Americans harvesting gold in pool

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — America's forecasted dominance in the Olympic swimming pool was given a boost by golden performances from Palisades, New York's Mary Sheehan and Nicole Haslett Monday and the United States, at least temporarily moved into the overall medal lead.

The U.S. baseball team, meanwhile, was still waiting for its Olympic game while the American men's volley ball team lost a contest it thought was already in the victory column.

As the Olympics settled into a routine following Saturday's action, the United States was beginning to put up medals in the pool.

And that was what happened on another hot day at the outdoor aquatic center atop Montjuic in the heart of Barcelona. There were five swimming finals Monday and the United States won a medal in all five — two gold, a silver and two bronze.

And with Mary Ellen Clark adding a bronze medal in the women's platform diving, the United States' medal total rose to nine. China had seven medals, including three gold and the Unified team made up of repubs from the old Soviet Union, had six medals, all but one of which was gold.

Additional medals were to be awarded later Monday in diving, weightlifting and judo.

The U.S. men's basketball team also had a scheduled meeting with Croatia Monday night after battering Angola Sunday, 116-48.

With the heat beating down on the outdoor activities Monday, the American baseball team played for three hours and 40 minutes before finally disposing of Taiwan, 10-9.

A three-run homer by Phil Nevin of Placentia, Calif., gave the Americans a 3-0 lead in the second, but the United States had come from behind to stay unbeaten in the Olympic tournament.

The Americans will face Italy in the round-robin tourney Tuesday before facing the gold medal favorites from Cuba on Wednesday night.

Cuba is also unbeaten in two games, smashing Italy Monday, 18-1.

The American men's volleyball team was not as fortunate, however. After losing to the United States in five thrilling sets Sunday, Japan filed a protest saying U.S. player Bob Samuelson should have been ejected during the fourth set because he had been given his second yellow card.

SIUC connection

Former Saluki finishes 10th in Olympic road race

By Jay Reed

Sports Writer

The SIUC connection to the Barcelona Olympic was linked Sunday when former SIUC track and cross country distance runner Sally Zack finished 10th in the women's 4,000-meter cycle road race.

The North Conway, N.H., cyclist finished the 48-kilometer event in a time of 2 hours, five minutes, two seconds. Australian Kathryn Watt won the gold medal with a time of 2:42:42.

Zack improved upon the 1988 Seoul Olympics event when she finished 16th.

Kathleen Raske, assistant women's track and cross country coach and Zack's teammate on the 1985 SIUC women's track and cross country team, said Zack was a very intense athlete who knew what she wanted.

"Sally was a very determined athlete who was very focused," she said. "She got into cycling and that was her niche."

Former SIUC student-athlete Connie Price-Smith seems to have found her niche for the second time. Price-Smith, former SIUC basketball track and field standout, qualified for the Barcelona Olympics by becoming the first woman since 1960 to win both the shot put and discus at the Olympic Trials.

Price-Smith competed in both events in the 1988 Seoul Olympics, but failed to medal.

Darrin Flah, former SIUC two-time NCAA high jump champion, goes into his first Olympic games tied with fellow American Real Ellis Conway with the best high jump by an American this year at 7-8 1/2.

Flah will forgo his senior season of eligibility to compete professionally.

Flah will be competing Friday, in the high jump final qualifying event. The high jump finals will be Sunday.

Sheehan slides past Inkster in LPGA U.S. Open playoff

OAKMONT, Pa. (UPI) — Patty Sheehan birdied the first hole and held as much as a five-stroke lead, eventually beating Juli Inkster by two shots in an 18-hole playoff Sunday for the United States Women's Open Championship.

Sheehan shot a 1-under par 72 while Inkster registered a 74 at the Oakmont Country Club outside Pittsburgh.

The playoff was forced when Sheehan came back from a three-stroke deficit in Sunday's fourth round. Heading into the final two holes, Sheehan was down three strokes but was able to birdie both holes and tie Inkster at 4-under par 280 through the 72 holes of regulation play.

Sheehan said the win holds a lot of significance for a number of reasons.

"To win the U.S. Open at Oakmont, and how much it means to me concerning the Hall of Fame, this is the most exciting tournament I've ever played in," she said.

The 35-year-old Sheehan, with 29 victories, is now just one win away from earning automatic enshrinement.

Sheehan took a one-stroke lead when she sunk a 10-foot put for birdie, her third straight, on the par-four first hole.

"It was pretty key," Sheehan said. "Juli was on the green in two and sitting pretty good but she didn't hit a very good putt and I made the birdie putt and she had to make an eight-footer for a par. I kind of had her struggling just a little bit."

Both women parred the second hole but Inkster had a chance to pull even with an 18-hole playoff.

SIUC golf coach to become official PGA member

By John Boiger

Sports Writer

Gene Shanefelt, Saluki head men's golf coach, will add to his list of credentials when he becomes an official member of the Professional Golfers Association Saturday.

Shanefelt, a 25-year-old Altamont, Ill., native, was John A. Logan's most valuable player, an academic All-American and a National Junior College Athletic Association qualifier in 1989.

In 1990 he became John A. Logan's head men's golf coach until he accepted the position at SIUC on June 29.

Shanefelt spent the last 26 months as an apprentice under Steve Heckel, head professional at Crab Orchard.

The time spent as an apprentice is one of the requirements became a PGA club professional.

The other requirements include that Shanefelt had to have included two business courses, a business work book, shooting a minimum of 18 holes a day for six months; and an oral interview and test.

The PGA conducts new professionals on the first day of each month.

Jim Hart, SIUC athletic director, said he expected that Shanefelt would eventually make it into the PGA.

"I think it was just a matter of time," Hart said.

"Being in the PGA is going to allow him access to teaching materials that will help the golf team with its mechanics and instruction," Shanefelt said.

Shanefelt will continue to work at Crab Orchard and said he feels he still has a few years for the team.

"We are in a good position because the team practices at Crab Orchard Monday in and out of season with five hours a day at the two facilities including assistance from Steve Heckel," Shanefelt said.

Shanefelt said being a PGA pro will also help the athletes on the team if they decide to continue on in golf as a profession.

"Many college golfers continue on in golf and if they are interested in becoming a teaching professional they will have my assistance on how they should go about it," Shanefelt said.

Shanefelt is looking ahead to his coaching position at SIUC.

"I've already looked into the requirements for next season from Arizona, Vermont and Connecticut," Shanefelt said. "To come to SIUC I had to become one of the 20,000 members of the PGA and to take the job as head men's golf coach all in one summer.

"I've been well blessed to become a PGA pro and a Division I golf coach," Shanefelt said.

"U.S. military assets in the Persian Gulf region have been pretty beefy since the end of the war," a senior Pentagon official said. When Saddam's forces invaded Kuwait almost exactly two years ago, there were about 10,000 American servicemen in the Gulf, almost 90 percent of them aboard Navy ships.

Today the number is more than twice that and it includes a much more representative cross-section of the services, with Air Force fighters stationed in Saudi Arabia and Turkey and a 2,165-man Marine Expeditionary Unit aboard the USS Tarawa and other amphibious landing ships.

"The whole range of aircraft are there," said Air Force Lt. Col. Rick Olson. While the Pentagons will not reveal the exact numbers of aircraft present, the types of land-based fighters they willingly talk about add up to a powerful armada capable of conducting a sustained season long intensive campaign of air warfare.

Among the aircraft available in Saudi Arabia—F-117A stealth fighters, which during the war demonstrated their ability to reach their targets undetected by enemy radar. —F-15 air superiority fighters, which sweep the skies of hostile aircraft. —Versatile F-16 fighters, which can do both aerial combat and bombing.

A-10 close-air support fighters, which can chew up tanks and other combat vehicles with their nose-mounted armor-piercing Gatling guns. These fighters would be supported by EF-111 electronic warfare: planes which blind enemy radar and disrupt communications. They would be directed by lumbering AWACS radar planes which can detect enemy aircraft virtually as soon as they take off and vector fighters to intercept them.

Reinforcing these land-based aircraft are two Navy aircraft carriers, the USS Independence in the Arabian Sea and the USS America off the coast of Saudi Arabia.
A NEW ON-CAMPUS HOUSING OPTION AT SIUC
Beginning Fall semester 1992, Wright Hall I at University Park will open early and remain open through all University breaks and holidays to better meet the needs of those students who find it inconvenient to leave campus during breaks.

SINDH LEGISLATIVE BODIES DISSOLVED — The government Monday escalated its battle with a minority party centered in the violence-plagued southern province of Sindh, ordering three of its municipal legislative bodies dissolved. The government of Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif, which began a military crackdown last month against the Mohajir Quami Movement, ordered the step Monday against the MQM-controlled bodies in Sindh despite threats of resignation of Parliament members.

COSMONAULTS BLAST OFF FOR SPACE STATION
— Two Russian cosmonauts and a French researcher blasted off Monday from the Baikonur Cosmodrome on the hot barrens steps of Kazakhstan for a two-day journey to the Mir space station, where they will conduct research and work to prolong the life of the world's only manned space station. The Soyus rocket carrying the passengers in its TM-15 capsule lifted off on time at 10:09 a.m. Moscow time.

RIGHTS GROUP CLAIMS EGYPTIANS TORTURE
— Middle East Watch, a New York-based human rights group, charged Monday that Egyptian security forces systematically torture political prisoners in violation of international conventions and Egyptian laws banning the use of force against detainees. The organization also claimed that Egyptian authorities hold political detainees for long periods without lodging charges or bringing their cases to trial.

SIERRA CLUB FILES SUIT AGAINST EPA — An environmental group filed suit against the federal Environmental Protection Agency Monday, charging the government has ignored provisions of the Clean Air Act of 1990. The Sierra Club followed through with its previously announced intention to sue the EPA for failing to take action on Clean Air Act provisions regarding acid rain, toxic air pollutants, vehicle emissions and global warming gases.

CIA OFFICIAL TRIED FOR IRAN SCANDAL — Prosecutors Monday began laying the way for testimony from one of their key witnesses by introduced a series of National Security Council documents and a transcript of a 1986 congressional hearing during the second day of the trial of former CIA official Clair E. George. The former deputy director of operations, George is the highest-ranking CIA official to be tried in connection with the Iran-Contra scandal.

CLINTON COURTS AFRICAN-AMERICAN VOTE — Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton courted the black vote Monday by endorsing the Urban League's Marshall Plan for America at the civil rights group's annual convention. Clinton waved the text of Urban League President John E. Jacob's keynote address over his head and echoed his call for increased government investment in education and other reforms to prepare inner city residents for employment in the 21st century.

POSHPARD PUSHES TRADE AGREEMENT — Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-III., Monday warned American jobs will be put in jeopardy if U.S. interests are not protected in the proposed North American Free Trade Agreement. At a visit to Smoker Brothers textile plant in Herrin, Poshard and urged U.S. workers to "stand up" for their interests. Poshard's comments came following weekend meetings among negotiators for the United States, Canada and Mexico trying to finalize an agreement.

EDGER SUPPORTS QUAYLE FOR VICE PRESIDENT — Gov. Jim Edgar Monday gave a lukewarm endorsement to Vice President Dan Quayle, saying only President Bush can decide whether to dump his running mate and that decision apparently already has been made. The governor spoke as Quayle campaigned in Illinois, just one day after the state's largest newspaper urged the president to replace Quayle with a less controversial candidate.

Fair revamps budget: B-52’s, Femmes back

By Christine Leninger
Entertainment Editor

The B-52’s and Violent Femmes have been returned to the 1992 Illinois State Fair Grandstand Entertainment line-up because of a contract change made by the Beach Boys, Illinois State Fair Manager Bud Hall recently announced.

“The Beach Boys, who will perform at the Fair this year for a record 13th time, have agreed to restructure their financial arrangement with the Fair,” Hall said. “After 13 years of building a relationship, the Beach Boys simply wanted to help us out during a tough time.

“This spirit of cooperation proves why their fans continue to make them one of the Fair’s most popular acts year after year,” he said.

The Beach Boys have agreed to perform at the 1992 Illinois State Fair with their cost calculated solely on a percentage basis rather than on a guarantee plus a percentage.

That means the Beach Boys will receive a certain percentage of ticket sales, and nothing more, whereas they originally were set to receive a given amount plus the percentage.

This will allow the rescheduling of the B-52’s and Violent Femmes’ Aug. 21 show, which was previously cancelled because of the budget cuts imposed by the General Assembly.

The budget cuts forced fair officials to shorten the fair by three days, while cutting some major events, including the now rescheduled B-52’s and Violent Femmes show, and the Color Me Badd Grandstand show. The truck and tractor pulls also were cut as a result of the slash in the budget.

Tickets for all Grandstand shows and motorsports events currently are on sale at the Grandstand ticket office and at all Ticketmaster offices.

Hearing, visually impaired campers raise funds

By Rebecca Campbell
General Assignment Writer

Hearing and visually impaired teenagers had a car wash fundraiser at the Carbonelde K-mart July 25 to raise money to buy a closed-caption television decoder for a camp sponsored by the Lions Organization.

Five campers and three camp counselors washed cars from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. and accepted donations for the service.

The campers also had a car wash about a month ago, Camp Lions Activities Coordinator Carolyn Hansen said. But they did not raise enough money to buy the decoder, which costs around $130, at the first car wash.

The car washes raised a total of $134, Hansen said. She hopes to get the decoder Thursday, she said.

The Lions Organization of Illinois sponsors hearing and visually impaired children to go to the Touch of Nature camp in Carbonelde. They also donate gifts to the camp like paddle boats and bicycles, Hansen said.

Money raised from all the camp fund-raisers goes to purchase things for the camp, Hansen said.

The teens are part of the Clause 1 program, Clause 1 is a program sponsored by the Lions club and is designed to focus on team work, Hansen said.

The campers, who range in age from 14 to 16, hike and backpack. They also learn portaging, carrying a canoe over long distances, and they build a raft out of material available at the campsite.

Takiyah Harris, a camper from Kankakee, said hiking was her favorite because it was relaxing.

Women from elsewhere

Harassment shows sexism in military

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Sexual harassment was the dirty little secret of the work place until Anita Hill went public with her allegations of harassment by Clarence Thomas. Since then, complaints of sexual harassment to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission have skyrocketed. In the first six months of 1992, the EEOC received 4,754 complaints in comparison with 3,135 complaints filed in 1991.

WHAT HAS BECOME ABUNDANTLY clear is that sexual harassment can happen anywhere. Still nowhere are the reports more horrifying than in the military. Women who have pledged to defend their country find themselves under attack by their comrades in arms, in what columnist Ellen Goodman chillingly terms a perverse form of "friendly fire.

THE DETAILS OF THE ASSAULTS on women in the military are truly shocking. First there was the shameful incident of the gnatlet at the Tailhook convention. Now comes the revelation that at least 24 women soldiers were raped or assaulted by fellow American soldiers while on duty in the Persian Gulf.

THE FACTS OF THESE ATTACKS are gruesome enough. But what is even more telling is the response of the military, institutionally and individually. Apparently, not one man observed the gnatlet不受惩罚nor sought to help the woman subjected to it. In a perfunctory investigation, the Navy, as is well known, tried to cover up the incident. When Jacqueline Ortiz, an Army mechanic, reported being raped by her sergeant during the gulf war, the Army denied her medical treatment and counseling and ended up reprimanding her and her sergeant for sexual impropriety. When she complained to her U.S. representative, she received a perfunctory letter in response.

WHEN THE RESPONSE TO women who have been sexually attacked is so pathetic, even hostile, it is no surprise that most women are afraid to come forward. While the military is minimizing the extent of the violence against women, it can not so easily dismiss its response, which is evidence aplenty of a pervasive institutionalized sexism.

INDEED, IN A STUPIFYING case of blaming the victim, some people are suggesting that these horror stories prove that women should not be allowed to combat. In fact, that exclusion is part of the problem. As long as women are second-class in the military, the military is minimizing the extent of the violence against women. It can not so easily dismiss its response, which is evidence aplenty of a pervasive institutionalized sexism.

Seat belt legislation infringes on rights, freedom of drivers

Last week! received a traffic ticket, and I wasn't even driving. The Great Gods of the Highway! have seen to it that my car's air bags and other antivandalism have made the use of safety belts mandatory.

Not only does the lack of safety belts affect one's safety but the wearer's. I wasn't hurting anyone, nor had I the potential of hurting anyone but myself!

The Illinois State Senate has held up the state's seat belt legislation on grounds that it infringes on driver's rights. How is the safety belt legislation unconstitutional? Is the state's interest in requiring seat belt use compelling enough to justify the sacrifice of driver's rights?

Seat belt legislation infringes on rights, freedom of drivers

The state has no moral right to require me to act responsibly towards myself, when no one else is at risk.

"The person" is derived from "might makes right." They have the police, the guns and the jails to force me to do things against my will. I have no "freedom" but to obey or be beaten, shot, or imprisoned.

I urge everyone to write their congressman (as I have done) and urge the revocation of this law, that infringes upon our diminishing freedom. Brian Boyer, Senior, Civil Engineering Technology and Paralegal Studies

Letters to the Editor

Prilfle people help women also

Once again the stereotype of pro-life people as uncaring about mothers and babies has been put forth, this time by Robb Williams of the July 17 Daily Egyptian. And once again it needs to be noted that there are many, many pro-life people in this country who regularly commit themselves to helping women who face crisis pregnancies choose the best for themselves and their babies. Here in Southern Illinois there are now 8 crisis pregnancy centers where women can receive free pregnancy tests, emotional and financial support. These are places where the volunteer staff is committed to loving the woman and her baby, and helping in any way we can to find solutions to the problems she may face, solutions which will not leave her physically and emotionally vulnerable to the destructive and intrusive act of abortion. These loving volunteers are only a phone call away.

The recent Supreme Court decision concerning the Pennsylvania law upholds the interests of women by insuring that existing abortion clinics don't rush women through without giving them either the time or the information they need. When "pro-choicers" put down their signs and begin to watchdog the abortion industry, seeking to protect women from "doctors" who literally make a kill off their fears and confusions in facing crisis pregnancies then they may have some legitimacy in calling themselves pro-woman rather than pro-abortion.—Julie Murphy, Senior Anthropology

Abortion issue breaks political party barriers

This letter is in response to the one written by Robb Williams, which appeared in the July 17 D.E.

Mr. Williams, let me just start by saying that while I respect your opinion on this matter, I couldn't disagree more. You advocate the removal of "many if not most of the pro-life legislators who now hold seats in the state, and it is not because they are pro-life. Undoubtedly, a pro-life agenda is still a cornerstone of the Republican party platform. But at this year's convention, these promises to be upheld were squabbles over the issue with many Republicans who consider themselves pro-choice. And what about the Democrats? They are not solidly in favor of abortion rights, right? Wrong. Earlier this year, one-third of all House Democrats sent a letter to party chairman, Ron Brown asking him to reverse the party's position on abortion.

Many Republicans including the governor of this state, are pro-choice. At the same time, many Democrats who hold major offices around the country including Governor Robert Casey of Pennsylvania, Mayor Raymond Flynn of Boston, and even Southern Illinois' own Gail Poshard are pro-life. Clearly, this issue is not restricted to party lines.

I agree with Mr. Williams that this issue touches women. It would be foolish not to. But it also affects the fetus which is ultimately having its rights imposed upon by other people. Too often we forget about what the choice of the choice is: a living human being.

Mr. Williams, if your parents are as caring as you make them sound, I applaud them and their compassion. However, I think you have judged the pro-life movement unfairly when you call them "hypocrites," and "ignorant." Organizations that are committed to helping the poor and unfortunate (that includes young, unwed mothers), such as The Salvation Army, soup kitchens, church missions, and other relief organizations are pro-life. To call people who don't believe in the murder of unique, precious lives, is, in my opinion, an unfair judgment.—James Tomes, Senior, Education

Quotable Quotes

"If she becomes pregnant, she'll take the child to term."—Marllyn Quayle, wife of vice president Dan Quayle, in response to a hypothetical question posed to her husband in a TV talk show. Dan Quayle was asked during an appearance in CNN's Larry King Live what he would do if, in the future, his 13-year-old daughter Corinne became pregnant. The vice president said if Corinne were an adult he would "counsel her and talk to her and support her in whatever decision she made." When asked what he would do if she chose to have an abortion Quayle said "I would support my Daughter. I would hope she wouldn't make that decision." Mrs. Quayle comment came the day after her husband's TV appearance.

the Persian Gulf and the USS Saratoga in the Mediterranean Sea. Each has its own mix of fighters and bombers.

Each of the carriers is supported by an integrated battle group whose cruisers and unannounced submarines carry large numbers of the weapons that were among the most spectacular performers in last year's Gulf war. Tomahawk cruise missiles.

After launch, these pilots fly jet aircraft find their way to their targets with onboard electronic maps that allow them literally to slip a goalpost after a flight of hundreds of miles.

Use of the Tomahawks not only permits precise attack, against heavily defended targets, but it also eliminates the danger that American planes will be, shot down and their pilots captured.

After the U.S. threatened to unleash its Persian Gulf arsenal, Iran announced Sunday that it would allow United Nations inspectors to visit the country's agriculture ministry, where documents on Baghdad's nuclear weapons program were believed to have been stored. The inspectors were kept out of the building for three weeks and were arrested by mobs as they tried to keep the ministry under surveillance.

Under the terms of the ceasefire that ended last year's Gulf war, Iraq agreed to dismantle its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons programs. The U.N. inspectors are trying to make sure that it does so, but the inspection teams have been repeatedly hindered by the Iraqis.

U.S. officials clearly believe more such overwhelming lies ahead. Asked Sunday whether Iraq's latest compliance meant the crisis was finally over, White House National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft would not say.

"That deals with the tip of the iceberg," he said, "the whole iceberg remains.

have painted their "Marshall Plan for America," named after the Marshall Plan that pumped U.S. aid into Europe at the end of World War II, as an investment in the future and not an entitlement program. The administration is in line with Senate Republicans.

"This is what it will take to make it in the 21st century," Clinton said during his first major policy speech since the Democratic convention earlier this month. "Not just for African-Americans, but for everyone."

He predicted the plan would be dismissed by the Republican camp as a waste of time and money, likening the anticipated criticism as a "broken record that is played over the same spot. Tax and spend and tax and spend and tax and spend."

Last Tuesday Clinton held a town meeting at Tandum Computer Company in Cupertino and toured San Francisco's heavily electronic Mission District.

Sitting among 200 Tandum employees and connected with another 8,000 through the company's internal communications system, Clinton re-emphasized his community policing plan and said any increase in the gasoline tax would be earmarked specifically to finance energy conservation and environmental projects.

Diffusing tension between police and minority residents of inner cities requires both active and negative actions, Clinton said.

"The negative actions to make sure the U.S. Justice Department goes after any public official who is abusing people on the other side of the tracks."

"We need to change the patterns of interaction between the police and the community... We need to get the police out of the car and back on the streets. We need to put them in the neighborhoods," he said, also calling for residents to serve on community boards working with officers.

San Diego was the launching point for the second day of Clinton's foray into California.
Jury duty

Non-incumbent pleads for resignation of state representative

CHICAGO (UPI) - The man residue Chicago State Rep. Dan Rostenkowski Monday called on the Democrat to resign if he is indicted. "If he is not a pledge to not testify before a federal grand jury investigating the house, " he said.

Republican Elias R. "Non-

incumbent" Zenkrich said Rostenkowski looted the citizen, has a right not to incriminate himself, but he should induce, a new right as a private citizen not a public representative.

Former U.S. Attorney Joseph diGenova said Rostenkowski, D-III, and Gene Austin Murphy and Joseph Kolter, both D-Pa., do not plan to show up to answer the summons Tuesday.

In a letter to House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash., Friday, Rostenkowski and Kolter called the grand jury probe a "political witch hunt."

Rostenkowski had no immediate comment.

"An incumbent congressman, who has sworn to uphold the Constitution shouldn't be in office while ducking behind the Fifth Amendment", said a House Democratic task force last week.

"In the name of justice, congressmen, step down now. Don't be a hypocrite."

Zenkrich had no immediate comment.

"We have found a land where human rights and even human life were routinely snuffed out in the name of Bosnia-Herzegovina which is being wracked by civil war. Israelis official says talks will take place in Washington

JERUSALEM (UPI) - Israeli officials said Monday the next round of Middle East peace talks is "likely" to take place in Washington, but no final decision will be made until Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and U. S. President George Bush meet in Maine next month.

Switching the talks from Madrid to Washington has already been endorsed by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker and all the Arab parties, but Rabin waffled on the subject during a Sunday Cabinet meeting and decided only to avoid making an quick decision.

Rabin's spokesman noted the United States has not sent any invitation yet to a Washington conference.

"No formal request has been made to Israel regarding the possibility of having the talks in Washington and once we receive such a request or invitation we will consider it," spokesman Gad Ben-Ari said.

He said the Middle East peace process would not be made until Rabin meets Bush in the second week of August at the U.S. president's summer retreat in Kennebunkport, Maine.

Nonetheless, Ben-Ari said Israel would probably not reject moving the talks from Rome.

"It seems likely that all parties agree, the next round will take place in Washington, " Ben-Ari said.

Baker publicly proposed reconvening the talks Aug. 10 in Washington, saying he wanted to make a "momentum of his recent Middle East tour and a new willingness to compromise demonstrated by Rabin's 2-week-old government.

The American officials have suggested the reason for the move is Baker's expected departure from the Clinton administration to take over Bush's lugging presidential campaign.

According to this theory, the Washington location would emphasize Bush's accomplishment in bringing the Arabs and Israelis to the peace table.

State-run Israel Radio reported that Israel wants the talks delayed until the end of August to prevent them from clashing with the Rabin-Bush meeting.

The two leaders are expected to discuss Israel's long-delayed request for $10 billion in loans guarantees to help reset West Bank from its former Soviet Union and Israel does not want to create a linkage between the loan guarantees and the peace process.

Israel "has also told the Americans it needs more time to formulate its proposals for Palestinian autonomy in the Occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. Rabin has said he hopes to institute Palestinian self-rule within a new 12 months of his taking office.

Money is real gold-medal sport at '92 Olympics

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Outside the Princess Sofia Hotel, the white Olympic courtesy cars pull into the driveway. An officer holding a automatic weapon stands at the ready, with an armored truck close by.

In the lobby, the hierarchy and hangers-on of the International Olympic Committee and Swiss officials Marc Hodler, the Swiss head of skiing’s governing body and an influential Olympic figure, talk as they go in and out of the hotel.

“Not so much,” he says, before heading off for an elevator.

Rooms, tickets, meals, laundry all cost plenty in this playground by the sea. At every turn, pesetas are disappearing. But money and its first cousin marketing have been in partnership for some time now at the Olympics.

The sponsors, their names emblazoned on anything that can be tacked to a wall, pin, shirt or umbrella, pay the freight. They buy the television network, and the television networks write the checks to the organizers. As long as there’s enough money to keep this golden goose nice and plump, everyone remains happy.

The Olympics hardly a monopoly on such matters. All big-time sports has gone that route, becoming in much a stage for high jumpers and weightlifters as a platform for corporate culture to huck its wants.

The mutual last of sports for money, and money for sports, is just all the more public at the Olympics.

Nike Inc. goes to court over the right to use its name on U.S. track and field uniforms in Barcelona. Reebok’s “Dan and Dave” star-crossed advertising campaign featuring Dan O’Brien and Dave Johnson draws more analysis than the decathlon itself.

The NBA’s Dream Team spearheads a drive for international markets in the manner of imperial powers seeking spheres of influence in China more than a century ago.

The Olympics, if managed efficiently, brings hundreds of millions of dollars to a city.

How sport is going.

Colorful condoms target of hostility; IOC chiefs angered at Benetton ads

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — A newspaper advertisement featuring five colorful condoms in the form of the Olympic rings has angered international Olympic Committee chiefs.

The advertisement for Italian-based clothes chain Benetton carried the company’s traditional message “United Colors of Benetton.” It has on the face of the Olympic Games.

The IOC’s head of marketing Dick Pound told Spanish reporters this amounted to a “kidnap” of the Olympic symbol — over which the IOC has exclusive worldwide rights.

National hero

Moreno nab Spain’s first gold of Olympic Games

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Jose Manuel Moreno became an instant national hero Monday by winning Spain’s first gold medal of the Olympic Games in the men’s one kilometer cycling time trial.

Moreno, 24, clocked 1 minute 03.34.32 seconds four laps of the Velodrom d’Hebron, at an average speed of 34.1 miles per hour.

Saddling the enthusiastic Barcelona crowd chanting “Moreno, Moreno,” the 1991 world champion in Stuttgart, Germany, went on his laps of honor with a dual Spanish and Catalan flag.

Australia’s Shane Kelly took the silver in 1:04.288 and Erin Hartwell of the United States picked up the bronze in 1:04.753.

Moreno also broke the 24-year-old Olympic record of 1:03.910, set by France’s Pierre Teinet in the high-altitude 1956 Mexico City Games.

The starting order of the 32 riders was decided according to their results from the last world championships in Stuttgart, Germany — although every country is allowed to compete in the pursuit at the Olympics, compared to three at the Worlds.

Kelly, who started 14th in a field of 32, set the early pace, but with the favored riders still to come, his time was not expected to hold up for long.

Hartwell, starting seventh from last, came close with 1:04.753, and three riders later Italy’s Ador Capelli moved into third place with 1:05.005.

U.S. tennis teams geared for action

BARCELONA, Spain (UP) — Tom Gorman, coach of the U.S. men’s Olympic tennis team, would just as soon see myself anyone. He’ll take his chances with Jim Courier, Pete Sampras and Michael Chang.

“Far as picking who’s going to get which medal, it’s always like the kiss of death,” Gorman said in a news conference Monday. “But our players are good enough and have had good results on clay. They’re all capable of winning medals.”

Martti Rissanen, the U.S. women’s coach, is also optimistic with his team of Jennifer Capriati, Mary Joe Fernandez, Gigi Fernandez and Zina Garrison.

“I expect us to win three medals but four is a good goal to shoot for,” he said. Courier:, the world’s No. 1 player, opens his campaign against veteran Ramesh Krishnan of India.

“I’m very familiar with his game, so there won’t be any surprises for me,” he said.

Sampras, who won a clay-court t. tournament in Austria Sunday, starts Wednesday against Wally Maurer of Austria. Sampras will also team with Courier in doubles.

“Now I’ve won titles on every surface,” he said. “It’s something I’ve wanted to do.”

Michael Chang, a 1989 French Open winner and much at home on clay, plays Argentina’s Alberto Mancini on Wednesday.

“I don’t think they’re quite into the Grand Slam mentality, but it’s just right below,” Gorman said.

“They’re taking it very seriously with the idea that they want to win a medal.”

The women’s field is highlighted by top seeds Steffi Graf of Germany and Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario of host Spain, but Riessen likes the way the draw has worked out.

Capriati, in Barcelona with her parents and younger brother, opposes South Africa’s Ela Reinach on Wednesday.

“Flying here is like a breath of fresh air,” the Florida teenager said. “It’s something different week after week on the tour.”
An anti-smoking advocates mad over Marlboro Prix

NEW YORK (UPI) Anti-smoking advocates filed suit Monday seeking to put the brakes on next year's Marlboro Grand Prix, which they charged the city with compromising its environment.

The lawsuit was filed in state Supreme Court in Manhattan by Lawyers for SmokeFree Educational Services and the New York Public Interest Research Group, or NYPIRG.

They claim sponsorship of the auto race by Philip Morris, which makes Marlboro cigarettes, will promote smoking by youngsters, despite the cigarette giant’s agreement to run anti-smoking advertisements targeted at youngsters both before and after the race.

The suit asks the court to nullify the city's agreement with Philip Morris because the city allegedly failed to go through normal legal procedures in striking the deal or if what affect a major auto race would have on the local environment.

SmokeFree president Joe Chemer said the claims in the suit failed to.Objeect the city’s agreement, but that his group and NYPIRG were opposed to having a cigarette manufacturer sponsor a major sporting event whose competitors fear other fronts to curb teenage smoking.

"We think running an auto race in lower Manhattan is no more than allowing Philip Morris to sponsor it is abhorrent," said Chris Meyer, NYPIRG staff attorney.

Anti-smoking advocates have urged Philip Morris to sponsor the race under one of its many non-tobacco products, but the company has not responded to that matter. "Under that condition, it’s just not worth it," Chemer said.

A spokeswoman for the city’s Corporation Council said City Hall lawyers had been notified but made no immediate comment.

In a related development, the City Council, which will vote Monday on the Tobacco Product Regulation Act, which would ban the sale of single cigarettes, revoke the tobacco license of vendors who sell cigarettes to minors, and require tobacco-free schools, vendors to be at least 18, and anti-smoking ads on city property.

Frank New, director of the mayor's legislative affairs office, said the bill was "inavravent," and it remains unclear how the restrictions would be policed and enforced that needed to be worked out before being implemented.

GOP pro-choice caravan heads to Republican National Convention

WASHINGTON (UPI) A group of Republican women, whose desire is "to take our party back," Monday began a caravan with a "moving billboard" Sunday of women’s right to choose abortion — a sentiment that is, at its destination, the Republican National Convention in Houston.

"The battle against abortion is an every day battle. That doesn’t necessarily mean a real fight to have a cigarette manufacturer sponsor a major sporting event whose competitors fear other fronts to curb teenage smoking.

Yugoslov teammates not torn apart like country

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Like any other friends, former Olympic Games Buric and Suzanna Ciric were happy to see each other after four months apart. But after their first meeting since coming in the shadow of Greece’s Mount Olympus in March, both agreed they would limit their contact only to “sports and not engage in talk about war and politics.”

Their birthplace has been torn apart by a civil war that has been raging for months. Buric, a distance runner, now wears the colors of Bosnia-Herzegovina while Ciric, his compatriot, still runs in the marathon, remains a Yugoslav, the hated enemy of the Bosnians.

In many ways, Buric has had it much harder these last four months. She comes from Sarajevo and trained for the Olympics while the mortar shells rained down on her native city.

“Now that I am here I am even stronger,” she said at the same time I feel very strange. It is difficult to adjust. My body is here but my spirit is still somewhere, suffering at home.” said Buric, 26, who will compete in the 3,000-meter steeplechase.

“Every minute I am thinking of my friends and neighbors - of my brother who I haven’t heard anything from in two months. I am suffering very much.”

In a gesture of defiance, Buric got into the habit of timing her training runs for when the shelling was at its worst.

“My life was literally in danger at every moment. No one knew when a grenade would come or a sniper shot,” she said. “I ran whenever there was bombing because the streets were clearer. Everybody else was inside. But they would pop out of their cell windows and cheer.”

Such deliberate flouting of danger gave her a feeling of extra strength.

“I felt much stronger than what was going on around me. That was my resistance to those who were shooting,” she explained. “Twice I was shot in the back. Once a bullet passed my head and hit a tree. The other time they shot me in the street.”

Buric had her training broken for 13 days when she was kept prisoner by Serbien troops, who took her parent’s village three miles from Sarajevo.

“We hid in the cellar for two days, but we realized if we stayed there we would be killed. When we came out they captured us and took us away to a camp where I was held with my parents and neighbors for 13 days.”

It was terrible, I saw people being tortured. Now my village is totally destroyed. There is nothing left. I cannot forget that.”

When Ciric, first saw Buric at the athletes village last weekend there was tenseness between the two friends.

“I had to tell her that her country was the aggressor and that she should not defend them,” said Ciric, “I also told her that it was their army that captured me and my parents.

“At first she couldn’t understand because the information they are getting there is different from the reality.”

Once the air was cleared on that topic they were able to move on to other familiar subjects, like sports.

This was Ciric’s second visit in the full Olympic spirit.
