Chancellor not told of gripes

Layer defends commitment to BAS

Courtland T. Milley Jr.
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Contrary to a statement by Walter Robinson, director of Black American Studies, Chancellor Robert G. Laver feels that the University has demonstrated that it is committed to hiring black faculty and staff members.

A week ago, Robinson stated that lack of commitment by the University, insufficient financing and academically qualified leadership were the reasons for the ineffectiveness of the BAS.

In an interview Wednesday, Laver commented that SIU is showing evidence of a commitment to hire black faculty and staff members and put blacks in administrative positions.

"Just Friday the Board of Trustees gave support to the Affirmative Action Program which is seeking to place minority persons in positions on campus," he said.

"The placing of blacks on campus was high on the list of priorities and that the procedures for doing this are constantly being worked on. One goal of the University is to make the black student and faculty relationship more proportionate, as well as increase the number of black faculty, staff and administrators," he said.

Laver said he was unaware until recently that the BAS was having problems with inadequate funding.

Because financial and employment problems are in part responsibilities of the Chancellor's Office, Laver thought that he should have been informed about the situation.

"I think that Robinson should have come in and discussed these matters with me," said Laver. "I was really surprised when I found out how he felt because I had no knowledge that this was the case. If a person has a legitimate gripe, it is only right that I do all that I can," he said.

Some of the programs that the BAS proposed to implement in the community could not be done because of inadequate finances, Robinson said. Laver, however, said that he understood BAS to be a University academic program only.

"That part of the University's commitment to black people in the community is being taken care of by other kinds of efforts, such as University Services to Carbondale, our relationship with the employment agency, the Affirmative Action Program and other special efforts which come up from time to time," he said.

According to Laver, the Black Faculty and Staff Council had come to him and asked for recognition so that they could provide significant input at various points in the University Senate. Faculty Council and other areas where policy is made.

"I have sent a request to the Senate for a credentialing process," said Laver. "for a means by which this group, as well as others, could be present and make some kind of contribution to the Senate."

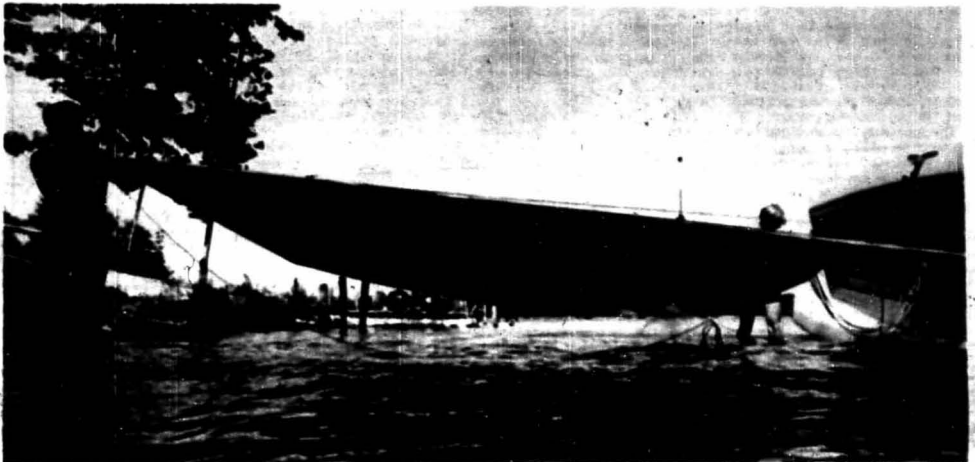

"This request could go all the way from some kind of 'each time' recognition to an amending of the whole governance procedure which would make them permanently recognized," he said. "The Senate is considering this now and I believe that it will come up before them at the next meeting as to how this recognition problem should be solved," said Laver.

The Chancellor stated, "If I could get a little lead time in trying to solve these problems, this would, from my standpoint, improve relations between all black organizations on this campus and this office, he said.

"I hope that I have not given the impression to anybody that I don't want to solve their problems or am not sympathetic with them, because I am," said Laver.

Let's go sailing

Most of the time all goes well for SIU Sailing Club sailors when they're making their first solo runs to earn skippers' keys—but sometimes it doesn't. And that means putting things shipshape again and giving it another try. For the story of sailing lessons at Crab Orchard Lake, turn to page 8. (Photo by Nelson G. Brooks)

Cost of parking decals sliced

By Dale McConaughay
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Beginning fall quarter, persons operating motor vehicles at SIU will pay less for parking decals.

Chancellor Robert G. Laver Monday cut the cost of blue decals from $65 to $50. Red decals were decreased in cost from $35 to $30 and silver decals, $15 to $10.

The decrease in costs follows the chancellor's refusal to approve more substantial decreases recommended by the Traffic and Advisory Committee last May.

In its May proposal to the chancellor, the committee recommended decreasing the cost of blue decals to $35 and red decals to $20.

C. E. Peebles, assistant to the chancellor, said the chancellor felt a slight decrease in parking fees could be made while still accumulating enough funds to support the mass transit monorail plan under consideration for the campus.

Peebles hoped the chancellor's fee decrease would go into effect Sept. 1.

The chancellor also repeated his disapproval Wednesday of the Traffic and Parking Advisory Committee's recommendation to permit sophomores to apply for the blue, red or silver decals.

However, any person maintaining a car, including freshman and sophomores, may receive a free yellow registration decal. The yellow decal permits the motorist to use the fee lot

SIU Arts Training Center to close

By John D. Towns
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

After four years in existence, the SIU Performing Arts Training Center in East St. Louis is scheduled to close July 31, because it has no budget, Katherine Dunham, center director, said Wednesday.

The center, which receives its budget from the Edwardsville campus, will be terminated as a result of Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie's higher education budget.

Arthur L. Grist of Area and International Services at Edwardsville said the program is listed as a "new program" and is non-recurring, which means it must be refunded each year.

He said no new programs at the Edwardsville campus will be funded for the coming academic year.

"The Center was previously funded with external funds and grants. We got new money, but it was earmarked for dental and medical programs," Grist said.

Jeanette Stovall, assistant to the director of the center, said about 32 people including staff and teacher trainees would lose jobs if the center closes this month.

She said the center's budget last year was $175,000 and it also received outside funding.

"The center started out in 1967 as purely area services and in 1969 the academic component was added," Miss Stovall said.

She said the Center offers a two-year degree in the performing arts and several academic courses have been offered.

Miss Dunham, who is a technical advisor on intercultural communications for the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, said the East St. Louis Citizens Council is trying to help keep the center open.

"Closing the center not only affects East St. Louis, but the whole Metro East area," she said.

Rex Carr, an East St. Louis attorney who is a member of the advisory committee, said Wednesday, the group has appointed a task force to meet with Edwardsville-SIU Chancellor John S. Rendleman.

"There will be a large citizen movement," Carr said.

Carr said the meeting will be at 1 p.m. Thursday in East St. Louis at the Old Broadway Hotel.

"The committee thinks closing the center is a slap in the face to East St. Louis. It is one of the few things we've got and we're not about to let it go down the drain," he said.

Gus
Bode

Gus says if the University keeps slicing expenses he may be able to stay in school.

The women said persons interested in the center should call Nancy Foley at 549-4072, or Mary McCauley, at 549-0250.

Release hoped for

4 U.S. captives in China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The official clock of secrecy over President Nixon's Peking trip covers the fate of American captives in Red China, but the man who revived the issue says there is hope now for the release of at least some of the four.

Jerome Cohen, a Harvard University law professor, says there has been no official administration reaction to his efforts to obtain freedom for the four prisoners "but my impression from talking to officials is something is likely to happen." The State Department has refused to comment.

One administration official said the President's national security adviser, Henry Kissinger, is keeping the whole China matter to himself but "I personally would like to think this prisoner matter is shaking loose."

The sub of Cohen's proposal is the suggestion the United States acknowledge Peking's claim that two of the prisoners held since 1962 were CIA agents, dropping Nationalist spies into China when their plane was shot down on a flight from Korea to Japan.

John Foster Dulles, secretary of state at the time, said the charges against John Thomas Downey and Richard Fecteau were trumped up. Both were listed as civilian employees of the Army. Fecteau was sentenced to 20 years in prison, Downey to life.

The other Americans known held on the mainland are Air Force Capt. Philip E. Smith of Victorville, Calif., shot down near the Island of Hamman in 1965, and Navy Lt. Robert Flynn of Oak Harbor, Wash. He was flying along the North Vietnamese-China frontier when his plane went down.

Cohen's plan was offered first to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee last month. Committee Chairman J.W. Fulbright sent the professor's ideas to the State Department in a letter dated July 6, three days before Kissinger made a clandestine trip to Peking to set up Nixon's impending visit.

Although no official has acknowledged the prisoners were discussed when the presidential aide met with Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, Cohen said "I can't believe Kissinger didn't discuss these four men." He said it would serve both nations to obtain the prisoners' release and history points to the possibility of some accommodation, particularly concerning Fecteau and Downey.

Fecteau, from Lynn, Mass., is due for release next year as it is, Cohen pointed out, "and it wouldn't surprise me if they let him out in a humanitarian act before Nixon goes to China, say in September."

He suggested Downey, of New Britain, Conn., would be released "for good behavior."

Cohen and officials in Congress and the State Department all say the matter of the two captive fliers is more complicated. Cohen has suggested they could be freed when the Vietnam prisoner-of-war issue is settled.

However, officials say the fliers' status is unclear and Cohen acknowledges this is so since the United States is not fighting China and Peking is not directly involved in the Vietnam POW matter.

Nevertheless, some officials say if the Chinese decide to release any it is hard to conceive they won't free them all.

Blacks suggested for panel

The Ombudsman Advisory Panel has recommended that black representation be made to the panel and that they be appointed by the Provisional University Senate. Maurice Ogur, chairman of the panel, said Wednesday.

Ogur said the panel has slowly changed in its two and one-half years' existence. It was originally an all-faculty panel, Ogur said, but now there are non-faculty members.

"The original concept was in the first year there would be a functioning Ombudsman, Mary Walker, and the advisory panel was set up to advise her," he continued.

"When Mrs. Walker came to the panel the first year with problems she couldn't handle, the panel helped to solve them or took the problems over," Ogur said.

Ogur said the panel reported to the Chancellor on its recommendations, citing the need for a black Ombudsman to try to solve the needs of black students, since few of them were going to see Mrs. Walker.

"We went through a rather elaborate consultation before we selected Reggie Davis, which was a very good recommendation," Ogur continued.

Davis became Ombudsman in September, 1970, and resigned in May to become state coordinator of training and education for Public Service Careers.

The black Ombudsman position has been vacant since Davis' resignation and Ogur said the panel has selected someone to fill the position in September.

"We are the only University I know that has set up a dual Ombudsman," he concluded.

across from the Student Center as well as the Lake-on-the-Campus parking lot from September to May.

Blue decals are issued according to the number of lots available to full-time faculty and staff members and to disabled part-time faculty and staff as well as disabled students making application.

Red decals are issued until Sept. 25 to part-time faculty and staff as well as classified graduate students. After the Sept. 25 date, remaining red decals are available to undergraduate students.

Silver decals are issued any time to persons eligible to operate a motor vehicle.

The traffic and Parking Advisory Committee also endorsed a parking package status report on monorail system possibilities to carry students, faculty and staff from a huge parking lot away from the campus into the central area.

The report was submitted by John Loneragan, campus planner who said he was not presenting a proposal, but a compilation of facts for the chancellor. The committee, in approving the report, said it was not endorsing any fee schedules for monorail and parking lot costs and recognized that any figures given can change.

Loneragan said the campus has no other alternative to combat the parking problem except parking garages, and that they are priced out of the question. The faculty, staff, and student-body must be convinced that the outlying parking lot and transit system is the realistic solution, he added.

Loneragan presented one plan calling for 8,000 new parking spaces at the transit terminal and a plan at a lesser cost that would have 6,000 spaces. These spaces would be in addition to an estimated 4,000 on-campus spaces, principally the current parking lots.

Letters to the editor

Message from space predicts doom for earth

To the Daily Egyptian:

In regards to Mr. McCormick's letter printed in Tuesday's Daily Egyptian which suggested that "perhaps the ultimate solution to the problem of survival for species Homo sapiens lies only in space exploration...to seek out a race more intelligent to give us the much needed answers." I submit the following inter-stellar communique received last night over my sub-space radio:

"If you want to salvage yourself and your planet, start by reducing human population to about 64,7361 million. This can be done by simply turning off all defective units such as political leaders and their sheep, religious evangelists and their sheep, military leaders and their sheep, racist leaders and their sheep; and lastly, all the mentally retarded, deranged and deformed.

Frankly, we doubt whether you possess the resolve or intelligence to follow through with this solution, so we are therefore expecting the next dominant life form on your planet to be the insects."

Need a new president? Try 'crawling due West'

To the Daily Egyptian:

I read the July 20 article in the Daily Egyptian entitled "SIU president hunt under way." Here are a few suggestions to follow as you start down this journey.

Go to the state health laboratory on Oakland Ave. in Carbondale and get out on the corner and look due West. From this point, start crawling due West. After you crawl some short distance, look on your left—you will see a two story frame house, painted white.

Crawl up the gravel driveway, knock on the door and tell that charming secretary to please let you in.

After you are in, crawl down the hall that is from the back door to the last door on the right. Go in and stand like this: "Dear Lord, we thank you for the privilege of being in Dr. Morris' presence. We thank you, Lord, for giving us Dr. and Mrs. Morris for the past 23 years."

Then go out to our new million dollar house and ask Dr. and Mrs. Morris if it is all right and if it isn't, please make any changes they desire to be made, regardless of the cost. Then start the boot-licking ceremony and try to get Dr. Morris to take his job back and consider yourselves damn lucky if he says yes, for no where in this whole world could you come up with a better man for this job.

Woe to the future draftee

By Arthur Hoppe
Chronicle Features

Scene: The local Draft Board on a routine afternoon in the year 1976. Harlington Thripps, a portly, greying man angrily waving a form, approaches the bored young clerk.

Thripps: What's the meaning of this? "From the President of the United States, greetings."

Clerk: It means you been drafted, mac.

Thripps: Nonsense! I'm 51 years old and the sole support of my dear wife and two sons. If you want to draft someone, go draft those no-good loafers of mine. The Army would do them a world of good.

Clerk: You're not against the draft then, Thripps? Thripps (indignantly): Of course not! You think I'm some kind of new-left radical? It's the draft that keeps this country strong. After all, someone has to be a soldier. And it's only fair that our young men pay their debt to their country by serving their Nation's flag on the field of battle.

Clerk: Good thinking, Thripps. Now, if you'll raise your right hand and repeat after me...

Thripps (blanching): Hold on! You can't draft me. I'm too old for combat.

Clerk: Oh, we're not drafting you into the Army, Thripps. We're drafting you into the Poverty Corps.

Thripps (suspiciously): You mean you're going to make me into one of those social-worker types, going around helping the poor? Look here, I gave at the office.

Clerk: You don't understand. We're going to make you poor.

Thripps (smiling): Poor? Me? Do you realize, fellow, that last year I made $53,690 after taxes of which I scrupulously avoided paying any.

Clerk: Quite so. But we've impounded every penny of your assets. Now, let's see, for the next two years you're assigned to the 133rd Street Sweeping Battalion as an apprentice gutter mucker. Your wife's a charwoman second class and your two sons will be trained in pea picking.

Thripps (outraged): You can't take away all I've strived for and deprive me of my freedom...

Clerk: Look, mac, don't blame me. The country needs soldiers. The country needs poor people. Who else is going to muck the gutters and scrub the floors and pick the peas? So your number came up. It's only fair you rich guys pay your debt to your country by serving your Nation's flag. After all, you've worked up a bigger debt than some young kid.

Thripps: But being a street sweeper isn't the same thing as being a soldier.

Clerk: Right! It sure beats getting shot at. I'm glad you're looking on the bright side. Now if you'll repeat after me...

Thripps (dazedly): My two cars, my golf club, my summer home, my... (He suddenly throws his arms around a pillar and begins to shout: ) Hell no, won't go! Hell no, won't go! Hell no...

Clerk (shaking his head): Sarge! Hey Sarge! Got another one. (A young, much decorated Sergeant appears and eyes Thripps with disgust.)

Sergeant: Another yellow-bellied draft dodger, eh? Sometimes I wonder what this older generation's coming to.

Opinion

How free is freedom of speech in the ACLU?

The good old first amendment is really getting the run-around these days. First in Washington with the Pentagon papers and now, even in Carbondale, academicians are bickering over who can say and imply what, when and how. This has led to a weird situation where even the ACLU, that last vestige and protector of our freedoms, that haven for the abused and mistreated, is trying to decide just how free the freedom of speech is or should be—especially insofar as it directs attention to the position of the ACLU.

It seems as though the freedom of speech is fine unless the one who is speaking also happens to be a member of the ACLU. Members of the group have lately become concerned that what such a person says may be misconstrued as a statement on behalf of the entire organization, rather than the personal viewpoint of a particular individual.

Recently four faculty members paid a visit to the chancellor to discuss academic freedom, a code of conduct for the University and the role of the ACLU in situations like the Allen-Stauber case. The visit of the four was reported in a story in the Daily Egyptian, briefly mentioning at the end of the story that three of the four were members of the ACLU. None of the four claimed to represent the ACLU and the story did not report this to be the case, yet certain members of the ACLU showed great consternation that the actions of the four might be taken to represent the entire organization.

At a recent ACLU meeting this consternation reached levels of paranoia when a vote was deemed necessary to decide whether a reporter in the audience should be asked to leave. This itself seems to be a direct contradiction of the philosophy of the ACLU, but what is even worse is that a vote was also taken to determine whether the public could remain at the meeting.

Although it is reassuring that the democratic ACLU did at least take a vote instead of arbitrarily ordering the audience and reporter to leave the meeting, this is a weak condolence at best.

This publicity paranoia is a direct result of the division within the ACLU as to who violated whose academic freedom in the Allen-Stauber case. It seems that the ACLU includes members in its ranks who view Doug Allen as a victim of administrative byplay and Leland Stauber as the vulture of administrative whim as well as those who feel that Allen is the purveyor of disruption and Stauber the crusader for academic freedom.

ACLU members with pro-Allen views point out that many of these champions of Stauber's charges are Johnny-come-latelies to the scene who have been members of the ACLU in name only and are capitalizing on their token memberships now to lend more credence to their views. The Stauber faction, on the other hand, claims deep concern that the ACLU is being caught up in Allen's charisma and is turning its back on the true issue of academic freedom.

This situation has caused the ACLU to become an instrument of the verbal byplay between the Allen and Stauber factions. This division and preoccupation with the Allen-Stauber case has also led to other ACLU causes being slighted if not forgotten, especially in the public's eye.

Whatever the answer to the ACLU's internal conflict, suppression of its ideas from the public can only damage its reputation and ability to protect the freedoms of everyone. Where else should there be the exchange of views—yes, even divergent views—if not in the ACLU? Any harm that might come to the ACLU's position in the community as a result of presenting a divided front concerning the Allen-Stauber issue is slight compared to the harm that would result from silence and secrecy.

General: 'mutual respect' is key to Army discipline

Editor's Note: This is the last of three stories on experiments under way to improve conditions for enlisted men in today's U.S. Army.

By Robert Betts
Copley News Service

FORT CARSON, Colo. — Peace posters and poetry-reading soirees, go-go girls in the enlisted men's clubs and rap sessions with commanding officers, cozy barracks cubicles and no-harsh reveille calls—is the Army going soft?

The question is debated in and outside military circles as Fort Carson pushes ahead with its reforms, under the protection of the Pentagon and the watchful eye of Congress.

Critics see creeping Army permissiveness. Their view was expressed bluntly by House Armed Services Committee Chairman F. Edward Hebert: "When you turn the military into a country club, discipline goes out of the window."

That is not how Fort Carson's commanding officer, Maj. Gen. John C. Bennett, sees it. He has the backing of the majority of his 26,000 officers and men, according to polls being regularly conducted there by a civilian firm—Human Resources Research Association.

As enthusiastic as Bennett is about the reforms, he could hardly be labeled a "liberal"—not, at least, in today's loaded sense of that term.

Tall, straight, dark-haired with pleasant but penetrating eyes, he has the bearing of a man with an impressive military background.

Aged 48, commissioned a lieutenant of infantry at West Point in 1945, he has commanded every infantry unit from a rifle platoon through a mechanized infantry division.

He fought in Korea and with the Special Forces in Vietnam. His military schooling includes the Command and General Staff College, the British Staff College and the National War College. He has served on the Army staff, the office of the secretary of defense, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and supreme headquarters, allied powers, Europe. He also is a master parachutist, having logged more than 80 jumps, and is a military pilot rated for both fixed wing aircraft and helicopters.

Discipline First

"He's concerned for the men's welfare, is always ready to listen to them and spends about two hours on average at the bimonthly meetings with the Enlisted Men's Council—but he puts discipline before all else," said an aide.

Fort Carson's new look actually was introduced by Bennett's predecessor, Maj. Gen. Bernard W. Rogers, who was convinced that many Army traditions served no useful purpose.

The Army's liberalization program was endorsed by Gen. William C. Westmoreland, the chief of staff, in order to realize the administration's cherished vision of an all-volunteer force by mid-1973, the Army must double its current rate of enlistments and reenlistments. In the face of widespread youthful antagonism to military service.

Many projects conceived at Fort Carson have since been adopted under the Pentagon's Volunteer Army (Volar) Program—which means official funding for improved facilities, services and goods in hopes of achieving the zero draft.

Bennett believes the Army is on the right track—not only for improved recruiting but for improved morale as well.

"Many of these innovations were implemented on a trial basis, and I believe we are getting a much better group of loyal, dependable men as a result," he said.

"There is tremendous confidence in leadership among the soldiers here. Men will stay together in combat when they have mutual respect for one another. That is the key to discipline."

In all the complaints and suggestions received from soldiers, none had dealt with duties in the field, he pointed out. They all had to do with living conditions, quarters and base facilities. While there had been criticism of certain irksome duties on post—popularly called "make work"—there had been no questioning of orders in the field, of the need for rigorous field training, or any protesting against its hardships.

He dismissed suggestions that the EMC could be the "thin edge of the wedge," that the habit of questioning any aspect of Army procedure could lead to a questioning of orders in combat and a consequent breakdown of discipline.

"Enlisted men's councils have no authority whatever—make no mistake about that," he said. "Soldiers have always complained, but not to their officers. Now there's closer communication. We say, 'If you have a suggestion to make, we'll listen. Then we'll either tell you why a certain thing has to be done that way or we'll change it.'"

The EMC has not only come up with some constructive suggestions which have eased the workload and made for more efficiency and harmony. They have increased the insights of commanders and improved the downward flow of communication. The effect is to complement, not weaken, the chain of command.

"The idea is not so new. The best units have had this sort of communication in the past. But there is no obligation on anyone to tolerate disrespect."

Bennett takes a tolerant view of psychedelic posters and symbols in the barracks with their heavy emphasis on love, peace, freedom and "happiness is ETS" (estimated time of severance).

"If that's their life-style," he said, "you're more likely to alienate them by prohibiting it. They're not trying to propagandize the platoon."

Danger in overreacting

"Young people today are constantly testing their elders, and the danger is in overreacting. They read it as a lack of self-confidence on your part and you quickly lose their confidence too. My attitude is: 'So long as you're a good soldier, do your buttons up, keep your boots polished, look smart and do your work, I don't mind what you put over your head.'"

He said the same goes for the practice of inviting speakers on the post—liberal or otherwise—as requested by the EMC and Racial Harmony Council.

"It takes the heat out of dissent," he believes. "Julian Bond has spoken here. So has LeRoi Jones. He said some pretty harsh things and the men sat and listened. It was all very orderly. No MPs were required. Even LeRoi Jones was impressed. We have reduced tension. I think the college campuses could learn a lesson from us."

The intention is to have more speakers, expounding a variety of views.

Best evidence cited for the success of Fort Carson's programs is in statistics indicating a decline in the AWOL rate (down from 510 in December, 1970, to 287 in February, 1971) and increase in reenlistments (up from 216 in December, 1970, to 252 in February, 1971). Offpost crime rates and venereal disease are down, too, and gross sales at the enlisted men's and noncommissioned officers' messes have increased 100 per cent.

Bennett harbors no doubt about the fighting quality of the modern soldier, particularly the men under his command.

"Three-quarters of them have already been tested in battle—in Vietnam," he said. "It's interesting to note, incidentally, that there have been fewer desertions in Vietnam than in either Korea or World War II, and fewer cases of psychoneurosis."

As a testing ground for the new Army, Fort Carson has had a constant stream of visitors—high ranking persons from Washington, from other branches of the services, both U.S. and foreign.

"Many came with a negative approach. Most went away positively impressed," the general said.

Maj. Gen. John C. Bennett

"...discipline before all else."

One recent visitor, Gen. Bruce C. Clarke, stated: "Men expect honest, just and fair treatment from their leaders. I understand what you are trying to do here and it is not permissiveness."

He added: "The ground combat soldier is the Army's paramount concern. Organizing, equipping, training, sustaining and supporting him so that he can perform his indispensable role in combat should be the Army's role. And I am happy to note that Gen. Bennett and Fort Carson are doing just that."

Another visitor, Gen. Sir John Hackett, who commanded the British army of the Rhine before his retirement, later wrote his hosts:

"I would only observe here that there could be a possibility of a breakdown in battle."

"Unless, however, we pay more attention to the patterns of the parent society today, we are faced with a virtual certainty of breakdown before the battle starts. I think we have to take a calculated risk here and try to do with good will what we may no longer do with coercion."

A warning note was sounded in a recent issue of Army magazine by Gen. Hamilton H. Howze, retired, who after World War II commanded the 82nd Airborne Division and the XVIII Airborne Corps. He commanded the Eighth Army in Korea.

"I fully agree with the value of frequent talks by the commander with his subordinates, and the desirability of explaining why, as well as how, things must be done," he wrote.

"But this must not be carried to the point where a conference must precede virtually every order. A compelling 'why' must remain: because the Old Man said so. If we relinquish that point, a disciplined enemy will clobber us while we debate what we should and shouldn't do."

New recruit?

Go-go girls and mixed drinks are part of the new attractions offered at Fort Carson's five enlisted men's clubs.

Area student admitted to Taiwan school

By University News Services

James Wayne Gilliam of Harrisburg, senior in photo journalism, who plans to graduate Sept. 4, has been admitted to National Taiwan Normal University in Taipei, Taiwan, to study Chinese language, culture, and history.

Gilliam will leave for Taiwan in late September, but first will stop in Japan to visit some Japanese friends.

In addition to his requirements for his bachelor's degree, Gilliam has one year of study at SIU in the Chinese language and a half year in the Japanese language. He developed an interest in Oriental culture and languages while working in Air Force Information Offices in Korea and Japan.

After discharge from service, Gilliam did photographic assignments for SIU News Service, as a member of the Photo Service staff, that involved international students from throughout the world.

Last summer Gilliam completed an SIU Extension Service assignment that called for a photographic story and color slide presentation of SIU students studying in England, France, Germany, and Switzerland.

Study views Hong Kong facilities

Housing improvements suggested

By University News Services

A case study of a typical Hong Kong family living in a resettlement housing project, with recommendations for improved living facilities, has been made by an interior design student at SIU.

Sing Wong, a graduate student from Hong Kong who received the master's degree at the June commencement, made the study as his thesis requirement.

Wong's typical family of seven members occupies quarters in one of the early re-settlement housing projects, the Wong Tai Sin Estate on Kowloon peninsula.

"Since the introduction of the resettlement blocks in 1964, the design has been improved several times," he wrote, "but the 7-story blocks of the Wong Tai Sin Estate are of the oldest type in use."

These "flats" consist of one room, providing 27 square feet of space for each adult; no cooking facilities—the family cooks on the communal balcony communal toilets and washing places. Later construction projects provided individual water supplies, private balcony, semi-private or private toilets, and newest still under construction, will provide a space standard of 35 square feet per adult.

Wong analyzed the family's present household furnishing and equipment recommending rearrangement to permit more acceptable television viewing, sleeping facilities, food preparation, dining, clothing care, study, personal hygiene, lighting and maintenance.

"It appears that the additional expenditure of governmental funds, required for the production of certain carefully designed interior furnishing components, would be more than justified.

College prep program informs local students

Eighty-three high school students from Hardin County are participating in the first pre-college orientation program conducted by the SIU Talent Search Center.

Bill Pyle, program director, visited the towns of Rosiclare, Cave in Rock and Elizabethtown to inform students about loan and grant application, course advisement, registration procedures and University services available to incoming students.

"We are beating the bushes and developing the talent but these kids are not even aware that they are all eligible for financial assistance," Pyle said. To make sure they find out, Pyle visits these towns frequently throughout the summer.

He said the Talent Search program is designed to combat the 65 percent dropout ratio of SIU students by getting to the problem at the grassroots.

The ratio is high, Pyle said, "because the average freshman from the southern Illinois area has come from a sheltered background in which he is allowed to make few individual decisions."

"We help in the decision making by suggesting loopholes in course selection, presenting curriculum shortcuts but generally relieving the pressure to allow individuals to decide for themselves."

Hardin County was chosen Pyle said because it is one of the poorest counties in the state, with 37 percent of the high school graduates attending college. The national average is 60 percent.

SIU School of Medicine

adds 5 clinical associates

By University News Services

Five more Springfield area physicians have been named by the SIU Board of Trustees to be clinical associates in the School of Medicine. It brings to 115 the number of physicians who have agreed to devote the equivalent of one-half day per week, without salary, to the interests of the new school and its students.

Physicians approved at the July meeting were Donald J. Boon, Earl W. Donohue, Hugh D. Howard, Donald R. Stoker and William S. White.

Clarence Stephens, chairman of the University Administrative Council, assured board members that health education services now delivered or planned by the University would have high priorities for funding in spite of drastic cutbacks required by an austere 1971-72 operating budget.

In another development affecting the medical school, SIU and Doctors Hospital officials this week ratified an agreement for use of the hospital as a teaching facility. Taking part in the ratification ceremonies were Dr. Richard Moy, medical school dean, Dr. Eli Borkon, assistant to the dean, Chancellor Robert G. Layer, and Jack Edmundson, hospital administrator.

The Board approved assignment of William T. Kabusch, associate professor in the medical school, as associate dean of the school.

In other personnel matters the trustees approved changes in assignment at the Carbondale campus to include Robert L. Buser to serve as chairman of secondary education, Edwin A. Cook as acting chairman of anthropology and Gola E. Waters as assistant dean in the School of Business. John O. Anderson, dean of international education, will serve also as assistant to the chancellor for public services and relations.

No Board action was announced on the appointment of Charles W. Shipley as chairman of the Department of Radio and Television. Shipley's appointment, pending Board action, was disclosed by the College of Communications and Fine Arts.

Early fall registering urged

By University News Services

New students admitted to 1971 fall quarter classes at SIU are urged strongly by Admissions Director Jerre C. Pfaff to register this summer.

The advance registration program which began July 6 will extend through Aug. 27. At registration time, Pfaff said, these students will meet with their academic advisers and arrange their fall quarter classes.

Pfaff said students unable to participate in the summer registration program may register just prior to the fall quarter beginning but registration at the later time will be on a first come, first served basis and no appointments will be issued.

He said 25 days were set aside between July 6 and Aug. 27 to accommodate the first-time students—freshmen and new transfers. In addition to registration and advisement activities, the Student Activities Office is conducting an orientation meeting for students each day in the University Center, which includes a campus tour of University facilities.

Pfaff listed the 25 set-aside days—that do not include Saturdays or Sundays—as July 6 through 15, 19, 21, 23, 26, 28, 30, and Aug. 2 through 9, 11, 19, 20, 23 and 25.

At the time new students are being advised and registered the University's Counseling and Testing Center will conduct a placement and proficiency program in Morris Library Auditorium.

Crab Orchard Lake is school for weekend skippers and mates

Almost any Saturday or Sunday morning you can find a number of SIU students sitting anxiously on a wooden wharf at Crab Orchard Lake waiting for a sailboat to come in.

George Neal is one of those who wait.

For the past few weeks Neal has been studying and practicing his skills to earn a skipper's key from the SIU Sailing Club.

Classroom instruction offered him once a week by the club teaches the theory, terminology, and familiarity with sailing activities. And for a number of times he was taken sailing on the lake with one of the club's skippers to practice what the class had taught him.

Then came his final test. He took one of the club's boats out by himself. Before the trip he had to check the rigging, sails and sea worthiness of the boat. He also had to explain what actions he would take to meet problems posed by his instructor-skipper. The trip was a success and George Neal's name has been added to the list of qualified skippers of the SIU Sailing Club.

Dinner to feature Frisco publisher

The publisher of the San Francisco Bay Guardian, who is bringing suit against two other San Francisco newspapers, the Chronicle and the Examiner, for alleged monopoly arrangements, will speak Thursday at a dinner at the Remedia Inn sponsored by local chapters of the Sigma Delta Chi professional journalism society.

Bruce Bruggman, publisher of the monthly San Francisco paper, will speak in conjunction with the International Conference of Weekly Newspaper Editors (ICWNE) which is going on this week.

Bruggman's suit challenges the Newspaper Preservation Act which he charges gives established papers a monopoly on the daily newspaper market, allowing them to inflate advertising rates.

This forces advertisers to buy space in existing newspapers and drains advertising revenues that might otherwise go to new, competing newspapers.

He also charges that by giving established papers unrestricted economic power, the act abridges the press freedoms of smaller competing newspapers like the Guardian.

The Guardian began publishing in 1966 on a monthly basis with plans to go weekly but was unable to because of inadequate advertising revenues.

The Golden Quill Award for Editorial Writing will also be presented at the dinner. The award is presented to the best editorial published in a weekly newspaper and is chosen from a group of twelve finalists called the Golden Duzen.

This year the winning editorial was chosen by Clifton Lawhorne of Texas Christian University, a former faculty member of SIU, a spokesman from SIU's School of Journalism said.

Reports from three journalists on the international scene will be featured at the Thursday morning session of the ICWNE. Speakers for the session will be The Rev. Dewi Morgan, Anglican priest and rector of St. Bride's Church in London and longtime freelance journalist; William Rannin, editor of the Post Express, Ontario, Canada; and David Greenblatt, editorial director of the Chronicle Advertiser in England.

John King, chairman of the department of Higher Education at SIU, will speak at the afternoon session of the ICWNE on "The Dilemmas of American Education."

Courts to speak in Kansas

By University News Services

Gerald Courts, SIU associate professor of plant industries, will be on the program of the American Society for Horticultural Science meeting at Kansas State University in Manhattan Aug. 14.

He will report on "The Use of Hardwood Bark in the Container Culture of Woody Ornamental Plants," a research project to find additional uses for byproducts of the forest industry. A collaborator on the report is SIU plant industries graduate student Charles R. Bracken of Murphysboro, who worked with Courts on the study.

Courts, a specialist in ornamental horticulture, is a native of Emden, Ill.

Ag professor receives award

By University News Services

Ralph Benton, professor of agricultural industries, has been named historian and elected to the executive council in the National Association of Colleges and Teachers of Agriculture which held its annual meeting recently at Sterling, Colo. He also was one of five persons at the sessions awarded certificates of merit as charter members.

The national organization membership is made up primarily of agricultural educators from nonland grant schools and colleges of agriculture. Benton is a past president of the association.

A native of Waterbury, Neb., he joined the SIU Department of Agricultural Industries faculty in 1966 after eight years on the Illinois State University staff at Normal. Earlier he taught vocational agriculture at Beatrice, Neb., and at the University of Nebraska.

Benton also has an article, "An Analysis of the Leadership Function," published in the July issue of Agriculture Education Magazine, a professional periodical for agriculture teachers.

Mink genetics is topic for seminar

Remapping plan to form five districts in county

A remapping plan that will divide Jackson County into five districts, splitting Carbondale Township into three districts, has been approved by the Jackson County Board of Supervisors (JCBS).

The plan met a July 1 deadline set for all counties to have plans on the shifting of county board operations to meet the U.S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote ruling.

Under the present system, the county board has 26 members, including one supervisor from each of the 16 townships. Carbondale Township, with approximately half of the county's population, has eight votes on the 26-member board.

W.I. Brandon, JCBS chairman, said the new plan will reduce the board to 15 members with three chosen from each district.

The new plan, to become effective next May, will have five districts of roughly 11,000 population each, according to Brandon.

'Woman, Wife, Worker'

to be subject of speech

By University News Services

Edith Spees, who has her doctorate in counseling psychology with emphasis on women's development, will speak at a women's meeting at 7:30 p.m., Thursday in the Communications Building lounge.

Mrs. Spees will use the topic, "Woman, Wife and Worker," in her talk to members of The Encores, a group of women in the community currently enrolled in courses and resuming their educational goals.

Mrs. Spees is coordinator of Handicapped Student Services at SIU.

was voiced by State's Attorney Richard Richman and City Attorney Ronald Briggs.

Richman was quoted recently as being opposed to the new plan, contending it is not legal on the grounds that one section of District 4 is not "contiguous and not compact." District 4 includes northwest Carbondale city precincts and Pomona Township.

Richman said the issue could be brought to a court determination by a civil law suit filed by a resident in any of the districts involved. Districts 3, 4 and 5, and into which Carbondale is divided.

Richman said he plans no further action in regard to his opinion of the legality of the new fourth district.

Briggs said, "I am skeptical of the plan because it splits Carbondale to give the rural vote more power."

Red bureaucratic snarl grips stranded Jews

MOSCOW (AP) — The young mother swept her arm across the almost barren, two-room apartment.

"Why, we don't even have a pillow to sleep on," she told a visitor. "We've already sent everything to Israel."

Yeisela Mondrzhak, her 11-year-old son and 68-year-old mother are Russian Jews waiting to leave the Soviet Union and live in Israel, which they call their "historical motherland."

They received permission April 26 to emigrate and were told in early May that their visas were ready. Authorities also told them to ship their belongings and buy airplane tickets. Mrs. Mondrzhak, 35, quit her job and took her son, Levon, out of school. She has no income. Then Soviet authorities put obstacles in the way and the family has been stranded without citizenship documents or possessions for more than two months. They have been sleeping on the floor of their empty apartment.

VTI's 3 Rs: rededication reevaluation, reorganization

By University News Services

SU's Vocational-Technical Institute (VTI) is getting a massive dose of the 'three Rs'—but not the traditional ones. In this case, it's reevaluation, reorganization and rededication.

VTI started two decades ago as the state's first and only public post-secondary technical school. It pioneered many of the precepts of higher technical education accepted today. It is still the only university-connected school of its type, but within the past few years 40 junior colleges have sprung up to offer many of the programs that formerly were available only at VTI.

So now SIU is taking a hard look at VTI's place in career education.

Heading the effort is Arden L. Pratt, 46-year-old West Virginia native who was named dean of VTI July 1 after a year-long search by a faculty committee seeking for a "top-notch technical educator" following the retirement last year of Dean E. J. Simon, who founded VTI in 1960.

Pratt, who came to SIU from Washington, D.C., where he was a specialist in occupational education with the American Association of Junior Colleges, has his doctorate in education from the State University of New York at Buffalo, master of science in chemistry and physics from Ohio State University at Columbus and was graduated from West Virginia Wesleyan College at Buckhannon with a major in chemistry and minor in mathematics.

Previous to his AAJC post, he served for two years as adviser to the West Pakistan Education Department at Lahore under a Ford Foundation project. He went to that assignment from the New York State Education Department, where he was chief of the Bureau of Two-Year College Programs. His earlier teaching experience includes stints at the Erie County Technical Institute in Buffalo, N.Y., the University of Buffalo, Salem College and Ohio State University.

At SIU, Pratt is undertaking the job of following guidelines laid down by the Illinois Board of Higher Education's Master Plan Phase III, which calls for closer ties between VTI and the University and eliminating duplication of effort with the new junior colleges.

Paychecks await trainees

in special education work

Paychecks for summer state trainees in work with the mentally retarded, emotionally disturbed and those with learning disabilities have been received by the Department of Special Education.

Yvonne Dennis, department secretary, said the checks can be picked up from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. in Wham 100.

Arden L. Pratt

Physical relocation of the institute from its site near Carleville to Southern's Carbondale Campus is the first step in implementation of the BHE plan. The SIU Board of Trustees has authorized construction in Carbondale of a $2.5 million classroom-office building which was to have been the first permanent building on the VTI campus.

This will "allow for more effective and efficient development of programs of instruction related to and drawing upon other University programs and permit close cooperation with other University departments," said the board.

Pratt, who sees much greater emphasis on career education developing in the universities, has ordered a complete evaluation of the 25 major programs currently conducted at VTI. These range from aviation technology, to mortuary science and corrections and law enforcement.

He has reorganized the school into four divisions, headed by chairmen who will report to two assistant deans for academic affairs and administration. The four divisions cover the broad areas of technology, health and public service, business and graphic arts, and aviation.

Closer coordination with the junior colleges, continuation beyond the associate degree and greater emphasis on teacher training are seen as principal results of planned reorganization of VTI and its integration into the University's Carbondale campus.

Near the Ohio River at Golconda, are several run-down large, old homes

Historic Illinois seen in Golconda

Editor's Note - The following article is one in a series which the Daily Egyptian will publish during the summer to acquaint its readers with historic and scenic sites in Southern Illinois. The articles and photographs were prepared by a student in a recreation and outdoor education course taught by Robert M. Christie, instructor.

Located on the Ohio River in northeastern Pope County, Golconda bears little surface indication today of what it must have been in the early 1800's. A historic gateway to Illinois, this small river town once rivaled Shawneetown as a major trade center in the early Illinois Country and is the site of numerous historical events and monuments.

Near Golconda, in Brownfield, is the site of Hite Green Tavern, headquarters of the Flatheads, a notorious outlaw band which preyed on river traffic from 1803 to around 1850. In 1838 the Cherokee Indians crossed the Ohio River at Golconda on their forced migration from North Carolina to Oklahoma. The path of their forced march is known as the Trail of Tears because of the suffering and large number of deaths incurred during the winter of 1838-1839.

In the town itself, there stands a church used by the oldest active Presbyterian congregation in Illinois. A drive through the streets will reveal many other old buildings, including a row of run-down mansions along the river.

On the bluffs just north of town is the Ohio River Recreation Area which overlooks Steamboat Bend. This pleasant picnic area was a favorite lookout point for Towboat Watching, an old river custom. Towboat Watching from Steamboat Bend is still a favorite custom today with the throaty rumble of diesel engines replacing the splashing sounds of the coal-burning stern-wheel steamers.

Academic evaluations ready

By Dale McConoughy,
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Approximately 300 teacher evaluations from last winter and spring quarters have been completed for publication in "Mirror," a bi-annual publication aimed at giving students better understanding of what courses and teachers have to offer.

Professor has dual role; becomes museum curator

By University News Services

Campbell W. Pennington, professor of geography, has a new assignment. He has been appointed full-time curator of Meso-American geography for the University Museum.

Pennington, who came to SIU in 1964 from the University of Utah, will continue to hold his professional title with the geography department and occasionally teach in that department.

"We should be able to meet our publication deadline set for the first two weeks of fall quarter," said Bob Carr, journalism senior and coordinator of the publication.

Carr explained that the "Mirror" would be a guideline for students during class registration because it assimilates and summarizes information based upon students' evaluations of classes and instructors.

Funding of the publication, beginning fall quarter, will be done through student activities fees.

"We have a good cross-section of classes from various departments but we'd like to have more teachers participate," Carr said.

The faculty-course evaluations are completed by students at the end of every quarter. Faculty members participate in the evaluation process on a voluntary basis.

If a faculty member participates in allowing his students to evaluate his teaching methods and the course, the results are processed and released to the "Mirror" office for summarization.

"The prevailing opinion of the students toward the teacher and the course is used in compiling our summary for the 'Mirror,'" Carr said.

Specifically, the publication will be based upon students' responses to questions concerning the quality of the instructor, learning materials and tests. It will also contain improvements suggested by the students.

An evaluation sheet to be completed by the instructor may also be published, if the instructor chooses.

Insurance changed for SIU workers

The University Joint Benefits Committee has announced a medical and hospitalization insurance rate adjustment and increased benefits for all full and part-time permanent University employees.

The rate adjustment will go into effect August 15 with payments beginning with the initial pay period in August.

The added benefits were requested by the University because of a shown need, according to a committee member.

The additional benefits are increased diagnostic X-ray coverage from $50 to $100 per person per year, increased OB delivery fees from $100 to $150, increased hospital confinement coverage from 70 days to 120 days and inclusion of tubular ligations and vasectomies as covered expenses.

Itch, itch, itch

Allergy to buffalo sandals reported

By Cathy Spongle
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

It starts as a tiny itch around the big toe. Scratch, scratch. Relief. Little bumps appear on the top of the foot. The fingers dig in deeper. Ah, that's better.

If the condition gets worse, it may spread to the side of the foot, the ankles and even the legs. Welts may form, skin may peel off and the sufferer may have to apply ointments or wrap his foot in gauze.

For wearers of Indian water buffalo sandals, this itchy phenomenon is quite common. The shoes are popular summer footwear for students because they are inexpensive, sturdy and can be worn in water without disintegrating.

The sandal can also cause an allergic reaction which results in a rash similar to that caused by poison ivy.

Dr. Bruce Hector of the SU Health Service said quite a few students have been treated at the Health Service this summer for the condition.

Hector said the rash and itching is caused by a body's allergic reaction to a foreign substance. This can include the dye used in the sandal, the oil used in the leather processing method or the buffalo hide itself.

Hector said an ointment applied to the feet will cure the rash, as long as the sandals are not worn.

The sandal, made of buffalo hide, consists of a flat sole, a broad band which goes across the middle of the foot, and a thong attached to a ring which slips over the big toe. The rash usually starts underneath the band or in between the first and second toes.

Walter Polisky, assistant manager at Brown's Shoe Fit Co. in Carbondale, said five or six complaints have been received on the sandals. Polisky said wearers have reported that oil beaded on the surface of the sandal when worn in water. Redness and itching resulted. The buffalo sandals have sold two-to-one over other sandals carried in this store, Polisky said.

John McCord, an employee of The Bootery, said several hundred pairs of the footwear have been sold this summer, with a few complaints received. McCord said the sandals the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is looking after his feet. Albert Linberg, a product safety consultant at the FDA's Chicago office, said complaints have been received on the sandal.

Linberg said FDA studies have shown that the foot's allergic reaction is caused by a tannic reagent or Linberg said this process could take a long time, as the claims would have to be documented with statistics. Persons may complain to Linberg at the Food and Drug Administration, Room 1222, 433 W. Van Buren, Chicago, Ill., 60613.

In the meantime, the wearer must make the choice whether to keep itching or throw away the sandals.

Some wearers say their feet have built up resistance to the reaction and it doesn't occur after several months of wear.

One longtime sufferer recommended coating the underside of the sandal's band with shellac or clear nail polish to prevent the dye and oil from reaching the skin.

Or, you can just scratch and bear it.

The culprit

should be soaked in water before wearing to make them supple. He said he has been told that if the sandals aren't soaked, the allergic substances will remain.

The itchy and concerned consumer may be happy to know that sensitizer which is not properly removed from the sandals. Linberg said the sandal could be classified as a hazardous substance and restricted if it violates the Federal Hazardous Substances Act.

It would be necessary to show the frequency of occurrence of the rash, the severity of the reaction and the sandal's potential for causing hypersensitivity. If the sandal was found guilty, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare could declare it unsafe, according to Linberg.

Policeman beats dope rap; seeks ways for reprieve

A former Carbondale police officer, who was cleared of narcotics charges last week, has three ways to reclaim his job, the chairman of the city's merit board said Wednesday.

Bretton Lockwood, attorney who heads the merit panel, said that Arthur Valentine, who lost his job under disputed circumstances in May, could bring his case to the merit board either by appeal or by applying as a new employee.

Valentine may also regain his job as policeman if city officials determine that his resignation was not valid, Lockwood said. He indicated he expects a decision in the case soon.

Valentine claimed he was forced to resign under threat of prosecution. He later was charged with dispensing and possession of narcotics, a misdemeanor involving less than 25 grams of marijuana.

Valentine was innocent of the charges in a hearing in Jackson County Circuit Court a week ago.

Correction

The SU Summer Chamber Orchestra will present a concert on Friday, August 6, in the Lutheran Student Center Chapel. The date for the concert was incorrectly reported in Wednesday's Daily Egyptian as Friday, July 6.

Ali ready to 'spar' with Jimmy Ellis

HOUSTON (AP) — Muhammad Ali continued to train for Jimmy Ellis Wednesday but looked past his bout with his former sparring partner and said he would fight again in seven weeks.

"I need the work. I got to get ready for Joe Frazier," Ali gave as the reason for taking the scheduled 12-round fight against Ellis Monday night in the Astrodome.

Then he told newsmen in his dressing room "I'll have you traveling again soon. I'm going to fight again in seven more weeks."

Ali declined to name a future opponent, but said he had "two or three good fighters in mind." Before signing with Ellis, Ali had said he wanted three fights before a rematch with Frazier to whom he lost a unanimous 15-round decision last March 8 in a bid for the undisputed world heavyweight championship.

Before working out at Astrohall, Ali and Ellis were given a prefight physical and pronounced fit by Dr. Henry Withers of the Texas Boxing Commission.

Ali's weight was announced as 224 but this was with his shoes on. Ellis scaled 192½ shoeless.

Ellis said he expected to weigh 191 for the fight, 10 pounds less than he weighed when he was stopped by Frazier in five rounds Feb. 16, 1970. At the time Ellis was World Boxing Association heavyweight champion, a title he gained after Ali was stripped of universal championship recognition because of his draft evasion conviction which has been overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Ali said he expects to weigh 213, two pounds less than he weighed for the Frazier fight, when he steps into the ring for the fight which is scheduled to start at 9:45 p.m. (CDT).

Ali will receive $450,000 or 45 per cent of all income which includes closed circuit television. Ellis will get 20 per cent of all income.

Ellis sparred two rounds Wednesday and then said:

"I think I'll be the aggressor. I'd rather be the man moving in."

But Ellis, who was Ali's sparring partner during Ali's climb to the top and during his reign as champion, said he is prepared to adjust his plan of battle.

Ali also said he plans to be the aggressor. "I'll be after him," he said.

During most of Ali's workout, which included four rounds of sparring, he was in a somber mood. But then in the second round of his session with Eddie Brooks, Ali dropped to the canvas as though he had been knocked down and made a big scene while his handlers rushed to his side.

Ali got to his feet as the crowd cheered and finished the round.

Banks hits 511th homer

Cubs win over Mets, 11-7

CHICAGO (AP) — Four home runs including the 511th career blast by Ernie Banks paved the Chicago Cubs to an 11-7 victory over the New York Mets Wednesday.

Banks solo homer as a pinch-hitter leading off the sixth inning was his second of the season and lifted him into an eighth place tie with the late Mel Ott on the all-time list.

The Mets jumped into the lead on Cleon Jones' two-run homer in the first, his ninth of the season. But the Cubs reared back with seven runs in the first three innings.

Billy Williams crashed his 18th homer in the first inning. Jim Hickman made it 7-2 with a two-run homer in the third and Chris Cannizzaro hit his fourth homer in the Cub half of the seventh.

Ed Kranepool homered for New York in the ninth.

Green Bay to gamble on Starr

By Paul Cercoran
Copley News Service

GREEN BAY, Wis. — The 1971 football season will be one of survival for the Green Bay Packers, or at least that is the way new head coach Dan Devine sees it.

And Devine is gambling on Starr that the year will not be disastrous.

At a time when good pro quarterbacks seem to be either too young or too old, the Packers surrendered one of the brighter quarterback prospects, Don Horn, to Denver to obtain a first round draft choice and a seasoned player.

That puts the burden on Bart Starr, who led the Vince Lombardi-coached teams to their greatest seasons, but who has been restricted because of injury in the last few years.

"A lot of people say Starr cannot play quarterback for us," said Devine. "But there are two of us who believe he can: Bart and I. And we're pretty important about deciding who does play."

Starr, at 38, is working out twice daily at Green Bay to get in shape, Devine said. "He is doing everything to get in condition."

Devine was in the process of making his move from Columbia, Mo., where he has coached the University of Missouri since 1958, when interviewed.

"Every time I close the door, the packers open it," he said with minor irritation. "I mean men packing the furniture, not the other Packers," he added hastily.

Devine, an intense little Irishman who had only one losing season as a college coach in 16 years, said he had expected to find more difference in the pro sport.

"I'm not boasting," Dan said in his slow, Midwestern baritone, "but the system is not that much different. There is not one single play in our Green Bay book that we did not have at Missouri last year."

That does not mean that Devine will not change a game plan if he discovers he has the material to do it.

"I have always tried to adapt to the personnel we have," he said. "At Missouri, there was a time when we did not have a good quarterback who could throw the ball, so we concentrated on running and a defensive game."

The quarterback is the key to any pro team, and Starr has been one of the best in the game. But age is catching up with him, just as it is with his backup man, Zeke Bratkowski.

However, Devine said he thought the Horn trade "would be good for both him and our team." Horn had not been particularly happy at Green Bay, and, in four years, had not quite lived up to expectations.

"It may be the best deal Denver ever made," said Devine, "but it will take time to see. We think we also benefited."

Devine said he believed there definitely is a shortage of mature younger quarterbacks in the pro game. "There are perhaps six or eight at the peak of their game," he agreed.

Johnny Unitas' of Baltimore—troubled by injury—is approaching the end of the trail, so is Len Dawson of Kansas City. Dallas lacks a first-class signal caller. Almost every standout quarterback in the game, excluding injury-prone Gregg Cook of Cincinnati, is in his early or mid-30s. The Terry Bradshaws in the sophomore class have yet to prove themselves.

Devine, who has expended almost all his waking hours on football since he became an assistant coach at Michigan State, always speaks fondly of one quarterback who also is a grid senior citizen.

Devine recruited Earl Morrall for the Spartans in the early 1950s. If he can find a youngster in college of similar talent in the near future, replacing Starr will be easier.

But it won't happen this year.
