"I'm the last of the '60s leftovers," says 28-year-old Keith Tuxhorn. "I beat the 'me' generation by a couple years and missed the riots by a couple years."

Those circumstances, however, haven't created any identity void in Tuxhorn, the youngest member of the Car­ bend City Council. He takes turns rebuking or espousing creeds from both eras with a seemingly more objective stance than those who grew up during the core of either time.

In the same breath, Tuxhorn can extol the virtues of ideals popularized in the '60s such as "equality for all" and "people not profits," and endorse notions of drug-free living and Bible reading.

"REALITY. IDEAS of equality, justice and equal distribution of wealth aren't just from one generation," he said. "Those are ideals you can go back to the Bible for.

Tuxhorn, born and raised in Springfield, came to SIU-C in 1973 and received a special bachelor's degree in writing in 1977. He has since lived in Cape Girardeau, Missouri and St. Louis, but has always come back to Carbondale because of the University and the pace of life.

Writing has always been an interest of Tuxhorn's. He said he hopes to discipline himself to do more serious writing in the future.

"Writing lets a lot of my creativity out," he said. "Sometimes I get clogged with all my business stuff and don't get a chance to do that."

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will expand its studies of hazardous wastes at Crab Orchard Lake to include all industrial sites on the refuge.

Wayne Adams, of the Fish and Wildlife Service, said at the first meeting of Rep. Paul Simon's citizen's committee that "we need to look at a comprehensive approach that encompasses the entire 22,900 acres of the refuge."

"We're looking at records to see who occupied what space, and what they did. We're getting information from companies that operated on that site, including Sherwin-Williams, which operated the ordinance plant," Adams said.

Adams said the ordinance plant was operated during World War II, and the site was able to operate other companies after the war. The pollution problem could have started with the Crab Orchard panel to expand lake study

Reagan says Democrats 'too far left'

University officials are hoping that a package of strategies recommended by a Baltimore research firm will help SIU-C overcome one of its image problems—the perception of the school as a "small teachers college."

On the average, former alumni who responded to an opinion poll conducted by the Barton-Gillet Co. put the University among four former teachers colleges in the state, rather than as a comprehensive research university in the same league with the University of Illinois, according to the poll.

The firm's recommendations strengthening student recruitment, enhancing alumni programs and improving private fund-raising efforts— are the culmination of a yearlong study commissioned by the SIU Foundation.

In 1983, Barton-Gillet undertook a two-phase study consisting of an in-depth analysis of the University's marketing practices and a telephone survey of some 700 key constituents.

Final recommendations were submitted to the University in April.

More than 90 percent of alumni who responded to the poll said they were satisfied with the education they received at SIU-C. More than three-quarters said they would select the University again.

But Jack Dyer, executive director of University relations, said he is concerned that despite the system's Medical School in Springfield and extensive graduate programming, even former alumni view SIU-C as a four-year school on the level of Eastern, Northern and Western Illinois universities.

Dyer said the University is working to overcome that image, "even if it is only a perception not based on reality."

"To lump us together with Eastern, Western, Northern and Illinois State University is not fair," Dyer said Wednesday. "We offer so much more here."

According to the study, marketing enhancement to the school would come from maintaining the status it holds as "a first-rate teaching university" while expanding the public's perception as a "comprehensive research university providing sub­stantially valuable community service."

Dyer said that promoting the University into the policy-making arena for the PSC's, according to David Stallings, chemist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"The clean-up should focus on the PCB's, according to David Stallings, chemist for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"The leadership of the Democratic Party gave Texas the opportunity to vote for Reagan, in an apparent reference to Mondale's choice of Mike Ferraro over populist Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Bentsen called that charge "ridiculous," and Mondale asserted that Reagan was getting "a little bit desperate."

Reagan, referring to his Democratic challengers, said, "Please let them bury the American dream in their graveyard of gloom and envy."

Nimrod on "Creature Features
From the Lost Planet," a local

His interests might make Tuxhorn seem like a man captured in the Peter Pan syndrome. There is always the other side of his life, though, the one in which he progresses upstairs or downstairs, a position he's held since 1983.

"I know there are people who would love to say, 'A comic book store -- we've got a comic book councilman.' Those people obviously haven't taken the time to pay attention to what I've done with the council and to see what my positions are," he said. "If they did, they'd find out I don't wear a cape and a big hat on my chest."

TUXHORN'S REFUSAL to limit himself to a certain category of beliefs or interests has given him an advantage when dealing with others, he said. He tried that leverage to his high school days, when he took part in sports and many organizations.

"I really get along with everybody," he said. "I ran track and cross country, so all the jocks liked me. I got good grades, so all the smart people liked me. And, well, I look a little funny, so for some reason the smokers and drug crowd got along with me, too."

Catching the end of the '60s mentality greatly affected Tuxhorn. He cherishes many of the ideals of the period and applies them to his business and council work. For asking ideals, he said, cheats people in their lives.

"TO BE HONEST, if you start to care for money too much, you're going to lose your ideas.
If you fall into reality 24 hours a day, and throw your ideals away, why bother? When you

University outside Southern Illinois is sometimes difficult.
He said that because of the area's thin population base and the University's limited resources, exposure in major media markets is small.

"We have to fight in the bigger markets like Chicago and St. Louis just to get our foot in the door," he said. The isolated atmosphere also hinders the effort, he added.

"Some of the things that make Southern Illinois so nice, like the relaxed atmosphere and the natural beauty, tend to sometimes work against us," he said, adding that other research on campus is varied and fills majority of students who attend SIUC-learn about the school by word-of-mouth.

But by instituting several of the recommendations and targeting efforts toward working with alumni and the total range of possible incoming students, Dyer said he feels that eventually the image problem will be overcome.

"It's not going to happen overnight," he said.

Classes, not exams, set Wednesday Final exams will not be given on Wednesday, Aug.1, but classes will be held, according to the Office of the Vice President for Academic Affairs and Research. Confusion had arisen about whether the day had been set aside with study with a classmate. The Office of Admissions and Records reported it had received numerous phone calls on the matter.

The confusion apparently stemmed from a suggestion by University Graduate Student Organization in spring 1983 to set aside the day before finals for study, with no classes scheduled. The Faculty Senate passed a resolution asking that the day be designated a no-examination day. The senate resolution was made University policy.

Final examinations will be given Thursday, Aug. 2, and Friday, Aug. 3. Schedules for individual classes are posted in Woodly Hall and are on Page 11 of today's Daily Egyptian.

Final accord reached to aid bank WASHINGTON (AP) -- Federal officials and officials of Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. have reached final agreement on a $515-million dollar and package for the ailing Chicago bank, banking sources said Wednesday.

Terms of the complicated deal, marking the biggest bank recovery ever, will be spelled out at a Thursday morning news conference at the Federal Deposit Insurance. Corp.

Two hurt in Texas shark attacks SOUTHE PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) -- A teen-age girl's legs were mangled by "fierce bites" from a shark while another girl injured 76 stiches to close bite wounds, but city officials decided Wednesday to keep open their popular beaches.

"We're probably taking more precautions than necessary," said city official Joe Rubio. "We hope we can get some more publicity and get more tourists down here."

Carmen Gaytan, 18, attacked in the Gulf of Mexico by what rescues described as a 4-foot shark, was in guarded condition
Wednesday in the intensive care unit of Valley Community Hospital. She underwent extensive reconstructive surgery on her legs.

Award OK'd in police spying suit
CHICAGO (AP) -- A federal judge on Wednesday approved a $355,000 settlement for 23 civic groups and individuals including the Rev. Jesse Jackson -- who claimed the police violated their constitutional rights by spying on them.

The out-of-court settlement, approved by U.S. District Judge Susan Gettlemander, ends nearly 10 years of litigation against the city and the Police Department's non-fugit Red Squad, an intelligence unit assigned to combat subversives.

The lawsuit basically covers surveillance activities from the mid-1960s to the mid-1970s, said Robert Howard, an attorney for the plaintiffs.

Power move in Israel
Labor Party unites with Shamir to gain public support

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Labor Party, seeking public support for its efforts to form a coalition, reversed tactics Wednesday and said it would join Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir in a government of national unity.

But Labor officials insisted that Labor, not Shamir, should lead such a government.

Aides of Shamir, who heads the governing Likud bloc, made it clear he was not willing to play junior partner to Labor. Labor Party officials conceded their sudden readiness to enter a bipartisan government was largely a tactical move. During the campaign, Labor had opposed a unity government, saying it would be incapable of agreeing on important policy matters.

They said their new strategy was aimed mainly at satisfying the public's desire for a show of unity after the divisive election. Not only were the two parties poles apart ideologically on such key issues as Arab-Israeli peace, but the officials strongly doubted Shamir would accept Labor's demand that it head a government.

Because both major parties failed to gain the 61 seats needed for a majority in the Knesset or parliament, both were left to seek the support of Israel's 13 rightist and leftist fringe parties.

Likud leaders felt they should lead any government because their policies have more support from the small parties. Labor Party leader Shimon Peres met briefly with his senior colleagues at the party's beachside headquarters in Tel Aviv and issued a statement pledging "to act to set up an broad a government as possible on the basis of agreed principles and in accordance with the platform of the party."

According to projections, Labor won 45 seats to 41 for Shamir's Likud bloc in the 120-member Knesset in Monday's election. The figure was likely to change slightly when the military ballots come in Thursday. Eight to 10 seats remain to be apportioned.

With the result so close, the military ballot took on critical proportions, evening the parties' negotiations on a coalition.

Menachem Begin, the former prime minister who forged the Likud, said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press that he thought a national unity government would be "a good idea," but should be led by "my good friend Mr. Shamir."

SCAM head to speak for UMW on Herrin panel

By Jim Laderman
Staff Writer

Steve Banker was appointed interim representative of the local United Mine Workers union to the Herrin Community Council at a meeting of the council's board of directors Tuesday night.

Banker, who is the chairman of the Southern Counties Action Movement, said in a telephone interview he will serve on the board until the union side of the board could find a representative from the UMW.

Banker said Herrin Chamber of Commerce representatives boycotted the meeting, although they did send a representative, Tom Dimms, who is manager of the Herrin Chamber of Commerce.

Banker said Dimms read a statement from the other board members. The statement consisted of four points:

-The board of directors was selected in accordance with the by-laws of the council.

-While the by-laws permit three members to call a meeting of the board, they do not permit three members to decide when and where that meeting shall take place.

-The board rejected the proposals made by SCAM, that the size of the board be increased from 10 members to 14, and that the board conduct meetings monthly instead of annually. The board voted 5-2 against the proposals at its annual meeting in April.

-The council has funds to loan anyone who wishes to expand or start a new industry in Herrin.

Dimms said in a phone interview that the Chamber of Commerce representatives boycotted the meeting because they "saw no purpose being achieved in a media event organized by SCAM."

Dimms said Garner and SCAM were contending that they would not be satisfied until the board passed SCAM's proposals.

"The Herrin Community Council is basically a financial arm of the Herrin Chamber of Commerce. The chamber has monthly meetings, where we take care of loan applications for council funds. It's been this way since the council was started," Dimms said.

Water deposit boos: would short students

THE CITY Council on Aug. 6 is scheduled to consider an ordinance change that would double the deposit required of single-family dwellers. In a statement, Mayor Koch said it was the increase he was proposing so that the deposit would cover unpaid bills.

The average delinquent account has been estimated by the city finance department at $49.56. Thence, the $50 deposit would be just enough to cover the average unpaid bill.

Many students will be adversely affected by the water deposit increase, which, in addition to electricity and gas service deposits, tuition payments, book buying, housing damage and deposits and vance rent payments, puts a strain on an off-campus student's budget early in the school year.

In one survey of the city's water customers having delinquent accounts, the city doesn't have many alter- natives to make up for the unpaid bill.

ACCORDING to Paul Sorgen, city finance director, one reason that the deposit is so high is that some residents who have had their water cut off will illegally turn the water back on. Not to mention, some may simply disregard the fact that the water has been officially shut off, and the city will not know about it until the next month.

The deposit is placed on a property where the owner or tenants have had an unpaid bill. This procedure has raised the ire of landlords as the city holds responsible for any unpaid bills left by tenants. Landlords feel that they shouldn't be held responsible for a tenant's delinquent bill.

Landlords don't want to pay their tenants' overdue bills, and many students can't afford to pay extra deposit money. This dilemma can be solved with a little cooperation between tenants and land- lords.

One solution would be to have landlords pay the water bills for the student and add the amount of the bill to the tenant's rent each month.

FOR LANDLORDS, this would avoid the expense of paying an unneeded bill and would keep the city from placing a lien on their properties. For tenants, this would save them the added expense of the deposit and void any monthly hassle of the water bill. It seems to be a mutually beneficial solution.

Why such an arrangement is not a common rea- son is the city holds responsible for any unpaid bills left by tenants. Landlords feel that they shouldn't be held responsible for a tenant's delinquent bill.

Cuomo attacked Republican strengths

MARIO CUOMO stropped his sword on the themes of the Democratic presidential candidate. Reagan will incinerate the world before he implications the world with a piddling shell, considered an indoor record for use of the word "family." He waited all the way to the Nineteenth word of the address to use the word, for him, heroic restraint — but then is used in four places in a four-page essay. Talk about standing on the shoulders of giants! Here is a party that clearly thinks the public is not sure it likes the family as an American institution. To do. Hence the tendency to borrow phrases and concepts from others.

Keynote speakers are not under oath and, in the interest of entertainment, the names of our перед- tenets interfere with phillips.

However, CUOMO'S speech was not all fire and flint in the campaign because it showed how hard Democrats are still gloating for a vocabulary that

In Wayne Helmer's response to my letter printed in the DE on June 11, he wrote, "Phillips says only the woman is punished for adultery." I said nothing about adultery. Let the record show that I said a woman who gives up her virginity voluntarily is subject to being stoned to death." (Deuteronomy 22:21) "yet there is no punishment for a man who takes a woman prior to marriage."

Only women are subject to punishment (for sexual activity) prior to marriage. To reinforce this argument as to the explicit nature of the Bible, it may be added that prostitutes are subject to stoning under Biblical law, yet the men who lay with her go free of punishment.

Mr. Helmer also wrote of my letter, "He also says the Bible does not condemn rape of a woman."

I took great pains to mention Deuteronomy 22:21-22:25; however, I will again point out that these verses speak only of virgin.

Mr. Helmer states that "A man who rapes an unmarried woman is to be stoned,

However, he fails to mention that this is only when a tobetted is taken in "the field."

If a betrothed virgin is raped in a city, she does not sper rape because "she cried not." Would Mr. Helmer suggest that the women of Carbondale who, under threat to their life, have been silent as they were raped be subject to stoning?

Professor Helmer's use of the word "exposed" instead of rape in the case of an unspurned virus is quite disgusting, since it is scarcely believable that a man can never know the difference between seduction and rape. I can only believe that this was an attempt to soften the impact of the brutal nature of forcing a raped woman to marry her rapist.

From the point of view of anyone who believes in equality and human freedom, large portions of the Bible are indefensible, and I can recognize the difficulties of its defenders.

Mr. Helmer argues that abortion is not a constitutional right. This fact is not mentioned in the Constitution. Many of our most cherished freedoms are not mentioned specifically in this document, but exist through judicial interpretation. This includes many of the freedoms that religions exercise in their pursuit of tyranny.

Also, one might wonder if it is not a freedom guaranteed by the Constitution, why do anti- abortionists find it necessary to seek a constitutional amendment to do so?

I am of the anti-Christ, even though I once was a lay- Pentecostal preacher. One day, I decided to quit reading the Bible in the way I was in- structed, to not let it be "in- terpreted" for me, and I read it in its entirety.

I found it to be a doctrine of oppression. However, Christianity is not the only oppressive force; so, too, are all religions of worship.

The belief in a devil or evil spirits is a cop-out. The belief in a god who will deliver us from that which we have wrought is an idle dream.

Only when men and women accept responsibility for this earth, only when they cease to be greedy and seek to hold power over others, can men and women find the freedom, the gods we once worshipped, as we once were before the earth was new and pure. — Robert T. Phillips, Carbondale.
Expert cites need for better radar in Central Illinois

CHAMPAIGN, (AP) - Current weather radar does not give the best protection to central Illinois, including part of the deadly tornado alley, according to the head of the Illinois State Water Survey.

The area, which includes Quincy, Peoria, Bloomington, Springfield, Decatur and Champaign, would be safer with the installation of sophisticated Doppler radar, Stanley Changnon said.

"Central Illinois is relatively unprotected because weather radars are so distant that their beams are high above the ground and we cannot adequately detect severe storm features like tornadoes and hail," Changnon said.

The radar systems that are in use "are too far away to give a adequate severe storm coverage over most of central Illinois," he said.

Changnon said Doppler radar was "essential for optimum storm detection" because it can detect wind and rain motions within thunderstorms and an sense early development of tornadoes better than conventional radar.

Tornado alley, a diagonal band in which twisters frequently have occurred, cuts through the area that is poorly covered by present weather radar, Changnon said.

After several storms swept across the middle of Illinois with little warning in the late 1970s, worried citizens and government officials formed a committee to study the problem and look for solutions.

"We became aware that a band of rather populous counties and counties ... did not have adequate severe weather warning capability," said Daniel Bell, chairman of the committee and of the Tazewell County Board. "We wanted to try to look for a system that would give us a 15- to 30-minute warning of severe weather."

Bell said it could cost $600,000 to provide Doppler radar to protect the population of central Illinois. He said the committee believes state and local governments might join to fund the project.

The federal government has a long-range plan to build a national network of Doppler radar units, Changnon said, but it could not be in operation until 1992.

Jesse says coalition avoids party's nod

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Rev. Jesse Jackson said Wednesday the "Rainbow Coalition" he built in an unsuccessful drive for the Democratic presidential nomination is still waiting for the party to make a commitment to blacks and other minorities.

"We must relate to the party, but the freedom movement can't get locked to politics," Jackson said.

Jackson told several thousand people attending a voter registration rally on the steps of the U.S. Capitol.

The Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, which says it added more than 342,000 voters to the rolls this year, sponsored the rally.

The Democratic Party has a mission we identify with," Jackson said. "Our mission is to defeat (President) Reagan in November. But the absence of Reagan is not the presence of jobs, peace and justice."

Cut GOP air time, CBS told

NEW YORK, (AP) - CBS affiliates, unhappy that convention broadcasts delayed their local newscasts last week, have asked the network to limit coverage of next month's Republican convention to prime time.

But Ed Joyce, president of CBS News, said Tuesday he could not guarantee how much time would be needed each night.

He anticipates "we'll be giving the Republicans roughly the same amount of time that we gave the Democrats," he said.

CBS, which began coverage at 3 a.m. EDT on three nights and 3:30 the other, was the only one of the three networks that didn't offer affiliates the option to cut away to local news.

"The concern is financial and competitive," said Callie Tarlow, senior vice president and manager of WRTV, CBS affiliate in Charlotte, N.C.

Soviets remember death of singer

MOSCOW (AP) - Thousands of Soviets of all ages visited the grave of singer Vladimir Vysotsky on Wednesday in homage to the folk hero whose following rivals that of John Lennon or Elvis Presley in the West.

Vysotsky, a gravel-voiced, hard-drinking actor and balladeer who lived life to the fullest, sang of its hardships and mocked those in high places. He died July 24, 1980, at the age of 42.

"He spoke about my generation and he sang the truth," said Sergei Armayev, a "middle-aged Moscow reader. "I am here because I love and esteem Vladimir Vysotsky.

An outpouring of grief by thousands at his funeral caught authorities by surprise, and mounted police skirmished with a defiant crowd refusing to end its vigil.

On each anniversary of his death, thousands stream to the Vaganokovsky cemetery in Moscow to heap flowers at the grave and pause in remembrance.

Although much of what Vysotsky said and sang has never been published officially, but a writer for the monthly magazine Nash Sovremennik (Our Contemporary) criticized Vysotsky fans who visit the grave. He said they trampled nearby graves, remarking that those who visit the graves of poets Boris Pasternak or Alexander Blok would not behave in that manner.

Games to start under tight security

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Behind a forbidden fence and double fence of barbed wire, with a military SWAT team alert for any emergency, the XXIII Olympic Games face Saturday's opening withcrenosity and tremendous calm.

"When you walk through the village everything seems lighter and happier," said Rick Carey, the United States' world record-busting backstroke swimmer.

"Everyone is more cheerful and the nerves are now gone. I've never run for his homeland 'n a bid to thwart Carl Lewis' bid for four gold medals. "Everyone seems so relaxed and feeling so secure."

Young stood in the shadow of the Humanities Building at the University of Southern California, one of the three "privileged" Moscovite villages for the Games. Begonias, petunias and eucalyptus formed a rainbow background in the shade of towering trees. Splashes of pastel colors bounced off the fences, disguised as best they can be. Multicolored balloons gave the scene a festive atmosphere.

A group of Romanian athletes kicked a soccer ball on a grassy plot nearby. The Romanians alone of the Soviet Union's athletes failed to join the Russians in the boycott of these Games. A boycott I said was partially based on fear of inadequate security.

Drugs not the way to go, mayor says

By Morgan Falkner
Staff Writer

The stress-filled life of today's young people is tailor-made for drug and alcohol abuse, the mayor of East St. Louis told participants in a camp on drug-abuse prevention Wednesday at Touch of Nature Environmental Center.

Mayor Carl E. Officer spoke to about 100 participants, mostly East St. Louis junior high and high school students, at the first Youth Leadership and Prevention Program summer camp. Officer began the YLPP to serve the East St. Louis area two years ago.

"We need you to go home and provide leadership, but you must be able to follow as well," Officer said.

The YLPP is based on a similar program in Chicago, and, according to Officer, it is quite successful. Program coordinator Heddy Ducree, also of St. Louis, said the focus of the week-long camp at Touch of Nature is to inform the youths that there are alternatives to drugs and alcohol.

"This is a prevention program. We want the kids to be able to say no to drugs and people trying to sell them," Ducree said. The program tries to provide information to youths and their parents on the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse.

The program began in August 1983 and was financed by the Gateway East Health Service. But with help from the Illinois Department of Alcohol and Substance Abuse, funding has increased from $30,000 to $100,000. Staff members meet with the youths twice each month and for one week during the summer.

Ducree said that prevention, or reaching youths before they come into contact with drugs or alcohol, has been the program's goal so far. But intervention, or working with youths once they have already experimented with drugs or alcohol, is another goal.

"The missing link is early intervention," Ducree said.

Officer said today's young people experience much more stress than in the past. The plight of urban blacks and the threat of nuclear war create an environment in which youths may turn to drug and alcohol abuse, he said.

"I've seen 13-year-old kids who deal drugs that make more money than I do," he said.

Sixty-three mini-courses, including sports and outdoor activities, are offered to the youths at the camp. The effects of the program on the participants are difficult to gauge, he said.

Carbondale Mayor Helen Westberg greeted Officer at the camp on Wednesday. She said she was very impressed with the YLPP.

"It is an exciting concept," Westberg said. She added that such a program in Carbondale was possible.

Officer, an SIU-C alumnus, said better public awareness seems to be the real answer to the problem.

"You can't teach people morals," he said.

So long Bangkok, hello Googie Louie

LOS ANGELES (AP) - F or the next three weeks, it's goodbye Bangkok and Ka旧ndu and hello to "Googie Louie." Happening this week is the burrito Cidy Lauper lookalikes and Kated rape lookalikes. The odd mix that is Southern California's trend of laying down freeways, Valley Girls and Hollywood giltz - makes for a peculiar kind of culture shock for first-time visitors flocking here for the Olympics.

It's a $1,500-a-day limousine rates, under-21 rights, bubble gum to German knights. But undoubled... from bubble gum to German knights. And the mummies.

Welcome to Southern California, the 20th century's Land of Oz, where Mickey Mouse and Goofy are more than Disneyland characters - they embody a way of life.

Birthplace of the bizarre, inventor of international fads and fashions, it is a microcosm of our world. It is instant gratification, hedonism and throwaway culture.

It is a unique subculture that Elvis Bloc athletes will miss and others, including more than a few Americans, may find bewildering.

Consider an interpreter's dilemma if Moscow and its allies had sent its best and bravest. How does one explain $35,000 cars that compute your miles per gallon as you drive, tell you when your trunk is open and sport license plates that read "Seize," "Star" and "Goofy" and "The Max."

Valley vocabulary that revolves around such basics as "totally awesome," "gag me with a spoon," for sure, and "gory and goopy and the max."

Singerie at Freddie's Hippodrome.

A dial-a-prayer, dial-a-porn and prom.

Potent exotic drinks named "Revenge of the Nerds," "Skip and Go Naked," "Willyshock." It's instant drunk without drinking.

Mammouth sandwiches called "Cluck Gable," "Tongue Fu," "Mish Mosh." "Attila the Hun," and "Ike and Vina Tuna."

A wild-game restaurant near Disneyland that serves buffalo steaks and rattlesnake on request.

"Whether you come from Boise, Idaho, or some foreign country, you are encouraged to experience some culture shock in Southern California," according to Stan Weingart, a stress management professor at the University of Southern California.

"It's a scene that will affect visitors in different ways."

New York (AP) — Darrell Strawberry hit a three-run homer, his 16th of the season, and drove in four runs as the New York Mets extended their winning streak to six games with an 8-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday afternoon.

The Cardinals gave Kurt Mccarthy, 2-2, a 5-4 lead in the 1st inning when the Mets scored four runs in the top of the 1st inning to take control. Wally Backman singled and stole second and, after Keith Hernandez drew a one-out walk, Strawberry hit Kepshire's first pitch 280 feet over the left-center field fence for the game 3-1. Rubie Brooks and Danny Heep followed with back-to-back singles and then executed a double steal. That set the stage for Mike Fitzgerald's sacrifice fly to left that scored Brooks with the go-ahead run.

Sid Fernandez, 3-4, pitched five innings and Ed Lynch allowed only four hits over the final four innings to register his second save. Fernandez, called up two weeks ago from Tidewater of the Class AA International League, gave up three runs in the first two innings. He struck out five and walked two before being lifted for a pinch-hitter.

Foe Mets, chassis 5-4 Kephshire by scoring three times in the fifth on Strawberry's ground ball, a throwing error by Cardinal center fielder Tito Landrum and a run-scoring single by Brooks. Hernandez drove in a run in the sixth inning, his single. Both runners completed the scoring with a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning.

The Cardinals took a 4-2 lead in the first inning on a walk to Lonnie Smith, a run-scoring double by Bill Lyman, an infield out and a sacrifice fly by George Hendrick.

Kingman's name back in headlines, for now

He draws attention to him wherever he goes, but he swears he doesn't like it. He may be down a lot, but he never is completely out, not even when you think he is.

His name is Dave Kingman, and yes, he's back in the baseball headlines with the Oakland A's. He's a little older now, but he still hits those towering home runs to deep left field.

Kingman has had a controversial career in the majors, wherever he has played. Yet no matter how tempest the man is at times, there is no denying that he can be one of the game's most dominating players — when he feels like it.

The 1984 season has definitely been a "King Kong" year for the 6-6, 220-pound Kingman. The A's don't have an especially good team this season, but they're in the wild, wild West, livin' of the American League, where anything can happen. Oakland is in fifth place, but is only 4.5 games from the top. It's a scary thing to think where they might be if Kingman wasn't swingin' his mighty bat.

Kingman is hitting .284 and has league-leading totals in home runs (38) and RBIs (87). But before you start thinking he will do that again next year, you better look into his past a little.

ANYONE FAMILIAR with Kingman should know that he can't be depended on to walk away from the cleanup spot in a batting order for more than two years at a time. Something always happens to him, or at least he claims it does. If it's not an injury to his little toe, it's a hangnail. Kingman plays when he wants to — when it's convenient for Dave Kingman.

Obviously, Kingman is in a good baseball mood this season, unlike some in the past. When he was with the Cubs in 1979, he felt like playing, hitting 288 with 48 home runs and 115 RBIs. He was the center of attention all season. People in Chicago even tried to name a street after him.

There seems to be a pattern to Kingman. He's good when he is considered the best player on a team. When he was with the Mets in the mid-70s, Kingman was the best player on a terrible team. He was with the Cubs. Now the same is true of the A's. For a guy who says he doesn't like attention, Kingman certainly does a good job attracting it.

Lucky is the team that finds Kingman in a baseball-playing mood. Despite his many flaws, Kingman is at times the most awesome player ever. He can single-handedly control the outcome of a game just with his bat.

Kingman's defensive shortcomings, however, are obvious. The Cubs found that out. But losing a chance on his home run bat has been tempting to many teams throughout his career.

The 1977, for example, Kingman played for four teams that season. He started the year with the Mets, was traded to San Diego, then to California, and finally ended up back in New York with the Yankees. Then the Cubs signed him as a free agent during the off-season.

There seems to be a pattern to Kingman. He's good when he is considered the best player on a team. When he was with the Mets in the mid-70s, Kingman was the best player on a terrible team. As a result, he signed a new contract with the Cubs. Now the same is true of the A's. For a guy who says he doesn't like attention, Kingman certainly does a good job attracting it.

His defensive shortcomings, however, are obvious. The Cubs found that out. But losing a chance on his home run bat has been tempting to many teams throughout his career. The next stop in the slugger's career is anyone's guess. Unpredictable is one of the words that describes King Kong. But he can also be predictable, meaning that he probably won't be with the A's in 1986. Two years will be the maximum Oakland will get from him.

Swim club's Simms wins in record time

By Greg Severia Staff Writer

After failing to qualify for the Olympics in the 1,500-meter freestyle last winter, UTEP's Dave Simms rebounded to win the Ponse International Swim Across the Bay in Puerto Rico Monday.

Simms, ranked eighth in the world when he qualified last winter while at Stanford University, broke the Ponse meet record -- a run at the closest competition by world's best. "That's a fairly substantial margin," Hill said Simms took a few breaths after the Olympic trials, then traveled to Fort Worth to compete in the United States National trials. Simms finished first in the U.S. National distance trials and also qualified for the Ponse swim meet. 'The Peone men was really just a chance for him to get some distance for the Olympics," Hill said before going to the U.S. Nationals in Fort Lauderdale from August 14," said Hill, who coached the Chicago area native in high school.

GCAC's director of information

Stephens to quit

Tim Stephens has resigned as information director of the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference, effective July 31, to take a similar position at St. Louis University.

Stephens, a 23-year-old native of Yanketteind., Ind. held the position with the Gateway for nearly a year. The GCAC is a 10-member, Division I conference that included the SIU-C Edwards' teams among its members.

During his tenure with the GCAC, Stephens was responsible for the planning and implementation of all publicity efforts for the conference. "I've learned a great deal in the past year, and I've really enjoyed the opportunity to work with all of the Gateway members. I'd like to remain a part of the league for a long time, but opportunities like St. Louis University don't come around often," Stephens said.

GCAC Commissioner Patty Viverito is currently looking for a replacement. An announcement is expected in August.
