National promoter of literacy dies at 77

Jeanne Hurley Simon leaves behind legacy of accomplishments

ANDY EGNER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Jeanne Hurley Simon was more than just a woman with a famous husband.

Despite nearly 40 years of marriage with former U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, she stayed firm in her own beliefs and kept her own political agenda, including promoting literacy and enhancing the promotion of libraries nationwide.

Jeanne Hurley Simon died early Sunday morning in the family's Makanda home after recovering from a malignant brain tumor operation last September. She was 77.

Jeanne, an author and chairwoman of the U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science, began her career as a politician in 1956 upon becoming a state legislator.

She made history as one of the first women on the Illinois floor.

As a legislator, she met fellow House member Paul Simon. After knowing each other for two years, they became the first couple to wed while serving in the Illinois General Assembly.

The Simons' would have celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary this April.

Mike Lawrence, spokesman for the Simon family, said Jeanne and Paul "were full partners in every sense of the word."

"Some political spouses detest politics. Some political spouses tolerate politics. A few political spouses actually enjoy politics. Jeanne Simon loved politics," Lawrence said.

Just 11 days ago, the SIU Board of Trustees approved to award Jeanne with an honorary doctoral degree.

The Simons' "team effort" assisted Paul, now director of the Public Policy Institute, on several state elections and his run for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1988.

From their experience campaigning for president, Jeanne Simon wrote a book, "Codename: Scarlett," winning praise for its unusual insights into being the wife of a candidate.

Her role in the campaign was an active one, speaking about the issues in a forthright way that women in America would understand and appreciate.

Paul Simon credits most of his accomplishments to her.

"Marrying Jeanne was the wisest thing I have ever done," Paul Simon wrote in his autobiography. "Whatever I have been able to accomplish has Jeanne's stamp on it as much as mine, though she has provided her own distinctive leadership in many areas."

Along with being a state legislator, Jeanne graduated from Law School at Northwestern

Kluemper goes out with a fairy-tale ending

KERRY MALONEY - DAILY EGYPTIAN

Mary Beth Wehner, a senior swimmer, carries off the MVC Championship trophy with the rest of the SIU women's swimming team Saturday evening at the Recreation Center. The women won first place, giving their coach, Mark Kluemper, his fifth and final SIU conference championship. The team wore shirts in honor of Kluemper, who is leaving SIU after this season.

Women's swimming team wins third straight Valley championship

JAVIER SERNA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In an emotional goodbye to SIU women's swimming and diving head coach Mark Kluemper, the Salukis captured their third straight Missouri Valley Conference title this weekend despite having no divers to add points to their overall score.

In the process of gaining their fifth conference title in the last six years, the women broke numerous MVC records and outscored their closest competition, the University of Evansville, by 146.5 points. The women trailed in the championships after the first event, but gained the lead on the very next event and never to relinquish it again.

After the women received their first-place hardware, SIU men's swimming head coach Rick Walker offered a choked up good-bye speech to his counterpart, recognizing Kluemper's achievements and calling him a

Police search for second man accused of battery

Victim released from hospital with broken jaw after attack at Gatsby's

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

After two men allegedly beat up an SIUC woman in a Carbondale bar because she would not dance with them, one has been charged with battery and the other is being sought by police.

A 19-year-old woman was dancing with a friend inside Gatsby's II Bar & Billiards, 610 S. Illinois Ave., early Thursday morning when two men approached her. Carbondale police said the men approached the victim and started dancing with her. The two began "bumping and humping" on the woman. On a crowded dance floor, the woman tried to get the men away from her.

When she asked them to stop knocking into her because she did not want to dance with them, both men punched her, police said.

The victim fell to the floor and the suspects kicked her in the face, police said.

The men were kicked out of the bar and police arrived. Police approached the suspects and the two fled. After a foot chase, one of the men was apprehended and the other got away.

Jason E. Thornton, 22, of Carbondale was arrested and charged with aggravated battery and resisting arrest. Thornton was taken to Jackson County Jail and later released. He is scheduled to appear in Jackson County Court March 15 for a preliminary hearing.

Police described the other suspect as a 6-foot tall black man about 21 years old. He has a shaved head and goes by the name "David," police said.

The victim was taken to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale with her jaw broken in two places. She was released from the hospital Saturday.

POLICE BLOTTER

CARBONDALE

• An SIUC student told Carbondale police someone broke into her apartment in the 500 block of South Wall Street between Saturday night and Sunday morning. The woman said she left her apartment locked and returned to find someone had cut a window screen, forced open a window and stolen a $150 vacuum, two coats worth about $400 combined, a $10 phone and a $20 caller identification box. There are no suspects in this incident.

ALMANAC

THIS DAY IN 1973:

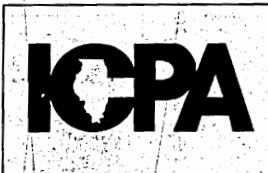

• The Coca-Cola Bottling Company of Carbondale introduced its brand-spanking-new product, the 32-oz. resealable bottle. The cost to get your hands on one of these new bottles? 25 cents.

• Discount Records advertised the great hit records of the year, including Helen Reddy's "I am Woman," Carly Simon's "No Secrets," and "The Best of The Byrds."

• Sixteen years before movie industry experts released their list of "The Greatest 100 films of the century," the Fox Eastgate predicted the very same outcome, billing Orson Welles' "Citizen Kane" as "the greatest of all American films." The movie, already a classic, was re-released at the Fox for a special two-night run.

Let the festival begin

International students looking to build bridges through annual event

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Karen Schayman said helping put this year's SIUC International Festival together has made her both happy and tired.

For weeks, Schayman has been filling out paperwork and working the phones, all in preparation for the 2000 International Festival, beginning Tuesday and running through Friday.

This is SIUC's 26th International Festival and the 30th for the Carbondale community. It began as a small cultural show for students and grew into a week-long celebration. The event will start with a march from Quigley Hall to the Student Center.

Proclamations from the Carbondale Mayor's office, SIU president and SIUC chancellors office declaring this week International Festival week will be presented in a ceremony at the Student Center Gallery Lounge at 11:15 a.m. Tuesday.

The week's festivities include cultural, educational and entertainment events to celebrate SIUC's diverse student population. The festival offers students, like Schayman, a chance to sample a different spice of life.

Schayman, a native of Bolivia, is vice president of finance for the International Student Council. She had a tough time adjusting to a new place when she came to Carbondale two years ago. Schayman said being part of the festival not only has helped her get through an uneasy period, but also opened her eyes to new experiences.

"I learned so much and saw so many things," said Schayman, a junior in foreign languages and international trade. "I'm from South America, so all the Asian and Middle East cultures are a little strange to me. But here, I saw all these new people and saw all these new foods and dances."

Aashish Lakhani, president of the International Student Council, said introducing new students to different cultures and having them share their talents is one of the special things about the festival.

"I see the festival as an icebreaker," he said. "Whenever international students come here, they become a part of the community. It shows that when it comes to something like this, a lot of international students [can] work together and they enjoy working with the variety that comes along."

« It's a great opportunity, right here in your backyard, to see how different people live and get a little glimpse of what their culture is about.

Study finds both men and women have bad hair days

A bout with bad hair may not wreck an entire day, but it sure can ruin a few moments. Marianne LaFrance, a professor of psychology at Yale University, is studying how unruly locks affect mental health.

The results so far? Women are not the only ones bummed out by bad hair, men are, too. In fact, the study found that men prompted to think about their hair problems showed the biggest drop in self-esteem.

The study, financed by the Procter & Gamble Company, surveyed Yale students — mostly sophomores — in November and December. The 60 men and 60 women were separated into four mixed-sex groups.

Members of the first group were told to think about times they had bad problems with their hair; the second, about bad hair-product packaging; and the third, about times they were not at their physical best. Members of the fourth group, the control, weren't supposed to think about anything in particular.

All participants were asked to describe hair disasters they had experienced, using such terms as "wild," "bushy," "flyaway," and "frizzy." Then they were asked a series of questions through which LaFrance's research team could analyze their current emotional states.

LaFrance's study showed that men, too, can be "discombobulated" by an untamed mane. "The stereotype is that women are the only vain ones," she says. But she's showing that that notion soon may be as passe as perms.

COLA sponsors third in series of faculty workshops

Instructors to be commended, introduced to new teaching approaches

ANTONIO YOUNG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The College of Liberal Arts is organizing a workshop Feb. 22 called Celebrating Teaching and Learning, the third in a series of workshops sponsored by COLA this academic year.

COLA's goals for the event are to support teaching excellence, provide additional training and new approaches in teaching, and influence inspiration and interest in the profession, said Diane Taub, associate dean for COLA.

"Teaching is a very important part of the College of Liberal Arts administration. So we are very pleased by these workshops," Taub said.

The workshops will begin at 1 p.m. with presentations by two award-winning teachers, Mary Hinchcliff-Pelias, the 1999 SIUC outstanding teacher, and Daradirek Elachai, the 2000 COLA outstanding teacher. The two recipients are associate professors in speech communication.

"We have wonderful and very dedicated professors in liberal arts," said Taub. "COLA has been the recipient of many teaching awards."

Wanda Oakley, COLA chief academic adviser, and James Allen, director of University Core Curriculum, will conduct the second segment called Practical Matters to Know as a Teacher. They will be informing professors of procedures and rules.

Student leaders differ on candle policy

USG president to distribute fire safety letter

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Two weeks after a candle started a fire that charred a Schneider Hall room, student government leaders are clashing on whether to ban candles in residence halls.

But they are not the only ones in disagreement about a candle policy.

When a candle was left lit and unattended in room 1208 Feb. 6, it more than scorched the room and poured smoke throughout the 12th floor. From the fire, questions arose: Should candles still be allowed in the residence halls? Should the candles be contained? What about incense or cigarettes? Are students taking the fire alarms seriously?

While these questions bubble in the minds of students, the student government and University officials, "one thing is for sure: something needs to be done."

SIUC has never had a policy against having lighted candles in residence halls. But then again, it was before anyone here can remember that a single candle fired such debate.

In the wake of the fire, Undergraduate Student Government President Sean Henry will send out a letter to students on campus about fire safety later this week.

Henry said he did not want to ban candles from the residence

Jeanne Hurley Simon

1922 ~ 2000

OUR WORD

Sunday morning, SIUC lost a friend. Intelligent and compassionate, ambitious and creative, Jeanne Hurley Simon will be remembered for all of the work and all of herself she gave to this community and many others.

Those who knew her, or knew of her accomplishments, also know they were lucky to have Jeanne in Southern Illinois. In 77 years, she was a lawyer, a state representative, an author and a consultant to the federal government. She continued to affect countless lives as the chairperson for the U.S. National Commission on Libraries and Information Sciences and, most recently, the recipient of an honorary doctorate from SIUC. She was an advocate for women and education. She was her husband's best friend. Those who didn't know about her can and should still learn because she is one of those special people who serve as an example in every arena they touch.

As for family and marriage, Jeanne and her husband Paul taught us together. In his book "P.S.: The Autobiography of Paul Simon," Paul said their partnership did not begin as "love at first sight." It was better than that. They shared a passion to make a difference, a track record of beating the odds and faith in the political process. They were the first Illinois legislators to marry while both were still in office. They were truly partners, and both were better for it.

When her husband ran for president in 1988, Jeanne showed us all, with class and determination, what it was to be a campaign wife. In her book "Codename: Scarlett," she details her role and her perspective of the campaign, beginning to finish. That role turned out to be that of a spokesperson, an organizer, a problem solver and more. When Paul faced the decision of running for president, Jeanne pulled out a yellow legal pad and made two lists: one pro and one con. When a reporter asked her what she thought of the title, "First Lady," Jeanne showed the country what her husband already knew; she was nobody's hood ornament, she had too much more to give for that.

"I explained that the title appeared to be a holdover from colonial days and our British ancestors," she recalled in her 1989 book. "That if I wanted a title, I would earn it, as I had my law degree and my seat in the Illinois General Assembly."

In 1994, Jeanne spoke for the SIUC Women's Law Forum about the changing roles of women. She discussed the growing contributions made by female attorneys to the United States, mentioning Janet Reno, Carol Mosely-Braun and Hillary Clinton. It was 1956, a decade before women's lib became a household term, when Jeanne was elected to the Illinois House of Representatives. She was a fighter, but she didn't let the fight eclipse the many other contributions she had to give. Now, when people speak of female attorneys who have made a difference, the list won't be complete without Jeanne Simon.

At SIUC, Jeanne and Paul brought students into their home every semester. They would ask about plans for the future and current struggles. Jeanne helped organize conventions on library issues that brought national attention to Morris Library and SIUC.

We feel the loss of a great person and an important example. Jeanne Simon's memory can make us all better students, teachers, wives, husbands, women and men. To those who were fortunate enough to know her personally, we send not only our condolences, but an assurance that she cannot and will not be forgotten.

Celebrities not immune to discrimination

Keeping It Real

Keeping It Real appears Mondays. Terry is a junior in journalism. His opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the DAILY EGYPTIAN.

Last Thursday's edition of the ABC news magazine "Downtown" had a segment about well-known African-American celebrities who have experienced racism.

Danny Glover, Hootie and the Blowfish's Darius Rucker and the prosecuting attorney in the O.J. Simpson trial Christopher Darden talked about their own personal dealings with discrimination.

Glover recalled a situation which made national headlines last fall when a cab driver threatened to call the police when he tried to sit in the front passenger side so his daughter and her friend could sit in the back seat.

Rucker, lead singer of one of the most popular bands in the country, was the only band member stopped by a Secret Service Agent at Vice President Al Gore's 1997 inaugural ball. The group was personally invited to play.

And Darden, one of the players in the most celebrated court case ever, tried to buy a Jaguar but couldn't because no one was interested in selling him the car, he said.

Unfortunately, none of this is new. Other African-American celebrities such as Blair Underwood, Wesley Snipes, and Denzel Washington have talked about dealing with prejudice despite their fame.

What was more troubling was a poll conducted by ABC that said 47 percent of the whites surveyed believe blacks experienced discrimination.

Why would these men, with all of their wealth, exaggerate about being victims of discrimination. For that matter, why would most blacks? No, I've never had trouble getting a cab in Chicago or Carbondale, only because I rarely take taxis.

But I have been followed or very closely observed in some department stores. I also know what it's like to have a white person cross the street when they see me coming toward them.

Am I exaggerating? Or, is it something else? Perhaps it's not that most blacks exaggerate, but that some whites would rather stick their heads in the sand and ignore the fact that discrimination is as bad as some say.

That might seem harsh, but so is racism. Of course, not all white people feel that way. To be fair, it could be that those African-Americans complain more about racism than attempt to solve it, which could be the source of the feelings behind the poll results.

If that's the basis of the exaggeration claim, maybe they have a point.

However, if those polled believe blacks are exaggerating discrimination because they don't believe racial discrimination is that frequent, they're sorely misinformed.

Discrimination is not the figment of Parking on campus is a privilege, not a right

DEAR EDITOR:

I find it rather interesting that underclassmen are complaining about the parking situation. Many universities across the nation do not even allow freshmen or sophomores to have vehicles with them at school, and yet SIUC is gracious enough to make parking available to those who want it.

When I first started here, if a freshman or sophomore did not have an off-campus job or needed a vehicle to reach the airport or the Carterville campus, he/she could not even get a green sticker. If residing in Thompson Point, he/she would have to walk all of the way to the Newman Center or to the City of Carbondale lots to get the car.

Yes, the green lot may seem like it is fair, but keep in mind that what you have is a "storage" permit. Do not park in commuter spaces, because there are many students who do not live on campus that need those spaces in order to get to their classes on time.

Do not park in the overnight lot either, because those who have the privilege to park there have already done their time either without a car or having to hike for it. Besides the fact that it is both selfish and inconsiderate to park in these spaces, you may find that your car has been moved from the space for you by the time you return to it.

It's not that hard to park where you are supposed to. Let's try it for once! I'll save a lot of people a lot of trouble.

DEAR EDITOR:

I was confused when I picked up the DAILY EGYPTIAN Wednesday. When I saw the rather large, sexually provocative front-page photo, I thought for a moment that I had a copy of Cosmopolitan or Details in hand. My confusion grew as I read the accompanying article on chastity. "Surely," I thought, "The DAILY EGYPTIAN does not intend to send the message that women, and women alone, are responsible for maintaining abstinence in a relationship. Surely, the DAILY EGYPTIAN is not saying that men are not able to control their 'animal' sexual urges and, thus, a bondage-like chastity belt is necessary. Surely, the DAILY EGYPTIAN does not mean to reinforce the already prevalent, fragmentation and objectification of women by presenting another easy image of conventional sexuality." Whether the DAILY EGYPTIAN meant to or not, however, these were many of the messages sent. While the photo is aesthetically sound (nice composition, interesting shapes), it is a cheap and easy ploy to get folks to pick up the paper. Come on DAILY EGYPTIAN, be more creative!

African-American's imagination. And don't fall into the trap of thinking that fame and fortune will make people immune to racism. Despite having been entertained people from all faces in this country for decades, African-Americans have always been discriminated against.

In a "60 Minutes" interview a few years back, Lena Horne, who is an accomplished world-famous singer, dancer and actress, was still driven to tears just remembering how things used to be.

We don't need to exaggerate about discrimination because we have better things to do with our time. And what good does it do for race relations to make up things like this? My advice to people who think it's all a bunch of funk is to listen to what others say.

Glover, Darden and Rucker are just trying to let people know that prejudice is still a problem today. And it doesn't matter if you're famous or not. It still smacks you in the face and doesn't hurt any less.

Discrimination exists and affects everyone — even those who don't want to acknowledge it.

concerning dropping and adding classes, wait-listing, proficiency exams, the core curriculum and various other topics.

"Most faculty don't know very much more about it [the core curriculum] than students," said Allen. "They need to be informed about what the core is and why it is required."

Susan Edgren, coordinator of Distance Learning, and David Blakeley, director of Technology and English Studies, will present the final workshop called Possibilities of Distance Learning. They will promote the use of technology in the classrooms by demonstrating how to put a course on the web, Taub said.

Last fall, COLA sponsored two workshops that included discussion tables with faculty and graduate students on promoting creativity and developing study skills in students. Faculty members also gave presentations on instructional technology, incorporating diversity, and dealing with student misconduct, Taub said.

Allen said the previous two workshops were successful and beneficial to the professors and the university. He said it is important to talk about education with the teachers because STUC is a research university.

"The faculty is responsible to spend half their time in the laboratory or library doing research and the other half teaching. So, really teaching is a part time job," Allen said. "That means many of them are sort of amateurs when it comes to learning how to teach. We don't talk about it very much on campus, but opportunities like this give us a chance to do just that."

Although primarily for the faculty, these workshops will indirectly affect the students because the ideas will be used in the classrooms, Allen said.

"Students need to know about core curriculum. We're doing something about that in our New Student Orientation program," Allen said. "It helps that students know a little more about what to expect from their classes before they start them."

halls, but a few USG senators disagree.

University Park Senator Alicia Gowan knows not many students are taking the fire alarms seriously.

Gowan, who lives in Neely Hall, said she does not dawdle when she hears an alarm.

"I'm up on the first one and out the door," Gowan said. "I'm not going to mess with it."

Something needs to be done to ensure other students heed the alarms, she said. Banning candles from the residence halls might be one solution, but she said she believes "people are going to sneak [candles] in anyway."

Henry has been in contact with University Housing Director Ed

Jones about what to do. On Tuesday, Jones met with nine residence hall representatives, who debated about containing candles and incense. Though no USG representatives were at the meeting and Henry said they "don't have an exact plan of action right now," he thinks containing candles is a viable option.

Christian Coogan, an East side senator, is in favor of banning candles. Coogan does not see a reason for having candles in the residence halls. He suggested if students needed candles in their rooms on campus that they get written permission from residence hall advisers. "They don't sit there and study by candle light," Coogan said. "If you really have to have one, put it in writing. Otherwise, I don't see why you need one."

Students living on campus are so used to hearing false alarms that many stall at the sound. There were at least 22 false alarms deliberately pulled on campus last semester.

Brad Dillard, assistant director of the Physical Plant, has tracked fire alarms on campus during the past three years. He says many of the false alarms in the residence halls are the result of pranksters, not mechanical failures.

"We don't have the same problem on the academic side of campus with the same equipment," Dillard said. "Normally, we can detect any type of vandalism."

But, he said, officials cannot classify a false alarm as vandalism if there is no physical evidence or witnesses to the crime.

"It's really up to the students to police their counterparts and turn people in because we can't be in all places at once," Dillard said.

said the couple's main dedication was to the public.

"It's a real loss to the University and to all of Southern Illinois because she was such a great asset to the University and the region," Jackson said.

Carolyn Snyder, dean of Library Affairs, worked alongside Jeanne to improve Morris Library, even under the most difficult conditions. In September, Jeanne made a conference telephone call from her hospital bed in Houston after undergoing surgery for a brain tumor, to keep up to date with the library.

"Jeanne was a fine individual and an outstanding professional," Snyder said. "She was someone who we all respected and admired. We'll miss her a great deal."

The love for the political arena enabled Jeanne to achieve landmark contributions for the betterment of society. During Jeanne's time in the legislature, she sponsored a measure that became law restricting the wiretapping of telephone conversations.

"She knew how to get the job done," Lawrence said. "Some people may have a good idea about something that ought to be law, Jeanne Simon knew how to get it done."

Jeanne was one of only a few women in law school and in the state legislature, but that did not stop her from putting her ideas into practice.

"She was a tremendous role model," Lawrence said. "She gave [women] the kind of hope that they needed."

She knew how to get the job done. Some people may have a good idea about something that ought to be law. Jeanne Simon knew how to get it done.

"friend and personal confidant."

Kluemper, who has coached the SIU women for eight years, announced this would be his final season with the Salukis earlier this year, citing the desire for a new direction. He plans to return to school to pursue a career in physical therapy.

Following Walker's speech, SIU swimmer Mary Beth Wehner gave an address on behalf of the team. Recognizing Kluemper's qualities that extend outside of the pool, her speech raised an applause from the packed bleacher area.

"Mark has been a great role model, a great leader, a great motivator, a great mentor, a great husband to his wife Kim and a great dad [to his sons]," Wehner said.

The day was also a melancholy one for Kluemper.

"I was on the edge all day,"

Kluemper said. "I was trying to block it out and I've done a good job of it all year, but it came back today. They're a really special group of young ladies and I'm going to miss them a whole lot."

For some, the realization of Kluemper leaving did not come until after the competition was over.

"I was really upset, because it didn't hit me until after the speech that Mark was gone," SIU swimmer Jenna Meckler said.

Meckler and Cary Kinnamen were members of the relay team that included Brooke Radostits and Niki Michaelidou. The squad ended the meet by setting an MVC record in the 400 freestyle relay with a time of 3:30.37.

"This is what we really wanted to do for Mark, we wanted to take Mark out with a bang," Kinnamen said. "He wanted this as much as we did, and we wanted to do it for him."

Daniela Muniz, Amber Mullins, Meckler and Radostits secured the Saluki conquest by each winning their respective events Saturday. The Salukis broke two conference records Thursday before Meckler broke another Valley mark in the 100 freestyle with a time of 51.45.

Despite leading SIU to another championship, Kluemper was passed up for the honor of MVC Women's Swimming Coach of the Year by Evansville coach Clark Campbell, who won the honors for both men's and women's coach of the year.

"I was kind of mad that he didn't win it, but I understand why they gave it to [Campbell]," Meckler said. "At the start of the tournament, we had no idea Evansville would make a run. They came out of nowhere."

Although the Salukis were on a high from adding another Valley championship, there was no mistaking the mixed emotions the swimmers had because of Kluemper's departure.

"Most of all, we know [Kluemper] as a friend," Wehner said. "We are all going to miss Mark a lot."

Working together is a way for international students to get more involved in campus life, Lakhani said. Students from other countries will also have a chance to perform and prepare food for some of the events.

Lily Sinha is president of the International Student Association and a Carbondale native. Sinha said there are people in Carbondale who will probably interact with outsiders from another country for the first time through the Festival.

"A lot of people I know haven't stepped foot out of Carbondale, or Illinois," said Sinha. "My parents are from India. It's a great opportunity, right here in your backyard, to see how different people live, and get a little glimpse of what their culture is about."

Schayman hopes other students will learn, as she did, about different cultures from experiencing them up close and personal.

"It's really nice because it's not like somebody else is trying to imitate us," she said. "They can see that this is the way we are and appreciate what we're doing."

After scoring just two points with no field goals in the first half, SIU freshman guard Kent Williams scored 14 crucial second-half points to finish with 16. Junior forward Josh Cross gave a solid all-around effort with eight points, 11 rebounds and six assists. And while senior guard Ricky Collum connected on just 1-of-5 field goals for eight points, he put forth a typical Collum-like performance by doing all the right things on the court.

"Ricky Collum is just a quiet assassin," Weber said. "He takes care of the ball calmly. Anytime (Creighton guard Ryan) Sears' got on a run, we got (Ricky) back on him. I wish he could guard more than one person on the court."

Sears, a noted Saluki killer, led Creighton (18-8, 9-6) with 21 points on 6-of-11 shooting, while Bluejays freshman sharpshooter Kyle Korver scored 14 of his 19 points in the first half.

The victory makes up for SIU's disappointing 72-66 home loss to Creighton Jan. 8, when the Bluejays made a late run to pull away.

"The games, I thought, were exact replicas, but this time we made all the plays when we had to," Weber said.

Unfortunately, few Saluki fans were able to make the trip to Omaha to see SIU's outstanding performance. However, Wednesday night's first-place matchup is a much shorter venture for SIU fans.

"We need (the Arena) packed with everybody on our side, because it's going to be an exciting game," Thunell said.

The last time the Salukis and Indiana State met, the Sycamores (19-7, 12-3) cruised to a 91-56 drubbing Jan. 19 in Terre Haute, Ind.

"We didn't come out and play last time and I remember after that game, coach Weber said we still have a shot," recalled Thunell.

The Salukis are 8-1 since that setback and have won a season-high five straight, setting the stage for the long anticipated rematch with the Sycamores. With a chance to tie Indiana State for first place, Weber is pleading for a large and rambunctious crowd to congest the Arena for what will be the Salukis' biggest game in five years.

"I know Wednesday night's a church night, but please say your prayers Wednesday morning and come to the game," Weber said.

Angela Timmons with six seconds remaining to play tied the game at 68-68, leading to Creighton's ill-timed foul.

SIU's victory over the Bluejays (9-13, 4-10) bumps the Salukis to seventh place in the Missouri Valley Conference. The win also increases SIU's chances to qualify for the MVC tournament.

Surprisingly, Lawary was one of the key players for the Salukis.

Lawary, who has played sparingly this season, stepped up in a big way scoring a career-high 14 points and five rebounds in just nine minutes of action.

"Danielle was the difference in the ball game," said Julie Beck, SIU women's basketball coach. "She is the only player on the team that we can post up and flat out turn around and shoot. Terica Hathaway followed her lead, and really came through for us in the end. I am proud of them."

Hathaway scored a team-high 19 points with eight rebounds. Junior forward Maria Niebrugge added 14 points and 10 rebounds.

For the Bluejays, Timmons racked up a game-high 22 points and freshman forward Teresa Wessling chipped in 19 points.

Beck thinks the win over Creighton will boost the Salukis' confidence for the final three games of the season, including Saturday's road trip to the University of Evansville.

"This win may not sound like much, but with the struggle we have been through, it's a lot," Beck said. "We held on to win on the road, and believe me, we will take it."

Bears dive too deep for MVC title, says Walker

SIU men's swim coach accuses SMSU coach of taking title in unethical manner

JAVIER SERNA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

In the wake of the SIU men's swimming and diving team's second-place finish at the hands of Southwest Missouri State University in this weekend's MVC championships, Saluki head coach Rick Walker expressed displeasure with Bears' head coach Jack Steck's path to victory.

The Salukis' conference title streak ended at five, as Southwest Missouri State outscored the Salukis by 30.5 points, 928.5-898.

Although SIU blew away its competition in the swimming events by breaking scores of MVC records, the Bears gained the edge by using six divers, while the Salukis had only one. Walker said Steck disregarded his swimmers' safety by putting three of his swimmers in the diving competition.

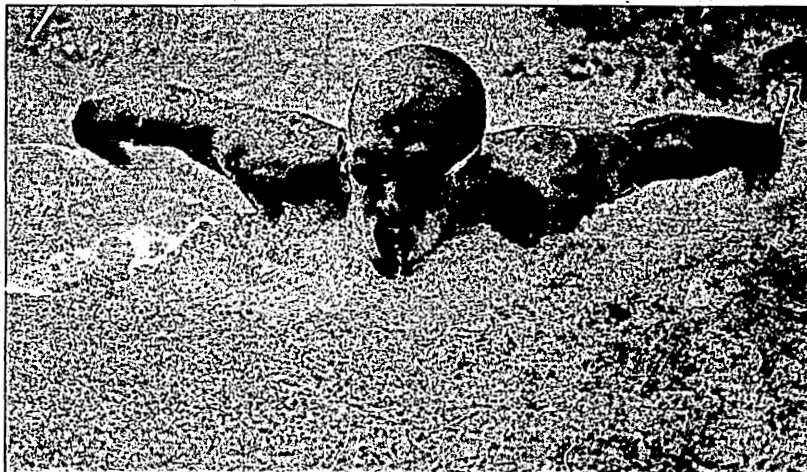

"I could have put swimmers on the [diving] board and scored points, but I think when you say, 'I'm willing to risk the health and well-being of our athletes to win a meet'... if I subject myself to that, then I need to be somewhere else," Walker said.

Walker gave the Bears credit for defeating his team, but was clearly miffed at how his team's championship streak ended.

"I don't think our professors would say, 'anything for an A, including the cheat sheet,'" Walker said.

Steck, though, has no regrets about his decision.

"We're here to win this conference, so we look for the top team's weaknesses," Steck said, who ironically was named MVC

Chris Cliberto, a senior from Elizabethtown, Ky., competes in the 400 Individual Medley during the MVC Championship at the Recreation Center Friday. The SIU men's team finished second, losing to Southwest Missouri State by 30.5 points.

coach of the year, sharing the honor with the University of Evansville coach Clark Campbell. "We knew that diving was one of their weaknesses, so we've been practicing night and day in that area. They're a great team, but that is their weakness, so we exploited it."

The lone Saluki diver, Randy McPherson, finished third in the 3-meter diving competition, while Southwest Missouri State divers placed first and second. In the 1-meter diving event, McPherson again trailed three Southwest Missouri State divers with a fourth-place finish.

The points that the Bears were able to accumulate by having six divers — 174 points to the Salukis' 34 diving points — were too much for the streaking Saluki swimmers to overcome.

The Salukis were led by Herman Louw, who repeated as MVC men's swimmer of the year. Louw broke the conference mark in the 200 freestyle with a time of 1:38.30, a time that puts him in contention for a spot to compete in the NCAA tournament. Louw also led four relay squads that set conference records.

Saluki swimmer Chrysanthous Papachrysanthou broke two MVC records in the 50 freestyle and set two other records in the 100 freestyle.

"I was really pumped up for this championship," Papachrysanthou said.

Matt Munz also set a conference mark for the Salukis in the 200 backstroke while Come Prozesky set a conference mark in the 200 breaststroke.

Walker is proud of the performances of his swimmers and said his team is still the Valley's best.

"[Southwest Missouri State] has done a great job," Walker said. "It's been a long time coming, but the best team is still right here."

Salukis set the stage

Saturday's 92-83 victory at Creighton leaves SIU and ISU playing for first place Wednesday night

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

It was one of those nights. And lately, it's starting to look like one of those seasons for the SIU men's basketball team.

The Salukis displayed their best performance of the year Saturday night, defeating a solid Creighton University ballclub 92-83 in Omaha, Neb. The win sets up a clash with Indiana State University for first-place rights of the Missouri Valley Conference Wednesday night at the SIU Arena.

The Salukis (17-9, 11-4) received several tremendous efforts, but senior forward Chris Thunell and junior forward Abel Schrader played an especially colossal role in the Salukis' biggest win of the season. Thunell connected on 10-of-14 shots for 26 points, while Schrader scored a career-high 17 points off the bench.

"When you win on the road, you've got to have somebody play a special game," said Saluki head coach Bruce Weber in his postgame radio show. "It was just our night. It was a special night and I'm just so proud of them."

It was a nip-and-tuck game before Schrader scored back-to-back three-point buckets midway through the second half to trigger a 19-5 SIU run, catapulting the Salukis to a 14-point lead they would never relinquish. The Salukis shot 16-of-20 from the free-throw line the final 2:50 to seal the victory.

Several Salukis helped break open the game, which was tied 36-36 at halftime.

Freshman's redemption

McDowell makes good on second opportunity to win a game with clutch free throws

CHRISTINE BOLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

About a month ago, SIU women's basketball freshman guard Molly McDowell stood at the free-throw line at the end of a game, desperate to sink two free throws that would have sealed a win against Drake University.

It didn't happen. McDowell made just one of the two free throws, sending the Salukis into an overtime session that resulted in a heartbreaking loss.

On Saturday, McDowell found herself in a similar situation. After Creighton's Krissie Spanheimer fouled McDowell with 0.3 seconds remaining in the game, she headed to the free-throw line with another chance to win a game for the Salukis.

Fortunately for SIU, history did not repeat itself. She swished in the winning free throw, giving the Salukis a key 70-68 win over the Bluejays.

"I was more relieved than happy that I made the free throws," McDowell said. "I am just glad I had the opportunity to redeem myself."

It did not look like she would have that chance with eight minutes left in the game, when the Salukis were down by nine points and seemed well on the way to extending their losing streak to five games. But within four minutes, Creighton's lead was cut to one point after a basket by Saluki freshman forward Danielle Lawary.

SIU (7-17, 4-11) eventually took the lead, but a jump shot by Bluejay guard
