SIU Student Dies After Skiing At Crab Orchard

Rare Heart Tumor Blamed For Death

A rare heart tumor was found as the cause of death of a 21-year-old SIU student Sunday.

John Harlow "Jack" Mil-

ward of Mt. Vernon collapsed and died about 4 p.m. Sunday after water skiing at Crab Orchard Lake. He would have been a senior, majoring in psychology, in the fall term at SIU.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the Myers Chapel in Mt. Vernon.

Dr. Lewis J. Rossiter, Carbondale pathologist, performed an autopsy and said the cause of death was a benign tumor of the heart, with resultant heart failure. The condition is considered rare.

Milward was a high school football star at Mt. Vernon, where his late father was principal of Mt. Vernon Township High School. He had been employed by a roofing company this summer.

Jackson County Coroner Floyd Crawshaw said Milward had returned to the boat docks area after water skiing, smoked a cigarette, and returned to the water to get his skis.

The coroner said Milward called to a companion, Frank Moore of Mt. Vernon, and Moore went to his aid. Milward lost consciousness and Moore carried him ashore.

He did not regain consciousness; a post-mortem was conducted by Dr. Rossiter Sunday afternoon.

Before enrolling at SIU, Milward was a student at Kansas State University. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of Mt. Vernon, and is survived by his mother and a brother.

He was born in Trenton, N.J., on Dec. 9, 1941.

Friends may call at the Myers Chapel after 4 p.m. today.

Burial will be in Memorial Gardens at Mt. Vernon.

Dixieland Music Lecture Scheduled

Edward R. Kittrell of the Management Department, who leads a Dixieland band for relaxation, will be the featured speaker at Wednesday's Kultur Korner.

He will discuss Dixieland jazz at 10 a.m. in the Bowyer Hall classroom. The program is open to student and faculty wives.

Plan 'A' Will Discuss Economics Wednesday

Plan "A" will have as its discussion leader, Jerome J. Hollinghorst, lecturer of economics Wednesday.

Hollinghorst will discuss "Debts, Spending, and Taxes". The discussion will take place at the Plan "A" house from 7-10 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

Gus says it is harder and harder to get into college. It won't be long before a kid has to be seven feet tall or mentally retarded before the people in the admissions office will even talk to him.

Congeniality Title Won By Miss Southern

Trudy Gidcumb won the title of "Miss Congeniality" in the Miss Illinois contest at Aurora Saturday.

She was entered in the contest as Miss Southern Illinois University. Miss Gidcumb, of Eldorado, is a junior majoring in elementary education.

Judith Schlieper of Decatur was chosen as Miss Illinois. She was crowned by Pam Gilbert of Carbondale, Miss Illinois in 1962.

Miss Kay DeVault, also an SIU student, won the swimsuit preliminaries in the contest.

Ph. D Grants Available For Far East Study

Information on grants for special study programs in India and Nationalist China during the summer of 1964 has been received by the SIU Office of the Coordinator of International Programs.

One institute is on Indian civilization, the other on Chinese. The purpose will be to give the participants a brief but intensive survey of Indian or Chinese history, institutions and culture, to enrich their teaching in the United States.

The eight-week institutes will offer 20 grants for each, and will cover tuition and round trip travel. Grantees will require their own maintenance expenses, estimated at a minimum of $800.

Grants are specifically for undergraduate teachers, preferably for persons holding the Ph.D. in either the humanities or the social sciences.

General information concerning U.S. government grants for university lecturing and advanced research abroad is available in the Office of the Coordinator of International Programs.

North Loses Battle By A Broken Toe

A Civil War casualty was reported on campus Monday.

It seems that a minor verbal skirmish over the late, lamented conflict developed between a young woman from the South who is sharing a room with a young woman from the North during the High School communication's workshop.

FACES IN A CROWD - Jerome P. Minnihhan, lecturer in Printing and Photography, and his two young sons, Tom, 3, (right) and Mark, 4, were among the interesting faces recorded by a photographer at a recent university function. Report From England:

Teenage Exchange Aids International Understanding

By Nick Pasqual
Egyptian Editor

TUNBRIDGE WELLS, England -- To teenagers with an urge to see faraway places, cultural exchange programs may provide a once-in-a-lifetime chance to satisfy that wish.

One such exchange, the Youth for Understanding teenage exchange program, aims to promote international understanding by sending American teenagers abroad to live with European families for a two-month holiday and by placing European students in American homes and schools for a year. Nearly 400 American teens and a similar number from Europe will participate this year. U.S. sponsors of the 11-year-old exchange are the Michigan and Ann Arbor-Washenaw Councils of Churches.

"The purpose of the scheme is to promote understanding between different people," says the English coordinator of the program, Richard G. Clarke. "Understanding does not necessarily bring agreement, but without understanding you can never reach agreement."

Tunbridge Wells, a city of 39,000 in the "Garden of England" area southeast of London, is the summer home of three Michigan girls in the exchange. They arrived late in June and return to the U.S. about Aug. 22 with European teens beginning their year in the U.S.

What experiences do they find most enjoyable? "Meeting people," says Donna Green, 17, visiting castles and cathedrals with her host family, the P.G. Pratts, is also a pleasant diversion for her.

The programs of Gail Merchant, 18, and Carol Clohset, 17, similarly reflect their efforts to become familiar with English life. They have planned visits to private and state-supported schools, to local landmarks, political protest meetings and agricultural shows; chats with local teenagers, other foreign students and politicians; and bicycle hikes in the area.

"They are so interested in everything," says their host's wife, Mrs. Clarke.

The Clarkes are no ordinary hosts. In their spare time they have handled arrangements since the program was introduced into Britain in 1957. That year they had as guests two Michigan girls, the first of six to visit them since.

The program strives to make the students members of their European host families, not just guests. Gail and Carol share duties, such as washing dishes and ironing clothes, with their hosts' daughter, Rosalind, 14.

At the Pratt home Donna shares similar tasks, including fruit-picking in the garden

Perennial Teenager Explains His Art Of Shedding Years

If there ever was a perennial teenager, it's Don Russell.

As far as being the genuine article, however, Russell, 25, is a fake.

Call him a fake if you will, but call him a good one--for in the past year, Russell has been not one, but four, different teenagers.

In the play, "Huck Finn," he played the part of Huck; in "Shepherd of the Hills," he was Pete; in "One, Two, Three, Let's All Jump In," he was Dave; and in "La Pintura," he played the part of Felipe. All are Juvenile roles.

DON'S JEWELRY

102 S. Ill. Ave.

The string does not end here, however, for he is now rehearsing for yet another teenage role, that of Tommy Djilas, age 15, in the SIU Music Department's production of Meredith Wilson's "Music Man" to be presented in Shryock on Aug. 2, 3, and 4.

Tommy Djilas, according to Russell, "is a young kid, but not a smart aleck." He is also 10 years Russell's junior. How does Russell go about lopping a decade off his age?

"From the stage, it is one's actions, movements, and voice that carry across one's age," said Russell. "When I played my first juvenile role--it was Huck Finn--I just observed my younger nephew and his friends and tried imitating. I found this to bring the best results as far as knowing how a juvenile acts and talks."

Of course, size helps a lot, Russell admits. In fact, in tennis shoes and levis he looks deceptively small. Actually, he's five feet, six inches tall and weighs 125 pounds. He has a built-in elevator in his shock of reddish brown hair which can be combed to add an inch or two to his height, if he needs it.

Russell is convincing, but he has to be. The girl who plays the part opposite him in "Music Man" is 100 per cent, bona fide teenager. She is Phyllis Green, brown eyed, brown haired, 14 years old, and a sophomore at Murphysboro Township High School. "Yeah, he plays my boyfriend," said Phyllis, and added: "He does seem younger."

"When I'm rehearsing I feel younger because the actions and personality of the character I'm playing become involved with my own," Russell said.

As far as make-up for the part goes, Russell said that it's just a matter of "a little rose on the cheeks."

Russell, a senior from Herrin majoring in art and minoring in theater, said that he had always been interested in acting and theater. But he added that he was bashful and shy in high school and couldn't get up enough nerve to try out for the plays.

"Then at the end of my sophomore year in college," he said, "I had speech, which seemed to give me enough courage to try out for a college production. I got a part."

"Since then I have been very active in the theater and am thinking very seriously about trying theater as a career."

Annemarie Krause Studies Mennonites In Paraguay

The American Philosophical Society has awarded a grant of $1,500 to Annemarie Krause, associate professor of geography, for research on Mennonite colonies in the Chaco region of Paraguay, South America.

More specifically, she will study some of the transportation, agricultural and industrial developments that have occurred in the region during the last 10 years.

Miss Krause left SIU the first of this month and was to have arrived in Peru by last week. After visiting several cities in Peru, she plans to go to Paraguay the first of August.

During 1950-51 Miss Krause spent half of a six-months leave in the Chaco region on a land use study of the Mennonite colonies. The study was part of her work for a doctoral degree from the University of Chicago in 1952.

Miss Krause has been a member of the SIU faculty since 1930. She is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and received her master's degree from the University of Illinois. She has held offices in the Illinois Geographical Society, the National Council of Geography Teachers, the American Association of University Professors and the American Association of University Women.

of their century-old home.

The girls quickly become involved with their host families' lives. Carol, for instance, is the latest in a series of American girls whom Mrs. Clarke has taught to knit. Donna is helping her foster-sister, Brenda, 16, to sew a wardrobe for her planned year as an exchange student in the U.S. Donna has also assisted at the wholesale stationer's office her host owns.

Have any problems occurred?

"A few," Donna admits with a smile. Unseasonably cool weather has made her pile on extra blankets at night, and she is seldom without a sweater.

Pounds and shillings and pennies still make her head spin. Converting prices into money values she understands is a slow process, she says. American participants were selected after a competitive screening that included personal interviews. Late in June they flew to their European destinations.

Transportation is the major expense, since the foster parents take care of living expenses. The cost for American students is about $700 plus pocket money, Donna says.

Her expense money for the trip came from her parents, from relatives, and from odd jobs, she says. Partial scholarships from service organizations enable some students to participate who could not go without financial help.

The Pratts' daughter, Brenda, and other students from Europe go through a screening similar to the American one. In August 14 English students are expected to be among nearly 400 European teens to leave for the U.S.

More Continental students than English ones have gone to the U.S. under the program, she notes. The cause may trace to the English educational system.

"There is such competition to get into the Universities that parents feel nervous about letting their sons or daughters go until they've gained entrance into the University," she says.

College-bound English students who would like to participate in such a program seldom go before beginning their two years of college-preparatory studies.

Man Held For Attack On Coed

A former mental patient who allegedly attempted to rape an SIU coed Saturday night has been confined at Anna State Hospital on an emergency commitment.

He is Robert D. Dunaven, 31, of Sterling, who was being evaluated at the University for employment at the SIU Employment Training Project, which is conducted at VTI.

The alleged attack occurred at Baldwin Hall about 9:30 p.m. Saturday. The coed said Dunaven pulled a knife and made advances but she was not raped.

The girl, from Mt. Vernon, signed a complaint charging Dunaven with aggravated battery.

Dunaven was arrested after the coed gave a description of the man to SIU Police.

The girl said she had been visiting a friend in another part of the dormitory. When she returned the man was in her room.

Security Of A Glass Mug Prevents Need Of Tin Cup

An SIU student, who insists on anonymity, had a harrowing escape from blindness Saturday.

Or so he told his wife. It seems he was downtown in quest of baby food when he suddenly recalled the warnings about the effects of the eclipse. There he was, in broad late afternoon daylight, caught flat-footed in the shadow of the moon.

He immediately sought, and found, shelter. "Was a place of refuge, a haven of safety from the damaging solar fallout from behind the shadow of the moon.

The shelter was crowded, but it turned out to be a place of public accommodation. Taking off his dark glasses, he waited to adjust to the safe semi-darkness.

Meanwhile, he heard the clink of frosted mugs, the nervous chatter of fellow escapees. Several white-shirted men stood behind a long, wooden, flat-topped structure that stood about waist-high. One of them worked a lever from which flowed a substance that was amber on the bottom, and white and foamy on the top.

The anonymous student accepted one such libation, for which the man in the white shirt exacted payment, the price of safety. Glancing about, our refugee saw others who were in the same trying circumstance.

Conversation started; it evolved about inconsequential matters which reminded our hero about talk heard during the ride to the beach in the landing craft.

Outside, the shadows of eclipses deepened. Small brave boys with pinholes cut in cardboard boxes watched while the moon cut a crescent into the sun.

None of this for our man, however; he had family responsibilities and he represented its breadwinner. Living dangerously was not for him.

After an adequate passage of time, he ventured from this place of refuge and comfort.

He bade his adieu to those who remained behind; he tightly grasped the bag of baby food and stepped onto the sidewalk.

He could hardly wait to tell his wife of his narrow escape.

Need For Liberal Education

Third In A Series

What happens to the 4,000,000 people on college campuses today? Why is it that so many spend four years or longer in higher education, and come away indistinguishable from fellow-citizens who have not had the same privileges? Why is it that so few develop a lasting interest in good music, in good books, or any books at all?

There can be no question that some of the students who are led to the fountains of knowledge, but do not drink, are hopelessly lacking in capacity and inclination. Another factor is the strongly pragmatic tradition of American education, the exaltation of what is thought to be useful and practical over what is considered "high-toned" or deficient in immediate utility. A third reason, related to the second, is that liberal arts all too often get lip-service rather than real emphasis in the institutions that are supposed to be defending and sheltering them.

Since we think of the liberal arts as directed toward the cultivation of the mind and the enlightenment of the individual, nothing could contribute more significantly to the quality of American education than excellence in the teaching of the liberal arts. This is important for the undergraduate programs at large universities and for the smaller colleges scattered over the land. It is at the heart of any meaningful effort to improve American education.

In these times of rapid change and pressing financial difficulties, no college wants to remain a pastoral retreat for the instruction of wealthy young dilettantes and none wants to provide more technical instruction for specialists. George Bernard Shaw once said that the education of a gentleman could be described as a situation in which "a man teaches something he does not know to somebody else who has no aptitude for it," but Shaw also shared Robert Hutchins's scorn for overspecialization. Nobody can be a pure specialist, Shaw said, without being in the strict sense an idiot.

Who'd be an Editor? None but the brave.
 Nobody's darling, and everyone's slave.
 Glamorous think you? Just look at him then:
 Saddest of all your professional men.
 Wary of finding himself in the dock,
 Waging perpetual war on the clock,
 Stalking reporters who're boozing in pubs,
 Saying farewell to ephemeral 'subs':
 Doing his best to be fair in his views,
 Keeping his peace with the Reds and the Blues.
 Curbing the critic too keen to condemn
 When amateur singers attempt 'La Boheme'.
 Launching campaigns that are doomed from the start,
 Comforting staff in affairs of the heart.
 Helpful with causes, but chary of quacks,
 Curt with the councillor grinding his axe,
 Kind to young hopefuls who seldom say "Thanks",
 Tactful with Mayors who've come from the ranks.
 Courteous when chairwomen crossly complain,
 "Only ten lines for our meeting again!"
 Patient at prize-givings, bright at bazaars,
 Deaf to the pals who have mis-parked their cars.
 Fuming when bigwigs elect to drop dead
 Just as the paper is going to bed.
 Longing for home, and his pipe, and his tweeds,
 But dining in tails at gargantuan feasts:
 Hopeful of stealthily stealing away
 Lest 'Pro Bono Publico' swoop on his prey.
 Nobody's hero, everyone's dog,
 Buttonholed everywhere, never 'incog',
 So, if you're game to be put to the test,
 Gird on your halo and bulletproof vest!

We Pay Them Both:

Is Irving Dilliard Good Enough?

Why do you continue to print the Goldwater column without rebuttal from people like Senator Douglas, James Reston, and Marquis Childs? What is this column, a free handout?

The column "Red Strategy: Back Dems" on July 19 is the worst collection of half-truths, innuendos, double talk, and just pure drivel I have ever seen. So what's wrong with keeping "the lines of communication open" with Russia? If the miserable little ol' group of Communists in this country are in the vanguard for civil rights, then shame on the rest of us! The internal danger to democracy in the United States is not from homegrown communists but from the powerful extreme right who: supporting Goldwater and v are the enemies of men I Eisenhower, Rockefeller, S venson, Senator Douglas, S President Kennedy.

IRVING DILLIARD

Just 'Campaign Oratory'

It is easy to tell that a Presidential election year is less than six months away. All the evidence anyone could possibly need lies in the increasing frequency with which the newspapers report complaints about "socialism" in the United States.

Coupled with these outcries about "socialistic" ventures in Washington is almost always the assertion that it is going to be necessary to turn the Presidency over to some economic and political McKinleyite in 1964 to save the nation from certain destruction.

Just a few days ago a cartoonist put all this into a single picture. It showed John Q. Public—the average American citizen—on his hands and knees shutting himself into a corner with the paint of "socialism." The only escape for him appeared to be a trapdoor in the ceiling above and thru the opening appeared the head of Barry Goldwater, presumably about to come to the rescue of the boxed-in citizen.

Irving Dilliard

Political Hogwash

Surely not many people are taken in by this kind of political hogwash. Surely most of those who spout it off know how silly it sounds to anyone who has even the most elementary knowledge of our history over the last 30 years.

Apparently the political reactionaries still think there is "mileage" in the worn-out bleats. Apparently they think it is no more necessary to get down to brass tacks now than in the past.

Just what do they mean by "socialism"? Do they mean our system of social security which has saved the country from perhaps as many as a half dozen economic depressions by helping maintain purchasing power by the public?

If they mean social security when they cry out against "socialism," let them say so. The voters would take their measure in a hurry.

Or perhaps by "socialism" they mean unemployment compensation, which is all that stands to protect countless thousands of Americans subject to seasonal unemployment. Or maybe they mean job retraining for people displaced by automation.

If that is what they mean by "socialism," they ought to be willing to say it.

Then, again, they may mean the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation that protects the bank depositor in the event of a bank failure.

What of Schools, Defense?

Or perhaps they mean the public school system, the state highway police, or the army or the navy or the air force, all government enterprises at differing levels, doing for the people jobs which the people want done for them in the only way they can be done—thru collective effort.

If "socialism" is ruining us all, and the Republicans want to save the country from its terrible consequences, why did they not root out all these "socialistic" schemes during the eight years when Gen. Eisenhower was in the White House? They passed the chance by.

The answer, of course, is that the hue and cry about socialism is just "campaign oratory," as the late Wendell L. Willkie frankly described such talk. Get ready to hear and read a lot more of it. The Goldwaters and Dirksens and Hallecks think that is the way to win elections. They grossly underestimate the intelligence and information of the American people.

* You would think that experience would teach them something eventually!

Dupree Outruns Russian In 800 Meters Event

Former SIU Athlete Wins Race In 1:47.8

Jim Dupree, former SIU athlete, won the 800 meters event for the U.S. track squad in a dual meet against Russia Sunday afternoon in Lenin Stadium.

Dupree's victory was one of seven firsts for the U.S. team which held a 61-54 lead over the first day's action. Russia came back Sunday to give two points from the U.S. but could not win. Final score was U.S., 119, Russia, 117.

That was the narrowest margin victory for the U.S. in any of the previous outings.

Dupree's victory probably ranks as his greatest thrill in his running career. He has led to win the big race in the past but was not to be tried Saturday.

Last year against Russia Dupree finished third.

However, he turned the tables on Valeri Buyshev who at him last year. Dupree's winning time was 1:47.8, two thirds of a second faster than Buyshev's second place time. Dupree represented the Soviet Union.

Musical Man's Tickets Reported 'Going Fast'

Tickets for the SIU Summer Opera Workshop production of "The Music Man" are being sold at a rapid rate, a spokesman at the University Center Information desk said Monday.

The musical, highly successful on Broadway and in movie version, will be presented Aug. 2, 3 and 4 at Shryock Auditorium and on Oct. 11, 12, and 13. Tickets sell for 50 cents, and $1.50.

He won the NCAA half-mile championship in 1962 and finished second in the AAU half-mile race the same year. This year he didn't get to run in the NCAA but finished second in the AAU meet.

Dupree transferred to SIU three years ago after a year at the University of New Mexico. His home town is Pompano Beach, Fla.

The U.S. squad's performances were far from impressive. It was built up to be the greatest track squad ever to represent the U.S.

In the first day of action the U.S. men won seven of the 11 events. The U.S. 400-meter relay team was disqualified for an illegal baton pass and that was the beginning of the disappointments.

Hayes Jones, who was believed to be unbeatable in the high hurdles, finished third in the race behind teammate Blaine Lindgren and Russian Anatoli Makhailov.

A crowd of 67,000 watched the first day's races in the Stadium. Sunday's action was watched by 75,000 people but wire service stories said the crowd looked smaller than estimated.

Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev watched the final day's action and also witnessed the Russian defeat. But the day was not a complete loss for Khrushchev as the Russian women soundly trounced the U.S. women, 72-28. Russia took every first in women's competition.

White County Establishes Arts Crafts Industry

A group in White county has incorporated to establish an industry in the field of arts and crafts.

Frank Sehnert, SIU Community Development Service consultant who has been working with the group, said plans are for the new industry to make and sell ceramic pieces that will include such native attractions as Camel Rock, the Old Stone Face, the Bald Knob Cross and the Pamona Natural Bridge.

Also to be designed and produced will be objects in the fields of painting, textiles and graphic arts.

The new organization is Creative Arts, Inc., formed by people from Carmi, Grayville and Crossville. A kickoff meeting was held Monday night at Grayville to sell stock at $1 per share.

A driving force in the industrial project is Mrs. Gerald Pearson of Crossville, a native of Grayville who teaches art and crafts as an instructor in Southern's Technical and Adult Education department. For five years she has taught students at her farm home and six of them will be employed by the industry in making ceramic figures and other items.

Mrs. Pearson, who has been encouraged by the Southern Illinois Arts and Crafts Guild, of which Sehnert is president, makes her own moulds for the ceramics after developing the ideas.

One of the big needs is a large kiln costing $3,000 to bake the ceramic items, Sehnert said.

Can you imagine a barge containing 1,000 tons of liquid oxygen and a barge containing 1,000 tons of liquid hydrogen colliding with a barge containing 1,000 tons of diesel oil?

The SIU Transportation Institute has imagined the result of such an occurrence and is taking steps to prevent a catastrophe of this kind.

The Institute has received a $18,000 grant to investigate the transportation of hazardous cargoes on inland waterways. This investigation is being conducted in conjunction with the Coast Guard to find methods to improve the transportation safety for barges carrying dangerous cargo.

Lynn S. McWaters of Houston, Tex., has been named search associate for the S. Coast Guard-SIU study. McWaters, a consulting chemical engineer and national chairman of the Marine Chemists Association, was secured by A.R. MacMillan, director of Southern's Transportation Institute, to handle phase Two of the Coast Guard-financed project.

The project is officially titled "Operation Riversafe." Phase One of the project involves setting up the organization, and the second phase calls for a survey of research now being done by public and private agencies that would contribute to the safer handling of dangerous cargoes.

Compilation of statistics on accidents on the inland waterways is part of the study.

McWaters said, "You can find facts and figures on all types of disasters involving ships at sea but little or nothing concerning tour boats, barges and barge terminals along our navigable waterways." The persons working on the project are attempting to go back to 1953 to set up a ten-year accident experience record as an inventory of the problem.

McWaters expects to complete the current phase of Operation Riversafe and write a report by Nov. 6.

Rules and regulations that are now being enforced on the inland waterways were set up for ocean-going vessels and in the past these were sufficient. However, with an increase in traffic in the last 10 years the inadequacies of the ocean vessel regulations cannot take care of the inland transportation.

David Martinez, a graduate student in Southern's department of design, has been named research assistant for the project and will handle electronic data processing.

The SIU Transportation Institute was given the grant to act as a disinterested party to investigate the various methods by which solutions to the problem can be obtained.

Dupree Outruns Russian In 800 Meters Event

Former SIU Athlete Wins Race In 1:47.8

Jim Dupree, former SIU athlete, won the 800 meters race for the U.S. track squad at the dual meet against Russia Saturday afternoon in Lenin Stadium.

Dupree's victory was one of seven firsts for the U.S. team which held a 61-54 lead over the first day's action. Russia came back Sunday to take two points from the U.S. but could not win. Final score was U.S., 119, Russia, 11.

It was the narrowest margin victory for the U.S. in any previous outings.

Dupree's victory probably ranks as his greatest thrill in his running career. He has led to win the big race in the past but was not to be tied Saturday.

Last year against Russia Dupree finished third, however, he turned the legs on Valeri Buyshev who at him last year. Dupree's winning time was 1:47.8 two thirds of a second faster than Buyshev's second place time. Dupree represented the Sausie Man' Tickets

Negotiators Work Overtime For Early Test Ban Pact

MOSCOW

American, British and Soviet negotiators worked overtime Monday trying to remove the barriers in the way of an early signing of a treaty banning most nuclear tests.

Chief of these was understood to be Soviet insistence on the signing of a nonaggression pact between the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Communist bloc.

Chief U.S. delegate W. Averell Harriman has no authority from President Kennedy to negotiate on this matter.

Western sources were still worried that Premier Khrushchev might insist on tying the two ideas together in a package deal unacceptable to Britain and the United States.

Otherwise, they said, the three powers ought to be able to complete the treaty by Wednesday or Thursday. Harriman would then take it to Washington where a Senate battle over ratification seems likely.

MIAMI BEACH

By a 33-16 vote that largely followed party lines, the 55th annual Governors Conference submerged its controversy over civil rights Monday by agreeing to wipe out its resolutions committee.

The vote came after Republicans attempted to kill off what they called a "gag rule" requiring unanimity for adoption of all resolutions, a circumstance that would have barred any civil rights action.

Democratic Gov. Grant Sawyer of Nevada moved, as a substitute, to eliminate the resolution committee altogether. This presumably would restrict governors to discussion and to reports of the conference's regular committees, none of which is considering a civil rights matter at this time.

MOSCOW

Red China and the Soviet Union say they have agreed to meet—"some time later"—and make another try at settling their bitter ideological dispute.

Diplomats in Moscow did not expect the meeting would be held soon.

President Kennedy Offers Plan To Block Rail Strike

WASHINGTON

President Kennedy came up Monday with this plan for legislation to bar a railroad strike: Put the work rules dispute before the Interstate Commerce Commission for disposition.

The White House disclosed this much of the proposal in announcing that Kennedy's special message on the railroad situation would go to Congress at 3 p.m.

Press secretary Pierre Salinger read to newsmen this statement Monday: "The president at 3 p.m. (EDT) this afternoon will send to the Congress legislation which will refer those railroad work rules issues which are still in dispute to the Interstate Commerce Commission for prompt hearing and disposition.

"Provisions for employee security will be contained in any ICC order of approval. "Unlike compulsory arbitration this proposal would preserve collective bargaining and give precedence to its solutions."

Humiliation stalks America's Negro citizens and they will not be dissuaded by talk that they are hurting their cause by demonstrating, Negro leader Roy Wilkins said Monday.

Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said their protest demonstrations are not subversive but "thoroughly American."

He expressed his views in testimony before the Senate Commerce Committee as it started a fourth week of hearings on the administration's public accommodations bill.
