycling," she said.

Becker said her husband Michael is good with recycling even though some recycling rules confuse him.

"He has never mastered what types of paper can be recycled, and I always go through the trash and dig it out," she said.

"But he is good with most recyclables," she said.

Her husband has a nickname for her, Becker said.

"He calls me the Trash Lady of Carbondale because I go out and tell people what they can do with their trash besides throwing it away," she said.

Her friends also are conscious about her constant recycling, she said.

"Of course I encourage them to recycle," she said. "Then they either apologize for not recycling or point out that they are."

Bell, who was a medalist in the 1984 Olympics.

Women's head coach Don DeNoon said the tremendous ability of the field in the pole vault will make the event worthwhile to see.

"In all, I believe there will be nine athletes who have cleared 18 feet in their career; which is just phenomenal," DeNoon said. "The pole vault will be exciting to watch."

Watching from the Recreation Center's suspended track, DeNoon said the excitement of the event will be magnified.

"People standing on the top level of the track will have the opportunity to see the bar move up to their level and possibly higher," DeNoon said.

"For a brief moment, it will be you and the athlete sharing a jump together."

Barber said the physical characteristics of the Recreation Center not only make it better for watching the events but ultimately is the factor that has drawn the strong field of pole vaulters.

"The surface of the Rec is hard and fast which is going to lead to better heights," Barber said.

"Also, with the suspended track the height of the bar doesn't look as high."

Barber said the spectators on the suspended track also may lead to better scores.

"When you're competing you love to see people getting excited and an energetic atmosphere which motivates you," Barber said. "And the Rec Center is very conducive for that type of atmosphere."

Representing SIUC in the event will be freshmen Mike Claycomb, Keith Rhine and Steve Long.

"This will be an excellent learning experience for them," Barber said. "Just to be around talent like this is going to make them better down the road."

In addition to the pole vault, DeNoon said there should be a great amount of talent and competitiveness in each event.

"In the men's event, there will be at least a few exceptionally good athletes in each event and to watch them go head to head will be exciting," DeNoon said.

"For the women, the sprints and the middle distant events figure to be strong."

The TAC Championship will begin at 9 a.m. Admission will be $3 for adults and $2 for children.

They will face each other in the semifinals, with the winner being assured of no worse than a silver medal. The loser will be left to fight for the bronze. Canada will take on Czechoslovakia in the other semifinal.

"I think now we feel like we're a team on a mission, a team on a roll," said American forward Ted Donato.

"Other people might think we're playing over our heads, but we just feel like we're starting to play like we're capable of." The United States has not won a hockey medal since the inspiring gold medal effort in Lake Placid 12 years ago, but the Americans have not won a bobsled medal since 1956.

The American bobsled effort was mired in controversy in the days leading up to the event because driver Randy Will kicked Minnesota Vikings running back Herschel Walker out of his sled in favor of old friend Chris Coleman.

Morse also leads Tulsa in assists with 5.5 a game.

The Dawgs, coming off a 69-55 win over Wichita State on Monday, have a four game win streak and are no stranger to Tulsa as they played and beat the Hurricane 74-66 last Saturday.

Assembling an early 14-2 edge, SIUC never relinquished the lead. Although Tulsa did have two late runs and at one point cut the Saluki lead to 3, the Dawgs held on.

Herrin said there is no advantage or disadvantage in playing Tulsa one week after the teams' first meeting.

"Either way I don't know if it helps us or hurts us," Herrin said. "It's just the way things turned out and all we can do is to come out and play."

Building an early lead has been a recent trend for the Dawgs as they ran off 14 points against Wichita before they could get on the scoreboard!

"In the past four games we have done an excellent job of getting out of the gate and building a lead," Herrin said. "It shows that our guys are coming ready to play."

Tipoff is at 7:35 p.m.

Coach Dick LeFevre said he does not know much about any of the schools because it is the start of the season.

"I expect Alabama/Birmingham to be the toughest of the four," LeFevre said.

"Mobile College has access to the pro circuit and no age limit on its players, so they could be really tough."

THE WOMEN'S TEAM, which received its highest Volvo Tennis/Midwest Regional Ranking ever at No. 14 in December, had strong performances last weekend at the Eastern Kentucky Invitational.

Sophomore Leesa Joseph, who beat Naomi Mokolke of Eastern Michigan in the finals, was the Flight 3 champion.

A surprise win for the Salukis was the new doubles tandem of freshman Irena Feofanova and sophomore Wendy Anderson. The two were thrown together last weekend after junior Karen Wasser sprained her ankle in a match on Friday.

The duo was the Flight 3 doubles champion.

With all-conference Lori Gallagher out of the picture until at least late March because of a wrist injury sustained last fall, the Saluki netters have no room for injury. Junior Wendy Varnum, No. 1, was encumbered last weekend in doubles competition by a recurring upper thigh injury that inhibits her serve.

Auld said she hopes to have both players back in full force.

"Hopefully we can have Karen back in the lineup," Auld said. "We took Wendy out of her last doubles match, so her injury would not get worse."

"When you take two people out of the lineup, it takes away the overall strength, and with these three teams, we need to go in with as much depth as possible."

SINCE THE START of the season, the Saluki men have picked up on doubles. SIUC dropped all three doubles against Miami of Ohio, won one against Western Michigan and then won two against Ohio State.

Right now, juniors Tim Derouin and Jay Merchant are playing No. 1 doubles.

Freshmen Uwe Classen and Altair Merchant are playing No. 2 and sophomore Kai Kramer and freshman Rodney Steven are playing No. 3.

LeFevre said he is not certain if he will keep the doubles tandems because they are still switching around to see what works best.
