Dentist refuses to pay back rent; he's moving out

By Marcia Bullard
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A Carbondale dentist has been told his lease on a Brookside Manor Apartment will not be renewed Nov. 30 unless he pays back rent demanded by the landlord.

Dr. George Karnes was informed a few weeks ago that he owes some $300 to landlord William Burns due to a mixup in the lease. Karnes has refused to pay back rent and will be moving out of the apartment this month into a new home he is building.

The confusion began in August when Karnes rented a three-bedroom apartment in the complex for $159 a month. He thought the rent was too low, and checked it against the fair market rent which is $253 a month. Karnes found the difference is being paid by the Federal Housing Administration (FHA) through a subsidy set up for low income families.

Turkey eaters get taste of higher prices

By Tom Finan
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Turkeys aren't the only ones getting it in the neck this Thanksgiving. Both consumers and grocery owners are feeling the cutting edge of price increases as the time for the holiday meal nears.

Dick Peterman, president of Boren's IGA East, at Lewis Park Mall, says Thanksgiving was never a moneymaking time for merchants anyway, despite the large volumes of food sold.

For some reason the grocery companies decided to give special prices on holiday items at Thanksgiving and Christmas, Peterman said, often selling them below cost.

"For years we sold canned pumpkin at 10 cents a can at Thanksgiving time, even though it cost us 15 or 16 cents," Peterman said.

Karnes is a dentist. His annual income is more than $30,000 and he does not qualify for the subsidy.

Karnes said he notified his attorney and waited to see if the apartment manager or landlord would rectify the situation. He said he was concerned that the federal government "might be paying subsidies for other families at Brookside Manor that do not qualify for them either."

On Oct. 9 after a story appeared about the situation in the Southern Illinoisan, Karnes received a form letter from the landlord. The letter said rents at Brookside Manor are based on income and that in reviewing Karnes' file, an employment inquiry form was not found.

Landlord Burns said he and the manager both were out of town when Karnes moved into the apartment and that the form had not been filed out at the proper time.

Karnes filled out the form and a few days later received a phone call from Burns stating that more than $300 was owed in back rent to make up for the mistake. He says his leasing contract binds him to the $152 monthly rent and that charging back rent for a mistake made by the landlord is not legal.

"I would like to take them to court on that," Karnes said. "And I would be willing to pay additional rent after I received the notice if the federal government is willing to do something about the situation."

However, Karnes says he has no proof that other families are being subsidized illegally.

Since he will be moving into a new home at the end of the month, Karnes said a refusal to refund his security deposit may be the only case he would contest in court.

Burns said Friday he refuses to believe "a man who professes to be a Christian is going to refuse to pay an honest debt he knows he owes." If Karnes continues to refuse to pay the back rent, Burns said he would then decide if he would take action against Karnes.

"This man was a former city councilman and pointedly aware of the operation of this dwelling," Burns said. "It should have come as no surprise to him that we should ask for the back rent."

We have simply asked him to pay the amount he should have been paying all along."

Burns charged that Karnes knew when he moved in that the rent was a mistake and that Karnes kept it a secret from the management. The income form is usually filled out when a person rents an apartment, but the manager was in Chicago at the time and Burns was on vacation.

In October, an FHA supervisor in Springfield was quoted in the Southern Illinoisan as saying that Karnes may have to pay the additional rent when the FHA received the lease records from Brookside Manor. Karnes at that time was quoted as saying he was prepared to do so.

"Now he says he won't pay," Burns said. "If he paid the back rent from when I found out about the mistake, then he owes us some money. He should put his money where his mouth is."

Meeting next week

5 measures for library to be reviewed by Derge

By David C. Miller Jr.
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

SIU President David R. Derge hopes to meet next week with a committee for reviewing SIU's 1976-80 programs and budgets and to discuss five stop-gap measures for relieving the funding crisis at Morris Library.

Derge said Friday he wants committee and constituency advice on the feasibility of building library funds from savings in the following areas:

- Putting a freeze on all faculty travel, such as conventions.
- Freezing the hiring of students, graduate students, faculty and staff members, leaving unfilled positions vacant.
- Freezing all possible contractual services such as consultants, lecturers, scholarly journals and items like electrical contracts with discretionary purchasing clauses.

—Slashing the purchase of commodities such as paper clips, pencils, copying paper, and others similar items.

—Cutting telecommunication costs by disconnecting a number of phones and limiting or prohibiting long-distance phone calls.

—Savings in one or a combination of these areas could be reallocated to fund the library, Derge said, as long as the amounts did not exceed two per cent of SIU's total budget. The two per cent figure is the maximum internal reallocation allowed by state law.

Reallocation requests have to go to the Illinois Board of Higher Education for its permission, Derge said.

"It's not that we've been sitting here ignoring (the library problem), it's just

32 candidates bid for Student Senate posts

By Terry Martin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The number of official candidates for the Dec. 5 Student Senate election closed at 32, Steve Nuckles, election commissioner, said Friday. Forty nine students took out petitions.

"A meeting concerned with election laws, conduct of the campaign, district boundaries and polling places is mandatory for all candidates," Nuckles said. "I stress the fact that it is mandatory but I will accept a representative or a reasonable excuse if candidates are not able to be present."

The meeting will be held at 4:15 p.m. Sunday in the Student Government office, Nuckles said. Districts represented are:

—Eastside non-dorm (the area within the Carbondale city limits, east of the Illinois Central rails): Garry Seltzer, Darlene Tyree, Warren J. Kraft, Vollie O. Morris, Yogesh Desai, Diane Johnson, Larry Roth and Richard Lange.

—Small Group Housing: Don Zwicker and James Dumont. One seat is open.

—Brush Towers: Eric Elrod, Gerald Kilduski and Austin Triplett. One seat is open.

—University Park: Philippe H. Hone and Sharon Grishom. Three seats are open.

—Eastside dorm (which includes Wilson Hall, Egyptian Sands, Lincoln Avenue Apartments and Wall Street Quadrangles): James Ray Wood, Ron Adams, Thomas Mellman, Richard Starzyk and Harry Yaseen. Three seats are open.

—Westside non-dorm (the area within the Carbondale city limits, west of the Illinois Central rails): Maurice Richards, Alan Jacobson, David Lee Gulley II and Mark S. Kromer. Four seats are open.

—Westside dorm (which includes Stevenson Arms, Baptist Student Center, Ivy Hall, Pyramids, Egyptian Residence Hall, Shawnee Hall, Queens Apartments and Ptolemy Towers): Arthur L. Jackson. One seat is open.

—Commuter: Terry Mullins, Charles C. Evans, Robert Hughey, Charles Ward, John Chancey, John Sheridan and Richard H. Johnston. Five seats are open.

"Thompson Point can have write-ins since no one from that district returned a petition by the deadline," Nuckles said. One seat is open from the Thompson Point district.

"On the whole, I'm real happy with the distribution of senate candidates from all the districts," he said.

Executive of Day supports profit sharing

By Gary Houy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Profit-sharing can be a useful tool in developing the productivity of a company by motivating the employees. Executive of the Day Raymond H. Giesecke told an audience at Morris Library Auditorium Friday.

Before his speech on "Profit-Sharing," Giesecke, Chairman of the Board of McGraw-Edison Co., was presented with an honorary certificate by the College of Business and Administration as Executive of the day.

A 1927 graduate of the University of Illinois, Giesecke became Controller of the McGraw Electric Company in 1949. In April, 1973, he was elected Chairman of the Board and is now in semi-retirement. He is currently an Honorary Director of the Profit Sharing Council of America.

Giesecke was introduced to the profit-sharing concept by Max McGraw, founder of McGraw-Edison. Since then, he has become "increasingly intrigued" with the possibilities of the plan.

"In today's climate these possibilities will become probabilities and finally actualities only if persons who believe in profit-sharing take the time and make the effort to convince people in all walks of life that profit-sharing is something that we must all do," Giesecke said.

There are over 250,000 profit-sharing plans in operation in the United States covering about 10 million employees, he said.

"Most companies use the deferred plan of profit-sharing," Giesecke said. "The amounts being shared are put into a trust for the benefit of the participants and are paid to those participants when they leave the company, retire, die or become disabled and unable to work."

Almost all profit-sharing plans have a waiting period for eligibility (usually one to three years), a specific formula to determine the amount to be shared (usually a percentage of total profits before taxes), a distribution of the fund on the basis of salary and years of service, a trust fund which keeps an account of each investment and a vesting schedule to determine how much the participant receives when he leaves the company.

Giesecke said that "innumerable instances of conflicts" in labor-management, government-business and international relations are caused by a lack of "give-and-take" on both sides. He suggested that by giving employees "a piece of the pie" through profit-sharing they may be motivated to avoid such a conflict.

One problem of some plans is to communicate an understanding of the plan to the workers. "All I can say is, if a plan is not well communicated and understood by the rank and file of employees, its major impact will be lost, even if the contributions are good," Giesecke said.

Another problem is that a plan "may be so structured or the profits of the enterprise so meager that the amount of profit-sharing is insignificant," he said. "Better no plan than a peanuts plan."

City Council will consider ordinance to adopt version of fire, police act

By Dan Haar
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

An ordinance adopting an amended version of the Illinois Board of Fire and Police Commissioners Act will be considered at the regular meeting of the Carbondale City Council at 7 p.m. Monday in the University City Cafeteria.

Under the proposed ordinance, the city manager would be given the authority to hire and fire policemen and firemen, subject to the approval by the Fire and Police Board.

The ordinance cites the city manager as the appropriate person to have the authority to hire and fire all city employees.

The ordinance qualifies this power by stating that, "the City Council, however, finds that the City Manager's power should be limited, that said power should be used by the Manager only in a fair and reasonable manner, and that said power should be subject to the review by an impartial Board."

The city manager would appoint all officers and members of the fire and police departments from a list of eligibles recommended by the Board of Police and Fire Commissioners.

The city manager would also be authorized to remove, suspend or discharge any fireman or policeman. The board would then hold a hearing into the cause for dismissal. The board's decision would stand pending court appeal by the city manager or the person involved.

Included in the ordinance is a section calling for an election on the adoption of the amended act. The proposal would be voted on at the next regular city election. A simple majority is needed for its approval or defeat.

Other topics for the meeting include: —An ordinance establishing a merit system for Carbondale employees.

—Recommended policies from the Carbondale Planning Commission regarding the Cedar Lake Recreational Area. —The awarding of a contract.

—The awarding of a contract for four police vehicles.

5 measures for library to be reviewed by Derge

that we haven't solved it yet," Derge declared. He said the administration has been "searching everywhere" for library and scientific equipment monies since Sept. 1.

"We've been doing our best to get dollars into the library without destroying other programs," Derge said. "Every penny you put into the library, you'll have to take from an existing program."

Derge said there is no possibility of getting additional state money, and "windfall contributions" are not dependable sources of funds. So he explained, the money must come from within SIU-C's budget. Derge criticized recent demands for library spending which have not mentioned possible fund sources.

"They say, 'Spend more money on the library, but we don't know where to get it,'" Derge complained.

Derge noted the recent controversy over whether to sacrifice the present advisement program to obtain library funds, but said "not one" other alternative has been forwarded. The advisement vs. library debate was not meant as an either-or situation, Derge said, but alternate proposals have not been made.

Constituencies have complained of not being able to make specific recommendations since SIU's operating budget has not been available for their study. Derge countered by saying the budget and all other actions by the Board of Trustees are on file in Morris Library.

"The budget... is part of the official minutes of SIU," Derge said, "and the minutes of Board meetings are public record." Dan Orescaini, executive vice president, affirmed Derge's statement, saying the minutes in the library were complete and open to anyone who wished to inspect them.

Monday deadline set for trustee petitions; 17 students competing

The number of students taking out student trustee petitions for the Dec. 5 election remained at 17, the same as Thursday's count, Steve Nuckles, election commissioner, announced Friday.

Deadline for returning petitions with 250 signatures is at 5 p.m. Monday, Nuckles said.

A mandatory meeting for all students with trustee petitions is at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Student Government office to discuss the conduct of the campaign, Nuckles said.

Nuckles said he will accept a representative or a "reasonable excuse" if those taking out petitions are unable to attend.

High prices for turkeys distasteful to consumers may have been due to a wish, "to make the ads look nice."

While Peterman said he is still selling holiday items at a loss this year, increased costs to retailers are reflected in increased, retail prices, which Peterman estimated at "close to eight per cent" from this time last year.

In a Boren's ad in the Nov. 15 edition of the Daily Egyptian last year, tom turkeys were advertised for 28 cents per pound, or $5.04 for an 18-pound gobbler. The same size turkey this year would sell for $11.34, or 63 cents per pound.

Peterman said that even with the price increase, "I'm losing a dollar on every turkey I sell."

IGA's house brand cranberry sauce was three 300 size cans for 49 cents. This year it was two cans for 39 cents.

Those with a taste for stuffing in their turkey would make it in 1972 with white bread at five one-pound loaves for a dollar. The same dollar bill would buy only three loaves now.

Gourmets could get a Simple Simon brand mincemeat pie for 48 cents in 1972. It might prove a little rich for them this year at 89 cents.

The canned pumpkin that Peterman spoke of sold at three cans for 39 cents last year. This year, the same Libby's 303 cans sold at two for 37 cents.

Huntmaster boneless cooked hams jumped from $1.09 to $1.45 per pound for a whole ham.

Dinner rolls were four packages for 99 cents last year and three for a dollar this year.

If a family bought a dinner which included the turkey mentioned, one pie, one loaf of bread, two packages of rolls, and two cans of cranberry sauce, last year, those items would have cost them $6.82. The same items cost $13.82 this year, an increase of 102.64 per cent.

Early mailing urged for holiday deliveries

By Dan Haar
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

In response to the energy crisis, the U.S. Postal Service is urging people to post their domestic and foreign Christmas mail one to two weeks earlier than originally recommended to insure on-time deliveries.

The new deadline for posting first-class Christmas mail is Dec. 8 rather than Dec. 15. Domestic surface parcels, except those for Alaska and Hawaii, should be mailed by Dec. 3, instead of Dec. 10. Mail to Alaska and Hawaii should be posted by November 23.

Airmail parcels and letters within the United States, except Alaska and Hawaii, should be mailed no later than Dec. 15. The same mail to Alaska and Hawaii should be posted by Dec. 15.

A complete list of new suggested international deadlines is available at the post office.

"Public cooperation on meeting these new advance mail early dates is needed to help us complete all Christmas deliveries," Carbondale Postmaster Hubert Goforth said.

The new dates, which were issued Nov. 9, are just one of the steps the Postal Service is taking to meet the energy shortage.

Postmaster General E.T. Klassen has requested that long-haul truck operators under contract to the Postal Service observe the 50-m.p.h. speed limit asked by President Nixon.

Reduction of airline flights and a re-evaluation of long-haul truck operations are being considered, Klassen said in a report to post offices across the country.

Goforth said the current energy shortage poses a particular problem during the Christmas season, a peak period for most post offices.

He suggested that people mail early, use the zip code, make sure writing is legible, pack and tie packages well, include address of sender and receiver inside all letters and packages and mail early in the day to avoid the rush period in the evening.

"Last year we stayed current and it was a pretty even flow," Goforth said. "We never got behind last year and we expect the same this year."

Last year, in the two-week period from Dec. 9 to Dec. 23, the Carbondale Post Office handled about 5.5 million pieces of mail, Goforth said.

During the rush period, which usually starts at the beginning of December, workers are put on 11-hour shifts to handle the increase, Goforth said.

Goforth said he anticipates a rush of mail at the end of December from people trying to beat the rate hikes which go into effect Jan. 5.

First-class mail rate will be 10 cents and air-mail rates will be 15 cents.

Women trade aprons for fatigues; National Guard falls to liberationists

By Debby Ratemann
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Women can trade their aprons for fatigues and their egg beaters for guns when they join the National Guard, so there falls another male bastion to women's liberation.

"I never thought I'd see the day," Chief Warrant Officer James Vinyard said as he discussed a recent law admitting women to the National Guard.

Vinyard has been a Guardsman for 27 years and is a member of the 124th Transportation Company based in Carbondale. The unit so far is still all-male.

"There are going to be headaches," Vinyard said, "but it might clean the military up. The fairer sex might also do something for morale. But they've got to show me to make me believe it."

"Women were first admitted to the Guard in May in exactly the same capacity as men, with three exceptions," he said. Women cannot serve as heavy truck drivers, company commanders, or first sergeants.

"They can be trained as clerks, cooks, light truck drivers, communications experts, mechanics, radio operators, and anything else men are trained to be," Vinyard said.

"If the Guard is called up to serve in Vietnam or the Mid East, women will have to go, too," Vinyard said. "They'll learn riot control and how to carry a gun. They'll learn exactly the same things men learn in basic training."

To be eligible for the Guard a woman must be between 18 and 35 years of age and unmarried, unless she has prior service in the armed forces, in which case she may be married. If she is under 21, she must have parental permission to enlist.

Women must pass physical and mental examinations and must be high school graduates. Men do not need a high school diploma to enlist, Vinyard said. He could not explain the ruling.

Women must enlist for a minimum of three years; men for a minimum of six.

Anyone who enlists in the Guard must receive eight weeks basic training, Vinyard said. Women will receive their training at Fort McClellan in Alabama, with a salary of $326.50 for each month there.

"They'll be treated just like men,"

Vinyard said. "Each trainee has her own bed and footlocker but there are no partitions in the living quarters. Trainees are required to eat three meals a day in the mess hall."

"Each woman will be issued fatigues, dress uniform, high heels, bras, panties, slippers, pajamas, and a houserobe," Vinyard said. "That's certainly different from what the men get!"

"After basic training, the women are prepared for active duty and are subject to call-up whenever their unit is called by the governor," Vinyard said.

All members of the National Guard must spend one weekend a month at drill and two weeks each summer at camp during their enlistment.

"Guardsmen receive $50 for each weekend drill, with officers receiving up to $150," Vinyard said. "If you're called up for an emergency, you receive $25 a day."

Other benefits to guardsmen include insurance and pension programs, PX and commissary privileges, and retirement after 20 years of service, Vinyard said.

"There are currently 350,000 National Guardsmen," Vinyard said, "but only a few women. We haven't enlisted a woman in this unit yet."

James Vinyard

"If we do, it will certainly be a challenge," he said. "There will be problems, but we have to go into it with an open mind and make the best of it we can."

'Truckload' of beer sale decision

Eastgate liquors ordered to close one day

By David C. Miller Jr.
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Eastgate Liquor Mart will be ordered to close for one day as a result of their October "truckload" beer sale, the Illinois Liquor Control Commission decided Friday.

Since the truck—full of discount beer—parked outside the Mart during the sale, was not a licensed vendor of alcohol, the commission decided the penalty was in order. The closing order, to be served soon, calls for Eastgate to close from 7 a.m. January 14 to 7 a.m. the next day.

Tom Hoffman, co-owner of the Mart, said the decision came as "very much of a surprise." "It totally amazes me," Hoffman said late Friday. "I find it (the decision) kind of hard to believe, since we were operating under the permission of the local liquor commissioner."

Although he had not contacted his lawyer since the closing order was announced, Hoffman said he imagined he would appeal the decision.

"I feel I am in the right," he said, "but I really have no further comment."

Hoffman said the truckload sale was Eastgate's response to a Chamber of Commerce Sidewalk Sale held throughout Carbondale. The sale, he said, was meant as a get-acquainted gesture, and was not put on for profit so much as for "institutional promotion."

"I can guarantee you the profit we made I probably spent on telephone calls to Chicago," Hoffman said ruefully. He said he does not know what happened, since the local liquor commission "has been honest with us through and through."

After the closing order is served, Hoffman will have 20 days to petition for a re-hearing. If he is denied, he can take the case into Chicago Circuit Court to obtain a stay on the order and also get an administrative review.

Year-round savings time might make children wait for a.m. buses in dark

By John Morrissey
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

President Nixon's proposal to put the nation on daylight savings time all year round to conserve energy has brought to light the fact that small children might be waiting in the dark for their morning bus ride to school during winter months.

Under the present standard time, sunrise at Carbondale's longitude occurs five to ten minutes after 7 a.m. from mid-December to mid-January. Changing to daylight time would "delay" sunrise until after 8 a.m. Carbondale elementary school children start gathering on bus stops around 7:30, according to Laurence W. Mahtin, superintendent of schools.

Martin said the District 95 school board has discussed the possibility of starting school later in the morning under daylight time, not only for safety's sake, but to cut down on fuel bills during the winter months.

"It's easier to heat the buildings while the sun shines," he said.

In order to retain the same time amount of class time without running school later into the afternoon, Martin said the schools would have to cut back on non-curricular time during the day. Possible steps could include reducing time allotments for lunch and recess, he said.

Martin said he had not yet received any letters of concern from parents regarding the implications of a switch to daylight time.

Teresa Saporoschenko, president of the Carbondale elementary schools Parent-Teacher Association, said the organization has "only just started to think about" the problem of morning darkness connected with winter daylight time. She said the PTA is concerned about the prospect, and indicated it would be discussed at the PTA's next meeting.

"The best that money can buy"

"The United States has the best political system that money can buy—and it is a disgrace to every principle on which our republic stands."

Sen. Edwards Kennedy's declaration on the Senate floor echoed the growing sentiment that political candidates and sometimes even parties can be "bought," and points out the need for immediate campaign finance reform.

Political contributions are often given in exchange for special privileges, tax breaks or a laxness in law enforcement to individuals or corporations. Such injustices are contrary to the moral values of the people and cannot be allowed to continue.

Instead of crying out against "dirty politics," the American public should pressure its lawmakers into legislating some stringent limits on campaign financing.

While legislators are beginning to consider finance reform plans, many are (understandably) hesitant to act and place their own political futures in jeopardy.

The proposed 1973 campaign spending reform bill passed by the Senate in an overwhelming 82 to 8 vote would put a $3,000 ceiling on an individual's contribution to a candidate in a primary, with an equal amount allotted in a general election. An additional limit would reduce candidates' personal spending to 25 cents per voter (10 cents in a primary, 15 cents in a general election).

The Senate's enthusiasm in passing the proposal is in no way indicative of easy passage in the House where serious obstacles must first be overcome.

A measure that will probably meet greater Congressional opposition, but would be even more effective in curtailing unethical campaign financing, is being proposed by Alan Cranston, U.S. senator from California.

Cranston believes that public, rather than private financing of federal campaigns is the only effective remedy to the problem. He suggests that a broad system of public financing be implemented to complement small contributions by individuals.

To qualify for federal funds, Cranston says a candidate for the House of Representatives would first have to raise $2,500 privately; a Senatorial candidate, $10,000; and a Presidential candidate, $100,000. He contends that these amounts are high enough to keep non-serious candidates from seeking office.

Cranston would place a $250 ceiling on the amount individuals could contribute to a candidate, and strict limits on the candidate's personal campaign spending.

Cranston estimates his proposal would cost the individual taxpayer $1 or $2 a year, an amount he calls "a bargain price to pay to take the curse of big money out of the political system and...back into the hands of people, where it belongs."

While candidates may protest at the monetary limitations being placed on their campaigns, a number of "fringe benefits" could be provided to offset the loss in aid from contributions.

Under the April, 1972 campaign spending law, the media are required to give political candidates the lowest time or space rates charged to other advertisers, in periods immediately before primaries or general elections.

In addition, free air time for radio and television debates could be allotted to major political contenders.

Volunteer campaign workers could also absorb some of the costs by using their own telephones to conduct surveys or personally endorse a candidate.

Campaign finance reform legislation can make an important difference in the political future of this country by eliminating the element of corruption. But it will take concentrated pressure on the part of the American people to force legislators to pass such measures.

The Senate seems to be acting favorably to proposed reform bills. Once the public can convince the House of the necessity of such action—through lobbying, written communications or personal support—campaign reform is only the President's signature away from reality.

And as one House Representative explained, "After Watergate, it's inconceivable that the President would have the nerve to veto a campaign-spending bill."

Generals to the south

When Henry Kissinger became Secretary of State he promised to start a "new dialogue" with Latin America, a region largely devoid of intense United States interest in recent years. Clearly the new dialogue will have to wait for awhile, perhaps until there is another crisis in Latin America.

Meanwhile, Washington may conceive of American interests in the Latin region as being in secure hands, with the solitary exception of Fidel Castro in Cuba. In secure hands means in the hands mostly of military dictatorships friendly to the United States and protective of the social status quo.

Only four nations in South America remain in civilian hands. Colombia and Venezuela have maintained a tradition of stable representative government over the past decade. Guayana, a colony until 1966, is under civilian rule. So is Argentina, recently come to civilian government, ironically enough, under the former dictator, Juan Peron.

All the rest are under military control; Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Paraguay, Uruguay, Brazil and Chile, where the generals ousted an elected Marxist regime two months ago.

It was not this way when President Kennedy founded the Alliance for Progress in 1961. Then only Paraguay was a military dictatorship. The Alliance, it was hoped, would assure the growth and responsibility of democracies. But the Alliance faltered under the Johnson Administration and collapsed under President Nixon.

Perhaps too much was expected of the Alliance; and perhaps too little. President Johnson's armed intervention in the Dominican Republic demonstrated that the Alliance had less priority than the prevention of leftist nationalism that threatened ties with the United States. The Nixon Administration's reaction to the Allende government in Chile likewise showed less than for North American investments.

While Washington cannot be held accountable for every military government in South America, still it is noteworthy that many of the Chilean generals who overturned President Allende were trained by the United States and received extensive American arms aid. Indeed, the U.S. Army has schooled 29,000 Latin military men since 1949, and today 170 of them are scattered through high government offices. In addition, the Agency for International Development has helped develop police forces in a number of Latin states.

Only a few years ago, it was fashionable to talk of Latin military regimes in terms of a "new military" devoted to reform and economic progress. Brazil alone has displayed economic progress, without a vestige of political reform. And the Chilean coup, designed to halt a social revolution in progress, is enough to indicate that the new military is the old military, repressive and rightist.

Latins have been told that what Washington wants is democracy and social progress, and what they have received is oppression. They may well ask what the United States expects. No doubt an elected government that accepted U.S. foreign policy and foreign control of national resources would be acceptable to Washington, but the Latin peoples are unlikely to vote themselves into conditions of colonialism.

So if Secretary Kissinger ever gets around to a dialogue with the sister republics, he will find himself talking most frequently to generals. The military map of South America may not be the direct creation of United States policy but it is a clear rebuke to proclaimed American aspirations.

Presumptuous or...

To the Daily Egyptian:

Mrs. E. Robert Ashworth wishes to promote an event (Students for Jesus teaching seminar) at the expense of another event ("Lying in State"). Fine. But to suggest before either event occurs that one will far exceed the other in significance strikes me as presumptuous and—dare I say it?—unchristian. I am tempted to examine more closely the Fountainhead of Truth that inspires one to such prescience, but I fear it might be contagious.

The nation must face hard facts of energy crisis

President Nixon took to the tube last Wednesday night and gave the American people some of the hard facts of the energy crisis. The message was timely and badly needed.

For, you see, Americans never want to believe that it (anything unpleasant) can happen to them. It has taken them a long time to discover that "we, the richest nation on earth," can't win a war in Southeast Asia; feed the world; dominate our "allies" in NATO; clean up pollution overnight without losing jobs; or provide enough gasoline and heating fuels for unlimited travel and the ultimate in bodily comfort.

As the President mentioned, he first asked Congress for energy legislation two years ago, then last April and again in June. "But thus far," said the President, "not one major energy bill that I have asked for has been enacted."

The lack of congressional or other action at state and local levels can be attributed to the naivete of citizens who swallow such nonsense as Ralph Nader's recent pronouncement that "the energy crisis was orchestrated for political and economic benefit by the oil industry." It is difficult to believe that the oil industry "chose to place the country in a short-term energy scare so they could gain dividends." For the oil people are long-range planners who simply cannot afford to think in terms of today if they wish to survive.

The Akron Beacon Journal reminds us that Nixon's energy message could just as well have been delivered by the late President Johnson, except for the fact that "political leaders did not want to tell the nation of any more crises, and Johnson had a war on his hands." So everyone, says the Beacon Journal, "kept hoping scientists would come up with a way to make cars run on water and a way to air condition buildings in July with surplus January cold."

Seriously, it is part of the American credo that a nation which is able to put a man on the moon certainly can devise a way to overcome a shortage of petroleum products. Given adequate time, research and money, they are probably right. But future solutions won't be of much help this winter, or perhaps even for some years to come.

We have plenty of coal to do the job, you understand, but no one wants to breathe sulfurous fumes, or have homes covered with coal dust. And yet we may have to turn to coal even before suitable washing processes are installed. There are advances, too, in the field of nuclear fusion, a theoretical but promising technology, which the President says may "leapfrog" over the proposed breeder reactor.

Our present nuclear power plants and those under construction are under heavy attack by some scientists because of safety risks. Chairman Dixie Lee Ray of the Atomic Energy Commission replies that nothing is risk-free, but says the safeguards built into 37 nuclear power plants have helped the industry achieve an excellent safety record of more than 165 plant-years of operation without radiation injury to any member of the public or operating personnel.

Sen. Barry Goldwater has stated that we can solve the energy crisis within five years. While I find this view overly optimistic, it nevertheless suggests that we have a very real problem on our hands for a considerable span of time.

Thus it is that the President speaks of sacrifice, "not genuine suffering...but some sacrifice by all Americans."

The question is: Can we take it or have we become so soft to endure the discomforts involved? One Arab leader predicts that the Americans will cave in to their demands because "you are not accustomed to living under hardships."

True, it has been a long time since the ration coupons of World War II. And although we lost some 50,000 young men in Indochina, no one on the home front other than loved ones of the war dead made any sacrifices whatsoever.

Perhaps we would have understood that war better if we had been called upon to give up some of the soft living we enjoyed at home, while others were giving their lives.

But Lyndon Johnson was a politically motivated "guns and butter" man who never understood the inflationary trends that were building during the Vietnam war.

I think all Americans will accept the sacrifices which seem to be indicated, provided they apply to all. As you will recall, wage-price controls were working reasonably well and had widespread public acceptance until the government began making exceptions for certain classes of people. Then they became a travesty.

Congress should move promptly on the energy problem, enact strict regulations and be prepared to see that they are enforced to the letter.

The current crusade by elements of the media and the political world to force President Nixon's resignation is serious business, but has its amusing aspects to which I shall now allude.

Time magazine broke 50 years of editorial silence to say that "the wise and patriotic course is for Richard Nixon to resign, sparing the country and himself his agony of impeachment."

Another Luce publication, the now defunct Life, had endorsed Richard Nixon in 1960, 1968 and 1972. Some members of the craft maintain that Time never needed an editorial page since its opinions could always be found in the news columns.

Then we have the Detroit News, hawkish on the Vietnam war and until recently a faithful supporter of the president. Here is some of what the News had to say on Oct. 26, 1972:

"One mark of good leadership is the ability to pick good assistants." Shades of Ehrlichman, Haldeman, Mitchell and Dean.

And another: "Desperate, he (McGovern) now grasps at straws—the Watergate caper, the ITT episode, the wheat issue—and exaggerates flimsy evidence into ironclad proof that this administration is the 'most corrupt' in U.S. history."

Now (Nov. 4, 1973) the News concludes that "President Nixon should resign...If he does not resign, serious consideration should be given to his impeachment."

The news wistfully hopes that "Mr. Nixon will see this suggestion as a wise one for himself and as a necessary one for the national welfare."

And then there is columnist Joe Alsop, a charming friend who has been consistently wrong on Indochina and always urged President Nixon to take the hard line. Joe says his call for resignation is arrived at "with extreme reluctance," and is based upon "President Nixon's growing inability to function."

I am sure that President Nixon is well aware of, but not grateful for, the advice he is receiving from his former supporters. The President's answer is that he has no intention of walking away from the job he was elected to do.

He is in effect challenging the House of Representatives to impeach him if it dares. The President is said to agree with Clare Boothe Luce, widow of Time's co-founder, who has declared:

"The press is getting rid of a President without consulting the people...Nixon has been tried and found guilty by the press...and they now sentence him to resignation...depriving the people and the people's representatives of their constitutional voice in this matter...Time's editors, together with many other editors, are making a very, very grave mistake."

My own view is that some of the nation's editors are taking themselves too seriously, and that they had better, as Mrs. Luce suggests, leave the matter of resignation or impeachment to President Nixon and the people's representatives.

Letter

Ten years before 1984

To the Daily Egyptian:

The Emergency Energy Act proposed by the President is the closest thing to George Orwell's Big Brother that my generation has seen. This act provides for entirely too much power for our government as was seen during the 1940's. Are we going to sit back and let the politicians of this country dictate to the common people how to live their lives? Are we going to let them tell the common people that we are running out of energy in this great nation, even as another Skylab rocket prepares to jet skyward? Are we to believe that our children might be cold this winter while other nations are enjoying prosperity, our allies and friends? And are we going to return to pre-World War II gas rationing policies, when most of the big oil companies enjoyed one of their biggest margin of profits last quarter? No, America, it is time for the strength of this nation to be heard, the silent majority, indeed, the common people.

As the politicians of this country have become stronger and stronger the people have become weaker. They (politicians) have such autocratic power that they can push this EEA through Congress before the people even have time to think about it. But it is time to think, America, and let the politicians know that this country still belongs to the people! We have the tools of petition, referendum and recall at our disposal, and we all have pen and paper to write Congress. So common people, silent majority, middle America, arise and defeat this Emergency Energy Act, for can Big Brother be far behind?

Security for documents

As President Nixon with lawmakers this week, the agenda should include a commitment that White House documents and other possible Watergate evidence are being kept more securely than the bedeviled tapes. Mr. Nixon's early claims for the tapes' security now have been followed by testimony suggesting strangely loose handling of items declared to have been so highly confidential.

As reported from the lengthened hearings before Judge Sirica, various tapes went to various people at various times. But the record-keeping—including bits of brown paper described as "scraps"—is far from clear about the facts. The situation may undermine the usefulness of the tapes as legal evidence.

Regard for the integrity of the tapes should have dictated procedures to ensure that their whereabouts be known at all times and precisely recorded for later confirmation. Similar procedures for handling White House documents are vital, especially considering the importance attached to them by both the present and former special prosecutors and the public doubts about how they may have been filed.

Such doubts need to be dispelled as a new ripple of potential White House evidence appears to be on the way to disclosure. Mr. Nixon's Monday statement volunteered some information not covered by the court order. He seems to be ready to forgo some confidentiality for the sake of credibility—which could be enhanced by painstakingly credible White House treatment of evidence.

Exhibit shows old-time syrup, sugar making

When people think of maple sugar and syrup, they usually think of Vermont as the center of its production. But maple sugar and syrup production was once very important in Southern Illinois also, an SIU Museum official said.

Cathy Hines, properties technician trainee for the museum, said some of the first white men in Jackson County settled here to produce maple syrup and sugar. Since sugar was very expensive in Southern Illinois early in the 18th century, early settlers had to produce maple sugar as an alternate sweetener, Ms. Hines said.

Ms. Hines, along with Barbara Glover, an anthropology graduate student, built the maple syrup and sugar production exhibit now in the Agriculture Building. The exhibit which displays replicas of instruments used in processing maple syrup and sugar, was formed in December 1971.

Most of the information and articles in the exhibit were donated by Sherman Graff of Murphysboro, and other Southern Illinois residents, Ms. Hines said.

Although maple syrup and sugar are no longer commercially made in Southern Illinois, Sherman Graff still produces these items. Graff, whose family has tapped maple trees for six generations, continues the annual process every winter, mainly because of tradition, Ms. Hines said.

The syrup-making process is slow and difficult and "very few people are aware of how it's done," Ms. Hines said.

SIU has no instructional programs concerning maple syrup and sugar production. However, the Forestry and Outdoor Recreation Departments do some research in museum related studies on the old-time art, Ms. Hines said.

Foreign students need host for break

The response from American families wanting to host a foreign student over Thanksgiving break "has picked up this week" and the coordinators are hopeful all the students will be placed, Cheryl Solomon, secretary in the international education office said Friday.

"It looks fairly good but we could use more families who are willing to host an international student," Ms. Solomon said.

Approximately 30 international students still need to be placed and between 10 and 15 American families have called and volunteered to host a student, Ms. Solomon said. Because some families have asked for more than one student, she said she was hopeful every student would be placed with a family.

Ms. Solomon said the coordinators were most concerned that those students living in on-campus dorms have no where to go after the dorms close Wednesday," Ms. Solomon said.

She said the center is now matching the names of students with families and is calling the families about their final plans for Thanksgiving.

Most families have agreed to house the students for the entire Thanksgiving break, she said.

There are no specific requirements to host a student. Any student unable to make the trip home for Thanksgiving and anyone interested in being a host for a foreign student can call Margret Williams, service office supervisor at the center, at 453-5774.

"By Thanksgiving usually all the students are placed," Ms. Solomon said. "It seems to work out."

Journalists blast Nixon in report

BUFFALO (AP)—A national society of professional journalists said Friday that no president should have the right to arbitrarily withhold information from the courts, the Congress and the public.

Delegates to the national convention of Sigma Delta Chi (SDX) approved a report condemning the use of executive privilege, particularly that invoked by President Nixon.

The report, submitted by SDX's Committee for the Advancement of Freedom of Information, said "The Watergate scandals have dramatized the potential for dictatorship that is inherent in presidential claims of executive privilege."

Police to join state information system

By Rafe Klingler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Carbondale Police will begin voluntary participation next March in a state-wide crime reporting system destined to be nationalized in several years, Wayne Martin, Carbondale Police training officer, said.

The Criminal Justice Information System replaces local police incident report forms with standardized forms. These are fed into a computer and crime data is classified in such a way as to become usable statistical material untainted by local peculiarities in reporting.

Besides statistical data, the reporting system will enable any police agency throughout the country to obtain past information on particular individuals involved in a case they are pursuing.

In two to three years, federal law will make the system "mandatory for all levels" of police agencies throughout the country, Martin said. However, the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement's Bureau of Crime Studies Section will begin the system on a voluntary basis throughout the state "to get a jump on the program and work out the bugs," he said.

Other participating Southern Illinois police agencies include Jackson County Sheriff's Police, DuQuoin City Police and Marion City Police departments.

In March, the participating agencies will receive free special five-copy forms from the Crime Studies Section to replace the generalized, localized forms now in use, Martin explained.

The forms will be categorized according to the type of offense. These include offenses against the person, offenses against property, vehicle theft, general case, supplementary report, arrest report and recovered vehicle report.

After the officer involved fills out the form, the original copy remains with the local agency and duplicates are sent to the local detective section, the state crime studies section, the reporting officer for use in court and the local state attorney.

From its copy of each report, the state crime studies section will feed items into a computer for compilation into standardized crime statistics.

The data will be broken down into three groups.

—The types of crimes, the number of people charged and whether they are adults or juveniles.

—The type of offense, the agency case number, the location of the offense, the time (day or night), the property value of stolen or recovered property, and the method used to commit the crime.

—The age, sex, race of the person arrested; the type of offense; the number of persons arrested; the offender's residence and the locality where the offense was committed.

Martin said the data derived from the reporting system will result in an "accurate crime picture without the statistics being influenced by local standards. It will enable police departments to better allocate their manpower and pre-alert departments to problems that may occur based on past patterns."

The standardized data will also serve as a back up for local agencies "when asking for funds from local councils or funding agencies," he added.

Simon's bid for House to get Buzbee's support

State Sen. Kenneth Buzbee (D-Carbondale) said Thursday he will back Paul Simon's bid for the Democratic nomination for a seat in the U.S. House of Representatives. Simon announced Wednesday he will seek the 24th District seat vacated by retiring U.S. Rep. Kenneth Gray (D-West Frankfort).

Citing his "longstanding support" of Simon, Buzbee said the former lieutenant governor "knows Southern Illinois and its people." Buzbee support Simon in his Democratic primary contest for the gubernatorial nomination when he was defeated by Gov. Daniel Walker.

Buzbee said he thinks Simon can provide the background necessary to give the 24th Congressional District "the kind of representation we have come to expect." Simon is a native of Troy, Illinois, and recently moved to Carbondale to be in the 24th Congressional District. There is no residency requirement for the congressional race.

In the speculation that followed Gray's retirement announcement, Buzbee's name was mentioned as a possible contender for the seat. However, Friday Buzbee said he had assured Simon of his support "quite some time" before Simon made his announcement.

"I am flattered that I was considered as a possible candidate," Buzbee said in a phone interview Friday. "But my primary goal at this time is to represent the people of Southern Illinois in the State Senate."

40 per cent fewer students applying to get food stamps

By John H. Croessman
Student Writer and
By Terry Martin
Daily Egyptian Staff Writers

The number of SIU students participating in the government's food stamp program this fall has decreased about 40 per cent from a year ago.

Jackson County Public Aid Director Alfonso Crim said decreasing enrollment at SIU and the use of stringent screening policies and guidelines are the reasons for the decrease.

Crim said approximately 500 SIU graduates and undergraduates are receiving the stamps, issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Between 900 and 1,000 were in the program at this time last year, he said.

"Normally, there is a deluge of applications at the beginning of fall quarter," Crim said. "But, we just haven't experienced it so far."

"I think we have to attribute much of it to the fact that enrollment was down considerably this year," Crim said. "Many of the students who did not re-enter school or have dropped out were those on the financial fringe, and those are the students who seek our help."

The Jackson County public aid department started issuing food stamps to students in 1968 and, over the five year period, the average was between 900 and 1,100 participating on a monthly basis.

Ms. Helen Shoemaker, Illinois Department of public aid information officer, said the state office has no statistics on students receiving food stamps.

"We don't classify students separately; we never have," Ms. Shoemaker said.

The latest figures the state office had on Jackson County recipients of food stamps were from January 1973.

"In May of 1972 there were 557 recipients in Jackson County, 408 in September of 1972 and 604 in January of 1973," Ms. Shoemaker said. "Whether a household is eligible depends entirely on the maximum income of the family and its size."

Eligibility requirements for food stamp seekers:

—All members of a household must commonly purchase food and cook together.

—All income must be added.

—One member must apply at the county office and be interviewed.

Maximum resources per household, regardless of size, is $1,500 in savings or stocks and bonds, she said. Limits placed on recipients now are $183 per month for one person; $240 per month for a family of two; $313 for three; $460 for five; $387 for four; $533 for six; $600 for seven; and $667 for eight, Ms. Shoemaker said.

"I believe these figures will go up on Jan. 1," Ms. Shoemaker said.

Exceptions to the per-month allotment are made for persons who pay shelter costs of more than 30 per cent of the household's income, medical costs in excess of $10 per month and mandatory school fees, Ms. Shoemaker said.

Sale of post office planned after board tables measure

By Gary Houy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The old Carbondale Post Office will still be known as the old Carbondale Post Office for awhile.

Situated at the corner of Main Street and University Avenue, the building was being considered as a location for administrative offices, adult education facilities and the Operation Rebound program for Carbondale Community High School (CCHS).

The CCHS Board voted unanimously to table the proposal Thursday in favor of exploring other possible locations. General Services Administration, which owns the property, will now put the building up for public sale.

The board also approved by a vote of four to two a recommendation by the administration to grant $4,000 to the Model Cities education program for 1974. Charles Lerner, president of the board, said the program is valuable because the money spent on trainees comes back to the district through their work.

Two representatives from Kemper, Fischer, Faust, Lawrence and Co. discussed the progress of their auditing work on the district's bookkeeping over the past year.

The board approved unanimously a recommendation to have representatives from the company verify the books again in January.

Members of the League of Women Voters reported to the board that all 15 CCHS maintenance workers voted in favor of being represented by the Service Employees International Union division of the AFL-CIO in collective bargaining. The league served as judges in the election.

A group of about 70 members of the Illinois Education Association, most of which were CCHS teachers, attended the board meeting to express their interest in the current collective bargaining procedures between the teachers and the board.

The board went into executive session for about 35 minutes with "no official progress" made.

The board approved a recommendation by William Holder, superintendent, to hold two extra meetings in the next month to take care of "urgent" business. The meetings, scheduled for Dec. 5 and Dec. 13.

Temple to sponsor book fair

The congregation of Beth Jacob Temple will sponsor a Jewish book fair from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sunday at the temple on Route 2 in Carbondale.

Temple member Carol Goldsmith said the book fair "will feature close to 1,000 new books from publishers in New York City and St. Louis. The books are made available on consignment so that any unsold books can be returned to the publishers."

Ms. Goldsmith said "both fiction and non-fiction books will be available, with an emphasis on religious books, books by Jewish authors and books with a Jewish theme or plot."

"This is a good opportunity for Jewish students to buy books as gifts for Hanukkah or other occasions," she said.

Proceeds from the fair will be used to buy books for the temple library, Ms. Goldsmith said.

'Africans' score early, nip 'Latinito'

By Kenneth Pilarski
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The intramural mini-soccer tournament concluded play with an exciting and evenly matched contest, in which the Africans squeaked by Latinito 4-3 for the championship.

The key word in the game was defense, especially in the second half when neither team was able to dent the net. In the first half, both teams tried to blow each other off the court with a powerful offense, scoring a total of seven goals in the 12-minute half.

In the three games leading up to the championship match, the Africans scored eight goals and allowed only one as they squeaked by Brazil 2-1, blanked Kuwait 1-0 and shut out Captain Beyond 5-0.

The Latinito were equally effective as they scored seven goals, while allowing only one as they downed Quadrophenia 2-1, blanked the Canadian Club 1-0 and shut out America 4-0.

The championship game opened with the African's getting on the scoreboard first with two quick goals in less than one minute of play. The Latinito were caught off-guard and appeared to be somewhat disorganized by the quick and agile African team.

Trailing 2-0, Latinito regrouped and with team captain Tommie Bowie leading the way, began to pressure the African goalie, Jean-Claude Makosso.

Makosso was forced to come out of the net on several occasions to stop Latinito threats. The Latinito kept the pressure on the tall, lanky goalie and finally penetrated the African net after Makosso made two brilliant saves.

Trailing 2-1 the Latinito kept the pressure on the African team, but a mistake by Latinito gave the Africans the lead, 3-1. In a matter of minutes, Latinito came back with a goal of their own, making the score 3-2, Africans.

With less than three minutes to go in the first half, Latinito slammed the tying goal into the African net and the score stood at 3-3.

The Africans answered the Latinito challenge with the final goal of the half and the game. The first half ended with the Africans on top 4-3.

In the second half, Latinito brought in a new goalie, Mario Benavidez, who performed flawlessly. Benavidez was outstanding as he kept Latinito in the game with several excellent saves.

With less than two minutes showing on the clock, the Africans swarmed around the Latinito net, but Benavidez made one outstanding save after another to keep the Latinito hopes alive.

But time and luck were against Latinito as they sent a shot banging off the goal post and had a goal disallowed because it was shot from inside the goal area.

The exciting and well-played game ended with the Africans as the champions of the first intramural indoor mini-soccer tournament.

After the game, Bowie said, "The first half was fantastic. The game was decided in the first half."

"Our goals were much better than theirs," Bowie said. "Two of their goals were caused by out mistakes," he added.

Latinito went into the game with a slight disadvantage, having had less than ten minutes rest after playing in the semi-final game against America.

"In the first half we kept the ball low and worked it around with short passes," Bowie said. "During the second half, time was against us and we couldn't make short passes."

Salukis lose top receiver Puhr; hope for first road game victory

By Mark Tupper
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

The Salukis will face the Indiana State Sycamores at 2 p.m. EST today in Memorial Stadium, Terre Haute, Ind., without the services of their leading pass receiver, Bruce Puhr.

X-Ray reports of Puhr's ankle area show he sustained a broken leg in an incident last Saturday against Drake. In the third quarter of that game Puhr caught a pass and refused to be wrestled to the ground by three Bulldog defenders. One of the trio grabbed Puhr's foot and twisted his ankle. At first it was only believed to be a sprain, but the fracture of a bone showed up in the medical report Thursday.

"It was an old break that I reinjured," Puhr said Friday. "I just started walking on it again today." Saluki Coach Dick Towers said he will move tight end Robert Habbe to fill Puhr's spot at slotback. Jerry Haraway will open at tight end.

"I'd like to finish strong," Towers said of this fast-closing season. The Salukis have already won three and tied one of the team's last five games. "You have a tendency to remember how you finished, and it could help us a lot next year."

"We're about as healthy as we can be, without Bruce (Puhr)," Towers said. "Perkins (who was poked in the eye against Drake) is still having a little double vision, but I'm going to give him a chance to go for his 1,000 yards." Perkins needs to average 102 yards each of the last two games to reach the plateau.

Other Saluki injuries received in the Drake victory have apparently healed sufficiently. Primus Jones and linebacker Seth Kirkpatrick, who appeared doubtful after Drake-inflicted injuries, will both be ready to play.

Towers said his plans at quarterback are to open with Fred McAlley but "I'll play all three before the game is over." The other two quarterbacks Towers is referring to are Leonard Hopkins and Dennis O'Boyle. The three have been battling all week in practice for the starting job.

If the Salukis beat the Sycamores, it will be the first SIU road victory since SIU dumped Central Michigan 35-8 on the final game of the 1971 season.

Brice Gnahou, manager of the Africans credited the Latinitos with being a very tough team to play. "They were more aggressive than we were," Gnahou said.

Gnahou explained that his team jumped off to the two goal lead because the Africans took advantage of the fact the Latinito defense was not organized.

The two goal lead, however, worked against the Africans because it tended to make them over confident, Gnahou said. The fast pace and aggressiveness of the Latinito team also worked against the Africans who deliberately tried to slow the game down in the second half, Gnahou explained.

Gnahou said, "Makosso was excellent in goal even though he couldn't handle the low ball." That's how they scored all their goals, he said.

Women 'volley good' in state tournament

The SIU women's varsity volleyball team defeated North Central College 15-7, 15-6 and 15-4 and Illinois-Chicago 15-8, 15-9 in Friday's first round of competition in the Illinois State Volleyball Tournament at Chicago Circle Campus.

SIU now advances to the second round of competition to be played Saturday. Seventeen schools are entered in the tournament for the state title.

Watson retains slim golf lead

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP)—Tom Watson struggled to a second consecutive, five-over-par 76 Friday, still managing to retain the lead through seven rounds of the $500,000 World Open Golf Tournament.

Watson's leading margin dwindled from six strokes to two, however, as he went to a 499 total, two over par on the 7,007-yard No. 2 course at the Pinehurst Country Club.

With one round to go in this two-week, 144-hole chase for a record $100,000 first prize, Bobby Mitchell and veteran Miller Barber moved into a tie for second place.

Mitchell, a soft-spoken two-time winner on the pro tour, had a one-under-par 70 and was the only one of the leaders able to break par in the cool, breezy weather.

He was tied at 501—just two strokes back—with the balding, 42-year-old Barber, who got around in 72.

Rookie Ben Crenshaw slipped back with a 73 but remained very much in contention with a 502 total.

It was another two strokes back to Lon Hinkle and Leonard Thompson, a pair of non-winners tied at 504. Hinkle had a 72 and Thompson a 73 in the generally high scoring.

IM flag football finals Saturday

The stage has been set for the battle to determine the champion of the intramural flag football tournament.

During Thursday's semi-final games, Bonaparte's downed the Rompin Redeyes 27-13 and TKE defeated the Mothers 25-6.

At 1 p.m., Saturday in McAndrew Stadium Bonaparte's will battle TKE in the final game of the season. Admission is free and everyone is invited to attend.

NCAA leaders face spoilers

By Herschel Nissenson
Associated Press Sports Writer

How would you feel if your team had lost all nine games this season and been outscored 331-121 and your next assignment sent you against the No. 1-ranked team in the country...Ohio State at Columbus?

You'd probably put out a call for the Mission Impossible crew...unless you're Frank Lauterbur, coach for the unenvied and winless Iowa Hawkeyes. Lauterbur says his team has no plans to self-destruct.

"How often do you get a chance to play this kind of team in college football?" he says. "I consider this a real opportunity and I know our young men are looking forward to the game."

A lot of ranking teams, though, just might be looking past this weekend, which on paper is little more than a warm-up for the fantastic three-day lineup over the Thanksgiving holiday.

The upset gates are wide open for such would-be spoilers as Iowa, Miami of Florida, Kansas, Purdue, Ohio University and Mississippi State.

Miami visits second-ranked Alabama; Kansas, rated 18, is at No. 3 Oklahoma; fourth-ranked Michigan is at Purdue; No. 6 Penn State entertains Ohio U.; and seventh-rated Louisiana State hosts Mississippi State at night. Notre Dame, rated fifth, has the weekend off.

Saturday also is the day the bowl bids go out officially at 6 p.m. local time. Barring last minute complications, the lineup, known unofficially for some time, sends Alabama against Notre Dame in the Sugar Bowl, Penn State against LSU in the Orange Bowl, No. 10 Nebraska against No. 11 Texas in the Cotton Bowl and, as usual, the champions of the Big Ten and Pacific-8 Conferences in the Rose Bowl.
